WHAT IS A FARM WITHOUT A DAIRY COW?

Friends, without a doubt, we are living in a county which is looked upon, far and near, as a big portion of the garden spot of West Texas. We have the fertile land, good seasons, and practically no economic crop pests. We can and do produce an abundance of first class products, yet as a class of farmers over the entire county we are not prospering. We can determine this by looking at the volume of our liabilities. The power which brought these conditions about was one over which we had no control, but nevertheless it brings each and every one of us face to face with a problem, the solution of which will be a PERMANENT SYSTEM OF AGRICULTURE which is not so sensitive to the action of forces outside of the forces of supply and demand.

According to the statistics of several states, collected over a long period of years, there is one system of farming, and only one, which comes up to the specifications of the above solution: that is Dairy Farming. When I speak of dairy farming, I mean also carrying out all the side lines connected with it, such as producing cheap pork and valuable heifer calves with the skim milk, along with grain raised on the farm. In this locality, dairying as a side line to general intensive farming will prove to be the most profitable.

Kafir and milo at $7.00 per ton will never meet many obligations, and in many instances does not pay the cost of production, yet they will yield a good profit when marketed through a good dairy cow, in the form of milk, cream and butter. The cow is the greatest producer of human food in the world. Many cows have in a single year produced human food equal in value to the food contained in the bodies of FIVE 1100 pound steers. This shows how efficiently she manufactures food from the raw material.

Dairy communities are always prosperous communities, for dairying builds up the farm by adding humus, and a soil rich in humus, or vegetable matter, neither blows nor washes. It requires fewer acres to produce a living on a dairy farm than on a grain farm, and consequently leads to closer neighbors and more thickly settled communities.

There is always an air of permanence and prosperity about a well handled dairy farm. A man feels independent when he knows that his income is steady. The dairy business is a cash business, and the manager can pay his bills on the first of the month just like the city man. He must have good health, clear judgment and plenty of energy. Then if he sticks to it, grows most of his own feed, has fair cows, and a good bull, he can't lose.

We need more farmers in Donley county who will keep ten cows. I have some plans which have proven a success in several other sections, and there is no doubt that they will work in this county. If you are interested in dairying, either on a large or a small scale, stop me the first time you see me, or call me up, and let's go over these plans and see what you think of them. Now is the time to think seriously about our 1922 crop system, for we must hit it right next season. Good dairy cows, a few brood sows, and a large well culled flock of chickens, will solve the problem for you, make you a contented farmer, and your family a contented family. ASK YOUR NEIGHBOR WHO HAS HAD THEM THIS YEAR AND LAST.

BOYS PIG CLUB

In Donley county this year there were seventy six pure bred gilts placed in the hands of pig club members. Practically all of these gilts were either six or twelve months of age in September. In almost every case the Club boy has been offered a nice profit above the purchase price of his animal, but with the exception of a few cases they have all refused to sell. Many of these boys are already the owner of a fine litter of pigs, or the foundation of a foundation of a pure bred herd, and the remainder of these boys are keeping their animals with the expectation of getting a good litter of pigs in March.

Seventy five litters of pure bred pigs mean thousands of dollars to Donley county in the course of a few years. Encourage these Club boys, who are our coming farm boys of the county, by buying what they have to sell, if you are in the market for that kind of stuff.

The County Agent can put you in touch with these boys, who may have the very kind of hog to sell which you wish to buy.

SUNFLOWER IS MADE USEFUL

Experiments Not Sufficiently Developed to Reach Definite Conclusions in Northwest.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Sunflowers are likely to become good for silage material for farmers on irrigated land in the Northwest, according to reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture from Montana. The Mammoth Russian is in much favor, although experiments have been tried with some of the smaller varieties. The sunflowers were drilled in rows 20 inches apart and irrigated. They were put in about the middle of May, but from their frost-resistant qualities it is believed they could be put in at the same time as grain is sown. About 15 pounds of seed were used to the acre on irrigated land, but it was stated that if sunflowers are to be raised under dry-land conditions the seed should be put in rows 30 to 36 inches apart.

On the project under observation it was intended to let the sunflowers get fairly well matured, about the same as corn, before putting them in the silo, but as a storm broke them down it was necessary to put them in the silo earlier. The yield was from 30 to 40 tons per acre. Cows fed on sunflower silage kept up the usual flow of milk as well as those which were fed on the grain silage. Some of the big Holstein cows ate as much as 90 pounds per day. No unfavorable results could be noticed in the flavor of the milk. While this experiment has not gone far enough to reach definite conclusions, it indicates that sunflowers may be considered a good crop for silage in some localities.

Farmers Given Better Understanding of Value and Cost of Various Feeds Available.

A series of 26 dairy feeding schools were conducted during the spring months in six New Hampshire counties by county agents, working co-operatively with the United States Department of Agriculture and the State Agricultural college. Seven more are planned. In carrying out these schools lecturing and formal talk have been practically eliminated and the dairymen are seated at tables, where they figure out for themselves the composition of various rations and compare costs. Much enthusiasm has been aroused.

That the results are worth while is indicated by the statement of a Hooksett farmer, who reported a saving of $1 a day, while another who attended the school at Warner wrote the county agent that he is now saving $36 a month as a result of feeding a ration that he figured out there. The discussion provoked by the farmers figuring these rations gives a better understanding of the value and cost of the various feeds available than any amount of lecturing could possibly accomplish.

WHITE SCOURS CAUSES LOSS

Disease Contracted by Way of Navel or Mouth Soon After Birth—Tablets Worth Trying.

Many calves die of white scours or pneumo-enteritis, which is a deadly germ disease born in the calf and contracted by way of the navel or mouth soon after birth. Medicinal treatment usually fails, but triple sulpho-carbolate tablets are well worth trying, under direction of a qualified veterinarian. He should also immunize each new-born calf with polyvalent anti-dysenteric serum and likewise use it in double doses should a case occur. Provide a new clean pen for new-born calves. At birth saturate the stump of the navel of each calf with tincture of iodine and then apply powdered starch. Repeat the treatment daily until the navel is entirely healed. Also cleanse the teats with a saturated solution of boric acid before the calf is allowed to suck for the first time and daily for ten days if it continues to nurse.

RULES FOR FEEDING SILAGE

Good Plan is to Allow Three Pounds of Material to Every 100 Pounds of Live Weight.

A rule for feeding silage to the dairy cows is: Feed three pounds of silage for every 100 pounds of live weight. A cow weighing 1,000 pounds should receive about 30 pounds. A cow which weighs over 1,500 pounds should receive about 45 pounds of silage per day. Silage is usually fed twice a day, in the morning and evening after milking.

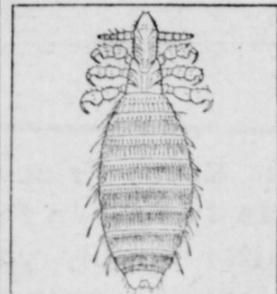

LIVE STOCK FACTS

COMMON AILMENTS OF SHEEP

Information Given in Farmer's Bulletin to Enable Owners to Recognize Symptoms.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

How to recognize and treat the more important diseases and common ailments of sheep is told in Farmer's Bulletin 1155, just issued by the United States Department of Agriculture.

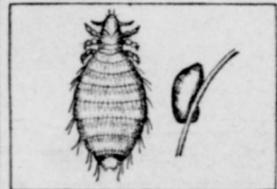

A Sheep Parasite—Back View of Female Sucking Body Louse (Highly Enlarged.)

While the actual treatment of disease is primarily a matter for veterinarians, the information given in the new bulletin will enable sheep owners to recognize symptoms early in their development and thus avoid losses of their flocks. Altogether 57 kinds of diseases and ailments are discussed.

The sheep industry of the country has suffered severely from the ravages of infectious and noninfectious diseases. In addition to the scientific names, the bulletin gives the common names by which the various diseases are known. A convenient arrangement of cause, symptoms, post-mortem appearance, diagnosis, treatment, and prevention makes it possible for sheep owners to obtain a practical knowledge of the best means for preventing and controlling sickness in the flocks. Numerous illustrations add to the clearness of the discussion.

As a companion bulletin to "Diseases of Sheep," the department is distributing also Farmer's Bulletin 1150, entitled

Adult Sheep Foot Louse and Egg (Enlarged.)

Parasites and Parasitic Diseases of Sheep. This bulletin explains methods for controlling various pests and parasites that attack sheep and points out the advantages of pasture rotation, feeding from racks, and other measures of value in parasite control.

LIQUID MANURE IS VALUABLE

Nitrogen and Potassium Should Be Carefully Preserved and Used for Improving Crops.

The liquid excrement from farm animals contains nearly half the nitrogen and potassium voided by them and should be carefully preserved. When steers are fed on cement floors the value of the manure produced is more than $4 per year greater for each animal than when fed on earth floors. Open barnyard manure is about one-half as valuable as stall manure. The least amount of nitrogen will be lost from stored manure if animals are kept on it or it is kept in a moist, well packed condition. Manure used in connection with continuous croppings will not maintain the maximum yield, but when used in connection with crop rotation it increases the yield of all crops grown in that rotation. Manure used in conjunction with a complete fertilizer high in phosphorus will give better returns than when either is used alone.

NEEDS OF GROWING ANIMALS

Pigs Thrive Better on Ear Corn and Green Alfalfa Than on Chopped and Ground Feeds.

Ear corn and green alfalfa meet the needs of growing pigs better, and at less cost, than chopped alfalfa and ground cob and cornmeal. The alfalfa stems and cob meal are better suited to the needs of sheep or cattle. They can handle more fibrous, indigestible matter than pigs.

DISCARD INEFFICIENT HORSE

Indiscriminate Breeding of Small, Unsound, Scrubby Animals Highly Unprofitable.

The light, inefficient horse is undoubtedly destined to be discarded as a factor in American husbandry, and the indiscriminate breeding of small, unsound, scrubby animals will continue to be highly unprofitable if persisted in.

The Right Twin for Jerry

By H. LOUIS RAYBOLD.

© 1921, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"That's my ultimatum, Jerry," said Jerry's father slowly, and the finality of his tone lent emphasis to his words. "I'm tired of your devil-may-care ways and the wild crowd of young people you travel with. Cut it out, my son, find a girl like your mother, marry her and settle down. Or else get out and shift for yourself!"

Young Jerry Cowles slumped in his chair, looked moodily up at his father towering over him. "Harsh words, dad!" he said soberly.

"That may be," growled his parent, "but I mean them nevertheless. You've been no good to me or to yourself since you got out of college. Tearing around in that car of yours, smashing speed limits, fox trotting all night—Lord, Jerry, when I was your age—" he paused in exasperation as a mental picture passed before his eyes of himself at twenty-three, an industrious husband and father.

"I know, dad, but the times—" "The times be hanged!" ejaculated the older man. "They are overworked nowadays as an excuse for any tomfoolery. What you need is a wife and a home to give you a sense of responsibility. Only, mind you, I have no use for the sort of girl you seem to fancy. Surely, somewhere, there's a girl who isn't all speed fiend, jazz, cigarette devotee, fashion plate—"

Jerry winced. Was his father visualizing Becky Lenox, to whom at least some of those terms applied? Becky Lenox, with whom he was truthfully in love!

"Tell you what I'll do, Jerry. Marry the sort of girl I would welcome as my daughter-in-law, and I'll furnish you home for a wedding present, settle on you now what would likely come to you on my death and take you into the business as junior partner. I'm that anxious to have you make a success of your life!"

Jerry rose impulsively. "I—I thank you, dad," he said. "I'll think it over."

But as he turned away to dress for the Lenox dance at the Lawton Hotel, his heart was heavy within him. It was a little peach, but never in his world would she meet his fashionable requirements. Yet, longed to a bygone generation, a love for the prevailing dancing spelled no less than total moral depravity and for whom the slightest hint of artificiality in a girl's complexion utterly dimmed, and damned, whatever else of beauty she possessed.

"Harsh Words, Dad!" He Said Soberly.

It was during the intermission on the cook, darkened veranda that Jerry poured out his woes to the sparkling, daintily dressed piece of femininity that was Becky. And he used his predicament as an excuse for letting Becky know that he loved her.

"You see, dear," he wound up earnestly. "I wouldn't speak before because I had nothing to offer you. And now, why, I'm afraid just because you're so gloriously up to date and—oh, snappy and full of pep that dad won't see you're the real thing and the only thing for me! You ought to have been born dowdy and homely and with spectacles or—why, Becky, what's up?"

For Becky had jumped up and was pinning wildly about. "An idea, old top!" she cried. And Jerry wondered if his mother had ever called his father that. "Introduce Bess to your father—but marry me!"

For Becky had a twin, identical in looks, but very opposite in tastes and characteristics. Given over to philology, philosophy and philanthropy, she had lately taken to wearing huge tortoise shell spectacles which lent her an air of as great a seriousness as one could wish. Certainly, one look at her and Jerry's father would realize that his son would be under a calm and steady influence.

Now, because Jerry was desperately in love and so temporarily blinded to all else, he fell right in with Becky's scheme; nor did he worry about the intended deception of his father. Once married to Becky his father would surely capitulate to her charms and forgive the trick played upon him.

"If father approves of your sister, we'll elope. How about it, dear?" And Becky whispered "Yes," as would have most any girl hold close in the arms of a nice youth like Jerry.

With characteristic energy Jerry put in motion at once the wheels of his plan. Told his father he was engaged to one of the Lenox twins and invited him out to supper with them to meet her. Sure he'd be surprised at the sort of girl she was.

Bess, under heaven knows what inducements from Becky, agreed to help matters along, and did her best to be entertaining. Ably she denounced the evils of modern existence, punctuating her remarks with pertinent allusions to ancient civilizations, theories of Kant, and slum conditions abroad. Jerry's father sat as one absorbed and when Jerry finally led her away to a play down in the village, he gazed after them with an expression in his eyes which would vaguely have bothered Jerry.

It was late that evening when Jerry, figuratively mopping his brow, deposited his companion at the door of the Lenox home. He was anxious to get back to his father and learn the verdict.

But as he turned away, the door opened softly behind him.

The next moment Becky herself was in his arms. "Oh, Jerry," she moaned, "I've spent the most awful day. I've had nothing to do but think how we weren't being fair to your father, and he is just right about not wanting you to marry a flaxway creature like me, and I'm sick of this jazy life, anyhow. I'm going to settle down and—oh, you didn't turn around and fall in love with Bess?"

"Why, my little sweetheart!" Jerry drew her close. "Your sister is a fine girl, and all that, but as for loving her instead of you? As for father—we'll tell him all about it and take the consequences!"

But when Jerry reached home he got the surprise of his life.

"Jerry, my boy," said his father, "I take back all I said about the crowd you travel with. Good Lord, Schopenhauer—law of Malthus—Aetec verba, Thunderbolt, boy, how will you stand it? Couldn't you have picked out a better crowd?"

"The extreme seriousness of mien, the fixed expression of gravity, their sad look," responds the interviewed one.

Not once in a year, but a hundred times, this response greets the questioners. There must be something back of it.

Here in America, creditor of all the world, of wealth a plethora, of resources no limit, of power proved in peace and war, cock of the walk, unfettered in any political sense, with the "freedom to worship God" as the individual may please guaranteed under the Constitution, and yet characterized by the visage of sorrow!

They tell us this so frequently, these citizens of the older and alleged unhappier world, that there must be truth in it. But why?

The man of "liberal views" in matters of self-control will tell you that it is the puritanical element which furnishes the air of sadness to a whole people; the placidly plums will assert that it is the strained expression of the pleasure-seekers seared with the carmarks of indulgence; the poor will tell you that it is the rich distorting their countenances in agony over their effort to grasp yet more of worldly riches, and the well-to-do will say that it is the poor but ambitious expressing in a scowl their unrequited yearning for what they have not.

The old adage says: "One may smile and smile and be a villain." But why can one not smile and smile and be an American?—Baltimore American.

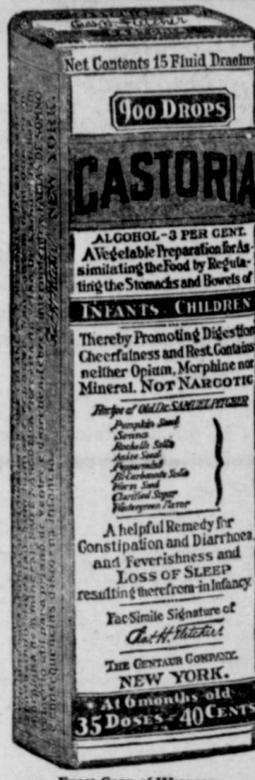

Wife Must Die With Husband.

When a native dies at Arowl, Australia, his wife is killed. Her arms are pinioned by two other married women who sit on her legs. A strong rope from plaited fibres is placed round her neck and drawn taut by four men two on each side, until the blood oozes from the nose and mouth. At this juncture a man places one hand underneath the victim's chin, and the other on the top of her head, and twists the head until the neck is broken. The belief is held that unless the wife is killed the man will no reach the Arowl equivalent for Heaven, but if both die they immediately go there.

Seventeenth Century Englishman Refused to Change Them at the Behest of Tyrants.

Recently a book of William Pryne's brought a high price in London. Pryne was a Puritan writer of the Seventeenth century whom torture could not intimidate. He wrote a book, "Histrio-Mastix, the Players' Scourge," in which he attacked play-acting, particularly by women. Unfortunately for Pryne, Queen Henrietta Maria had just taken part in a play and he was accused of denouncing her. His ears were cut off, his book burned by the hangman, and he was sentenced to life imprisonment in the Tower of London.

While in prison Pryne wrote two pamphlets against the English bishops, and for this the stumps of his ears, which had been left on the previous occasion, were cut off, his cheeks branded and a fine of $25,000 assessed. He was later released from prison by warrant of the house of commons, served two years more as the result of a controversy, and was appointed keeper of the Tower records by Charles II, which post he held until his death in 1699.

MRS. HAYDOCK SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

Followed Advice of Her Druggist's Wife and Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Chicago, Ill.—"I was in bed with a female trouble and inflammation and had four doctors but none of them did me any good. They all said I would have to have an operation. A druggist's wife told me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I took 22 bottles, never missing a dose and at the end of that time I was perfectly well. I have never had occasion to take it again as I have been so well. I have a six room flat and do all my work. My two sisters are taking the Compound upon my recommendation and you may publish my letter. It is the gospel truth and I will write to any one who wants a personal letter."—Mrs. E. H. HAYDOCK, 6824 St. Lawrence Avenue, Chicago Illinois.

Because Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved Mrs. Haydock from an operation we cannot claim that all operations may be avoided by it, but many women have escaped operations by the timely use of this old-fashioned root and herb medicine.

Yell.
"Do you remember your class yell?"
"Yes, and it wasn't very expressive. I've got a son in college now and you ought to hear me when I audit his bills."

Or'll Favors.
"Would you get up in a street car to give a lady a seat?"
"I would," replied Mr. Crosslots, "and be thankful for having had a seat to occupy for even a portion of the trip."

TAKE ASPIRIN ONLY AS TOLD BY "BAYER"

"Bayer" Introduced Aspirin to the Physicians Over 21 Years Ago.

To get quick relief follow carefully the safe and proper directions in each unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin." This package is plainly stamped with the safety "Bayer Cross." The "Bayer Cross" means the genuine, world-famous Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over twenty-one years.—Advertisement.

Help That Aching Back!

Lame in the morning! A dull backache all day long! Worn out when evening comes! The same old round of suffering! To endure such misery is both foolish and unnecessary. Find the cause of your trouble. Likely it's your kidneys and that nagging backache may be Nature's warning of kidney weakness. You may have sharp stabbing pains, a depressed feeling and bladder irregularities. Don't risk more serious kidney trouble. Help your weakened kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills have helped thousands. Ask your neighbor!

A Texas Case
"They Never Tell a Story"
Mrs. T. A. Robinson, 21 W. Mulberry St., Denton, Texas, says: "My kidneys troubled me and my back ached. Sharp pains shot through my loins when I stooped and my suffering was intense. I procured a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and it wasn't long before they entirely rid me of kidney complaint. I believe my cure is permanent."

FINE COLONIAL HOME FOR FARM

Beautiful, Yet Inexpensive Because of Simple Design.

ALL COMFORTS OF CITY HOME

Howe Shown Here is Good Example of Modern Tendency in Farm Home Construction—Arranged to Lessen Housework.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

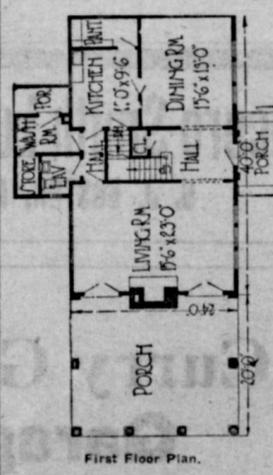

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF CHARGE on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

"Like old wine, they grow better with age" is what most people think of the colonial house. It has thrived for a century and a half and is still as popular as ever. In cities, in towns and in the country this delightfully hospitable type of home has a grip on the hearts of the people. Its charms lie in its quiet dignity and simplicity of style. It is beautiful, yet inexpensive because of its simple design.

There is plenty of room for the colonial house on the farm. For so many years the farmer has put up with such limitations in housing facilities that he is entitled to the best there is. During the early days of pioneering when he was trying to make his little stake pay, he had little money to spend on a real home so he contented himself with a makeshift shelter. His wife had to work hard to keep the family together. It did not take long, however, for the children to learn of the advantages of city life, and the great exodus started. They wanted attractive comfortable homes with some of the conveniences that make life worth while and not being able to get them in the country they went to the cities. The housing problem became one of the vital ones in our country; sections.

Competition always stimulates activity and it soon started a revolution in home ideas in the country. The progressive farmer everywhere immediately recognized the need of modern farm homes, homes with electric light, running water, bathroom and other comforts. He realized that his wife needed relaxation and amusement and he set about to equip the home with labor-saving devices that would lighten her burden. He built a laundry in his new home, a washroom and a modern kitchen.

This house shown here is a good example of the modern tendency in farm home construction. It embodies all the comforts and beauties of the city home. Colonial in design, it has a large open porch at one end where the family can gather on warm evenings, read and mingle with real comfort. Above this porch is a large balcony with artistic white railing. Side seats add to the hospitable appearance of the quaint front entrance of true colonial design. The door opens into a small reception hall which in turn opens into the dining room on one side and the large living room on the other. This room is 15 feet 6 inches by 23 feet, easily as large as two ordinary rooms, and an ideal resting place for a large family. There in the side wall is the old-fashioned yet modern open brick fireplace that burns and on each side of this fireplace are French doors opening out onto the porch. The dining room is slightly smaller, 13 feet 6 inches by 13 feet, and conveniently close to the kitchen. As the serving of meals is one of the important functions of the farm home, this arrangement will greatly assist the housewife because it cuts down the number of steps between the stove and the table. The kitchen is one of those delightfully small and compact rooms which has everything to make it an ideal and complete workshop. Of the kitchen is the washroom, an important room in the farm home where the men coming from the field can wash up prior to entering the kitchen. There is also a small storeroom next to the washroom.

Plenty of bedrooms are needed in the farm home to take care of the extra workers in the busy season. There are four large bedrooms on the second floor of this house. And most important is the modern bathroom with complete fixtures. Water is supplied from a water supply system. There is electric light throughout, in this case, perhaps, supplied by a feed wire running near the house. Light and power can also be obtained by a private electric lighting plant. The bedrooms are especially light and cheerful, having windows on two sides.

There is something quaint and appealing about this type of home. It is ideal for the farm because it is roomy, comfortable and not pretentious at all. Moreover, it is economical to build. It is 40 feet wide and 24 feet deep. The side porch is 20 feet wide. The two side bedrooms have doors opening out onto the balcony.

SAND KILLS FOREST TREES

Coo's Bay Dunes in Oregon Have Made a Desert of Once Heavily Wooded Land.

In few places is the destruction of forests by sand more impressive than among the dunes of Coo's Bay, in southwestern Oregon. Approaching the entrance of Coo's Bay, one sees to the south a succession of bold headlands covered by forest of fir and spruce, and to the north miles of rolling sand dunes stretching inland like a desert, with patches of willow and beech plants here and there, and in the distance clumps of trees and even large areas of forests making a last stand against the encroaching dunes.

The destruction of the forests there by sifting sands seem all the more remarkable when one considers that the region is excessively humid. One observer reports that in August and September, when he was there, not one day in five was it dry enough and the wind right and strong enough to move the sand. When a dry day comes, however, and the wind is strong from the west, the sand flows at so great a rate that it will cover a six-inch log in the lee of a dune in less than an hour.

The sand laden wind makes curious etchings on sticks and timber and eventually wears away all the wood except the knots. The forests consist mainly of Douglas fir, Sitka spruce, Port Oxford cedar and western red cedar within the area of the dunes and exist now only in patches, almost always in depressions, the former level of the ground. As the wind builds up the advancing crests of the dunes, it often hollows behind them and exposes the skeletons of a dead forest. When the hollows are large, a green, grassy meadow, the home of numerous moist, sand-loving plants, spring into being.

World's Coal Consumption.
In normal times the world's approximate consumption of coal amounts to 1,200,000,000 tons, of which total Great Britain normally produces about 275,000,000 tons. The normal domestic and industrial consumption of coal each year in Great Britain is 100,000,000 tons; the rest of Great Britain's production is exported.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease.

Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large. However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper. Advertisement.

SUBSCRIBE FOR YOUR HOME TOWN PAPER

It is very rare that the average newspaper boosts its own business, but gives quantities of space in boosting the affairs of others.

Somebody suggested that it is time for the newspapers of the country to adopt a week in which their own business should be given precedence, and the Informer endorses the idea.

The date set is the second week in November, from 7th to 12th, including that great world event, Armistice Day.

The official title for the week is "Subscribe for your Home Town Paper Week."

Thousands of papers will join in this event, and our readers will hear more about it as time goes on.

The home town paper, large or small, is always ready to help any cause in the interest of a better community, better living conditions, and better government. We now ask the readers and advertisers of the Informer to turn in and lend a hand during "Subscribe for Your Home Town Paper Week," and boost for us.

COOKIE'S "HAUNT."

Synopsis—Jane Harding, respectable and conservative old maid, never too old to think of marriage, with more money than brains, is inveigled by a strong-minded spinster, Miss Higgleby-Brown, into financing an expedition to hunt for buried treasure on Leward island. Her niece, Virginia Harding, undertaking to stop her, gets on the vessel and is unwillingly carried along. By no means concealing her distaste for the expedition and her contempt for its members, Virginia makes the acquaintance of the Honorable Calbert Vane. Talking with Dugald Shaw, leader of the expedition, Virginia very frankly expresses her views, practically accusing Shaw and the other members of the party, including a somewhat uncertain personage, Captain Magnus, and a shady "financier," Hamilton H. Tubbs, of being in a conspiracy to defraud Jane Harding. Landing on the island is a matter of some difficulty. Virginia being carried ashore in the arms of Calbert Vane. The party gets settled. Miss Brown tells about the treasure. Virginia declares herself out of it. The dead sailor's map is produced.

(CHAPTER VI—Continued.)

It was fortunate that Cookie knew nothing of the solitary grave somewhere on the island, with its stone marked with B. H. and a cross-bones, nor that the inhabitant thereof was supposed to walk. If he had, I think the strange spectacle of a lone negro in a small boat rowing lustily for the American continent might soon have been witnessed on the Pacific by any eyes that were there to see. And we could ill have spared either boat or cook.

Yet even though unweaved by this growing knowledge, after two or three days I noticed that Cookie was ill at ease. As the leisure member of the party, I enjoyed more of Cookie's society than the rest. On this occasion while the morning was still in its freshness he was permitting me to make fudge. But his usual joviality was gone. I saw that he glanced over his shoulder at intervals, muttering darkly to himself. Also that a rabbit's foot was slung conspicuously about his neck.

Having made my fudge and set the pan on a stone in the stream to cool, I was about to retire with a view to conducting a limited exploring expedition of my own. The assurances of Mr. Shaw—not personally directed to me, of course; the armed truce under which we lived did not permit of that—had convinced me that I had not to dread anything more ferocious than the pigs, and the wildest of them would retire before a stick or a stone. Besides, I boasted a little automatic, which I carried strapped to my waist in a businesslike manner. Mr. Vane had almost got me to the point where I could shoot it off without shutting my eyes.

Thus equipped, I was about to set off into the woods. I had turned my back on Cookie and the camp, when I was arrested by an exclamation:

"Miss Jinny!"

I turned to find Cookie gazing after me with an expression which, in the familiar phrase of fiction, I could not interpret, though among its ingredients were doubt and anguish. Cookie, too, looked pale. I don't in the least know how he managed it, but that was the impression he conveyed, dusky as he was.

"Miss Jinny, it mos' look lak yo' 'bout to go perambulating in dese yere woods?"

"I am, Cookie," I admitted. The whites of Cookie's eyes became alarmingly conspicuous. Drawing near in a stealthy manner he whispered:

"Yo' bettah not, Miss Jinny!"

"Oh, nonsense, Cookie!" I said impatiently. "There's not a thing on the island but the pigs!"

"Miss 'nny," he solemnly replied, "dey's pigs and pigs, chile—live ones and—dead ones."

"Yes, but pigs is pig, you know," I answered, laughing.

"Dey's pigs and pigs, chile—live ones and—dead ones."

"Dead ones? Of course—haven't we been eating them?"

"Yo' won't nevah eat dis yere kind o' dead pig, Miss Jinny. It's—it's a 'haunt'!"

The murder was out. Cookie leaned against a cocoa-palm and wiped his ebony brow.

Persistently questioned, he told at last how, today and yesterday, arising in the dim dawn to build his fire before the camp was stirring, he had seen lurking at the edge of the clearing a white four-footed shape. It was a pig, yet not a pig; its ghostly hue, its noiseless movements, divided it from all proper mundane porkers by the dreadful gulf which divides the living from the dead. The first morning Cookie, doubtful of his senses, had flung a stone and the spectral thing had vanished like a shadow. On its second appearance, having had a day and a night for meditation, he had known better than to commit such an outrage upon the possessor of ghostly powers, and had resorted to prayer instead. This had answered quite as well, for the phantom pig had dissolved like the morning mists. While the sun blazed, what with his devotions and his rabbit's foot and a cross of twigs nailed to a tree, Cookie felt a fair degree of security. But his teeth chattered in his head at the thought of approaching night. Meanwhile he could not in conscience permit me to venture forth into the path of this horror, which might, for all we knew, be lurking in the jungle shadows, even through the daylight hours. Also, though he did not avow this motive, I believe he found my company very reassuring. It is immensely easier to face a ghost in the sustaining presence of other flesh and blood.

For a moment I wavered in my determination. What if the island had its wild creatures after all? But neither lynx nor panther nor any other beast of prey is white, except a polar bear, and it would be unusual to meet one on a tropical island.

I decided that Cookie's pig was after all a pig, though still in the flesh. I thought I remembered having seen quite fair pigs, which would pass for white with a frightened negro, in the dim light of dawn. I consoled Cookie as best I could by promising to cross my fingers if I heard or saw anything suspicious, and struck out into the woods.

For all my brave words to Cookie, I had no intention of going very far afield. From the shore of the cove I had observed that the ground behind the clearing rose to the summit of a low ridge, perhaps four hundred feet in height, which jutted from the base of the peak. From this ridge I thought I might see something more of the island than the limited environment of Lantern bay.

As the woods shut out the last glimpse of the white tents in the clearing, as even the familiar sound of the surf died down to a faint, half-imagined whisper mingling with the rustling of the palms overhead, I experienced a certain discomfort, which persons given to hard and unqualified terms might have called fear. It seemed to me as if a very strong cord at the rear of my belt were jerking me back toward the inglorious safety of the camp. I fingered my automatic and marched on up the hill, trying not to gasp when a leaf rustled or a coconut dropped in the woods.

I gained the summit of the ridge, and stood upon a bare rock platform, scantily sheltered by a few trees, large shrubs, rather, with a smooth, waxy leaf of vivid green. On the left rose the great mass of the peak, my eyes.

"Yo' Bettah Not, Miss Jinny!"

From far above among its crags a beautiful foamy waterfall came hurrying down.

I had not dreamed of getting a view so glorious from the little eminence of the ridge. Here was an item of news to take back to camp. Having with great originality christened the place Lookout, I turned to go. And as I turned I saw a shape vanish into the woods.

It was an animal, not a human shape. And it was white. It had, indeed, every distinguishing trait of Cookie's phantom pig. Only it was not a pig. My brief shadowy glimpse of it had told me that. I knew what it was not, but what it was I could not, as I stood there rooted, even guess.

Would it attack me, or should I only lie of fright? I wondered if my heart were weak, and hoped it was, so that I should not live to feel the teeth of the unknown thing sink in my flesh. I thought of my revolver and after an infinity of time managed to draw it from the case. My fingers seemed at once nervelessly limp and woodenly rigid. This was not at all the dauntless front with which I had dreamed of meeting danger. I had fancied myself with my automatic making a rather pretty picture as a young Amazon—but I had now a dreadful fear that my revolver might spasmodically go off and wound the thing, and then, even if it had meditated letting me go, it would certainly attack me. Nevertheless I clung to my revolver as to my last hope.

I began to edge away crab-wise into the wood. Like a metronome I said to myself over and over monotonously, "Don't run, don't run!"

I did not run. Instead, I stepped on a smooth surface of rock and slid downhill like a human toboggan until I fetched up against a dead log after a confused interval during which I vaguely believed myself to have been swallowed by an alligator. While the alligator illusion endured I must have lain comatose and immovable. Indeed, when my senses began to come back

The Strange Beast of the Jungle Was a White Bull-Terrier.

I was still quite inert. I experienced that curious tranquillity which is said to visit those who are actually within the jaws of death. There I lay prone, absolutely at the mercy of the mysterious white prowler of the forest—and I did not care. The whole petty business of living seemed a long way behind me now.

Languidly at last I opened my eyes. Within three yards of me, in the open rock-paved glade where I had fallen, stood the thing. Yes, there it was—only now it had put an ear back and was sniffing at me with a mingling of interest and apprehension.

The strange beast of the jungle was a white bull-terrier.

Abruptly I sat up. The terrier gave a startled sidewise bound, but paused again and stood regarding me.

"Here, pup! Here, pup! Nice dog-gums!" I said in soothing accents.

The dog gave a low white and stood shivering, eager but afraid. I continued my blandishments. Little by little the forlorn creature drew nearer, until I put out a cautious hand and stroked his ears. He dodged frightfully, but presently crept back again. Soon his head was against my knee, and he was devouring my hand with avid caresses. Some time, before his abandonment on the island, he had been a well-brought-up and petted animal. Months or years of wild life had estranged him from humanity, yet at the human touch the old devotion woke again.

The thing now was to lure him back to camp and restore him to the happy service of his gods. With another alluring, "Here, dog-gums!" I started on my way. He shrank, trembled, hesitated, then was after me with a bound. So I brought him triumphantly across the Rubicon of the little stream, and marched him into camp under the astounded eyes of Cookie.

At sight of the negro the dog growled softly and crouched against my skirt. Cookie stood like an effigy of amaze-ment done in black and white.

"Fo' de Lawd's sake, Miss Jinny," he burst at last, "am dat de ghos'-pig?"

"It was, Cookie, but I changed him into a live dog by crossing my fingers. Mind your rabbit's foot. He might eat it, and then very likely we'd have a ghost on our hands again."

"Yo' go 'long, Miss Jinny," said Cookie valiantly. "Yo' think I scared of any ghos' what lower himself to be a live white mong'ol dog? Yere, yo' kl-y, yo' bettah nek friends with ol' Cookie, 'cause he got charge o' de grub. Yere's a lil' fat ma'ow bone what mebbe come off'n yo' own grand-chile, but yo' ain' goin' to mind dat now yo' 's trans formulated dis yere way." And evidently the reincarnated ghost-pig did not.

"You are impertinent. Let me pass!"

Ancient Iron Currency.

Sword-shaped bars of iron were used by the ancient Britons as money, and many of these are now found in British museums. A recent investigation shows that six different denominations were used, distinguished by their sizes.

Pretty Things that are made at Home

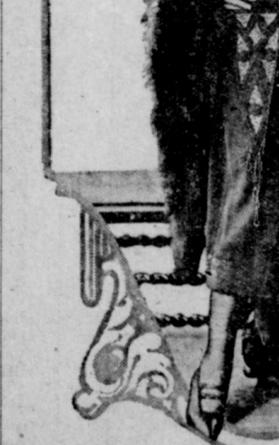

THE fruits, which may be placed in any sort of basket or suitable dish, require wire, crepe paper and colored sealing wax for making them. Wads of cotton, wool batting or crepe paper, rolled into the right size and fastened to a wire stem, are covered with melted sealing wax, which is dripped over them as it melts. They are twirled about to round them, the shape controlled while the wax is pliable, and dipped in water to cool them. Stems are made by winding the wire with strips of green crepe paper or tissue paper. The grapes are made in green, red and purple bunches in the natural color tones. The small apples require two or three colors. After the apple is made in one color, and cooled, it is wiped dry and bits of other colors dropped on it and blended in over the small alcohol or other flame used for melting the wax.

Paper roses, shown in the basket at the right, are made in several ways. Those pictured of pink crepe paper are merely narrow strips, rolled at the edge and wound about the end of a wire stem. They are fastened to the stem with the wire and set in millinery foliage or in foliage bought with the paper.

Black lacquer is used for covering the tin powder and rouge box, and colored wax for simulating ribbon and flowers on them, and the telephone book is merely a length of black oil-cloth folded and painted on one side. A black silk cord binds its leaves to the cover and serves to suspend it.

At the bottom of the group a little telephone record book is shown, made of black oilcloth and decorated with flowers, painted on with either oil-paints or sealing wax, and above it cardboard and tin boxes lacquered and decorated in the same way.

Among them appears the handsome and faultless dress shown in the picture above, which may be taken as a representative of the best interpretations of the mode. Its lines could hardly be less simple or more becoming and its decoration is everything that could be wished. Beads and silk are used for a design which recalls the motifs used by American Indians in their wonderful bead work, but is carried out in only one color, beige, with steel beads. This combination

NOW that fashion's devotees insist upon the very simplest lines in frocks for daytime wear, the ingenuity of designers is put to the test. Their resourcefulness must save these frocks from becoming monotonous by making the most of their decoration, and they have called upon all sources for inspiration. This saving grace of decoration has been considerably overdone sometimes—one must know where to leave off—but this is the exception and not the rule in the new models presented for winter wear.

A SIMPLE ONE-PIECE FROCK

NOW that fashion's devotees insist upon the very simplest lines in frocks for daytime wear, the ingenuity of designers is put to the test. Their resourcefulness must save these frocks from becoming monotonous by making the most of their decoration, and they have called upon all sources for inspiration. This saving grace of decoration has been considerably overdone sometimes—one must know where to leave off—but this is the exception and not the rule in the new models presented for winter wear.

on almost any of the fashionist's colors or black will not fail to be approved by women of conservative and elegant taste. In this model the embroidery is not applied directly to the frock but in separate pieces of material which are set on. In the bodice they are loose at the bottom, allowing the narrow girdle of the fabric in the skirt they form pockets as well as adornments. This dress is made of dark blue velours with satin vest to match, but it would be effective in any of the fashionable suitings or to velvet.

To Remove Peach Stains. Wet with cold water, then cover the stain with cream of tartar and place in the sun, then wash in the usual way and the stain will disappear.

CALOMEL IS A DANGEROUS DRUG

Next Dose May Salivate You, Loosen Teeth or Start Rheumatism.

Calomel is mercury; quicksilver. It crashes into sour bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tonic for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without salivating you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tonic straightens you right up and you feel great. No salts necessary. Give it to the child, because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.—Advertisement.

A Beautiful Woman is Always a Well Woman

San Antonio, Tex.—"After a serious illness, when my strength seemed as tho' it would not come back to me, I decided to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription as a tonic. I had seen it recommended so highly that I felt I could not go far astray. This medicine did all for me that could be desired. It restored me to perfect health and strength in a comparatively short time and I am just as strong and well as can be. 'Favorite Prescription' is a splendid tonic and builder for women and it is a pleasure to recommend it." Mrs. Hettie McLane, 308 Bowie St.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription has made many women happy by making them healthy. Get it at once from your nearest druggist in either tablets or liquid; or send 10c to Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y., for a trial pkg. tablets and write for free medical advice.

HEDLEY SCHOOL NOTES

Lots Nipper, who has been out of school for several weeks, has returned.

Reports from different grades show many pupils, who have been out helping gather crops, are returning. We are glad to have them back at work.

STATE DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION, AUSTIN, TEXAS
Report of High School Supervisor on Hedley School

In order that the school may be properly certified it is essential that the minimum requirements as outlined in Bulletin 132 be met. To that end, the supervisor who recently visited your school makes the following recommendations:

In view of the lack of sufficient equipment for both the elementary grades, and for the high school, the following recommendations are urgently made:

1. That a set of geography maps, a physiology chart, a Texas history chart, and a United States history chart be immediately purchased for the use of the elementary grades.
2. That $75 worth of books suitable to the needs of the various elementary grades be purchased.
3. That one source book for every three pupils in the high school history classes be added to the high school library.

4. That one anthology for every three pupils in the Literature classes be added to the high school library.

5. That one history chart be purchased for each history class in the high school.

6. That $200 worth of laboratory apparatus be added to the laboratory equipment immediately.

It will be necessary that the foregoing recommendations be met as soon as possible if standard work is to be maintained in this school, and if its present classification is to be retained.

This School Community is growing rapidly and the school sentiment here is vigorous and healthy.

HEDLEY HIGH

Hedley High! Hedley High! Watch us work and watch us fly!

Of all people, it is the cry, "Watch us grow!" the Hedley High.

Did you fall on your monthly exams? No, guy!

We are students of the Hedley High.

We high school students sometime sigh, But still we are for the Hedley High.

All our teachers we will stand by, We know they are working for Hedley High.

Sometimes our football players are beaten; but, my!

They're just beginners in Hedley High.

There's no high school that will ever die if they have teachers like Hedley High.

HIGH CLASS PHOTOPLAYS

Special attention is called to the advertisement of the Pastime Theatre, of Clarendon, in this paper each week. Manager H. Mulkey shows in his Theatre ninety per cent of the Real Film Stars, his regular programs being unexcelled in any of the large city houses. He shows only THE BEST—and shows it while it's new.

Mr. Mulkey has also reduced his admission charges to 10c and 25c, thus placing the best pictures within the reach of all. He expects soon to show Otis Skinner, world famous actor, in "KISMET," said to be one of the greatest photoplays yet filmed. Read his weekly programs in the Informer.

Armistice Day is being observed quietly today. All business houses are closed, and a large per cent of our citizens are helping to celebrate the occasion at other places.

"HOME TOWN PAPER WEEK"

Every "Four Corners" has its Home Town Week nowadays, but all the boys and girls who have wandered from the Township Center cannot get back to enjoy the loved surroundings. But all can subscribe to the Old Home Town Paper and thus keep well in touch with the little spot they once called home.

What joy to run over the school promotions and find that the tots of a few years ago are moving higher and higher in scholastic circles and eventually blossom forth as the "sweet girl graduates," or the clean strong boys discarding knickers.

Just watch the hardened old city coddler open up his home paper—it's the first thing he picks out of his mail—and what can he find there to interest him? Angus McGugan's horse died yesterday; Peter McGregor will run for the county clerkship; Horace Jell hopes to win the secretaryship of the Hilltown agricultural society; Lydia Manger has opened a millinery store in one side of the printing office. Mrs. Brown lost her hand satchel in the butcherery; Dr. Dorland is attending Clara Brown who is down with a severe cold; Mrs. Plater broke her ankle and is in the county hospital.

Yet, though he smiles at the old time styles and expressions, he enjoys it all over and over again, for it takes his mind back home where his wonderful boyhood days—happy days—were spent.
