Lake That Disappears.

In Georgia, near Vladosta, there is a lake which disappears every three or four years and then comes back again, no matter what the weather is like. The lake is three miles long and three-quarters of a mile wide, with an average depth of 12 feet of water. There are patural subterranean passages beneath it, through which the water passes off. It takes two or three weeks to disappear, when a mammoth basin is left in its place, which furnishes a beautiful sandy beach. Sylvia was a girl of high Ideals and "new thought." Her mind was always struggling with beautiful thoughts and philosophy, though it must be confessed right here that although Sylvia's tastes lay that way, her mind was not equal to it. That was the bugbear of poor Sylvia's life. She would just sit back and gasp and hold her head when Madge let loose some of her new versions of the English language. The others said Madge was original, but Sylvia could see no other interpretation of such a manner of speech but commonness and utter lack of propriety.

It would not have been so bad, Sylvia thought, if Madge had confined her slang to use among her associates, but when she persisted in using it even in the presence of the manager and the president of the firm, that about capped the climax as far as Sylvia was concerned. What did it matter if Madge could express herself better than any other girl in the office just by resorting to slang? Even when Madge was the means of securing an was from her he caught his habit of using slang, Sylvia felt sure. That was another reason for disliking the girl. One who disliked the favorite of the office could not hope to be popular, so Sylvia had to content herself with reading the books of J. Lincoln Treathway on philosophical subjects. Of course, she did not understand them, but there was some consolution in dreaming about J. Lincoln and admiring his handsome face as it was pictured on the flyleaf. There was a real man-a man who found the fine things of life and who loathed the low and the barbarous.

How her heart beat one day as she was in the private office of the manager taking dictation and she realized that the visitor who entered was no other than J. Lincoln Treathway.

Unmindful of her the manager jumped from his chair and ran forward with a hand of welcome extended. "Congratulations, Lincoln, old boy.

Miss Wilson is the finest girl in my employ, and I know she will make you happy. She has told me all about it." "Isn't she wonderful?" Lincoln exclaimed enthusiastically. "Why, she just seems to have been made for me. Her happy-go-lucky nature and bright take me out of myself. Did you ever hear anything so original as her slang?

For a long, long time after she had retreated from the private office Sylvia sat down and thought it over. The realization that her views had been narrow suddenly dawned upon her. Making life worth while and enjoying it to the utmost was what counted, after all. She had ruined her own happiness was. Slowly the tears started down her cheeks.

"Sylvia !" It was Dick. They were alone in the office and there was a note of sympathy in his tone that seemed to draw her to him.

MRS. INDIAN ELEPHANT

Mrs. Indian Elephant performed many fine tricks. She was a great favorite in the zoo and the children used to come and see her. Then she would do her fine tricks and the children would give her peanuts. They would give her as many as the keeper said she could have.

They didn't give any that the keeper said not to, for he knew if the elephants had had visitors earlier in the day who had been feeding them. And he knew how much elephants should eat and what they shouldn't eat.

As the children didn't want to make the elephants sick they used to ask the keeper if they could have anything to eat that day.

Mrs. Indian Elephant had once been in a circus and the other zoo elephants had not.

She used to tell the other elephants the story of her circus days, how she would go from town to town and how she would lead great parades. She would describe the beautiful lady who rode on her back in the parade for the town and the parade for the cir cus.

She would tell how she used to lie down and wave flags and how she could pick up the circus man and carry him about. She used to tell the other zoo animals how the people clapped, how the boys and girls would scream with delight.

She had seen so many. many children, more than even came to the zoo. "And it was funny," she used to say, 'but I would think to myself, 'Now in this town we're coming to surely there will be no children.'

"But there always were children, in every single town. Yes, friends," Mrs. Elephant would say, "I have never been in a town where there are no children. I imagine a town must be very, very rare that has no children, and I don't believe there is such a place.

"It wouldn't be a place worth visit ing. I know that much. Why, no one would want to perform in a circus if children weren't there, for children know enough to appreciate a circus. and while grown-ups may, too-well, they don't like to laugh right out loud just as hard as children do."

But one day Mrs. Indian Elephant felt quite sad. She had been thinking of something else and though later on she cheered up and forgot about it I must tell you what she said.

"It does seem a pity," she said sadly. "What seems a plty?" the others extra twenty-dollar bonus for the staff Sylvia could find no excuse for her. The incident is worth relating.

For two weeks every stenographer in the employ of Ellis & Co. worked nights to finish some special work. Of course a promised bonus was looked forward to-anywhere from thirty to a hundred dollars was figured on by every girl. Picture their disappointment when the bonus turned out to be a paltry ten dollars each. Every girl (Sylvia included), excepting Madge, got angry and mumbled to themselves about the unfairness of the thing.

Not so Madge. The minute she discovered the extra ten dollars in her pay envelope she was back to the cash-Jer, and said, in a tone loud enuogh for the manager and president to hear:

"Well, some people are so mean they would sing through their nose to save the wear and tear on-their false teeth. Now, Mr. Ventilator," (the cashier's name was Vanslater, but Madge had persisted in nicknaming him from the first), "do you think this a fair bonus? Or." she added, "perhaps the firmis giving us our bonus in installments."

Madge was never impudent. Slang from her lips to the ears of anybody but Sylvia sounded perfectly all right. She was gifted with a personality that could almost have put across profanity.

Before Mr. Vanslater could volunteer an answer to her surprising question, the manager had come from his office.

"You are quite right, Miss Wilson," he apologized. "There was a mistake this week. An additional twenty dollars will be included in the envelopes next payday."

"How eucyliptis of you!" It was a senseless expression, but isn't all slang senseless? And then the way Madge said it, it expressed a whole lot.

Sylvia just gasped, while the others longed to applaud. Every one of them knew that such an outburst from any one of them would have won instant dismissal, but with the exception of Sylvia they realized that Madge's personality counted more with the firm and somehow her slang seemed to make up part of that personality.

Poor Sylviant It was bad enough to have to work with a girl that used their fellow-citizens, who have taken slang in about every fifth sentence without having a man who used slang in love with her. Dick Levery's slang was not original-it was just ordinary gosh-ding-blished slang that did more to irritate the object of his affections than all the boxes of candy and confessions of devotion could ever do to pacify her.

At first Sylvia believed she cared for Dick, but finally when she found all her admonitions against the use of common and, to her, vulgar expressions were in vain, she refused to have anything further to do with him. Madge she blamed for the whole thing. Dick worked in the office and thought Madge was too wonderful for anything. It ' record."

This does not mean that an older man or woman is not sincere, but undoubtedly experience has taught them that the love they have won must be constantly oiled with sweet words if the desire is to keep it. To a certain extent they are "playing a part," while the love of youth is spontaneous.

A girl does not analyze her love for the boy nor his for her. She has perfect faith and yields willingly to the loved one's authority. The love of older folk is hedged in by reservations and it cannot stand the test of marriage so well.

True love need not be blind, but it should not keep its eyes too wide open, nor should it do too much reasoning, or it may be killed .- New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Our "Ain" Home Folk.

If we hope to find life worth while we must make the best of existing conditions and of the persons around us. Some of them may be neither overclever por brilliant, but if we find them thoughtful and considerate they are worthy of our highest regard. Of course, it is very pleasing to be "taken up" by "really smart" folk, but sometimes this prestige lives only for a day, and then those persons go their way, completely forgetting us and our strenuous efforts to entertain them. Happiness, like the blue bird of fable, is oftenest found at home among our "ain" home folks.

SOME UNFULFILLED PROPH-ECIES

The careful reader has observed that while the Bible clearly teaches the ever imminence of Christ's second coming, yet his coming waits on the fulfilment of certain prophecies, or inspired statements. Certain conditions are to obtain when our Lord re turns to this earth, and it is the sacred duty of every Christian to have a worthy part in bringing about these conditions

Noticing some of the unfalfilled prophecies, we mention

World Evangelism.

"And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in the whole world for a testimony unto all the nations and then shall the end come." Matthew 24:14.

"And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to the whole creation." Mark 16-15.

"And ye shall be my witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and unto the uttermost part of the earth." Acts 1-8.

And unless a comparatively few instead of the many in each of the nations are to be blessed with gospal privileges the task is still a tremendous one; one which re quires the expenditure of uncounted millions in money, and the willing sacrifice of other mil ions of lives! In China, we are told, of the more than 400,000,000 souls, many millions have never heard the name of Christ! At the present rate of evangelization China alone will furnish employ. quent; and certainly no more elo ment for all our forces for yet quent strain occurs in all litera many years, and those who con. ture. Heb. 10:11-13.

These five scriptures clearly and unmistakably teach that Christ is now in heaven, at the Father's right hand, and, as our great Hish Priest, or Mediator he is to remain there, continuing his blessed work, "Till his ene nies be made the footstool of his fect." "Brethren, I may ssy unto you freely of the patriarch David, that he both died and was buried, and his tomb is with us unto this day. Being therefore a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins he would set one upon his throne; he foreseeing this spake of the resurrection of the Christ, that neither was he left unto Hades, nor did his flesh see corruption. This Jesus did God raise up, whereof we are all witnesses. Being therefore by the right hand of God exalted, and having received of the Father the promise of the Holy Spirit he hath poured forth this which ye see and hear. The Universal Triumph of God's Kingdom "And in the days of those kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed, nor shall the sovereignty thereof be left to another people; but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever." Daniel 2:44.

Daniel was desired to recall and to interpret a dream in which Nebuchadnezzar has seen a great image. The head was of fine gold; the arms and the breast were of silver; the belly and the thighs were of brass; the legs were of iron, while the feet were part of iron and part of clay. In Daniel's interpretation. the gold was referrel to the Babylonian Empire as represented by Nebu chadnezzar; the silver, the brass, the iron, and the iron mixed with clay, were referred to other governments which should successively arise, decay, and pass away. It is universally agreed that the figure found its fulfilment in the passing away of the Babylonian Empire; the rise and fall of the Medo Persian Empire; the rise and fall of the Macedon ian Empire; and the rise, the di vision and the disintegration of the Roman Empire. ' The prophecy is that during the reign of of those kings, that is, those who should rule during the decadence of the Roman Empire. "the God of heaven" would establish "a kingdom which should never be destroyed," etc. True to this prophecy, and as history also re lates, our Lord was born, lived, wrought, was crucified, buried,

It gives him a standing forthwith, not so much as a person of some financial importance, but as a dependable, substantial and self-respecting citizen, wisely regardful of his own and his family's happiness and best interests. and at the same time an asset to the neighborhood in which he lives. So universal is the home-loving instinct that it might almost be said there is something wrong morally with the man or woman who does not care to own a home; and that is why the malcontents, the habitual industrial disturbers and the socially restive that inflict themselves on all countries are of the element that is very largely with > out home ties. Unless all signs fail, this is to be the great American home-building year. Stimulated by the government's urgent advice to "own a home for your children's sake," and by the injunction that during the war it was patriotic not to build, now we can best show our patriotism by building, there has been a tremendous revival in the sentiment for home ownership. The indications are that the unhappy classes of renters and boarders will be greatly depleted before the end of 1919, and that there will be many thousands of additional families entered upon the life of happiness and contentment to be found only in the home.

The price of building materials today is not high, as compared with prices of other commodities, and the community that does not add materially to its total of homes this year is likely to be rated as lacking in patriotism as well as good business judgment.

THE HEDLEY INFORMER

INTEREST IN ROADS GROWS More Attention Now Given to Improvement in Highways Than Ever Before in History.

The good roads movement is seeing a big revival now that business is becoming normal. The most important program that has recently come to our attention is that of the state favor of a $50,000,000 program that, when carried out, will place Michigan on the map big so far as good roads are concerned, writes Birkett L. Wilmotorcar corporation.

Everywhere else you see also more interest in good roads than in any period in our history. It is true to say that the war and its needs taught us the value of good roads. Perhaps it did. Perhaps it brought home to those dull ears of higher ups the supreme importance of an intelligent system of navigable highways. But more and more it comes home to the man who studies the situation that back of the good roads movement must be the ordinary man, the average man who pays taxes and votes and thinks as he vctes.

The farmer or rural dweller in certain sections for a long time stood in the way-he wanted the roads, but he didn't want to pay for them. He did not realize that in the long run good roads pay for themselves out of savings made to the community in haulage of people and merchandise. But the farmer today is reckoning in units of time.

Yes, he realizes the value of minutes throughout the season-and he is just as keen in conserving time as the city-bred man who operates a big factory; if anything, he is a bit keener, for seasons do not wait and crops must be sowed and cultivated, reaped and marketed at the right time. He has convinced himself that time is money. And he knows that good roads save time and that they save time largely because they make it possible to get satisfactory services from motorcars and motortrucks. And he is not one bit blind to the fact that operating cost is largely influenced by road conditions-that good roads make gasoline proper food is in the retrained nurse should be well equipped in knowledge of food values and how to prepare a temoting tray, yet it is not always possible to have a trained nurse, and the mother in the home will need this knowledge.

A person who is ill in bed is out of balance, both mentally and physically, and it is wise to treat them with as much consideration as one does a child. Variety even in the serving of milk is important. Surprises are important to remember in the serving of food for grown-ups as well as for children.

The tway should be arranged to please the eye first, then the palate. A rose, or a small flower beside the plate or in a small vase will often make eating a pleasure what would otherwise be refused or eaten under protest.

With little people many kinds of grmes will be thought of by the nurse to amuse and distract attention when the appetite is poor.

Children need whole wheat. Other cereals may be used for "ariety. They need fat, particularly butterfat, which contains the wonderful substance which promotes growth. They should have sugar in moderate quantities and an abundance of fruit and fresh vegetables, especially those like spinach chard and lettuce, for in them also is this life-promoting principle found in milk, butter and cream.

Another food that a well-nourished child should have is the egg. of good roads to any one individual. Therefore, the farmer is now back of road improvement.

Does the city man feel any interest in good roads? Ask your neighbor. If he doesn't own an automobile he expects to own one, and he knows all about where the good roads are and what they mean. But when his influence counts big, the greatest impetus has naturally sprung from the numerous army of motorcar owners to whom motorcar ownership has made the territory for miles around his neighborhood.

Counties and states where good roads have become a steady part of a progressive program of legislation have seen values shoot up in the most surprising fashion, and this, again, has brought home the fact that good roads pay for themselves. Thus it is natural that the years 1919 and 1920 will see the most stupendous good roads programs inaugurated in America that the world has ever known. This will result in the wider utility of motorcars and motortrucks and, of course, prove a big aid to the solution of the freight traffic problem.

The contract has already been let for the Hedley elevator, which will be located across the ed Right Now, and in the Right track, near the cotton yard, and Way, if you send them them to the contractors, Burrell Engineering Co. of Kansas City, have agreed to have it finished by Sept. 20th. It will be a strictly modern plant in every particu lar, and the firm is one of ample means, enjoying first rate connections in all the grain trading and shipping centers.

This fills a long felt want in Hedley. Not only will it insure for us a steady and sure top price market, but it will eliminate the waste of "handling the grain on the ground" as heretofore. This waste loss has been considerable and the farmer has been compelled to stand for it.

Capt. and Mrs. Perrise and baby arrived in Hedley the past week and are located temporari ly in the W. E. Reeves residence recently vacated by the Mack White family. Later on they King Barber the false impression that they will build on a site already se lected for that purpose.

Tom Bain and J. L. Allison were among the Clarendon visitors to Hedley the past week.

Service Always. Carlton Chapman returned the past week from a visit to his Agent Panhandle brother and old friends as Tyler.
