HEDLEY, DONLEY COUNTY, TEXAS, FRIDAY, APRIL 17, 1914

SCHOOL HAVE COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

School closes today. Exams have been on all week and many have passed their grades while some have failed. Vacation is now staring the pupils in the face, and they are no doubt laying plans for the spring and summer. The school has been one of the best that Hedley has had, and the teachers have done their work satisfactorily and to the benefit of the pupils who have been under them.

The graduating class is making preparations for Commencement. On Sunday, April 19, 11 o'clock, at the M. E. church Rev. H. M. Long of Clarendon will preach the Baccalaureate sermon, and on Tuesday, April 21, at 8:00 p. m. Rev. R. B. Morgan of Memphis will deliver the Commencement Address. At which time the graduates will have the pleasure of delivering the Salutatory, Valedictory, History, and Poem, etc., usual in graduating exercises. Watch Hedley grow. It has been a long time since it happened before in Hedley.

SOME GOOD ROAD WORK

The Informer failed to mention last week the fact that J. G. McDougal and B. W. Moreman had taken their teams and the road grader and put in a lot of work on the public highway east and west of town which was badly needed. If more citizens of town and country had a little more public spiritedness there would be a whole lot more things accomplished for the betterment of the town and country.

The road leading into town from the north has been put in good shape by overseer G. A. Blankenship and others, and a small bridge put over the draw at the northeast edge of town.

EDITH HICKERSON DEAD

Edith, the 13-year old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Hickerson of the Bray community, died at the family home early Tuesday morning and was buried that afternoon in the Rowe Cemetery. A large crowd attended the funeral. The little girl had been a sufferer for some months and death came as a relief to her suffering. Sympathy is extended to the bereaved family in this their sad hour of loss.

Miss Moores Recital

The Recital at the Opera House by Miss Moores and pupils drew a large crowd and was highly enjoyed by all present. The program was interesting and showed thorough study and practice on the part of all participants. Miss Moores has only been teaching a class here about three months, and her pupils show rapid progress.

MYSTIC WEAVERS

The Mystic Weavers Club met with Mrs. W. R. McCarroll April 9. Eleven members and two visitors, Mesdames Steel and Mills, being present. An hour was spent in fancy work, then Mrs. McCarroll brought in some button holes to be worked. A prize was offered for the best work. Mrs. W. A. Kinslow carried off the honors (and a box of chocolates. A block of gum was given as a consolation. Music was rendered by Mesdames Bain and Wimberly, which was very much appreciated. The table was then spread which tempted us to the dining room where a most delightful repast was served. All left voting Mrs. McCarroll a charming hostess. Club to meet with Mrs. W. A. Kinslow April 23. All come and bring your work.

TWO CARS OF HOGS SHIPPED TO FORT WORTH THIS WEEK

Two cars of hogs were shipped out Tuesday to the Fort Worth market. One car belonged to Sid Harris and the other to L. L. Amason. Sid went with his car and G. A. Wimberly with Mr. Amason's car. This is proving to be a fine country for hog raising. They grow here as well as anywhere and are not afflicted with as many different hog diseases as in some parts of the country. Then too, feed in plenty can be raised here which is also a very necessary item in hog raising.

ODD FELLOWS ANNIVERSARY

Sunday April 26, will be I. O. O. F. Anniversary, and a special service will be held at the M. E. church at 3:00, Rev. G. H. Bryant will conduct the service. Every member is requested to attend this service; also asked to be at the Hall at 2 o'clock sharp, before going to the church.

The Hedley Drug Company has been doing some improving in the looks of the store. The walls have been painted, a cream parlor and double offices for the physicians have been built and nicely papered, and the whole store has undergone a change, which makes it one of the neatest and most up-to-date drug stores in the Panhandle.

At 8 p. m. Monday night April 20, the Graduating Class of Hedley High School will give a play entitled, "Popping the Question". Be sure to attend. Its very funny and interesting. Admission 10 and 15 cents.

We are prepared to do all kinds of tin work. Moreman & Battle.

Agent Williams came down from Clarendon Monday and has been mixing with the farmers around Hedley all week, getting a line up on the crop prospects and the ones who will use a small portion of their land for experiment.

THREE AUTOS BOUGHT IN ONE DAY IN HEDLEY

The Ford automobile agent, Lott of Clarendon, came down Wednesday and made a big deal. Three Hedley citizens bought Fords. They were W. I. Rains, Jesse Ring, and T. R. Moreman. We call that going some for Hedley.

BOUGHT TWO MORE LOTS FOR WAGON YARD

L. L. Cornelius this week bought two business lots and the thereon adjoining his wagon yard from Bond W. Johnson. This additional ground was needed to make his yard as large as it should be, and will give him better opportunity of keeping up with the growth of the town.

Parents, Attention

Thursday evening while Mrs. Gammon was sitting in the Hedley Hotel a rock from some boy's sling shot through a window hitting Mrs. Gammon on the arm. Before some one is seriously hurt and more windows broken, stop the boy's from sling throwing.

The Band boys have a one-act Comedy, "Pompey's Patient" which they intended to put on first of the week with moving pictures, but on account of the school play and commencement have postponed it to next Friday night.

THEIR DAUGHTER DEAD

Mrs. Ruby Sadler of Fort Worth, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Stroud of this place, died Tuesday evening at 6:35 and was buried at Sherman Wednesday. Mrs. Stroud has been with her the past two weeks. Mrs. Sadler leaves a husband and two children. The Informer extends sympathy to the bereaved parents and relatives.

Little Mission Society Program

The program by the Little folks Mission Society at the M. E. church last Sunday night was splendid. Every number was good and showed considerable training and talent among the children. The house was crowded and all present seemed to enjoy the program from first to last. A voluntary contribution brought them something over $5.

Good Medicine.

While shouting corruption charges at one another till they were hoarse, the various candidates paused occasionally and, to rest their raw, strained throats, told a story in easy, conversational tones. Thus a leader said one evening:

"A political contract could no more be free from graft than Old Hoss Tartar's sulphur medicine was free from alcohol."
"Old Hoss Tartar walked into the druggist's one morning with an immense black bottle that he wanted filled with sulphur and whisky."
"This is the way I alters have it fixed," said Old Hoss to the druggist. "I have sulphur up to there."
"He put his finger about half an inch from the bottom of the bottle."
"And the rest I have all whisky. And this here's the way I use it. When I want a dose of sulphur, why, I jes' shake her up afore I drink, and when I don't want no sulphur, why, I don't shake her. See?"

Looked Suspicious.

Mayor Mitchell of New York was talking about an attack that had been made upon him during the campaign. "My accuser," he said, "reminds me of Hi Doolittle. Hi was the champion liar of his native village."
"One day Hi was arrested and brought before the local justice for chicken stealing. He pleaded guilty. "Yes, judge, yer honor," he said, "I plead guilty on the advice of my lawyer."

"But the local justice rubbed his chin dubiously. "I dunno—I'm afraid," he stammered—"I guess—wall, Hiram, I guess I'll have to have more evidence afore I sentence ya."

"Well, the Boys and Girls who attend your School Certainly Do Well."

That is a remark we hear every side. Talk to the men and women in business in the city yourself.

We take boys and girls from grammar or high school, give them a few months of training, and send them out to a hundred and one different kinds of positions where they "make good" and rapidly advance to the highest positions obtainable.

Why, we have girls out of school only three or four years, earning $20 to $25 per week, as private secretaries, and boys with the same grade of education but with energy, enthusiasm and action, evidenced in every floor of their make-up, Superintending Branch Houses, General Managers of Manufacturing Plants, Cashiers in Banks, LEADERS in their respective fields.

Of course our boys and girls do well. Bear in mind that no school in the State is better prepared to teach you practical business than the Bowie Commercial College, besides your expenses here are very little more than what they would cost you elsewhere. Remember that you will be doing nothing one day from today that you are not prepared to do.

WITH THE BREAK OF DAWN

Birth of a New Day as Seen and Described by One Who Had the Vision of the Poet.

As we proceeded, the timid approach of twilight became more perceptible, the intense blue of the sky began to soften, the smaller stars, like little children, went first to rest; the sister beams of the Pleiades soon melted together, but the bright constellation of the west and north remained unchanged. Steadily the wondrous transformation went on. Hands of angels hidden from mortal eyes shifted the scenery of the heavens; the glow of night dissolved into the glories of the dawn. The blue sky now turned more softly gray; the great water stars shut up their holy eyes; the east began to kindle. Faint streaks of purple soon blushed along the skirts of the celestial concave as filled the inflowing tides of the morning light, which came pouring down from above in one great ocean of radiance, till at length, as we reached the Blue hills, a flash of purple fire blazed out from above the horizon and turned the dewy teardrops of flower and leaf into rubies and diamonds. In a few seconds the everlasting gates of the morning were thrown wide open and the lord of day, arrayed in glories too severe for the gaze of man, began his state—Everett.

Make It
and Luxuriant—Try

as you will, after an application of Danderine, you cannot find a single trace of dandruff or falling hair and your scalp will not itch, but what will please you most, will be after a few weeks' use, when you see new hair, fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—growing all over the scalp.

A little Danderine immediately doubles the beauty of your hair. No difference how dull, faded, brittle and scraggy, just moisten a cloth with Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. The effect is immediate and amazing—your hair will be light, fluffy and wavy, and have an appearance of abundance; an incomparable luster, softness and luxuriance, the beauty and shimmer of true hair health.

Get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any store and prove that your hair is as pretty and soft as any—that it has been neglected or injured by careless treatment—that's all. Adv.

Griffo Gets Religion.

"Dowling's" burned out on Times square the other night, and those who for years had occupied rooms above the famous old billiard hall were forced to run for their lives in what raiment they happened to be wearing at that nocturnal moment. Among them was Kid Griffo, who was at one time a fighter between midnight and one o'clock in an uptown music hall. "I did a nut trick," Griffo is quoted as saying. "I took two flights of stairs in two jumps, wif the fire bitin' at me. If I'd been left at the past you coulda buried me in a fryin' pan." "And what did you get?" asked his friend. "On them stairs," said Mr. Griffo, "I gets a pair of singed hands and religion."

ECZEMA ON HEAD AND FACE

Reedy, W. Va.—"My baby boy when three weeks old took the eczema on the head and face. It broke out in pimples and first they looked like blisters and a yellow water would run from them. His head was perfectly raw and his hair was all gone. Everybody said he would never have any more hair. As the sores spread his hair came out. The breaking out itched so badly that we had to keep gloves on his hands to keep him from scratching his head and face. It caused disfigurement. He couldn't rest at night it burned and itched so badly.

"He was treated for eight months and he got worse all the time. So I decided to try Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In two months he was completely cured after using the Cuticura Soap and two boxes of Cuticura Ointment." (Signed) G. A. Dye, Jan. 7, 1912.

He Had Experience.

Once upon a time a small boy about three years old was taken to the church to be baptized. As soon as he caught sight of the bowl of water in the minister's hand he remembered his antipathy for the bathtub and straightened himself up for the attack.

When the minister approached him, reverently dipping his hand in the water, the little fellow said:

"If you put soap in my eyes I'll bust you open."—National Monthly.

GAS, DYSPEPSIA AND INDIGESTION

"Pape's Diapepsin" settles sour, gassy stomachs in five minutes—Time It!

You don't want a slow remedy when your stomach is bad—or an uncertain one—or a harmful one—your stomach is too valuable; you mustn't injure it. Pape's Diapepsin is noted for its speed in giving relief; its harmlessness; its certain unfailing action in regulating sick, sour, gassy stomachs. Its millions of cures in indigestion, dyspepsia, gastritis and other stomach trouble has made it famous the world over.

Keep this perfect stomach doctor in your home—keep it handy—get a large fifty-cent case from any dealer and then if anyone should eat something which doesn't agree with them; if what they eat lays like lead, ferments and sours and forms gas; causes headache, dizziness and nausea; eructations of acid and undigested food—remember as soon as Pape's Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. Its promptness, certainty and ease in overcoming the worst stomach disorders is a revelation to those who try it.—Adv.

A TOY WINDMILL.

No mechanical toy is more interesting to make, nor more interesting to watch when in operation than a miniature windmill. It is a very simple toy to construct, and all of the material that it requires can usually be found at hand, which are two reasons why it is one of the most popular of home-made toys, and why nearly every boy at one time or another builds one.

Figure 1 shows a small model which may be constructed quickly. You will notice by the detail illustrations that the hub of the windmill is a spool (Fig. 2), that the blades are cut out of cigar-box wood, shingles, tin, or cardboard, and are fastened to the side of short spoke sticks driven into holes bored in the spool hub (Fig. 3), that the hub turns on the rounded end of a stick shaft (Fig. 4), that the square end of the shaft is slotted to receive a fan-shaped tail (Fig. 5), and that the shaft is pivoted to the top of a clothes-post, or a post put up for the purpose (Figs. 1 and 6).

Use a large ribbon-spool for the hub. You can get one at any dry goods store. Locate eight holes around the center of the spool, at equal distances from one another, and bore these with a gimlet or bit, or cut them with your jackknife.

Cut the eight blades 6 inches long, 5 inches wide on their wide edge, and 1 1/2 inches wide on their narrow edge. Prepare the hub sticks about 1/2 inch by 1/2 inch by 4 1/2 inches in size, and whittle one end pointed to fit in the hub (Fig. 3). Fasten the blades to the spokes with nails long enough to drive through the spokes and clinch on the under side. Glue the spokes in the hub holes, turning them so the blades will stand at about the angle shown.

The shaft should be made of a hard wood stick about 3/4 inch by 1 1/4 inches by 14 inches in size. Cut the round end small enough so the hub will turn on it freely, and punch a small hole through it so a brad may be driven through it to hold the hub in place. Cut the slot in the square end with a saw. Make the tail about 6 1/2 inches long, 4 inches wide at its wide end, and 2 inches wide at its narrow end (Fig. 5).

The windmill must be pivoted to the post support at its exact balancing point. Pivot the shaft with a long nail. Bore a hole through the shaft a trifle larger than the nail, so the shaft will turn freely. Place a washer between the nail-head and the shaft, and another between the shaft and the post support.

Figure 6 shows how the power from the toy windmill may be utilized to operate a toy jumping-jack, by supporting the jumping-jack on a bracket, and connecting its string to the hub of the windmill. Cut the upright of the bracket (A) 14 inches long and the cross piece (B) 7 inches long. Nail A to B, and nail the jumping-jack at its center to the end of B (Fig. 7). Fasten the triangular block (C) to the lower end of A, and then nail both A and B to the edge of the shaft at a point that will bring the string of the jumping-jack a trifle beyond the windmill blades. Fasten a small stick, having a brad driven in one end, in notches cut in the hub's flanges (Fig.

8), and connect the brad and jack's string with a piece of wire or strong string. Then as the windmill revolves it will operate the toy as indicated in Figs. 6 and 7.

BERRY BOX FURNITURE.

Has it ever occurred to you girls what pretty pieces of doll furniture may be made out of the little berry boxes so plentiful at this season of the year? Several of the easily made pieces are illustrated below. All the material you need to make these are various shapes and sizes of berry boxes, a sharp knife, and a bottle of glue.

1 SWINGING SEAT

The little swinging seat in illustration No. 1 is made from the bottom and two ends of a square pint box, with the ends tapered off with a knife. A strong linen thread, knotted on the end and run through holes pierced in four places, provides "chains" to hang it by. It may be suspended from a chair rung.

Illustration No. 2 shows a sofa that is made out of a long shaped quart berry box. All you have to do is remove one side of the box down to the bottom, then carefully cut away the end as shown, to form arms, and the sofa is completed.

The chair shown in illustration No. 3 is made of two adjoining sides of a pint box, which form the back, seat, and front legs, and an extra piece which forms the back legs. One side piece forms the back, and the other side is scored along its center with a knife, and bent down to form the seat and front legs. The rear legs are made of the extra piece, which is glued to the chair back.

3 CHAIR FOOTSTOOL

The little footstool shown in illustration No. 4 is quite simple to make. One side of a pint box is used, and it is only necessary to score the piece one-half inch from each end, and bend down the ends for legs.

The library table (illustration No. 5) is made out of a pint berry box, with one-half of the height of the sides removed all around, in one piece, and the piece removed fastened edgewise inside of the box for the base.

In illustration No. 6 is shown a very comfortable little doll's bed, made from a quart berry box. Split down each corner half-way. Then, leaving one side of the box whole, for the head of the bed, cut down the opposite side about one-half, for the foot, and trim down the other two sides for the sides of the bed.

The cupboard in illustration No. 7 is made out of a quart berry box, with shelves cut from the sides of other boxes fastened inside with glue. Hang curtains made of scraps from the rag bag across the front.

The berry box wood may be stained a pretty brown by using the coffee left over from breakfast.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE BOYS' CLUBS

Hog Raised by a Pig Club Boy in Alabama.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Farmers' bulletin of the department of agriculture has the following suggestion to members of the boys' pig clubs, and others interested in hog production:

The feeding and care are as important as the breeding in producing a good hog. Plenty of feed and good care may make a good hog out of a runt, but lack of it will always make a runt out of a good pig.

To make pork cheaply a permanent pasture and forage crops must be used.

Young pigs must have a dry bed and plenty of sunshine.

Begin feeding the pig as soon as he will eat, and keep him growing until he is mature.

Always keep plenty of clean, fresh water where the hogs may drink at any time.

Quarantine all newly purchased animals for three weeks.

Never keep a female for a brood sow, no matter how well bred she may be, if she will not produce more than four strong pigs at a litter.

The more milk a sow will give the faster her pigs will grow.

Lice prevent a hog from doing well. Always keep a mixture of charcoal, wood ashes, lime, sulphur, salt and copperas before the hogs.

Every boy who becomes a member of a boys' pig club is urged to do all within his power to learn, and, if possible, to become a winner in his club.

To win a prize is not so great in itself, but to learn and to do the work required to win a premium will be of inestimable value to him later. Each boy will be more skillful and competent because of a year's experience as a club member.

The bulletin also contains the following advice for preventing hog cholera:

Do not have hog lots next to highways, railroads, or streams. If your neighbor's hogs have cholera do not allow anyone from his farm to visit your farm, and especially your hog lot or pens, and keep away from your neighbor's hog lot, whether his hogs have cholera or not.

Do not keep pigeons or allow them to alight on your premises.

Keep away crows and buzzards.

Quarantine all new hogs brought to your place until you are sure they are free of disease.

Do not allow a patent-medicine man on your place, for you do not know how recently he has visited a sick herd.

Disinfect your wagon and your own shoes and clothes after hauling hogs to stock yards or railroad loading pens.

Avoid every possible way of carrying infection to your hogs.

"An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure" is an old saying, but in this case it is everything.

COW FEED COMES VERY HIGH THESE DAYS

Fine Holstein-Friesian Cows. A Good Dairy Type.

In all sections where dairying is being conducted cattle foods are each year becoming more costly and every dairyman should make an effort to reduce the cost of his cow food.

Instead of feeding hay that is worth $15 a ton he should replace a large portion of it with ensilage which can be raised chiefly by machine labor.

Instead of supplementing a poor pasture with purchased grain foods, he should raise oats and peas, green corn and other green soiling crops.

Instead of buying fattening foods like corn meal, he should buy milk producing foods like bran, cottonseed meal and gluten meal.

As a rule it is most profitable to buy the kind that will produce the most protein at the least cost.

Make the business as self-supporting as possible by raising as much of the feed for the dairy as your farm and circumstances will allow.

Many of the failures in dairying are due to the fact that farmers disregard these points and go out and buy grain foods without discriminating judgment.

To keep good cows and feed them good wholesome food in abundance and provide this food cheaply is absolutely necessary if we are to make a substantial profit from the business.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

When hogs are fed right, there will be very little odor in the pen.

If you want strong lambs give ewes wheat bran in the grain ration.

Keep the pigs warm. They will grow all winter if conditions are right.

The breeding sows should have a combination of foods and very little corn.

Some men's shoats and fall pigs are smaller in the spring than when winter sets in.

If the hogs are warm and comfortable, it takes less food to keep them thrifty.

With bacon at twenty-five or thirty cents a pound it pays to keep pigs and keep them right.

Look out that the fowls are not over-fleshy. It is not good for man, beast or fowl to be too fat.

Never give water or oats to a horse until he has been in the stable an hour and has had some hay.

Sharpen and repair all garden tools. Purchase any new ones needed so as to have them on hand.

GOOD IN BUILDING UP LAND

Cowpeas Should Be Given More Important Place in Agriculture—Big Aid in Renovating Soil.

The great value of cowpeas as a feed and as a soil-renovating crop should give them a more important place in agriculture. The short period of growth also makes it possible to use them to great advantage as a catch crop between the regular crops in the rotation, either for hay, for pasture or for turning under. They are, therefore, especially suited to the man who wishes to build up land rapidly while he is at the same time securing a return from it in feed. The crop is one which will undoubtedly become of much greater importance as the land is farmed more intensively.

Improve by Fences.

Next to tilling, woven wire fences are perhaps the most profitable improvement that can be made on the farm, outside of the barn yards. They make it possible to give little pigs the run of the farm, a good share of the time and to raise sheep without leaving part of their wool hanging on the fences.

Good Anchor for Posts.

A disk from an old pulverizer makes a good anchor for holding the end post of a wire fence, provided it is well weighted down and greased. No 9 wire is needed to connect it with the post.

"For three years I had from my wife the trouble and tried various patent medicines and she only received temporary relief. We tried STELLA-VITAE and to our surprise it restored her to better health than she ever had. It did a wonderful work in her case."

STELLA-VITAE acts directly upon the female organs and functions. It tones and strengthens the muscles and tissues, builds up and restores the whole system when run down and wasted by disease, soothes and adjusts the delicate nervous organization to that harmonious balance so necessary to perfect womanly health.

STELLA-VITAE regulates the functions peculiar to women, stops wasting and relieves dangerous suppression, banishes the terrors of those periods so dreaded by weak, nervous, run-down women.

STELLA-VITAE does not force nature, and is of remarkable benefit at all times and under all conditions. Its use during pregnancy benefits both mother and child.

We guarantee the first bottle of STELLA-VITAE to benefit you. If it doesn't you get your money back. If it does, your dealer is authorized to sell you six bottles for $5.

DROVE GOURMET TO SARCAISM

Evidently French Restaurant Wine Was Not Exactly the Quality He Had Ordered.

William E. Corey praised at a Pittsburgh club the wines of California. "Our California wines," said the steel magnate, "are much better than wines of a similar price in France, for French wines are so adulterated today that even a high-priced one often tastes like burnt sugar and water."

"But the fine wines, the 'grand cru' wines are wonderful," a young banker interrupted.

Mr. Corey shook his head. "A friend of mine, a gourmet with whom I lunched not long ago at a fashionable boulevard restaurant in Paris, ordered a bottle of very old celebrated Margaux. Pouring out a little of the wine and rolling it on his tongue in true gourmet fashion he made a wry face. 'Walter!' he demanded. 'What wine is this you brought me?'"

"It is what monsieur ordered," was the reply. "Margaux 1895, grand cru." "Humph," sneered by friend, "how lucky it is to be so old and to conceal its age so well."

Made a Good Bargain.
A mine, now said to be exceedingly rich, was sold by its native African owner for a pair of trousers and a cap.

LIFE'S ROAD Smoothed by Change of Food.

Worry is a big load to carry and an unnecessary one. When accompanied by indigestion it certainly is cause for the blues.

But the whole trouble may be easily thrown off and life's road be made easy and comfortable by proper eating and the cultivation of good cheer. Read what a Troy woman says:

"Two years ago I made the acquaintance of Grape-Nuts and have used the food once a day and sometimes twice, ever since.

"At the time I began to use it life was a burden. I was for years afflicted with bilious sick headache, caused by indigestion, and nothing seemed to relieve me.

"The trouble became so severe I had to leave my work for days at a time.

"My nerves were in such a state I could not sleep and the doctor said I was on the verge of nervous prostration. I saw an adv. concerning Grape-Nuts and bought a package for trial.

"What Grape-Nuts has done for me is certainly marvelous. I can now sleep like a child, am entirely free from the old trouble and have not had a headache in over a year. I feel like a new person. I have recommended it to others. One man I knew ate principally Grape-Nuts while working on the ice all winter, and said he never felt better in his life."

SYNOPSIS.

Gloria Kerr, a motherless girl, who has spent most of her life in school, arrives at her father's home in Belmont. David Kerr is the political boss of the town, and is anxious to prevent his daughter's learning of his real character. Kendall, representing the Chicago packers, is negotiating with Judge Gilbert, Kerr's adviser, for a valuable franchise. They fear the opposition of Joe Wright, editor of the reform paper, the Belmont News, and assistance of Judge Gilbert in introducing Gloria to Belmont society, and promises to help him put through the packers' franchise and let him have all the graft. Gloria meets Joe Wright at the Gilberts. It appears they are on intimate terms, having met previously on a touring party in Europe. The Gilberts invite Gloria to stay with them pending the reforming of the Kerr home. Wright begins his fight against the proposed franchise in the columns of his paper. Gloria takes up settlement work. Kerr and his lieutenants decide to buy Kerr's paper and ask the editor to meet them at Gilbert's office. Calling at Gilbert's office to solicit a donation Gloria meets Wright. He proposes and is accepted while waiting to be called into the conference. Wright refuses to sell his paper and declares he will fight to any explanation from him. Brokenhearted, Gloria decides to plunge more deeply into settlement work. She calls on a sick girl of the underworld, named Ella. She learns for the first time that her father is the head of a notorious gang of political grafters. Sounds of a conflict are heard in the room over Ella's. Gloria finds Wright unconscious, a victim of an attempted assassination by thugs in the pay of the political ring. She hides him in Ella's room and defies the thugs.

CHAPTER XX—Continued.

Ryan recognized that the time for action had come. On his side he had the overwhelming brute force which would enable him to do as he pleased. Kelly had turned to look into the closet when he was stopped by Gloria's outburst. What Ryan had said had reminded her of her own power. "Stand where you are, you infamous thugs! Must I tell you the truth to be obeyed? If you are above the law, I am higher still. Mike Noonan could have told you who I am. You speak of your boss, then learn the truth."

"What yer givin' us?" jeered Ryan as he advanced toward the place where Wright lay hidden. "Stand back," she cried. I am Gloria Kerr. The two men looked at each other in astonishment, and Little Ella sat bolt upright in bed. "The boss—"

"Daughter," Gloria finished Ryan's exclamation. "I am the daughter of David Kerr. Now go." "Something in her bearing made them feel that she was telling the truth. Kelly, timid now and apologetic, was the first to speak.

"Well, we didn't know you was—why didn't you say—"

"I guess we'll go see Noonan," was Ryan's method of beating a retreat. "He can't git away, anyway," Kelly whispered to him.

Gloria breathed a sigh of relief as they turned to go, but in an instant the shrill scream from Ella which brought the men back to the center of the room froze her blood. "The boss' daughter!" It was a witch's screech ending in a peal of unearthly laughter.

Gloria sank into a chair gasping. "What have I said?"

"She felt the curse upon her. "Come back, Turkey, come back," shrielled Little Ella, laughing wildly. "The boss' daughter! The boss' daughter!"

Her thin hands plucked at the coverlid, and her blazing eyes were fixed upon Gloria, who had shrunk into a weak lump in her chair. Only a few moments had passed since all had admitted that Little Ella dominated the situation. That fact she recognized as readily as did the others. Now she determined to make use of her power. Gloria herself had aroused the savagery of the woman by having inflamed her against the boss, not knowing that the creature's rage was directed against her own father.

Feverishly stimulated to an unaccustomed mental acuteness by the thoughts of her wrongs as Gloria had lain them bare, all the cruelty of the woman's nature asserted itself. Revenge with her was sweetness long drawn out. It was the dainty morsel over which the gourmet lingers. It was the tantalizing antics of the cat that gliazo over the mouse beneath its paw, and even lets it run a little way to arouse the wild hope that it may yet escape. Having decided upon the ultimate disclosure of Wright's hiding place, Little Ella was now bent most of all on making the daughter of the boss suffer to the limit.

"What's the matter, Ella?" Ryan asked. "Let them go, I say. Please let them go," Gloria implored. "You want them to go, do you? Ha!

"The boss' daughter! The boss' daughter!"

"I'll tell you the truth," she turned to Gloria. "I wish the boss had a daughter, did I?—It's a lie, Turkey. She's not Dave Kerr's girl. He'd laugh to see a daughter of his in such a hell-hole. I'd watch her to see that she paid the price," she glanced at Gloria malevolently, "if—if he had a daughter. An' yer pertectin' the man you love!" she mocked. "We'll see how the boss' daughter loves."

Her laughter was terrible. The men could not think her the same woman they knew. Gloria started in alarm. She felt the woman was mad, and did not know what she might do. "What are you going to do?" she asked.

Now Ella was sneering at her. She knew how to choose knife-blades for words. In everything she said was the cunning and the cruelty of a lost woman. Gloria was suffering, she could see, but there was still another chord which would vibrate to misery. Since time began jealousy has been a flaming sword in the hands of an unscrupulous antagonist who knows how to use it. To make Gloria think that she was defending a man untrue to her, was something. To make her believe that she had been defeated by the greater charm of Little Ella herself, was far more.

"Do you think I'd 'a' let you hid that man if he'd loved you? Never. You don't know why he come here, but I do. He come to see me. He loves me."

eyes dilated with her look of hate. Then they narrowed to cruel slits, while a tremor ran through her body. One who knew the girl would scarcely have recognized her. Like some lithe creature of the jungle waiting for the kill, she seemed to crouch for the spring. Just as the woman was about to utter the words which would reveal where the newspaper man was concealed, Gloria was upon her. She seemed with one bound to have leapt the space that separated them. "You Jezebel!" she raged, and struck her fair upon the mouth. Ryan and Kelly did not stir. The unexpected had happened, and they were spellbound.

Gloria's breath rushed through her teeth with a horrid, hissing sound, her face was flushed, her hair tousled, and her waist in disarray. Yet she heeded nothing but the wild impulse to defend her own.

Little Ella, her scant strength all spent, gasped out that she would tell nothing. Gloria was beside herself and the promise meant nothing to her. With a man's strength she lifted the woman up, held her there an instant, and then hurled her back upon the bed. Her head fell over the side, and she lay as one dead.

Her rage was still hot upon her as she turned to confront the two men. "As for you, get out."

Ryan made one last half-hearted stand. "Say, the boss hates that man. Are you really Dave Kerr's daughter?"

"And you need to ask such a question!" she stormed. "Ask Mike Noonan if you will, but beware of David Kerr! If ever you have cause to fear him, you have it now. My anger is his anger, and don't you dare defy the daughter of David Kerr!"

She took a step forward menacingly, as if she had strength to inflict the same chastisement they had seen administered to the woman. They did not stay to argue with her. Leaving Little Ella to her fate, they made a hasty retreat.

No sooner were they out of the room than Gloria put into execution what she had designed when they departed the first time. Rushing to the door she closed it hastily and pushed the washstand in front of it, wedging it under the knob. This done, she ran back and dragged Wright from his hiding place. There was no thought of the woman whose head hung over the side of the bed in such ghastly fashion.

Gloria lifted his head and dashed water upon his face. She watched him closely, and as she saw that he had no effect upon him, a sudden fear seized her and her cheeks were blanched. With trembling fingers she tore at his shirt and felt for the beat of his heart. She could feel its faint pulsation. He lived.

With a wild cry she flung herself forward in a deep swoon upon the body of the unconscious man.

himself, never dreaming that his own daughter would be caught in it. When the fight on the Interurban Railway had first started, at command of the boss, Jack Durken, a ward heeler, apparently had gone over to the enemy. The man had found employment in the circulation department of the News, and soon afterward the information reached Wright that one of his own employes was a former henchman of the notorious first ward leader, Mike Noonan. Durken was leud in his denunciations of David Kerr and his followers, and appeared willing to betray whatever he knew of the methods of the gang.

The editor found him a fountain of information regarding the shady politics of Belmont. In reality Durken told only what David Kerr ordered him to tell. Wishing to establish Wright's confidence in the man, Kerr had him disclose many things of slight importance that were absolutely authentic. One of the charges continuously

"Oh, doctor," said she in a weak and languid voice. "I want to ask you something. Do you think that I may eat a few oysters tonight on returning from the theater?"

"Yes, madam," replied the physician just a trifle testily as he started for the door, "shells and all."

Novelist's Japanese Prints. It is not often that the British museum is enriched by so valuable an addition as that of Arthur Morrison's collection of Japanese prints. It is one of the very finest collections of its kind extant. Arthur Morrison, who is the writer of Tales of Mean Streets, and other remarkable works of fiction, is the greatest living English authority on Japanese art, on which he has written much. His interest in the subject is due to an accident. Some 26 years ago he was attracted by a print in a shop window and incidentally bought it. That was the beginning of his activities as a collector and connoisseur.

OUCH! BACKACHE, RUB LAME BACK

Rub pain away with a small trial bottle of old "St. Jacobs Oil"

When your back is sore and lame or lumbago, sciatica or rheumatism has you stiffened up, don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle of old, honest "St. Jacobs Oil" at any store, pour a little in your hand and rub it right on your back, and by the time you count fifty, the soreness is gone. Don't stay crippled! This soothing, penetrating oil takes the ache and pain right out and ends the misery. It is magical, yet absolutely harmless and doesn't burn the skin. Nothing else stops lumbago, sciatica and lame back misery so promptly and surely. It never disappoints!—Adv.

Then the Apparatus is in Demand. A visitor was being shown through a lift-lifting "athletic" club. The chief attraction seemed to be the lifted gymnastic department. However, there was a cheaply equipped gymnasium which showed evidences of disuse. There was dust on the Indian clubs and cobwebs on the dumbbells. "Don't the members ever use this equipment?" the visitor asked. "Oh, yes, occasionally—when a fight starts," was the reply.

PLEASE PUBLISH THIS LETTER

Writes Lady Who can Now Walk Four Miles a Day Without Feeling Tired.

Boynton, Va.—Mrs. Fannie Boyd, of this town, says: "I am sure I would have been in my grave, had it not been for Cardui, the woman's tonic, and I certainly cannot praise it enough, for it is worth its weight in gold. I am, today, a walking advertisement for Cardui."

Before taking Cardui, I could hardly walk across the floor, I was so weak. I underwent an operation last spring for womanly trouble, but felt no better. After using 8 bottles of Cardui, the woman's tonic, my ulcers were all gone, I can eat hearty without suffering any pain, feel fine in every way, work all day, and can walk four miles a day without feeling tired.

Please publish this letter, as I would like for every woman to know what Cardui did for me."

Many letters, similar to the above, come to us, unsolicited, every day. This one should surely convince you of the merit of Cardui, as it expresses the earnest sentiment of a lady who has tried it.

If you suffer from any of the numerous ailments so common to women, such as headache, backache, nervousness, weakness, pains in sides and limbs, sleeplessness, etc., begin taking Cardui today. It will help you, as it has helped so many others, in the past half century.

This has been a week of much work. The weather has been warm and the farmers turning the soil, many have been planting grass has grown so that a green carpet is showing all over the prairies.

Mr. Hedley Citizen, just secret about cleaning up. Women of the town have waited for you to make a clean up. Now, they are about become disgusted and decided to not wait longer. The cleaning up them then if a Now, wouldn't it sound like to hear the report up and all around that Hedley had a set of men so "plague talk" that their women folks had to clean up the town? Well, take this as a warning, and act before it is too late.

There is a limit to even a printer's patience. While the town people sit with folded hands the typhoid fly is busy. You know and I know that every day that we delay cleaning up we are running a risk. It may be some of my folks, or it may be some of yours, that will suffer. Are you willing to run the risk? The Commercial Club has heretofore taken the clean up campaign in hand and put it through. The Chairman usually called a meeting and the citizens would respond, a date would be named and all would get busy. In plain United States we say "DITTO"

LITTLE EDITORIALS ON BUSINESS

By Roy B. Simpson No. 1--THE HIGH COST OF LIVING

The farmer should be the most fortunate of all the many classes of people in the matter of providing a living at a low cost, but recent figures show that the farmer's cost of living is increasing in the same proportion as that of city people.

One of the chief reasons for this is that the farmer is buying much of his merchandise in the city instead of from the local merchant nearest him. This applies with equal force to residents of this town.

More than half the people of the United States live on farms and in towns of less than 2,500 population, yet only one-fifth of the total retail business of the country is done in these small communities. Thirty per cent of the trade of these people goes to the larger towns and cities where prices are 10 to 25 per cent higher for the same quality of merchandise the country merchant sells.

We recognize the right of every person to buy where he can get the best merchandise and the best service for his money, but the value of the country store to the rural community is greater today than it ever was, because it carries a better assortment and gives better values. Therefore, the stability and integrity of the country merchant should be maintained.

We urge our readers to compare prices of city merchants with those of their country stores. Give your home merchant a chance to supply your needs. Then, if you find that you can buy the same goods for less money by going or sending away for them, your own good judgment will tell you that it is the thing to do.

It is the duty of every family to prevent this exodus of trade to the cities, if such a thing is possible. Keep a record of your purchases in the city store and the total cost, including the delivery to your home.

Compare the prices and the quality of your purchases with the same merchandise carried by your local merchant. Then you will know who is giving you the most for your money.

COTTON SEED

To the Farmers of Hedley territory: Realizing how scarce cotton planting seed is and the inferior quality of the seed raised in this country last year I have contracted for about 400 bushels of the pure Melbourne cotton seed, which I will have on hand in about 6 or 8 days, which I will be glad to supply anyone with at $1.50 per bushel. All those that need any I will be pleased to book your order for them at once.

PRINCESS "SOLD OUT"

EVENT AT PARIS SURELY MARKS THE DATE IN ROYALTIES.

Princess Louise of Belgium has just been sold out by the sheriff in Paris. It marks the date in royalties. The papers of all Europe have their editorials upon it.

"What can we be coming to?" they ask. "The furniture of a king's daughter sold by public auction." But the Princess Louise was not in Paris.

"Let the things go," she said grandly. Princess Louise was in Vienna, wearing her magnificent jewels. At least the shopkeepers of Vienna think so. Half the time the princess' confidential maid has the real jewels on and Louise wears imitations of them. The shopkeepers of Vienna know this also. Half the time both maid and princess wear false jewels, the real ones being snugly hidden in a box of blacking on the kitchen mantel.

And the shopkeepers of Paris know this also. Also those of Paris, London, Rome, Geneva, Nice, Athens and Naples. When the princess is within their halliwicks keen eyes of confidential "agents" seek to discern when she wears her real jewels.

Do they hope to put the sheriff on them? Not at all. It is to sell her more goods--and get payments on account of what the princess owes them. When she wears her real jewels it is a sure sign that Princess Louise is in funds. Often she fools them this way also.

The princess is the queen of shoppers. Fifty hanging wardrobes in a single Paris flat!

They crowded four spare bedrooms like a clothing warehouse, lining the walls and forming alleys up and down the floor.

The Paris sheriff found the 50 wardrobes empty.

Gone, the $23,000 sable coat, made of "a hundred black imperial pelts, selected by an expert during two years"--so they told her. Gone, the chinchilla ulster with silver fox collar that was charged $11,000; gone, the ermine-lined chinchilla mantle, whose price had been $13,000. Gone, also, the tailored gowns which she bought ten in an afternoon; the evening costumes, dishabilles, and afternoon gowns, signed by the great makers at $500 to $1,000 each; and all those "100 pairs of new shoes" and "300 new hats," and the "Louise handkerchiefs" at $25 each, which the Vienna papers told about.

All the sheriff found to levy on was furniture and bric-a-brac, too heavy or bulky for surreptitious removal! Truly, a strange sale in Paris--the furniture of a princess of a reigning house, brought up with the greatest royalties of Europe, and legal heiress to a third of the fabulous fortune of her father, King Leopold--of which, with his last breath, he tried, apparently, to disinherit her.

Of course, the great shopkeepers of Europe don't believe it. They believe the dishonour to be a trick against themselves. The fortune is so great that a single lump of "twenty-six millions" could "disappear," a lump of "fifty-four millions" could belong to the estate or not, a third lump of "fifteen millions" be described as "all that I got from my father and mother" and "three trunks full of securities" be supposedly disputed about to this day, without the lats of them or the sum total of their millions having been yet discovered!

An interminable sale. The first afternoon it lasted five hours! Thrice, in solemn tones, the governmental functionary called aloud the princess' name--to appear, pay the debt and claim her goods. Thrice there was silence. Then, her default established, he proceeded to sell the complete dining room set of furniture--which brought $445. It was the highest price of the two days' sale! The total two days' sale brought only $7,500.

Confusion.

"The senator's ignorance of banking reminds me of the three ladies in the observation car," said Frank A. Vanderbilt in a recent interview upon the currency bill.

"These three ladies as they sat in an observation car Californiaward through the superb scenery in the world fell to talking about dogs."

"I don't know a thing about dogs," said the first lady. "They're all just dogs to me. If I have a preference, though, it's for the cob."

"Cobs are nice--so affectionate," agreed the second lady. "But I'm no dog sharp, either. Still, I must say my choice of a dog would be a Mustang. They're such good watch dogs, aren't they?"

"I don't know one dog from another," said the third lady. "I just divide them into big dogs and little dogs. I'm very fond of a backney, though--I mean, of course, for a lap dog."

English Women at the Theater. Many London women are said to have so little spending money that when they wish to go to a matinee they have to take the gallery or pit seats, says a writer. However, that ought not to be a very great deprivation, as most married women who go to theaters without their husbands like to take the most inconspicuous seats, and some even prefer the novelty of the gallery once in a while.

Favors Immigration.

Immigration is particularly marked where road conditions are favorable; in fact, the figures of the department seem to indicate that good roads indirectly increase the demand for rural property; and the price of farm land like that of any commodity, is ruled by the relations between demand and supply.

ADVICE FROM THE VETERAN

Actor's Opinion of Ability of His Would-be Colleague Was Not in the Least Degree Flattering.

The veteran actor, C. W. Coudock, who is probably best remembered by the theatergoers for his impersonation of Dunstan Kirk in "Hazel Kirke" many years ago, was putting a company together for a contemplated tour. The actors were to be recruited from a stock company in Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Coudock, addressing one of the actors, Ogden by name, asked that gentleman to see him (Coudock) in his dressing room after the performance.

Ogden was on the job as soon as he heard the curtain bump the floor. "Ogden," said Coudock, "what business are you supposed to be playing?"

"Second comedy, sir."

"What might your salary be?"

"Twelve dollars a week, sir."

"How much do you pay for board?"

"Five dollars a week, sir."

"Well," said Coudock, very slowly, "if I was a young man and my name was Ogden, and I was playing second comedy, and I was getting $12 a week and paid $5 for board, I'd try to put by a little each week, say, 50 cents (even if I had to give up some of my beer) till I got $2.50."

"And then?" said the jubilant Ogden.

"I'd go to a good second-hand store and buy a good hatchet and chop my d--- head off."

P. S.--Ogden wasn't engaged.--Chicago Journal.

ACT ON FIRST IMPRESSIONS

Old Adage That "He Who Hesitates is Lost" is a Whole Bundle of Truth.

In a letter to a friend at a great moral crisis in his life Darwin expressed an observation which is confirmed by general experience. The action which had suggested itself to him when he first faced the crisis he had condemned as dishonorable. On further consideration, when he was sorely tempted to proceed, he told his friend of the struggle he was having, but added, "First impressions are generally right," and he proposed to stand by his first impression that the course in view would be dishonorable.

When a moral question involving difficulties is put up to a person his first impression is on the merits of the question, without reference to the difficulties of the course. Later the difficulties begin to loom up, and caution is apt to get the better of the doubter.

Reflection on a matter of disagreeable duty often paralyzes action. The adage, "He who hesitates is lost," embodies a store of wisdom.

The Falling Leaves.

There is no more thrilling, solemn sight in all the range of nature than the falling of leaves. In the beginning, a few at a time, they come drifting, circling downward, utterly careless and unobtrusive, yet deeply purposeful. With a sigh they seek the warm, pungent earth which is to each one of them the ultimate breast of God. Then more and more of them come. By and by the dim, shining temple is full of the soft stir of their passing--frail shapes, crossing the motionless lines of the trees, floating athwart the shadows, animating the inner gloom. Their faint, sighing whisper voices the silence of the forest more poignantly than the hymns of the hermit thrush. If the wind still forbears, they fall slowly, freeing themselves of their own accord, knowing the uttermost joy of self-abandonment. Multitudes fall together, however, going hand in hand to their common end. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision. They know what they want, and they take it together, deeply satisfied.--The Atlantic.

Wand That Puts to Sleep.

The story of the Sleeping Beauty, particularly its eastern versions, has been traced conjecturally, to hypnotic practices. A wand or rod often appears in the eastern tales; placed under the feet of the woman or man it kills or sends to sleep (primitive folk scarcely distinguish between sleep and death), under the head it restores to life or waking. Sometimes there are two wands, silver and gold respectively. In Scandinavian versions a sleep-torn takes the place of the wand. In Ireland this appears as a pin, and very possibly the sleep of the heroine of Grimm's "Briar Rose," when the spindle pricks her, is connected with this. In the Arabian story it is a ring placed upon a finger that causes slumber.

CLUBBING OFFER

In this day of progress the man who would succeed must be informed about the world's doings. The local paper gives him local information which is useful, but it cannot cover the whole field. Hence the man who keeps step with the march of the times will take a general newspaper also.

The Fort Worth Semi-Weekly Record has taken front rank among the great publications of the South and West. It is specially prepared for the reader who has not the time or the opportunity to read a daily paper.

First of all, it is a newspaper. The Record believes that the people of the country and village are as much interested in current events as the people of the city.

In the next place, it carries features suitable for all members of the family--women and children as well as men.

Last, but by no means least, the Record's editorial policy comprehends the economic welfare of the farmer and stock raiser. The Record is an acknowledged leader in the discussion of public questions in their relation to agricultural production.

INCREASED VALUE OF LANDS

Advance in Demand, Essentially to Decreased Cost of Hauling Different Farm Products to Market.

It is a matter of common observation that, when any community has passed from a condition dominated by bad roads to a condition which is characterized by good roads, land values in that community advance. It is plain that no system of good roads can directly improve the soil fertility or the quality of farms. It is equally true that good roads can and do directly improve the site value, or the value which accrues to the farm by virtue of its situation with respect to markets, schools, and towns, and the accessibility of these.

In dealing with this matter of increased farm values from a strictly economic standpoint, it has been pointed out and it is worth remembering, that where farms have advanced in value the advance is due essentially to decreased hauling costs. The advance in farm values, in other words, measures partly the increased value of the farm as a plant for the business of farming. That increment of value which is due to those things that are described as social advantages or improved social conditions has no numerical measure.

When his road is improved the landowner appreciates the improvement and frequently sets an increased value upon his land. It is difficult, however, to analyze the entire increment of value which follows good roads. There is no doubt that the cost of good roads is met by some form of taxation, which, in many instances, causes the land owners to add to the selling price of their land that amount which they estimate the good road has cost them in taxes.

This process is more distinctly observed in city property transfers, where direct assessments for sewers, sidewalks, and pavements are invariably added to the original cost of the property. The important point that is becoming more and more understood by land owners is that good roads require a considerable investment of capital, and furthermore that such an investment is a paying one. Here are a few instances of actual conditions which have been observed in various parts of the country.

In Lee county, Virginia, a farmer owned 100 acres between Ben Hur and Jonesville, which he offered to sell for $1,500. Two or three years ago this road was improved, and although that farmer fought the improvement, he has since refused $3,000 for his farm. Along this same road a tract of 188 acres was supposed to have been sold for $6,000. The purchaser refused the contract and the owner threatened to sue him. After the road improvement, and without any improvements upon the land the same farm was sold to the original purchaser for $9,000.

In Jackson county, Alabama, the people voted a bond issue of $250,000, for road improvement and improved 24 per cent. of the roads. The 1900 census gave the value of all farm lands in Jackson county as $4.90 per acre. The selling price at that time was from $6 to $15 per acre. The last census gives the value of Jackson county farm lands as $9.79, and the selling price is now from $15 to $25 per acre.

The price of farm land, like that of any other commodity, is ruled by the relation between supply and demand. When the price of farm land advances it measures a readjustment between the supply and the demand. This readjustment, in some cases, is sharp and immediate. One distinct item of increased values is becoming more evident from year to year; that is, immigration into the rural districts where road conditions are favorable especially is this true with regard to owners of automobiles. There are a host of instances of this kind in New England and these states which have been active in improving their roads.

We are prepared to do all kinds of work.

ECONOMICAL RECIPES.

Buy beef ribs, cover them with quart of water, a half can of tomato a sliced onion, a red pepper mine and five whole cloves. Season with salt and cover closely. Simmer for three hours.

Gingerbread.—Mix together a cup of lard and a cup of brown sugar, add a half teaspoonful of cinnamon and one teaspoonful of ginger. In a cupful of boiling water dissolve a teaspoonful of soda. Sift three cupfuls of flour with a teaspoonful of baking powder. Add the boiling water and soda the last thing.

Baked Cheese Puff.—Grease a pudding dish and put into it a layer of sliced bread with a slice of cheese on each slice. Beat one egg light, stir into it a pint of milk, salt slightly and pour the milk over the bread and cheese. Set in the oven and bake until lightly browned, then serve at once. This is a simple, wholesome dish and makes a nutritious one to take the place of meat.

Coffee Tapioca Pudding.—Soak a cupful of tapioca in water and put over the fire in a double boiler with a pint of coffee left from the last meal. Cook until clear, then stir in sugar to taste. Serve hot with sugar and cream.

Codfish Rolls.—Mix together mashed potato and shredded codfish, season with butter, pepper and salt, if desired. Form the mixture into rolls, size of the second finger and 4 inches long. Roll in flour and fry in hot fat. Serve with a white sauce garnished with parsley.

Bread and Meat Balls.—Put a pound of round steak through a meat chopper. Crumble a half loaf of bread and soak it in a large cup of milk. When soft, squeeze out the milk and add the bread to the meat. Season well, form into balls, roll in flour and fry in hot fat. Season the sauce with tomato catsup.

Got Her Souvenir.

There is a certain famous violinist who frequently visits this country, and who, among his acquaintances, is almost as noted for his parsimony as for his genius. Among this musician's admirers was a young woman who was determined, if possible, to procure some souvenir of the great man. Her opportunity came one rainy day when she chanced to encounter the musician on Broadway. He was provided with an old cotton umbrella, green with age; while the young woman carried a nice new silk one. She stopped him for a moment, explaining: "Oh, if you would only give me some slight remembrance of yourself—no matter how small!" The great man surveyed her keenly, and then gave a glance at the old cotton umbrella that covered him. "Certainly, my dear young lady, I shall be delighted. We will exchange umbrellas."

Little "Curtisies" of Children.

A fashionable hostess recently gave a most delightful party for children. When awarding them prizes for their proficiency in various games she directed the recipients to "make your little curtisies and feel each time you do so that you are saying 'thank you' for the prizes." It was a little lesson so kindly put that it met with an immediate response. And in these days when we hear so much about "manners" it must often be felt that it is the disappearance of those "little curtisies" which were once ubiquitous among country children, that has gradually brought about a change in rural as well as town "manners."

Neglect in teaching, not the loss of the spirit which can understand the need of these graceful little acts, is responsible for much we hear of the decline of children's manners of today.

Criticized Gladstone.

Even Mr. Gladstone did not escape the reputation of being a demagogue in the wicked sense. On one occasion he confessed (at Oxford) that his old age had been driven to an agitator, in order to counteract the designs of Disraeli, and he confessed "with pain and reluctance" that Lord Shaftesbury took a very unfavorable view of this demagogue. It is a new thing and a very serious thing to see a prime minister of the name. Surely there is some reason due to dignity of position that has been running from Greenwood to Bitch-heath, to Woolwich, to New Cross, to every place where a barrel can be set up, is more like Punch than the premier. Nowadays we are rather proud of the energy of our great speechmakers, on whatever side they talk.

More Economical Than Boys

and Ly
oma Van Vochten Shaffer

As many boys, as well as men, are not so saving, not so economical as the other sex. Girls are trained from infancy, in the average family, to help save, help to care for what the family may later need.

Why are boys not so disciplined? As a rule boys are more desired than girls, and in many cases seem to be more spoiled. In early school days few boys can stand it to be behind the other boys in the matter of possessions, and usually their desires are gratified, at some cost, perhaps to the claims of the less assertive children. Girls may have the same desire, but seem to be taught earlier that theirs is a life of giving up. A boy's idea is to have!

What a mistake such families make in their discrimination between girls and boys. As the boy is father to the man, responsibilities in caring for others are bound to fall on him later. The future happiness of many is going to depend on him. Is such discipline, or lack of discipline, preparing him for the greater task as husband and father of a family?

In college days the average girl considers carefully all the extras, and goes without many a coveted pleasure because "it is asking too much of father." I find that boys very seldom do this, although, when the need comes for such effort a boy may make very strenuous efforts at earning his own way—in his own way. His extravagance in college still comes through false standards. He must keep up with the crowd, regardless of the cost. Sometimes the family is sacrificed to gain his ends and keep up with the procession. With the same false standards he marries and starts the home that so often leads to ruin. Oh, for the days of our grandmothers and the simple life!

Men often go in debt for the sake of keeping up in the procession, and thus many a house that might be so beautiful falls to the ground. The world demands, and man pays, and then he blames the world when all the while he is making the mistake of helping the world to worship at false altars.

Man is more responsible than woman for this false standard, in my opinion. As a boy he can't stand ridicule, he won't stand it as a man, and this leads him into one long mistake of trying to grasp that unseen god of false standards that is ever eluding him. In the last analysis I believe woman will be found the great economist of the family.

Emma Van Vochten Shaffer

It is an observation that women are not only more economical than men, but that they are much more economical.

A false standard of living is responsible for the fact

Warning the Mariner

TITANIC MEMORIAL LIGHT HOUSE

THE first lighthouse on record is said to have been erected at Alexandria in Egypt by Ptolemy Philadelphus nearly three centuries before the birth of Christ. It was said to have been 500 feet high, while the light, consisting in all probability of a coal or wood fire in an open hearth on the summit of the tower, is supposed to have been visible 42 miles out at sea.

In the United Kingdom, toward the end of the fourteenth century, the lighting of the coast was left in the hands of the various religious orders, who established and kept up lights at their own expense and thus did their best to warn mariners of the dangers which lurked round about their monasteries or dwellings, an exchange system. The lights at this time usually consisted of a wood or coal fire burnt in an open brazier situated on a church tower, although we occasionally read of lights being exhibited in windows to guide ships in from seaward. The dissolution of the monasteries in the reign of Henry VIII, doing away as it did with the men who gratuitously tended these coast lights as a sacred duty, abolished the lights also at one blow and it was not until several years later that the first of the regular coast lights were instituted.

Private Lighthouses Established.

At this time it was customary for private people to erect lighthouses at their own expense, in return for which they were allowed to levy a toll on all passing vessels. The license to do this was granted by the king, but Trinity house, a guild or fraternity of sailors who undertook to look after the interests of all those connected with shipping, had developed into a rich and powerful organization, holding the general management of navigation. They regarded the erection of these private lighthouses as a usurpation of their rights, for they were responsible for the buoyage of the channels, and alleged that they had the sole right of erecting lighthouses. Trinity house, therefore, opposed all schemes for the building of lighthouses by private persons. But in spite of this hostility lighthouses were erected at many points on the coast. The light consisted of an open hearth at the summit of the tower, while the curious davit and pulley on the right hand side were used for hoisting up the necessary fuel.

Trinity house, in spite of the obvious utility of the light, was bitterly opposed to the measure, and characterized the lighthouses as "useless," "dangerous" and a "burden and hindrance to navigation," and it was not until about a century later that the policy of the corporation changed. They then no longer opposed all measures for the establishment of lights, but, on the other hand, helped the sailor to demand that for the dues he paid the private lighthouse owner should show a good and steady light. They also set about improving the various schemes for illumination, but it was not until 1836 that privately owned lights were abolished, and the entire system passed into the hands of Trinity house.

The principal illuminants used in ancient lighthouses were coal or wood fires in an open hearth, but toward the end of the seventeenth century it occurred to some people to inclose the fire in a lantern with a funnel or chimney at the top. This saved the fuel, but the efficiency of the lights suffered, for it was no longer fanned by the sea breezes and needed the frequent use of the bellows to keep it alight. There were many complaints about the pooriness of the lights and the lanterns were subsequently removed, but coal or wood fires remained in use till 1822.

Candles were next thought of, but these again had obvious disadvantages, for the great heat generated in the lantern melted the candles and thus diminished the intensity of the light. The wicks also required the constant use of snuffers, and this again was a serious disadvantage. The use of oil was not universally adopted until the middle of the eighteenth century, while soon afterward contrivances were adopted for increasing the light by means of reflectors. Gas was first used as an illuminant in the early part of the nineteenth century, but only for lighthouses on piers and harbors near gas works, and it was not until 1865 that gas was used at out of the way lighthouses. Soon afterward electricity and kerosene were introduced; and these, gas and oil are now the principal illuminants employed.

Bell on the Inchcape Rock.

The present Bell Rock lighthouse is situated off Arbroath, and this is the place, it will be remembered, that has been immortalized in the poem of "Sir Ralph the Rover," where—

The good old abbot of Aberbrothock Had placed that bell on the Inchcape rock, On a buoy, in the storm, it floated and swung, And over the waves its warning rung.

The first time a lighthouse was erected on an isolated rock was in the case of the first Eddystone lighthouse completed by Winstanley in 1698, where tall candles were used as an illuminant. The tower was polygonal in form, which the ornamentation above offered great resistance to the wind. This lighthouse, however, stood till 1703, when it was knocked down by the sea, and Winstanley himself and all the occupants perished.

The next Eddystone was completed in 1708 by Rudyard, and this was completely destroyed by fire in December, 1755. It had been constructed of wood, and the next tower, of granite, was erected by John Smeaton and stood from 1758 to 1881. In 1879, however, it was discovered that the rock on which it stood was being undermined by the action of the water and this necessitated the building of a new tower on a neighboring rock with more secure foundations. This tower was completed in 1881, when the old Smeaton lighthouse was removed to the Hoe at Plymouth, where it now stands.

No Joke. At the Chicago Athletic club a game had been put on in a cynical old bachelor. The man had waited from eight to ten in the park on a snowy evening in obedience to a pale pink, violet-scented note that his friends had faked in order to see if he was really as confirmed a woman hater as he claimed.

Turning up at the club for a night-cap, the duped and frozen bachelor was very sullen and sulky when his friends derided him. He was no fun whatever in the fake note.

George Ade, noticing his black and lowering looks, gave a loud laugh and said:

GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER GRAY HAIR

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of this famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy. ## How Hunter Should Carry His Weapon

By J. B. BRUCE, Tracy City, Idaho

The number of accidents that have occurred lately and are still taking place in hunting expeditions is appalling. In almost every case the cause of the accident is either carelessness or ignorance. The hunter should be sure that he understands every detail of the handling of his gun before he decides to go out on a hunt.

Following are a few simple suggestions, which if carefully observed might prevent these accidents, or at least decrease the number thereof:

1. Don't hold or rest your gun in a position so that dirt or any other obstruction can get into the muzzle. This would almost certainly make it explode when fired.
2. Don't pull the gun toward you by the muzzle, wherever you may be.
3. In climbing over a fence or a log put the gun over first, and see that it is placed in a safe, steady position; then go over yourself and take up the gun.
4. Always keep the gun pointed from you and from other persons; carry it with the muzzle pointing upward or directly downward.
5. Don't carry your gun cocked, except when actually expecting the game to rise.
6. Don't fire into moving bushes or in the direction of a sound because you think the game is there; be sure it is there and then fire.
7. Don't load the gun until you have left the house, and in returning from your hunt discharge it, if a muzzle loader, or remove the cartridges if a breech loader. Never, under any circumstances, carry it loaded into the house.

Remember that discretion is the better part of valor.

Drawing Line on Good and Bad Slang

By H. G. WOODRUFF, Boston, Mass.

By what rule or principle shall one discriminate between good and bad slang? Between the admissible and the inadmissible? Between the allowable and the forbidden? According to the dictionary, slang is "a popular, but unauthorized word, phrase or mode of expression." But we are not informed who has authority to authorize. Another definition of slang is "words or phrases which have acquired capricious or extravagantly metaphorical meanings."

A western college professor has just issued certificates of good character to several phrases that do not bear the best of reputations in some circles. He likes "Not on your life." He thinks "On the level" and "A good sport" are admirable, and he sees nothing wrong in "She's a peach" and "He's a pippin." He regards "Taking to the tall timber" as fine and picturesque. He puts, however, on his lingual index expurgatorius such expressions as "On the square," "Put you wise," "Getting the gravy"—the last named being synonymous with "Copping the coin."

How shall the average person, who is not a college professor, know where to draw the line? Perhaps there is no line.

Studying the Causes of Tidal Waves

By J. M. THOMAS, Portland, Ore.

Just what causes tidal waves has been a subject of much interest to learned men all over the world. The term tidal wave is erroneously applied to almost any unexpected wave that washes the seacoast or the shore of a great lake. These waves are up if ever due to the tides, since the real tidal wave is a phenomenon of exact calculation and prediction, but they may be traced usually to some distant earthquake or violent storm.

When an earthquake occurs beneath the sea, the vertical movements of the sea bed generate a great wave which is propagated outwards from the center of the shock and reaches the land after the arrival of the earth wave.

In the open sea this wave is so broad that it cannot be perceived, but when it reaches shallow water near the shore it rushes forward as an immense breaker, sometimes 60 feet or more high, and overwhelming everything in its course.

The Japanese are studying the subject, as it interests them deeply.

Origin of the Word Alcohol. In the second century B. C., the Egyptians had an eye salve containing antimony sulphide, which, in Arabic, was called "kol," or with the article "al kol." Originally the word denoted any remedy for the eyes, and specifically a liquid collyrium, made from burnt incense and burnt almond shells. Later any fine powder was called "al kol," and by extension, any fine or subtle substance, whether in powder form or not. Since the fineness and volatility of wine were called its "spirit," the latter was also termed "al kol," or alcohol. This significance of the word has persisted to the present time, in the expression "alcoholism," used for drugs in very fine powder.—The Pharmaceutical Era.

To breakfast with her husband, Mrs. Conscientious Youngwife arose before times, mornings.

The husband must needs hasten down town at an early hour, for there were affairs of moment that required his attention while the day was yet young.

When she had kissed her other self good-by, Mrs. Youngwife turned to and cleaned up her not too big house; for she felt that she could afford but one maid. The Youngwifes were just starting out in the world, you know.

When the house was set to rights, Mrs. Youngwife washed and dressed her child and escorted the small one to the kindergarten.

Then she fared forth into the market-place and, in person, purchased what the inner Youngwife would need for the next 24 hours.

Then she went home and stitched up the child's frock.

Then she went out and brought her child home from the kindergarten.

Then she sat on the back porch and worked the buttonholes in the little frock, while the child played in the sand pile, under its mother's eye.

Then she washed and dressed the child again and sent it out with the one maid (when the luncheon dishes were out of the way).

Then she arrayed herself in gay garments and fared forth to card parties and such women's doings as pleased her fancy. Mrs. Grundy, living across the street, watched all these comings and goings. She shook her head and said:

"That Mrs. Youngwife is forever on the street. No wonder the young husbands of today can never raise their noses from the grindstone!"

And she ran in to ask the next door neighbor if she had noticed the sad case of the Youngwifes. The next door neighbor had. It transpired that all the women in the neighborhood had and were very sad over it—so sad that they could not leave talking of it, and freely predicted what the outcome would be. Afterward they told these predictions for the truth, and it became rumored that Mr. Youngwife was sadly tied up in a business way because his wife was forever on the street.

And so Mr. Youngwife found it very hard to get some business accommodation that he needed, because men who could furnish such accommodation said among themselves that it was better to beware of a young man with a foolish wife.

The lack of money hampered the young man very much for a time; but when his wife saw that he was troubled, she told him not to mind, that she could get up a little earlier and stay up a little later, and let the maid go and only have a woman come in for the heavy cleaning, till business was better and they sailed into smoother waters.

That cheered up Mr. Youngwife so much that he dug down into his brain deeper than he had ever been before and brought up something much more valuable than borrowed money, and made a great business success, and bought an electric runabout.

And the neighbors said: "At last that foolish young woman has her man on the last lap toward ruin!"

And they wagged their heads sorrowfully and were secretly glad.

But the Youngwifes flourished as a green bay tree—in spite of the neighbors.

N. B.—Mrs. Youngwife was a very pretty woman.—Hattie Lee Macallister.

KNEW TRICK OF ADVERTISING Cook Publisher of the Year 1767 Would Have Had Little to Learn From His Brothers of Today.

The advertising of children's books does not seem to have advanced in ingenuity since the time of old John Newbery. Here is a specimen of his art, from the London Morning Chronicle in December, 1767: "This day was published 'Nurse Truelove's New Year Gift, or the Book of Books for Children,' adorned with cuts, and designed as a present for every little boy who would become a great man and ride upon a fine horse, and to every little girl who would become a great woman and ride in a lord mayor's gilt coach. Printed for the author, who has ordered these books to be given gratis to all little boys and girls at the Bible and Sun in St. Paul's churchyard, they paying for the binding, which is only 2d each book."

John Newbery, who so ingeniously advertised his children's story books, used them in turn to advertise other commodities in which he was interested. One of his "side lines" was the famous Dr. James' Powder, in which Goldsmith placed such faith, and allusions to that specific are plentifully sprinkled through the pages of the books. In "Goody Two-Shoes," for instance, the heroine's father dies miserably because "seized with a fever in a place where Dr. James' Powder was not to be had."
