POPULAR BANKER WINS DESERVED PROMOTION

The Informer man learned this week that J. R. Benson, the able and efficient cashier of The First State Bank of this city, has been elected active vice president of the City State Bank of Wellington, and will on September first take up his duties with that institution. Hearing this, and fearing that Hedley was to lose one of her first citizens and most able business men, the editor went to Mr. Benson for confirmation. He confirmed the rumor, but, much to our relief, advised us that he would not give up his interests in the local bank nor his direction of its affairs. He is, to use a trite expression, merely "spreading out." He will take up the vice presidential duties at the Wellington bank Sept. 1st, but retains his directorship of the First State Bank, and will divide his time between the two institutions, being here two or three days out of each week. Although we are selfish enough to want all of him, we can but accept the situation gracefully and congratulate him upon his big promotion, and also congratulate his associates in these institutions upon their ability to "pick a winner."

Mr. Benson came to the Hedley bank four and a half years ago, when the First State Bank was what might be justifiably termed a struggling small town bank, and Mr. Benson was a young man of limited business experience. But if he was young in years, and short on business experience, he was long on grit, and hustle, and common sense, eager to put his business to the forefront, and well adapted by nature, by hard work and by determination to do that thing. That he has accomplished that which he sought to do, is well known of all men in these parts. Now the "struggling small town bank" is the second largest bank in Donley county, and probably the strongest bank in Texas in a town of Hedley's size. It now counts its customers by the hundreds, instead of by ones and twos, and is the trusted and never failing financial agent of a large per cent of the people of this section. It never turns a deaf ear when aid is needed, and no honest man or woman in Hedley territory ever needs to go elsewhere for a lift over the financial rough places.

And we all know that J. R. Benson is largely—very largely—responsible for this delightful state of affairs; and it occasions no wonder in the mind of those who know him. Invariably agreeable, sympathetic and courteous, with none of the "high and lofty" airs that the weaker man will gradually amass when presiding in places of power, he has inevitably drawn to himself—and to the institution he directs—the full confidence and esteem of the people.

And in addition to all this, both

Mr. and Mrs. Benson are leaders in the social and church life of our little city, and we very much regret that Hedley will suffer most along these lines by reason of the new arrangement, since the family will make their home in Wellington. Well, we congratulate Wellington on its acquisition, and ourselves that we are not losing them entirely. If any excuse is needed for this rather lengthy comment, let Hugh Fitzgerald's motto supply it: "Flowers for the living—if they deserve them."

RESULTS OF PRIMARY IN DONLEY COUNTY

Since practically all our readers are already conversant with the results of last Saturday's primary in this county and district, we shall not attempt an elaborate chart at this time. The Donley county vote was very light, as it was over the state, only 1141 of about 1640 qualified voters being sufficiently interested to express themselves in so important a matter as the selection of a Governor for their State. We are unable to understand why this is so. But if you want our opinion, it is this: Any man who fails to pay his poll tax, AND VOTE, has no sort of right to criticize the Government or the acts of any officer, no matter what happens.

The Hedley precinct polled only 201 votes for Governor, rather evenly distributed, as follows: Neff 64, Bailey 50, Thomason 46, Looney 41. In the District Attorney race, Childers led Mood by a vote of 154 to 34. For County Judge, Link 146, Hoggard 55. Tax Assessor, Naylor 108, McQueen 7, Warren 84. Commissioner Precinct 3, Pickett 154, Ayers 41. Justice of the Peace, L. F. Stewart. Constable, W. A. Pierce.

The Donley County vote on the Home Ownership Amendment, the Governor's race, and local contested offices is given below:

Amendment:
For 401; against 176.
Governor:
Bailey 389, Neff 295, Thomason 240, Looney 217.

W. A. Johnson led with 604 votes for Lieut. Governor, Davidson for Court of Criminal Appeals, Pierson for the Supreme Court, Terrell for Commissioner of Agriculture, Mayfield for Railroad Commissioner, Wiginton for Comptroller.

Congressman Jones and Representative Hill won without opposition, as did Sheriff Rutherford, Clerk Bray, Attorney Berille, Treasurer Goldston, and Surveyor Killough. Winning County Commissioners were: In Pre. 1, F. L. Goldston; Pre. 2, W. P. Cagle; Pre. 3, J. B. Pickett; Pre. 4, T. L. Naylor.

District Attorney:
Childers 650, Mood 551.
County Judge:
Link 1155, Hoggard 216.
Tax Assessor:
Warren 605, Naylor 596, McQueen 39.

Case Seemed Hopeless

Use of Doan's, However, Brought Complete Recovery and the Results Have Been Lasting. "I used to think my back would surely break," says Mrs. H. S. Fix, prominent lodge woman, 240 Carpenter Street, Reading, Pa. "My back pained me constantly. I was as helpless as a baby and a nurse had to stay with me all the time. The kidney secretions burned and passed as often as every ten minutes. Sometimes my eyes were almost closed by the swollen sacs beneath them and my limbs, too, swelled twice their normal size. For almost a year I was practically helpless and never expected to get downstairs again. I had been told that nothing could be done for me, and I had given up all hope of ever getting better. My condition was critical when I was told about Doan's Kidney Pills. I began using them and the pills made me hopeful of getting well. The pain in my back and my swollen limbs started to subside. I kept on using them until I was entirely well. I swear to Doan's Kidney Pills."

U.S. Supreme Court Saves the Birds

BLANFATH LAKE, OREGON

FOE OF INSECT PESTS

By JOHN DICKINSON SHERMAN
OUR migratory birds are safe. The federal migratory bird act of 1918, designed to carry out provisions of a treaty between this country and Canada for the protection of migratory birds, has been held constitutional by the Supreme court of the United States. This takes us back to a blustering party of shooters who were popping away merrily at the mallards and bluebills in a marsh at Nevada, Mo. It really was a distinguished party. In it were Attorney General Frank McAllister of Missouri; J. R. Reynolds of Kansas City; E. S. Vilmore, Kansas City, and M. S. Bodine and Clarence Evans of Paris, Mo.

But congress had previously passed the federal migratory bird act, which among other things prohibits spring shooting of water fowl. How came it then, that the attorney general of the state of Missouri was in the party? Well, he was "from Missouri." The Missouri folks have to be shown, you know. And Attorney General McAllister and his friends had an idea that the migratory bird act was unconstitutional. They liked to shoot ducks—spring, as well as fall—and they proclaimed that the act interfered with the sovereignty of the state of Missouri and with the property rights of the people of Missouri.

So Attorney General McAllister of Missouri and his friends went hunting March 7, 1919. Moreover, they didn't care who knew it. Maybe they even tipped it off to the federal game wardens. Anyway, the federal game wardens put in an appearance and arrested the attorney general and his party. The party was arraigned at Clinton, Mo. McAllister took the case into court, asking for an injunction to restrain the federal game wardens from enforcing the law. Federal Judge A. S. Van Valkenburgh held the law constitutional and the state appealed to the United States Supreme court.

To George Shiras III, and Elihu Root the millions of bird-lovers owe gratitude. So do the millions of gardeners and farmers who, with the insectivorous birds gone, would be eaten up by their insect foes. George Shiras, a member of congress from Pennsylvania, began the fight away back in 1904. Elihu Root—possibly the most commanding intellect in the country today—clinched the victory.

T. Gilbert Pearson, secretary and executive officer of the National Association of Audubon societies, who has also a big share in the victory, is a wide-awake citizen and thoroughly familiar with the situation. Let him tell the story of the long, hard fight. Says Mr. Pearson:

"George Shiras III, was a man of means who was interested in good works. In looking over the situation in reference to the protection of birds, he discovered that the states all had different seasons in which migratory game birds could be shot and that what the situation really amounted to was that game birds could be shot in different parts of the country all through the year. He decided that the only way to remedy this state of affairs, which would in time result in the extinction of game birds, was to put the matter under government control and thus do away with the constant and everlasting wrangling of the states. So he introduced a bill in congress for protection of migratory birds. It was read, committee and put in a pigeonhole."

"The state, as we have intimated, founds its claim of exclusive authority upon an assertion of title to migratory birds, an assertion that is embodied in statute. No doubt it is true that as between a state and its inhabitants the state may regulate the killing and sale of such birds, but it does not follow that its authority is exclusive of paramount powers. To put the claim of the state upon title is to lean upon a slender reed. Wild birds are not in the possession of any one; and possession is the beginning of ownership. The whole foundation of the state's rights is the presence within their jurisdiction of birds that yesterday had not arrived, tomorrow may be another state and in a week 1,000 miles away. We are not to be accused of not putting the case shoot one, that breaks up the pair for the season. "Well, four years after the pigeonholing of Shiras' bill, John B. Weeks introduced in the house the same bill with slight modifications. Nothing came of it. He introduced it again in 1909, and again in 1911, while at the same time George P. McLean introduced a similar bill in the senate. In the spring of 1912 committee hearings on the bill were begun. "Both these bills mentioned migratory game birds only. Now, there are only about 50 game birds," Mr. Pearson said meditatively, puffing his pipe, "and there are 1,200 kinds of birds in North America. There are 51 warblers alone in the eastern part of the United States. Therefore, the Audubon society urged that the bill be changed to apply to all migratory birds, and this change was adopted and put before congress. "The bill became a law on March 4, 1914; ex-President Taft signed it on the morning that he gave up his office as one of his last official acts. Authority was given to the department of agriculture, then, to go ahead and make the rules governing the killing of birds. The department of agriculture did not know anything about birds, so they turned it over to a special branch of the department, the Biological survey. Three men of the Biological survey drew up a lot of regulations and announced them to the states. Immediately there was a roar of objections from all over the country, and all of the states thought their rights had been infringed. "Then came a test case. Out in Big Lake, Ark., a man killed a coot in violation of the regulations. He was arrested and the federal judge for the Eastern district of Arkansas declared the federal migratory bird law illegal. The case, of course, then went to the Supreme court of the United States. The Supreme court was very hostile, and the case dragged along for several months. Finally, the Supreme court did a very unusual thing. It asked the department of agriculture to restate its case, from which we understood that the court was a tie, and the case was referred back to the department of justice. "In the period of waiting which followed Elihu Root came to our assistance. 'This may be declared unconstitutional and everything lost,' he said, 'but we may be able to beat it. A treaty is not subject to revision by the Supreme court, so why not get these ideas written into a treaty? "Immediately the machinery was set in motion which would turn the bill into a treaty. After a great deal of trouble arrangements were finally concluded with Great Britain for Canada and the treaty was drawn up. But a treaty is a dead letter unless congress by law states what department shall enforce it—that is every treaty requires an enabling act. "I went down to Washington and spent six weeks there trying to arouse interest in the enabling act for our treaty. The treaty was ratified by congress on September 29, 1916, and a year or so later the enabling act was passed. Then the government, remembering the tremendous amount of abuse heaped upon them after the drafting of the first set of regulations, decided to have a committee to find out what the people wanted, and they appointed a national committee of first a dozen men and later about 20. "Soon after this in Missouri some men went hunting and violated the regulations and were arrested. The case was referred to the Supreme court, and on this case the present decision is based, holding legal the enabling act and thus protecting the treaty."

"This very wise decision makes quite clear the position of state rights when it comes to birds. It says: "The state, as we have intimated, founds its claim of exclusive authority upon an assertion of title to migratory birds, an assertion that is embodied in statute. No doubt it is true that as between a state and its inhabitants the state may regulate the killing and sale of such birds, but it does not follow that its authority is exclusive of paramount powers. To put the claim of the state upon title is to lean upon a slender reed. Wild birds are not in the possession of any one; and possession is the beginning of ownership. The whole foundation of the state's rights is the presence within their jurisdiction of birds that yesterday had not arrived, tomorrow may be another state and in a week 1,000 miles away. We are not to be accused of not putting the case the state upon higher ground than that the treaty deals with creatures that for the moment are within the state borders, that it must be carried out by officers of the United States within the same territory and that but for the treaty the state would be free to regulate this subject itself. "With the federal migratory bird law in operation and Canada holding up her end—as she is—the birds have a chance. As soon as Mexico is brought to time and made to behave decently, the same kind of treaty will be arranged with her. Then the birds will be protected all along the line of migration. "It is the opinion of most duck shooters that the good effect of the federal migratory bird law is already very much in evidence. The birds now nest in many of their old nesting places in the United States, instead of going clear to northern Canada. Like all wild life they are quick to sense their protection and to take advantage of it. In consequence the hunter, from his viewpoint, is pleased with the working of the law because it gives him more ducks to shoot in the fall. "The judgment of the hunter is confirmed by that of the biologist. The United States Biological survey is engaged in a study of the conditions at the larger breeding places in various parts of the country. A 1920 report on "Waterfowl in Nebraska"—an illustrated bulletin of 77 pages by Harry C. Oberholser—says on this point, in part: "In its natural state—that is, unaffected by the presence of man—the sand hill region of Nebraska is an ideal breeding place for waterfowl. It is, indeed, one of the very best of the remaining breeding grounds. The great number of marshy lakes, with their abundant supply of food, shelter, and breeding places provide advantages which it would be difficult to surpass. "It is the universal testimony of residents and of sportsmen that the myriads of ducks which in former times frequented the sand hill region, particularly during spring and fall, have been greatly reduced. This diminution is due in part to spring shooting, but also to a number of other causes, including the slaughter of ducks in great numbers both south and north of Nebraska. The migration flights here, however, are still large and show that there remains a good supply of waterfowl, which with proper protection and reasonable regulation of shooting will continue indefinitely to furnish excellent sport. The breeding waterfowl of the sand hills also have suffered from hunters, particularly in spring. On many of the lakes there are club houses owned by sportsmen from cities outside of the county, who were long in the habit of shooting here regularly in spring. "Since the enactment of the federal statute of 1913, known as the federal migratory bird law, there has been comparatively little spring shooting in the sand hill region, for the law seems to have been very well observed. "In all the localities that the writer visited he made careful inquiries regarding the effect that the stopping of spring shooting has had on the numbers of waterfowl, particularly ducks. It is gratifying to note that after the federal law into effect ducks began steadily to increase in Nebraska, particularly in the lakes of eastern Nebraska, those about the headwaters of the North Platte river, and at the Cody Lakes, where the resident population is so small that the ducks are not shot in spring. "The numbers

Food Would Sour and Boil—Teeth Like Chalk
Mr. Herbert M. Gessner writes from his home in Berlin, N. H.: "I had stomach trouble over ten years; kept getting worse. I tried everything for relief but it came back worse than ever. Last fall I got awfully bad; could only eat light loaf bread and tea. In January I got so bad that what I would eat would sour and boil; my teeth would be like chalk. I suffered terribly. I prayed every day for something to cure me. One day I read about EATONIC and told my wife to get me a box at the drug store as I was going to work at 4 p. m. I took one-third of it and began to feel relief; when it was three-fourths gone, I felt fine and when it was used up I had no pains. Wife got me another box but I have felt the pain but twice. I used five tablets out of the new box and I have no more stomach trouble. Now I write to tell you how thankful I am that I heard of EATONIC. I feel like a new man; I eat what I like, drink plenty of water, and it never hurts me at all."

And then, above all, you have the sweet recollection of your jolly bachelor days."

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it. A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale." According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism. You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by Parcel Post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.—Adv.

TEXAS BREEDER BUYS THE JAYHAWKER

By John C. Halderman, in Poland China Journal

Another great sire has been added to the ever increasing number of good boars in the great Texas territory. The Jayhawker, the great April yearling, the well known son of The Rainbow, that Fred Caldwell added to his Parkview Herd at Topeka to assist Colonel Bob, has been sold to Frank M. Clark and is now at home in the Silver Crest Herd at Hedley, Texas. When the great sire, Me's Big Chief, died Mr. Clark realized that it would take a great bear to take his place and immediately started out on a still hunt for such a sire. A number of herds were visited and good sires looked over, but was not till Topeka was reached that he felt he had found in The Jayhawker what he wanted. Then a snag was struck, for Caldwell did not care to sell, and it was only after much persuasion, backed up with real money, that he would consent to part with The Jayhawker. However, the deal was consummated and this great yearling has gone to help Texas go forward to its rightful place as the greatest hog state in the Union.

The Jayhawker is a most pleasing individual and has proved himself a breeder of real class, as the good lot of pigs on the Caldwell farm sired by him will bear evidence. He is an April yearling by The Rainbow, the great Dowling boar, he by the $40,000 The Yankee. Jayhawker's dam is Belle Prospect by the good sire Smooth Prospect. In his new home The Jayhawker will be given every opportunity and mated with the great class of sows now at Silver Crest is bound to make himself popular with the friends of this herd. A few of the top things that go in the Clark sale in September will be mated with the Jayhawker. Mr. Clark is to be congratulated upon securing this splendid boar.

LETTER FROM A. J. NEWMAN

The Informer man has received another appreciated letter from his good friend, Uncle Andy Newman, out in California. Their many friends here will be pleased to know that he and Mrs. Newman are getting much pleasure and benefit out of their sojourn in the picturesque state at the edge of the big Pacific. The letter, dated July 18th at Pasorebles, follows:

Editor Informer:

As it has been some time since I wrote you or any of our Hedley friends, will say that my wife and I have been traveling about considerable of late.

We went up to visit the Big Basin and camp grounds for tourists. It sure is some rough mountain country. They call this the Redwood Forest, where the big trees grow. We saw some they told us were 22 feet through; some 350 feet high. This is an excellent campground, cool climate, cool water to drink, and plenty of wood. In fact, the climate is very cool. Along about 5 p. m. one has to wear his overcoat and heavy winter clothes to be comfortable. Seems strange to a Texan, don't you think so?

This Forest is kept up by the State, and they have what are known as "line riders" to keep down forest fires. They told us there were 15,000 visitors here the 4th of July, and most of them had to pass over the same road. It is 3500 feet to the summit, and the air is so light up there it makes anyone not used to it feel strange. The road is 25 feet wide—just "round and round" till you get to the top. While it was O. K. for me, it was too cool for my wife up there, so we had to return to the valley where it is warm.

We join in sending our best love and friendship to the Hedley people. If this doesn't land in the waste basket, we may write again. Love to one and all.

CLAD FOR OUTDOOR AND INDOOR WEAR

THE heart of the flapper rejoices in many smocks, blouses and top-jackets for outdoor wear, that range all the way from plain white, with a little inconspicuous decoration, to vivid colors that form backgrounds for even more vivid cut-out figures posed against them. Among the latter there are slip-over smocks, with short kimono sleeves, in heavy cotton weaves that are shown in orange, green, rose, blue. With figures cut from contrasting colors and black or colored yarns, their makers use them as an artist might a canvas, posing brilliant parrots or gaudy flowers on them. When these figures turn out unexpectedly to be pockets to every one's surprise, the joy of youthful wearers is complete, for it is a fine thing to have one's high spirits visualized in clothes.

A belted smock in blue cotton shown in the picture above is the successor of the middie blouse and plays the same role in the wardrobe. But it is a bit more graceful in lines. Its odd collar and flaring cuffs lend it interest, and they are supplemented by slashes over the hips and the management of the belt which slips through slides. Lest we overlook this cleverness, the designer has put small sprays of embroidered flowers at each side.

A pretty and demure dress of gingham, for the home, is shown in the second picture, and hardly needs description. These small, plain checks are very fashionable this season, for both grown people and all the younger generation. Organdie lends them daintiness. It appears here in a fichu and in little, narrow frills on the cuffs. Often a sash is made of it, but in the dress pictured there is a wide girldie made of a bias strip of gingham. These garments are of the kind that women make at home, and the materials for making them are to be found everywhere; yet they appear in all the best displays in centers of fashion where their qualities are appreciated.

Airy Midsummer Hats in White

SOME of the hats of midsummer might be inspired by thistle-down or the exquisite airy globe that follows the flower of the dandelion—they are so light and so cool-looking. Only the sheerest and most lace-like materials go into their making, mere mists of fabrics in pure white. Their trimmings are often all-white also; the cold but lovely ghosts of gay flowers and fruits and grays that adorn their colorful rivals. Occasionally a little pale color appears in ribbon or other trimming—on these fragile-looking white shapes but designers like best to make them all white.

Half braid, made of the finest laces over the crown, makes the major part of the hat. The white ribbon in the narrow bands appears to lend them just the touch of substance and luster to which the white is so downy.

Half braid crown with very narrow ribbon in rows, and a brim of ribbon loops make the small hat trimmed with tiny roses, white snowdrops and malines cover the rolling brim of the hat having a round crown of hat braid.

The DRAPERS of LONDON

The Garden and the Drapers' Hall.

DERIVING its name from the French "Draperie," meaning cloth work, the Drapers company, as early as 1180, has been associated with the textile trade of London; and has numbered many distinguished men among its members since the proud day, in the reign of Henry I, when Henry Fitz-Alwin, member of the company, became London's first lord mayor, which office he continued to hold for 24 years.

Between 1331 and 1714 no less than 53 drapers were thus honored, says the Christian Science Monitor. Not only did Fitz-Alwin bring civic dignity to the company, but he left it all his lands in St. Mary Bothaw.

Cloth was made in England from very early days, but from Saxon times onward the chief seat of the industry was The Netherlands, whose weavers obtained the raw wool from England. Edward III, anxious to foster it as a British trade, forbade both the export of English wool, and the import of cloth, and invited balloon weavers to settle in England. He gave the first charter to the Drapers company in 1364, to enable it to enforce the statutes relating to the sale of cloths.

Growth of the Industry. The industry had so rapidly increased by 1385 that Sir Nicholas Brembre, mayor of London, issued an order separating drapery from tailory and the weaving business.

Busy times were the fairs of St. Bartholomew, West Smithfield and Southwark, where an enormous trade in textiles was done; and which the drapers and the merchant tailors attended for their trade search, so as to keep sharp guard over illicit practices, such as cloth of unlawful width, or short measure.

Edward III is credited with presenting the "Drapers' Bill" to the company, and frequent items in their accounts are disbursements for new "yards," or "companies standards," and also for cases in which to keep them.

By the reign of Henry VI the drapers had become so powerful that the king granted them their charter of incorporation in 1438, which, with their six other charters, is still preserved. It is a very splendid affair, beautifully illuminated with a head-piece of gold, and colors of the finest work, and is in a perfect state of preservation.

A Tilt With Royalty. Royal extortions and levies do not appear to have affected the drapers as much as some of the other companies, but in 1521 we read of great activity being displayed by them, in conjunction with the "divers auncient felishippes" who assembled at "Frers Austyns" to discuss how they could either avoid or lessen the heavy contribution demanded of them by Henry VIII toward the fitting out of five ships for the explorer, Sebastian Cabot. With great bravery they informed the king that he had no legal right to extort their contributions; and that it was "a sore adventure to Jopard ye shippes with men and goods unto the said island (Newfoundland) upon the singular trust of one man," but finally a peremptory message from "my Lord Cardynall" brought the truculent spirits into due submission.

Keen business men were these staid drapers, for not only do their records contain many entries illustrative of their trade activities, but they show that the management of their charities was equally alert. In 1527 they entered into a prolonged dispute with the Crutched Friars, regarding the boundaries of the ground purchased for almshouses by Sir John Milborn, and of the keeping up by the friars of certain observances in his memory.

Pageants and Processions. If the drapers displayed energy in business and kindly works, they were also always to the fore in the civic pleasures which abounded in the middle ages; and of their "ridings," pageants by land and water, their "midsummer walks" and their processions, birds one of their number chanced to become lord mayor, there are many interesting records.

forth upon the Thames, "at her coming from Greenwich by water." In "Barges freshly furnished with Banners and Streamers of Silke, richly beated and bagges of their Crafts." At these times the barges of the Drapers company were decked with cloth of blue or red, and their trumpeters were resplendent in crimson hats, while their floating banners were adorned with silken fringe "beaten with gold."

Of their land processions, probably the grandest was that in honor of their mayor, Sir Robert Clayton, in 1679, which included a moving stage, and was "dignified with divers delightful varieties of Presenters, with speeches, songs and actions, properly and punctually described, all set forth at the proper cost and charges of the worshipful Company of Drapers."

Catastrophe of 1666. The ancient hall of the drapers was in St. Swithins Lane, but in 1541 the company ended its negotiations with Henry VIII for "Cromwell House," the site of the present hall, which had come to the crown through the attainder of Cromwell, earl of Essex.

The great fire of 1666 stopped its northward fury at Drapers' hall, but great damage was done to the buildings, and the unfortunate clerk of those days, whose house had been demolished, had to take refuge in the Garden house, which, until the fire, had been the house of Mr. Miners, the beadle.

As it remains today, the Drapers' hall displays all the tempered richness of an English country house; and the magnificent suites of rooms, two of which are adorned with perfectly preserved pieces of Gobelin tapestry, and whose walls are hung with splendid pictures, betoken the hospitality of this ancient company. But the feature which lingers most in memory is the quiet and ancient garden, with its shimmering trees, including aged mulberries—from one of which a dish of fruit can still be plucked—its bright-hued flower beds, and its leaden tanks filled with flowers. And though in the very midst of the city's greatest turmoil, it still looks so reposeful that it is easy to remember those other days when "my Lord Ambassador from France" walked the plaisance in the September of 1552, or when one Robert Ratford, the gardener, complained to the court "that by drying of naperye clothes in the Drapers garden, the knolls and borders of herbs therein are destroyed," which resulted in prompt measures being taken to suppress the practice.

Benevolences. Today the Drapers company is actively engaged in administering its trusts, and in promoting education and charitable work in many different ways, by means of its corporate funds. Among the various benefactions may be mentioned its annual scholarships and exhibitions of students in the five chief branches of the textile trade, in their respective districts, and its annual grant of £1,000 toward the chair of agriculture at the University of Cambridge. But the most interesting of its activities is the East London college, with which it is most intimately associated, and which is a university college, giving a full course in natural science, engineering, or art, for the small sum of £10 10s.

The students, both men and women, are mainly drawn from the working classes. The company has expended fully £250,000 upon this college, and contributes a large sum annually toward its maintenance. Its work in connection with both the college and the "People's palace" is marked by most enthusiastic and personal interest, and the drapers are justly proud that this college is the only one in the British Isles where an aeronautical department has been established.

POULTRY FLOCKS

HOW OFTEN TO FEED FLOCK?

Much Depends on Whether They Are Confined or on Free Range—Good Plan Outlined.

Just how frequently chickens should be fed depends on whether they are confined or on the range. Some poultrymen feed their flocks twice a day, while others feed them three times a day. The best plan is to feed fowls in confinement three times a day and those having free range in summer twice a day. When there is a very long interval between feeds it is difficult to keep fowls busy which are kept in confinement. Idle fowls often contract bad habits, such as feather pulling and egg eating, besides going out of condition from lack of exercise. In case it is not convenient to feed three times a day, the moistened mash may be fed in the morning, and at the same time the noon feed of grain may be scattered in the litter, which will keep the fowls busy a great part of the day.

For those who cannot conveniently feed their fowls early in the morning a good plan is to scatter grain plentifully in the litter after the birds have gone to roost. This grain will furnish feed for the early morning, say poultry specialists in the United States department of agriculture.

Some poultry keepers can look after their fowls only once a day. If this is in the morning, moistened mash may be fed, followed by throwing grain in the litter to furnish feed for the remainder of the day. If it is in the evening, before dark, a moistened mash may be given, and either after the fowls go to roost or in the morning, before daylight, grain may be scattered in the litter for eating during the day.

PLANS FOR BROODING DUCKS

Mother Duck or Hen is Quite Satisfactory Where Small Numbers Are Being Reared.

Those rearing ducklings in small numbers usually accept the services of the mother duck or mother hen, according to which is used to do the hatching, and when only a few are reared this is a satisfactory method. Where ducks are raised in large numbers, however, artificial methods are always employed and the brooding is done by individual brooders or by long, hot water pipe systems heated by coal burning boilers.

PROVIDE FOWLS PURE WATER

No Excuse for Permitting Them to Drink Impurities From Puddles—Cause of Diseases.

Fowls are not very discriminating in regard to water, and appear to enjoy drinking from puddles of foul water just as much as from pure and wholesome sources. That is no excuse for permitting them to do so, however, and the impurities in such water often cause serious losses. Either drain the stagnant pools or

POULTRY NOTES

- Hatch the chicks early.
- Provide plenty of shade.
- Many people feed baby chicks too much.
- Keep the house clean and well ventilated.
- Raise young chicks on clean ground away from the general flock. Cull the flock.
- A good feed for little chicks is ordinary johnnycake baked hard, crumbled and fed dry.
- If milk is available, chicks should have all they can consume from the time of the first feeding until mature.
- Where there is a tendency to hock-cott the perch and occupy the lower regions, the young birds should be taught to roost.
- If a flock of ducks is being reared, the water should be kept clean.

To Boro-Budur by Airplane?

GENERAL VIEW OF BORO-BUDUR.

SCENES FROM THE LIFE OF BUDDHA.

ONE OF THE STEPPED ARCHES.

THE airplane marks the beginning of the end of the "silent places." When the aviator comes into his own, time and space will lose their meaning—as far as this earth is concerned. For example, the big game hunter climbs into his airplane at Seattle. Presto! He is at Mount McKinley in Alaska—where are countless caribou, mountain sheep and moose—and not even a national park ranger or a territorial game warden to say him nay.

Reverse the picture! While the airplane means that the new places of earth will soon have lost their newness, it also means that some of the old, old places of earth—so old that the busy world has almost forgotten them—will again attract the public—because they can be reached.

For example, in the center of Java stands Boro-Budur! Never heard of Boro-Budur! Quite likely. Yet it was built at least 12 centuries ago, and it is a more impressive relic of the labors of the ancients of earth than the great pyramid. Once it was visited by thousands of devout worshippers. Now the jungle has crowded in about it and it is a large undertaking to reach it—until airplane service shall have been established!

It is a peculiar fact, says Francis Dickle, in the Scientific American, that some of the great wonders of the world are known to the general run of men and women almost from infancy, while others, quite as remarkable, indeed more so, remain unknown to the world at large. The most striking example of this is the magnificent hill temple of Boro-Budur, one of the most gigantic and finest works ever reared by the ancients. Boro-Budur represents more human labor and artistic skill than the great pyramid. Yet everyone has heard of the great pyramid, while practically no one knows of Boro-Budur.

Boro-Budur was built about the seventh century, A. D., as far as is known from philological research. It lies in central Java and owes its origin to Buddhism. The ashes of Buddha were distributed by his great apostle, King Osaka of India, to eight towns where they were buried. Some time after the ashes were taken from the tombs and redivided into 84,000 parts. These were preserved in vases and given out over all his dominions. When the Buddhist missionaries came to Java in the seventh century they brought one of these vases and, as a fitting receptacle for this, Boro-Budur, the world's greatest temple, was erected—the finest piece of architecture of its kind in the then known world, and one which has never been rivaled since.

For about 800 years Boro-Budur was visited by millions of worshippers; then a Mohammedan invasion swept the country and the temple was deserted. Jungle grew about it and volcanic debris, from the countless active craters the island is famous for, covered it.

In 1914 it was discovered by accident by Sir Stamford Raffles, who started the work of restoring the temple to something of its former glory, which was continued by the Dutch authorities when they took back the island at the close of the Napoleonic wars. Due to this restorative work, the temple can be seen today much as it was 1,300 years ago.

Its out-of-the-way position and the rather indifferent service by train, pony cart, and later auto-bus, are the principal reasons why it is not being visited by more travelers. In addition to this, it has not been extensively advertised like the pyramids. All this now bids fair to be changed, for even in the Malay archipelago—the land of rest, "tomorrow" and backwardness—things are now going ahead with leaps and bounds.

The most startling of all is the project of an airplane service to handle mail and passengers from different points in the archipelago. The undertaking is backed by Dutch capitalists, the most conservative men in the world, so it may be taken for granted that it is thoroughly feasible or they would not have considered it.

And with airplane service Boro-Budur may come into its own. This world wonder, so long unheard of and neglected by the world at large, will be visited by thousands of globe trotters availing themselves of the airplane service.

To tell fully of all the temple's marvels and beauties would take a book. Of it Alfred Russell Wallace, the great scientist, said: "The human labor and skill expended on Boro-Budur is so great that that expended on the great pyramid sinks into insignificance beside it." The following brief description will convey to the reader something of the magnificence and the grandeur of this huge hill temple:

One of the views shows Boro-Budur as it is today, an artificial many-sided mound, a series of galleries, cupolas and spires, surmounted by a vast central dome, 52 feet in diameter, which at one time, it is supposed, was crowned with a spire. Upon ascending the outer terrace of this hill temple, a 30-sided plain is reached. This, however, is not the original foundation. Excavation has disclosed two other terraces six and ten feet respectively below the level of this plain. The Buddhist builders apparently deemed it advisable in this way to strengthen their structure while in course of erection. Formerly a heavy stone parapet surrounded the existing plain.

In the middle of each of the four sides of this parapet an opening gave access to a flight of stairs, at the sides of which were heavy banisters. At the lower end of the stairs are huge laughing lions of stone, which still remain with their fixed laughter after 1,300 years. From the plain similar stairs lead up to the irregularly-shaped galleries and on to the great circular one surrounding the dome, the latter thus being reached without it being necessary to pass through the intervening ones. Each of these many-angled terraces is about ten feet above the preceding one, with a width between the walls of about seven feet, and is drained by gargoyles representing mythical monsters, through the mouths of which the water is led.

At each angle is a Buddha seated in a niche. It is surmounted by a cupola. The Buddha is seated upon a lotus leaf with a halo around its head. The figure is almost nude. As the viewer passes around these galleries both sides are seen to consist of a series of sculptured pictures, surmounted with domes and pinnacles with Buddhas on all sides gazing at one with their inscrutable eyes. All the wonderfully artistic scenes are from the life of Buddha, depicting it from the time he left his lotus leaf throne to descend to earth, and his successive reincarnations until attaining Nirvana, the desired spiritual haven of Buddhism. These sculptures are in high relief centered in rectangular frames. Each relief is a scene from the history of Buddha, and the whole series forms a complete story of his life, from his birth to his death. It is stated that if all the reliefs were placed in a straight line they would extend for three miles. It is estimated that there must be 20,000 carved figures in all.

From the fourth gallery access to the upper level is gained by a stairs of 12 steps. This level has only an outer wall upon which is erected three circular terraces, one rising a few feet above the other. Upon this are 72 remarkably uniform lattice-worked stone dagabas or shrines, each culminating in a slender spire. Each of these beautiful bell-shaped shrines contains a statue of Buddha, each statue facing toward the central dome, which signifies that it is utterly detached from all the temptations and cares of this wicked world.

Such is a brief description of the main points of Boro-Budur, the world's greatest temple, and the finest example of ancient Indian art, which will soon be made accessible by airplane. Perhaps in the years to come this world wonder may attain fame equal to that of the great pyramid. But at present it stands utterly unknown to the world at large.

New Anesthetic Developed.

A highly refined ether, modified by the addition of certain gases, has been found superior as an anesthetic. It eliminates pain without loss of consciousness and reduces to a minimum the nausea that generally follows the use of ether.

The ability to produce insensibility to pain without loss of consciousness opens up an entirely new field, including many operations which are now performed without any attempt to eliminate pain. Certain types of dental operations and obstetrical cases illustrate one point, as well as the changing of packing and dressing of severe wounds.—Scientific American.

CUSTOMS FIFTY YEARS AGO.

Who among us would say to-day, "I never use a Dentifrice; I never have to?" Yet fifty years ago, odd as it may seem, not one person in 1,000 used a Dentifrice—or even a tooth brush. So to-day, after more than 30 years of persistent publicity of Allen's Foot-Ease, the Antiseptic Powder for the Feet, not many well-turned-out people care to confess, "You know I never have to use a Powder for the Feet!" More than One Million five hundred thousand pounds of Powder for the Feet were used by our Army and Navy during the war.

The reason is this: Confining the feet in Leather or Canvas Shoes is bound to create friction more or less. Allen's Foot-Ease removes the friction from the shoes. It is this friction which causes callouses, corns and bunions. You know what friction does to your motor-car axle. Why not remove it from your footwear by Shaking into your Shoes to-day, Allen's Foot-Ease, the cleanly, wholesome, healing, Antiseptic powder? ANNUAL MEETING OF BUCK CREEK STOCK HOLDERS

Tuesday afternoon, according to previous announcement, the stockholders of Buck Creek Oil Company held their annual meeting in this city.

C. D. Akers, President of the Company, called the meeting to order and stated that the object of the meeting was for the election of a Board of five Directors to serve the ensuing year, and for the transaction of any business that might be brought before the meeting.

President Akers presented a detailed report of the financial condition of the Company and just what work had been done by the Directors the past year. After the reading of the report, Mr. Akers called for an expression by the members as to what had been done and what was best to do in future for the completion of the well. He stated that the well had been drilled approximately 1700 feet.

It was the general opinion of the members, after the annual report was read, that the Directors had done their work well and in a thorough and workmanlike manner.

There being less than a majority of the outstanding stock represented, the shareholders could not elect the five Directors for the ensuing year; however, they recommended and endorsed the following named stockholders for Directors, J. M. Calhoun, W. T. Youree, J. B. Pickett, and C. D. Akers, of Hedley, of Dr. O. F. Wilson, of Memphis, to the present Board to serve.

The meeting was full of harmony and a get together spirit and a determination to complete the test to the full 3500 feet at the earliest date possible.

The meeting then adjourned subject to the call of the Directors.

A meeting of the Board of Directors was called for Thursday, July 29th.

"I MUST STAY."

SYNOPSIS.—Alighting from a train at Denver a well-dressed traveler is familiarly accosted by a man about his own age. The traveler ignores the advance. A few minutes later he is greeted as "Will" by an elderly lady and gentleman, who stop their auto to speak. He imagines it a case of mistaken identity and announces himself as "Richard Clinton."

"Is the whole town a pack of lunatics?" exclaimed Clinton, his blue eyes flashing. "I shall not go to a hotel. I will take my train tonight as I intended, and—"

"That's all the good it did you, knocking down poor Charlie boy. You can't run away. I've locked the front door, and I've hidden the key and your hat."

"But I—"

"You must—else I'll never, never let go. You'll have to carry me around with you all the time, everywhere."

"I say, now," remarked Bemm, "if that's not proof you're her brother—"

"That depends," answered Clinton, a trifle dryly.

CHAPTER IV.

The muffled ring of the doorbell stirred Amy to agile activity. She bent down to thrust her fingertips into the side of one tiny slipper.

"Must be doctor!" she exclaimed. "Where in the world did that—Oh, there it is!" She straightened up, rosy cheeked, to flourish the key of the front door in Clinton's face.

"Miss Lowrie," he replied, between amusement and exasperation, "if it were not for you, I would go at once. This continual insistence that I am not—"

"But doctor—he'll soon cure you!" she cried in joyful relief, and she darted into the hall, calling, "Wait, Tillie, I have the key. I'll let him in."

"You are sure that you can furnish proofs?" asked Doctor Kirkland. "Positive."

that was more than a year ago." "Over a year ago," echoed Amy. "What a—fabrication!"

"Please do not interrupt," admonished Doctor Kirkland. He nodded gravely to Clinton. "More than a year ago, you say? Was it a severe accident?"

"No, you need have no fear of that. Only you must be calm and reasonable. You will understand how conditions such as yours develop if you will kindly permit me to explain about the peculiarities of amnesia—the peculiar results of the loss of the time memory, combined with the frequently associated phenomena resultant in disorientation, hallucinations—"

"I shall at once return to the station," he said. "I have agreed to send on for proofs of my identity I shall do so. They will be mailed direct to you. In the meantime you can telegraph to your missing friend or to those who have charge of him. But I will stay here no longer."

BRAND TUBERCULOUS CATTLE

New York Commissioner of Agriculture Orders Letter "T" Put on Affected Animals.

By a recent order of the New York commissioner of agriculture, all practicing veterinarians in that state are required to brand cattle found by them to be affected with tuberculosis. The order specifies that the brand shall be the letter "T" not less than 2 or more than 3 inches high and on the left jaw.

RAISING SHEEP FOR MUTTON

There Are Many Areas, Especially in Hilly Regions, Where Few Animals Could Be Kept.

Sheep are not very generally kept on farms for supplying the home family with meat. There are many areas, especially in hilly or mountainous regions, where nearly every farm could keep a few mutton sheep to advantage, says the United States department of agriculture.

brush and, if confined to small areas, will do a fair job at cleaning up land. When used in this way, or on land producing brush only, they can not be expected to prove very satisfactory in the production of good lambs or good wool."

HOW HOG MANGE IS SPREAD

Disease is Contracted More Rapidly Among Animals of Low Vitality—Cure by Dipping.

Hog mange is spread mainly by direct bodily contact, according to investigations recently conducted by the United States department of agriculture. The disease is contracted most rapidly among hogs of low vitality, especially those kept in small inclosures. It spreads more slowly among vigorous animals kept in pastures or in clean, well-lighted roomy pens or buildings.

DAIRY FACTS

COOL MILK IN HOT WEATHER

Essential to Pipe Spring Water to Dairy House, Where It Should Flow Into Tank.

City regulations now require that milk be cooled artificially as it is drawn from the cow. According to specialists in the United States department of agriculture, the most simple and efficient method of handling this matter is to harness natural resources on farms having permanent springs that flow throughout the year and do not dry up in the summer.

It is essential to pipe the spring water to the dairy house where it should flow into a concrete tank of size adequate to provide ample space for cooling the maximum production of milk on that farm. The tank should also be provided with an outlet or overflow so that a constant stream of water passes through it. Ingenious farmers may be able to devise some other use for this flow of water during the time when the tank is not needed for cooling milk. Ordinarily the temperature of the spring water in the tank does not get lower than 55 degrees F.

On dairy farms where springs are not available it is customary to use concrete cooling tanks which are insulated with cork and provided with a hinged top, so that ice can be used to decrease the temperature of the water in which the milk cans are placed. Generally these tanks are made in two divisions, so that when most of the cows are dry the smaller compartment can be used for cooling the dairy products, as its use necessitates smaller drain on the ice supply and eliminates the cooling of a large amount of water. When the herd flow is at a maximum both chambers of the cooling tank are used.

Uncooled milk and cream usually result in the production of dairy products of low quality and often of sour milk and cream as well as products of high bacterial content. The investment in cooling tanks, equipped either with spring water or ice cooled, pays heavy interest the year around and is profitable on every dairy farm. Milk of high bacterial content will remain sweet for 12 hours at 100 degrees F.; 36 hours at 75 degrees; 80 hours at 55 degrees, and 180 hours at 40 degrees, according to experiments of the United States department of agriculture; while milk of low bacterial content kept sweet for 36 hours at 100 degrees F.; 60 hours at 75 degrees; 180 hours at 55 degrees, and 306 hours at 40 degrees.

FUTURE USEFULNESS OF COW

Great Deal Depends on How Calf is Brought Up First Year—Give Plenty of Roughage.

The future usefulness of the cow depends a great deal upon how the calf is brought up during the first year. It should have plenty of water and salt presented in clean vessels, sudden changes of diet avoided and regularity of feeding practiced. Warm, dry quarters are necessary if the weather is damp.

DAIRY NOTES

Scrub bulls make scrub farmers.

Use only fresh milk. Several neighbors will buy together.

The sale of fresh milk furnishes a steady income throughout the year.

Give your cow a chance to do her best. Do not feed her too much.

Give it to her and she will give you.

It is a good remedy.

Clinton Was a Fraction of a Second Quicker.

"You mean you believe you know. You are not conscious of being other than what and who you think you are. May I ask if you have ever studied abnormal psychology?"

"I am not a doctor," said Clinton, a trifle dryly.

"But I know that I am not he; I know I am Richard Clinton."

"My memory, sir, is excellent."

"Two darlings—my fiancée and my little—sister!"
