PIONEER MEMPHIS CITIZEN IS DEAD

With a feeling of deep regret the Informer chronicles the demise of A. G. Moores, pioneer railroad man and long time prominent Memphis citizen, who fell a victim to erysipelas, the end coming last Friday at his home in Memphis.

Mr. Moores was fifty five years of age, had been railroading for nearly forty years, with the Denver Road thirty years, and a citizen of Memphis twenty years. He was the oldest man on the Denver, in point of service, as well as one of the most popular. At the time of his death he held the position of Freight Claim Adjuster. He also had other business interests, and was an active and influential member of the Knights Templar, Shriners and the Baptist church. Both in business and social circles he was highly regarded, profoundly respected, a man the memory of whom will be of inestimable worth to his loved ones and associates.

Funeral services were held in Memphis, conducted by Rev. D. M. Gardner, and the largest procession ever formed in that city followed the remains to their last earthly resting place—thus certifying their love for the man who had been summoned to the Home beyond the river, and their loving sympathy for the heart-

CORPORAL L. L. LANE WRITES FROM FRANCE

Mr. and Mrs. J. Walker Lane received a letter first of the week from their son, Lloyd, who is with the American Expeditionary forces in France. The letter was written Feb. 17, and he had just received the Christmas package his mother sent to him. Had not then gotten the tobacco sent him from Hedley, but expected it to show up soon.

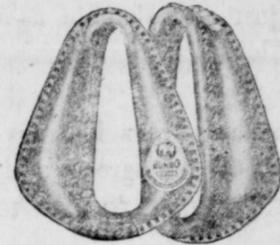

Lloyd says he is in the best of health, the boys are all in good spirits and training hard every day in order to attain the efficiency needed to "put Fritz back in his hole. They're making fine progress, are entirely optimistic concerning the outcome, and feel that the training they are going through will fit them for better citizenship after the war. They have no time to get blue or despondent, though they sometimes are a little peeved at having to drill in ankle deep mud. There has been very little sickness in his company.

Lloyd says people (except as to language) and life in general is pretty much the same there and here. The chief diversions are furnished by the Y. M. C. A.—reading, writing, music, etc. His sleeping quarters are very pleasant despite the fact that he and eight others share one room.

In short, the boys are taking things as they come, as brave

DAIRY FACTS

JERSEY IS HEAVY PRODUCER

Milk Scales and Butterfat Test Determine Whether Cow Is Producing Profitably or Not.

The milk scales and the butterfat test tell the story of whether a cow is producing or not. Jerseys have been making and breaking records for production with great rapidity during the past year. More cows are now being tested than ever have been in the past, and the individual and average production is higher than in other years.

In May, three years ago, a list of Jersey cows on yearly test that were producing over 50 pounds of butterfat per month was published for the purpose of keeping breeders informed as to the month-by-month production of cows on test. There were 132 cows in the first list. Three years later, May, 1917, saw 487 cows in the 50-pound list. This means that 487 Jersey cows on test were producing at the rate of more than 50 pounds of butterfat, or 60 pounds of butter in that month. At present 500 Jersey cows on test are producing at the rate of 600 pounds of butterfat, or 750 pounds of butter per year.

TREATMENT OF KICKING COW

Care and Patience Will Effect Cure if Right Methods Are Used—Two Ways of Tying.

Care and patience will cure the kicking cow if the proper methods are employed. One method is to pass a rope or strap with a loop in one end of it around the body of the cow and draw it tight. The cow will usually jump at first, but when she finds she cannot get out of the rope she will stand still. If this method causes the cow to give bloody milk, place the rope or strap behind the udder, and draw it tight as before.

Another method is to hobble the cow by passing the rope around each leg behind the udder, and tying just above the hocks. This method is a dangerous one, however, for the person tying the rope. After these methods have been repeated a few times the cow will stand quietly to be milked.

DAIRY IS A FIXED INDUSTRY

Where That Feeling Exists There Is Disposition to Raise Heifers or Baby Beef.

The farm dairy is becoming more of a fixed industry, and where this feeling exists there is a disposition to raise the calves—the heifers for the dairy or to be sold for dairy purposes, and the better calves will generally be fed into some form of baby beef as the feed and circumstances suggest.

WARM WATER MUCH CHEAPER

Otherwise Cow Must Burn High-Priced Corn and Other Feeds for That Purpose.

If the cows are forced to drink cold water they must warm the water in their bodies. This requires food in the form of corn and other feeds. It is much cheaper to warm the water with wood or coal than to allow the cow to burn high priced fuel in her body for this purpose.

SHORTHORNS GOOD FOR MILK

There Are Some That Are Excellent Producers, but They Are Not of the Beef Type.

A back-to-the-lander wants to know about the Shorthorns as milk producers. There are some dairy Shorthorns that are excellent milk and butter animals. But one can no more make a dairy animal of the beef type Shorthorn than make a trotter out of a Belgium horse.

Raise More Calves.

The farmer and dairyman who expects to continue in the business will find it to his interest to raise a number of calves each year to replace older cattle that have been disposed of.

Bedding Doubly Useful.

Use sufficient straw for bedding to make the animals comfortable and to absorb the liquid excrement. Nearly half the plant food elements in animal manure occurs in the urine.

Wanted: A Wife

By OSBORN JONES

(Copyright, 1918, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

As Paul Bolton glanced at the dozen or so freshly typed letters on his desk toward five in the afternoon on New Year's eve he reflected that they were the last letters dated 1917 that he would ever sign. Therefore the mechanical act of affixing his signature would be somewhat more momentous than that performance usually was—it would be in some slight measure epochal, because it registered the passing of another year. Therefore he took the pen from the pen tray with rather more than usual care and dipped it in the heavy glass ink bottle that lay before him on his monster mahogany desk. Drawing the top letter on the pile to him he started to sign, but the pen made no mark. Irritation immediately supplanted any interest that he may have felt in the signing. It was intensely exasperating. The ink bottle had been allowed to go dry and only a gummy mass of metallic black showed in the bottom of the inkwell. It was really almost pathetic, he reflected, that he, the president of the great concern of Blank & Bridges—he whose time was worth to that concern some twenty thousand dollars a year—should have to waste that precious time fretting over empty ink wells. Every modern convenience of efficiency in business methods had been installed in his office—there were silent typewriters and automatic letter openers and a girls' lunch room and employers' insurance and annual bonuses—all the result of his desire to show consideration for his employees—and yet he—Paul Bolton—had to fret himself day after day about such things as empty ink bottles, undusted desks and chairs, unwashed drinking glasses and unfilled water bottles. He was tired from an extremely trying week and so instead of rising in wrath and storming at office boys, secretaries, stenographers and every one else within reach of his voice—and Paul Bolton was quite capable of having expressed his feelings in that way—he was filled with self-pity. No one really cared enough for him to spare him those annoyances. He went to a stenographer's desk, found an inkwell that happened to be filled and signed the letters dejectedly.

Then he went to his nearby apartments where he reigned in bachelor supremacy and his experience there showed him again that no one really cared. There were no fresh flowers. Bolton especially liked to have yellow daffodils and jonquils in his rooms on cold, raw winter nights and he had told his Jap so on more than one occasion. The grate fire was not lighted. The Jap explained that no coal could be got. Well, the Jap ought to have got a skuttlerful somewhere. If he had cared for him as much as he seemed he would have got a skuttlerful somewhere. And dinner wasn't exactly what he wanted, and his slippers hadn't been warmed and the water was too cold. The Jap ought to have known by that time that he didn't like ice water.

So it was that the next day, when Bolton began to think about New Year's resolutions, he registered two resolves, brief yet important. To get a really efficient private secretary—a young woman who would care enough to see that the inkwells were filled, and to get a wife. A wife would see to the jonquils and the slippers he was sure.

Before a month had passed Bolton had achieved one of his resolutions. He had obtained from an exclusive agency a young woman of unusual merit—Alice Blair—who had proved herself to be worth considerably more than the forty dollars a week that she had demanded. So Bolton's days were passed with an absence of confusion and irritation. Miss Blair seemed to get inside his mind and find out just what he wanted done before he had time to formulate it even to his own knowledge and she always did things with perfect ease. She didn't have to fill the inkwells or dust the desk, but—what showed her forty-dollars-a-week value—she saw to it that the office boys did. It was always that way with her. She never seemed to be especially busy and yet everything was done.

But Bolton still had no wife and the Jap did not improve. Another Jap would have been no better. Bolton was sure it was only a wife who could make his cup of happiness complete. And yet there were wives and wives. The wife he wanted was not like those of any of his men friends. In the first place she would have to be companionable and sympathetic and stimulating when he was weary from the office grind and then she would have to regard her task of being his wife and home maker as seriously as he regarded his business of being president of Blank and Bridges. Bolton began accepting invitations to dinners and dances in the hope of finding his paragon but he was always unsuccessful.

He was discouraged in the accomplishment of his second resolution, so, revelling in the achievement of the first, he got into the habit of spending more and more time in his office, going for hurried meals and short sleep. As time went on he sometimes imagined he was completely happy, so rejoiced was he in Alice Blair. But in time the extra hours at the office began to tell on his health. He really needed the home life if he was to keep up his mental vigor and good health. He sometimes wondered whether the extra hours that Miss Blair had to work—for she always stayed at her post whenever he was at the office—were not telling on her, too. But she never murmured and she seemed always in the pink of condition.

One day Bolton began wondering about Alice Blair. He wondered why she did all this for him—whether it was just the result of her training plus a keen mind—was it induced entirely by the forty dollars a week that she had demanded! Perhaps it was. But the effect it produced was the same—it really did seem as if some one cared now and that, after all, Bolton concluded, was what made the big difference. Still he kept asking himself, did Miss Blair care? How did she keep up her strength and courage for the long hours? There were a hundred petty home and social duties that usually distracted his women employees—had Miss Blair none of those?

Mr. Bolton's last question was answered one day when he chanced to look through the carboys for the outgoing mail of the day, when he had returned unknown to her, after dinner at night. He came upon the duplicate of a letter of a personal nature, yet before he had realized what he was doing he read it. It was simply an order to one of the morning papers for the insertion of a "help wanted" advertisement. This was the advertisement:

"Wanted: A young business woman wants to get in touch with a young woman whose duties will be similar to those of a wife to a busy man. That is, she must be an educated, agreeable young woman with the willingness to take seriously the task of making a small apartment a real home. She need not do the actual housework but she must see that it is done without confusion and without complaint. She must have the instinctive knack of attending to the little things, combined with the ability to be interested in the really big things. For such a young woman a good home and a fair remuneration will be given."

Mr. Bolton read then re-read the paragraph. What occurred to him first was that it contained a perfect description of his own ideal of what a wife should be—and it was Alice Blair's ideal. Only it was Alice Blair's idea of the companion she wanted, not the companion she wanted to be. Still, she understood. She at least realized that with such an ideal woman at home a man or woman either might endure the strain of business worries that would otherwise be unendurable. Apparently the letter advertising for such a companion had gone out. Bolton wondered what results would come of it. He almost wished that he, too, might secure the wife he was looking for in some such quick-courtesy manner. Then he decided to speak to Alice about it—perhaps, perhaps, she cared enough—

Bolton came to the point rather abruptly.

"I had thought the most important thing in the world was to have a perfect secretary," he told her the next day when he had called her to his office. "Now I have decided that a perfect wife is much more important. Pardon me for reading your advertisement—I see you understand part of my own ideal for such a companion—she must be a real companion, Alice," he said, changing from his abrupt business manner to a boyish, pleading tone that Alice had never observed before.

Alice blushed and the blush seemed to tell Bolton that she really did care for something beside the forty dollars a week.

"Is it only because I would be a congenial companion, and a good housewife—only because I'd keep the wheels running smoothly in your home as I have in your office, is that all?"

Then suddenly Bolton wondered how it had ever seemed as though those things could really have been paramount. All he could see was the shadow that lurked beneath Alice's downcast eye, the delicious curve of her lips and the graceful lines of the small, determined little chin.

"Alice," he said a little huskily, "I'd want you to marry me if you were the worst housewife in the world. Somehow I see now why so many men do marry the women they do—I suppose they love them as I love you."

And so in spite of the first developments of the year Bolton filled the second half of his resolution instead of the first.

Mole Always Hungry.

The little mole has recently been recommended for membership in the society of big eaters. It is so very voracious, even in captivity, that it will sometimes eat more than its own weight of earthworms in 24 hours. One little glutton, weighing four ounces, devoured 7½ pounds of worms in one month. When the diet changed to raw beef, mutton, chicken heads and rabbit liver, its appetite was unchanged. Cheese, when mixed with either worms or beef, was the most toothsome bit of all.—Popular Science Monthly.

Marines Have Proud Record.

The records of the marine corps show that it took part in practically all the operations of the Mexican war; and in the great assault at Chapultepec the storming party was led by Majors Twigg and Reynolds of the marine corps. Later we find these same marines which fought in Mexico marching through the capital of Japan under Commodore Perry when he opened up that ancient empire to modern civilization.

The knight of the grip shifted his cigar to the other corner of his mouth.

THINK IT OVER

Young men and women who are ambitious to achieve success should not waste the summer months. One vacation properly spent will prepare you for a profitable life. Many who, at the close of school last year, entered the Tyler Commercial College to spend the summer months are now holding splendid positions; or attending University, paying their way with the commercial training they received. Every year we have several hundred students from 15 years to 45 years of age who finish during their vacation, before the big business opening in all lines of industry in the fall. It is useless to idle away the summer months.
Business men and farmers alike are busy, and ambitious young people had rather enter a large and enthusiastic student body, and master a course of Book keeping, Shorthand, Telegraphy, Business Administration and Finance, Penmanship or Cotton Classing. Write for large illustrated free catalog of the Tyler Commercial College. Read of the advantages of our splendid courses of instruction and of those who have graduated and are now holding good positions, what they say of the Institution, what their employers think of their efficient training. Read how some worked their way through school, how others borrowed money and made it pay them big dividends, how others quit jobs at small salaries, completed their courses and went back to the same firm at two or three times their previous salary. Some who were unable to attend school at Tyler finished the home study course and never had to quit earning their salary. Make arrangements to enter as soon as your school closes. The United States Government holds Civil Service examinations in Tyler every Tuesday, enabling our graduates to go in positions at salaries from $900 to $1800.
There is great demand for clerical help in government work and our graduates are receiving prompt appointments. The salaries are advanced after three months of satisfactory service, and the pay is sure and prompt.
This is a patriotic task, at the same time profitable, and appeals to young Americans very strongly. Tyler Commercial College, Tyler, Texas.

CITY'S COMFORTS FOR FARM HOUSE

Plans for Model Country Home Make Provision for Many Conveniences.

ROOMS ARE WELL ARRANGED

Living Quarters of Family Separated From Those of Hired Help—Large Dining Room is Provided.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1877 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose three-cent stamp for reply.

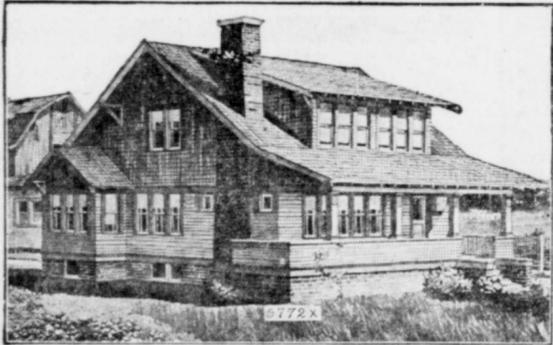

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD. The planning of the ordinary American farm dwellings has been given little attention by most architects. As a result, these dwellings are lacking in attractiveness and in many conveniences that are economically possible and necessary if country life for those who make it possible for most people to exist is to be made comfortable and pleasant.

The ideal farmhouse specifications should include a hot air furnace or other heating equipment, a modern plumbing system and wiring for electric lights.

The following are regarded as minimum accommodations:

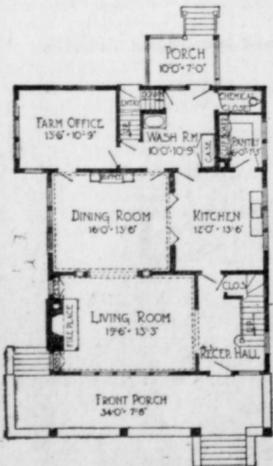

Three bedrooms and one bathroom for the family and one bedroom, with separate toilet conveniences to accommodate one or two hired hands; a living room, dining room, screened living and dining porch, farm office, kitchen, laundry and washroom, and sufficient basement space for heating apparatus, fuel and storage of fruit and vegetables.

It is permitted to plan dining room and kitchen in combination, screening the one from the other by folding doors or otherwise, and to plan for such a room to take the place of a separate living room, provided there is a separate room on the first floor large enough to accommodate a piano and to serve the purpose of a parlor, library, farm office, with built-in bookcases for books, music, player records, farm journals and files and space for desk or library table.

Another provision is for a side entrance in connection with the kitchen entry. This would serve for the men coming in from work and there would be a washroom with a sink or lavatory, a bench or settee, a shelf and wardrobe hooks. Convenient space is to be provided, also, for refrigerator and kitchen storage on the first floor. A good sized screened porch is likewise required. Dining space is to be provided for at least 10 or 12 persons. Picturing all this, one naturally contrasts it with former days of wood stove-heated farmhouses, wherein chilly drafts played havoc with one's good temper; of the unheated bedrooms, wherein the water froze in the pitcher; of the smoky kerosene lamps that required so much attention; of the absence of screens against the flies and mosquitoes; of the thousand and one hardships entailed because of the flimsy construction of the old farmhouses and their poor arrangement; of the inconveniences and ill health suffered because of lack of decent sanitary arrangements. And one picture by contrast a sort of paradise.

Yet no ready reason appears why the farmer and his family and his employees are not entitled to reasonably comfortable places in which to live.

The great advantage of the room arrangement shown in the bungalow farmhouse illustrated lies in the fact that the living quarters and living rooms of the family are separated from the rooms that are used by the hired help. This arrangement applies both to the first and second floors. This idea was recently brought into prominence by the Minnesota state contest for prize farmhouse designs. Each design had to incorporate this arrangement in some way.

From the back porch the entrance leads to a washroom, where the men coming in from their work can clean up, without going into the kitchen at all, as they can go directly to the dining room from the washroom. A case is provided in which the men can hang their outside work clothes.

Two bedrooms are provided for the help on the second floor. These can be shut off from the rest of the upstairs by closing one door in the large bedroom that leads to the back hall. The family occupy the other three rooms on this floor and reach them by the front stairs, while the back rooms are reached by the back stairs.

On the first floor one of the back corners of the house is fitted up as a farm office—the farmer's private room for the transaction of the farm business. In these days of scientific farming, the guessing system is as useless as it would be in any other kind of business. There must be filing and records that are kept on costs and all the various other details of a business. The farm office is located so that the owner or manager can see all the buildings from his room through the windows on the three sides.

The kitchen and dining room are connected by double folding doors, which can be opened so that the table can be stretched away out long and placed between these rooms at threshing time, silo filling, or for the big Thanksgiving dinner, when all the folks are home.

A feature of the basement arrangement is the large space that is provided in one corner for the storage of fruits and vegetables. This is placed away from the furnace and the laundry stove, and is shut off with a solid masonry wall.

In exterior design this farmhouse follows the popular bungalow style—broad and low, well lighted and comfortable.

Taboo Hotel Lists.

"Did you notice the little red book that man consulted when I assigned him a room?" asked the hotel clerk. "He comes here every few weeks, but he never accepts a room till he has turned over the pages of that booklet. There are a lot of others like him and they carry a whole catalogue, compiled by themselves, of hotel rooms. They call it their taboo list. They watch the newspapers carefully, and whenever they read of a suicide or any other serious trouble in a hotel they make a record of the room number. Then when they come to a hotel and register they consult their books and make sure they aren't being given the taboo room."

One Thing He Had Learned.

A history professor at one of the British universities recently met one of his old students while home on leave from the western front, and inquired from him if he had learned any particular lesson from the war. "I have found," replied the student, "that it was a deal easier studying history than it is making it."

WHAT CAN WE DO?

A shortage of trained nurses confronts the Red Cross and young high school and college women must save the day for the organization in this dilemma. Even though these young women have no expectation of following nursing as a life vocation they may benefit themselves and show their willingness to help when help is badly needed by qualifying to do Red Cross work. The time spent in the nurses' training schools of the country, and in actual nursing, will prove a lifelong asset—broaden the vision and sympathies and make better and less anxious mothers of the girls who undertake such training.

We are to discontinue the knitting of trench caps because the government is to include a trench cap in every man's equipment. And furthermore, we are asked to use the yarn for socks and more socks. The hand-knitted varieties are most satisfactory and even when the upper part is made by machine the stitches may be taken up on needles of the correct size and the foot knitted by hand.

Every Red Cross worker in the central division is to be congratulated on the very handsome total of articles shipped during the month of January. Can we make it 4,000,000 for the month of February?

COATS WITH "THROW" COLLARS.

Gauntlet cuffs and "throw" or scarf collars are among the small innovations in coat styles that distinguish them from preceding seasons. Another almost universal feature of new coats is some sort of definition at the waistline which may be either above or below the normal waistline and is oftenmost above. Nevertheless, many of the new coats achieve an almost straight silhouette. Bearing these three peculiarities in mind, it will not be at all hard to acquire an up-to-date coat, for spring styles show no radical departures from those of the winter.

Although the throw is merely a supplement to the spring coat for wear on keen, chilly days, it may be made a style note full of charm. There is a knack in wearing it which all lies in adjusting it becomingly. Each of the two coats illustrated here is provided with a throw and one of them is further favored with one phase of the gauntlet cuff. Both are of wool velour, which has proved itself an ideal fabric for coats.

The model at the left is in beige color. It has straight panels down the front and a rather wide girdle set in about the sides and back, defining a long waistline. The skirt of the coat is shirred to the belt with scant fullness. The sleeves are roomy and finished with ample cuffs that are embellished with small buttons. There is a long, rolling shawl collar which may be fastened over the throat. The scarf hangs to the waistline and ends in large, soft tassels. It amounts to an ornament and is pictured with the throat uncovered and the ends hanging at each side of the coat.

The coat at the left resorts to small box plaits in the back to provide the required fullness in its skirt. It chooses the high waistline and a scarf in white with tasseled ends in dark taupe like the coat in color.

NEW FASHIONS

Rippling skirt sections are taboed by some of the smartest modistes. Gray handkerchief linen is used for some of the most distinctive of French hand made blouses.

Cat stitching in heavy silk is in some cases replacing fill tire work on blouses, since it involves less time and labor and is almost as effective.

A novel edging, introduced by Lanvin on some of her blouses, is made of tiny seam heading, cut in half and applied by hand.

Colored pique is used for collars and cuffs on lingerie blouses for spring. Heavily embroidered front panels are used on some of the hand made lingerie things.

Blazer stripes are reported as returning to favor in England for sweaters.

Most of the best bandeau blouses are now fitted with a shaped diaphragm band.

Old-Fashioned Frocks.

Frocks of organdie in combinations that harken back to the fifties give an inkling to what may be expected this season, and illustrated in a model seen of gray organdie, the skirt felled slightly into the waist is banded at the foot with self color and finished at the top with cord and narrow knife plaiting of pale yellow. The quaint tight-fitting waist, modified by modern influence, depends upon knife plaitings and cording to trim. A good looking brown and white plaidingham dress is combined with white organdie and set off with a brown suede belt, which carries it above the rank of the commonplace.

Blouses Without Sleeves.

Pumpkin yellow handkerchief linen is developed into a mannish tucked front, sleeveless blouse to wear with a navy suit, the jacket of which is short and boxlike.

Kentucky Lady Says Two Bottles of Cardui Surprised Her by Acting So Quickly.

"Relief, Ky.—Mrs. Sarah M. Hill, of this place, writes: 'I can't praise Cardui too much, for it is a wonderful medicine for women.'

Eight years ago, I began to feel not quite so well as usual. . . . I was not able to do anything. It seemed like I was dwindling away, and kept getting more puny every day. I was weak and pale and could not stand on my feet long. . . . I had no doctor but I knew by my feelings that I had womanly weakness.

"After I decided to try Cardui, I bought one bottle. It seemed as if the very first few doses began to help me. I was surprised that anything could begin to act so quickly. But it helped me right away. I know it did because I began immediately to get strong.

After I finished that first bottle, I bought another. When I had finished that second bottle, I was all right. I did not need a third bottle. I kept right on getting stronger until I was as strong as ever, and I have kept so. . . . Now I am as well and as strong and as able to do my work as I ever was in my life."

To drive a tank, handle the guns, and sweep over the enemy trenches, takes strong nerves, good rich blood, a good stomach, liver and kidneys. When the time comes, the man with red blood in his veins "is up and at it." He has iron nerves for hardships—an interest in his work grips him. That's the way you feel when you have taken a blood and nerve tonic, made up of Blood Root, Golden Seal root, Stone root, Cherry bark, and rolled into a sugar-coated tablet and sold in sixty-cent vials by almost all druggists for past fifty years as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This tonic, in liquid or tablet form, is just what you need this spring to give you vim, vigor and vitality. At the far end of a hard winter, no wonder you feel "run-down," blue, out of sorts. Try this "Medical Discovery" of Dr. Pierce's. Don't wait! To-day is the day to begin! A little "pep," and you laugh and live.

This Is Better Than Laxatives

Don't NR Tablet Each Night For A Week Will Correct Your Constipation and Make Constant Dosing Unnecessary. Try it.

Poor digestion and assimilation mean a poorly nourished body and low vitality. Poor elimination means clogged bowels, fermentation, putrefaction and the formation of poisonous gases which are absorbed by the blood and carried through the body.

The result is weakness, headaches, dizziness, coated tongue, inactive liver, bilious attacks, loss of energy, nervousness, poor appetite, impoverished blood, sallow complexion, pimples, skin disease, and often times serious illnesses.

Ordinary laxatives, purges and cathartics—sals, oils, calomel and the like—may relieve for a few hours, but real, lasting benefit can only come through use of medicine that tones up and strengthens the digestive as well as the eliminative organs.

Get a 25c box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) and take one tablet each night for a week. Relief will follow the very first dose, but a few days will elapse before you feel and realize the fullest benefit. When you get straightened out and feel just right again you need not take medicine every day—only occasional NR Tablet will then keep your system in good condition and you will always feel your best. Remember, keeping well is easier and cheaper than getting well.

LITHUANIA

Koenigsberg, Prussia, Claimed by the New Lithuania.

LITHUANIA, which has declared its independence of Russia, has a history that for hundreds of years was intertwined with that of Poland, with which it long maintained a loose sort of union. At the time of the dismemberment of Poland it went for the most part to Russia. Lithuania now comprises the Russian "governments" of Kovno, Vilna, Grodno, Vitebsk, Minsk, Mogilev, and Suwalki (the last a part of Russian Poland.) This territory is almost entirely occupied just now by the Germans, who swept over it in their campaign of 1915 against the Russians. In the heyday of the Lithuanians the dominions of their princes extended, however, far beyond the limits of today, reaching even the shores of the Black sea, and embracing districts now included in Ukraine, Poland, and other parts of Russia.

A most interesting point about the claims of those who have brought about the Lithuanian declaration of independence is that, in their extreme form, they contemplate not only the separation of Lithuania from Russia but also the incorporation into the new state of German territory which centuries ago formed part of Lithuania. This district includes the important city of Koenigsberg, in what is now East Prussia, as well as Tilsit and other towns. If this district should form part of the new Lithuania, and if an independent Poland should have free access to the sea after the war through the seaport of Danzig, formerly Polish and now German, there would be a small wedge of German territory, isolated from the rest of the empire, between Polish Danzig and Lithuanian Koenigsberg. The Lithuanians re-endorse their claims to Koenigsberg and other cities now under German or Russian rule by pointing to the fact that they have names for them in the Lithuanian language which the cities bore in the old days before they were seized by Teutons or Slavs.

Once a Great Principality.

The Lithuanian nation in the fourth century of our era was living along the coast of the Baltic sea between Riga and Koenigsberg. From the tenth to the sixteenth century the Lithuanian principality extended from the Baltic to the Black sea. In that territory were White Russians and Ukrainians or Little Russians. White Russians are mostly of Lithuanian stock. Whoever goes from Lithuania to White Russia soon notices that the same types, customs and festivities exist there. The language of White Russia is 25 per cent Lithuanian, and the attitude of the people toward the Lithuanians is very friendly.

The Lithuanians are Indo-Aryans, fair, light-haired, blue-eyed, tall, and strong. They are in no way related to the Slav or Teuton. They are said to have crossed from Asia to Europe about 2,000 B. C. They settled along the Black sea, near the mouth of the Danube. Gradually they were driven by other races until they came to the shores of the Baltic, where they finally settled. Here Lithuanians grew and prospered. They were peaceful folk, never fighting unless attacked, busy with agricultural pursuits, and a few with hunting and fishing. As a nation they were prevented from going into manufacturing or into commerce by physical surroundings, but some of the more venturesome made trips to Roman territory with cargoes of amber and various products of their country.

The language of the Lithuanians has been preserved to this day. Some even say that it is the oldest language in use. It closely resembles the Sanskrit and, in many cases of research work, is the key to it.

Beat Germans and Mongols.

The Lithuanians lived in clans until the thirteenth century, when, because of national danger, they banded together. They chose Ringuadas as the first grand duke of Lithuania, and he soon collected a large army. He defeated the Germans and stopped the western advance of the Mongolians. He likewise defeated the Russians and increased the territory of Lithuania considerably.

Mindaugas, the next grand duke, a capable organizer and administrator, continued the work successfully. Gedeminas, a shrewd diplomat, as is shown in his correspondence with the popes of Rome and the Teutonic order, was the next grand duke of note. He established the grand duchy of Lithuania on a firm basis, vanquished the Russians, Teutons, and especially the Tartars, and so helped save Europe from the greatest disaster that could have befallen it—invasion and occupation by Mongolians. At this time Lithuania extended from the Baltic sea to the Black sea. After the death of Gedeminas, his two sons, Algirdas and Keistutis, reigned, and waged battles with Teutons and Slavs.

In 1569 a sort of dual Polish-Lithuanian government was adopted. Even then, Lithuania kept its independence. In the three partitions of Poland the major part of Lithuania was annexed by Russia and the smaller by Germany. Thus Lithuania was removed from the map of the world.

The people were forbidden to use the Lithuanian language, and the possession of any Lithuanian books, even prayer books, was considered a political crime, and schools teaching Lithuanian were closed. The Russian government prohibited the use of any type in print but the Russian. The people as a result, smuggled in books and newspapers printed in Latin type, from Germany. Eventually the imperial order was revoked and the use of Latin type re-established. From that time on Lithuanian literature has flourished, many newspapers having been published and many books printed.

There are probably about 7,500,000 persons of genuine Lithuanian stock. In addition to these, the Lithuanian state would include 1,500,000 Poles, Jews, Russians, and Germans, making a total of 9,000,000 for Lithuania proper. If Letland should be united with Lithuania it would add 2,500,000 Letts, making a grand total population of 11,500,000 for the new nation.

Russian Peasant's Hard Life.

The whole existence of the Russian peasant is out of joint. He is born in a world of earth and wood, where his life is circumscribed by a log cabin that is thatched in fall, when it assumes an appearance of tidiness, but becomes a huge harp for the March winds to play their woeful dirges on. The thatch is fed to the few starving animals, and the dispensable wooden props and decorations used to cook dinner with long before the approach of spring. Here between the unplastered, undecorated walls he lives with his horse, his pig, his hens—always provided he has any—under the same roof, glad of their sociability and animal warmth, being much in need of both. His home is one of the maze of zigzag, lopsided, weather-beaten, broken-down izbas that stand huddled together, freezing in God's solemn peacefulness and uncanny dreaminess. Enchantingly idyllic on a canvas, but a dreadful place to live in.

Java's Sugar Production.

Java is such a fruitful land that one hesitates to specify the principal crop, but it is one of the great sugar-producing countries of the world. The annual export of sugar amounts to something like 1,700,000 tons. People are so accustomed to thinking of sugar in terms of pounds that nearly 2,000,000 tons of sugar seems to have a stupefying effect on the mind. There are more than 400,000 acres of land under cultivation in sugar on the island of Java and the average yield per acre is four and one-half tons, which is a yield that is high above the average of sugar land.

Unnecessary Fears.

Of course the eloping couple's roller-skate of a car had no chance against the old man's high-powered roadster. He soon came up with them.

"Do not take her back," pleaded the young man with tears in his eyes.

"Take her back?" echoed the stern parent. "Why, I have come to bring her knitting outfit and chewing gum so she would never have an excuse to come back."—Boston Transcript.

Easily Explained.

The minister had called in the home of one of his parishioners. There was a bald-headed baby in the house, also another child with beautiful brown eyes and soft golden curls. The minister was struck with the beauty of the little one and said: "Where did you get your big brown eyes, and your pretty curly hair?" The child looked at him in wonder and said: "I had my eyes when I came, and my hair grew."

KIDNEY TROUBLE NOT EASILY RECOGNIZED

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected

An examining physician for one of the prominent life insurance companies, in an interview of the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

We find that Swamp-Root is strictly an herbal compound and we would advise our readers who feel in need of such a remedy to give it a trial. It is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Adv.

The Object.
"Why do we have these meatless and wheatless days?" asked the selfish person.
"In order," replied Miss Cayenne, "that we may have a defeatless army."

LIQUID BLUE?
No, Mr. Grocer, that's mostly water. Since the war started it's more nearly all water than ever. Give me Red Cross Ball Blue, that's a two-ounce package of real goodness. You should see my clothes. I just can't keep from smiling out loud.—Adv.

Darns Necessary.
"Can't Ethel and Will patch up their quarrel?" "No, for Will says he don't care a darn."

ON FIRST SYMPTOMS use "Renovine" and be cured. Do not wait until the heart organ is beyond repair. "Renovine" is the heart and nerve tonic. Price 60c and $1.00.—Adv.

Just Once! Try Dodson's Liver Tone! Take No Calomel! Listen To Me!

If bilious, constipated, headachy or sick, I guarantee relief without taking dangerous calomel which sickens and salivates.

Stop using calomel! It makes you sick. Don't lose a day's work. If you feel lazy, sluggish, bilious or constipated, listen to me!

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver, which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile, crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful tonight, and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous by morning, I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it can not salivate or make you sick.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your bowels of that sour bile and constipated waste which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable. I guarantee that a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will keep the entire family feeling fine for months. Give it to your children. It is harmless; doesn't gripe and they like its pleasant taste.—Adv.

Proof that Some Women do Avoid Operations

Mrs. Etta Dorion, of Ogdensburg, Wis., says:
"I suffered from female troubles which caused piercing pains like a knife through my back and side. I finally lost all my strength so I had to go to bed. The doctor advised an operation but I would not listen to it. I thought of what I had read about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and tried it. The first bottle brought great relief and six bottles have entirely cured me. All women who have female trouble of any kind should try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

How Mrs. Boyd Avoided an Operation.
Canton, Ohio.—"I suffered from a female trouble which caused me much suffering, and two doctors decided that I would have to go through an operation before I could get well."
"My mother, who had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, advised me to try it before submitting to an operation. It relieved me from my troubles so I can do my house work without any difficulty. I advise any woman who is afflicted with female troubles to give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial and it will do as much for them."—Mrs. MARIE BOYD, 1421 5th St., N. E., Canton, Ohio.

"Pack the suitcase and the bag, will you, Auntie, and—"

"I already have," she answered, laughing at their frantic energy. "And I put out these white dresses for you to wear, and—"

"Gracious, auntie! They fit in the back and have sixty buttons apiece. We'll never have time to fasten them," expostulated Carol, without diminishing her speed.

"I'll button while you powder, that'll be time enough."

"I won't have time to powder," called back Carol from the bathroom, where she was splashing the water at a reckless rate. "I'll wear a veil and powder when I get there. Did you pack any clean handkerchiefs, auntie? I'm clear out. If you didn't put any in, you'd better go and borrow Connie's. Lucky thing she's not here."

Shining with zeal and soap, Carol dashed out, and Lark dashed in.

"Are there any holes in these stockings?" Carol turned around, lifting her skirts for inspection. "Well, I'm sorry, I won't have time to change them. Did they come in the auto? Good!" She was brushing her hair as she talked. "Yes, we had a luncheon, all pie, though. We played tennis this morning; we were intending to come home right along, or we'd have phoned you. We were playing with George Castle and Fritzie Zale.—Is it sticking out any place?" She lowered her head backward for her aunt to see. "Stick a pin in it, will you? Thanks. They dared us to go to the pie counter and see which couple could eat the most pieces of lemon pie, the couple which lost paying for all the pie. It's not like betting, you know; it's a kind of reward of merit, like a Sunday-school prize. No, I won't put on my slippers till the last thing, my heel's sore, my tennis shoe rubbed the skin off. My feet seem to be getting tender. Think it's old age?"

Lark now emerged from the bathroom, and both twins performed a flying exchange of dresses.

"Who won?"

"Lark and George ate eleven pieces, and Fritzie and I only nine. So Fritzie paid. Then we went on the campus and played mumble-te-peg, or whatever you call it. It is French, auntie."

"Did they ask us to stay a whole week, auntie?" inquired Lark.

"Yes, Jim was wearing his new gray suit and looked very nice. I've never been out to their home. Is it very nice?"

"Um, swell!" This was from Carol, Lark being less slantly inclined. "They have about sixteen rooms, and two maids—they call them 'girls'—and electric lights, and a private water supply, and—oh, and—horses, and cows—oh, it's great! We've always been awfully fond of Jim. The nicest thing about him is that he always takes a girl home when he goes to class things and socials. I can't endure a fellow who walks home by himself. Jim always asks Larkie and me first, and if we are taken he gets someone else. Most boys, if they can't get first choice, pike off alone."

"Now, Carol," said Aunt Grace, smiling. "Be easy on him. He's so nice it would be a shame to—"

Carol threw up her eyes in horror. "I'm shocked," she cried. Then she dimpled. "But I wouldn't hurt Jim for anything. I'm very fond of him. Do you really think there are any—indications—"

"Oh, I don't know anything about it. I'm just judging by the rest of the community."

Lark was performing the really difficult feat of putting on and buttoning her slippers standing on one foot for the purpose and stooping low. Her face was flushed from the exertion.

"Do you think he's crazy about you, Carol?" she inquired, rather seriously, and without looking up from the shoe she was so laboriously buttoning.

"Oh, I don't know. There are a few circumstances which seem to point that way. Take that new gray suit for instance. Now you know yourself, Lark, he didn't need a new gray suit, and when a man gets a brand-new suit for no apparent reason, you can generally put it down that he's waxing romantic. Then there's his mother—she's begun telling me all his good points, and how cute he was when he was born, and she showed me one of his curls and a lot of his baby pictures—it made Jim wild when he came in and caught her at it, and she tells me how good he is and how much money he's got. That's pointed, very. But I must confess, she concluded candidly, "that Jim himself doesn't act very lovely."

"He thinks lots of you, I know," said Lark, seriously. "Whenever he's alone with me he praises you every minute of the time."

"That's nothing. When he's alone with me he praises you all the time, too. Where's my hat, Lark? I'll bet Connie wore it, the little sinner! Now what shall I do?"

"You left it in the barn yesterday—don't you remember you hung it on the harness hook when we went out for eggs, and—"

"Oh, so I did. There comes Connie now," Carol thrust her head out of the window. "Connie, run out to the barn and bring my hat, will you? It's on the harness hook. And hurry! Don't stop to ask questions, just trot along and do as you're told."

Carol returned again to her toilet.

"Well, I guess I have time to powder after all. I don't suppose we'll need to take any money, auntie, do you? We won't be able to spend it in the country."

"I think you'd better take a little. They might drive to town, or go to a social, or something."

"Can't do it. Haven't a cent."

"Well, I guess I can lend you a little," was the smiling reply. It was a standing joke in the family that Carol had been financially hard pressed ever since she began using powder several years previous.

"Are you fond of Jim, Carol?" Lark jumped away backward in the conversation, asking the question gravely, her eyes upon her sister's face.

"Hum! Yes, I am," was the light retort. "Didn't Prudence teach us to love everybody?"

"Don't be silly. I mean if he proposes to you, are you going to turn him down, or not?"

"What would you advise, Lark?" Carol's brows were painfully knitted. "He's got five hundred acres of land, worth at least a hundred an acre, and a lot of money in the bank—his mother didn't say how much, but I imagine several thousand anyhow. And he has that nice big house, and an auto, and—oh, everything nice! Think of the fruit trees, Larkie! And he's good-looking, too. And his mother says he is always good-natured even before breakfast, and that's very exceptional, you know! Very! I don't know what I could do much better, do you, auntie? I'm sure I'd look cute in a sunbonnet and apron, milking the cows! So, boss, so, there, now! So, boss!"

"Why, Carol!"

"But there are objections, too. They have pigs. I can't bear pigs! Pooooey, pooooey! The filthy little things! I don't know—Jim and the gray suit and the auto and the cows are very nice, but when I think of Jim and overalls and pigs and onions and freckles I have goose flesh. Here they come! Where's that other slipper? Oh, it's clear under the bed!" She wriggled after it, coming out again breathless. "Did I rub the powder all off?" she asked, anxiously.

The low honk of the car sounded outside, and the twins dumped a miscellaneous assortment of toilet articles into the battered suitcase and the tattered hand bag. Carol grabbed her hat from Connie, leisurely strolling through the hall with it, and sent her flying after her gloves. "If you can't find mine, bring your own," she called after her.

Aunt Grace and Connie escorted them triumphantly down the walk to the waiting car where the young man in the new sentimental gray suit stood beside the open door. His face was boyishly eager, and his eyes were full of a satisfaction that had a sort of excitement in it, too. Aunt Grace looked at him and sighed. "Poor boy," she thought. "He is nice! Carol is a mean little thing!"

He smiled at the twins impartially. "Shall we flip a coin to see who I get in front?" he asked them, laughing.

His mother leaned out from the back seat, and smiled at the girls very cordially. "Hurry, twinnies," she said, "we must start, or we'll be late for supper. Come in with me, won't you, Larkie?"

"What a greasy schemer she is," thought Carol, climbing into her place without delay.

Jim placed the battered suitcase and the tattered bag beneath the seat and drew the rug over his mother's knees. Then he went to Lark's side, and tucked it carefully about her feet.

"It's awfully dusty," he said. "You shouldn't have doiled up so. Shall I put your purse in my pocket? Don't forget you promised to feed the chickens—I'm counting on you to do it for me."

Then he stepped in beside Carol, laughing into her bright face, and the good-bys rang back and forth as the car rolled away beneath the heavy arch of oak leaves that roofed in Maple avenue.

The twins fairly reveled in the glories of the country through the golden days that followed, and enjoyed every minute of every day, and begrudged the hours they spent in sleep. The time slipped by "like banana skins," declared Carol crossly, and refused to explain her comparison. And the last day of their visit came. Supper was over at seven o'clock and Lark said, with something of wistfulness in her voice, "I'm going out to the orchard for a farewell weep all by myself. And don't any of you disturb me—I'm so ugly when I cry."

So she set out alone, and Jim, a little awkwardly, suggested that Carol take a turn or so up and down the lane with him. Mrs. Forrest stood at the window and watched them, tearful-eyed, but with tenderness.

"My little boy," she said to herself, "my little boy. But she's a dear, sweet, pretty girl."

In the meantime, Jim was acquitting himself badly. His face was pale. He was nervous, ill at ease. He standered when he spoke. Self-consciousness was not habitual to this young man of the Iowa farm. He was not an awkward, ignorant, gangling farm-hand we meet in books and see on stages. He had attended the high school in Mount Mark, and had been graduated from the state agricultural college with high honors. He was a farmer, as his father had been before him, but he was a farmer of the new era, one of those men who takes plain farming and makes it a profession, almost a fine art. Usually he was self-possessed, assertive, confident, but, in the presence of this sparkling twin, for once he was abashed.

Carol was in an ecstasy of delight. She was not a man-eater, perhaps, but she was early romance-mad.

The callow youths of Mount Mark, of the Epworth league, and the college, were almost unanimous in laying their adoration at Carol's feet. But Carol saw the elasticity, the buoyancy, of loves like these, and she couldn't really count them. She felt that she was ripe for a bit of solid experience now, and there was nothing callow about Jim—he was solid enough. And now, although she could see that his feelings stirred, she felt nothing but excitement and curiosity. A proposal, a real one! It was imminent, she felt it.

"Carol," he began abruptly. "I am in love."

"A-are you?" Carol had not expected him to begin in just that way. "Yes; I have been for a long time, with the sweetest and dearest girl in the world. I know I am not half good enough for her, but—I love her so much that—I believe I could make her happy."

"D-o do you?" Carol was frightened. She reflected that it wasn't so much fun as she had expected. There was something wonderful in his eyes, and in his voice. Maybe Lark was right—maybe it did hurt! Oh, she really shouldn't have been quite so nice to him!

"She is young—so am I—but I know what I want, and if I can only have her, I'll do anything I—" His voice broke a little. He looked very handsome, very grown-up, very manly. Carol quivered. She wanted to run away and cry. She wanted to put her arms around him and tell him she was very, very sorry and she would never do it again as long as she lived and breathed.

"Of course," he went on, "I am not a fool. I know there isn't a girl like her in ten thousand, but—she's the one I want, and—Carol, do you reckon there is any chance for me? You ought to know. Lark doesn't have secrets from you, does she? Do you think she'll have me?"

Certainly this was the surprise of Carol's life. If it was romance she wanted, here it was in plenty. She stood staring at him.

"Jim Forrest," she demanded, "is it Lark you want to marry, or me?"

"Lark, of course!"

Carol opened her lips and closed them. She did it again. Finally she spoke. "Well, of all the idiots! If you want to marry Lark, what in the world are you out here proposing to me for?"

"I'm not proposing to you," he objected. "I'm just telling you about it."

"But what for? What's the object? Why don't you go and rave to her?"

He smiled a little. "Well, I guess I thought telling you first was one way of breaking it to her gently."

"I'm perfectly disgusted with you," Carol went on, "perfectly. Here I've been expecting you to propose to me all week, and—"

"Propose to you! My stars!"

"Don't interrupt me," Carol snapped. "Last night I lay a-ake for hours—look at the rings beneath my eyes—"

"I don't see 'em," he interrupted again, smiling more broadly.

"Just thinking out a good flowery rejection for you, and then you trot me out here and propose to Lark! Well, if that isn't nerve!"

Jim laughed loudly at this. He was used to Carol, and enjoyed her little outbursts. "I can't think what on earth made you imagine I'd want to propose to you," he said, shaking his head as though appalled at the idea.

Carol's eyes twinkled at that, but she did not permit him to see it. "Why shouldn't I think so? Didn't you get a new gray suit? And haven't I the best complexion in Mount Mark? Don't all the men want to propose to a complexion like mine?"

He laughed again, then he sobered. "Do you think Lark will—"

"I think Lark will turn you down," said Carol promptly, "and I hope she does. You aren't good enough for her. No one in the world is good enough for Lark except myself. If she should accept you—I don't think she will, but if she has a mental aberration and comes—I'll give you my blessing, and come and live with you six months in the year, and Lark shall come and live with me the other six months, and you can run the farm and send us an allowance. But I don't think she'll have you; I'll be disappointed in her if she does."

Carol was silent a moment then. She was remembering many things—

Lark's grave face that day in the parsonage when they had discussed the love of Jim, her unwonted gentleness and her quiet manners during this visit, and one night when Carol, suddenly awakening, had found her weeping bitterly into her pillow. Lark had said it was a headache, and was better now, and Carol had gone to sleep again, but she remembered now that Lark never had headaches! And she remembered how very often lately Lark had put her arms around her shoulders and looked searchingly into her face, and Lark was always wistful, too, of late! She sighed. Yes, she caught on at last, "had been pushed on to it," she thought angrily. She had been a wicked, blind, hateful little simpleton or she would have seen it long ago. But she said nothing of this to Jim.

"You'd better run along then and switch your proposal over to her, or I'm likely to accept you on my own account, just for a joke. And be sure and tell her I'm good and sore that I didn't get a chance to use my flowery rejection. But I'm almost sure she'll turn you down."

Then Carol stood in the path and watched Jim as he leaped lightly over fences and ran through the sweet meadow. She saw Lark spring to her feet and step out from the shade of an apple tree, and then Jim took her in his arms.

After that, Carol rushed into the house and up the stairs. She flung herself on her knees beside the bed and buried her face in the white spread.

"Lark," she whispered. "Lark!" She clenched her hands, and her shoulders shook. "My little twin," she cried again, "my nice old Lark." Then she got up and walked back and forth across the floor. Sometimes she spoke her fist. Sometimes a little crooked smile softened her lips. Once she stamped her foot, and then laughed at herself. For an hour she paced up and down. Then she turned on the light and went to the mirror, where she smoothed her hair and powdered her face as carefully as ever.

"It's just a good joke on me," she said, smiling, "but it's just as good a one on Mrs. Forrest. I think I'll go and have a laugh at her. And I'll pretend I knew it all along."

She found the woman lying in a hammock on the broad piazza where a broad shaft of light from the open door fell upon her. Carol stood beside her, smiling brightly.

"Mrs. Forrest," she said, "I know a perfectly delicious secret. Shall I tell you?"

The woman sat up, holding out her arms. Carol dropped on her knees beside her, smiling mischievously at the expression on her face.

"Cupid has been at work," she said softly, "and your own son has fallen a victim."

Mrs. Forrest sniffed slightly, but she looked lovingly at the fair, sweet face. "I am sure I cannot wonder," she answered in a gentle voice. "Is it all settled?"

"I suppose so. At any rate he is proposing to her in the orchard, and I am pretty sure she's going to accept him."

Mrs. Forrest's arms fell away from Carol's shoulders. "Lark!" she ejaculated.

"Yes—didn't you know it?" Carol's voice was mildly and innocently surprised.

"Lark!" Mrs. Forrest was plainly dumfounded. "I—I thought it was you!"

"Me!" Carol was intensely astonished. "Me? Oh, dear Mrs. Forrest, whatever in the world made you think that?"

"Why—I don't know," she faltered weakly, "I just naturally supposed it was you. I asked him once where he left his heart, and he said, 'At the parsonage, and so of course I thought it was you.'"

Carol laughed gayly. "What a joke," she cried. "But you are more fortunate than you expected, for it is my precious old Larkie. But don't be too glad about it, or you may hurt my feelings."

"Well, I am surprised, I confess, but I believe I like Lark as well as I do you, and of course Jim's the one to decide. People say Lark is more sensible than you are, but it takes a good bit of a man to get beyond a face as pretty as yours. I'm kind of proud of Jim!"

After Fairy's wedding Carol naturally felt lonely. They had been such constant companions that the parting was sorrowful for both. Carol's thoughts frequently dwelt on their days of mischief in the old parsonage before Prudence was married, remembering especially one April fool joke that was decidedly on the twins.

MARRIED FOR MONEY.

A novel and rapid way whereby to determine the age of an egg has been developed by M. Grossfeld, a French investigator. He has supplemented the usual method by one dependent on specific gravity, notes the Boston Transcript. The existing way whereby to determine the age of eggs is by candling them and taking note of the "mirage" which forms about the yolk. Mr. Grossfeld has determined that specific gravity of normal eggs in the way attributed to Archimedes, and there has been figured out the loss in gravity, for each week of keeping. For quick inspection of qualities of eggs he has devised a form of hydrometer. The egg takes the place of the weight ed bulb and the scale indicates the specific gravity and at the same time the age of the egg. A little cage has been arranged to hold the egg and is capable of quick handling. Big eggs and little eggs are subject to errors in the readings, but with eggs in the vicinity of 55 grammes the indication is instantaneous.

FARM POULTRY

RECORD FOR WINTER LAYING

Test at Ontario Experiment Station Would Tend to Show That Leghorns Are Best Layers.

The egg record at the Ontario experiment farm is 112 for Plymouth Rock, 120 for Leghorns, 98 for Minorcas. The Leghorns laid 32 of their eggs in December, January, February and March, when prices were highest. During the same months the Plymouth Rocks laid 17 eggs each and the Minorcas 18. This experience tends to show that Leghorns are best winter layers, as well as best year-round layers. The trial, however, is hardly conclusive because the total egg record was not a high one, which seems to indicate that none of the breeds were so cared for as to lay to their utmost capacity. A general impression prevails among poultry keepers that the medium-sized breeds are the best winter layers.

PRACTICAL HEN HINTS

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Keep the hens confined to your own land.

Don't keep a male bird. Hens lay just as well without a male. Don't overstock your land.

Purchase well-matured pullets rather than hens.

Don't expect success in hatching and raising chicks unless you have had some experience and have a grass plot separate from the yard for the hens.

Build a cheap house or shelter. Make the house dry and free from draft, but allow for ventilation. Fowls stand cold better than dampness.

Keep the house and yard clean.

Provide roosts and dropping boards.

Provide a nest for each four or five hens.

Grow some green crop in the yard.

Spade up the yard frequently.

Feed table scraps and kitchen waste.

Also feed grain once a day.

Feed a dry mash.

Keep hens free from lice and the house free from mites.

Kill and eat the hens in the fall as they begin to molt and cease to lay.

Preserve the surplus eggs produced during the spring and summer for use during the fall and winter when eggs are scarce and high in price.

INCREASE NUMBER OF FOWLS

Endeavor to Insure More Chickens and Eggs Is Contained in the Maxim—Hatch Early.

(From the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An essential part of the endeavor to insure more chickens and eggs is contained in the maxim—hatch early. The farmer who hatches early in the spring, either by incubation or natural methods, seems to have all the best of the argument. When chickens are hatched early in the spring they mature in the fall and lay eggs in the winter. Then, in the spring they are ready to hatch early. Late hatched fowls are late in maturing, do not lay in the winter, and do not sit until late in the following spring.

MAINTAIN POULTRY ON FARM

Fowls Will Pick Up Ninety Per Cent of Living From Scattered and Wasted Grain.

The larger the farm, the larger the flock, and such a flock should be maintained largely from economical reasons. Poultry will pick up 90 per cent of its living from scattered and wasted grain. They act as scavengers in consuming a large part of what would otherwise be lost. Poultry will prove valuable next summer in eating obnoxious bugs, grasshoppers, worms and insect pests, that otherwise would destroy food that is valuable.
