CALOMEL LOSING OUT IN SOUTH

Mr. Dodson, the "Liver Tone" Man, Responsible for Change for the Better.

Every druggist in town has noticed a great falling off in the sale of calomel. They all give the same reason. Dodson's Liver Tone is taking its place.

"Calomel is dangerous and people know it." Dodson's Liver Tone is personally guaranteed by every druggist who sells it. A large bottle doesn't cost very much, but if it fails to give easy relief in every case of liver sluggishness and constipation, just ask for your money back.

Dodson's Liver Tone is a pleasanttasting, purely vegetable remedy, harmless to both children and adults. Take a spoonful at night and wake up feetlag fine; no biliousness, sick headache, seid stomach or constipated bowels. It doesn't gripe or cause inconvenience all the next day tike violent calomel. ### RISKS HIS NECK JUMPING FROM RACING AUTOMOBILE TO PLANE

"Dare-devil Bill" Strother thinks no more of hopping from a racing auomobile to a rope ladder swinging from an airplane, than does the average citizen of swinging aboard a moving street car. When both the plane and auto are hitting a 75-mile gait, the plane swoops low so that Strother can grab the bottom rung of the rope ladder and swing himself up. The photograph shows Strother standing on the back of his racing car about to start around the track to do his daily stunt.

Few Hours Spent in Going Over Motors Will Keep Them in Good Condition.

BOLTS NEED TIGHTENING UP

Good Point to Thoroughly Clean the Cooling System Before Warm Weather-Eliminate Squeaks and Look After Springs.

Keeping a motorcar in excellent working order is a simple matter when a regular schedule of lubrication and adjustments is followed. Most drivers are quite conscientious in attending to the minor details during warm and fair weather because they realize that all of the little things go to rounding out more perfect operation.

All-year driving has become the custom rather than the exception. During the winter there seems to be a tendency on the part of some to neglect the usual routine and to let slip such matters as attending to grease cups, spring elips, drip pan, etc.

Should Tighten Bolts. Should squeaks of any kind develop in the body they may be eliminated by simply tightening the body bolts with a good-sized wrench, which will draw the body down firmly in position squeaks are apparent, to inspect the bolts after winter driving to see that they are drawn up good and snug against the lock washers.

Another simple matter is the proper care of springs. Springs do an extraordinary amount of work and when the ground is frozen the shocks they meet are greatly multiplied. The slight effort involved in caring for them will be repaid many times by the added comfort derived and the added protection afforded all working parts of the car.

It is essential that the spring clips be kept tight at all times in order that the spring leaves will be held firmly together. As spring leaves generally break on the rebound, it is necessary that the leaves hold together in order to divide up the shock.

At this time of the year it is also advisable to jack up the car, loosen the spring ellps and spread the leaves apart, and with a thin, flat instrument liberally smear the surfaces of the spring leaves with a mixture of flake graphite and motor oil. This lubricant will permit the leaves to slip over each other with very little friction, skid, thus giving the same smoothness of action as when the car was new.

Clean Cooling System.

It is also a good point, after driving in motor vehicles, the car all winter, to thoroughly clean the cooling system before warm weather comes on. No matter what kind of antifreeze mixture is used a certain amount of sediment is bound to settle in parts of the system or adhere to the cylinder and radiator

A simple method of cleaning the system is to drain off the water and then turn a hose in the filler cap of the radiator to admit a moderate stream of water. Let the motor run at a low speed, leaving open the pet cock at the bottom of the radiator. Another good point is to check up the brakes to see that they are properly adjusted.

If the car has been in use all during the winter a thorough washing and cleaning is also advisable. It is especiall, important to clean the chassis where dirt and ice accumulated in driving over slushy and wet

OF BIG ASSISTANCE WHEN STUCK IN MUD

Kink Is Well Worth Knowing in Time of Trouble.

Two Pieces of Cord Wood Chained to Wheels Will Help in Pulling Car Out of Hole or Rut When Engine Is Started.

The illustration does not look like much of anything, but when you're really "down in the mud," it is one of the best little life preservers that's going, but don't be too quick about using it unless you are really "down In it." The best idea is to have side lugs not very far away if you expect small mud-hole troubles and use them before your small troubles become big ones, but occasionally you will really Get two pieces of four-foot cord wood, and lean them against the front of the wheels and chain them near the top. Then throw in your clutch, the stake will be pulled into the ground and broken off, but before it breaks the engine will have made six to ten feet and there are very few holes that take more than two applications of this kind of medicine to get the engine out. But be very careful not to let your chains catch on any other part of the engine.

The Threeness of the One God

By REV. E. J. PACE

Director of Missionary Course, Moody Bible Institute, Chicago.

TEXT .- The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the com-munion of the Holy Spirit be with you all.-II Cor. 13:14

In the familiar words of the apos tolic benediction, so called, without which no assem bly of Christians seems fittingly dismissed, reverberates the supreme fact of the Christian revelation, namely that God exists a trinity of persons in a unity of nature. is one God. and yet there are three persons; not three Gods, nor yet three manifestations of the one God. as in the religion of the Hindoos, but three persons, each distinct from the other two, and yet bound to both by mutual bonds of complementary life and love relation-

We grant there is mystery here. But where in this universe will we encounter no mystery? When we can explain one of the manifold mysteries that are locked up in a single drop of water, or in one beam of light, we will then demand an explanation of this, the profoundest mystery of all, the tri-unity of the one Godhead.

So, let it be repeated, we have here a fact of revelation, and of the Christian revelation, mind you, a fact which, while not opposed to reason, nevertheless transcends reason. ence unaided never could have discovered it; and yet when once the fact is revealed, lo, even science comes laden with presumptive evidence from myriad sources; and not only so, but the artist from his palette, and the musician from his keys, all of them come bearing united testimony that underneath all the phenomena of nature, as well as all the harmonies of both light and sound, lies the number

Every schoolbody knows how with three primary colors-red, yellow and blue-he can make any other color. Indeed, every imaginable tint or hue in the universe is but the biending of these three undivided colors. And it does not take long for the lassle at the piano stool to learn that all the infinite range of possibilities in the harmony of sound results from the blending of three primary triads of notes. The scientist in his eager search for unifying laws cannot get less than three categories in which to cast all physical phenomena. These three categories are substance, form and force. And how strikingly suggestive these three! For what have we in substance but the Father? What the "express image of the Father's substance (Heb. 1:3); and what have we in force but the Spirit, by whose power all effects in creation and redemption are wrought?

Upon unbeliever's deaf ear all these voices fall in vain. Rejecting the "record which God gave of his Son;" unable to see in Jesus Christ more than the son of a peasant, of Galilee, the faithless rationalist sees in all these shadowings of the Triure God no meaning whatsoever, with the consequence that he lands just where the unitarian Moslem landed, in the icy polar region of a loveless, fatalistic. uni-personal God, within whose steel grip all is "kismet" (fated); or es caping this lands at the other antipode of un-personal panthelsm, which inevitably ends with the delfying of man; or failing these two, lapses into

But faith's Spirit-Illumined eyes see the Deity of Jesus Christ as necessary-as necessary as form is to substance and as substance is to force. With this sixth sense the Christian sees and hears all the universe vibrant with praises of the Triune God.

in our text three differentiating rords qualify the three persons of the Triune God, which words, we shall see, are as necessarily inter-related as substance, form and force, to which they are also analogous.

"The grace of the Lord Jesus Christ." Grace is the free bestowment of unmerited favor, and grace is love embodied. Grace is the form of which love is the substance! "God (the Father) so loved the world that He gave his only begotten Son." It is very significant that nearly everywhere in the New Testament the "love of God" is bound up with the cross of Cavalry. "Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that God loved us, and gave his Son to be the propitiation for our sins"-1 John 4:10. this one act of redemptive grace, the sin question was settled so far as the loving God was concerned. "God is reconciled-he ye also reconciled to But both the substance (love) and the form (grace) in which the substance was embodied are powerless inless there is the "communion of the believer's heart all those blessed con-sequences of redemption which were wrought out by the "grace" of the Scs. but willed by the "love" of the

HOW WOMEN AVOID SURGICAL OPERATIONS

Some Are Extremely Necessary, Others May Not Be

Every Woman Should Give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Chicago, Ill. - "I was in bedwith a female trouble and inflammation and had four inflammation and had four doctors but none of them did me any good. They all said I would have to have an operation. A druggist's wife told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took 22 bottles, never missing a dose and at the end of that time I was perfectly well. I have never had occasion to take it again as I well. I have never had occasion to take it again as I have a six room flat and do all my work. My two sisters are taking the Compound upon my recommendation and you may publish my letter. It is the gospel truth and I will write to any one who wants a personal letter."—Mrs. E. H. HAYDOCK, 6824 St. Lawrence Ave., Chicago, Ill.

A Vermont woman adds her testimony to the long line of those fortunate women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after it had been decided an operation was necessary:

Burlington, Vt.—"I suffered with female trouble, and had a number of doctors who said that I would never be any better until I had an operation. I was so bad I could hardly walk across the floor and could not do a thing. My sister-in-law induced me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it certainly has helped me wonderfully. I keep house and do my work and have a small child. I have recommended Vegetable Compound to a number of my friends and you may publish my testimonial."—Mrs. H. R. SHARON. Apple Tree Point Farm, Burlington, Vt.

In hospitals are many women who are there for surgical operations, and there is nothing a woman dreads more than the thought of an operation, and the long weary months of recovery and restoration to strength if it is successful. It is very true that female troubles may through neglect reach a stage where an operation is the only resource, but most of the commoner ailments of women are not the surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same. When disturbing ailments first appear take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve the present distress and prevent more serious troubles. In fact, many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound after operations have been advised by attending physicians.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Private Text-Book upon "Ailments Peculiar to Women" will be sent to you free upon request. Write to The Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Massachusetts. This book contains valuable information.

CALF FED TO WEANING TIME

Quite Simple Matter if Mother Has Sufficient Milk to Nourish Youngster Properly.

The feeding of a beef calf from birth until it is weaned is a very simple matter if its mother gives milk enough to nourish it properly. The principal part of the calf's ration, therefore, may be cheaply and safely provided by giving its mother the proper feeds for the production of milk. Do not feed the cow too heavily on grain soon after she has dropped the calf. While, it is important that the calf have plenty of milk at all times, it should never have too much, especially soon after birth. The following suggestions are designed particularly for select animals chosen especially for breeding purposes, says the United States Department of Agri-

A calf dropped in the fall or winter probably will do better if kept separated from its mother and allowed to suck night and morning. In summer it should be provided with a lot for exercise and pasture in the daytime, and during the winter with a wellbedded box stall at night. When the calf is from four to six weeks old it is a good plan to bring it from the lot early in the morning, allow it to suck, then take it to the pen or stall to be fed some grain. It should also be suckled at night before grain is fed, then taken out to the grass lot or be fed a little hay in the stall. To be kept contented when away from its mother a calf should run with other calves. A bull calf should be separated from the heifers at the age of three or four months. If the calf is dropped late in winter or spring it may be more convenient to allow it to run with its dam for several months on pasture.

Since milk is nature's food for the calf it would be reasonable to suppose that milk alone is sufficient feed for it. In all cases, however, it should be provided with a little grain in addition to milk. If both the cow and the calf have good pasture and the cow is giving milk enough, the calf will grow to weaning age in good condition with less grain than otherwise would be needed. Frequently, however, the amounts of both pasture and milk are somewhat limited. Then the feeding of more grain is absolutely essential for best results.

When from four to six weeks old a calf may be taught to eat grain. This may be done by feeding it in a creep or pen to which the cow does not have access. Wheat bran is an excellent feed for this purpose. A good ration for the first few weeks would be coarsely ground corn, oats and wheat bran, equal parts by weight, with a small quantity of oil meal added every few days. Feed the calf at first onefourth of a pound of grain a day, or just what it will eat up clean, giving one-half of the amount night and morning. After a few weeks a ration of whole oats four parts, shelled corn two parts, and oll meal one part by weight should be substituted for the ground feeds. The calf should be eating from two to three pounds of grain a day when six months old, or approximately one-half to one pound of grain per 100 pounds live weight.

Unless the cow has been giving sufficient milk previous to this age of the calf. it may be advisable to provide a nurse cow for the calf. To make the satisfactory growth the calf should have a liberal supply of milk for several months longer. This is especially true if it is to make a maximum growth and show to the best advantage when the fair season arrives. By being fed in the way described, it should make a continuous growth from birth. If weaned properly, so that none of the calf fat or bloom is lost, the chances for it to grow out and make a profitable and useful animal are decidedly in its favor.

The calf is old enough to wear when from eight to twelve months old. Weaning should take from 12 to 15 Weaning should take from 12 to 15 days, and should be done gradually. When old enough to wean allow it to suck once a day for a week, then every other day for four or five days, and increase the into-val until no milk at all is allowed.

Synopsis. - Robert Hervey Randolph, young New York man-about-town, leaves the home of his sweet-heart, Madge Van Tellier, chagrined because of her refusal of his proposal of marriage. His income, $10,000 a year, which he must sur-render if a certain Miss Imogen Pamela Thornton (whom he has seen only as a small girl ten years before) is found, is not considered by the girl of his heart adequate to modern needs. "I'm through and I'm going," said Bobby, Madge suggested a farewell kiss. Nothing doing. Bobby didn't approve of her views of life and told her so

On that day she had been Miss Imogene Pamela Thornton, petted darling of the gods and Mr. Brewster Thornton, banker and widower; two months later had come Thornton's financial smash and, immediately afterward, his spiritual, moral and bodily collapse. Everything that had made for life in him having been swept away, he died as a matter of course, and was buried. For sole inheritance, little Genie Thornton found herself possessor and possessed of one Maggie O'Rourke, a nurse of long standing, of earnest and faithful face, and a monster heart imprisoned in a pitifully thin chest.

It had taken Genle's great-uncle. Asa Thornton, six more months to forget a quarrel of sixteen years' standing with his nephew, and by that time child and nurse had been seeped into that lower world which can't afford morning and afternoon editions and is too busy praying for daily bread to look for a rain of manna in the daily

In short, Maggle and her charge, traced down the ladder of reputable. disreputable and impossible lodgings. had slipped ultimately from sight and the ken of people with addresses, and as a result, Mr. Robert Hervey Randolph, whose relationship to Mr. Asa Thornton is of no import whatever to this tale of cause and effect, came into ten thousand a year and a string-the string being the possible reappearance of Miss Imogene Pamela.

"Bob," had said old Asa, on the verge of a tardy demise, "I'm not introducing you to a war between conscience and self-interest. There's no silly story-book test about my money; you are under no obligation to look for Imogene or to shout if you step on her by any twist of chance. My law yers have all the instructions necessary along those lines; they are to make every reasonable effort, and if they succeed, why, you're man enough to look out for yourself. It-it isn't going to make a devil of a lot of differ-ence to me where the cash goes so long as I die with-die with the

With that last sentence, his mind had stumbled and wandered off to memories of his nephew Brewster. Looking back from the vantage of twenty-six years, Randolph caught, for the first time, the full import of Asa Thornton's farewell words to him and to life; "Die with the credit." They held the kernel of the old man's carefully measured amend.

"Great old top!" murmured Mr. Randolph aloud, and half unconsciously turned to the left at Forty-second street. Five minutes later he was caught in the maelstrom of the Thanksgiving crowd milling around Times square

Presently he found himself on the edge of a human sea, banked up to give passage to a honking empty taxi-Here was another question for a suddenly inquiring mind. Where did taxi-cabs, empty ones, go to in such a hurry? The door of this one was swinging open, and the proof of how intent the crowd was on its myriad individual goals is evidenced by the fact that a dozen voices did not inform the driver that the season was off for fans on wheels. The cab was moving more slowly than Mr. Randolph's subconscious mind, which led him to step into it and quietly close the inviting door. Upon seating himself, he tried to analyze the impulse that had lifted him from the curb. He decided that it was not so much the curiosity as to the destination of empty cabs as a natural and ancient dislike for being pushed and elbowed by people.

It was not long before the cab, unwittingly loaded for bear, drew up with a final honk at the stage-door of the Crocodile. Immediately came a rasping voice that was vaguely familiar to Mr. Randolph. "Well." it said, "you sure took your own time getting here." The driver. expert in aggravating repartee without words, pressed the buil of his out words, pressed the bulb of his atrocious horn three times. "Cut it out!" said the rasping voice. "There isn't any hurry now."

It was incredible, reasoned Mr. Randolph with himself, that anyone should forget that voice once heard, and he was right. He remembered it. It was the voice of Mr. Duke Beamer, whom he had had the distinct pleasure of blackballing for one club in college and three in town. Mr. Beamer, to his honest mind, was the best living example of animated slime in tailor-made clothes. Mr. B. was not alone; Mr. Randolph could just see his companion through the slant of the half-raised window glass, and even that distorted glimpse was very close to a vision. The girl was young, beautiful, and troubled. Her cheeks were thin and pale, her parted lips aquiver; her chin was atremble. Of course she was very cheaply but neatry clothed.

"Make up your mind," said the rasping voice. "Ride with me or walk the streets by yourself, and don't forget that there's no job behind you. You've said good-by to that door for good."

The girl's wan face went through that contortion which says, "I won't cry," and doesn't, thereby achieving a pity beyond the meed of tears. The quivering of her lips, the trembling of her chin grew more pronounced-only to steady down as she swept up stricken and imploring eyes to the face of the unseen man,

"Oh, Duke," she begged, "promisepromise you'll be always good to me." "Of course, little one," said the rasping voice, promptly and much relieved, promising lightly to pay on demand, in full for a sool delivered in advance. "You'll never regret it, believe me."

The girl tore her doubting eyes from his face and stepped toward the cab. Mr. Randolph made himself exceeding small in the corner nearest the curb. An unseen agent opened the door; the girl slipped in and turned to seat herself; her escort made to follow. Then did Mr. Randolph suddenly lean forward and proceed to push in the face of Mr. Beamer with his open hand end the full weight of his shoulder. That astonished scion of a once gentlemanly house reeled backward and sat down on the pavement kerplunk.

"My, what a bump!" spoke a keen young voice over Mr. Randolph's shoulder, but he was too occupied to take note of it at the time. He leaned far out so that the driver could get the full effect of his modish top-hat and spoke cryptic words. "Ten dollars' worth of the park," is what he said.

The driver welcomed the sudden apparition with a friendly grin, honked defiantly three times, and threw in the clutch. They were off, and trailing after them came such a string of blasphemous utterances as made Mr. Randolph wince.

The girl was laughing. No longer did her eyes search for a gleam they thought they had lost forever. It was there within them, come back to rollick in her pupils and spill itself in reckless spending

"Oh! Oh! What a bump!" she "Funny, wasn't it?" said Mr. Randolph weakly. "Awfully," said the girl. Thereupon fell a long silence. The ceb cut across the traffic, reached the Avenue, and eventually the dark park before Mr. Randelph found anything further to say. "Funny, wasn't it?" he remarked. The girl cast him a startled look.

"Why," she gurgled, "that's what you said before."
"So I did," said Mr. Randolph, frowning thoughtfully. "So I did. By the way, what's your name?"

"Vivienne Vivierre," she said, after

"How awful!" commented Mr. Randolph. "One of those deliberate al literations that go with the 'sek row of the choras."

"I know," sald Mr. Randolph. "You've been fired. I heard what Beamer said to you. How long have you known that snake?"

"Not very long." she answered. "He get me on, and I suppose he got me She drew a long breath and turned appealing eyes to Randolph. "Please," she said, "don't let's talk about him. I want so to be happy for a few minutes. I love the park at night with its border of lights. Let's play a game."

"'A game?" said Randolph doubt-

"Yes. We'll guess which is Central Park West and which is One Hundred and Tenth street and which is the avenue. It is not as easy as you think after you've been going round a while, I'm feeling d-dizzy a-already.'

"You are!" exclaimed Mr. Randolph. "Well, let me tell you it isn't from buzzing round a two-mile circuit. What did you have for dinner?"

Miss Vivienne shut her lips tight. "Won't you please play my game?" she asked faintly.

Mr. Randolph frowned as though considering the subject very seriously. but the matter that held his attention was not the proposed guessing-match. That would not have been fair nor amusing, as the deadlights of his own very comfortable apartment blinked at him every time they came to Fiftyninth street. He was justifying to himself a very questionable move. He wished to feed this stray damsel and, at the same time, talk to her with a purpose. He could not see himself doing it in a cabaret, and every hotel supper room had already become one of those things. He came to a decision and spoke.

"I'll take a hand in your game, all right, but not just as you think. Do you-would you trust me?"

Immediately the girl was on her guard. She looked into his face and read it.

"I would never have thought of not trusting you if you hadn't asked that old, old trap question," she said

"Forget that I asked ft." said Mr. Randolph promptly, and leaned out to give the driver his address. A thinlipped and weary scorn was still on that individual's face when he drew up before Mr. Randolph's abode and honked three times derisively to the world in general as seen from the front of a taxl.

"Wait," said Mr. Randolph to the jehu, as he handed out the girl. She paused with one foot half-way to the curb, but that single word directing anything as expensive as a taxi to stand by reassured her.

Randolph preceded her to show the way and turn on lights. He never looked back to see if she followed, and this implied trust in herself seemed to drag her after him up the single flight of stairs that led to his rooms, "Old-fashioned but cozy," he said, as he applied a latch-key and opened a door that gave directly on a large square sitting room. "I hate elevators in a place you call home." In an open grate was a dying wood fire. He proceeded to poke and feed it at once, saying over his shoulder: "Sit down anywhere, will you?"

Facing the fire was a deep and much worn leathern couch, with a pedestal at each end carrying shaded lamps. They were the only ones he had lighted and their glow was so subdued that it blended with that of the fire without fighting it. The girl chose to seat herself stiffly in a corner of this couch,

Mr. Randolph looked at her rigid pose with marked disapproval, but said nothing. Having rejuvenated the fire till it leaped merrily to an attack on the fresh backlog, he left the room and was absent for a considerable time. When he returned, it was to place a small table before his guest, and then he fetched a tray well loaded with those things which grace in perpetuity a healthy bachelor's larder. He drew up a chair for himself and, with an inviting nod, started to eat a great deal and very rapidly. "Get in on the lunch while there's time," he admonished, "I warn you there's nothing more in the house." The girl gave him a grateful look and proceeded to fill herself with the most sustaining food within reach. She did not fail to note that there was nothing to drink but water. When they could eat no more, Mr. Randolph removed the table, and then seated himself in the opposite corner of the couch.

"You don't seem to be at ease here." he said presently. "If you think you'll be more comfortable, we can go down and sit in the cab. I want to talk to homes, winter palaces by the summer sea.

These varying pocketbooks have caused a great variety in the decoration and cost of the hostelries, which seem to spring up all over Florida. There are places for the rich man, the poor man and even for the man who has a large family, but has the money and disposition to give them a good time. There are places where one can spend $40 a day "and up," also modest little hotels, where $3 and $4 a day is charged for room and meals. In nearly all of them the American plan prevails. A fair average charge is $8 a day. Even this amounts to an enormous sum.

south in the summer-of which something later.

This migration season is looked upon by those sections of the South where the Northern tourist flocks as one of harvest. Crops and fruits, for which Florida is known, take second place as a source of revenue. The hotels are crammed to overflowing, cottages and bungalows are filled

This costs money. Just how much nobody

Some approximation of the facts can be obtained, however, by diligent search among the railroad records. The season starts a little earlier in the Carolinas than in Florida, and then laps over again after the Florida season, but the season of capacity is considered by railroad men to be approximately fifteen weeks. During this period the travel South is fairly constant. There are two main gateways for Northern approach to the South-Chicago and New York. Out of Chicago there are running every day 50 Southern sleepers, which hold on an average of 1,000 per-teave about the same numbers, 2,000 persons in all. With a season of about 100 days, that reaches a total of 200,000 persons who travel by rail and ne incusiderable part of the whole. Fully 500 cars a day are now going South. Three persons to a car and 100 days of travel would indicate that 150,000 persons find the Southern touring a year. These figures can be checked up somewhat with the hotels. There are some famous places of recreation, which are filled from the time they open until the end of the season, hotels in resorts such as Asheville, Pipehurst, Alken, Southern Pines, in the Carolinas; Augusta and Thomasville, in Georgia, and Belleaire, Miami, Palm Beach, St. Petersburg, Daytona and St. Augustine, in Flor-

The total hotel capacity of these places is 46,- be reckoned at about two weeks. That would give a population in these better known hotels for three months of about 280,000 persons. The bulk of the revenue comes. One is apt to think of Florida—for Florida is the Ultima Thule of the Southland, and has more recreation places than all the others put together—as a place dotted with million dollar homes and surrounded by a tar of fact, the great majority of the people who go to Florida are neither enormously wealthy nor if each of the 400,000 persons stays on an average of two weeks, that brings the total of hotel charges to $44,800.000.

Homes Owned by Northerners.

The homes also are not all of magnificent pretension. There are thousands of others. Around St. Petersburg has grown up a large colony of reasonably priced homes, and at West Palm Beach is another group of homes owned by persons of unassuming prosperity. In Miami, which in the last ten years has grown faster than any other city in the country, and is now a bustling place of 35,000, are still other houses which are not neighborhood show places. It is estimated that 10 per cent of the people who go to Florida own their own homes, and that the average valuation is about $8,000. But 10 per cent of 400,000 is 40,-000, which gives a real estate valuation of $320,-000,000 owned by Northerners. The tax from this is a source of profit to the state. The cost of travel alone is tremendous. An average round trip fare, including Pullman, would be about $100, and when 200,000 persons spend that it means a revenue to the roads of $20,000 -And there's the gasoline!

What is spent for amusement can only be guessed at, for it is a sum that varies according to the means and habits of the individual. Some of those who own beautiful homes and entertain lavishly spend sums that make the ordinary travelers' expenses seem picayune, and the people who spend a month at the great hotels also part . with considerable amounts for ordinary diversion. This is outside the large sums which are dropped in some of the gambling place the Southern tour exciting. But it would probably not be to say that an amount equal to cost of $8 a day is spent by ev Carolinas and Florida, which more than $40,000,000. This w ishing, autoing, boating and all the diverting sports that are offered by the ingenuity of the promoting population.

Golf is Popular.

Golf is perhaps the favorite diversion of those who go South. There are no better courses in the country. From the time the first visitors to Asheville and Aiken tee up early in November until the returning throng from Florida again invades the Carolina and West Virginia hills there is a constant procession of the best golfers in the country over the magnificent courses. Many of the clubhouses are huge and costly affairs, and bership fees are sufficiently large to appall average individual. But there are smaller and less expensive links which are crowded with just as enthusiastic stick swingers as play the more exclusive links.

Pinehurst always opens the golf season with a tournament early in November. Southern Pines takes care of many golfers, Asheville, Aiken and Augusta all have good links, but when one reaches Florida the number of courses almost would enable one to play across courses from Jacksonville to Key West. One of the most famous is the St. Augustine golf course, one of the oldest golfing clubs in the South. There are two big courses at Belleaire. Ormond Beach has an excellent course, which stretches along the Atlantic, while Ormond Daytona, Fort Pierce, Rockledge and others lead up to the Palm Beach Golf club, the oldest course in this famous resort.

The South pays back some of this Northern money in the summer. Chicago is a summer resort for thousands of Southerners. Maine takes in something like $50,000,000 a summer and Michigan nearly $15,000,000. Wisconsin and Minnesota are full of "resorters" all summer, many of them from the South.

Visitors to National Parks

The national parks and monuments last summer attracted 1,058,455 visitors from all parts of the United States. Many of these tourists were from the South. Motorcars from practically every Southern state were largely in evidence.

In 1917 travel to national parks totaled 488,268 visitors, which was an increase of over 100,000 visitors for the best previous travel year. In 1918, the war year, 451,661 visitors were recorded in the same national parks. In 1919 two additional national parks were created, and travel for that year increased to 755,325 visitors, or 67 per cent over the war year record. Also in 1919, 56,191 visitors were recorded in six national m making a total travel for 1919 of 811,516. Expressing this astonishing growth of tourist travel in terms of percentage, travel in 1920 increased 117 per cent over 1917, 134 per cent over 1918, and 30 per cent over travel for 1919.

In 1917, 54,692 private cars were recorded; in 1918, 53,966; in 1919, 97,721; and last summer the total number of cars entering the national parks was 128,074.

These visitors spent a lot of money all along the route-many millions. Here's a prediction that is interesting. The time is not far distant when several of the national parks will be crowded in winter with visitors enjoying winter sports.

Up to very recently the general public has regarded the national parks in general as inacces ole desolations in winter. This

"See America First."

From the viewpoint of the red-blooded man and woman looking for winter outdoor sport three of the national parks are likely to be pre-eminent. These are Yosemite, Mount Rainler and Rocky

Many able-bodied and red-blooded Americans do not care to follow the summer all the year. It is a touch of frost that brings man to his full mental, moral and physical stature. And there will soon be no finer winter playground in the world than in Rocky Mountain, Yosemite and Mount Rainler National parks.

It's a fine big cow'ry we Americans have, with all sorts of climates and all sorts of scenery. The country and the climate and the scenery are good enough—there are no better—to keep us at home most of the time. Doing our traveling and vacationing at home, we shall keep hundreds of millions of American collars at home—and working—where they will de the most good. We used to spend about $500 0.000 in sightseeing abroad every year. Now the slogan, "See America First," has helped to keep us at home—and we are enjoying it, to the financial benefit of the good old United States of America. ugh-there are no better-to keep us at home

MILK PRODUCTION PROBLEMS

Department of Agriculture Has Bee Carrying on Interesting and Instructive Studies.

(Prepared by the United States Depart-ment of Agriculture.)

For 180 cows that average less than 5,000 pounds of milk annually, the part of the milk check that represented profit and reimbursement for the owner's managerial ability was 23 per cent. For 257 cows averaging more than 6,000 pounds annually, the per cent remaining for profit and the owner's skill was 41 per cent. For the last five years the dairy division, United States Department of Agriculture, has been making studies which bear on this problem in many dairy sections of the country; and two-year investigations on the requirements for producing milk have now been completed on groups of dairy farms in six of these communities. One of the latest of these studles, carried on in Vermont, is the one on which the above figures are based. What it has disclosed in regard to economy of production and the requirements for producing milk, may be of value to the dairyman who is interested in finding out where milk returns are going.

These figures, which were obtained from a study of the production records of 587 cows which remained in the herds a full year, show that the average annual production of the 180 lower-producing cows was 4,146 pounds; also that the average production of 257 higher producers was 7,144 pounds a year. After subtracting from 4,146 pounds the amounts of milk required to pay production costs (feed, 1,810 pounds of milk; labor, 806 pounds of milk; and other costs 570 pounds of milk) only 960 pounds of milk remained for the profit and skill of the owner. For the high-producing group, however, 3,074 pounds of milk remained after the following deductions had been made: For feed, 2.302 pounds of milk; labor, 806 pounds of milk, and other costs 962 pounds of milk.

Here, then, were cows in the same locality, in some cases standing side by side, and all requiring about the same labor; yet some were producing three times as much profit as others, even though they were charged with greater quantities of feed and a large amount of "other costs,"

The figures adduced are significant also in that they show that in milk checks size is not always a true measure of real value; but that the per cent of profit, as determined by the cows that are kept, plays an important part.

The figures upon which this comparison is based were actual records of production; feed, labor, and other costs were obtained by monthly fullday visits on each of the farms for a period of two years. Careful records were made on these visits of the daily milk production of each cow, feed consumed, labor required, overhead costs, etc. Using these data, the requirements for producing 100 pounds of milk were worked out. So ar as possible the requirements were determined in terms of pounds of feed, hours of labor, etc., so that constantly fluctuating prices would have no effect on the value of the figures. Results may be interpreted at any time by using prevailing prices.

The requirements for producing 100 pounds of milk, based on 847 cows, with an average annual production of 5,252 pounds of 3,9 per cent milk, were

WATER OF MUCH IMPORTANCE

Cow should Have 150 Pounds a Day In Surimer and About 100 Pounds in Winter Season.

A cow will drink 150 pounds of water a day a: a temperature of 60 degrees. but if the water is ice cold she will not drink all she needs. She will, however, be chilled through and will eat more to get warm. She ought to have in summer time at least 150 pounds of water a day and in winter time about 100 pounds.
