Holland, Texas .- Mr. J. N. Messer, who lives a short distance from here out in the country, says: "Black-Draught is without doubt the best liver medicine made. I do not hesitate to say it will do all it is recommended to do and more.

I am strong and healthy, but we all need a little active medicine once in a while, and Black-Draught is good enough for me. It does the work well and cleans the liver, carrying away bile, the easiest of any purgative I have ever seen. Once, some years ago, I had slow fever and my stomach was in a bad fix, and Black-Draught gave me relief and helped me a wonderful sight. It cured me of indigestion, and the bad Sheep feeling after eating. I keep it for my family, they use it and have for years, and too, it saves doctor bills and is not expensive.

ascendancy of the Hohenzollerns and the elevation of force and greed above the things of the mind and spirit Weimar faded into a background memory. Its selection by the new government as a seat for deliberation may serve to bring back to it some of its departed glory.

The beginning of Weimar's greatness came about 1756, when Anna Amalie, niece of Frederick the Great, went there as a bride of the duke. She summoned Weiland, poet and student, to act as tutor for her boys Three years later young Goethe went to Weimar. Others followed. Einsiedel, the poet, musician and actor; Bode, the translator of Smollett and Cervantes; Knebel, the classicist Corona Schroter, the brilliant and beautiful actress and singer; Herder, the preacher poet and father of German folk song, and finally Schiller, who eventually was to take rank with Goethe.

The names of Goethe and Schiller dominate Weimar. The former lived | in the town fifty-six years. He was all things to Weimar, the adviser of its rulers, architect of its chief structures, dictator of its thought, and finally its greatest and best loved memory. His house on the Goethe What a change today. A young woman and monuments of him occupy the is instructed how to run her car, but most prominent positions. Even his garden house has been preserved in reverent memory. An indication of the way in which Goethe was regarded in old Weimar is gleaned from an oft told incident. The poet coveted the house that later was to be his. Its owner would not sell to him, however. So Duke Karl August went forth one day and unceremoniously took charge of the house.

"But me no burts," he replied to the reluctant owner. "Goethe wants it and we must give it to him or we shall not keep him."

The thousands of letters the adoring Goethe wrote to Charlotte von Stein all are kept in the building that houses the Goethe and Schiller archives. For ten years he paid devoted coart to her, but she was the wife of another man and, although she valued the homage of this man, who was one of the handsomest and most distinguished in Europe, it is generally believed that she did not in any way return his affections. Carlyle's Tribute to Schiller.

Schiller's old home has been bought by the town and converted into a nuseum. His rooms are almost as he left them, the floors bare, the ceiling low and the furniture scanty, plain and almost primitive. Of this place Carlyle has written:

To have knowledge of a particular thing is simply to have come in contact with it in such a manner that one's feeling has been aroused about

We acquire knowledge largely by contemplation and meditation. But the thing we are learning about must impose itself upon us in such a way that we are forced to understand it through our feelings and not our minds.

There is nothing harder to overcome than ignorance. It must be beaten to a standstill. We have done this to the Huns. We must now conclude our moral contract by bringing them into contact with the right things.

Carriage Day and Motor Way.

A sight along Fifth avenue that used to draw a crowd years ago was the outdoor lesson of the fashionable girls' boarding schools in how to get in and out of a carriage, says New York

The performance was not without interest to oth ers who didn't have to be taught such not how to get in and out of it. Unhampered by the fear that she may show what were once known as limbs, the modern girl scrambles into her little roadster and is off and away before her grandmother could have adjusted her skirts prior to placing the proper foot in the proper way on the carriage step.

boys engaged in the sheep-club work are keeping their foundation animals and at the same time are adding to their stock,

Previous to 1918 there were but few boys and girls organized into sheep clubs under the supervision of the department of agriculture and the state agricultural colleges. With the high price of wool and mutton, the sheep project, however, has become increasingly popular. Last year 257 such clubs were organized with an enrollment of 3.613 members. During the year 8,005 lambs were raised by these young neople and 2,006 pounds of wool were marketed. The total value of the flocks at the end of the year was $131,173.40; the initial cost of the sheep, together with the expense of feeding them, was $37,082.82; the total profit made by the boys and girls who were members of the sheep clubs and who continued the work throughout the year was $94,090.58. The results the boys have been getting have opened the eyes of their fathers. The oys and girls in the sheep clubs are demonstrating in every state that sheep are profitable if well handled.

HUNT'S SALVE CURES IT!

BRED in the war trenches of Europe, a wave of ordh-nary ITCH is spreading over the Country. This skin disease, history shows, has always prevailed, following wars and the concentration of armies. It was common during the Civil War and following that conflict. There was an epidemic of the Itch after the Spanish-American War. Now history is repeating itself after the great European struggle.

War. Now history is repeating itself after the graft European struggle. Returned soldiers and those with whom they come it contact will find a recognized remedy for the ltch in Hunt's Salve, commonly known as "Hunt's Itch Cure." Many a veteran of the late '90's will testify to its merits. If directions are followed HUNT'S SALVE will prove a never failing cure for all forms of the Itch, and your druggist will tell you so. He sells HUNT'S SALVE under a strict guarantee to refund the purchase price to any dissatisfied user. A Medford, Oklahoma man, among thousands whe praise HUNT'S SALVE, says: "Some people dislike to call it the Itch, but candor compels me to admit remedies had totally failed. Farmers Forming Associations for Purpose of Introducing Bulls of Merit of Single Breed.

(Prepared by the United States Depart-ment of Agriculture.)

The co-operative bull association is an effective organization for freeing a community from the exasperating experience of the scrub bull that roams at large. There is scarcely a breeder who has not experienced keen disappointment and financial loss through unrestrained scrub bulls. In the territory covered by a co-operative bull association in one state only one scrub bull was found where, prior to the organization of the association, there had been 30 scrub bulls. The 30 scrubs have been replaced with five registered bulls. The organization of farmers into an association for the purpose of introducing bulls of merit of a single breed and the elimination of the scrub bull signifies that a definite plan for community herd improvement has been agreed upon.

There is at present a widespread interest on the part of individual farmers in herd improvement through the use of better sires. The winter season affords an opportune time to discuss the subject with one's neighbors and to perfect the organization of such an association. Farmers' Bulletin 993, "Co-operative Bull Associations." which may be secured through application to the United States department of agriculture, gives information regarding these associations and practical methods of forming one.

Proper feeding of balanced rations, elimination of unprofitable animals in the herd and increasing production by use of purebred dairy sires to produce Many a bride sweeps up the aisle better dairy heifers are the three imcost and increase the production of dairy products, says the dairy husbandry extension man at lowa State college.

> The easiest and most practical way of obtaining cows of better dairy qualities is to select carefully from the herd those cows which are found by record to be profitable producers and use on these a purebred dairy sire. If the profitable cows are selected, then the dairyman will be able to make a profit while he is building up a dairy herd.

It pays to select and breed better animals because it means more pay for the amount of labor and feed used and also an increased production of a food which is absolutely essential.

INDICATIONS OF GOOD COW

Best Dairy Animal Has Large Middle Body, Strong Constitution and Perfect Health.

The best dairy cow has a large middle body, a strong constitution and perfect health. A large udder and good sized teats, large milk wells and promment veins are indications of a good milker. There are many other points te be taken into consideration when breeding for results, but in addition to milk tests, if the cow is well-bodied and built for a milker, as may be judged from a common sense view, that ought to be sufficient evidence of dairy value.

Synopsis

ACT I. Morning at the Library. Sam's busy day. A movie actress in ordinary role. "Miss Avis won't be an old maid when she's a hundred." Burr warns Pearl against the fate of a spinster. The newlyweds exchange "greetings" by the way. "The Lady of the Library." The new preacher feels called to set a few things right. "Would you close the doors of knowledge to your four-footed brothers?" Burr declares himself and is met by a counter declaration. A startling insinuation. "God be merciful to all who are born women."

ACT II. Avis' guardians decide "She's too young." Sam takes the blame. "I'm the guy that put the sin in Cincinnati." The preacher interviews Pearl and Susanne appeals for religious instruction. Mrs. Edgeworth's accusation is met by opposition on all sides. If this was the Judgment Day and you were the Angel of Death itself, I could give no other answer." "I would stake my life on her honesty." The Judge is repulsed. "Lights out, Judge."

ACT III. Sam gets poetic through literary association. The preacher hears the story of Pearl's origin. Avis resigns her position. Judge finds the long lost child. Mrs. Edgeworth experiences a change of heart. The Judge reveals the mystery of the lost volume. Burr shares in the revelation. The newlyweds
