IMPORTANCE OF BEST STOCK

Good Care and Right Kind of Feed Are Best Means of Preventing Undersized Animals.

The importance of good breeding in the growth of live stock, and especialby in the prevention of runts, is illustrated by the experience of an Indi ana swine grower, "I started with stock," he remarks in a letter to the United States Department of Agriculisfactory. When I had time to read of the work of other men, the results feed trink, I took from these expethe following September. At sixteen under farmers' care."

SCRUB PIGS ARE EXPENSIVE

Virginia Farmer Finally Convinced That Purebreds Are Most Profitable Animals.

The county agent of Page county firginia, tried last summer to persuade a farmer in his territory to keep purebred hogs. The man was difficult to convince. At the time of the argument the boys' pig-club contest for the year was just starting. Despite the arguments which the county agent made in favor of purebred stock scrub pigs, saying he did not think work of a postmaster?" the boys' club would do any better than those he had purchased. BEST FOR FATTENING STEERS

Pounds of Silage, Some Oil Meal and Clover Hay.

One of the cheapest and best rations for fattening steers is an average daily of 50 pounds of silage, two or three pounds of oil meal and two or three pounds of clover hay. With corn as cheap as it is in most localities it is a good plan to add to this amount of corn.

EARLY SHEARING IS FAVORED

Lambs Thrive Better If Mother is Not Compelled to Suffer From Car. rying Heavy Ccat of Wool.

Practice early shearing. Sheep shorn early will thrive better and the lambs will also do better if the mother is not compelled to suffer from carrying a heavy coat of wool in hot weather. There is but little gain in the weight of the wool after the weather gets warm, not enough to make it worth while to leave it on, when the comfort of the animal is considered

CARE FOR FATTENING LAMBS

Give an Abundance of Succulent For age Supplemented With Different Kinds of Grain.

Special care should be given the fattening lambs as soon as they are weaned. Abundance of succulent forage supplemented with grain foods that can mostly be grown on the farm, with the addition of a small amount of wheat bran and off meal, has always produced the best results.

THE TRIALS OF A HOUSEWIFE

How They Have Been Endured and How Overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Experience of a Providence Woman

Providence, R. I.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for a female trouble and backache. It began just after my baby was born, and I did the best I could about getting my work done, but I had awful bearing-down pains so I could not stand on my feet. I read in the papers about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the good it was doing other women, and I have got dandy results from it and will always recommend it. You can use these facts as a testimonial if you wish."—Mrs. HERBERT L. CASSEN, 18 Meni Court, Providence, R. I.

Providence, R. I.

Ohio woman for three years could hardly keep about and do her housework she was so ill.

Made well by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound:

Fayette, O.—"For about three years I was very nervous and had backache, sideache, dragging-down pains, could not sleep at night, and had no appetite. At times I could hardly do my housework. I got medicine from the doctor butit did not help me. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in a newspaper and took it with good results, and am now able to do my housework. I recommend your medicine to my friends and you may publish my testimonisl."—Mrs. CHESTER A. BALL, R. 15, Fayette, Ohio.

An Illinois woman relates her experience:

An Illinois woman relates her experience: Bloomington, Ill.—"I was never very strong and female trouble kept me so weak I had no interest in my housework. I had such a backache I could not cook a meal or sweep a room without raging with pain. Rubbing my back with alcohol sometimes eased the pain for a few hours, but did not stop it. I heard of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and six bottles of it have made me as strong and healthy as any woman; and I give my thanks to it for my health."—Mrs. J. A. McQuitty, 610 W. Walnut St., Bloomington, Ill.

The conditions described by Mrs. Cassen, Mrs. Ball, and Mrs. McQuitty will The conditions described by Mrs. Cassen, Mrs. Ball, and Mrs. McQuitty will appeal to many women who struggle on with their daily tasks in just such conditions—in fact, it is said that the tragedy in the lives of some women is almost beyond belief. Day in and day out they slave in their homes for their families—and beside the daily routine of housework, often make clothes for themselves and for their children, or work in their gardens, all the while suffering from those awful bearing-down pains, backache, headaches, nervousness, the blues, and troubles which sap the very foundation of life until there comes a time when nature gives out and an operation seems inevitable. If such women would only profit by the experience of these three women, and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the natural restorative for such conditions it may save them years of suffering and unhappiness.

There is hardly a neighborhood in any town or hamlet in the United States.

There is hardly a neighborhood in any town or hamlet in the United States wherein some woman does not reside who has been restored to health by this famous medicine. Therefore ask your neighbor, and you will find in a great many cases that at some time or other she, too, has been benefited by taking it, and will recommend it to you. For more than forty years this old-fashioned root and herb medicine hasbeen restoring suffering women to health and strength.

(Prepared by the United States Depart-ment of Agriculture) "I was in Mecklenburgh county, North Carolina, some weeks ago," says a field man of the dairy division, United States Department of Agriculture, "and had an opportunity of witnessing an incident which throws new light on the usefulness of the bull-association organization. There is an association in that county, and I was invited to 'sit in' at a meeting of the board of directors. The question of holding a sale came up, and the county agent read a letter he had received from some farmers in another community who wanted to buy stock, and were coming to Mecklenburgh county to see what they could get. The directors appointed a committee to receive them and show them around.

"Thus this piece of business was provided for, and placed in the hands of the right persons. Otherwise the county agent would have had to give up other work he had on hand, and search for some one to whom he could Even then he would not have had the Lucretia's talismanic stone is the information so readily available as "In another county I saw a differ-

> From the standpoint of feeding value for dairy cows, it may be said that potatoes rank below good corn silage. The latter contains about 26 per cent dry matter and the former, about 21 per cent. The chemical composition of raw potatoes and corn silage is very similar. Both contain about 1 per cent of digestible protein and between 16 and 17 per cent of digestible carbohydrates and fats, but potatoes contain somewhat more n ture than well-cured corn silage. Potatoes at 36 cents a bushel would cost $12 a ton, whereas silage is worth less than one-half that price under present conditions.

PROVIDING SALT FOR COWS

Best Plan Is to Give Animals Constant Supply—Ounce Each Day Is About Right.

The best way to provide salt for the cows is to give them a constant supply so they have easy access to it. The average cow will use about half a pound a week. If salt is provided daily an ounce each day will be about right, giving more or less according to the demands of the individual animals. Cows giving milk require more than those not in lactation.

INCREASING YIELD OF COWS

Foreign Competition Can Be Eliminated by Befter Breeding, Right Feed and Care.

Better breeding, the right kind and amount of feed and good care are the only ways the production of our dairy cows can be increased. When this is done, foreign countries flooding our markets with their butter will have to look elsewhere for customers.

"RESIGNED-GAVE UP AND RAN AWAY?"

Synopsis.—Graham Norcross, railroad manager, and his secretary, Jimmie Dodds, are marooned at Sacil Creek siding with a young lady, Sheila Macrae, and her small cousin. Unseen, they witness a peculiar train holdup, in which a special car is carried off. Norcross recognizes the car stolen as John Chadwick's, financial magnate, whom he was to meet at Portal City. He and Dodds rescue Chadwick. The latter offers Norcross the management of the Pioneer Short Line, which is in the hands of eastern speculators, headed by Breckenridge Dunton, president of the line. Norcross, learning that Sheila Macrae is stopping at Portal City accepts. Dodds overhears conversation between Rufus Hatch and Gustave Henckel, Portal City financiers, in which they admit complicity in Chadwick's kidnaping their object being to keep Chadwick from attending a meeting of directors to reorganize the Pioneer Short Line, which would jeopardize their interests. To curb the monopoly controlled by Harch and Henckel, the Red Tower corporation, Norcross forms the Citizens' Storage and Warehouse company. He begins to manifest a deep interest in Sheila Macrae. Dodds learns that Sheila is married, but living apart from her husband. Norcross does not know this. Synopsis.-Graham Norcross, railroad manager, and his secretary, Jimmie

CHAPTER V

And Satan Came Also

"I saw your office lights from the street," was the way the Red Tower president began on me, and his voice took me straight back to the Oregon Mr. Norcross?"

I told him that Mr. Norcross was up-town, and that I didn't suppose he ferently in the morning." would come back to the office again that night, now that it was so late.

"My name is Hatch, of the Red Tower company," he grated, after a minute or two. "You're the one they call Dodds, aren't you?"

I admitted it, and he went on. Norcross brought you here with him from the West, didn't he? What pay are you getting here?"

It was on the tip of my tongue to ness. But the second thought (which isn't always as good as it's said to be) whispered to me to lead him on and see how far he would go. So I told him the figures of my pay check.

"I'm needing another shorthand man, and I can afford to pay a good bit more than that," he growled. "They tell me you are well up at the top in your trade. Are you open to an

I let him have it straight then. "Not from you," I said.

"And why not from me?" Here was where I made my first bad break. All of a sudden I got so angry at the thought that he was actually trying to buy me that I couldn't see anything but red, and I blurted out, "Because I don't hire out to work for any strong-arm outfit-not if I

For a little while he sat blinking at me from under his bushy eyebrows, and his hard mouth was drawn into a straight line with a mean little wrinkle coming and going at the cor-

When he got ready to speak again he said, "You're only a boy. You want to get on in the world, don't you I'm offering you a good chance: the best you ever had. You don't owe Norcross anything more than your job, do you?"

"Maybe not." "That's better. Put on your hat and come along with me. I want to show you what I can do for you in a better field than railroading ever was, or ever will be. It'll pay you-" and he named a figure that very nearly made me fall dead out of my chair.

Of course, it was all plain enough. The boss had him on the hip with that kidnaping business, with me for a

"I gness we needn't beat about the bushes any longer, Mr. Hatch," I said, bracing up to him. "I haven't told the sheriff, or anybody but Mr. Norcross, what I know about a certain little train hold-up that happened a few weeks ago down at Sand Creek siding; but that isn't saying that I'm not going to."

If I had had the sense of a field mouse, I might have known that I was no match for such a man; but I lacked the sense-lacked it good and

"You're like your boss," he said shortly. "You'd go a long distance out of your way to make an enemy when there is no need of it. That hold-up business was a joke, from start to finish. I don't know how you and Norcross came to get in on it; the joke was meant to be on John Chadwick. The night before, at a little dinner we were giving him at the railroad club, he said there never was a railroad hold-up that couldn't have been stood off. A few of us got together afterward and put up a job on him; sent him over to Strathcona and arranged to have him held up on the way back." "Mr. Chadwick didn't take it as a joke!" I retorted. "I know he didn't; and that's why we're all anxious now to dig a hole and bury the thing decently. Perhaps we had all been taking a drop too much at the club dinner that night."

At that I swelled up man-size and kicked the whole kettle of fat into

"Of course, it was a joke!" I ripped out. "And your coming here to-night to try to hire me away from Mr. Nercross is another. The woods are full of good shorthand men, Mr. Hatch, for the present I think I shall right where a sourt subpoena can find me when I'm

"That's all nonsense, and you know it-if you're not too much of a kid to know anything," he snapped, shooting out his heavy jaw at me. "I merely wanted to give you a chance to get woods and a lumber camp where the saw-filers were at work. "Where is like it. I like a fighting man; and you've got nerve. Take a night and sleep on it. Maybe you'll think dif-

> Here was another chance for me to get off with a whole skin, but by this time I was completely lost to any sober weighing and measuring of the possible consequences. Leaning across the desk end I gave him a final shot, just as he was getting up to go.
> "Listen, Mr. Hatch," I said. "You haven't fooled me for a single minute. Your guess is right; I heard every word that passed between you and cuss him out right there and then Mr. Henckel that Monday morning in and tell him it was none of his busi- the Bullard lobby. As I say, I haven't told anybody yet but Mr. Norcross; but if you go to making trouble for him and the railroad company, I'll go into court and swear to what I know!"

He was half-way out of the door when I got through, and he never made any sign that he heard what I said. After he was gone I began to sense, just a little, how big a fool I had made of myself. But I was still mad clear through at the idea that he had taken me for the other kind of witness. And he was trying to fix the a fool-the kind that wouldn't know enough to be sure that the president of a big corporation wouldn't get down to tampering with a common clerk unless there was some big thing to be stood off by it.

Stewing and sizzling over it, I puttered around with the papers on my desk for quite a little while before I remembered the two telegrams, and the fact that I'd have to go and stick the three-bladed knife into Mr. Norcross. When I did remember, I shoved the messages into my pocket, flicked off the lights and started to go uptown and hunt for the boss. After closing the outer door of the office I don't recall anything particular except that I felt my way down the headquarters stair in the dark and groped across the lower hall to the outside door that served for the staircase entrance from the street. When-I had felt around and found the brass knob, something happened, I didn't know just what. In the tiny little fraction of a second that I had left, as you might say, between the hearse and the grave, I had a vague notion that the door was falling over on me and mashing me flat; and after that, everything went blank.

When I came to life out of what seemed like an endless succession of bad dreams it was broad daylight and the sun was shining brightly through some filmy kind of curtain stuff in a big window that looked out toward the west. I was in bed, the room was strange, and my right hand was wrapped up in a lot of cotton and

I hadn't more than made the firs estless move before I saw a sort of pie-faced woman in a nurse's cap and apron start to get up from where she was stting by the window. Before two or three times before I could really make up my mind that the tip-toer was Maisle Ann. She looked as if she might be the nurse's understudy. She had a nifty little lace cap on her thick mop of hair, and I guess her apron was meant to be nursey too, only it was frilled and tucked to a fare-you-

"You poor, poor boy!" she cooed, patting my pillow just like my grandmother used to when I was a little kid and had the mumps or the measles. "Are you still roaming around in the Oregon woods?"

That brought my dream, or one of them, back; the one about wandering around in a forest of Douglas fir and having to jump and dodge to keep the big trees from falling on me and smashing me.

"No more woods for mine," I said, sort of feebly. And then: "Where am I?"

"You are in bed in the spare room at Cousin Basil's. They wanted to take you to the railroad hospital that night, but when they telephoned up here to try to find Mr. Norcross, Cousin Basil went right down and brought you home with him in the ambulance."

" 'That night,' you say?" I parroted. "It was last night that the door fell on me, wasn't it?"

"I don't know anything about a door, but the night that they found you all burnt and crippled, lying at the foot of your office stairs, was three days ago. You have been out of your head nearly all the time ever since." "Burnt and crippled? What happened to me, Maisle Ann?" "Nobody knows; not even the doctors. We've been hoping that some day you'd be able to tell us. Can't you tell me now, Jimmie?"

I told her all there was to tell, mumbling around among the words the best I could. Then she told me how the headquarters watchman had found me about midnight; with my right hand scorched black and the rest of me apparently dead and ready to be buried. The ambulance surgeon had insisted, and was still insisting, that I had been handling a live wire; but there were no wires at all in the lower hall, and nothing stronger than an incandescent light current in the entire office building.

"And you say I've been here hanging on by my eyelashes for three days? What has been going on in all that time, Maisle Ann? Hasn't anybody, been here to see me?"

She gave a little nod. "Everybody, Mr. Van Britt has been up every day, and sometimes twice a day. He has been awfully anxious for you to come alive."

"But Mr. Norcross?" I queried. "Hasn't he been up?"

She shook her head and turned her face away, and she was looking straight out of the window at the setting sun when she asked, "When was the last time you saw Mr. Norcross, Jimmie?"

I choked a little over a big scare that seemed to rush up out of the bed-clothes to smother me. But I made out to answer her question, telling her how Mr. Norcross had left the office maybe half an hour or so before I did, that night, going up-town with Mr. Ripley. Then I asked her why she wanted to know. "Because nobody has seen him since a little later that same night," she said, saying it very softly and without turning her head. And then: "Mr. Van Britt found a letter from Mr. Norcross on his desk the next morning. It was just a little typewritten note, on a Hotel Bullard letter sheet, saying that he had made up his mind that the Pioneer Short Line wasn't worth fighting for, and that he was resigning and taking the midnight train for the East." I sat straight up in bed; I should have had to do it if both arms had been burnt to a crisp clear to the shoulders.

"Resigned?-gave up and ran away? I don't believe that for a single minute, Maisie Ann!" I burst out.

She was shaking her head again, still without turning her face so that I could see it.

"I-I'm afraid it's all true, Jimmie. There were two telegrams that came to Mr. Norcross the night he went away; one from Mr. Chadwick and the other from Mr. Dunton. I heard Mr. Van Britt telling Cousin Sheila what the messages were. He'd seen the copies of them that they keep in the telegraph office."

It was on my tongue's end to say that Mr. Norcross never had seen those two telegrams, because I had them in my pocket and was on my way to deliver them when I got shot; but I didn't Instead, I said: "And you think that was why Mr. Norcross threw up his hands and ran away?"

"No; I don't think anything of the sort. I know what it was, and you know what it was," and at that she turned around and pushed me gently down among the pillows.

"What was it?" I whispered, more than half afraid that I was going to hear a confirmation of my own breath about, that same evening, you remember-down in the hall when you brought the flowers for Cousin Sheila. You told him what I told you, didn't

"No; I didn't have a chance-not any real chance."

"Then somebody else told him, Jimmie; and that is the reason he has resigned and gone away. Mr. Van Britt thinks it was on account of the two messages from Mr. Chadwick and Mr. Dunton, and that is why he wants to talk to you about it. But you know, and I know, Jimmie, dear; and for Cousin Sheila's sake and Mr. Norcross', we must never lisp it to a human soul. A new general manager has been appointed, and he is on his way out here from New York. Everything has gone to pieces on the railroad, and all of Mr. Norcross' friends are getting ready to resign. Isn't it perfectly heart-breaking?"

It was; it was so heart-breaking that I just gasped once or twice and went off the hooks again, with Maisie Ann's frightened little shrick ringing in my ears as she tried to hold me back from slipping over the edge.

CHAPTER VI

What Every Man Knows-

I wasn't gone very long on this second excursion into the woozy-woozies, though it was night-time, and the shaded electric light was turned on when I opened my eyes and found Mrs. Sheila sitting by the bedside. The change in Mrs. Shella sort of made me gasp. She wasn't any less pretty as she sat there with her hands clasped in her lap, but she was different; sober, and with the laugh all gone out of the big gray eyes, and a look in them as if she had suddenly become so wise that nobody could

"You are feeling better now?" she asked, when she found me staring at

I told her I guessed I was, but that my hand hurt me some

"You have had a great shock of some kind-besides the burn, Jimmie." she rejoined, folding up the bed covers so that the bandaged hand would rest easier. "The doctors are all puzzled. Does your head feel quite clear nowso that you can think?" "It feels as if I had a crazy clock in it," I said. "But the thinking part is all right. Have you heard anything from Mr. Norcross yet?" "Not a word. We have been hoping that you could tell us something when you should recover sufficiently to talk. Can't you, Jimmle?"

Remembering what Maisle Ann had told me just before I went off the hooks, I thought I might tell her a lot if I dared to. But that wouldn't do. Se I just said:

"I told Maisle Ann all I knew about Mr. Norcross. He left the office some little time before I did-with Mr. Ripley. I didn't know where they were going.'

"They went to the hotel," she helped out. "Mr. Ripley says they sat in the lobby until after ten o'clock, and then Mr. Norcross went up to his rooms." Of course, I knew that Mr. Ripley knew all about the Hatch ruction; but if he hadn't told her, I wasn't go-

"There was some trouble in connection with Mr. Hatch that evening, wasn't there?" she asked

"Hatch had some trouble-yes. But I guess the boss didn't have any," I replied.

"Tell me about it." she commanded: and I told her just as little as I could: how Hatch had had an interview with the boss earlier in the evening, while I was away.

"It wasn't a quarrel?" she suggested. "Why should they quarrel?" I

She shook her head. "You are sparring with me, Jimmie, in some mis-cross. You needn't, you know. Mr. Norcross has told me all about his plans; he has even been generous enough to say that I helped him make That is why I cannot understand way he should do as he has done-or at least as everybody believes he has done."

I saw how it was. She was trying to find some explanation that would clear the boss, and perhaps implicate the Hatch crowd. I couldn't tell her the real reason why he had run away. Maisie Ann had been right as right about that; we must keep it to our

"Mr. Van Britt has told you about those two telegrams that came after Mr. Norcross left the office," I said, still covering up the fact that the telegrams hadn't been delivered-that they were probably in the pocket of my coat right now, wherever that was. "They were enough to make any man throw up his hands and quit, I should

"No," she insisted, looking me straight in the eyes. "You are not telling the truth now, Jimmie. You know Mr. Norcross better than any of us, and you know that it isn't the least little bit like him to walk out and leave everything to go to wreck. Have you ever known of his doing anything like that before?"

I had to admit that I hadn't; that, on the other hand, it was the very thing you'd least expect him to do. But at the same time I had to hang on to my sham belief that it was the thing he had done: either that, or teil her the truth.

"Every man reaches his limit, some time!" I protested. "What was Mr. Norcross to do, I'd like to know; with Mr. Chadwick getting scared out, and Mr. Dunton threatening to fire him?"

"The thing he wouldn't do would be to go off and leave all of his friends, Mr. Van Britt and Mr. Hornack, and all the rest, to fight it out alone. You know that as well as I do, Jimmie Dodds!"

"If you won't take my theory, you must have one of your own," I said; not knowing what else to say.

"I have," she flashed back, "and I want you to hurry and get well so that you can help me trace it out."

"Me?" I queried. "Yes, you. The others are all so stupid! even Mr. Van Britt and Mr. Ripley. They insist that Mr. Norcross went east to see and talk with Mr. Chadwick. They have found out that Mr. Chadwick left Chicago the day after he sent that telegram, to go up into the Canadian woods to look at some mines, or something. They say that Mr. Norcross has followed him, and that is why they don't hear anything from him."

"What do you think?" I asked. She didn't answer right away, and in the little pause I saw a sort of frightened look come into her eyes. But all she said was, "I want you to hurry up and get well, Jimmie, so you can help.'

"I'm well enough now, if they'll let me get up."

"Not tonight; tomorrow, maybe." Then: "Mr. Van Britt is down-stairs with Cousin Basil. He has been very anxious to talk with you as soon as you were able to talk. May I send him up?"

Of course I said yes; and pretty soon after she went away, our one and only millionaire came in. He looked as he always did; just as if he had that minute stepped out of a Turkish bath where they shave and scrub and polish a man till he shines.

"How are you, Jimmie?" he rapped out. "Glad to see you on earth again. Feeling a little more fit, tonight?"

I told him I didn't think it would take more than half a dozen fellows of my size to knock me out, but I was gaining. Then he sat down and put me on the question rack. I gave him all I had-except that thing about the undelivered telegrams and two or three others that I couldn't give him or any-we?" I suggested. "We couldn't be in worse shape," was the way he put it. Then he told me a little more than Maisie Ann had; how President Dunton had wired to stop all the betterment work on the Short Line until the new general manager could get on the ground: how the local capitalists at the head of the new Citizens' Storage & Warehouse organization were scared plumb out of their shoes and were afraid to make a move; and how the newspapers all over the state were saying that it was just what they had expected-that the railroad was crooked in root and branch, and that a good man couldn't stay with it long enough to get his breath. "Then the new general manager has been appointed?" I asked.

He nodded. "Some fellow by the name of Dismuke. I don't know him. and neither does Hornack. He is on his way west now, they say." "Mr. Norcross hasn't shown up at Mr. Chadwick's Chicago offices?" I ventured.

"No. The telegraph people have been wiring everywhere and can't get "Tell them to try Galesburg. That's where his people live." "I know," he said; and he made a note of the address on the back of an envelope. Then he came at me again. on the "direct," as a lawyer would

"You've been closer to Norcross in an intimate way than any of us, Jimmie: haven't you seen or heard something that would help to turn a little more light on this damnable blow-up?" I hadn't-outside of the one thing I couldn't talk about-and I told him so, and at this he let me see a little more of what was going on in his

"You're one of us, in a way, Jimmie, and I can talk freely to you. Mrs. Macrae insists that there has been foul play of some sort. You say you weren't present when Hatch called on Norcross at the office that night?" "No; I came in just after Hatch

"Did Norcross say anything to make you think there had been a fight?" He told me that Hatch was abusive and had made threats-in a business mean by that?"

"So Hatch did make a threat, then

Can you add anything more? I could, but I didn't want to. Mr. Van Britt didn't know anything about the Sand Creek siding hold-up, or I supposed he didn't, and I didn't want to be the first one to tell him. Besides, the whole business was beside the mark. Maisle Ann knew, and I knew, that the boss, strong and unbreakable as he was in other ways, had simply thrown up his hands and quit because somebody had told him that Mrs. Sheila had a husband living. So I just said:

"Nothing that would help out," and after he had talked a little while longer our only millionaire went downstairs again.

It's so funny how things change around for a person just by giving them time to sort of shake down into place and fit themselves together. After a while the chin edge of the wedge that Mrs. Shella had been try-

"We Must Stand by Him and Defend ing to drive into me began to take hold, just a little, in spite of what I knew-or thought I knew. Was it barely possible, after all, that there had been foul play of some sort?

In the first place, something had been done to me by somebody: It was a sure thing that I hadn't crippled and half-killed myself all by my lonesome. Then they had said that the boss stayed up with Mr. Ripley that night until after ten o'clock, and had then gone up to go to bed. That being the case, how could anybody have got to him between that time and the leaving time of the midnight Fast Mail to tell him about Mrs. Shella?

Anyway it was stacked up, it made a three-cornered puzzle, needing somebody to tackle it right away; and when I finally went to sleep it was with the notion that, sick or no sick. I was going to turn out early in the morning and get busy. I was well enough to get up the next orning, and when I phoned to Mr. Van Britt he sent his car out to the major's to take me down to the office. Just before I left the house, Mrs. Shella waylaid me, and after telling me that I must be careful and no take cold in the burnt hand, she put in another word about the boss' di

Though the boss' disappearance was now four days old, things were still in a sort of daze down at the railroad offices. Mr. Van Britt, being the general superintendent and next in command, had moved over into the boss' office, and Fred May was doing his shorthand work. They wouldn't let me do anything much-I couldn't do much with my right arm in a sling-so I had a chance to hang around and size up the situation. If you want to know how it sized up. you can take it from me that it was pretty bad. People all along the line were bombarding Mr. Van Britt with letters and telegrams wanting to know what was going to be done, and what the change in management was going to mean for the public, and all that, You see, Mr. Norcross had laid out a mighty attractive program in the little time he had been at the wheel, and now it looked as if it was all going to be dumped into the dit-

"Keep the boys on the farm," is the cry from public speakers, magazine writers and welfare workers all over the country. "We must stop this wholesale exodus to the crowded citles"-etc., but in most cases these well-meaning people overlook one of the fundamental causes of this drift to the cities. Farm boys would stay on the farm if there was not something radically wrong, and if you investigate the case of the young man who leaves his father and mother to live in the great crowded city, you will almost invariably find that conditions existing about his home were such that he could not help but leave. Very often it is the drudgery which he was forced to endure because of antiquated methods in the farm buildings, and very frequently it is the would be the most powerful attraction that could be offered, sides insuring a good supply of natural light and fresh air. It is connected with the dining room by an open doorway. The dining room is about the same size as the living room. It is connected with the kitchen at the rear by a swinging door and also opens into a side hall at the right.

The kitchen is one that will delight any housewife's heart, for it is small and compact, but ample for every need. At one corner is a small pantry, immediately adjacent is the washroom which can be used as a laundry, if so desired. The bathroom, modern in every detail, is located off the hall which runs from the kitchen to a rear bedroom. Off the main central hall running along the dining room is another large bedroom, 16 by 10 feet 6 inches. All of the bedrooms, of which there are three, have exceptionally large clothes closets. The front bedroom, 12 by 13 feet, off the front reception hall, also opens out onto the sleeping porch, which is 9 feet 6 inches by 13 feet. This sleeping porch has window walls on three sides and should be an excellent place to sleep in the warm, sultry summer months.

A home like this should be the rule, not the exception, on the farms of the country today. Gradually this type is gaining a foothold and we look forward to the time when such a thing as propaganda to keep the boys on the farm will be unnecessary. Home comforts are being emphasized in both city and country because the importance of the home in community life is recognized. More and better homes are what the people want and this is certainly the case in rural centers.

Lacking support, moral or material, the friar became discouraged and returned empty handed to Mex ico City.

Machine Reads Character.

The phrenoscope is an X-ray machine by which your individual character and characteristics may be read. It was shown before the members of the College of France recently by Dr. George Maingot, the inventor. The doctor says:

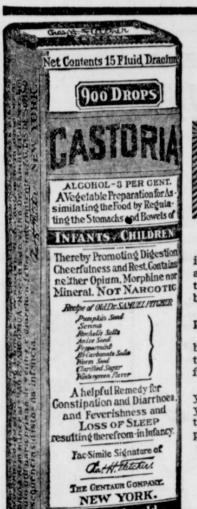

"Each of our gestures expresses in very incomplete fashion what is individual in us. Only one gesture or motion is wholly unconstrained-respiration. That was our first act in coming into the world, and has always restrained its spontaniety. Therefore, by observing it, I can tell positively man's character.

Children Cry For

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children ? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:- It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.

says Mrs. John Hill.

Eatonic quickly relieves sour stomach, indigestion, heartburn, bloating and distress after eating because it takes up and carries out the excess acidity and gases which cause most stomach aliments. If you have "tried everything" and still suffer, do not give up hope. Eatonic has brought relief to tens of thousands like you. A big box costs but a trifle with your druggist's guarantee.
