St. Moritz in Winter.

OW that peace has come, Switattractions sought by lovers of the will now more than ever become a haven of blissful rest and healthful enjoyment, writes Marie Widmer in the New York Herald.

During the last five winters, in spite of the war, the numerous winter sport resorts tucked away in all those lovely spots over 3.000 feet above sea level, managed to have a "season" on a limited scale, and now that conditions are once more becoming normal it is expected that the winter 1919-1920 will see a great many visitors flock to that snewclad Alpine land, which, although in the midst of that fierce turnoil, has boys and girls living on remotely sitremained intact.

glorious symphony in white. Jack Frost has imprinted a silencing kiss brook and mountain stream and glistening sheets of ice cover also the limpid blue eyes of ponds and Alpine lakes. Ice and snow everywhere and above a glorious expanse of deep blue sky. The air itself seems to have gained some new miraculous qualities and faces which vesterday looked weary and tired have a cheerful and energetic expression today.

Land of Winter Sports.

For the natives the time of pleasant sociability has now come. Visits between friends and relatives are frequently interchanged-by sleigh in the case of the older set, and by ski in the case of the younger generation. Even some of the passes are quite animated, as winter is the time of the great transport of merchandise ever mountains, such as the Veltiner wines in the case of the Grisons. From the high lying pastures they slide down to the valley the hay which had been stored in the picturesque huts, and the woodcutters, in their turn, are ousy in the high forest. The proud tree-trunks fall cracking before the axe and hatchet, and the logs dart like arrows down snow-runs to the trafficbeaten roads below.

Nowhere on earth have the possioilities of winter sport been more keenly realized than in Switzerland. and that is why we find in this small tand such a great choice of resorts which possess scientifically laid out toboggan and bobsleigh runs, ice rinks, thrilling ski-jump, etc. Very soon we find everybody interested and engaged in some form of winter sport. There skating, of course, but many ga with this oldest of which has, howev

One of the most attractive, and zerland is busily preparing to certainly a very social sport, is bobassume her old place as the sleighing. Long, low padded coboggans, favorite playground of the old seating as many as six persons are The little Helvetian republic used, and under this heavy burden of proverbial beauty, and far more the bobsleigh shoots down its course beautiful still in the eyes of many- with amazing speed. As the leader for as an angel of mercy has she sways, almost automaticalls the closeshown her real worth in the world's ly crowded team bend themselves, tragedy-is fairly brimming over with thus guiding the sleigh to the right or left; they apply a brake by letting medieval and quaint and curious, and | themselves drop on the snow or drive to greater swiftness by bending forward like jockeys. Strong iron spikes, which are driven by a lever into the ice, enable the leader to stop the vehicle almost instantly, but a sudden application of these brakes whirls up the ice and snow in clouds, shaking and jolting the riders. Ski-ing has taken root to an extraordinary extent in Switzerland. Even the poorest youth does not want to do without skis, though they might only consist of a couple of crudely adjusted barrel staves. Thanks to the ski the uated farms are now able to attend Switzerland in her winter garb! To school every day; their parents are the newcomer it means a vision of no longer isolated for the best part paradise-to the habitue a coming of the long winter months, and thanks and newspapers can be delivered reg-

Sport is furthermore made easier by the different mountain railways, which upon the babbling lips of every tiny in winter run toboggan trains. Thus one can travel a couple of stations upward and arrive at the starting point of a mountain road without exertion and waste of time. Then one can descend to the valley on toboggan, ski or skates, or, vice-versa, go down first and return by train to winter quarters. Races, competitions, sleigh drives, ice carnivals, ski excursions and an equal variety of fascinating indoor entertainments transplant the happy winter visitor into a totally different world where sorrow and care seem to be banished and where every human being seems to realize that the best life after all is found right next to Nature's heart.

Had Long Experience. Romance is very powerful, but some things much more common are more so. Take for instance hunger. The other day a young bride and bridegroom came from a little country town to Indianapolis to buy furniture for their new home. About 11:30 the bridegroom departed on an errand and told his wife that he would meet her at 12:30 at a certain restaurant.

SEE NEED OF GOOD ROADS

"Doughboys" Who Served in France Impressed by the Excellence of That Country's Highways.

Signs multiply that the returning soldier is to be the strongest of all apostles of good roads. He knows that except for the network of highways leading to Verdun not even the heroic pollu could have kept the Germans from passing. Day and night, as long as the peril lasted, an unending line of motor trucks rolled into the threatened region and back again. On a scale only slightly less impressive, it was always so when there was a "show on." In the minds of our soldiers, however, the military need of stone roads seems less important than the commercial need, and always a deep sense seems present of the beauty of the smooth and shaded highway. The Amaroc News, official organ of our army on the Rhine, points out that of the 2,750,000 miles of highway in the United States, less than 275,000 miles, or one in ten, has any form of surfacing whatever. But it becomes lyric when it notes that in France "each road, it matters not how small or how seldom used, has its quota of beautiful shade trees, whose limbs form an arch to protect the traveler from the The American legion will have posts throughout the land, and wherever there is a post there will be a band of men who know the value of easy communication and who know how to have their way .- New York

FOR MORE COMMUNITY MUSIC

Boston Newspaper Makes Strong Point of Its Value in Creating a Sense of Unity.

The growth of community music means many things, remarks the Boston Herald. It means an endless source of pure pleasure to those who listen, and far more to those who participate. It means a mighty stimulus to the love and understanding of good music. It means that at last we are beginning to weary of being entertained by others and mean to create and perform our own music, through our own efforts. Most important of all, it means that America is discovering at last that she is a united nation and is expressing her joyful sense of unity in song.

Let us see that the children have their share in this national awakening, a voice in this national chorus. Let every village, town and city gather its young people and train them for a community chorus or orchestra. There could be no surer means of making them loyal to each other and to their country and of preparing a musical future for the nation. The word war has taught us, for one thing, how to come together as a community for spiritual expression in of the judges, acting as the represensong. We shall be the richer if we tative of the bureau of animal induspreserve and cultivate this practice.

For Home Builders to Decide. The first question to confront the home builders is: "In what section Defects Cannot Always Be Prevented. shall we locate?" That is a question for the individual to decide, but the things be should look at carefully and answer before buying are: Is it a healthful location? Is the transportation service good? Has the town complete sewerage system? Is the water supply good? Can gas and electric light be supplied at a reasonable rate? Are there city conveniences, such as mail delivery, fire and police protection, good schools, churches, clubs, and, last but not least, what is the possible future of the place? Is it well protected by restrictions for residential purposes? Will two-family or apartment houses encroach or business come too near? It is the restrictions on the surrounding property that are of vital interest to the purchaser, not the restrictions on the piece being bought. You know what you are going to do and you also want to know what others in the vicinity could do, should they be so disposed.

REMARKABLE RACE BY HORSE

Castor, Morgan Gelding, Finishes Long Endurance Contest With Clean Speed Record.

(Prepared by the United States Depart-ment of Agriculture.)

In a 300-mile endurance contest with horses of the purest Arabian breeding, "Castor," a Morgan gelding ored by the United States department of agriculture at its Middlebury, Vt., Morgan horse farm, was the only horse with a clean speed record at the end of the fourth day of the grueling contest. "Castor" won third place for speed at the end of the contest, notwithstanding the fact that he fell in the deep sand on a bad bit of road, injured his nose, and made the last five miles in a walk. This achievement is an indication of what has been accomplished by the department of agriculture in the rehabilitation of the Morgan breed during the few years since the work was undertaken.

The race was from Fort Ethan Allen, Vt., to Camp Devens, Mass., largely over unimproved roads. The purose was to stimulate interest in the breeding of cavalry mounts throughout the United States. A majority of the horses entered were Arabians. One was a crossbreed that had seen overseas service and was the first horse to pass successfully through quarantine at Newport News. Two were Morgans, bred at the department's farm. The veteran of overseas service, "Bob," owned and ridden by Colonel George, led the field at the beginning of the race, but was taken out before the finish. The two Arab-

but One Bad Spot Will Prove Expensive.

A horse market report from one of the Western selling points says: "When present, blemishes take off up to $50 or even more from the price of first-rate animals of the same type." Blemishes can't always be prevented, but it is good business to try to prevent them, for, as can readily be seen, one bad spot in the makeup of a horse may mean the difference between profit and loss on him. Outside of precautions to prevent injury the only safeguard against blemishes is to breed only sound mares to sound stallions. Sometimes a colt will be curby or otherwise defective, in spite of all that can be done to avoid such weaknesses, but that is no argument against trying to produce only the good ones.

There are more people to feed than ever in this country and if prices can be brought to a point where they can afford to buy they will buy and use a great deal more milk than they did. As for selling of dairy cows, think how disastrous it would be. Many do not even now get as much milk as they would like, and thousands and thousands of pounds of butter substitutes are used every year.

Which Appearance of the Farm Is Improved.

Some farmers evidently consider the roadside along their farms as distincttheir jurisdiction, and any time or labor expended in keeping it up as so much gratuitiously donated to the pubroadside along his farm as deserving as much of his attention as the farm itself. We have become accustomed to fur fabrics that deceive the eye, and take them as a matter of course. In kerami the mimicry of nature goes below the surface, for the pile has a bronze ackground below its black tip. Pattern makers in all the standard pattern concerns provide patterns for neckpleces and cuffs, and retail shops carry muff beds already lined, in various sizes and shapes, for the convenience of those who undertake the making of sets at

Kerami resembles broadtail-a fur that shares honors with ermine and able for elegance-and excels all others in dignity. It has a glossy surface, reflecting the light unequally, acording to the direction of the hairs (or "pile" in a fabric), affording an ncomparably beautiful play of light and shadow. CHAPTER XI .- Continued. --12-

It was about the middle of the following afternoon when the Adventurer poked her blunt rose around a point of land, and came tato full view of the squalld hamlet of Yellow Banks. A half-hour later ve lay snuggled. up against the show, holding position amid several other boats made fast to stout trees, buily unloading, and their broad gangphaks stretching from forward deck to bank. The roustabouts began unlosding cargo at once, a steady stream of men, black and white, burdened with whatever load they could snatch up, moving on an endless run across the stiff plank, and up the low bank to the drier summit. It chanced to be my good fortune to escape this labor, having been detailed i by Mapes to drag boxes, bales and barrels forward to where the hurrying bearers could grasp them more readity. This brought me close to the forward stairs, down which the departing passengers trooped, threading their insecure way among the trotting laborers, in an effort to get ashore. Reynolds' troops, all militia, and the greater part of theia mounted, were an extremely sorry-looking lot-sturdy enough physically, of the pioneer type, but bearing little soldierly appearance, and utterly ignorant of discipline. The men had chosen officers from out their own ranks by popular election, and these exercised their authority very largely through physical prowess.

We had an excellent illustration of this soon after tying up at the landing. A tall, lank, ungainly officer, with a face so distinctly homely as to instantly attract my attention, led his company of men up the river bank, and ordered them to transport the pile of commissary stores from where they had been promiscuously thrown to a drier spot farther back. The officer was a captain, to judge from certain stripes of red cloth sewed on the shoulders of his brown jean blouse, but his men were far from prompt in obeying his command, evidently having no taste for the job. One among them, apparently their ringleader in incipient mutiny, an upstanding bully with the jaw of a prize fighter, took it upon himself openly to defy the officer, exclaiming profanely that he'd be d-d if he ever enlisted to de nigger work. The others laughed, and joi .ed in the revolt, until the captain unceremoniously flung off his blouse, thus divesting himself of every vestige of rank, ard proceeded to enforce his authority. It was a battle royal, the soldiers crowding eagerly about, and yelling encouragement impartially first to one combatant, and then another.

yer now-good boy, Abe.

Exactly what occurred I could not see, but when the circle of wildly excited men finally broke apart, the big rebel was lying flat on his back in the yellow mud, and the irate officer was, to be transported-not regulars, indicating every inclination to press him down out of sight.

"Hav yer hed 'nough, Sam Jenkins?" he questioned breathlessly. "Then, blame ye, say so."

"All right, Abe-yer've, bested me

gripped the offered hand, "Thank ye, sir," he answered good humoredly. "I'm Abe Lincoln of Salem, Illinoy, an' I ain't got but just one job right now-that's ter make them boys tote this stuff, an' I reckon they're goin' ter do it."

With the exchange of another word or two they parted, and not until thirty years later did I realize what that chance meeting meant, there in the clay mud of Yellow Banks, at the edge of the Indian wilderness, when Abraham Lincoln of Illinois and Jeffer son Davis of Mississippi stood in comradeship with clasped hands.

We had unloaded perhaps a quarer of our supplies, when an officer suddenly appeared over the crest of the bank and hailed the captain. There was a tone of authority in his voice which caused us to knock off work and life

"Is Captain Corcoran there? I bring orders from headquarters. You are to discontinue unloading, captala, retain the remainder of the provisions on board and prepare at once to take on men.'

"Take on men? We are not to return south, then?"

"No; you're going in the other direction-up the Rock. You better get busy."

He wheeled his horse and disappeared, leaving the angry captain venting his displeasure on the vacant air. Kirby, evidently from some position across the deck, broke in with a sharp question.

"What is that, Corcoran? Did the fellow say you were not going back to St. Louis?"

"That's just what he said. We've got to nose our way up Rock river, with a lot of those measly soldiers aboard. Here you, Mapes, stop that unloading, and get steam up-we've got to put in a night of it." "But," insisted Kirby in disgust, "I'm not going up there; aren't there any boats going down?"

"How the h- should I know? Go ashore and find out-you haven't anything else to do."

The men below knocked off work willingly enough and, taking advantage of the confusion on board, I endeavored to creep up the stairs and gain a view of the upper deck. But both Mapes and the second mate made this attempt impossible, forcing me into the ranks of the others and compelling me to restow the cargo. So far as I could perceive, no attempt to depart was made by anyone, excepting a big fellow with a red mustache, who swore profanely as he struggled through the mud, dragging a huge valise. The situation puzzled and confused me. What choice would Kirby and the deputy make? If once up Rock river the Adventurer might very likely not return for weeks, and it did not seem to me possible that the impatient gambler would consent to such a delay. Every advance northward brought with it a new danger of exposure. These were Illinois troops but militia, gathered from a hundred hamlets-and many among them would be open enemies of slavery. Let such men as these, rough with the pioneer sense of justice, once suspect the situation of those two women, especially if the rumor got abroad among them that Eloise was white, and the slavehunter would have a hard row to hoe. And I made up my mind such a rumor should be sown broadcast; aye, more, that if the necessity arose, I would throw off my own disguise and front him openly with the charge. I could do no more.

It was only an accident which gave me a clue to the real program. Mapes sent me back into the vacant space just forward of the paddle-wheel, seeking a lost canthook, and, as I turned about to return, the missing tool in my hand, I paused a moment to glance curiously out through a slit in the boat's planking, attracted by the sound of a loud voice uttering a command. I was facing the shore and a body of men, ununiformed, slouching along with small regard to order, but each bearing a rifle across his shoulder, were just tipping the ridge and plowing their way down through the slippery clay in the direction of the forward gangway. Although I saw, not for an instant did my gaze linger on their disordered ranks. The sight which held me motionless was rather that of a long, broad plank, protected on either side by a rope rail, stretching from the slope of the second deck across the narrow gulf of water, until it rested its other firmly against

There was but one thing for me to do, one action to take-follow them, Dropping the canthook, I turned aft and crept forth through a small opening onto the wooden frame which supported the motionless paddlewheel, choosing for the scene of operations the river side, where the boat effectively concealed my movements from any prying eyes ashore. I lowered myself the full length of my arms, dangling there an instant by clinging to the framework, then loosened my grip and dropped silently into the rushing waters beneath.

CHAPTER XII.

My Friend, the Deputy Sheriff. Well below the surface, yet impelled swiftly downward by the sturdy rush of the current, sweeping about the steamer's stern, I struck out with all the strength of my arms, anxious to attain in that first effort the greatest possible distance. I came panting up to breathe, my face lifted barely above the surface, dashing the water from my eyes, and casting one swift glance backward toward the landing. Great volumes of black smoke swept forth from the funnels and my ears could distinguish the ceaseless hiss of steam

I swam slowly ashore, creeping up the low bank into the seclusion of a shallow, sandy gully, scooped out by the late rains. Immediately about me all was silent, the steadily deepening gloom rendering my surroundings yers, I reckon he mought lend it ter vaguely Indistinct.

Thus far I possessed no plan-except to seek her. I would venture for ward, rather blindly trusting that good fortune might direct my steps aright. | ingly. I would have to discover first of all, where Kirt'y had taken Eloise--into whose hands he had deposited the girl for safekeering. This task ought not to be difficult. The settlement was small, and the camp itself not a large one; no such party could hope to enter its confines without attracting attention, and causing comment. Once had thus surceeded in locating her, the rest ought to prove comparatively easy-a mere matter of action. For I had determined to play the spy no longer; to cease being a mere shadow. I proposed finding Eloise, and telling her the whole truth; following that, and assured of her support, I would defy Kirby, denotace him if necessary to the military atthorities, identifying | drinkin'." myself by means of my army commission, and insist ch the immediate release of the girl. The man had broken no law-unless the wanton killing of Shrunk could be groven against himand I might not be able to compel his arrest. Whatever he suspected now relative to his prisoner, he had originally supposed her to be his slave, his property, and hence possessed a right now under the law to restrain her liberty. But even if I was debarred from bringing the man to punishment, I could break his power, and overturn his plans. Beyond that it would be a personal matter between us; and the thought gave me joy.

I attained my feet, confident and at ease, and advanced up the gully, moving cautiously, so as not to run blindly upon some sentry post in the darkness. There would be nervous soldiers on duty, liable to fire at any sound, or suspicious movement, and it was a part of my plan to penetrate the lines unseen, and without inviting arrest. I was standing uncertain, when out mighty soon." the dim figure of a man, unquestionably drunk, came weaving his uncertain | an," I protested stoutly. way along a footpath which ran within a yard of my position. The sudden blazing up of a fire revealed the pnmistakable features -

I permitted him to lead me, his voice never ceasing as we followed the dim trail. I made out little of what he said, nor did I question him. The trail ended before a two-room log cabin, so deeply hidden in the wooks as to be revealed merely by a glimmer of light shining out from within through chinks in the walls. Tim fumbled for the latch and finally opened the door, lurching across the threshold, dragging me along after him. There were two men at a sloppy table, a disreputable looking white woman stirring the contents of a pot hung over the open fire, and a fellow behind the bar, attired in a dingy white apron. It was all sordid enough, and dirty-a typical frontier grogshop; but the thing of most interest to me was the proprietor. The fellow was the same red-mustached individual whom I had watched disembark from the steamer that same afternoon, slipping in the yellow mud as he surmounted the bank, dragging his vallse along after him. So it was this fellow passenger who had given these fugitives refuge: it was his, presence in these parts which had decided Kirby to make the venture ashore. He glanced up at our entrance, the glare of light overhead revealing a deep, ugly scar across his chin and a pair of deep-set, scowling

"Back in time fer supper, hey, Kennedy," he growled, none too cordially. 'Who's yer frien'?"

"A feller whut's goin' ter enlist. He's all right, Jack," the deputy hiccoughed thickly. "Le's liquor, an' then we'll eat. I'm payin' the bill-so whut's it ter yer?"

"Nuthin' 'tall; eny frien' o' yers gits

"Seen yer afore sumwhar, ain't I?" "I reckon." I replied indifferently, watching Tim fill his glass. "I worked my way up on the boat; saw yer on board.'

"Sure; that's it; 'tain't in my line fer ter forgit a face. Yer ain't en-ol' man." Rale found me a tin basin, water, a bit of rag for a towel, and a small, cracked mirror, in which my reflection was scarcely recognizable. He was a man of few words, contenting himself with uttering merely a dry comment on Kennedy, who had dropped back into a convenient chair and buried his face on the table.

"Tim's a good fellow, an' I never saw him so blame drunk afore," he said, regretfully. "He an' Kirby hed a row, an' I reckon thet's whut started him

"A row; a quarrel, you mean?" forgetting myself in surprise. "Who's Kirby?

"Joe Kirby; yer sure must know him if yer a river man. Slim sorter feller, with a smooth face; slickest gambler ever wus, I reckon."

"Why, of course," getting control of myself once more. "We picked him up, 'long with Tim, down river. Hed two women with 'em, didn't they? run-away niggers?"

Rale winked facetiously, evidently rather proud of the exploit as it had been related to him.

"Wal', ther way I understan', they wa'n't both of 'em niggers; however, that was the story told on board. This yere Joe Kirby is pretty slick, let me tell you. One of 'em's a white gurl, who just pretended she wus a nigger. I reckon thet even Kirby didn't catch on ter her game at furst; an' when he did he wus too blame smart ter ever let her know. She don't think he knows yet, but she's liable fer ter find convinced the man had some purpose in his conversation, and that he had not finished all he intended to say, when the entrance of customers compelled his return to the bar. His parting words implied that. Perhaps the revolt of the deputy made it necessary for the conspirators to select another helper to properly carry out their nefarious scheme, and Rale had decided that I might answer. I hoped this might prove the explanation and determined to seek the earliest oppor tunity to impress upon that individual the fact that I was desperately in need of money, and decidedly indifferent as to how it was obtained. The two soldiers, whose entrance had interrupted our talk, remained at the bar drinking until after I had completed my toilet, and were still there listening to a story Rale was telling when the statternly white woman announced that supper was ready to serve. Tim slept soundly, while the other men remained engrossed in their game of cards. Rale glanced about at these as though to reassure himself that they were intent on their play then, removing his apron, he crossed the room and drew up a chair opposite me.

"All right, Sal," he grunted shortly. "B. ing on whut yer got."

He remained silent, staring moodily at the fire, until after the woman had spread out the dishes on the table be fore him. Then his eyes fell upon the fare.

"Nice looking mess that," he growled, surveying the repast with un disguised disgust. "No wonder we don't do no business with thet kind ov a cook. No. yer needn't stay-go an make up them beds in the other room. I'll watch things yere."

I judged the fellow had come over intending to resume our interrupted conversation, but hardly knew what he had best venture. I decided to give him a lead.

"I ain't got ne money, myself," I began to explain, apologetically, "but Tim thar sed he'd pay my bill."

"Sure, that's all right; I ain't a worryin' none. Maybe I might put yer in an easy way o' gettin' hold o' a little coin-thet is if ye ain't too blame perticular."

"Me!" I laughed. "Well, I reckon I don't aim fer ter be thet. I've bin ten years knockin' 'bout between New Orleans an' Saint Louee, steamboatin' mostly. Thet sort o' thing don't make no saint out'r eny kin'd man, I reckon.

What sort'r job is it?" He eyed me cautiously, as though not altogether devoid of suspicion. "Yer don't somehow look just the same sort o' chap, with them ther' whiskers shaved off," he acknowledged soberly. "Yer a sight better lookin' then I thought yer wus, an' a sight younger. Wha wus it yer cum frum?" "Frum Saint Louee, on the boat, if thet's what yer drivin' at."

Yer ain't got no bum's face." "Oh, I see; well, I cap't help that, kin I? I wus raised down in Mississip', an' run away when I wus fourteen. I've been a dr'ftin' long ever since.

I reckon my face ain't goin' ter hurt none so long as the pay is right." "No. I reckon maybe it won't. I've seed sum baby faces in my time thet sure hed the devil behind 'em. Whut's yer name?"

"Moffett-Dan Moffett." He fell silent, and I was unpleasanty aware of his continued scrutiny, my heart beating fiercely, as I endeavored to force down more of the food as an excuse to remain at the table. What would he decide? Finally he spoke

"But last summer I was attracted to a house which looked rather cool and comfortable and as though the people who lived in it had gone away and left the blinds down.

"Now when I say I was attracted to the house I mean that the house looked attractive to me and so I went there. I went in first through a crack under the door. I looked about me when I got inside and I thought to myself: 'Dear me, I have the whole place to myself." But I found that a number of spider friends and cousins had come to the house too.

Come?"

"'Well,' they said, upon seeing me, 'have you come to this hotel to board? It's really quite good. Meals are fine. We've found a number of delicious little creatures to nibble at.'

"'Yes,' I said, 'I've come to this hotel to board, but I won't pay my board.'

"'Oh, won't you?' said they.

"'I will not,' I answered. 'I do not pay board. It's a foolish thing to do, a waste of time, and besides I haven't the money. I wouldn't pay board for anything, for it spoils people.'

"Yes, they think they can do anything when they charge board. They can be rude and only give you so much of this and so much of that, and they have to watch over you to see that you don't eat more than you are allowed. At least that is my idea of boarding, though I suppose for those who have plenty of money it is all right.

"But I have no money, none at all." "Neither have I," said the spider who was listening.

"Therefore I cannot board," said Mr. Spider.

Well, as I was saving, my relatives and friends talked to me and when I said that I wouldn't pay my board they said: "Oh, that is quite all right, Mr, Spider, None of us do. Besides we feel "'Tain't what I'm drivin' at. Whar sure the people who have gone away else did yer cum frum afore then? will be glad if they hear that some of the Spider family are watching over their house in their absence.'
