omen's dress. To me women have never been so about immodesty in unhampered by superfluous dry goods and so attractively and becomingly and naturally dresser as they are today.

Clothes are so imple that it is possible for the home dressmaker to do most of her own eving and for the woman in business to find time to do more for herself into she has ever been able to do before.

duction of desirable sorts will undoubtedly find that they have too many misfits on their hands that can not be sold at a profit.

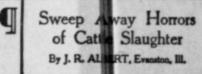

Of course the extravagantly as they aim to make thems men who have unlimited means can still dress as ish. There is a certain class of women who always es conspicuous, and if they were not wearing too few clothes they would be doing something else to appear ridiculous. Why should woman be ash ned of the fact that she was born with two legs and have to be forever trong to dress to conceal the fact?

Her skirts are so tight nor so shockingly form revealing as are the men's trousers.

As to the theor hat it is a temptation to men, if the men were guarding their own the ghts they would not be looking on every woman to lust after her, in whit, as the Master said, they have already committed adultery in their hears. It is the old Adam cry of "the woman, she tempted me" as an extree for their own sin.

Talk about the voman being the weaker sex—if that isn't the apex of weakness! Why simild woman be expected to manifest all the virtues and man be allowed to cultivate all the vices?

I suppose they will keep up this agitation until they have us wearing skirts that are six yards around again or three yards long, and then there will be another hue and cry about the folly of women.

An unseen power has intervened to stop what man would not abolish, wickedly converting the subhuman kingdom into food.

MOST PROFITABLE HORSE FOR THE FARMER

In no other one line of live stock production has there been such a lack of study or system as that of horse production. For many years the farmers have practiced haphazard methods of breeding, feeding, care and management as well as preparation for market. They have bred and reared horses without any regard to their own local demand or the requirements of users from a distance. Horse breeding when judiciously carried on has been a profitable business for American farmers. If horses are bred with a definite object in view, as some special class, one need not be afraid of a poor market. However, farmers who do not exercise care and business methods in the production of desirable sorts will un-

To be a successful horse breeder a man must be thoroughly familiar with the horse market, know the various classes, and set about to produce the animals that are in demand. In the great markets, horses are classed according to their work. It is impossible to draw hard-and-fast lines between some of the classes, but most of them are fairly well defined. A horse that is known in one part of the country by one name may be different from a horse which is referred to by the same name in another part. However, there are certain distinct classes which are given the same name the world over, and it is with these that the farmer should familiarize himself.

After the farmer knows the various types in greatest demand on the market he should aim to produce superior his conditions. He must be a good judge of horses, have a clear and well defined idea of the type of horse he is going to breed, and then set out to produce it. There are four distinct classes suitable for production. These are the heavy drafters, carriage or coach horses, roadsters and saddle horses. any of these are always in demand and command high prices. Of these four classes, the heavy draft horse is best suited for Arizona farming. These may be raised on the range or on alfalfa pasture and marketed at a good

The draft colt can be raised with less risk and less liability to accident than colts of the lighter class. This is because he is less active and slight bruises or blemishes do not seriously detract from the value of the drafter. Furthermore, a draft colt earns his own living after he is two years old and his education can be completed on the farm. Some of the essential points to be considered in selecting draft horses are good feet and legs, weight exceeding at least 1,600 pounds, a well developed blocky body with good style and action. The feet and legs are of first importance in any horse. A desirable draft animal may be produced by breeding large mares with good size and quality to a firstclass sire of any of the recognized draft breeds. Percheron horses have been proved to be suited to conditions in Arizona, since they have excellent action and large size. The breeder should aim at a perfect, heavy draft type and make every effort possible to produce it. In case the colts were lighter in weight than expected they could still be suited to some other classes that would bring less money.

MAKE PREPARATION

Pallet Must Be Well Developed to Become Good Producer-Hatch Them Early.

About the last of September is the annual worry time for those high priced eggs. Get busy now-hatch your chicks during March and April, get rid of the cockerels just as soon as they are big enough to fry-give the pullets range, lots of feed, fresh water and milk, and the worry time will be only a dream. A pullet must be well developed before cold weather to be an early winter producer. Our summer season is short and we must take advantage of every growing day and even crowd things a little by hatching early and give our chicks a little special care until warm weather when they can look after themselves on range.

Mr. Vaplon of the Colorado agricultural college advocates early hatching also, to get a better price for the cockereis. He says a two-pound cockerel (in May and June) is worth as much or more than he will bring when he weighs two or three times as much. Getting these fellows out of the way means also more room and better care

Don't depend on hens for winter eggs; the pullets are the only solu-tion and they must be hatched early.

Care of Meadow.

Where the gophers have worked up the meadow sod, take a common garden rake, smooth down the dirt mounds, sprinkle seeds over them, brush lightly again with the rake and you will not only avoid running your sickles through the dirt and dulling them, but a good set of grass will spring up and cover the ground. a considerable area is worked up, hitch to the harrow and level down the gopher mounds, seed them and harrow again after seeding.

TO PREPARE AND USE VEGETABLES

AGRICULTURAL DEPARTMENT EXPERTS GIVE RESULTS OF STUDY AND EXPERIMENT.

ON CHOOSING AND CLEANING

Care Must Precede the Process of Cooking-Try Combinations-Some Suggestions on the Proper Way of Serving.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Careful choosing, sorting and cleaning of vegetables must precede any process of cookery, Medium-sized vegeables are always to be preferred to the overlarge. Food plants retarded in normal growth are liable to be abundant moisture and sunlight and making normal growth are crisp, tender and well flavored.

The shorter the time and journey between garden and table the better for green plants. It is wiser not to gather vegetables while wilted or otherwise showing the effects of the midday sun, but rather to pick them after the dew has evaporated in the morning, or in the cool of the late afternoon. Wilted vegetables can never be wholly satisfactory, but may be improved by careful washing and removal of inferior portions, and then soaking in cold water, or with salad plants by wrapping in a damp cloth and keeping in a cool place. The soaking of vegetables in cold water to freshen them probably extracts a little of the valuable salts which they contain. When they are blanched in hot water or parboiled still more mineral matter is lost. If boiled in considerable water of which no use is made, some of the soluble saline matter is extracted and wasted. This waste may be avoided by using the water for soup, etc. Often it is convenient and wise to cook a double portion of a vegetable and serve part of it a second day in a different form. This should not be attempted in warm weather unless a refrigerator is available, as the vege-tables may spoil. Ordinarily a vegetable well salted while cooking and drained and cooled quickly and kept covered in a cold place will keep 24 or 48 hours in cool weather.

Enough potatoes may be cooked to serve as plain boiled or mashed to-day, while the firmer ones can be reserved to broil or grill in slices, fry, or cream the next day. When gas is the fuel this is worth while, for it takes 30 minutes to boil a pot of fresh potatoes and only ten minutes to re-

Most vegetables are lacking in fat, so we add fat in the form of meat, butter, oil or cream when preparing them for the table, or we serve them with fat meats, etc. As far as the need of the human body goes, it makes little difference whether this fat is in cheap or in expensive form, whether the vegetable is cooked with fat or dressed with butter, cream or salad od olive oil and cost about the same, but the oil keeps better, and hence always may be tained by combining cream with vegetables than by using butter and milk costing quite as much Whenever a vegetable dish, other than dried beans, peas, or other legumes, cooked in some form, is to be the principal part of a meal, it is easily possible, as well as reasonable to increase its protein food value by the addition of milk, cheese, or eggs. Skim milk may be heated uncovered until considerable water has evaporated, then little or no thickening is needed for a soup or cream sauce made with it.

Do Not Hesitate to Experiment With

Combinations Though only a few are common on most tables, there are many combinations of vegetables which have proved satisfactory, and no one need hesitate to experiment with others. In general, it is safe to combine a starchy vegetable with a succulent one, or one lacking in flavor with another that will give relish.

For example, cooked celery is agreeable when mixed with creamed

Green corn with potatoes and onion with the addition of milk, etc., makes a chowder which many consider as good as fish

Potatoes boiled and cut in slices or cubes may be used to extend more expensive or more highly flavored vegetables in salads. For instance, out-of-season string beans or out-of-season new celery. Potatoes with onlons or white turnips make a more agreeable soup for some palates than the stronger vege-

Carrots often are more palatable cut in dice and blended with green peas than served alone.

Large white beans may be served in a tomato sauce with onion green or red sweet peppers, or both.

Mint, parsley, sweet peppers, onions, etc., may be added in small portions to many vegetables to give a new flavor when the usual methods of serving have become monotonous.

While overdone vegetables are not desirable, underdone ones are often even less appetizing; therefore it is wise to start cooking green vegetables in season and stop the process as then reheat quickly with season just before serving. Most time tables in cook books do not take into consideration the variations in time required for the same kind of vegetables at different ages. As a general rule the more mature or "older" the vegetable the longer the necessary cooking

A small scrubbing brush is essen tial for washing all vegetables that have grown in the earth, and should be kept in a convenient place, and for this purpose only. A small, sharp knife point is needed for the removal of eyes from potatoes and small blemishes from any vegetables. A wire basket is convenient to hold greens, string beans, or even potatoes, while cooking, as thus they are less likely to adhere to the bottom of the kettle, and often it is easier to remove the basket than to drain off the water A potato masher of strong, continuous wire, the two ends inserted in a wooden handle, is inexpensive and fully as satisfactory as a more costly style.

Suggestions for Serving. Soups—One of the best ways to use left-over vegetables is in soups. A cupful of cooked cauliflower with some of the water in which it was cooked and an equal amount of milk and a slight thickening of butter and flour will provide a cream of cauliflower If the vegetable already has white sauce with it, reduce it with milk to the right consistency, season and strain, and the soup is ready.

A good tasting soup can be made with an onion, the trimmings of a bunch of celery and the outside leaves of a head of lettuce, all cut up fine and cooked in a little water and butter or other suitable fat. When tender add skim or whole milk, thicken with a little flour or some one of the granular breakfast cereals cook quickly, season and serve. If preferred, the milk and cereal may be cooked separately, added to the vege-tables, and all boiled up together.

Skunks Kill Army Worms. The skunk is the best known mammal enemy of army worms. The common army worm, the wheat head army worm and the fall army worm are all very destructive to small grains, corn and grasses, and their invasions entail heavy losses among farmers. The good work of skunks in destroying army worms has frequently been noticed.

In a report of this insect in Penn-sylvania, published in 1896, Dr. B. H. Warren brought forward much testimony of farmers as to the usefulness of skunks in the work of extermina-tion. Also he had examined some skunk stomachs which contained chiefly beetles and army worms. Colored Man's Explanation of How His Wife Acquired Her Some-what Peculiar Name.

Dean Hermann Schneider of the college of engineering in the University of Cincinnati, who is helping the city of New York to organize its system of continuation schools and kindred activities, many years ago when he lived in Maryland engaged a colored man and his wife to help in the upkeep of the house and premises. This part of the preliminary conversation Dean Schneider tells with gusto:

"What is your name?" "Tom Burgee, sah."

"Married?" "Oh, yes, sah." 'What's your wife's name?" "My wife's name is Clara-Peters."

"How can that be, if your name is "Oh, that's her first name; just her first name. All of her name Clara-

"Clara-Peters."

"How did she get that name?" Well, sah, her old father, he was educated; he could read, and he terrible fond of readin' the Bible and Shakespeare, and sich books, and namin' his children a'ter folks he read about. So, when Clara-Peters was born, he just nachally name her Clara-Peters, a'ter that old queen of Egypt!"

In two days, the grand jury, with much secrecy, returned a true bill, and a day later a considerable detachment of infantry started on a dusty hike up Misery. Furtive and inscrutable Hollman eyes along the way watched them from cabin doors, and counted them-They meant also to count them coming back, and they did not expect the totals to tally.

Back of an iron spiked fence, and a dusty sunburned lawn, the barrack-like facades of the old administration building and Kentucky state capitol frowned on the street and railroad track. About it, on two sides of the Kentucky river, sprawled the town of Frankfort; sleepy, more or less disheveled at the center, and stretching to shaded environs of colonial houses set in lawns of rich bluegrass, amid the shade of forest trees. Circling the town in an embrace of quiet beauty rose the Kentucky river hills.

Turning in to the gate of the state house enclosure, a man, who seemed to be an easterner by the cut of his clothes, walked slowly up the brick walk, and passed around the fountain at the front of the capitol. His steps carried him direct to the main entrance of the administration building, and, having paused a moment in the rotunda, he entered the secretary's office of the executive suite, and asked for an interview with the governor.

"Have you an appointment?" the sec-

The visitor shook his head. Scrib bling a brief note on a slip of paper, he inclosed it in an envelope and handed it to his questioner.

'You must pardon my seeming mys-terionsness," he said, "but if you let me send in that note I think the governor will see me."

Once more the secretary studied his man with a slightly puzzled air, then nodded and went through the door that gave admission to the executive's of-

His excellency opened the envelope and his face showed an expression of surprise. He raised his brows questioningly.

Rough-looking sort?" he inquired. "Mountaineer?"

"No, sir. New Yorker would be my guess. Is there anything suspicious?"
"I guess not." The governor laughed. "Rather extraordinary note, but send

He picked up the slip from his desk and, for a moment, stood comp the name and the message with the man who had sent them in. There seemed to be in his mind some irreconcilable contradiction between the two. With a slightly frowning seriousness the executive suggested: "This note says that you are Samso South and that you want to see me with reference to a pardon. Whose pardon is it, Mr. South."

"Quite true," he admitted. "If I announced that I had come on the matter of a pardon, it was largely that I had state some business and that med the briefest way of putting it."

'Then there is something else? Yes. If it were only a plea for clemency I should expect the matter to be chiefly important to myself. In point of fact, I hope to make it equally interesting to you. Whether you give me a pardon in a fashion which vi>lates all precedent, or whether I surmyself and go back to a trial which will be merely a form of assas-sination rests entirely with you, sir.

You will not find me insistent. Then Samson launched into the story of his desires and the details of conditions which outside influences devening the three devening, the three devening three devening the three devening three d sion, acting from the center of deep in di

If the governor was not of that mind he was now ready to surrender himself

"And now, Mr. South," suggested the governor, after a half-hour of absorbed listening, "there is one point you have overlooked. Since in the end the whole thing comes back to the exercise of the pardoning power, it is after all the crux of the situation. You may be able to render such services as those for which you volunteer. Let us for the moment assume that to be true. You have not yet told me a very important thing. Did you or did you not kill Purvy and Hollis?"

"I killed dollis," said Samson, as though he were answering a question as to the time of day, "and I did not kill Purvy.

"Kindly," suggested the governor, give me the full particulars of that You are indicted on two counts, each charging you with murder." The officer took a step toward the center of the room. His face was weary, and his eyes wore the deep disgust and fatigue that come from the necessity of performing a hard duty. "You are under arrest." he added quietly, but his composure broke as he stormed. "Now, by God, I've got to take you back and let them murder you, and you're the man who might have been useful to the state."

CHAPTER XVI.

The governor had been more influenced by watching the two as they talked than by what he had heard. "It seems to me, gentleman," he suggested quietly, "that you are both overlooking my presence." He turned to "Your coming, Sid, unless it was pre-arranged between the two of you (which, since I know you, I know was not the case) has shed more light on this matter than the testimony of a dozen witnesses. After all, I'm still the governor."

The militiaman seemed to have forgotten the existence of his distinguished kinsman, and, at the voice, his eyes came away from the face of the nan he had not wanted to capture, and he shook his head.

"You are merely the head of the executive branch," he said. "You are as helpless here as I am. Neither of us can interfere with the judicial gentry, though we may know that they stink to high heaven with the stench of blood. After a conviction, you can pardon, but a pardon won't help the lead, I don't see that you can do much of anything, Crit."

"I don't know yet what I can do, but can tell you I'm going to do something," said the governor. "You can just begin watching me. In the meantime, I believe I am commander-in-chief of the state troops."

"And I am captain of 'F' company. but all I can do is to obey the orders of a bunch of Borgias."

"As your superior officer," smiled the governor, "I can give you orders. I'm going to give you one now. Mr. South has applied to me for a pardon in advance of trial. Technically, I have the power to grant that request. Morally, I doubt my right. Certainly, I shall not do it without a very thorough sifting of evidence and grave consideration of the necessities of the case as well as the danger of the prec However, I am considering it, and for the present you will parole your prisoner in my custody. Mr. South, you will not leave Frankfort without my permission. You will take every precaution to conceal your actual identity. "Which list," stormed Callomb, "is the honor roll of the assassins."

"At all events"-the governor had derived from Callomb much information as to Samson South which the mountaineer himself had modestly withheld-"South gets his pardon. That is only a step. I wish I could make him satrap over his province, and provide him with troops to rule it. Unfortunately, our form of govern-ment has its drawbacks."

"It might be possible," ventured the attorney general, "to impeach the sheriff, and appoint this or some other suitable man to fill the vacancy until the next election."

"The legislature doesn't meet until next winter," objected Callomb. "There is one chance. The sheriff down there is a sick man. Let us hope he may die.

One day, the Hixon conclave met in the room over Hollman's Mammoth Department store, and with much profanity read a communication from Frankfort, announcing the pardon of Samson South. In that episode, they foresaw the beginning of the end for face. He paused in annoyance at the their dynasty. The outside world was sight of a second figure standing with looking on, and their regime could not back turned at the window. Then survive the spotlight of law-loving > Samson had won back the confidence of his tribe, and enlisted the faith of the state administration. He had been authorized to organize a local militia company, and to drill them, provided he could stand answerable for their conduct. The younger Souths took gleefully to that idea. The mountain boy makes a good soldier, once he has grasped the idea of discipline. For ten weeks, they drilled daily in squads and weekly in platoons Then, the fortuitous came to pass. Sheriff Forbin died, leaving behind him an unexpired term of two years, and Samson was summoned hastily to Frankfort. He returned, bearing his commission as high sheriff, though, when the news reached Hixon, there were few men who envied him his post, and none who cared to bet that he would live to take his oath of office.

> That August court day was a mem orable one in Hixon. Samson South was coming to town to take up his duties. Every one recognized it as the day of final issue, and one that could hardly pass without bloodshed. The Hollmans, standing in their last trench, saw only the blunt question of Hollman-South supremacy. For years, the feud had flared and slept and broken again into eruptions, but neve before had a South sought to throw his outposts of power across the waters of Crippleshin, and into the county seat. That the present South came bearing commission as an officer of the law only made his effrontery the > more unendurable. Samson had not called for outside troops. The drilling and disciplining of his own company had progressed in silence along the waters of Misery. They were a slouching, unmilitary band of uniformed vagabonds, but they were longing to fight, and Callomb had been with them, tirelessly whipping them into rudimentary shape. After all, they were as much partisans as they had been before they were issued state rifles. 'The battle, if it came, would be as factional as the fight of 25 years ago, when the Hollmans held the store and the Souths the courthouse. But back of all that lay one essential difference, and it was this difference that had urged the governor to stretch the forms of law and put such dangerous power into the hands of one man. That difference was the man himself. He was to take drastic steps, but he was to take them under the forms of law, and the state execu tive believed that, having gone through worse to better, he would maintain the improved condition.

> Early that morning, men began to assemble along the streets of Hixon; and to congregate into sullen clumps with set faces that denoted a grim, unsmilling determination. Not only the Hollmans from the town and immediate neighborhood were there, but their shaggier, fiercer brethren from remote creeks and covers, who came only at urgent call, and did not come without intent of windicating their presence. Old Jake Hollman, from "over yon" on the headwaters of Dryhole creek, brought his son and fourteen-year-old grandson, and all of them carried Winchesters. Long before the hour for the courthouse tell to sound the call which would bring matters to'a crisis, women disappeared from the streets, and front shutters and doors closed themselves. At last, the Souths began to ride in by half-dozens, and to himb their horses at the racks. fell into groups well apart factions eyed each othe

Stores opened, but only for a desultory pretense of business. Horsemen led their mounts away from the more public racks, and tethered them to back fences and willow branches in the shelter of the river banks, where tive of peace and stray bullets would not find them.

The dawn that morning had still been gray when Samson South and Captain Callomb had passed the Miller cabin. Callomb had ridden slowly on around the turn of the road, and waited a quarter of a mile away. He was to command the militia that day. if the high sheriff should call upon him. Samson went in and knocked. and instantly to the cabin door came Sally's slender, fluttering figure. She put both arms about him, and her eyes, as she looked into his face, were terrified, but tearless.

"I'm frightened, Samson," she whispered. "God knows I'm going to be praying all this day."

"Sally," he said, softly, "I'm coming back to you-but, if I don't"-he held her very close-"Uncle Spicer has my will. The farm is full of coal, and days are coming when roads will take it out, and every ridge will glow with coke furnaces. That farm will make you rich, if we win today's fight."

"Don't!" she cried, with a sudden gasp. "Don't talk like that." "I must," he said, gently. "I want you to make me a promise, Sally."

"It's made," she declared. "If by any chance I should not come back, I want you to hold Uncle Spicer and old Wile McCager to their pledge. They must not privately avenge me. They must still stand for the law. I want you, and this is most important of all, to leave these mountains-but you must promise that." "I promise," she reluctantly yielded. It was half-past nine o'clock when Samson South and Sidney Callomb rode side by side into Hixon from the east. A dozen of the older Souths, who had not become soldiers, met them there, and, with no word, separated to close about them in a circle of protection. As Callomb's eyes swept the almost deserted streets, so silent that the strident switching of a freight train could be heard down at the edge of town, he shook his head. As he met the sullen glances of the gathering in the courthouse yard, he turned to Sam-

EXCELLENT RATION FOR COW

If Farmers Would Depend More on Silage and Less on Pasture Herds Could Be Doubled.

A good ration for cows giving milk is silage twice a day, corn fodder once a day and all the bean forage they will clean up, with about one pound grain or concentrate to every three pounds milk the cow gives. If the beans were pulled before becoming too ripe and' secured without much rain falling on them, the forage makes good feed. Roots are valuable to increase the flow of milk.

If we would depend more on silage and less on pasture, our dairy herds might easily be doubled and the farm enriched accordingly. Many farmers have been slow to awaken to the fact that dairying brings excellent returns. Many unprofitable crops are still raised where the land might better be growing feed for live stock. Permanent pasture is a waste unless the land cannot be plowed. Every acre should be made to raise feed for stock to the limit of its capacity, and this should be fed right on the farm, returning the fertility to the soil.

PAIL OF GREAT IMPORTANCE

Where Clean Milk Is Produced Small-Top Receptacle Is Necessary to Exclude Bacteria.

The United States department of agriculture has this to say about milking:

"In modern dairies where clean milk is produced the small-top milk pail is a necessity, as such a pail presents only a small opening into which dust and dirt may fall from the air or from the cow's body. It has been found by experience that the use of the small-top pail greatly reduces the number of bacteria in milk from average dairies. Many types of milk pails are for sale, but any tinner can convert an ordinary pail into a small-top pail by the addition of a hood, as shown herewith.

Milkers should be allowed to milk only with dry hands. The practice of wetting the hands with milk is a filthy habit and is liable to cause the cow's teats to chap time. Milking should be done quickly and thoroughly, with no violent jerking of the teats. After each cow is milked the pail of milk should be removed immediately to the milk house.

The milker should remember always that he is handling a human food which is very easily contaminated. Soap, clean water and towels must be readily accessible. The hands should be washed after milking each

COTTONSEED MEAL FOR COWS

No Harmful Effects If Fed In Moderate Amounts Along With Variety of Other Feeds.

(By E. G. WOODWARD, Nebraska Ex-periment Station.)

A Nebraska subscriber writes: "Is the feeding of cottonseed meal harmful to dairy cows if fed right along?" If cottonseed meal is fed in moderate amounts along with a variety of other feeds, there are no harmful effects.

Ordinarily a cow should not be red more than two pounds daily of cottonseed meal. As a usual thing it will not take this amount to properly balance a ration made up of common dairy feeds.

At present prices cottonseed meal is a very cheap source of protein and should undoubtedly be used much more extensively by Nebraska dairymen than it now is.

TREATING HOGS FOR CHOLERA

Summary of Results Obtained From Use of Serum Are Interesting as Well as Valuable.

(By GEORGE H. GLOVER, Colorado Ex-

In a recent report of the chief of the bureau of animal industry, a summary of the results obtained from the use of serum are interesting and valuable as indicating the usefulness of serum in infected herds.

Of 16,152 hogs, where 70 per cent were sick with cholera and the serum was given to all of them, only 24.3 per cent died. Without the serum a loss of 75 per cent might have been expected. The value of the serum as a cure is apparent. In 11,776 hogs that were well when given the serum but kept in herds with sick hogs, there was a loss of 2.9 per cent, while in a total of 13,578 hogs that were healthy, then given the serum, and later exposed to cholera, there was a loss of only a little over one-half of one per

In the record kept by the Colorado Agriculture college, we find that in the San Luis valley, where hogs were not given the serum until the disease appeared, there was a loss of about 22 per cent.

INDIVIDUAL HOUSE FOR HOGS

Among Other Advantages They Are Light, Easily Moved to Fresh Soll -Easy to Construct.

The individual hog house for farrowing, I think, has many advantages over the combination sort, writes C. S. Bratt of Furnas county, Nebraska, in Independent Farmer.

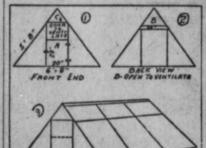

They are light, easily moved from one lot to another, or to fresh soil in the same lot, which is a good preventive of disease.

Sufferer is Restored and Makes Remarkable Gain in Weight on Few Doses,

J. F. Stoneburner of Port Arthur, Texas, suffered from stomach aliments for a long time. He fell off in weight and took treatment without apparent benefit. He tried physician after phy-sician until he almost lost hope.

He at last took Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, then wrote:

"I have taken all of your wonderful stomach remedy and got good results from it. I have gained in weight since starting on your remedy-twenty-one pounds so far. I was under the care of five doctors for about six months before I got your medicine. I am entirely well now."

Mayr's Wonderful Remedy gives permanent results for stemach, liver and intestinal ailments. Eat as much and whatever you like. ### The reasons for Certain-teed Roofing

Every buyer needs the proper assurance, when he pays for the best quality, that a second or third quality will not be delivered. The market is flooded with too many brands. Some manufacturers with poor facilities too often meet competition by cutting quality. Some wholesalers any old quality, put their labels on it, and say it is the be. Our Certain-teed label is backed by the written guara ee of the world's largest manufacturer of asphalt roofin. It gives each buyer the assurance wanted, and our unequaled facilities for manufacturing enable us to sell it at a very casonable price.
