FIRE DESTROYS FARM HOUSE AND CONTENTS

Last Saturday fire destroyed the residence in which H. J. Pettit and family resided on the farm belonging to R. F. Morris of Willington, S. C. Mr. Pettit lost all his household effects and a buggy and wagon which were near the house. It seems the family were away from home at the time of the fire. The loss hits them hard for they had not only their household effects, bed clothes, clothing, etc., but they had many keepsakes they prized highly and which money could not buy, all went up in the flames.

AMARILLO NATIONAL LIFE INS. CO. SOLD

Involving a consideration of somewhat more than $300,000 the Amarillo National Life Insurance Company passed into the hands of the California State Life Insurance company of Sacramento, California.

The California State Life Insurance company will have its headquarters for Texas in Amarillo and will inaugurate a vigorous and constructive campaign for business throughout all this territory.

FIRE LOSS TREMENDOUS IN MANY CITIES

Fires in many cities this week caused tremendous losses. At Paris, Texas, fire destroyed eight to ten million dollars worth of property, 8,000 people homeless. East Nashville, Tenn., had heavy fire loss. Augusta, Ga., had heavy loss. Other fires at numerous places run the total property damage up toward the billion dollar mark.

ELECTION OF TRUSTEES NEXT SATURDAY

Saturday April 1st is Hedley Independent School District trustee election day. The election will be held in the Bond Hall. Four trustees are to be elected to take the place of the retiring ones—J. S. Grundy, J. S. Beach, J. K. Caldwell and C. E. Johnson. Let every one vote for good men who have an interest in the welfare of the school at Hedley.

Naylor Springs Correspondence

We are glad to note that Mrs. Hall is at home again to her friends on their farm north of Hedley.

Oliver Espey had business in Memphis the latter part of the week.

Mrs. M. O. Barnett visited relatives near Clarendon last week.

Miss Grace Tyree spent Saturday and Sunday with home folks.

Durelle Hall was a visitor in Brice community Sunday.

Mrs. John Wildman is reported on the sick list again.

A number of youngsters were served a delicious dinner at the S. E. Lyell home Sunday. The dinner was given in honor of Mrs. Lyell's sister, Mrs. Woodson of St. Louis.

On last Tuesday Mrs. Naylor and daughters were invited into the A. O. Hefner home to partake of the dainties so carefully prepared by Mrs. Hefner in honor of Miss Lois' birthday. While the dinner was something to be enjoyed Miss Lois says the visit was more enjoyable.

Last Sunday afternoon while on their way to Mr. Pettit's Mrs. C. L. Fields had the misfortune to fall out of the wagon which ran across her shoulder and ankle causing her considerable pain. Fortunately no bones were broken and at present she is doing nicely. We trust she will be fully recovered in a few days.

STILL AFTER VILLA--BANDIT STOPS TRAIN

El Paso, March, 23.—General Luis Herrera has revolted from Carranza and declared that he would resist the entry of American troops into Mexico, but that he was opposed to Villa, according to reports from sources which are believed reliable. General Bell telegraphed General Funston that he believed the report of Herrera's revolt was true. Andres Gracia, the Mexican consul here, declared that he had received a dispatch from Herrera denying the revolt. Herrera has been the personal enemy of Villa.

His position is said to have been taken because the de facto government betrayed Mexican interest in allowing American soldiers to enter Mexico, and that the betrayal outweighs the offense of Villa. Gracia Flores, a merchant of Chihuahua, reported that Villa held up a train he was riding on last Wednesday at Montezuma, 85 miles northeast of Namiquipa, where Carranza authorities insist that Villa is located.

J. H. O'NEALL ANNOUNCES FOR COUNTY JUDGE

J. H. O'Neall authorizes the Informer to announce his candidacy for the office of County Judge of Donley County, subject to the action of the Democratic primary in July.

Judge O'Neall is well known to practically all the voters of Donley County, as he was judge of the county some few years ago.

While serving in that capacity he made many friends because of his strict attendance to the duties of the office and the ability he manifested in carrying out the same.

He asks for the support of the voters and promises if elected to look after the duties of the office conscientiously, and serve the public as ably, as he can possibly do so. He will appreciate your support and influence in the coming election.

He is well qualified to fill the office of weigher, and promises if elected to attend strictly to business in a business way, rendering the best service he knows how. He will appreciate your support and influence in the coming election.

woman eats meat
ake a mistake by flush-s always occasionally, says a own authority. Meat forms aid which excites the kidneys,

they become overworked from the strain, get sluggish and fail to filter
the waste and poisons from the blood, then we get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, dizziness, sleeplessness and urinary disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, stop eating meat and get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and in a few days your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate the kidneys, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.
Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and active and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications.—Adv.

Gently cleanse your liver and Get a 10-cent box.

Sick headache, biliousness, dizzinness, coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath—always trace them to torpid liver; delayed, fermenting food in the bowels or sour, gassy stomach.

Poisonous matter clogged in the intestines, instead of being cast out of the system is re-absorbed into the blood. When this poison reaches the delicate brain tissue it causes congestion and that dull, throbbing, sickening headache.

Cascarets immediately cleanse the stomach, remove the sour, undigested food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the bowels.

A Cascaret to-night will surely straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep—a 10-cent box from your druggist means your head clear, stomach sweet and your liver criminal impulse. Our reliance has been environment. Give the boy the right environment and he will not go wrong.

That fitted into our easy optimism. It does not fit into the facts. Some of the worst criminals of history have sprung from favorable worldly circumstances. They were not poor, underfed, oppressed, unfriended or uneducated.

None of these considerations offers much consolation to victims, nor does it relieve society of the need of defending its members from criminal acts.

We are now in a transition period between the old primitive system and some new system which will distinguish in treatment between congenital criminals, criminals produced by vicious social conditions and offenders that are really not criminals at all. Our machinery is patched up, unbalanced, half finished. We condone brutal degenerates on the environment theory. We thrust normal boys who are victims of bad environment or normal adolescence into jail on petty offenses. We create courts and probation systems without the necessary means of carrying out the objects for which we create them. In short, we undo with one hand what we do with the other.

The people of this country, and especially the reformers, need to learn the lesson of patience and even to endure the pain of thorough thinking.
We need to realize that good intentions do not condone stupid measures.

on the part of the applicant for any kind of business position is the prime requisite; and the temperament of the employer and employee must be such that a reasonable degree of co-operation may be brought about without constant clashes if any position is to prove permanent and agreeable.

Speed and accuracy on the part of the operator, however, are, of course, essentials which cannot be overlooked for the wheels of all business

Too much attention and care cannot be given to the matter of choosing the person who is to assist in handling the correspondence of any person or concern if the maximum degree of business efficiency is to be assured. Both operator and employer should be reasonably well satisfied.

Strides in Science of Crystallography

Why does moisture in congealing upon an upright window pane form curved lines while it forms angular lines upon a flat or horizontal surface such as the surface of a pond. It is true that as the colidensifies the delicate, fern-like lines in a window become more solid and heavy, but still they never really become angular.

There seems to be some connection between the lines of plants and trees and those of frost growths on windows. Both are upright growths, so it would seem that vertical forms crystallize when affected by gravitation, while horizontal forms crystallize according to the unhampered laws of crystallization, such as minerals exhibit.

What would result were a surface to be inclined from 0 degree, or 360 degrees, to 22½ degrees, 45 degrees or 67½ degrees, I could not say, but I do know what happens when the surfaces are 0 degree, or 360 degrees, and 90 degrees, and that is a change from curves to angles.

Could this problem be solved I doubt not but that the science of crystallography would make great strides toward solving some of the mysteries of nature.

DAIRY BARN WITH SPLENDID LIGHT

Liberal Supply of Windows Materially Reduces the Running Expenses.

ALSO GOOD FOR SANITATION

In This Plan Both These Points Have Been Taken Into Consideration,
With Excellent Results—Ventil-
ating System Thoroughly
Up to Date.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects.
Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Good light is most essential in a farm building of any kind and especially in a dairy barn. There is always a good deal of work to be done in this type of barn in addition to the regular work that is done in every barn. Any barn has to be cleaned at regular intervals, and the milking has to be done, also, in a dairy barn. Electric or acetylene lights are often provided, but if it is not necessary to use these all the time the cost of running the building will be reduced. The first cost of windows is practically the only cost, as they are very seldom broken. After they are once in place they are a permanent asset to the barn and aid materially in reducing the light bills if enough of them are provided.

Windows also have another advantage. It is practically impossible to secure the best kind of sanitary conditions without plenty of light and sunshine. A dark, dingy place is almost always unsanitary. As the price of a dairyman can get for his milk depends to a large extent on the condition of his cows' quarters, it is a good proposition to make the interior of the barn as clean as possible. The best way to accomplish this is to have a well-lighted building, as men will make more of an effort to keep a bright and cheery barn clean than an old, dark one.

The barn shown here is fitted with windows, so that a bright, cheery interior can be easily obtained.

The foundation walls of concrete are carried above grade for about eight feet up to the joists that support the floor of the haymow in the upper part of the barn. The windows to the lower part of the barn are placed in the upper part of the concrete wall. The floor is also of concrete and the stall floors can be finished in cork brick or wood block if desired.

The horse part of the stable is made under a roof that is extended from the roof of the main barn. The dairy part is in the main building. The two parts can be separated by a solid partition if desired.

The arrangement of the cow stalls is in two rows, which are built on the facing-out principle. The choice of either this or the facing-in plan is entirely a question of personal choice.
There are several advantages of each arrangement. One of the main advantages that is claimed for the arrangement shown here is the fact that most of the work is done behind the cows, and by having one litter alley
the manure is concentrated, which makes the work of cleaning up the barn much easier. There is also the advantage of having all the milking done along the same alley. It is much easier to keep the walls clean in this arrangement, as all the litter is in the one alley and does not spatter

on the walls.

The stalls are set with the floor on a slant so that they can be washed out and will drain into the gutters behind.
The floor of the horse stable is made level and the concrete in the stalls is often covered with planks or made with wood blocks so that the horses will not slip. This is not necessary in the cow part of the stable, as cows do not slip on concrete as readily as horses.

The feeding is taken care of by a silo that is placed at one corner of the barn. A feed carrier can be installed which runs on a track, and many times the feeding is handled by small trucks mounted on wheels that are pushed around through the feed alleys. The feeding can be arranged to suit the ideas of the owner. Several good systems can be developed, and one should be adopted that will not cause a waste of time and labor.

The roof of the barn is of the gambrel type, which is self-supporting.
The trusses make it possible to have plenty of room for all the hay that is to be stored in the mow.

The intakes for the ventilating system are at the top of the concrete wall. The air is carried in and discharged over the heads of the cattle.
The outtakes are behind the animals and lead to the eaves that run along under the roof and out through the ventilators on the roof. The ventilating system of a dairy barn is one of the most important parts, and time spent in deciding on the best arrangement to use will be time well spent.
If the result obtained with the ventilating system gives a plentiful supply of air and does not keep the barn cold
in cold weather, the system is a success.

SERVE A USEFUL PURPOSE

Blessed Are Those Who Furnish Deplorers With Something Which They Can Deplore.

The Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching gravely deplores the bungling reports put forth by educational authorities, citing a county official, who writes: "Our attendance was not as good as we would have liked for it to have been, owing to the fact of a very large cotton crop in the fall and the scarcity of labor a good many children were kept out of school through the month of January to pick cotton, and, too the wet spring we had last year quite a number were cut off from school by the water."

If language is given to conceal thought this man misuses it; his meaning is plain as a pikestaff, remarks the New York World. Yet the misuse has its paradoxical uses. If there were nothing to deplore—and this "goes"
for matters other than educational—what would become of the deplores?
To be without frightful examples that prove his case might well shock any reformer. If there were nothing and no one left to uplift, the born uplifter would be as uneasy as an antislavery martyr in 1867.

When a country educator says that
"our teachers went forth fresh from the grindstone to delve with the pupils" he both states a fact and makes us appreciate the need of delving. If everybody in the country used the purest Addisonian English there would be just as much less use for a Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching. No true advancer could imagine a more frightful calamity.

Find Use for Confederate Money.
Millions of dollars in Confederate currency have been put to a use never dreamed of when printed. A canny individual bought this money up for years and in turn sold it to the Edison
Electric company for a good price.
For certain small incandescent lamps which the Edison people were manufacturing a certain kind of carbon was needed which could best be obtained from paper made out of sea grass. The Confederate money was all made out of sea-grass paper. From

RECIPE FOR GRAY HAIR.

To half pint of water add 1 oz. HAYR, a small box of Barbo Compound, and 4 oz.
of glycerine. Apply to the hair twice a week until it becomes the desired shade. Any drug-darken streaked, faded gray hair, and removes dandruff. It is excellent for falling

Achy Joints Give Warning

A creaky joint often predicts rain. It may also mean that the kidneys are not filtering the poisonous uric acid from the blood. Bad backs, rheumatic pains, sore, aching joints, headaches, dizziness and urinary disorders are all effects of weak kidneys and if nothing is done, there's danger of more serious trouble. Use

April 1st has been fixed as the date for the County Inter-Scholastic Meet. The winners in each event will receive cash prizes and will also represent Donley county in the District meet which will be held in Amarillo.

The City election will be held in the Bond Hall Tuesday, April 4th, and the citizens should consider well whom they will elect, as it is very important to have men in office who will look after the interests of Hedley to the best advantage.

The feed hauling business is about to wind up for the year. There has been more feed stuff and corn bought at this place the past season than has been bought any other season heretofore. We get a report soon on the number of cars of feed shipped out of Hedley which we will publish.

PURE BRED STOCK

When an animal is being sold to the highest bidder in a pure bred sale, it cannot be figured that the buyer is just getting hair, hide, bone and meat; if so, one need only attend the common grade farm sale. When you bid on an animal at a pure bred auction, you bid for the results of work of generation after generation of men who have spent their lifetime in mating, breeding and care of livestock.

It can, of course, only be considered, that the pure bred has a greater value than the grade animal, and those who have used their time and endeavors, rightly receive a profit for their efforts. There is room for more men in this line of work, and the profits are ample to justify entering the business and building up many herds of pure bred hogs and dairy cattle in Texas. We should have better stock of all kinds, and the scrub should go the way the "Texas cattle tick" should go.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 22.—Belated reports of last night's tornado in Indiana increase the death toll to five. The storm swept eastward across the state, leveling scores of buildings. Efforts to estimate the damage are futile.

TORNADO INSURANCE

Remember—Cyclones drop a round—they don't make appointments. Our policies protect against any windstorm that does damage. You can "put out" some fires, but who ever put out a Tornado? You can run for a safe place, but you can't take the house with you. We provide the funds for a fresh start. The cost is small—the protection great. Better be prepared—you will feel easier every time a dark cloud comes up. The windy season will soon be at hand and you will want the protection when it does come. See me at once.

COWS OR COMMERCIAL FERTILIZER

The practice of taking from the soil and making no return has gone to the extreme. That a different method must be followed is recognized not only by many thinking farmers, but by the merchants and bankers whose prosperity depend directly on the prosperity of the farmers.

Many sections of our State find the yield of crops much below what they were ten years ago, and it is time to realize that if we keep our land up to where we can find profitable results from farming, we must build soil fertility. Cairying is the one branch of agriculture recognized as sufficient to bring back and sustain soil fertility, and give the farmer a product that will bring cash at all times of the year; and, as a consequence, create a better all round business condition.

Legume crops may be grown and a commercial fertilizer used in improving the land, but it has been demonstrated that those sections of the country where the farmers follow dairying and the feeding of those crops they produce back to livestock, have the surest and best way to sustain and build up the soil.

What We Eat

The doctors may disagree over the origin of pelegra (they disagree about most things) but the theory of the public health service is reasonable enough. Diseases that once were fatal are now treated absolutely by diet and treated successfully, as all physicians agree. Perhaps, in another generation, the drug store will be a food shop. Instead of paregoric or castor oil the family doctor will prescribe orange juice or lettuce. Every child will know the relative importance of fats, proteids and carbohydrates. After having banished drink and tobacco a new generation will circulate pledges against sugar and pie crust. Both have slain their thousands and tens of thousands, and sugar has killed more Americans than rattlesnakes ever did. GRANDMA USED SAGE TEA TO DARKEN HER GRAY HAIR

She Made Up a Mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to Bring Back Color, Gloss, Thickness.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also ends dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome. Nowadays, by asking at any store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," you will get a large bottle of the famous old recipe for about 50 cents.

Don't stay gray! Try it! No one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy.—Adv.

HOMES FOR BIRDS.

It is every one's duty to look to the protection of our rapidly disappearing birds, and I want every reader of this article to put up at least one nesting box this spring in some place secure from cats and other bird enemies.

Tin cans, flower pots, boxes—I could name a hundred pick-up materials that can be used. The house in Fig. 1 requires a tomato can. Cut a wooden disk to fit snugly in the opened end of the can (Fig. 2), and bore a hole through it for a doorway—seven-eighths inch in diameter for a wren house, or one and one-half inches in diameter for a bluebird house. Fasten the disk in the end of the can with short nails. Then make a canopy out of a piece of tin of the shape shown in Fig. 3, and fasten it over the doorway.

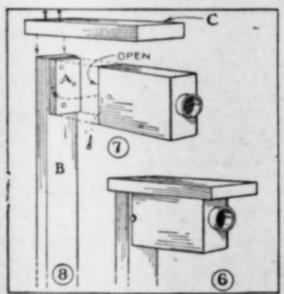

The double apartment bird house in Fig. 4 is a suggestion for utilizing flower-pots. Get two pots of equal size. The bottom holes must be large enough for doorways, and can be enlarged with a file or by chipping away the flower-pot.

Cut a square piece of board a trifle larger than the pots, to fasten the pots to (Fig. 4), then pass a loop of wire around each pot, making the loop large enough so it can be twisted in four places into straps (A, Fig. 5).

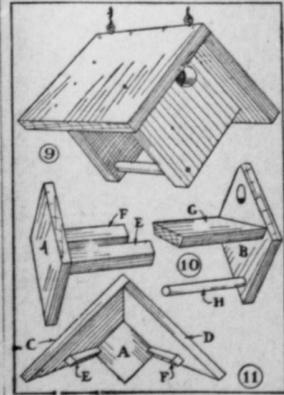

The mouth of a varnish can is a splendid opening for a bird house doorway, as you can readily see by the house shown in Fig. 6. Any painter will give you an empty can. Remove the bottom (Fig. 7), cut a block of wood to fit in this open end (A, Fig. 8), nail this block to the side of a long pole support (B) about one-sixteenth inch below the top, and fit the varnish can over this block. For a roof, nail one end of a short board to the top of post B (C, Fig. 8).

Pierce a hole through each side of the can, and in block A, for a short nail, to hold the varnish can in place (Fig. 8).

The wooden house in Fig. 9 is simpler to construct than the illustration might lead you to suppose. Cut end pieces A and B (Fig. 10) eight inches square, and roof boards C and D 12 inches wide—C 11 inches long and D enough shorter to allow for the lapping of C over the edge of D (Fig. 11). Nail C and D, then nail the two to end A, allowing a projection of 2 inches. Do not nail the roof to end B, because that end is to be removable to provide for cleaning the inside of the house. Cut E and F (Fig. 11) six inches long, and nail them to the under side of the roof boards with their ends even with the corners of end A. Then cut the floor board G with beveled edges to slide between E and F (Fig. 10).

Cut the perch stick H to fit between ends A and B, and fasten it with screws.

A DOLL SWING AND A DOLL HAMMOCK.

For the doll swing (Fig. 1), you need four sticks about 24 inches long for the supports, a piece 10 inches long for the crosspiece, and a pint-size fruit box.

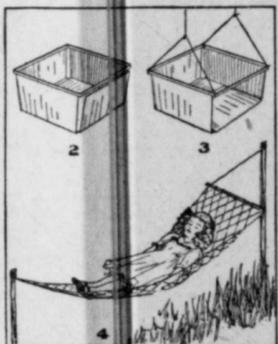

If you can get four straight pieces of tree branches they will do nicely for the supports.

Figures 2 and 3 show how the cherry box is converted into the swing seat.

Slip the top edge of one side of the box from the binding by which the box is held together (Fig. 2), fold the side over to the inside of the box bottom, and glue or sew it to the bottom (Fig. 3).

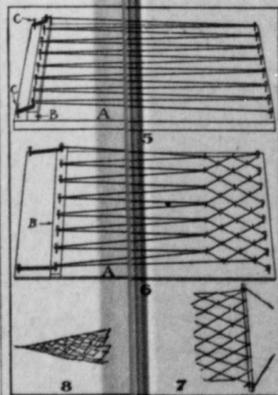

The doll hammock (Fig. 4) is made of string. You will need a board 24 inches long and 12 inches wide on which to form the hammock network

(A, Fig. 5). Drive a row of nails into the board, close to one end, about one inch apart, then take a stick and drive a row of nails into it at the same distances apart (B, Fig. 5). Stick B is held to board A by means of a pair of heavy rubber bands looped over a pair of nails C driven into board A, and over the end nails in strip B.

With board A and strip B thus prepared, take the string, tie one end to one end nail in strip B, and loop back and forth from one row of nails to the other, as shown in Fig. 5.

Cut up 100 or more very short pieces of string. Then, beginning about one inch from the row of nails in board A, catch the strands together, two by two, and tie with the pieces of string. Tie hard, secure knots. With one row of knots tied, make a second row one inch away from the first, picking the pairs of strands that were taken the knots come halfway between those of the first row. Then make a third row one inch from the second row, with the knots in line with those of the first row, a fourth row one inch from the third row in line with the second, and so on until stick B is reached. As the strands are tied they will become shorter, and this shortening will be taken care of by the rubber bands, which will allow stick B to slide along board A, as shown in Fig. 6. With the strands knotted, remove the loops from one row of nails and slip them over a short stick (Fig. 7). Then tie together the opposite loops, as shown in Fig. 8. Suspend the hammock between two stakes, as indicated in Fig. 4.

The DAIRY

FIRST-CLASS DAIRY STABLES

Quarters for Milking Cows Are Separated Entirely From All Other Kinds of Live Stock.

The standard now set for the first-class dairy barns is high. The quarters for the milking cows are separated entirely from all other stock, even from the younger dairy stock. The barn must be narrow, not housing more than two rows of cows. The window surface is to be relatively very large, the walls smooth, floors not absorbent and easily washed. Ventilation by a systematic arrangement of ducts, has to be provided.

The new order of construction is the result of the more general understanding of the power of sanitation and cleanliness in the prevention of disease. Milk is perhaps the most widely used uncooked food. Little wonder, then, that the market milk dealer must produce that milk in a room approaching the kitchen in cleanliness.

The type of structure used by the professional dairyman is now clearly known and in the main, adhered to. The problem is the barn for the man keeping a small number of cows and marketing only the cream or butter. The returns from the latter do not justify costly barns, neither is it now considered necessarily essential to have the most sanitary structure. While this is true now, there is no warranty of its truth a decade or two hence. Possibly the most modern barns will be considered poor makeshifts 15 years hence, in the light of new developments in sanitary science yet to come. Be that as it may, it is advisable for the professional dairyman to build only the best and the smaller dairyman to so build, that, as demands require, he can remodel toward the best structure.

FRESH AIR A MILK PRODUCER

Largest Returns Need Not Be Expected From Animals Where Barns Are Poorly Ventilated.

Ventilation of barns usually is even more deficient than window space and to this lack of proper ventilation veterinarians attribute, in a large measure, the prevalence of tuberculosis. But, aside from safeguarding the health of both the owner's family and his cattle, good ventilation is economy.

Perfect assimilation of food is no more possible in the body of an animal without a sufficient supply of air than is perfect combustion of fuel in a furnace with the draft closed.

In order that milk cows or beef animals may respond to an increased ration of feed, more air must be supplied for its combustion as surely as that a furnace requires more air for a heavy than a light fire.

In other words—the amount of milk or beef produced by the animal and the amount of heat produced in the furnace depend as much on the air supply as on the amount of food and fuel.

If a barn is poorly ventilated it is futile, therefore, to expect the largest returns in beef or milk for the feed consumed.

AVOID CONTAMINATING MILK

Cow Should Not Be Groomed, Bedded or Fed Immediately Before She Is to Be Milked.

The cows should not be groomed, bedded or fed immediately before milking.

So doing fills the stable air with dust and germs which gets into the pail while milking and so contaminates the milk.

The grooming is as good for the cows as good bedding but do it some time during the day when ample time will be left before the next milking to allow the dust to settle.

CALOMEL WHEN BILIOUS? NO! STOP! ACTS LIKE DYNAMITE ON LIVER

I Guarantee "Dodson's Liver Tone" Will Give You the Best Liver and Bowel Cleansing You Ever Had—Doesn't Make You Sick!

Stop using calomel! It makes you sick. Don't lose a day's work. If you feel lazy, sluggish, bilious or constipated, listen to me!

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile, crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you feel "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store or dealer and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it cannot salivate or make you sick.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your bowels of that sour bile and constipated waste which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable. I guarantee that a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will keep your entire family feeling fine for months. Give it to your children. It is harmless; doesn't gripe and they like its pleasant taste.

THE HEART OF NIGHT WIND

A STORY OF THE GREAT NORTH WEST

By VINGIE E. ROE

ILLUSTRATIONS BY RAY WALTERS

"You would have followed me across the world upon your knees, and you served me like a slave. And I—I repaid you with a white man's coin! I left you to break your heart among the dusky people who were kinder than I! . . . But the Winds of God blew upon my conscience and my heart and I returned. Your face and your faithful eyes, waiting, waiting, brought me back from the far cities—only to see you die in the lodge of Kolawmie with my babe on your breast! Or—you say I but dreamed, Kahwana?"

With falling sight the speaker tried to pierce the mystery, gazing at Siletz. "Did I dream of death and retribution—and of Kolawmie, who—bent above the babe to put that sign upon her face? I struck his hand away when it had set but a fraction of the fatal bar—the sign that said you were wild, that forbade you to the shallow cities, that made you a white man's toy! You—you—Kahwana—ah, I have forgot. What is it I would remember?"

The eagerness left the Preacher's eyes, they became suddenly calm and mild.

With a cry that cut high above the steady sounds of the wind and the fires Siletz sprang up, a hand flung to her lips, where the sign of the Siletz stood out—broken in its inception!

"My father!" she cried pitifully, "oh, my father!"

Sandry was breathing heavily, a mist in his eyes and a sadness upon his heart. His victory over Hampden had lost its savor.

But the past with its pitiful shadows had drifted away from the Preacher forever and the look of gentle tenderness had returned.

"My daughter," he said softly, "why do you weep? Ah—the night closes down and it is dark. I have lost my way. What is the path?"

His fingers groped blindly for the flute.

"What is the way out of the labyrinth of youth—and sin—and primroses? Ah, I have forgot!"

With a sudden inspiration Sandry stopped and picked up the instrument. He had played a bit at college. Softly, silverly, the joyous notes began, "Jesus, Lover of My Soul," to go on to that ancient plea of trusting faith, "Other refuge have I none, Hang my helpless soul on thee, a strange voice of glory amid the death and danger, the sin and stress of the moment.

A holy peace spread on the white features.

"Why, certainly!" whispered the traveler of the hills, "how could I forget! That is the Way out."

And then, "Hush! The murmur of many wings. Ah, it is God's hand! I go—de profundis! Gloria in excelsis!"

With that last whispered word the wandering player of hymns, the preacher to the irresponsibles and the lover of humanity fumbled stiffly at his habit's skirt. Sandry knelt, found a deep pocket, felt therein and brought out a small Bible of a long-past day. Its edges were thin and frayed and greatly worn. Its stiff back, with the age-black, raised lettering, had long since lost its corners. He knew it instantly for the counterpart of that one on Siletz' stand in the little south room. It had many openings of its own, and it fell apart, first at the palms and then at a passage whose beginning caught his eye as he placed it in the loving hands that made to grasp its familiar bulk—and failed. The stately words whose solemn forecast had struck him once when he sought for some clue to the Preacher's identity now seemed to ring in his ears, a stupendous requiem for the nameless, high-souled, drifter-from-the-ways-of-men who had spent his blameless life in fanciful atonement for a shadowy wrong.

Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart. Who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully.

The Preacher was of that past which he had so long forgotten and which Destiny had decreed should flash back to him for one revealing moment.

CHAPTER XXX.

"The Night Wind Is Not Afraid to Die." Sandry laid the Bible under the lifeless hand, looked about desperately for something to cover the glorified face between the white curls, and finding nothing but the tall ferns gathered an armful which he spread over the body.

Then he faced Hampden in deadly quiet.

"I had meant prison," he said, "now I mean the electric chair."

The other laughed.

"Mean an' be damned!" he said insolently, "you'll never send me there."

His burning eyes were covering the clump of ferns that held his gun, but Sandry went over and picked it up. He stood a moment considering.

A hot wind was whipping up the dips on every side and Black Bolt was stepping uneasily, pointing anxious ears this way and that. Coosnah had crawled to where Siletz knelt, weeping, with her hands over her face.

He crouched low to the ground and laid his heavy muzzle against her boot, whining dolorously.

Suddenly, in the momentary silence, Poppy Ordway spoke. Her face was flushed like an April dawn. Chance and the courage of the last throw lent it the last touch of ravishing charm.

"Kismet!" she said, "I am the only one who wins in this game! Hampden, you're right. I've brought you with your own coin. And let me tell you Hampden, that you were disgustingly easy."

The timberman winced at the brutal words.

His florid face darkened with rage. "Ah, yes! So you won his love with your pretty detective work! You'll marry him an' settle down."

Thus was the crucial moment presented to Poppy Ordway all suddenly, and she recognized it instantly. It sent a chill to her daring heart, then fired it with that love of chance, that ability to cast great stakes on a single throw, which in a better nature would have made her great.

She felt with a flash of her genius the drama of the situation, the tense readiness of the moment for wild, fantastic things, and accepted it at once.

"Yes!" she cried, "yes! I offer Sandry you—and myself!"

With a beautiful gesture she stepped toward Sandry and held out both hands, her golden head up, her slumberous blue eyes sensuous and black with excitement, her whole exquisite body a lure with the mighty abandon of her passion and her reckless gift.

"Walter," she said tremulously, "I have said there is no law for a genius I say it again. I can save your future—and I give you myself along with it, because I love you! Oh, you can never know how I love you!"

Her golden voice rose with the force of the emotion that shook her, broke and failed, and she stood panting.

"Will you not take my hands, Walter?" she almost wailed, "I have done it all for love of you!"

Sandry, his eyes upon her face, as if in fascination, did not move. It was as if he could not, though every fiber in his jaded body answered to her call.

"For love!" breathed Poppy Ordway, "for great love!"

Across her words there cut a shrill cry.

"She lies!"

Siletz had sprung to her feet, both hands feeling wildly in her empty blouse.

Miss Ordway swung heavily toward her.

"Hush!" she said warningly.

She slipped a hand inside her own gown and showed a corner of the soiled packet of proofs that Siletz had Spread Ferns Over the Body.

guarded for so many days, the packet that she knew instinctively meant harm to Sandry, that must never go east!

It was then that Sandry was to behold the iron in this creature of softness, of faithfulness and of service. With a cry that chilled his blood in its savage wildness, the girl leaped across the silent form in the shabby habit, tore Sandry's gun from his hand and fired twice before he could seize her and wrest the weapon from her. Both shots went wild.

"What would you do?" he cried against.

Siletz fought for the gun like a wild thing. Then, as he held it high above her reach, she fell on her knees, clasping his limbs, her face upturned and transfigured with the lust for blood.

"Kill them!" she panted desperately, "kill them both! Blood for Preacher and she would ruin you! Shoot them, Sandry, shoot them—or give me the gun!"

Shuddering, Sandry covered her savage eyes with his hand. Their reversion sickened him. But she shook him loose, crying for death.

"Kill them both, for they will ruin you if they go free! She's got the packet. Kill her and get the packet!"

"What's this?" he cried hoarsely.

"Things she has written about you—a letter to a man by the name of Musseldorn!"

Slowly Sandry's face went white beneath his grime as he raised his eyes and looked at Poppy Ordway. She returned his gaze.

Then—"True," she said, "that's why I went east. I cannot lose you, Walter. There was danger from that wild creature there, though you did not know it, and I was determined to make sure. Fair means or foul—I must win. And there's no law for a genius. I know and you know that you are—"

"Guilty!" he said, throwing up his head.

Then Sandry dropped his eyes to Siletz and spoke as if he obeyed some compelling power, some urge to justify himself before her.

"I answer to the Right Law. I obeyed the ancient Right Law, little Siletz, and I have no regrets."

"I know!" cried Siletz, "I know!" the smoke was so dense that the actors in this drama could scarcely see each other's faces, but they took no note of it. The climbing rack had shut them apart in a sound-made silence and they did not know it. Only Hampden, edging sideways, was alive to the possibilities of the moment. He saw the gun hanging in Sandry's hand, forgotten. He saw Siletz devouring his face with her blazing eyes of passion. He saw his moment and took it.

With one great bound he flung himself high in the air, leaped the space between and came down with his great weight upon the shoulders of the other man, clutching for back and throat, drawing the one to him in a grip of iron, pushing the other away.

Sandry went down like a reed, and as his knees buckled under him there was an ominous snap. The bone of his right leg, newly healed and fragile, gave way under the strain.

As the two men fell, both guns, the one in Sandry's hand and the one in his trousers band, tumbled loosely apart. Siletz, clinging still to Sandry's knees, was borne down with them. As they rolled over she tore herself from under them and with two sweeps of her outspread arms gathered the guns. Then she sprang up, drawing back a pace, her eyes like fire, and deliberately sought for a chance to kill Hampden.

"Sandry," she cried, "lie flat! Lie flat!"

From under Hampden's arm that was choking the breath from his lungs the owner saw that slim figure of doom and strove to cry out. At last he got his voice for a moment.

"Siletz!" he rasped, "don't shoot. I command you, don't kill!" But the bark of the gun drowned his words. She was firing around them.

With the first shot Hampden, remembering the guns that he had failed to get, felt his flesh rise on his body and he loosened his hold, shook off Sandry and got to his feet, panting, fighting mad, his eyes red and awful.

With the courage of the raging bull he made straight for Siletz, who fired point blank at him. He took the ball in his shoulder and spun half round. The girl pulled the trigger again, got an empty snap, threw the weapon away and raised the other.

"Siletz!" shrieked Sandry from the ground, "for my sake stop!"

It was a command, a cry of ownership, and it went straight to that part of her nature which had obeyed for generations. She hesitated, holding the man across the barrel.

As for Hampden, he stood, wavering drunkenly, chucking in his throat, a thing of horror in his malevolence.

"Well," he rasped dryly, "I guess it's just as well. I'll leave you to yer pleasant dreams. I sail for Panama—Hawaii—the Yukon. I'm done."

He turned on his heel, to stride away into the pall of smoke toward the north. In one moment he came rushing back to run down to the west.

For the first time the three people left together remembered the fires, saw the thickened smoke, heard the roar that had made them scream their tragic words, unconsciously, for the last half hour.

It was all around them, that pouring mass of smoke, and it was black, as if the fires were near. Hampden's huge figure tore past them toward the narrow point of the ridge, then came lurching back, a long red streamer staining his bedraggled shirt.

"My God!" he shouted hoarsely, "We're hemmed in! It's on every side! We'll burn like rats!"

He flung a tragic arm to the dusky heavens. Poppy Ordway found her voice. She darted forward and pounced upon him, again with that subtle suggestion of the feline race, gripping his arm with fingers of steel.

"What do you mean?" she cried.

"I mean that we've been playin' our own little game out to its conclusion like fools, while a bigger one has been playin' itself out. We're in a cup—waitin'."

There was something sinister about that last word.

"When this damned wind sucks up a little harder it'll draw th' fires together an' we'll roast alive."

He ceased, panting, moistening his lips. Then presently a hideous grin distorted his features.

"Who wins now?" he said. "Brains—brains! An' ex'cutive ability—an' cunning! I guess I win at last!"

From somewhere up behind the lowering canopy a rumbling thunder drowned his words, as if all the rocks of the tortured hills were split asunder in the heat. When it had died away he turned to Sandry where he sat, pale under his grime, a prey to a thousand feelings.

"I've hated you like poison ever since I first clapped eyes on your Johnny Eastern face. You thought you had me beat—and so did she," he jerked his head at Poppy, "but I'm too great a force for both of you. She's the greatest woman in all th' world an' I'm glad I seen her like—that I loved her."

There was infinite pathos in his heavy voice for the moment.

"But th' play's over. Th' curtain'll drop in thirty minutes—forty or fifty at most—an' I'm the winner at last! You'll never marry her! But how I had you on th' hip—eastern lawyers an' all!"

"An' old Frazer—clumsy fool! Found your East Belt deed unrecorded, didn't you? Laid it to him. Why didn't you lay it to Hampden, who had th' brains an' the power of the whole country? It was recorded all right, but I owned th' recorder same as I owned th' commissioner. Fools, fools, all of you! An' I win at last!"

It was again the East and the West that Sandry saw with aching eyes in the two women who took Hampden's

"Who Wins Now?" He Said. "Brains—Brains!"

news of their fate. Miss Ordway raised palsied hands and let them drop while she stared with eyes of frightful horror. Siletz moved never a muscle.

"I told you to go back!" she cried, "that big things were about to happen, and you would not. Now I shall pay you for all things—for what you would do to Sandry. Also I pay him—for that." She pointed to the still form under the ferns.

"There is a way out—the secret trail which only I know and which we take."

She sprang and caught Black Bolt's bridle, dragging him with one motion to Sandry's side. She bent to him with arms of loving service, exerting all her strength.

"Climb!" she commanded, "climb quick! We can make it yet!"

But Sandry looked into her blazing dark face that was like the peaks in storm, so wild was it, so thrilling, so beyond comprehension, and shook his head.

"What would you do?" he asked.

"Do? Go down the trail across the Hog Back. There is room for a horse, if he is sure-footed, and Black Bolt will go where I put him. Come! He's jaded a bit but he'll carry us both."

"And—them?"

She flamed from brow to throat with unholy joy.

"Leave them!" she cried savagely, "leave them to burn with their proofs and their schemes and their wickedness! It is the right law!"

"No," he said, "it cannot be. If there is a way you must go—you are a woman—and—you must take her with you."

"What?" cried Siletz in anguish.

"That is the way of the outside world, Little Siletz—the way of honor."

He saw the fires leap and flicker in her eyes, felt the tension of her hands upon his arms. Here was a force as wild and erratic as the great fires in the forest, and he knew not how to handle it. Then came the words of the Preacher like a way out of his difficulty.

"The three bars—of Bonage, of Faithfulness and of Service."

"You are my woman," said the young man sternly, "is it not so?"

"Yes," answered the girl simply, "I am your woman."

"Then I command you to go—and take her with you."

The girl dropped his shoulders and arose.

"I will obey," she said.

A change was working in her. The singing in her ears was growing fainter. She was coming into the open country where Sandry lived his life, even as he had gone for a moment into the fastnesses where hers was laid.

"Come," she said to the staring woman, "there is a way out. You need not die."

As the words forced themselves into the swaying brain of the other they stripped her of every rag of civilization. With a shriek she threw herself forward, caught at the saddle, clawed at its trappings like one demented.

But Siletz flung her back.

"A gift for a gift," she cried, "I give you your wicked life. Give me the packet."

The woman tore the papers from her breast, thrusting them in frenzy at the girl and again tried uselessly to mount Black Bolt. Hampden came forward, lifted her gently in his strong arms and set her upon the horse. She leaned down and snatched at the reins, but Siletz held them away.

"Quick!" screamed Poppy Ordway, "do you want me to burn, you squaw?"

In silence the girl snapped her fingers at Coosnah and the mammoth mongrel crept to her feet. She tied the end of the long reins securely to his collar. Then she turned to Hampden.

"Go," she said, "get up. He will carry you both and you must hurry. Coosnah knows the secret trail. Urge the horse and he will take it. Don't look down; and hold her, or she will surely go over. Go now."

Sandry, raised on his one knee, beheld this thing aghast.

"Siletz!" he cried, "you disobey!" She shook her black head.

"I send her out. I stay. It is my great privilege."

She laid slim fingers against the broken sign beneath her lips.

"A woman serves and is faithful—if she loves," she said softly, "and I am your woman."

For a precious moment Hampden stood in indecision. But the lure of the woman, the glimmer of distant shores, mayhap with her—who knew?—was too strong. He turned from the two and leaped up behind the saddle, striking a heel into the flank of the mettled black who bounded forward, dragging the dog.

But Coosnah hung back upon the rein, turning anguish, adoring eyes to his one idol. The girl stooped and caught his long ears, lifting his wrinkled face.

"Go home!" she cried, commanding. "Coosnah! Go home!"

"As you love me, go!" she finished in jargon, and the huge, shambling, faithful creature turned from her into the smoke to disappear toward that secret trail which only they knew and which led afar over the rearing spine of the Hog Back. He strained at his tether to obey and Black Bolt broke into a stumbling, hurrying gait, overburdened, half-blind with smoke.

And the girl turned to the despairing man upon the ground.

"The Night Wind is not afraid to die," she said gently, "and she is Sandry's woman."

"Oh, my God!" groaned the man, "what have you done!"

FEW FOUND TO BE PERFECT

According to Tests Made the Ideal Husband Seems to Be a Somewhat Rare Animal.

In a recent husband show each competitor was required to do certain things and answer certain questions, says Pearson's Weekly.

The ideal husband answered all the questions and did all his tasks without fail.

Are you the husband every wife should have? If so:

Can you give the day of the week you were married on and its full date? Do you know when your mother-in-law's birthday is?

When you left for the office this morning what kind of dress was your wife wearing?

Can you say offhand what the market prices of eggs, butter, cheese, meat and bread are?

Do you know the cheapest shopping places in your neighborhood?

One of the tests the wives stood behind a curtain and placed one hand above it. Each husband was required to pick out his wife's hand. A good many failed!

Do you make a point of always praising your wife when she has cooked anything more daintily than usual?

Do you tell her she's the best wife in the world?

Have you ever acknowledged to her that you are wrong and she is right in any argument?

If you can answer these questions satisfactorily then you can put yourself down as the perfect husband—according to this interesting and instructive test, at any rate.

Clarence Wolfe Overton, whose department store work has more than vindicated scientific management in Chicago, said at the Chicago Athletic Club:

"My department store's triumphs with 'overhead' have brought in a lot of office and clerk investigations. Some have turned out funny:

"In an office this morning I said severely to a stenographer:

"Is it true that the minute the clock strikes six you drop your machine and hike, even though you're in the middle of a letter?"

"The stenographer took a fresh chew of gum.

"Of course it isn't true," she said.

"Why, I'd never even dream of beginning a letter when it was as near as all that."

ECONOMIC LEAGUE FAVORS FREEDOM OF SEAS.

By J. S. Cullinan,
Chairman Texas Economic League

It is the mission of the Texas Economic League to discuss all public questions of economic interest, and there is no subject of more importance at the moment than preparedness.

The League is not concerned in the theoretical phases of the discussion, and with all due respect to those who believe that the pen is mightier than the sword, I want to suggest that our government has had some of the mightiest pens going that civilization ever produced, during this war, and while we have been writing, the swords of Europe have been running our citizens and our commerce off the seas. International law in the end is not enforced by nations which have the most facile pens, but by the country that has the biggest guns, for unfortunately the cannon is the voice of nations.

League Stands for Liberty.

Likewise, there may be interesting political and military phases of the subject, but the League is only concerned in the patriotic and business side of the discussion. The League stands for liberty and freedom of the people, and the products of their toil at home and abroad, and is opposed to tyranny on land or sea by friend or foe; favors a governmental policy, both domestic and foreign, that enlarges life, liberty and freedom of an American citizen, and opposes any conduct or concession on the part of government that denies or limits those rights. Any citizen who subscribes to these principles must, to be consistent, favor preparedness, for this war has certainly demonstrated the disadvantages of an inadequate Navy and the penalty of military weakness. The only difference of opinion that can arise among us is in the degree of preparedness, and on this subject I will express my personal views.

In my estimation preparedness is a good business investment. During the first year of the present war the Southern cotton farmer, according to the estimates of the Farmers' Union, lost nearly $200,000,000 on cotton, and this is only one item of destruction in value that this country has suffered as a direct result of the war. This amount would build a Navy superior to any other one, and had this money been invested in battle-ships, not only would have classified cotton been produced. It will be recalled that the United States placed cotton on the embargo during the Russia-Japan war, and that England has done in the present war, but the British government has not been able to recede from this policy, as they could not get from England the cotton to Japan. England lost the war.

A Good Business Investment.

There has been a good business economic during the past forty years we have spent in pensions over $4,500,000,000, and during the past fiscal year we paid out $165,000,000 in pensions alone. The annual expenditure for pensions during the past forty years is nearly equal to the total annual average appropriation for our Army, Navy, and Rivers and Harbors during this period. When we consider that one-half of the soldiers who fought in the civil war are not eligible to the pension rolls, and had we been fighting a foreign foe, our appropriations would probably have been double this amount, we get some idea of the enormous expense of war. Economists estimate the productive value, (that is, the surplus above what he consumes, again meaning the wealth he adds to the nation), of a normal male American citizen during the term of an average life at $4,000 to $6,000, the average being $5,000. Assuming this figure to be correct, our pension rolls for the fiscal year 1914 absorbed the value of approximately 34,000 lives, or, in the main, are the heads of families. For the forty-year term mentioned above approximately 1,000,000 people gave their lives to bear the burdens of the Civil War since peace was established, and for almost the next half century we will be paying pensions on account of this war. The total casualties in the Civil War are reported at nearly 750,000, and the cost of the war approximately nine billion dollars, which held the world's war record on loss of men and money up to the present conflict. The war of 1812 was fought over a hundred years ago, but we are still paying out pensions on account of that war. In my estimation the most practical method of avoiding an appalling outlay for pensions in the future is to prevent war, and I know of no better way of insuring peace than an impregnable defense.

The President's policy of Preparedness will, I am sure, meet with the hearty approval of a majority of our thoughtful citizens, and in a future article I will discuss preparedness plans, and the methods of raising revenue from a business angle, as I see them.

By FRANCIS LYNDE

Mr. Lynde has outdone himself in this story of "Mirapolis," the "sudden" western city that grew up in the shadow of a big irrigation dam under construction, and, for a time, threatened to stop the dam's completion.

For the men there is the story of the big business grafter and the government engineer.

For the women there is the story of the lovely and loving little woman who wouldn't let her man be any smaller than the man she knew and loved in him.

And for everybody there is a most charming picture of western life. : : :

To Drive Out Malaria
And Build Up The System
Take the Old Standard GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC. You know what you are taking, as the formula is printed on every label, showing it is Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form. The Quinine drives out malaria. The Iron builds up the system. 50 cents.

Overtraining Children.
Josephine Dodge Daskam Bacon, a mother as well as a well-known writer, sounds an alarm that perhaps we are inclined to overdo child training in these strenuous times.

Not misreading her words, she declares that there is appearing a lot of "pathetic rot" with regard to child culture, and that the little people are being fussed with and fussed over entirely too much. She protests against the belief held by so many that a child's mind is an empty space to be filled, remarking that each child has its individuality, and a mind that is being filled in a perfectly natural way from birth. She inclines to the theory that children should not be hedged about by so many "do's" and "don'ts," and should be permitted to go somewhere and yell.

While there may be a grain of truth in what Mrs. Bacon says, for the natural tendencies of a child should not be altogether repressed for fear of checking initiative, nevertheless she will find it difficult to convince the public that the able men and women of wide experience engaged in broad-gauged child welfare work do not know what they are doing.

A Sorry Lawyer.
Some time ago a man was haled into court on a larceny charge, and, not having counsel at the trial, the judge assigned a young lawyer who happened to be in the courtroom to represent him.

"Judge," the prisoner said when the jury had returned a verdict of guilty, "can I say something?"
"You may," the judge answered, "if you express yourself briefly."
"It's about my lawyer, judge," the prisoner answered. "I would be very sorry if he was ever assigned by your honor to defend an innocent man."

Surely Dry Enough.
"Gitme a dime's wuth o' dried beef an' some crackers," said Uncle Josh to the young lady in charge of the ribbon counter.

"You have evidently made a mistake in the place," she smilingly replied. "This is a dry goods store."
"Waal, now, I reckon I know'd that, b'gosh," said the old man; "an' ef dried beef an' crackers hain't dry goods, then I'd like to know what in tarnation you'd call 'em?"

In Upper Circles.
"Was Mrs. Frittersby satisfied with the alimony awarded her?"
"No, indeed."
"Wasn't it large enough?"
"She declares it wouldn't be sufficient to maintain her poodle in the style to which it is accustomed."

They Stand Up—

Unlike common corn flakes, the New Post Toasties don't mush down when milk or cream is added.

And they have a charming new flavour—delicious different, the true essence of the corn—not found in corn flakes heretofore.

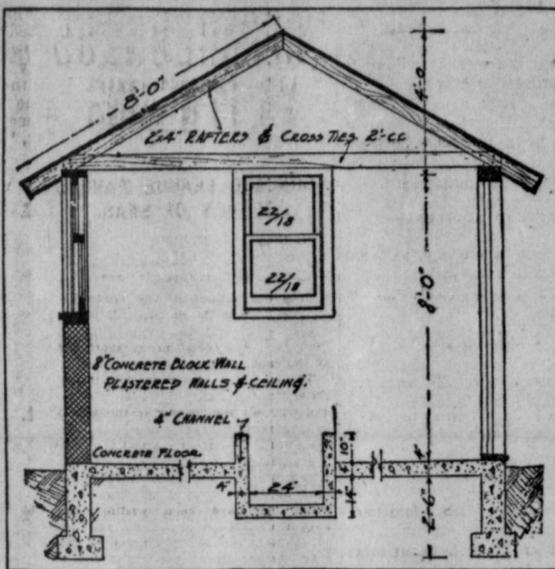

The intense heat of the new process of manufacture raises tiny bubbles on each delicious brown flake and these little puffs are the identifying feature.

These new flakes are firmer, crisper, and don't crumble in the package—in comparison, ordinary corn flakes are as "chaff."

KEEP MILK HOUSE SCRUPULOUSLY CLEAN

Cross Section of Concrete Milk House.

The first and foremost feature of the construction of the milk house on the farm is that it must be clean. It must be scrupulously clean at all times. Wood construction that invites rot and decay is out of order. Concrete properly made is most ideal for this purpose and in the small farm milk house shown here it has been used to a good advantage. It is a 12 by 16 foot house with 8-foot walls. The floor is made of concrete mixed with one sack of cement, three cubic

VENTILATION FOR HENHOUSE

Fresh Air is Best Secured by Lowering a Window, or Taking Out Sash and Inserting Muslin.

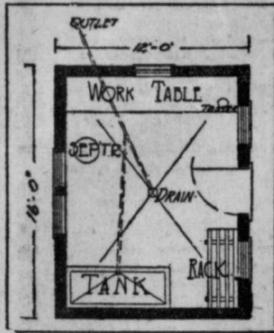

Where the poultry house is supplied with windows, ventilation is best secured by slipping down one of the windows at the top or taking out a lower sash and inserting a frame on which muslin of a good grade has been well tacked.

Where there is an open-front scratching shed the roosting room back is best if made as small as possible to accommodate the fowls, and this should be inclosed against too much cold air.

Curtains hung constantly about chickens at night in the winter usually bring on influenza as a result. Small flocks kept together produce better than large ones. Ten or a dozen fowls will require a house that at the least will require 80 square feet of floor space, which would mean an 8 by 10 house. Twenty-five fowls can easily live in a house 10 by 15 feet.

If runs are attached to a house 100 square feet of space is usually counted for each fowl; that means ten feet of space each way for one fowl. This insures healthier, harder birds, and there would be no crowding.

Poles laid above the roosting place, and straw piled on these, saves cold from overhead at night. The straw covering should not extend far beyond the roosts, as a free space outside above insures more perfect ventilation.

Floor Plan of Milk House.

feet of sand and four of well-graded gravel, says Iowa Homestead. The walls are made of the common concrete blocks with the inside walls coated with a hard wall plaster. The cooling tank for the milk cans is built part way into the floor, as is shown in the cross-sectional drawing. There are floor drains and also a drain for the tank. There is a work table at the outer end of the room and a can rack by the front window. It is a house that is always easy to keep clean and sanitary and up to date. There are five good-sized windows in the walls that admit plenty of sunlight. It is a house that is easy to build and not past the average farmer's ability. The frame roof is made of two by fours covered with shiplap sheathing and cedar shingles. The drawing shows how to build it in the proper fashion.

ETERNAL ENEMIES OF WEEDS

Sheep Clear Up Waste Vegetation and Turn It Into Mutton—Also Destroy Many Insects.

Sheep are the sworn enemies of weeds. They clear up waste vegetation and turn it into mutton.

By eating down and trampling the weeds on the fields and along the fences, they destroy many insects which harbor in the weeds.

If the sheep merely pay for the extra grain given them, it is profitable to keep them as scavengers and insecticides.

CAREFUL WATCH OF HEIFERS

Rudimentary Tests Can Be Removed With Advantage, Both for Milking and Show Purposes.

Careful watch should be kept for the appearance of extra rudimentary tests on young heifers.

In most instances they can safely be removed with advantage to the animals from both milking and showyard viewpoints.

The wounds caused by the removal of rudimentaries should always be carefully cauterized.

Sheep Must Have Water.

Some people actually believe that sheep can live without water. No such thing. It is true that sheep in certain seasons can live for days without being given water, but it is because they get the dew on the grass. Sheep should always be turned out to pasture early in the morning for this reason, but besides, they should always have plenty of clean water. They will not thrive without it.

HAD PELLAGRA; IS NOW WELL

Ringgold, La.—Mrs. S. A. Cotter, of this place, writes: "Will say that I am perfectly well and the happiest soul on earth. Wish every pellagra sufferer would know of your great remedy. Oh, I know I am well of that horrible disease, and my heart is full of rejoicing. I feel that I have come out of a dense cloud into the blessed sunshine. God be praised! He has spared my life for some good, and I feel that I have just begun to live."

There is no longer any doubt that pellagra can be cured. Don't delay until it is too late. It is your duty to consult the resourceful Baughn.

No Use.

Last summer, says a British weekly, a number of masons left Scotland to settle in America. Recently one of them wrote to his wife and instructed her to sell most of their household property and to take passage out to him.

The good wife had a neighbor in to help in the packing. In the midst of the business they fell upon Sandy's watch. The neighbor examined it closely, and then said:

"It's a grand watch, Janet. Ye'll be takin' it wi' ye?"

"No! no!" was the reply. "It wad be o' nae use out there, for Sandy tells me in his letter that there is some 'oors o' difference between the time here and in California, so I needna be takin' lumber."—Youth's Companion.

Certain colors correspond to various human emotions, and are known, therefore, as emotional colors. Blue represents spiritual emotions and signifies true religion in its lighter shades; yellow belongs to the feelings that go with the highest intellectual development, and a brilliant intellect has its color counterpart in a vivid golden hue; orange and brown are always associated with misery and greedy instincts.

Red is the color par excellence of passion; when deep or dull it is symbolical of sensuality and animal passions. Dark crimson represents hatred, and the higher forms of love glow with pure rose color.

Green indicates deceit, gray betokens gloom and black is the emotional color of revenge and malice.
