The Storm Lady By MARY MORISON disconserves and a second and a second and (Copyright, 1919, by the McClure News-paper Syndicate.)

He put down the book with a deep tigh of boredom. "What rot, what arcant rot," he groaned-and then: "Hello! Here comes a storm for sure." A peal of thunder cracked the air in wo and he hurried to the cabin win-tow A gigantic cloud, like a black curain, hung across the valley, cut every second or so by a fork of lightning. The trees covering the mountainside were being lashed into a fury by the cale sweeping them. Looking down from his lonely cabin, perched high up on Arrow mountain, it seemed as if all nature was going through some treadful revolution-the storm rush- when I was a child we lived on the ing upon the peaceful forest, taking it . sistance from every tree, shrub and bird for miles around. Then came the rain, and the man pulled the window to just in time. "Heaven help anybody out in that chaos," he said as he lighted the lamp and settled cozily back in his big chair. "Gad, what a wind !"

Through the noises of the storm he heard a sound on the little porch outside, and a rush of wind followed the opening of the door-and bang! it slammed to.

Hair awry, breath coming short and fast, there leaned against the inside of his door a girl. "I suppose I ought to say something apologetic for bursting in on you this way," she panted; "but, oh! that lightning! If your door hadn't been right here I don't know what I would have done. It seemed as if every flash that came was just rushing around the world trying to find me, and as each clap of thunder was applauding it. Oh !-- " as a terrific clap shook the cabin, "Oh, do you mind if I just sit down?"

Our host by this time had recovered himself enough to rise, and he pushed forward his chair, into which the girl sank gratefully.

"Where on earth did you come from ?" he ejaculated. "I had rather thought that I was the only occupant and I read all his books just on principle. I have the feeling that some day he will write something really goodjust because he was such an awfully nice man himself." "He's a lucky devil to have you say that about him"-in he came, tea in hand, and for a lonely bachelor on a mountain top it was a very enticinglooking tray that he set before the lady. The thunder came from a distance now and the rain was contenting itself with a gentle patter, patter. The darkness of a few moments ago was giving way to a misty grayness. He opened the window a little and the smell of fresh green earth came through. "Um, isn't that delicious," smiled the girl, as she took a long breath. Then she poured the tea. "How many lumps? Three? Why, man alive, what did you do in Hoover's day?"

"Tell me about that author man who writes such awful drivel," continued her host.

"Well, you see, I haven't laid eyes on him for years and years," she went on. "I wouldn't know him now if I should meet him on the street. But same street and he was always so nice mawares and meeting with stiff re- to me when my brothers would pull my pig-tails and call me 'baby.' And once they locked me up in an old building, and that nice man came and got me out. He heard my howls, I guess. I suppose I was rather a 'baby,' as my brothers said, and he was always helping me out. I often think of it, and now when things go wrong I say to myself: 'Oh. if I only knew where Chester Lane was I'm sure he would tell me what to do !" " She laughed and added: "Silly, isn't it? But you see why I like his books now, trash or no trash, don't you? And some day he will write something great, you see."

"He should for the faith you put in him, if for no other reason," said the man, looking at her with a curious intentness. "You see," he went on, "he was poor, oh, so poor, dittle lady of the storm, and his good things nobody wanted to buy. So he took to hest sellers-just because he must have bread and butter and things like that. But now-I will do something better for you."

"You will? You are - Chester Lane?" she whispered.

"Yes, Peggy Trumbull, I am. And you-why, you were the smallest little girl I ever saw, and such a good sport. I remember thrashing your brothers, both of them, when they called you a 'baby.' To think that you should have grown up like this, and-"

"And," she interrupted, "when a storm came and frightened me almost to death I came right here. I might have known it would be you."

One day he was gone for over an hour, and when he came home his mother asked him where he had been, and he said that the people next door had taken him for a ride.

"Well," his mother said, "haven't I told you not to ask them to give you rides?"

Junior replied: "I didn't ask them for a ride. I just asked them where I should sit.'

The girl looked at him for the first time, and a smile crossed her face. Yes, she was decidedly pretty. "With the help of this little house

"I hope so," responded the man. "At any rate, what there is of it is at your disposal. That's not much of an offer, but it's a port in a storm, anyway."

From their cozy fastness in the cabin they could hear the rain pelting . down. It was dark as pitch outside but the soft lamplight and the nice look in the man's face was having a reassuring influence on the girl. She lifted her hands to her hair-a woman's first conscious act after a fright. "What a hoyden I must seem. The first big blow carried away my new

MUST BE FIGHT TO DEATH Authorities Recognize There Can Be

No Compromise Between Mankind and the Mosquito.

When Sir Arthur Conan Doyle sent his famous character, Sherlock Holmes, to his supposed death down the abyss of a roaring waterfall, one of his friends protested. "Well," said the author, "I've either got to kill Sherlock Holmes or Sherlock Holmes will kill me." Pretty much the same situation exists in certain sections of the United States between man and the mosquito. If man does not kill the mosquito, the mosquito will do his. cussedest toward killing man and, if he doesn't quite succeed, will make him mighty sick. The United States Department of Agriculture is on the side of man in the contest and is preparing for a big drive against the ma laria mosquitoes in Louisiana. The detalls are not completed, but the campaign will begin soon and will be, perhaps, the most intensive one yet put on. Some of the workers are already on the ground. Others who have been engaged in "cootie" work for the army and still others who have been actually with the army will be sent to Louis lana within the next few weeks.

THERE IS ONLY ONE WAY

TO PREVENT PAIN FROM TEETH, AND THAT IS DONE BY TAKING PROPER CARE OF THEM FROM INFANCY. There is only one way to prevent the gums from becoming diseased, and the loss of teeth due to same; that is done by proper care of them from infancy. Those who have failed to do this are no doubt the victims of decayed teeth, bad gums (pyorrhea) or a mouth with many or all of their natural teeth missing. Those who have decayed teeth should have them properly treated and restored. Those who have diseased gums should have them properly treated. The only treatment is a systemic treatment, combined with local treatment, and is administered each day for five or six days. This treatment is the only possible method of causing the diseased gums to return to their normal condition and thereby prevent further annoyance and finally loss of every tooth in the arch. In order to perform my duty to the public, I warn all persons who are afflicted with this disease to have some one, some place, administer the above treatment. I have several reasons for such advice. One is, in view of the fact that 85 per cent of the adult race are afflicted with this disease, and a very small per cent realize the fact. Again, because the most eminent physicians in the land declare that a number of the most fatal diseases known today are caused by the condition of the oral cavity. There would seldom be cause for false teeth if it were not for this disease. Those who have lost teeth, either from decay or diseased gums. should have the space refilled by bridgework. No mouth can properly masticate food unless the arch is composed of 28 teeth. Good bridgework is an art and a profession within itself. Good bridgework is the only desirablemethod of replacing the lost. Last, but not least, I refer to artificial teeth, commonly called plate work. Those who have been so unfortunate as to allow pyorrhea to sap their life and extract their their teeth, there is one and only one remedy. That is artificial teeth. After the gums have settled to a reasonable degree, plates can be constructed. Such patients need no warning on this line, however, as they have traveled the rough and rugged road. The wriser has opened an office in Hedley for the purpose of serving the people of this community. He has advised you correctly after a thorough knowledge of his subject. Those who come to his office for service shall receive courteous treatment and high class service. Those who do not come to his office, should go to some dentist's office and have their oral cavity thoroughly repaired. The day is coming when you must do this. So do it before it's too late. My motto is "First Class Service."

-17-She torned her head, and I felt her eyes searching the dim outline of my face questioningly.

"Of course I did everything I knew," she replied. "Why should I not? You are here, Captain Carlyle, for my sake; I owe you service."

"And must I be content merely with that thought?" I urged, far from pleased. "This would mean that your only interest in me arises from gratitude.

"And friendship," her voice as confi-Aential as my own. "There is no reason why you should doubt that surely." "It would be easier for me to understand, but for the memory of what I am-a bond slave."

"Your meaning is that true friendship has as a bas's equality?"

"Does it not? Can real friendship exist otherwise?"

"No," she acknowledged gravely. "And the fact that such friendship does exist between us evidences my faith in you. I have never felt this social distinction, Captain Carlyle, have given it no thought. This may seem strange to you, yet is most nat-You bear an honorable name, ural. and belong to a family of gentlemen. You held a position of command, won by your own efforts. Consequently that conviction does not exist between us; you are not my uncle's servant, but my friend-you understand me now?"

"And you would actually have me speak with you as of your own class a free man, worthy to claim your friendship in life?"

"Yes." frankly, her face uplifted. "Why should it be otherwise? No man could have done more, or proved himself more stanch and true. anastration the paulid light of the dawn. It was all a desolate, restless waste in the midst of which we tossed, while above hung masses of dark clouds obscuring the sky. We were but a hurtling speck between the gray above and the gray below. The first thing needing my attention was the food and water. I crept forward cautiously and soon had Sam busily engaged in passing out the various articles for inspection. Only essentials had been chosen, yet the supply seemed ample for the distance I believed we would have to cover before attaining land. But the nature of that unknown coast was so doubtful I determined to deal out the provisions sparingly, saving every crumb possible. The men grumbled at the smallness of the ration, yet munched away contentedly enough, once convinced that we all shared alike. "All right, lads," I said cheerfully. "Now we understand each other and can get at work. We'll divide into watches first of all-two men aft here and one at the bow. Watkins and I will take :t watch and watch, but there is enough right now for all hands to turn to and make the craft shipshape. Two of you ball out that water till she's dry, and the others get out that extra sail forward and rig up a jib. She'll 11de easier and make better progress with more canvas showing." The men gradually knocked off work and lay down, and finally I yielded to Dorothy's pleadings and fell into a sound sleep. It seemed as though I scarcely lost consciousness, yet I must have slept for an hour or more, my head pillowed on her lap. When I awoke Schmitt was again at the steering paddle, and both he and Dorothy were staring across me out over the port quarter. "What is it?" I asked eagerly, but before the words were entirely uttered a hoarse voice forward bawled out excitedly: "There you see it; straight out agin mast to keep erect and, as the boat was again flung upward, gained clearly the glimpse I sought. "Ay, you're right, lads !" I exclaimed.

'It's a schooner, headed to clear us by a hundred fathoms. Port your helm, Schmitt-hard down, man. Now, Sam. off with that red shirt; tie it on the boat hook and let fly. They can't help seeing us if there is any watch on deck."

We swept about in a wide circle, headed straight across the bows of the on-coming vessel. All eyes stared out watchfully, Sam's shirt flapping above Schmitt's hand fell heavily on my sleeve and I glanced into his stolid face.

"I just bet I know vat wus der trouble. "What, man?"

"Cholera," he whispered; "ve haf boarded a death ship."

CHAPTER XXVII.

On Board the Slaver.

The terror of the two men as this thought dawned upon them in all its horror was apparent enough. Nothing, not even fire, was more to be dreaded than a visitation of this awful nature on shipboard. Charnel ship though this might be, it was safer by far than the cockleshell towing alongside.

"Let's find out the truth first, men," I said quietly. "Hold your tongues. There is no use giving up until we know what the danger is. Will you come with me?"

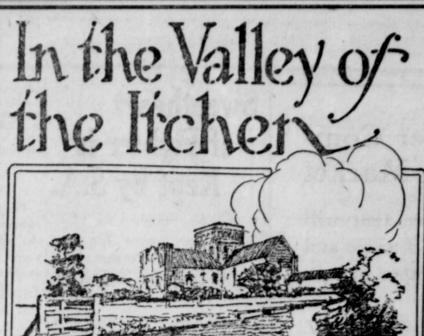

The terror in Sam's eyes caused me to laugh and my own courage came back with a rush.

"Afraid of dead men, are you? Then we'll face them together, my lads, and space, hills and meadows, and the flow have it over with. Come on, now, both of you. I steeled myself to the job and handled them alone, dragging the bodies across the deck and launching them over the low rail into the sea. I ordered Schmitt to cut the lashings and take charge of the wheel. "See here, Sam, and you too, Schmitt, I am in love with that girl in the boat. Do you suppose I would ever have her come on this deck if 1 believed she might contract cholera? You do as I say and you are perfectly safe. Now, Schmitt, remain at the wheel, and you, Sam, come with me. There will be a dead nigger aboard unless you jump when I speak." He trotted close at my heels as I

CELERY COMBINATIONS.

Celery is said to be especially good for sufferers from nervousness and rheumatism. It is a vegetable found in the market all the year and is usually reasonable in price. It is especially good as a salad vegetable and combines with all vegetables and fruits because of its nutty flavor. Served as a fresh, crisp relish it is perhaps at its best. Curled by cutting small stalks in two-inch lengths and fringing the ends it makes a most attractive garnish. Let the celery stand in cold water for a time and the fringes will curl. The ways of combining celery with other foods is numberless. The following are suggestive:

Celery Sandwiches .-- Take half a cupful of white, crisp and tender celery, cut very fine; add one-fourth of a cupful of minced nuts-pecans are best-one and one-half tablespoonfuls of mayonnaise dressing; salt and cayenne to taste. Mix until well blended and use as sandwich filling on white buttered bread.

Celery Fritters .- Barboil the celery until nearly cooked; after cutting into three-inch pieces season with salt and pepper and dip in fritter batter. Fry in deep fat and drain on brown paper. Serve hot.

Creamed Celery in a Cheese Shell .--Use the shell of a pineapple or Edam cheese for a receptacle. Cook the celery until tender; add it to a rich cream sauce with a cupful of parboiled oysters. Pour into the shell, cover with buttered crumbs and bake until the crumbs are brown. Do not have the oven too hot or the cheese will melt or burn and the beauty of the dish will be spoiled.

Celery and Grapefruit Salad .- Take three sections of grapefruit with the membrane removed; arrange in a nest of head lettuce with nicely shredded celery and a few shredded almonds that have been blanched. Put a ball of mayonnaise in the center and serve well chilled.

Scrambled Eggs With Celery .-- Melt one tablespoonful of butter, add four tablespoonfuls of chopped celery; cook slowly for 15 minutes; add four eggs, a half cupful of milk, stir until set, season with salt, pepper and butter and serve at once.

Celery parboiled and used as an escalloped dish with white sauce and cheese is a dish good enough to serve more frequently.

"But do you understand fully?" I questioned anxiously. "All I have done for you would have been done for any other woman under the same conditions of danger. Such service to another would have been a duty, and no more. But to be with you, aiding and protecting, has been a delight, a joy. I have served Dorothy Fairfax for her own sake-not as I would any other."

Her glance flashed into mine through the star-gleam, with a sudden message of revealment.

"You knew-that-that it was you personally I served?"

"Of course I knew. A woman is never unaware of such things. Now, if ever, I must tell you the truth.] know you care for me, and have cared since first we met. An interest no less fateful has led me to seek your acquaintance, and give you my aid. Surely it is not unmaidenly for me to confess this when we face the chance of death together?"

"But," I stammered, "I can scarcely believe you realize your words. I-I love you Dorothy."

"And is it not also possible for me to love?"

"You-you mean, you love me?"

"I love you-are you sorry?" "Sorry! I am mad with the joy of It: yet stricken dumb. Dorothy Fairfax. I have never even dared dream of such a message from you* lips. Dear, dear girl, do you forget who I am?

What my future?" "I forget nothing," she said, proudly. "It is because I know what you are that my heart responds. Nor is your future so clouded. You are today a free man if we escape these perils, for whether Roger Fairfax be alive, or dead, he will never seek you again to hold in servitude. If alive he will join his efforts with mine to obtain a pardon because of these services, and we have influence in England. Yet, should such effort fail, you are a sailor, and the seas of the world are free. It is not necessary that your vessel fly the English flag."

"You give me hope-a wonderful hope."

"And courage," her hands firmly clasping mine. "Courage to fight on in faith. I would have that my gift to you, Geoffry. We are in peril still, great peril, but you will face it beside me, knowing that whether we live or die we are together. I am not afraid Bay more."

"What's the matter aboard there?" he yelled. "Did yer ever see a boat yaw like that, afore? Damn me, if I believe they got a hand at the wheel." The same thought had leaped into my mind. The schooner was headed to pass us on the port quarter, yet vawing so crazily at times as to make me fearful of being run down. I could perceive no sign of life aboard, no signal that we had been seen. The sight angered me.

"Stand by, all hands," I cried desperately. "We'll board whether they want us or not. Slip across, Miss Fairfax, out of the way, Now, Watkins, run us in under those fore-chains; easy man, don't let her strike us. Lay hold quick, lads, and hang on for your lives. My head was at a level with the rail, yet I saw nothing, my whole effort being to make fast before the grip of the men should be torn loose. This done, I glanced back into the upturned faces below.

"Hand in slowly, lads; yes, let go, the rope will hold, and the boat ride safely through. Let a couple of men come up till we see what's wrong with the hooker-the rest of you trail on. Let Schmitt and Sam come with me.'

Soul That Is Truly Great

Emerson, that greatest of modern philosophers, has told us that it is easy when in a crowd to allow our selves to be swayed by the opinions about us and comparatively easy to keep our individuality and sweetness when alone, but that the great stal is he who in the midst of a mass of other individuals can still keep the poise and sweetness of solitude.

Work and Workers.

Sweetheart of Fighter is Kept by S.A. Soldier Boy Leaves His Girl

With Gospel Workers To Be Cared for in War.

She was just a little red-cheeked country girl who had come to the city to work. She hadn't come for any story-book motive, such as paying off the mortgage on the old farm. She was just a country girl who wanted to make a little money of her very own. There wasn't any chance at There was the butter and egg home. money, of course, but the family was large and there wasn't much to sell. So, like hundreds of other country girls, she came to the city to work. She secured a position as nurse-girl to two children, not much smaller than herself-she was scarcely more than fifteen. But the wages she drew amounted to very little more than the butter and egg money back home. The children were not always kind and she could never do as she wished, but always what they desired.

Finds World Unkind.

A vague, hurt, longing came into her heart She wanted to see mother and dad. She wanted to feed the baby chickens; to rub old Dobbin's nose; to hunt hen's nests; to ride to the pasture for the cows; she was just plain homesick. One of her duties was to take the children to the park in the afternoon. This was rather pleasant, usually, but one day when the ache in her heart was the strongest, and the children were more unkind than usual, she awoke to the fact that she wanted companionship-some one with whom she could talk of the things she liked to talk about, and then she saw him. He was a soldier boy and was sitting on a bench in the park near where the children were playing. He was a bit lonely too, and in a very short time the homesick souls were sharing troubles. Every day she met him there and then one day, he was called away. That day at the park he told her good-bye. But before he left, he took the girl to a Salvation Army home. The boy twirled his cap in embarrassment as the matron talked to him, but he looked her square in the eyes.

He Was Square

"I've treated her square." he said. "but she will get lonesome again and he next fellow might not be so square

So I am wanting you to care for her and look after her for me while I am gone."

The girl stayed at the home, and when the war was over, a big, browned fellow rushed into the home, calling, "Mary!"

Mary was there and the two were married in the home Now Mary and Mary's soldier boy are living on the old farm, caring for mother and father, and just being happy. And when they go to the city, they never fail to visit the Salvation Army home, which, they say, meant home for both of them.

I went to sleep the other day-'twas quite unusual, by the way, for I believe that it is right to do one's slumbering at night. However, strange as it may seem I slept-and sleeping, dreamed a dream. (Here it is):

I journeyed to a little town, a village of no small renown, a place of pleasure, pride, and joy for man or woman, girl or boy. It seemed that each one wished to do things only that were good and true, so it was natural to feel that living there, would be ideal. The homes were all so clean and neat; no painted girls were on the street; the parks were free from flirt or shirk; no ragged bums were hunting work; no ragged children, dirty, rude, were seen to steal or beg for food; no grimy clothes, no rags were seen for everyone was neat and clean.

'Twas wonderful-then I awoke. Said I: "That dream was not a joke." Howe'er unreal it all may seem the dream I dreamed was NOT a dream. Salvation Army centers see this dream of mine a reality. The poor are helped, the hungry fed, the bum is given food and bed while factory girl, or bum or clerk-all who apply are given work A home of rescue for the stray who's somehow lost the better way; all this and more these workers do to make a town ideal for
