TWO POPULAR COUPLES MARRIED IN HEDLEY

Sunday, Sept. 7th, at 3 o'clock p. m., G. O. Wood, minister for the Church of Christ, united in marriage Miss Nola Muncie and Mr. J. R. Bain, the wedding being solemnized at the home of the bride's parents.

Mrs. Bain is the charming daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Muncie, who are among Hedley's best citizens. She is a good, Christian girl and is loved by all who know her.

Mr. Bain is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Bain, former prominent Hedley citizens who now live at Clarendon. He is well known and esteemed by our people, being a young man of ability and good character.

The Informer extends felicitations and wishes them much joy and long life.

At the home of the bride's parents, Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Mr. Luke Hart and Miss Jewell Brinson were united in the holy bonds of wedlock, Rev. J. M. Mizell officiating.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Brinson, a lovely and accomplished young lady who numbers her friends by her acquaintances.

The groom is the son of Mrs. T. A. Hart, and is highly esteemed for his industry and integrity.

They start life's journey together with the very best wishes of a host of friends, in which good wishes the Informer most heartily concurs.

FURIT PACKING DEMONSTRATION NEXT SATURDAY

Saturday (tomorrow) afternoon at 1 o'clock, in the basement of the Methodist church, Mrs. Chitwood will give a demonstration in Fancy Packing of Fruits and Vegetables for the purpose of exhibiting at both County and State Fairs.

All who are interested in this demonstration will please be on hand with tomatoes, both green and ripe, peaches and pears, as these will be the principal things used in this demonstration.

All Club members are requested to attend, especially those interested in competing for the free trip to the Dallas Fair.

WORK IS RESUMED ON HEDLEY ELEVATOR

Several cars of material, the lack of which has held up construction work on the Perrine Field elevator for many days, arrived one day the past week and everybody connected with it is now "hittin' the ball."

Maximum effort will be put forth to have the elevator up and ready for business at the earliest possible time.

As we have stated before, this enterprise has long been needed in Hedley and its acquisition marks a long step forward. And it is the forerunner of many such steps in the not distant future. Mark our words.

"Watch Hedley grow."

NOTICE!

To the Stockholders of the Guaranty State Bank of Hedley, Texas:

Pursuant to a petition presented to the Directors of the Guaranty State Bank of Hedley, Texas, by stockholders of said bank, a meeting is called for September 15th, 1919, to decide whether or not the capital stock of said bank shall be raised to $25,000.00. Guaranty State Bank.

SERIES OF MEETINGS AT CHURCH OF CHRIST

Elder John W. Denton, one of the strongest evangelists in Texas, is conducting a series of meetings for the Church of Christ in Hedley.

His sermons are strong and logical; in fact, he is a real power in the pulpit. The fact that he is plain and honest in his manner makes him interesting.

The crowds are something out of the ordinary for Hedley. The large house will not accommodate the people who listen with eagerness to the wonderful power of the gospel preached by Bro. Denton.

Elder Alva Johnson from Turkey has been visiting the meeting in Hedley. Mr. Johnson is one Turkey's best business men, and is minister for the Church of Christ in Memphis.

Elder Riley of Plymouth, Texas, attended the meeting here Tuesday.

Elder Kercheville of Lelia Lake is attending the Christian meeting.

I HAVE FOR SALE, or trade, a good six octave Organ. Apply at the O. K. TAILOR SHOP.

Frank M. Clark has at last put his big steam syrup mill in operation, and expects to make thousands of gallons of pure, high quality syrup.

Furr Grocery Co.

A. N. Wood has moved his family to the J. P. Johnson residence in east Hedley, which he recently bought. He sold his home in south Hedley to J. W. Reeves, and the Reeves family is now occupying it.

Among the visitors in Clarendon first of the week were J. W. Noel and family, W. A. Armstrong, Orbie Adamson, Bell brothers, J. M. Whittington.

HATS THAT AWAIT AUTUMN

The time will soon be here for those exciting and fascinating excursions to the millinery shop in search of new millinery, of which much is expected. The old millinery axiom that a hat is becoming when one looks better with it on than without it, is a good thing to bear in mind. At the very least we expect hats, like mirrors, to "be to our faults a little blind, and to our virtues not unkind." Just how much the right shape and the right colors can do to transform a face, is measured often by the long price which a small bit of millinery commands. It is the intangible in millinery that is worth more than anything else—the color harmony, the beautifully balanced lines, the poise of the hat on the head and its appropriateness, that are worth more than mere material.

No one understands this quite so well as the woman who has reached middle life, or passed it. She expects her hats to do much for her in the way of enhancing her good points, and designers who specialize successfully in headwear for matrons turn fabrics into gold. One of their promising new models is shown at the right of the group of three hats pictured above.

It is made of black satin and the top of the crown is soft. Narrow, looped silk fringe, very brilliantly black, makes a wide irregular band about the crown and there is a narrow brim with lines that flow in easy curves about the head. The hat at the left, for a girl of ten or more, makes a picture on the head that boasts soft curls. Its crown is of felt in sections joined in seams that are outlined with stitches of wool yarn and the rolling brim is also of yarn, apparently crocheted into shape. At the base of each seam in the crown a pair of port little leaves support a diminutive apple. Almost any little girl will look well in this picturesque hat.

The hat at the bottom of the picture, made for a young woman, is a dressy affair of silver tissue with an odd trimming twining about the crown. The trimming is likely to be made of twisted ribbon with a fancy edge, but might be of silver tissue or georgette. The maker of trimmings is no respecter of fabrics, taking anything that is within reach and fashioning it into something new and strange and nearly always beautiful.

AMERICAN MADE UNDERMUSLINS

Recently American manufacturers of underwear have thought so well of their achievements that they have proclaimed themselves as the designers of the styles now favored in lingerie. They certainly are justified in taking pride in the daintiness and attractiveness of the garments they make in such quantities and they find it easy to cultivate a taste for fine undermuslins. American women are appreciative, but they are also practical and they demand pretty but not too fragile garments. Few of them run to the extreme of wearing chiffon or georgette in undies, or care for bizarre designing. In the main they like fine weaves in cotton or crepe de chine for materials, not too much trimmed with fine and durable laces, hand embroidery and other needlework. Hand crocheted in laces holds its own with them, and has everything to recommend it.

Of course not much handwork is to be found on manufactured undermuslins, but machinery has been made to do wonderful work and sometimes so effectively that comparisons with handwork are not by any means odious to the machine-made garment. Sometimes the plain sewing on undermuslins is done by machinery and the decoration by hand. But however they may be put together and finished, the styles are about the same in undergarments.

Three popular pieces are shown in the group above, a combination, a nightdress and a pair of pajamas. The combination is of batiste, having

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE ELVES' RIDE

"Fly-High, the bird of the Elves," said Daddy, "wanted to take the Elves for a ride. 'I haven't taken you in ever and ever so long,' said Fly-High. 'My back fairly aches to take you riding. My broad wings long for some little Elves to sit upon them.' 'We'd love to go,' said the Elves, 'and where will you take us, Fly-High?' 'I thought it might be nice,' said Fly-High, 'to have a complete change.' 'Where will we go?' asked the Elves again. 'We'll ride along a country road, early, early in the morning before the people come out to ride and walk.' 'That sounds nice,' said the Elves. 'And we will talk to the Lovers by the roadsides,' said Fly-High. 'We will see what the children see when they go walking and riding through the country. We will enjoy what they enjoy and then we will feel as though we were better friends than ever with the children.' 'Don't you think that will make a nice change?' asked Fly-High. 'We do, we do, indeed,' said the Elves. 'So they all jumped upon the great broad wings of Fly-High for it was then early, early in the morning. 'And we shouldn't delay a moment,' Fly-High had said. 'So off they started, and took a lovely trip, along a country road. 'Fly-High kept very close to the road. He was hardly up any distance at all for they wanted to talk to the

"Hello, Daisies." flowers and say good-morning to the Dew Fairies, and to smile to Mr. Sun as he got up for the day. 'How-do-you, Painter's Brush,' they said to the Painter's brush flowers. They're red, you know. 'Good-morning, Buttercups. We're so glad to see you. Are you going to stay much longer? We do hope so.' 'Not much longer,' said the Buttercups. 'Most of our family have gone already. We've stayed a little longer.' 'Oh, we're sorry you're going, Buttercups,' the Elves said. 'We'll be back next year, the same as usual,' said the Buttercups. 'That makes us happy,' said the Elves. 'We'd be quite heart-broken if our friends, the different flowers, didn't come to visit the earth each year.' 'We'll come, Elves, never fear said the Buttercups, as they smiled so brightly. 'Hello, Daisies,' said the Elves 'You're good friends, good friends.' 'The daisies smiled and bowed. 'So glad you think so, Elves, and the children like us, too! 'Of course they do,' said the Elves. 'Children are sensible.' 'The daisies smiled at the nice compliment. 'Hello, Milk-Weeds,' said the Elves, 'Hello, hello.' 'Then as they went along they came to a tiny babbling brook. There were growing by the banks of the brook little blue forget-me-nots. 'Ah, our dear, dear friends, the forget-me-nots,' said the Elves. 'Our dear friends, the Elves,' said the forget-me-nots, their little blue faces smiling such adorable little smiles. 'And there are our good friends the black-eyed Susans, or would you rather be called Ox-Eyed Daisies?' 'We don't mind at all,' they said 'We like both names.' 'Good-morning, pretty green ferns, they said, as they passed some woods. 'How sweet they always are,' added Fly-High. 'Good, good-morning, fields of grain,' they said. 'And so they went on, saying a good-morning to all the flowers they passed, and they told little stories to each other when they had time. The flowers told the Elves how the children had enjoyed them, and how they would be picked to decorate houses and the Elves told the flowers some lovely fairy stories.'

Wanted to See to Sleep. Little Maria had been taken up stairs to bed. Her prayers had been said, but the child seemed restless and clung to her mother as long as possible. THE KITCHEN CABINET

Whatever channel the mind sets itself in, the life will follow: for it is invariably true that life always follows the thought.—Trine.

HELPFUL HINTS.

To the average cook with little imagination and less ingenuity a bowl of chicken broth, a half-dozen cold boiled potatoes, a cupful of tomato, a wedge of cheese will appear like "the primrose upon the river's brim, a simple primrose. It was to him, and it was nothing more." It is neither possible nor is it wise to carry a large number of recipes or proportions of ingredients in one's mind, but the efficient woman will have a card index, a notebook or a chart on which she notes the possibilities of various small amounts of materials which in other homes are thrown out, left to spoil or are used carelessly in foods so that their charm of flavor is lost.

The pleasant thing about this system is that it is always growing, new dishes will occur to one and the list will grow. Then when going to the few chest and finding a bowl of chicken broth, visions of all the savory dishes which may be seasoned with that savory food will be realized in some good dish, as it takes but a moment to turn to the recipe.

Another helpful convenience of the card catalogue idea is to have the system carried out in other ways in the household. Under linens put cards labeled "bed linen," on the card numbers of sheets, pillowcases, size and where they are. This is not only a convenience when absent to pass on, but in case of fire loss to give a correct inventory.

Attached to the medicine chest should be a card always where it can be found at once, especially where there are many little people, giving first aids in case of accident and antidotes for common poisons. The older children should be taught how to use this knowledge, as often lives are lost because nobody knew what to do quickly. It is a frequently noted fact that the people who know what to do or where to go to find out, rarely take time to go into hysterics in an emergency; they are too busy doing things. Start a card catalogue house and see what a pleasure it is to be methodical. It is not necessary to have an expensive filing cabinet.

We invite what we fear, the same as by different attitude of mind we invite and attract the influences and conditions we desire.—R. W. Trine.

SUMMER SALAD WITH DRESSINGS

We all enjoy something different in salads and the ingenious cook is ever combining new materials to make appetizing dishes.

Virginia Salad.—Cut cold cooked potato in cubes, using one and a half cupfuls, add one cooked cauliflower flower cut in flowerettes and three tomatoes cut in quarters. Marinate each of these vegetables separately in French dressing, using four tablespoonfuls of olive oil and two of tarragon vinegar, three-fourths of a teaspoonful of pepper sauce and half a teaspoonful of salt. Cut one and one-half cupfuls of chicken in cubes, three hard-cooked eggs cut in small pieces and mix with the marinated potato, with mayonnaise seasoned with catsup. Place the chicken mixture in the center of the dish, cover with tomato mayonnaise and garnish with cauliflower and lettuce with one tomato arranged alternately. Decorate with one hard-cooked egg, cut in eighths, and nasturtium seeds.

Tomato Jelly Salad.—Take two cupfuls of tomato juice, either fresh or canned; to it add one-fourth cupful of mild vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of gelatin, a tablespoonful of sugar, bit of celery, leaves from two stalks of celery, two slices of onion and one and one-half tablespoonfuls of lemon juice. Stir and cook over heat until the gelatin is dissolved, then strain. Set jelly in crushed ice and when it begins to stiffen, add fresh raw dandelion leaves cut in bits. Mold the jelly; when firm turn out on a platter and garnish with cooked egg, green pepper and scallions which have been cut in pieces and fringed at each end, then put into ice water to curl. Cabbage may be used instead of dandelion leaves.

Joe's Dressing.—Take one teaspoonful each of salt and mustard, two teaspoonfuls of sugar, a dash of cayenne, a whole egg, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour, two tablespoonfuls of corn oil, half a cupful of evaporated milk, one-fourth cupful each of vinegar and water. Mix the dry ingredients and then cook all together in a double boiler.

Hot Salmon With Egg Sauce.—Set the can of salmon in a saucepan of boiling water and cook for half an hour. Cut the can close; drain off the liquid and turn out the fish in a solid piece on a hot dish. Surround with well seasoned buttered peas, and serve with an egg sauce. This is a rich white sauce, using some of the liquid from the can and milk, then add one hard-cooked egg mashed, and put through a sieve. Garnish with parsley.

LEAGUE CERTAIN WILSON DECLARES

PRESIDENT IN OPENING SPEECHES OF TOUR VOICES HIGH HOPE.

"WORLD WAITS FOR US"

"Future Free From War if America Carries Out Her Pledges," Says Executive.

By Mount Clemens News Bureau.

Displaying a high confidence that his fellow citizens in the great majority agree with him in his desire to end war forever, and that they will see to it that the peace treaty with its league of nations inclusion is ratified by the senate, President Wilson is making a successful journey across the country on the mission he has undertaken for the purpose of laying before the plain people a report of his work in Paris and explaining what the league means.

Thus far in his travels, he has everywhere met with warm greetings, both in the great halls where he has spoken formally and in the little cross roads hamlets where his train has halted at times, and he has exchanged words with the villagers who pressed forward to greet him. He feels, and does not hesitate to say so, when chatting with his traveling companions, that the American people want no more of war and want to become part of the league so that there may be no more war.

He struck his keynote when he said in his first address in Columbus, Ohio: "The treaty was not intended merely to end this single war; it is meant as a notice to every government who, in the future will attempt this thing (what Germany attempted) that mankind will unite to inflict the same punishment. There is no national triumph to be recorded in this treaty. There is no glory sought for any particular nation. The thought of the statesmen collected around that table was of their people, of the suffering they had gone through; of the losses they had incurred; of that great throbbing heart which is so depressed, so forlorn, so sad in every memory it has of the five tragical years that have gone by. Let us never forget those years, my fellow countrymen. Let us never forget the purpose, high and disinterested, with which America lent its strength, not for its own glory, but for the defense of mankind.

"As I said, this treaty was not intended merely to end this war. It was intended to prevent any similar war. I wonder if some of the opponents of the league of nations have forgotten the promises we made our people before we went to that peace table? We had taken by processes of law the flower of our youth from every countryside, from every household and we to-d those mothers and fathers and sisters and wives and sweethearts that we were taking those men to fight a war which would end business of that sort, and if we do not end it, if we do not do the best that human concert of action can do to end it, we are of all men the most unfaithful—the most unfaithful to the loving hearts who suffered in this war; the most unfaithful to those households bowed in grief and yet lifted with the feeling that the lad laid down his life for a great thing, and, among other things, in order that other lads might never have to do the same thing.

"That is what the league of nations is for—to end this war justly, and then not merely to serve notice on governments which would contemplate the same thing; Germany contemplated, that they will do so at their peril, but also concerning the combination of power which will prove to them that they will do it at their peril it is safe to say that the world will combine against you, but it is persuasive to say the world is combined against you. The league of nations is the only thing that can prevent the recurrence of this dreadful catastrophe and redeem our promise."

A league of nations would have prevented the late conflict, the president asserted, exclaiming, "I did not meet a single public man who did not admit these things; that Germany would not have gone into this war if she thought Great Britain was going into it, and that she most certainly would never have gone into it had she dreamed America was going into it. And they all admit that a notice be on hand that the greatest powers of the world combined to prevent this sort of thing would prevent it also utterly."

Applause and cheers greeted each declaration of the president that war might be avoided in future by the operation of the league.

He pointed out other important features of the peace treaty. How it was the redemption of weak nation in giving them freedom which other wise they never could have won; how it says "those people have a right to live their own lives under governments which they themselves choose; and how "that is the American principle, and I was glad to fight for it. That was the very heart of the treaty he said.

He drew attention to the section of the treaty which is "magna charta of labor" which shall dispose of the hours, conditions and remuneration of labor. "It forecasts the day," he said, "which ought to have come long ago, when statesmen will realize that no nation is fortunate which is not happy; whose people are not contented in their lives and fortunate in the circumstances of their lives."

"In conclusion, the president said he felt certain the treaty will be accepted, and was only impatient of the delay in waiting on America. "The only country in the world that is trusted today is the United States, and the world is waiting to see if its trust is justified."

Mr. Wilson's Indianapolis speech was like the one at Columbus, an explanation of the league, an appeal for its ratification, and a prediction that it was sure to come into being.

TO MY FRIENDS

I have sold my retail grain and coal business to W. P. Dial of Memphis, who will discontinue same. I want to thank the people for their liberal patronage and assure them of my hearty appreciation thereof.

I will be in the market for your grain and cotton this fall.

Reed Sanford has returned to Hedley after more than two years of strenuous service in the U. S. Army, much of that time having been spent in foreign lands. He was in the Field Hospital division, and did valiant service. Although we are rather late in doing so, we welcome him home.

Robert Davis returned Saturday from overseas service, and is now at the home of his parents Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Davis, in the Bray community. Robert was taken almost immediately from his home to the battlefields in France, and had many exciting experiences. We're glad to see him back.

Mrs. J. M. Myers and daughter, Miss Grace, returned last week from a visit to relatives in Burkburnett, Fort Worth, Wichita Falls and other points.

J. M. Calhoun came in the past week from San Antonio. He tells us that feed crops are good down there, but worms and weevils have badly damaged cotton.

What Shall be Done With Mexico?

"PANCHO" VILLA

CITY OF MEXICO

PRESIDENT CARRANZA

GEN. FELIPE ANGELES

WHAT shall be done with Mexico? Nobody seems to be ready with a complete program, but everybody seems of the opinion that something must be done and done soon.

In this age of the world civilization cannot afford to let a country like Mexico—one of the garden spots and natural storehouses of earth—continue out of the line of march. It must join the procession and must keep up with the procession.

So it is evident, aside from the question of the killing of American and British citizens and other nationals—human life appears to be cheap these days—that financial matters and economic questions will force action by the United States and the allies against Mexico, the outlaw nation.

It is no exaggeration to say that for months no other international problem, not connected with the proceedings at Paris, has been so fully discussed as the Mexican question, and apparently sentiment in this country and abroad is rapidly crystallizing.

The exclusion of Mexico from the League of Nations was based on the ground that Mexico had been unable to give proof of intention to observe international obligations. Mexico has failed to observe these obligations in these ways:

Mexico's neutrality was more than tinged with German bias.

Mexico has made no attempt to meet her foreign debt obligations.

Mexico shows increasing inability to afford protection to the lives and property of foreigners and nationals also.

Mexico has given evidence of a studied and systematic attempt to put through schemes which would result in the confiscation of foreign property, the most glaring example of which is the case of the oil companies, although the express and railway companies' interests are in almost as great danger.

It is no secret in Washington that renewed representations on the Mexican situation are being made to the American government by Great Britain and France. For several months these countries have been urging upon the United States the desirability of putting Mexico on its feet so that it might resume the payment on national and other debts and afford adequate protection to foreign lives and property.

British citizens are holders of a considerable amount of Mexican bonds, both national and railway, while the French have extensive investments in the banks, which it has been charged were looted by the government under the guise of obtaining "loans." Nationals of both countries hold extensive interests in oil properties. Many French citizens of moderate means invested their savings in Mexican bonds, on which they have received no interest for six years.

In short, the Mexican situation has apparently resolved itself into this: The United States will soon be compelled to take Mexico in hand—unless European nations are to be suffered to intervene there in spite of the Monroe doctrine.

In official Washington the prediction is hazarded that the United States will intervene, acting as the mandatory for the League of Nations.

In congress the Mexican situation has ceased to be a partisan question. Senator King of Utah, a Democrat and one of the administration's strongest supporters, introduced the other day a very stiff resolution directing the secretary of state to report in full on Mexican conditions and what the department of state was planning to do in the matter. The resolution was immediately considered and agreed to.

In the house Representative Gould of New York, Republican, introduced a resolution providing for a sweeping investigation of American-Mexican relations and all phases of the Mexican problem since 1910. The investigation would be made by a committee of three senators and three representatives, to be selected by the foreign affairs committees of the two houses. It was stated leaders of both the houses were consulted before the resolution was introduced, and that they are favorable to the inquiry.

Mr. Gould gave figures showing that 300 Americans had been murdered between 1910 and 1916; figures for the three years following being unobtainable.

All of which seems to indicate that President Venustiano Carranza of Mexico is in bad with Uncle Sam and the allies. It seems reasonably certain that he cannot much longer stave off a settlement of the grievances which have been piling up in the United States and various European nations because of the high-handed treatment accorded to foreign interests in the Mexican republic.

Also it appears that either Carranza must come to terms with the United States and the allies, with acceptable guarantees that Mexico will meet her obligations to these countries, or the revolutionists will shake him from power. In addition to the Villa rising there are not less than ten revolutionary movements in Mexico. There are those who say he would not last two weeks should he be thrown over by the United States.

There is no gainsaying that Carranza is in a tight place, with the League of Nations planning economic pressure from without and a growing pressure from revolutionists from within.

What are the investments of foreign nations in Mexico? No official figures are to be had, with the exception of the estimate prepared in 1910 by Marion Letcher, an American consul in Chihuahua, which is this:

American	$1,057,770,000
British	321,302,800
French	143,446,000
Various	118,535,380
Total	$1,641,054,180

Another estimate, prepared by an American corporation enjoying special facilities, totals nearly the same, but differs widely in the distribution of investments. It is regarded as the most obtainable. It follows:

American	$855,000,000
British	670,000,000
French	285,000,000
German	75,000,000
Spanish, Dutch, etc.	180,000,000
Total	$1,875,000,000

These figures are said to include the foreign investment in the national debt of Mexico and the distribution, as far as can be worked out, of the holdings of the securities of all companies operating in Mexico.

The British government is demanding adequate protection for British subjects and property in Mexico, including specifically the oil wells the British government recently has purchased from British corporations, and also is demanding reparation for the destruction of British lives and property.

The French government is making similar demands and in addition insists that Carranza pay the interest on the $30,000,000 Huerta loan, which was floated in France but which has been repudiated by the present Mexican government.

The $30,000,000 loan constitutes the difference between the amount of the Mexican external debt, as estimated by T. W. Osterheld at $173,469,087 and the figures given today by the Mexican government, which are $143,472,125.

Regarding the internal loan debt of Mexico, the Mexican treasury department says it totals $69,397,775, with interest to June 30 next amounting to $17,914,672.62.

The official Mexican figures fail to take into account the entire railroad indebtedness, guaranteed specifically by the Carranza government when the lines were taken over, and which is given as $29,564,532, United States currency.

Nor do the Mexican figures include obligations other than railroads which the Mexican government has guaranteed and which, therefore, constitute a valid claim against Mexico as a direct external loan. Chief of these is the "Caja de Prestamos" farm loan banks obligations which, with interest to June 30, equal $31,506,742.75. Nor does the official Mexican report take into account the "infalsificable" issue of paper money, of which $80,000,000 at 10 cents United States currency, remains outstanding, making another $8,000,000, which the Mexican government upon issuing solemnly pledged itself to redeem, but which it later repudiated and which it will some day be compelled to pay.

Nor does the official Mexican report take into account the $20,000,000 which the Carranza government took as a "loan" from banks of issue in Mexico City and which is now the subject of injunction proceedings by the Bank of London to enjoin the financial agent of Carranza in New York City from reaching credits in United States banks.

Also Mexico has been using the total income of the railroads and express companies as well as other public utility establishments and has steadfastly refused to make admission of responsibility.

Most of the American money went into Mexico during the 34 years of the Diaz rule, ending in 1911. The following figures as to investments and damages are regarded as the most reliable.

	Cash Invested.	Physical Damage.
Railroads	$150,000,000	$40,000,000
Oil	200,000,000	5,000,000
Mines	200,000,000	15,000,000
Lands and cattle	50,000,000	10,000,000
Industrials and public service	50,000,000	10,000,000
Total	$850,000,000	$80,000,000

This investment of $850,000,000 had grown in value until in 1910 it was said to be worth $2,000,000,000.

Damage claims aggregating $500,000,000 are said to be filed with the American state department. In this are included legitimate claims for additional losses due to the following causes:

Destruction of new values created by the American energy which has now been driven out.

Destruction of business through confiscatory taxes and unscrupled banditry, making operations impossible.

Destruction of original values through unstable government.

Destruction of entire financial and credit system of the country through government decrees.

Losses in profits which would have been made during present era of high prices.

Potential damage which would wipe out virtually all values will become actual if President Carranza carries out his confiscatory "Constitution of 1917" and his subsequent decrees, including the following:

Making foreign corporations or individuals incompetent to own property in Mexico unless foreign citizenship is renounced.

Appropriating all corporation-owned land, giving in return unguaranteed state bonds of virtually no value.

"Nationalization" of oil, making oil subject to denouncement, when the entire oil-producing system is now founded on the principle of its belonging to the land itself.

Prohibiting any foreign corporation or individual from owning anything within 60 miles of the frontier or 90 miles of the seacoast.

There are dozens of other interesting things in the Mexican situation which cannot be considered here. For example, a study of Carranza's sayings and doings shows him to be a human curiosity.

Is Villa alive or dead? Of course his name is very much in evidence. Nevertheless, who has seen him in the flesh for a year or more? He isn't being interviewed and photographed—that's sure. The personality of Angeles, who has cast his lot with the Villistas, is interesting. He is educated and personally attractive.

Then there is the national election coming on—with Carranza saying he is out of it and Obregon and Gonzales, rival candidates, talking new revolutions.

Logically, it would seem to be sufficient to make Carranza adopt a satisfactory policy and give guaranty of good behavior.

But can he give guaranty? Can anybody in Mexico guaranty anything? It looks as if it would be necessary for some power to intervene.

And if the United States delegates the job of establishing peace and order in Mexico—good-by Monroe doctrine!

"Next Stop, the Azores"

Ponta Delgada, With NC-4 in Harbor.

AIRMEN are preparing to make the Azores islands the aerial junction of the future. They predict that this garden spot of the Atlantic, with its mild climate and other health giving qualities, will become the stopover for all overseas travel by airplane and dirigible.

They point out that the exploit of the United States navy in effecting a crossing has virtually put the islands on the map, as far as the general public is concerned; that for many years problems of construction will limit the overseas route to the Azores, where fuel and other supplies may be replenished, says the New York Tribune.

Rising to a height of more than 7,000 feet—as in the case of Pico—and at the lowest 350 feet above sea level, as the island of Corvo, the islands form an oasis in a desert of water and mist and heavy banks of clouds—clouds that rise off the water in the morning and blot out everything from view, narrowing the horizon to a few feet for the anxious aerial pilot and his navigator.

Already navigators are at work on the railroads and express companies as well as other public utility establishments and has steadfastly refused to make admission of responsibility.

ers who come over the sea in search of the health they always find, either climbing the volcanic slopes or bathing in the warm baths of Furnas.

As for scenery, where will one find pine and elm trees growing in the same neighborhood with oranges, bananas, citrons and pomegranates? Long known only as the little islands where there are no snakes, the Azores are believed to have a destiny as replete with adventure as they are full of volcanic crevices and craters, all exact, but alive with possibilities.

Earthquakes followed and settled the shattered stones further into the sand. But through the city's days of destruction, even today, the outer walls and bastions stand firm. VICTIM OF TURKS' RAPACITY Dead City of Farmagusta, on Island of Cyprus, a Monument to Their Savagery and Hate.

Farmagusta, "the place of the goddess," is in a desolate corner of the far-famed island of Cyprus. One look at the wrecked city shows plainly that the goddess has forsaken her altars. It looks as though a sandstorm had struck the place and buried its glory beneath a dune, from which rise the remains of churches, towers and a cathedral.

It was not, however, the sands of the tropics that laid the ancient metropolis low. The Turks, wrathful at this city of 300 churches, attacked it in a siege which might have rivaled the lengthy Trojan episode had not hunger overcome the city's defenders. Chihuahua is Smallest.

The smallest of all recognized breeds of dogs is the Chihuahua, which is also one of the most intelligent of all the canine family. This breed is a product of Mexico and is named after a northern country where there are thousands of these little dogs running wild and multiplying each year. It seems a remarkable thing that in spite of the fact that they have never had any dog shows in Mexico, one only has to visit that country and try to purchase a really good, typical little Chihuahua from a native to realize that the Mexicans know the worth of this dog of his own country. How these dogs were bred probably never will be known. Some authorities have intimated that they were bred some generations back from large squirrels, and this view is borne out by the fact that at one time these dogs ran wild in the woods and that the Chihuahua is nearly as proficient in running up trees as the squirrel.

Person Influence.

To influence others one must have a hearty fellow feeling for them, be willing to extend a helping hand as occasion demands, to cheer, to comfort, to console. This means that imagination also counts for much in the exercising of personal influence. The unimaginative can never be genuinely sympathetic. Sincerity, common sense, forcefulness, courage, self-confidence, decision, sympathy, keenness of imagination—these above ought else are the qualities that need to be cultivated by all who would draw on the aid of personal influence in pressing forward to the goal of success.

GATEWAY THAT COSTS LITTLE
Entrance Constructed of Plain Lumber in Standard Dimension Always Easy to Procure.

The gateway here shown was very economically constructed by using lumber supplied in standard dimensions, reports Popular Mechanics Magazine. The uprights are 4 by 4 inches; the lower crosspieces and fence rails, 2 by 4 inches, and the fence spindles and upper crosspieces of the gate, 2 by 2 inches, as are also the short horizontal strips which extend at right angles between the crosspieces, to support vines over the archway. The arches are made of hesswood, which is easily bent into shape after being soaked overnight in water. The structure was

By Using Cheap Lumber, an Ornamental Gateway Is Erected at the Entrance to an Undeveloped Park at Trifling Cost.

Painted white, with the exception of the fence spindles, which were given a brown tone; but the color scheme in such a case depends on the surroundings. At very slight expense a gateway of this kind greatly improves the entrance to a farm, a small park, or even a private residence. The example shown stands at the side entrance to a large park, to serve until the development of the neighborhood will make possible something of a more substantial nature.

BETTER THAN WOODEN FENCE

Wall Constructed of Loose Stones Has Many Points of Superiority—Harmonizes With Nature.

The New England stone wall, as a feature in landscape scenery, is sometimes spoken of as a deformity; yet it cannot be denied that the same lines of wooden fence would mar the beauty of our prospect in a greater degree. On account of the loose manner in which the stones are laid one upon another, as well as the character of the materials, this wall harmonizes with the rude aspects of nature better than any kind of masonry. It seems to be less of a blemish than a trimmed hedge or any other kind of fence, unless in ornamental grounds. In wild pastures and lands devoted to rustic labor, the stone wall is the most picturesque boundary mark that has yet been invented. A trimmed hedge in such places would present to the eye an intolerable formality. One of the charms of the loose stone wall is the manifest ease with which it may be overleaped. It menaces no infringement of our liberties. When we look abroad upon the face of a country subdivided only by long lines of loose stones, and overgrown with vines and shrubbery, we feel no sense of constraint. Fences are deformities of prospect which we are obliged to use and tolerate. But the loose stone wall only is expressive of the freedom which is grateful to the traveler and the rambler.—Wilson Flagg.

Best to Build for Oneself.

The advice to the citizen to build his own home, if possible, is good. When a man builds for himself and his family he knows precisely what he gets, and he gets the kind of home he likes. It is better suited to the needs of himself and his family than is one that has been constructed for some other family. The cost of such construction may seem high, but good judges of values believe that an investment of this kind, made carefully and wisely, is the soundest and most satisfactory in the long run.

Roadside Fruit Trees.

The genius of the roadside fruit or nut tree is the hospitality which it symbolizes, and the spirit of neighborly co-operation. It is an established institution in parts of Europe, as in France, Italy and Germany. It is a practice worth thinking about. Both esthetic and utilitarian purposes would be served by general adoption of the rule in communities sufficiently organized to give necessary care to the trees once they have been planted.

Big Production of Fats.

The production of animal fats, exclusive of butterfat, equal to but 70 per cent of the vegetable oil output of the United States in 1912, rose in 1917 to nearly 80 per cent. Including butter, in 1912 the quantity of animal fats was approximately twice as great as that of vegetable oils, while in 1917 the production of the two classes of fats and oils was nearly the same.

Learn Wisdom Through Folly.

BEST AGE FOR WEANING PIGS

Good Plan to Let Porkers Nurse Until Twelve or Fourteen Weeks of Age—Keep Them Growing.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Too many farmers follow the practice of weaning pigs when too young, many being weaned at six and seven weeks of age. A good brood sow properly fed has a good flow of milk when the pigs are of this age. There is no better feed for growing pigs than their mother's milk, consequently it should be used to the greatest extent possible. When the pigs are of suckling age the sow should be on full feed. Unless there is some extraordinary reason for earlier weaning the pigs should not be weaned under the age of ten weeks, and it is better to let them nurse until they are twelve or fourteen weeks old.

Often serious results follow weaning at too early an age. An entire change of feed following weaning may create serious trouble. If, however, pigs have access to corn, shorts, middlings or tankage, or fish meal in a self-feeder placed in the open where they can eat at pleasure without being disturbed by other hogs, they can be weaned at the age of twelve or fourteen weeks, with very little change in their feed, by allowing them to continue on the self-feeder.

To obtain the best results pigs should gain continuously until they are ready for market. The best results will not be obtained unless pigs have access all the time possible to good food crops, alfalfa and red clover preferred. If these feeds cannot be procured rye, oats, barley, cowpeas, rape or any other grain or grasses that will produce good forage in the locality should be sown. The pigs should be watched closely to see that they are on their feed. If they are not the feed should be changed, replacing corn with barley and using skim milk or buttermilk if possible. The pigs should be kept free from lice by the use of crude or good black oil. They must have access at all times to good, pure water. Shade must be provided during the hot summer months. Natural shade is always best, but where this is not obtainable temporary shade may be obtained by setting posts and nailing boards on poles about three and one-half or four feet from the ground and covering with straw or grass.

SELECT PIGS FOR BREEDING

Animals Should Not Be Pushed, but Kept Growing Nicely to Develop Bone and Muscle.

Pigs selected for breeding purposes should be kept growing nicely, but they must not be pushed, for the whole object of their feeding is to make them stretch out and develop bone and muscle in place of fat. They should be continued on a growing ration. A little skim milk and shorts make a good ration. A small amount of ground oats and cracked corn will help develop and insure normal growth. But corn should be used sparingly as it is too fattening for pigs. Remember that these pigs should also have an abundance of green feeds.

ALFALFA BEST FORAGE CROP

Greatest Single Crop That Can Be Grown and Pays Handsomely—Unexcelled for Hogs.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Every farmer, whether or not he raises hogs, should have some alfalfa if he can possibly get it. It is the greatest single crop that can be grown and pays handsomely where it is grown. As a forage crop for hogs it is unexcelled.

LIGHT HOGS ARE PREFERRED

Relative-Marketability of Various Cuts Is Deciding Factor in Selling Animals.

A heavy hog will bring the producer more money than a 200-pound hog, but pound for pound the latter is worth more. The relative marketability of the various cuts is the deciding factor.

DAIRY

NO PLACE FOR SCRUB BULLS

Poor Animals Have Done Much Damage to Dairy Interests and Are Worse Than Worthless.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Bull associations, though few in number, wage eternal warfare on the scrub. The scrub bull has done much damage in this country. He is worse than worthless. He lowers the production of all future generations of the herd he heads. He cannot increase milk production even in a herd of scrubs because, like them, he is a scrub. In a herd of better breeding the damage he may do is almost limitless.

The grade bull is little better because, most of his ancestors being scrubs, he is certain to transmit scrub qualities to his offspring. The grade bull may have the form and color markings of a purebred, but he lacks the power to transmit with any degree of certainty the qualities of any high-producing ancestors he may have. That herd is very poor indeed in which a grade bull can make any marked improvement.

The registered scrub comes of low-producing registered ancestors, therefore he transmits only inferior qualities to his calves. Registration is not enough to guarantee production. Permanent dairy herd improvement can never come from the scrub, the grade or the registered scrub.

A constant fight against the cattle fever tick has put large portions of the southern states into the tick-free area. Why not inaugurate a similar fight all over the United States against scrub sires, against the scrub, the grade, the registered scrub, against scrub sires of every kind? Taking each state, county by county, why not eliminate the scrub and establish scrub-free areas in every state?

STINGY FEEDER CHEATS SELF

Dairy Cow Must Have Materials for Maintenance as Well as Milk-producing Foods.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The cow requires not only materials for maintenance but must also have protein, fat and carbohydrates to make milk from. The milk contains water, fat, protein (casein or curd), sugar and ash, and these are all made from the constituents of the food. If insufficient protein, fat and carbohydrates are contained in the food given her the cow supplies this deficiency for a time by drawing on her own body, and gradually begins to shrink in quantity or quality of milk, or both. The stingy feeder cheats himself as well as the cow.

FEED AND SALT REGULARLY

Cow Becomes Accustomed to Getting Meals at Certain Time—Deviation Causes Worry.

A cow is pretty much a creature of habit. She becomes accustomed to getting her feed at a certain time each day and if that time arrives without the feed she worries about it and this affects her milk production. For this reason regularity in feeding is very important. Also watering and salting should be attended to punctually. And the water should be good. If it is a mistake to require cows to drink tainted water, for it certainly impairs the health if it does not affect the quality of the milk. The man who provides properly for the wants of his cows has a right to expect that they will repay him in a more abundant milk flow.

DAIRY NOTES

A good silo requires also a good ensilage cutter.

In the dairy business harvest continues the year around.

You never saw a cow that would not do better work on good silage than without it.

For a cow that refuses to let down her milk, a feed of something while milking often helps.

The biggest leak in the dairy business comes through keeping two cows to do the work of one.

To estimate the amount of feed left in the silage, figure 1 cubic foot of silage as equal to 40 pounds.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine.

A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it. A prominent druggist says: "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism. You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drugg stores.—Adv.

A SUMMER COLD

A cold in the summer time, as everybody knows, is the hardest kind of a cold to get rid of. The best and quickest way is to go to bed and stay there if you can, with a bottle of "Boschee's Syrup" handy to insure a good night's rest, free from coughing, with easy expectoration in the morning.

But if you can't stay in bed you must keep out of draughts, avoid sudden changes, eat sparingly of simple food and take occasional doses of Boschee's Syrup, which you can buy at any store where medicine is sold, a safe and efficient remedy, made in America for more than fifty years. Keep it handy.—Adv.

Ugh! Calomel Sickens; Salivates! Please Try Dodson's Liver Tone

I am sincere! My medicine does not upset liver and bowels so you lose a day's work.

You're bilious! Your liver is sluggish! You feel lazy, dizzy and all knocked out. Your head is dull, your tongue is coated; breath bad; stomach sour and bowels constipated. But don't take salivating calomel. It makes you sick; you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver, which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel crashes into sour bile like dynamite, breaking it up. That's when you feel that awful nausea and cramping.

If you want to enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced just take a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone tonight. Your druggist or dealer sells you a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents under my personal money-back guarantee that each spoonful will clean your sluggish liver better than a dose of nasty calomel and that it won't make you sick.

Dodson's Liver Tone is real liver medicine. You'll know it next morning because you will wake up feeling fine, your liver will be working, your headache and dizziness gone, your stomach will be sweet and your bowels regular. You will feel like working; you'll be cheerful; full of vigor and ambition.

Dodson's Liver Tone is entirely vegetable, therefore harmless and can not salivate. Give it to your children. Millions of people are using Dodson's Liver Tone instead of dangerous calomel now. Your druggist will tell you that the sale of calomel is almost stopped entirely here.—Adv.

WOLVES OF THE SEA

By RANDALL PARRISH

The hilt of the knife in my belt attracted my attention, and I drew it forth, curious to learn if it bore any mark of ownership. My eyes were instantly attracted to a dark stain on both hilt and blade. I held it to the light—it was the stain of blood, and my hands were also reddened by it. In that first instant of horror I hurled the weapon out through the open port into the sea. Blood! There had been murder committed on board, and the fellow I had struck down was seeking refuge, endeavoring to find concealment following his crime. Ay, but what about the light in the cabin? It had been extinguished after the fleeing fugitive had entered Dorothy's stateroom. Did this mean that the slayer had an accomplice? If so, then the killing was not the result of a mere personal quarrel amidstships, or in the forecastle, but the result of some conspiracy. I thought of Sanchez, and of Estada's plan to obtain control of the ship. Could this be its culmination? And was the Spaniard already lying dead in his cabin?

Nothing came of my thought—only confusion; nor did I dare investigate for fear of becoming more deeply involved in the tragedy. No, there was nothing to be done; my safety, and the safety of the girl depended on our apparent ignorance of what had occurred. Convinced myself of this, I washed the blood stains from my hands and lay down in the bunk fully dressed to await my call.

When called I exchanged but few words with LeVere. He went quickly to his room. Nothing of importance occurred during my watch.

The dawn came cold and gray but with clearing skies. I climbed into the main cross-strees and swept the horizon with a glass. Not so much as a speck rewarded my efforts, and I descended the ratlines, shouting to the boatswain to call the port watch. Watkins came aft to the wheel and I sent the fellow thus relieved down into the cabin to rout out LeVere. The two returned to deck together, the negro glancing about curiously without mounting the ladder.

"You call Senor Estada yet?" he questioned.

"No; I had no orders to do so."

"He tol' me call him at daylight. Here you, Amada; go wake up the senor."

The seaman disappeared, while LeVere crossed the poop deck and stood beside me looking out across the expanse of sea.

Amada emerged from the companion and stared up at us, shading his mouth with one hand as he spoke.

"He answer nothing, Senor LeVere."

"Was the door locked?"

"I know not, senor; I not try to open it."

"The swine," said LeVere, "I suppose I'll have to go myself."

"We'll go down together, senor," I said quietly. "Estada must be sick; I could hear the rumpus Amada kicked up even on deck here. No man could sleep through that racket."

CHAPTER XVIII.

A New Conspiracy.

The interior of the cabin appeared desolate in the gray light of dawn. I led the way directly to Estada's stateroom. My heart pounded like a hammer as I rapped on the wooden panels and waited some response from within. There was no answer, no sound of movement, and I rapped again more loudly, my questioning eyes seeking LeVere's face. He was listening as intently as myself.

It Was the Stain of Blood.

"There is something wrong, senor," he whispered, "for he was ever a light sleeper."

The door was unlocked, the latch yielding instantly to the hand, and I stepped within. A glance told everything. Estada lay in his bunk, with one leg dangling outside, and his head crooked against the side wall. His very posture was that of sudden death, even had it not been pictured by the ghastly face, and the dark pool of blood underneath. I heard an exclamation from Le Vere and stood for an instant utterly unable to move. I knew already what I should find, yet finally forced myself forward—he was stone dead, pierced with three knife thrusts. I stood up and faced the mulatto, whose countenance was fairly green with horror.

"What do you know about this, Senor LeVere?" I asked sternly. "The man has been murdered, knifed. Who did it—and why?"

He could scarcely answer, gripping at the table for support, and never removing his gaze from the face of the dead man. Yet I believed his words; was convinced this was not the result of some conspiracy. I thought of Sanchez, and of Estada's plan to obtain control of the ship. Could this be its culmination? And was the Spaniard already lying dead in his cabin?

"My God! I cannot tell; I have never dreamed of this."

"Had the man enemies. Anyone you would suspect?"

"Enemies? Ay, plenty of them; we all have. We expect that in our trade. This ship is full of devils ready enough to do such a job; but I could not name the one who did it. I know of no cause. I have heard nothing."

"I believe you, LeVere," I said.

"What can we do, senor?"

"Do! We must talk that over first. We cannot meet this thing until we are prepared. There is more danger in hasty action than anything else."

I shut the door behind us and turned the key. It was a relief to get outside, even into that dismal cabin, beyond view of Estada's dead face. LeVere, who had evidently lost his nerve, sank into a chair.

"You fear an uprising, a mutiny?" I questioned, "when this is reported?"

"What will prevent?" he asked.

"The captain cannot stir; the mate is dead; the men already crazed because we take no prizes. They will murder us also and take control. Those devils amidstships."

"And who leads them? Who would be captain?"

"Manuel Estevan," he whispered.

"I thought as much. Then it is Manuel Estevan we must secure first—before they know. Whatever his men may know of what has occurred they will make no move until they get his orders. We must stop the possibility of his issuing any. Without a leader the advantage is ours."

"You mean to kill him?"

"Only as a last resort. There is no good feeling between those quartered amidstships and the crew?"

"No, senor; it is hate generally, although they are not all alike. The real sailors are mostly captured men; they serve to save their lives, and only for these others on board could not be held long. Your plan, senor, is to set the one against the other?"

"Yes, if possible. These sailor men are of all races. Can they be trusted?"

"Some might be, sir; it is hard to tell how many. It is not the race which counts so much, senor. There are those among them who would not care to return to honesty."

"And you, LeVere?"

He spread his hands and shrugged his shoulders. "There is no hope of me; I was born to the free life."

"What then is it with you?"

"Hate, senor—revenge," and his teeth gleamed savagely. "I would spit on this Manuel who seeks to be chief. I can never be—no; I am of black skin, with negro blood in my veins, and white men would never have it so. But I can hate, senor. That is why I am with you now, if the devil so will. Your plan might work—tell me more of it."

"What are the odds, say you—thirty to a hundred? Ay, but surprise will overcome that. My plan is this: First to secure Manuel as quietly as possible but at whatever cost. With him in our hands, or dead, the buccaneers have no leader. What then? There are men in the crew on deck and in the forecastle to be trusted—Watkins is one, and he will know others, a dozen no doubt. They will be enough. We will whisper the truth to these, and have them ready for a signal. The forward door from amidstships is closed by iron bars—is it not?"

"Si, senor," his eyes again sparkling with interest. "The men quarreled, and there was fighting."

"Then there is no escape in that direction and it can be no great task to close any passage leading aft."

Lower the those devils rats. There vation will "But, sen guard the manage the bark. The crew are not all lams—any will sympathize with those thus poked beneath deck. Co-chose is ba and a friend of Manuel. He will fight, and there are others to back him."

"I know that, LeVere. The whole plan is desperate, but there is no other possible. Here is my scheme. There is a gun rack in the cabin to arm the dozen men we can trust. The others have nothing but their sheath knives. The buccaneers can be secured below, before these other lads ever realize what is happening. As soon as we have control of the ship we'll round them up forward. They won't dare face the guns. I'll give them their choice."

"And what will you tell them, senor?"

I caught my breath, conscious of his meaning. My secret hope could not be revealed to this fellow. The answer came quickly to my lips.

"The whole truth, Senor LeVere—that Manuel conspired to seize the bark through a mutiny of the buccaneers; that these were to be turned loose with license to kill anyone on board who opposed them; that their real purpose was to divide among themselves all the treasure below

"Who Did It—and Why?"

then wreck the vessel and escape with it. That to this end Estada had already been murdered. I shall explain that we discovered this conspiracy just in time to save them from butchery, and they must stand by us or else submit to those hell-hounds."

"And after that, senor?"

"Why, Porto Grande, of course," I admitted heartily. "The men will understand what that means—a handful of gold for each of them and a run ashore. Why, LeVere, they will make more apiece than by looting a half dozen ships, and with no fighting. It'll be a fortune for you and me."

His somber eyes lighted up, startled by this new idea, and he sprang to his feet.

"You mean that, senor! We divide what is below and sail for Porto Grande? I hear you right? You not mean surrender? You stay pirate?"

I laughed, my nerves tingling to the success of my ruse—he had taken the tempting bait like a hungry fish.

"Why, of course. I am not such a fool as to throw away this chance. This is our chance, LeVere. If we put the Nanur into Porto Grande, with Sanchez on board and alive, and those hellhounds locked below, we'll get any thing we ask for. We'll be the cocks of the walk. If he shouldn't live through, why then we'll have a ship and can run the game alone. Either way, if we win, the prize is ours—and if we stick together we win."

My apparent enthusiasm caught the fellow. I could read the working of his mind in his face. This new view of the situation promised wealth power, the total defeat of Estevan everything he most desired.

"You think Senor Sanchez live?"

"What difference? If he lives he owes his life to us. If he dies the bark is in our hands, and the treasure. Once we have won we care nothing if he live or die. Are we together in this?"

He thrust out a lean yellow hand and I gripped it.

"Si, senor; I am with you."

"You pledge your word, Francois?"

"I pledge it, senor."

"Good! And you have mine. Now to work—first Manuel Estevan, and then the men on deck."

PRETTY HOME OF ENGLISH STUCCO

Originality in Design Demanded by Home Builders.

COMB PAST FOR THE BEST

Design Which Combines the Beauty of the Old English Architecture With Modern Room Arrangement and Conveniences.

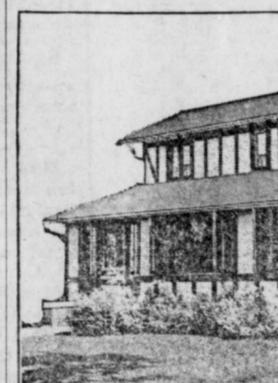

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1877 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD.

The great army of home builders these years are turning more and more to originality in the designs for the homes that they are erecting. Designs for modern homes are the results of the architectural experience of this and past generations. From the homes that were designed in various periods, the best has been selected and the balance discarded. Thus does the present-day home sacrifice neither beauty to convenience, nor convenience to beauty.

An example of this process of architectural selection is shown in the accompanying design. Here has been combined the exterior beauty of the old English style of architecture with modern room arrangement and modern construction methods and materials.

This old English stucco house of six rooms is what might be termed a "beauty." Its exterior appearance is out of the ordinary, while the room arrangement and the conveniences installed in them are of the type that appeal to the modern home builder.

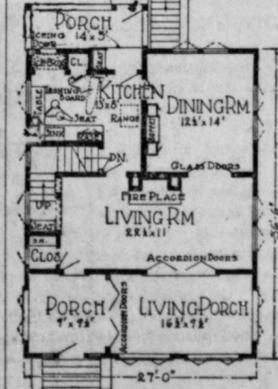

The lines are graceful, and yet no space is sacrificed to get the effect; the rooms are planned to give the home owner all the comforts of a much larger house.

The dimensions of this house, 27 by 36 feet, which is a size that will permit of plenty of lawn space and garden room on an ordinary-sized lot. This size also is inexpensive to build.

The porch and the living porch, which, together, extend across the front of the house are features that everybody wants in a home, while the large living room, with a fireplace, makes this house most desirable.

The living room is 22 feet 6 inches, by 11 feet, a spacious room in itself, but the living porch, with its casement windows and accordion doors, adds 16 feet 6 inches to the living room width and 9 feet 6 inches to its depth. Glass doors connect the dining room, 12 feet 6 inches, by 14 feet, with the living room on one side, and the kitchen, 13 by 8 feet, is reached through a short hall leading out of the other end of the living room.

First Floor Plan.

The conveniences that have been planned for the kitchen are a feature of this design that will appeal to the women members of the family of the prospective builder. The work table underneath the window, the wall case and the sink alongside of it, with a swingtag seat so that there is a place for the housekeeper to sit down while the work is being done either at the sink or table, the ironing board attached to the door of the closet, so that it can be let down into the kitchen and the electric socket so placed that an electric iron can be handily used, all are unusual and make this a kitchen where the work can be done easily and quickly.

On the second floor there are three good-sized bedrooms, all with two exposures, and the bathroom. Every room has a closet, while there is a fourth one in the hall.

The casement windows, some hung in pairs and others singly, are features of this design that add to the appearance of the house and to the comfort of its occupants.

The perspective gives an excellent idea of the exterior of the house, while the floor plans show the room arrangement and the many built-in features of the house. The house is of standard wood construction, with a stucco exterior over wood, or wire or metal lath.

Second Floor Plan.

Too much cannot be said in favor of this design; it is indeed a beauty, and such homes at this give the owner the utmost in satisfaction, because its exterior is one to be proud of, while the conveniences and comforts that the interior arrangement provides are what the home builder wants and demands.

However, this plan can be altered to suit the ideas of the person who wishes to build a home. The exterior can be finished with face brick, or the house built of brick or hollow-clay tile and stucco applied. There is much to be said in favor of brick or tile construction, the principal thing being that both provide a home that is warmer in winter and cooler in summer, although the cost is a little more. At any rate a consultation with the local architect, contractor and material dealer, will be of great assistance to the home builder in determining the materials to be used and the cost of the home.

One of the delights of home building is the selection of the exterior design and the interior arrangement. This is a phase of securing a home that should not be done hurriedly. It should be remembered that the home builder expects to live in the house for a great many years, consequently the selection of the design is important, because care will eliminate much disappointment. Here is where the services and advice of architect, contractor and material dealer will help the prospective builder. By experience and education these building specialists know what to avoid.

The first step in building a home is securing a lot on which to build it. Here again caution should be exercised in determining the character of the neighborhood, the probability of its growing or deteriorating, and its proximity to schools, etc. Appreciation of the property makes home owning a good investment, irrespective of the comforts that come with a home, because there always is the possibility that the owner may want to sell, for some reason or other.

But after considering all of these points, the man who uses care will never regret that he built a home of his own.

Valuable Waste Reclaimed.

By the use of a volatile solvent, the United States forest products laboratory has succeeded in economically reclaiming the oils and paraffin from waste wax paper, leaving the pulp in condition for use anew. Extraction by steam and hot water was unsatisfactory, and failed to remove all wax and oils, while the cost was too great. Through this new field of operation is small, the products are valuable. The entire waste for treatment now includes about enough from wax paper mills to support one central recovery plant, but the quantity is likely to increase rapidly, with the prospect that other plants in various places will be required ere long.

Friends Gave Her Up

Mrs. Hoffman's Recovery From Dropsy a Surprise. She Used Doan's.

"I was in dreadful shape," says Mrs. W. B. Hoffman, 689 Oakley Ave., Hammond, Ill. "There was a sickening pain across the small of my back and when I stooped over, knife-like twinges nearly drove me wild. I had large puffs under my eyes and my body bloated badly all over. My feet were swollen to twice their natural size and the skin looked shiny. When I pressed it down, it left a dent there and I knew I was bad off with dropsy."

"My friends didn't think I would live very long. I doctored with three different physicians and they didn't help me and I was discouraged. Nobody knows the torture I went through."

"I decided to try Doan's Kidney Pills. I used three boxes and I was cured. I felt fine. As the swelling went down, my appetite picked up and I was soon perfectly healthy. My color came back and people said I looked as well as ever. Doan's Kidney Pills saved my life."

BILIOUSNESS Caused by Acid-Stomach

If people who are bilious are treated according to local symptoms they seldom get very much better. Whatever relief is obtained is usually temporary. True biliousness is usually due to indigestion, and the chances are that the patient will maintain strength and health.

Doctors say that more than 70 non-organic diseases can be traced to an Acid-Stomach. Biliousness is one of them. Indigestion, heartburn, belching, sour stomach, bloating and gas are other signs of Acid-Stomach. EATONIC, the marvelous modern stomach remedy, brings quick relief from these stomach miseries which lead to a long train of ailments that make life miserable if not corrected.

EATONIC liberally absorbs and carries away the excess acid. Makes the stomach strong, cool and comfortable. Helps digestion, improves the appetite and you then get full strength from your food. Thousands say that EATONIC is the most effective stomach remedy in the world. It is the help YOU need. Try it on our money-back-if-not-satisfied guarantee. At all druggists. CORNER BRICK

The Informer editor received a letter the past week from our former townsman, W. H. Gayle, who tells us that he and his family are now pleasantly located at Sterling City, Texas. Says it is a pretty place, on the Concho river. This is a fine fishing stream, and he sees somebody going by every little while with fish weighing from two to twenty pounds each. And, last, but not least, he says that a fine and dandy twelve pound boy arrived at his home July 15th. Some boy, we say. Our best wishes to these good people.

Marechal Neil Flour—highest quality made; every sack guaranteed. Furr Grocery Co.

A. C. Muncie and family, L. B. Muncie and family, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Bain and perhaps some others went to Clarendon Monday to be present at a big dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Bain in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Bain who were married here the day before. All report a most delightful time.

See Miss Rosa Marquis for Piano and Violin instruction. At C. E. Johnson's residence, Tuesday, Sept. 16th.

Rev. and Mrs. D. R. Wade and children stopped by the Informer office a few minutes Wednesday. They were en route from a visit to Guthrie, Okla., via Claude, to their home at Wellington. They are looking well, and we're always glad to see them.

FOR TRADE—I want to trade a buggy for a saddle. A good school buggy for the children. J. T. Mace.
