VOL. XII

HEDLEY, DONLEY COUNTY, TEXAS, JUNE 9, 1922

NO. 29

TO CANDIDATES

All candidates who expect to ask to have their names printed on the Democratic Ballot for the Primary Election July 23, 1922, must file their application on or before Saturday before the third Monday in June, and which for this year is June 17th.

Let all remember the final date—June 17th—and not fail to file by or before that date, as the law requires.

Again, the Executive Committee at its meeting on Monday, June 19th, must pass on the question as to whether or not nominations are to be made by majority or plurality vote. In other words, a double or single primary as to county and precinct officers. I am sure that the Committee will want to voice the sentiment of the people and the candidates themselves in this matter. Let Democratic voters discuss this matter with their Precinct Chairman, that he may be prepared to properly represent you at the meeting when this matter is to be settled.

Sincerely,
A. M. Beville, Sr.,
County Chairman.

BUCK CREEK WELL IS DRILLING AGAIN

The Informer is pleased to be able to announce that, following months of inactivity in that vicinity, drilling has been resumed at Buck Creek well, eight miles northeast of Hedley.

The hole has been cleaned out to 1500 feet, and ten inch casing is being set. Day and night shifts are on the job, and the work is expected to go forward rapidly.

Many great predictions concerning this well have been made by men who are supposed to know what they're talking about, and its progress will be watched with great interest.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

GETTING RESULTS

BY LEARNING things rather than words, observing closely how things are done to produce results, keeping in intimate touch with improved methods, making careful mental analysis of the failure or the success of others, and applying the practical information thus gained, ought to be the dominating purpose of every man or woman who earnestly desires to get out of and away from the packed and beaten roads.

To think along the same groove day after day and possibly using the same unproductive form of reasoning, grown threadbare by frequent handling, contracts the mind and weakens it.

If you do not go ahead among new thoughts, you can never hope to create new things.

If you fail to lay hold of the forces within you, and thus become a part

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

INSPIRATION

A RECENT Sunday newspaper printed a picture of the head of one of New York's biggest banks. He was in a baseball uniform, and but for a mistake—an ornament now discarded by ball players—looked like a professional.

The picture was taken at an outing of the Bond club. The banker served as pitcher for the New York team. The type below recited the fact that he got his first job in an Albany bank because he was a crack ball player, applied himself to banking as eagerly as he had applied himself to baseball, and in a few years was well on his way to his present position.

It is needless to say that this particular baseball player didn't put all he had into the game. He was unusually gifted as a pitcher, and might easily have got into one of the big leagues, too.

But he had the good sense to know that baseball was not a steady business, and that banking was. And instead of seizing an opportunity to make fairly big money early in youth, he was content to try the banking business on a small salary.

Of course there are a good many men who started in the banking business when he did, and who are still about where they were when they started. But at least they still have steady jobs. If they had taken to baseball they would not be doing as well.

Our object in referring to this particular case is to call attention to the fact that if you want inspiration in your work you can get it in the newspapers—plenty of it.

Brief bits of biography such as the one we have cited appear almost every day.

Seldom is a prominent man's name mentioned in connection with an important affair that you do not learn something about how he started and why he succeeded.

If you want to read about the failures—and the horrible examples, you can read about them, too.

While this man was rising from a bank clerk to a bank president, another man who started as an impor-

EVERYDAY FISH DISHES

ONE may usually find good salt or smoked fish in the markets when the fresh fish are unobtainable. Finnan haddie is haddock which is dried and salted, then smoked, which gives it the flavor so well liked. It should be freshened very carefully not to lose that flavor. Twenty to thirty minutes' soaking in warm water is sufficient to remove the excess of salt. Picked up, added to cream and served with baked potatoes it is very good.

Finnan Haddie With Tomatoes.

Take one and one-half pounds of finnan haddie, two tablespoonsful of flour, three tablespoonsful of butter, a dash of pepper, three tablespoonsful of minced onion, two cupsful of tomato juice and two tablespoonsful of green peppers minced. Freshen the fish and cook it gently in water for twenty minutes. Flake it into small bits with two forks, carefully removing all bones. Melt the butter in a saucepan, fry the onion and pepper until softened, add the flour and gradually the tomato juice. Let the mixture boil, add the fish, and when it becomes very hot serve at once with boiled macaroni.

Casserole of Smoked Halibut.

Take one and one-half pounds of smoked halibut, three small onions, of the ever-expanding universe, you may set it down that you are marked for a mere imitating plodder, of which the world at present has a tremendous over-supply.

No harm can come to you in exploring new fields.

It is better to fail in untried effort than painstakingly to avoid it, for by exerting yourself you may quite unexpectedly arouse some dormant capability of whose existence you had not the slightest suspicion.

Life is a search for substance on which life depends.

It is through this search that we discover things and get from them useful results.

To take no part in this ever-expanding search is to admit defeat.

You cannot long continue in the chase of honor and fame without soon feeling the exhilarating thrill of the ennobling adventure.

And when your blood runs hot your brain tingles with clearing vision, and your whole being becomes attuned to novel surroundings, you stretch out eager arms and cry in joyous voice for more, more!

And the beautiful part of such experience is that what in your days of slackness you considered drudgery barren of results, resolves itself into a thing of inspiration, bearing you on strong, swift wings to the top of your dreamland hill.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"ELECTRICITY"

IN SEEKING the derivation of this word, one might be pardoned for supposing that it had something to do with the ancient word for lightning or even for steel or iron, because these substances have become connected in our minds with the substance itself. But "electricity" is one of those words which might be termed "natural errors," for it has its origin in the Greek word for amber—elektron. In fact, a literal translation of it would be "the quality of being like amber."

The connection is far from apparent until we dig back into Greek history and find that the scientists of ancient Athens discovered that, by rubbing a piece of amber vigorously they were able to attract light objects with it. We now know that the force which we call "electricity" was generated by the rubbing of the amber, by the friction applied to its surface, but the Greeks were of the opinion that this was a quality inherent in the amber itself. While the existence of this force has been apparent in the form of lightning, magnets and the like, for countless centuries, it was only in very recent times that it was recognized as a distinct power, to be studied and catalogued and used for the benefit of mankind. The name applied to it, however, was the name given by the Greeks to the substance which manifested it.

THE REASON

I OFTEN get a piece of pie, Or bread, or even cake, That's equal to the very best That mother used to bake. And mother was a famous cook Known all the country through For putting up the best of meals That hungry children knew.

I used to think that modern cooks Had lost the noble art, But after long reflection I Espouse their cause and part. So when some grouchy man complains And calls their art in question, I know just what the matter is— It's simply indigestion.

Systematic Accumulation. "How did prices get to be so high in the first place?" inquired the plain citizen.

"Well," replied Mr. Dustin Stax, "the more profit you made the more surtax you had to pay and the more surtax you had to pay the more profit you had to make."

BLOUSES FOR SUNNY SUMMER; LONG WRAPS FOR SPRING

A LITTLE journey through the blouse shops leaves the impression of a riot of styles, and it is respectfully suggested that the displays would be less confusing if the several types of blouses were segregated in them. The styles are broadly divided into costume blouses, tailored blouses and sports blouses, each one showing many ingenious variations.

The two blouses pictured here belong to the dressier class of suit styles and are made of crepe de chine. Blouses of this fabric and georgette, lead in demand, with white, flesh and they achieve cape effects by their draperies or their sleeves are so amplified that they contrive the flowing lines of the cape. There is nothing monotonous in the mode; with all its preference for capelike lines, it has fostered very great variety of graceful wraps that keep the streets interesting.

The most important rival of the cape appears in long, full garments, bloused below the waistline, like the model shown at the left of the picture. In this wrap the sleeves are extended into long points finished into bisque color the favorites, but they are made in many other colors, and are also worn with the dressier separate skirts. At the left a slip-over model is gathered in at the round neck and opens a little way down the front, fastening with ribbon ties. Its decorative panels may be of figured crepe or of embroidery and it has a girle of the material, tied at the left side.

Another pretty slip-over style opens at the left side and fastens on the shoulder. It is of white, or light-colored crepe de chine, with bindings and covered buttons in a darker colored crepe. It has ingeniously simulated pockets in which a panel of the darker crepe is used, and its narrow girle ties in a prim bow at the back.

On the dressier blouses of crepe de chine heading is still much used, crystal beads in the color of the blouse handsome tassels and they lend the admired sweeping lines to this coat. Any of the soft, lightweight coatings are used in these wraps and their linings of crepe or other silks are especially supple. It has a muffer collar which adapts it to cool weather.

The very handsome black wrap at the right of the picture is made of one of those lustrous silk crepes which grow more important as summer draws near. It is shirred to a full ruffled collar and has a narrow scarf to match finished with fringe for tying at the front. Fringes and tassels are important in summer wraps. Wide fringe adds much to the richness and beauty of the model illustrated, placed across each side near its lower edge.

Many summer wraps have fur collars and sometimes are banded with fur, with caracul, in beige tones or or iridescent beads that shade into it, replacing the varied and contrasting colors that preceded them. They are put on in simple designs, as in straight lines at intervals down the length of the blouse, or in small sunburst patterns that any one can do. A very pretty slip-over blouse in periwinkle blue, is made of one length of crepe de chine, cut in very deep, narrow scallops at the bottom. The edges of these, the neck and sleeves, are outlined with long, iridescent beads in blue shading into purple, and lines of beads extend from the neck to the scallops which extend about eight inches below the waist line.

"After you, my dear cape," appears to be the sentiment one gathers from coats as they appear in the procession of spring styles—and they are very closely "after." Either black, and natural squirrel the favorites.

Those who keep their fingers on the pulse of public demand see in the long bloused coats, on Russian lines, the most hopeful rivals of capes and cape-wraps. Quite likely they will forge ahead, and perhaps get the lead by the time that fall styles make their entry. In the meantime the vogue of the cape, and all its kindred, is assured. The new three-piece suits provided with capes instead of coats, are pretty and economical because the capes may be worn with other dresses during the summer months.

PEARSON ENTERS RACE FOR DISTRICT JUDGE

Hon. Perry S. Pearson of Amarillo this week makes announcement of his candidacy for the office of District Judge of the 47th Judicial District.

Judge Pearson has been a practicing attorney in Amarillo for the past eleven years, and has practiced in all Courts, Federal and State. He is a graduate of George Washington University, in Washington, D. C., and practiced in Atlanta, Georgia, eight years before coming to Amarillo.

Judge Pearson has not only been successful as a practitioner, but has acted as special District Judge in numerous cases, and has in that capacity demonstrated both his knowledge of the law and his fairness on the bench. He was formerly President of the Amarillo Bar Association, composed of lawyers of Potter county and over the Panhandle.

He promises should he be elected to this office, to put forth his every effort to administer justice, holding fast to the cardinal doctrine of perfect equality before the law.

Although he will put on a vigorous campaign, he will probably be unable to see every voter personally, but asks a consideration of his candidacy on his merits. His candidacy is subject to the action of the Democratic Primary in July.

B. Y. P. U. ENTERTAINED

On last Thursday evening, Mrs. W. A. Chapman was hostess to the B. Y. P. U. of the First Baptist Church.

At the appointed hour the guests began to arrive, and despite the fact that a heavy black cloud was rising in the west, quite a large number were present.

Instrumental and vocal music filled the early evening, and interesting games followed. Each boy was given a guess as to whom his wife would be were he some other fellow than himself. This proved very amusing.

About nine o'clock the rain began to fall in torrents. Some of the guests rushed to their homes, while others remained and the fun continued into the "wee small hours"—as did the rain.

Delicious refreshments of ice cream and cake were served.

$365 IN PRIZES FOR BEST RHYMES

A new contest is just being started which will interest everyone who reads this paper. Anyone can enter this Contest—anyone can win! All it is necessary to do is to write a 4-line rhyme on Dr. Price's Phosphate Baking Powder, using only the words which appear on the label of the Dr. Price can (front and back). Isn't that easy? Everyone likes to make rhymes and here is a chance to spend a fascinating hour or two writing rhymes on this popular Baking Powder and perhaps winning a substantial prize for your efforts.

27 CASH PRIZES

For the rhyme selected as best a prize of $100 will be given; for the second, third and fourth best rhymes prizes of $75, $50, and $25, respectively will be given. And besides these prizes there will be 23 prizes of $5 each for the next 23 best rhymes. With such a long list of prizes as these, it would be a pity not to try your hand. Here's a 4-line rhyme as example:

Biscuits, muffins, pie or cake,
With Dr. Price's Powder bake.
The Price's Co., guarantee
No alum in the cans to be.

As Dr. Price's Phosphate Baking Powder sells for only 25 cents a 12 oz. can, some rhymes could play up the great economy of this pure and wholesome baking powder.

All rhymes must be received by July 1, 1922. Only words appearing on the label of the Dr. Price can (front and back) may be used. These words may be used as often as desired, but no other words will be allowed. If you haven't a can of Dr. Price's, you can see one free at almost any grocery. It is not a requirement that you purchase a can in order to be eligible in this Contest.

Anyone may enter the Contest, but only one rhyme from each person will be considered. In case of ties, the full amount of the prize will be given to each tying contestant. Write plainly on only one side of a sheet of paper and be sure to give your name and address. Send your rhyme before July 1st to Price Baking Powder Factory, 1005 Independence Blvd., Chicago, Ill.

Paint your house with

THE above picture shows that one gallon of SWP house paint covers 360 square feet of surface, two coats. Ordinary paint covers from 200 to 250 square feet. That is the first saving. SWP, though heavy-bodied, flows easily and evenly, thus cutting down the time required to apply it. That is the second saving. SWP outlasts two or three paintings with ordinary paint, saving the cost of materials for repainting and also saving the labor cost which is about 75 per cent of the total expense. In buying paint it's the one a gallon covers, not the cost per gallon, that determines its economy. We carry a complete line of SWP. If you please paint your house, let us help you.

CALOMEL IS A DANGEROUS DRUG

Next Dose May Salivate You, Loosen Teeth or Start Rheumatism.

Calomel is mercury; quicksilver. It crashes into your bile like dynamite, cramping and sickening you. Calomel attacks the bones and should never be put into your system.

If you feel bilious, headachy, constipated and all knocked out, just go to your druggist and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents which is a harmless vegetable substitute for dangerous calomel. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't start your liver and straighten you up better and quicker than nasty calomel and without making you sick, you just go back and get your money.

Don't take calomel! It makes you sick the next day; it loses you a day's work. Dodson's Liver Tone straightens you right up and you feel great. No salts necessary. Give it to the children because it is perfectly harmless and can not salivate.—Advertisement.

Our Soldiers

By JESSIE DELL

(Historian, Quartermaster Corps, United States Army.)

THE big army transport, with its solemn cargo, slowly and majestically steams up New York harbor, into the historic Hudson, and home is again reached!

It is the Cambal, bringing home more than a thousand soldier dead. With her arrival the solemn duty of the quartermaster corps of the United States Army of bringing home the soldier dead nears completion. More than 44,000 have been returned for burial in their homeland. About 32,000 will sleep forever overseas, according to the wish of their next of kin.

And this is the way of their coming home of those who are to sleep forever in their homeland.

Paying its tribute of honor to the memory of these heroes who are nearing the end of "the last journey," the flag floats half-masted from New York's great buildings; from vessels in the harbor. As the ship moors at the pier in Hoboken, she is met by the military guard of honor, two companies of the famous Thirteenth United States Infantry, and by all officers and civilians on duty in the graves registration office in Hoboken.

Hundreds of selected men under the personal supervision of our officers and soldiers commence the work of removing the bodies from the ship and conveying them by means of electric trucks to the designated places on "The Pier of the Dead." A flag is then draped over each one and stays there until the coffin is lowered into its final grave, when the emblem is removed and given to the relatives.

As soon as the bodies are at rest on "The Pier of the Dead" the name of each is listed. Then a telegram is sent by the quartermaster corps officer in charge at Hoboken, to the nearest of kin, announcing the arrival of the body and requesting a reply confirming the shipping instructions previously given to that office. When this is received at Hoboken, acknowledgment is promptly made by mail.

If, on the other hand, no reply is received to the first telegram, a second one is sent and if within a reasonable time no reply comes, the failure is immediately telegraphed to the cemeterial division at Washington for their help in locating relatives. After all attempts of the cemeterial division are futile, the Hoboken office is directed to have the body sent to Washington for interment in the Arlington National cemetery. Fortunately, but few of such cases have occurred.

The officer in charge at Hoboken, in addition to his other duties, cooperates with the committees representing the American Legion, the Veterans of Foreign Wars, and other patriotic organizations, in arranging memorial services to be held for the dead arriving on each transport.

These ceremonies are most impressive. The military guard of honor stands at "attention" as distinguished men eulogize the dead. The President of the United States, the secretary of war and other members of the cabinet, committees of congress, the chief of staff and other general officers, as well as thousands of relatives and friends have attended these memorial ceremonies.

Relatives from every state in the Union, even from far-away Alaska, have come to Hoboken to meet their boys on "The Pier of the Dead."

As soon as possible after notifying relatives of the return of a body, preparations are made for shipment to its final destination. A telegram goes from the transportation division of the Hoboken office to the nearest of kin, advising of the departure of the body from Hoboken, the hour due for arrival, and the railroad by which it is sent. When no relative or authorized friend comes to receive and accompany the body to its destination, it is placed in charge of a military escort who remain as guard until the destination is reached and the body is formally turned over to the family.

Another matter given careful attention is in providing the escort to accompany the body home. One soldier is selected who can speak the language of the family to whom he is taking it. It is the duty of this military escort to obtain the written receipt for the body, and the burial certificate. These records are exceedingly important and are carefully preserved in the cemeterial division, because the war risk bureau calls on the division for certification that the funeral has taken place, and on these records depends the authority for that bureau to reimburse relatives for funeral expenses incurred by them. It is to be noted that the quartermaster corps bears all expenses up to the point of turning over the body to the nearest of kin, at its final destination.

Sometimes many bodies are to be sent to the same city; in these cases a special train is provided for the purpose and a military escort for each car. Again it may be that trains leaving Hoboken carry many bodies whose destinations are in several states. In such cases, bodies are segregated according to state and placed in cars which will convey them to the distribution point for that state.

There are sixteen of these distribution points: Atlanta, Ga.; Arlington, Va.; Cheyenne, Wyo.; Chicago, Ill.; Columbia, S. C.; Columbus, O.; Detroit, Mich.; El Paso, Tex.; Little Rock, Ark.; Louisville, Ky.; Omaha, Neb.; Portland, Ore.; San Antonio, Tex.; San Francisco, Cal.; St. Paul, Minn.; and Washington, D. C. At the railroad station at each of these points, the cemeterial division has its representative who keeps in close touch with the nearest army post or camp from which a detail of soldiers for escort is provided to receive the trains bearing the dead.

From this point each body has its military escort, and if requested, the funeral, provided it can be arranged without too great cost of transportation to the government, or without interfering with the duties of the men composing the firing squad.

During the past year there have been 2,364 of our overseas' dead interred in beautiful Arlington National cemetery.

Telegrams announcing the date on which interments will take place in Arlington, are sent to relatives by the chief of the cemeterial division who further advises that should they attend the funeral ceremonies, and should they so desire, all information and assistance concerning hotel accommodation and transportation to Arlington will be given them by the Travelers' Aid society representatives who are on duty in the Union station in Washington.

The splendid, efficient and sympathetic assistance of this society has been a blessing to the relatives of the dead.

The District of Columbia chapter of the Red Cross, at their headquarters on Jackson square, receive all the out-of-town relatives and friends who come to attend these services, and on Mondays and Thursdays, special luncheons are served for them. They also provide motorbus transportation to Arlington cemetery and return.

The interest of the Red Cross does not stop there, for it has made special arrangement with the quartermaster general and the cemeterial division to have large canvas tents pitched at or near the places where the burials take place. Several women representing the Red Cross are always in these tents to receive the relatives and friends and to make them comfortable, or to let them rest until the hour arrives for the services which is announced by the measured tread of the military companies detailed for this duty from the command at Fort Myer.

The detail, with its band, its buglers and its firing squad, is always accompanied by at least two chaplains, one Protestant and the other Roman Catholic, and when necessary a Rabbi is there, to conduct the last rites.

Another touching incident connected with these funerals is the dropping of flowers in each grave as the final prayers are said. This loving act is performed by representatives of the War Mothers, who never fail to be present when Arlington is receiving its overseas' dead.

As we hear the sweetly doleful notes of the band, and listen to the soft-spoken words of the chaplain, followed by the musketry salute, we feel a thrill of solemn pride, a realization that, in hours of need, our country has ever had its full quota of the brave and heroic.

The bugler now steps up to the grave, and as the notes of his trumpet echo amongst the hills and trees, through our thoughts pass the words of "Taps":

Fades the light;
And afar
Goes the day,
Cometh night;
And a star
Leads all
Speechless all
To their rest.

And thus ends the last journey.

Permanent Teeth

When your permanent teeth are all in place nature has finished her tooth job. You have your share of teeth and if you don't take care of them you will either have to do without teeth or use artificial ones. Who wants to do without teeth? Certainly you and we don't. Besides, it is not very pleasant to have them taken out. Your permanent teeth are a wonderful mechanism. They masticate your food, give shape and expression to your face and distinctness to your voice. The loss of even one tooth is a very serious injury, but the loss of more than one is a calamity. The longer you live the more you need your teeth.—National Dental Association Journal.

Spare to us our friends, soften to us our enemies, bless us if it may be in all our innocent endeavors, if it may not, give us the strength to encounter that which is to come, that we may be brave in peril, constant in tribulation, temperate in wrath, and in all changes of fortune, and down to the gates of death, loyal and loving to one another."

GETTING DIVORCED

SYNOPSIS.—In a preface Mary Marie explains her apparent "double personality" and just why she is a cross-current and a contradiction; she also tells her reasons for writing the diary—later to be a novel. The diary is commenced at Andersonville. Mary begins with Nurse Sarah's account of her (Mary's) birth, which seemingly interested her father, who is a famous astronomer, less than a new star which was discovered the same night. Her name is a compromise, her father insisting on Abigail Jane. The child quickly learned that her home was in some way different from those of her small friends, and was puzzled thereat. Nurse Sarah tells her of her mother's arrival at Andersonville as a bride and how astonished they all were at the sight of the dainty eighteen-year-old girl whom the sedate professor had chosen for a wife. Nurse Sarah makes it plain why the household seemed a strange one to the child and how her father and mother drifted apart through misunderstanding, each too proud to in any way attempt to smooth over the situation.

I didn't even think of asking Father, of course. I never ask Father questions. Nurse says I did ask him once why he didn't love me like other papas loved their little girls. But I was very little then, and I don't remember it at all. But Nurse said Father didn't like it very well, and maybe I did remember that part, without really knowing it. Anyhow, I never think of asking Father questions.

I asked the doctor first. I thought maybe 'twas some kind of a disease, and if he knew it was coming, he could give them some sort of a medicine to keep it away—like being vaccinated so's not to have smallpox, you know. And I told him so.

He gave a funny little laugh, that somehow didn't sound like a laugh at all. Then he grew very, very sober, and said:

"I'm sorry, little girl, but I'm afraid I haven't got any medicine that will prevent a divorce. If I did have, there'd be no eating or drinking or sleeping for me, I'm thinking—I'd be so busy answering my calls."

"Then it is a disease?" I cried. And I can remember just how frightened I felt. "But isn't there any doctor anywhere that can stop it?"

He shook his head and gave that queer little laugh again.

"I'm afraid not," he sighed. "As for it's being a disease—there are people that call it a disease, and there are others who call it a cure; and there are still others who say it's a remedy worse than the disease it tries to cure. But, there, you baby! What am I saying? Come, come, my dear, just forget it. It's nothing you should bother your little head over now. Wait till you're older."

Till I'm older, indeed! How I hate to have folks talk to me like that! And they do—they do it all the time. As if I was a child now, when I'm almost standing there where the brook and river meet!

But that was just the kind of talk I got, everywhere, nearly every time I asked any one what a divorce was. Some laughed, and some sighed. Some looked real worried 'cause I'd asked it, and one got mad. (That was the dressmaker. I found out afterward that she'd had a divorce already, so probably she thought I asked the question on purpose to plague her.) But nobody would answer me—really answer me sensibly, so I'd know what it meant; and most everybody said, "Run away, child," or "You shouldn't talk about such things," or, "Wait, my dear, till you're older"; and all that.

Oh, how I hate such talk when I really want to know something! How do they expect us to get our education if they won't answer our questions?

I don't know which made me angrier—I mean angrier. (I'm speaking of two things, so I must, I suppose, I hate grammar!) To have them talk like that—not answer me, you know—or to have them do as Mr. Jones, the storekeeper, did, and the men there with him.

It was one day when I was in there buying some white thread for Nurse Sarah, and it was a little while after I had asked the doctor if a divorce was a disease. Somebody had said something that made me think you could buy divorces, and I had suddenly determined to ask Mr. Jones if he had them for sale. (Of course all this sounds very silly to me now, for I know that a divorce is very simple and very common. It's just like a marriage certificate, only it unmarries you instead of marrying you; but I didn't know it then. And if I'm going to tell this story I've got to tell it just as it happened, of course.)

Well, I asked Mr. Jones if you could buy divorces, and if he had them for sale; and you ought to have heard those men laugh. There were six of them sitting around the stove behind me.

"Oh, yes, my little maid!" (above all things I abhor to be called a little maid!) one of them cried. "You can buy them if you've got money enough; but I don't reckon our friend Jones here has got them for sale."

Then they all laughed again, and winked at each other. (That's another disgusting thing—winks when you ask a perfectly civil question! But what can you do? Stand it, that's all. There's such a lot of things we poor women have to stand!) Then they quieted down and looked very sober—the kind of sober you know is faced with laughs in the back—and began to tell me what a divorce really was. I can't remember them all, but I can remember some of them. Of course I understand now that these men were trying to be smart, and were talking for each other, not for me. And I knew it then—a little. We know a lot more things sometimes than folks think we do. Well, as near as I can remember it was like this:

"A divorce is a knife that cuts a knot that hadn't ought to ever been tied," said one.

"A divorce is a jump in the dark," said another.

"No, it ain't. It's a jump from the frying pan into the fire," piped up Mr. Jones.

"A divorce is the comedy of the rich and the tragedy of the poor," said a little man who wore glasses.

"Divorce is a nice smushy poutlike that may help but won't heal," cut in a new voice.

"Divorce is a gulchpost marked, 'Hi—i to Heaven,' but lots of folks miss the way, just the same, I notice," spoke up somebody with a chuckle.

Well, I Asked Mr. Jones If You Could Buy Divorces, and If He Had Them for Sale.

"Divorce is a coward's retreat from the battle of life." Captain Harris said this. He spoke slow and decided. Captain Harris is old and rich, and not married. He's the hotel's star boarder, and what he says, goes, 'most always. But it didn't this time. I can remember just how old Mr. Carlton snapped out the next.

"Speak from your own experience. Tom Harris, an' I'm thinkin' you ain't fit ter judge. I tell you divorce is what three-fourths of the husbands an' wives in the world wish was waitin' for 'em at home this very night. But it ain't there." I knew, of course, he was thinking of his wife. She's some cross, I guess, and has two warts on her nose.

There was more, quite a lot more, said. But I've forgotten the rest. Besides, they weren't talking to me then, anyway. So I picked up my thread and slipped out of the store, glad to escape. But, as I said before, I didn't find many like them.

Of course I know now—what divorce is, I mean. And it's all settled. They granted us some kind of a decree or degree, and we're going to Boston next Monday.

It's been awful, though—this last year. First we had to go to that horrid place out west, and stay ages and ages. And I hated it. Mother did, too. I know she did. I went to school, and there were quite a lot of girls my age, and some boys; but I didn't care much for them. I couldn't even have the fun of surprising them with the divorce we were going to have. I found they were going to have one, too—every last one of them. And when everybody has a divorce, you know there's no particular fun in having it yourself. Besides, they were very unkind and disagreeable, and bragged a lot about their divorces. They said mine was tame, and had no sort of snap to it, when they found Mother didn't have a lover waiting in the next town, or Father hadn't run off with his stenographer, or nobody had shot anybody, or anything.

That made me mad, and I let them see it, good and plain. I told them our divorce was perfectly all right and genteel and respectable; that Nurse Sarah said it was. Ours was going to be incompatibility, for one thing, which meant that you got on each other's nerves, and just naturally didn't care for each other any more. But they only laughed, and said even more disagreeable things, so that I didn't want to go to school any longer, and I told Mother so, and the reason, too, of course.

But, dear me, I wished right off that I hadn't. I supposed she was going to be superb and haughty and disdainful, and say things that would put those girls where they belonged. But, my stars! How could I know that she was going to burst into such a storm of sobs and clasp me to her bosom, and get my face all wet and cry out: "Oh, my baby, my baby—to think I have subjected you to this, my baby, my baby!"

And I couldn't say a thing to comfort her, or make her stop, even when I told her over and over again that I wasn't a baby. I was almost a young lady; and I wasn't being subjected to anything bad. I liked it—only I didn't like to have those girls brag so, when our divorce was way ahead of theirs, anyway.

But she only cried more and more, and held me tighter and tighter, rocking back and forth in her chair. She took me out of school, though, and had a lady come to teach me all by myself, so I didn't have to hear those girls brag any more, anyway. That was better. But she wasn't any happier herself. I could see that.

There were lots of other ladies there—beautiful ladies—only she didn't seem to like them any better than I did the girls. I wondered if maybe they bragged, too, and I asked her; but she only began to cry again, and morn, "What have I done, what have I done?"—and I had to try all over again to comfort her. But I couldn't.

She got so she just stayed in her room lots and lots. I tried to make her put on her pretty clothes, and do as the other ladies did, and go out and walk and sit on the big piazzas, and dance, and eat at the pretty little tables. She did, some, when we first came, and took me, and I just loved it. They were such beautiful ladies, with their bright eyes, and their red cheeks and jolly ways; and their dresses were so perfectly lovely, all silks and satins and sparkly spangles, and diamonds and rubies and emeralds, and silk stockings, and little bits of gold and silver slippers.

And once I saw two of them smoking. They had the cutest little cigarettes (Mother said they were) in gold holders, and I knew then that I was seeing life—real life; not the stupid kind you get back in a country town like Andersonville. And I said so to Mother; and I was going to ask her if Boston was like that. But I didn't get the chance. She jumped up so quick I thought something had hurt her, and cried, "Good Heavens, Baby!" (How I hate to be called "Baby"!) Then she just threw some money on to the table to pay the bill and hurried me away.

It was after that that she began to stay in her room so much, and not take me anywhere except for walks at the other end of the town where it was all quiet and stupid, and no music or lights or anything. And though I teased and teased to go back to the pretty, jolly places, she wouldn't ever take me; not once.

Then by and by, one day we met a little black-haired woman with white cheeks and very big sad eyes. They weren't any spangly dresses and gold slippers about her. I can tell you! She was crying on a bench in the park, and Mother told me to stay back and watch the swans while she went up and spoke to her. (Why do old folks always make us watch swans or read books or look into store windows or run and play all the time? Don't they suppose we understand perfectly well what it means—that they're going to say something they don't want us to hear?) Well, Mother and the lady on the bench talked and talked ever so long, and then Mother called me up, and the lady cried a little over me, and said, "Now, perhaps, if I'd had a little girl like that—" Then she stopped and cried some more.

We saw this lady real often after that. She was nice and pretty and sweet, and I liked her; but she was always awfully sad, and I don't believe it was half so good for Mother to be with her as it would have been for her to be with those jolly, laughing ladies that were always having such good times. But I couldn't make Mother see it that way at all. There are times when it seems as if Mother just couldn't see things the way I do. Honestly, it seems sometimes almost as if she was the cross-current and contradiction instead of me. It does.

Well, as I said before, I didn't like it very well out there, and I don't believe Mother did, either. But it's all over now, and we're back home packing up to go to Boston.

"Do old folks honestly think they are fooling us all the time, I wonder?"

MORGAN HORSE IS HONORED

Booklet Issued Telling of Remarkable Sturdiness of Castor, Owned by Government.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

The Morgan Horse Club of America has honored Castor, an 800-pound registered Morgan horse bred and owned by the United States Department of Agriculture, by issuing a booklet telling of his remarkable sturdiness and endurance. Castor was one of the few horses to finish the United States mounted service endurance test held last October. The horses traveled from Camp Alfred, Va., N. J., to Washington, D. C.

During the test Castor carried 245 pounds, nearly one-third of his weight, without developing any leg trouble.

Castor, Registered Morgan Horse.

His loss of only 12½ pounds during the three-day test was a remarkable part of his performance, especially considering the fact that he was by far the smallest horse in the contest. The booklet published by the Morgan Horse Club is entitled "Morgan Horse Wins Laurels in Mounted Service Endurance Test, 1921." The author is H. H. Reese, animal husbandman in charge of the United States Morgan horse farm, Middlebury, Vt.

ERADICATE MITES AND LICE

Two Principal Kinds of External Parasites Are Injurious to All Classes of Hogs.

Lice and mange mites are the two principal kinds of external parasites affecting hogs, say experts of the United States Department of Agriculture. They are injurious to all classes of hogs, but the greatest losses occur in pigs and poorly nourished hogs kept in unsanitary quarters.

The losses are caused by irritation, unthrifty condition, functional disturbances, arrested growth, low vitality, and increased death rate.

Only one species of lice commonly affects hogs, and this parasite obtains its food by puncturing the skin of the hog and sucking blood. It can be eradicated by hand application, spraying, medicated hog wallows, and dipping. Dipping is the best method of applying treatment. Crude petroleum and tar creosote dips are effective remedies.

Two species of mange mites commonly affect hogs. The nature and habits of these mites, the symptoms caused by each species, and the methods of control and eradication are discussed in Farmers' Bulletin 1085, Hog Lice and Mange, Methods of Control and Eradication, issued by the department, and sent free on request. Crude petroleum and lime sulphur dips are effective remedies for common or sarcoptic mange of hogs.

Plans for hog wallows and dipping plants, together with directions for building them and for dipping hogs, are given in the bulletin.

FEED BROOD SOWS PROTEINS

When Pasture is Not Available Alfalfa Hay, Wheat Shorts or Tankage, Are Essential.

Brood sows should have feed that is rich in proteins, such as alfalfa hay, wheat shorts or tankage, when pasture is not available. The greatest development of the unborn pig takes place during the last 60 days of the gestation period, hence the importance of feeding brood sows from now until farrowing time.

FEED BROOD SOW LIBERALLY

Animal Should Be Provided With Clean, Comfortable Quarters—Watch for Parasites.

Feed the suckling sow liberally; provide her with clean, comfortable quarters, and get her and the pigs on pasture as soon as possible. Watch the pigs carefully for signs of disease or parasites. A little attention now to insure a good start for the litter will result in many additional pounds of pork next fall.

Corn Best for Fattening. No other food equals corn in the fattening of pigs, and some farmers feed too much corn. Alfalfa or clover hay may be fed with from.

Pig Yard Free From Mud. Care should be taken to provide a pig yard as free from mud as possible.

Building Up Sows. Sows that in flesh should have their feed gradually increased so as to be in good condition before farrowing.

DAIRY FACTS

FEEDING COWS ON ROUGHAGE

Interesting Test Made With Mature Holstein Cow on Government Farm in Montana.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

What will a dairy cow do in the way of milk and butterfat production when fed on roughage exclusively? Perhaps the consensus of opinion is that she will not do very well, but the United States Department of Agriculture has some figures that show what a few cows did that were fed on alfalfa hay and corn silage, without grain.

A mature Holstein cow was pastured on irrigated, tame grass at the department farm at Huntley, Mont. During the winter months she received nothing but corn silage and alfalfa hay. She was under test and was milked three times a day. For 140.5 days and 98 nights she was on pasture. During the rest of the year she consumed 9,914 pounds of alfalfa hay and 8,985 pounds of corn silage, a rather large amount of bulky feed. While this ration was fed the cow maintained her weight at practically what it was at the beginning of the test, and produced 14,210 pounds of milk and 470.24 pounds of butterfat.

For the 12 months following the next freshening this same cow was milked three times a day and given, in addition to roughage, all the grain she would eat. The surprising fact is that she ate 7,056 pounds of grain and practically the same amount of roughage as before. The actual quantities of roughage were 10,063 pounds of alfalfa hay, 8,325 pounds of silage and 4,290 pounds of beets. She was on pasture 130 days and no nights. The milk production for the year was 25,494.4 pounds, and butterfat 823.11 pounds, and the gain in weight 200 pounds.

But notice the difference in the nutrients required to produce the product the first year and the second year, when 75 per cent more butterfat was produced. The first year, over and above maintenance and in addition to pasture, the cow consumed for each 100 pounds of butterfat 156.37 pounds of digestible protein and 558.69 pounds of total digestible nutrients, and for each 1,000 pounds of milk yielded she used 51.7 pounds of digestible protein and 184.8 pounds of total digestible nutrients.

The second year, when she received all the grain she would eat, she received above maintenance and in addition to pasture, in the production of 100 pounds of butterfat, 218.7 pounds of digestible protein and 1074.4 pounds of total digestible nutrients; and in the production of 1,000 pounds of milk she used 70.43 pounds of digestible protein and 345.9 pounds of total digestible nutrients.

From a nutrition standpoint the cow made a more economical use of the roughage ration than of the roughage plus heavy grain ration. No attempt was made to compare the relative economy of the two, systems of feeding on a dollars-and-cents basis, as the relation between prices of roughage, grain, milk, and butterfat, which vary by localities and seasons, would be a large factor in determining this question.

There are now several cows on this farm that have records made on roughage alone. One made 477 pounds of butterfat in 350 days, and promises to have a record of 490 pounds at the end of her year, which will be within 45 pounds of the record made the year before when grain was fed. Another cow in the herd made 345 pounds of butterfat in 245 days without grain; and still another 195 pounds in 120 days. It is now planned to try some of them on moderate grain rations to make comparisons of the amounts of nutrients required to make butterfat and milk under all conditions.

Later and more complete figures on additional cows will show the effect on production of three plans of nutrition—no grain ration, light grain ration, and heavy grain ration. The relative prices of milk, butterfat, and feed will then determine the method of feeding most profitable for a given section.

Benefits of Limestone. Place a shallow box of ground limestone where the cows will have to walk through it when entering the barn. This will clean their feet, keep them from slipping, and add to the value of the manure.

Increasing Milk Production. In working for an increased milk production the cow has to be taken into consideration as well as the feed. Some cows are not capable of good production no matter how well they are fed.

MRS. HATFIELD SABINA, OHIO

In Pitiable Condition when she Began Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Sabina, Ohio.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness and irregularity. I was weak and nervous and could hardly stand on my feet long enough to cook a meal. I was this way for about a year and had tried several medicines and had a physician, but to no avail. My sister was taking your medicine and finally induced me to try it. I now feel fine and can do my housework without any trouble at all. You can use this letter for the sake of others if you wish."—Mrs. WELDON G. HATFIELD, R. R. 3, Sabina, Ohio.

Housewives make a great mistake in allowing themselves to become so weak and nervous that it is well-nigh impossible for them to attend to their necessary household duties. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound should be taken when you first notice such symptoms as nervousness, backache, weakness and irregularity. It will help you and prevent more serious trouble. Give it a fair trial. It surely helped Mrs. Hatfield, just as it has many, many other women.

PRETTY BUNGALOW OF WESTERN TYPE

ARTISTIC AND COMFORTABLE

Compactness of the Arrangement of This Home Makes It Popular for Small Family—Reduces Work to Minimum.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

"All the rooms on one floor."
That has been and will continue to be one of the powerful appeals of the bungalow which had its inception on the Pacific coast. There are no stairs to climb up and come down. And in this age of efficiency, this arrangement has influence. It means more time for the housewife to devote to outside activities, it means less using up of energy.

Originally the bungalow was a frail sort of structure designed for real warm climes, a more or less artificial and ornamental shelter without any of the substantial comforts or sentimental features of the true home. But the idea spread with such astounding reception halls. The living room, we find, is a large "comfy" room, 19 feet 6 inches by 13 feet provided with an emergency wall bed in case the capacity of the two other sleeping rooms is taxed to the limit. Two small wall bookcases have been built in on each side of the fireplace.

An informal casing connects living room with dining room, which is a bright room, 13 by 13 feet. It has a built-in sideboard or buffet and gets light from a double window on the side. A door from the dining room opens into a small hall which leads to the two bedrooms, 11 by 13 feet each. Both of these bedrooms are beautifully situated with regard to light and ventilation, each of them has windows on two sides permitting cross drafts during the night. A bathroom also opens off this hall. Each bedroom has ample clothes closet space.

A door in the rear of the dining room opens into a delightful small kitchen less than 10 feet square, equipped with range, sink and built-in cupboards and shelves. Off to one side is a small pantry with built-in work table, shelving and outdoor ice refrigerator. The outer door of this icebox opens out to the rear porch where the ice man can deliver the ice without entering the house. This is an important convenience for every household providing both protection and cleanliness. Stairs to the cellar originate in the rear entry.

A house of this size does not require a complicated heating plant, in many cases the fireplace being sufficient. In a cold climate, however, a pipeless furnace will be found quite economical and satisfactory. If a heating plant is not needed only part of the cellar is excavated.

The house is 35 feet wide and 42 feet long.

This design can be successfully executed in brick, stucco over frame or

PLAN TO SELECT GARMENTS THAT ARE MOST SUITABLE FOR WOMEN

Figure on left is garbed in simple blouse and skirt. These may be adapted to any figure and with slight changes in sleeve, collar and fullness of skirt are always in good style. The design in the middle is for a tall, slender woman; the costume is divided into three distinct parts to lessen the apparent height, and horizontal tucks are used to suggest width. The design on the right is for the stout woman; the long straight lines suggest height and the surplice front and curve of the side panel tend to decrease the apparent breadth of the figure.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Women's clothing requires more careful thought than that for men and children. The intermediate type of figure is not difficult to clothe attractively, but the more extreme types, the slender and the stout, need careful attention. Once a woman has decided on the type of design which suits her best, she should choose clothing which in general lines is always the same. Monotony can be avoided by using different materials and trimmings. Such garments may usually be kept in good style by slight changes in sleeves, collar and fullness of the skirt.

For very tall, slight people, designs should be chosen that suggest roundness and normal height. Soft, full blouses, full skirts, and draped effects are good; if the height seems too great, horizontal lines brought into the costume by means of flounces, bands and tucks will tend to reduce it. Plaids and figured materials with large areas of design are admissible on a slight, tall figure; also soft, deep-pile stuffs for coats, and bright, shimmering, lustrous materials are good.

Design for Stout Figure.

For the stout figure, designs could be chosen that suggest height and slenderness. Loose, easy-fitting garments with straight, unbroken lines suggest height. Lines that carry the eye to the center of the figure will diminish its breadth. No lines should carry directly across the figure, for they seem to lessen the height and increase the breadth of the figure. Separate waists and skirts, unless the waist is so adjusted as to fall over the skirt, will tend to broaden the figure and diminish the height. A surplice line for the opening of the waist is good; narrow row girdles draped loosely about the figure, crossed in the back and brought to the front again with one end looped over the other, suggest height.

The stout woman should choose soft, nonlustrous materials, such as crepe de chine, crepe georgette, serge, gabardine, voile and batiste. Plaids and large-figured materials are out of the question and stripes should be cautiously chosen. Colors should be avoided that make the lines of the figure stand out prominently, clothing experts in the United States Department of Agriculture affirm in a recent bulletin on selection and care of clothing. Taupe, gray and dark blue are usually best in this respect, but all dull, dark colors are safer than light or bright ones.

Suit Colors to Wearer.

Colors should be carefully chosen not only in relation to the figure but in reference to the complexion, color of the hair and eyes of the wearer as well. There is no general rule by which one can choose becoming colors. Therefore, one must rely on one's own taste, judgment and experience. In general, women with fresh, clear complexions find a greater range of becoming colors than others who have little color, but patient experimentation will discover those which are becoming to either type. It is safe to choose such colors as are in harmony with the color of the eyes, hair and complexion.

Dark blue is a universally becoming color. Taupe, dark blue, black and gray in which violet predominates are good colors to be used by the woman who is stout. Bright aggressive colors make the stout figure seem larger.

Bright gay colors may be chosen for the young, slight girlish figure, but always with a thought to the general coloring.

BREAKFAST CEREALS ARE EASILY COOKED

Old-Fashioned Methods Are Now Less Common.

Cornmeal Mush is One of Dishes Early New England Settlers Copied From Indian Neighbors—Pop Corn is Relished.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

In early times there were many ways of preparing grains and meal, such as frumenty and the good King Arthur's famous "bag pudding." The partly cooked and ready-to-eat cereals have become so popular in recent years that the old-fashioned methods of cooking grains are now less common. The ingenious housekeeper can, however, vary her breakfast cereals by the use of simple meals or grains, say food specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture.

One of the dishes which the early New England settlers probably copied from their Indian neighbors is the homely corn-meal mush, or hasty pudding. This is made of boiling, ordinary cornmeal in milk or water. If properly cooked, it is a nutritious and economical dish and has the advantage—dear to the thrifty housewife—that the left-over portion will be relished if cut in slices and fried.

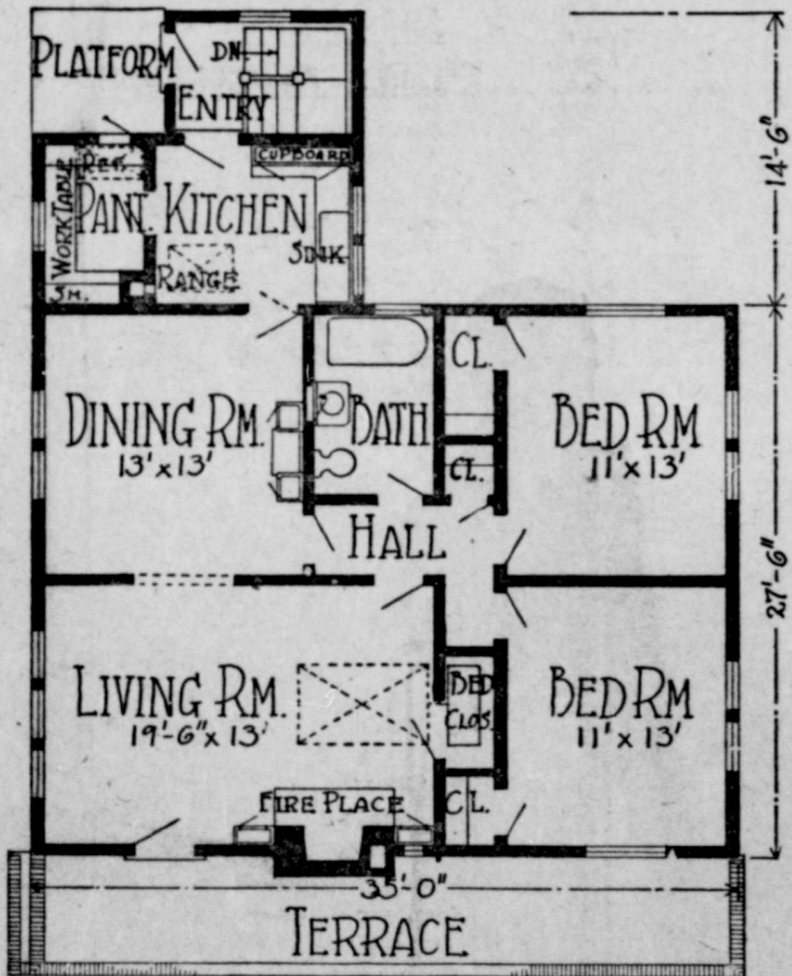

Another popular way of using certain varieties of corn is as pop corn. This cannot be strictly termed a breakfast food, but it is frequently eaten with milk, like other cereal preparations.

USING STALE BREAD

There need be no waste of stale bread. For bread that is not allowed to become moldy may be used in a variety of ways, discarding only the brown crusts and these are sometimes dried, crushed and used in grid-dle cakes. Small bits of leftover bread, slices that have become too dry for use as toast, croissants and such like, should be dried in the warming oven, covered with a piece of cheesecloth to protect them from dust, then passed through a meat chopper and sifted. The fine crumbs are used for crumbling croquettes, cutlets, etc., and the coarse crumbs for the top of an gratin dishes. Such crumbs should be stored in glass jars and they will keep a long time if placed in a cool dry place.

Household Questions

- Soapsuds is an excellent tonic for rose bushes.
- Polish the leather traveling bag with linseed oil.
- Clothesline will not stretch if it is boiled before using.
- No kitchen is complete without a clock on some shelf.
- The colder the weather the heartier food a man needs.
- Nut meats added to pumpkin custard increase its "toothsomeness."
- Bread boards should be scrubbed with silver sand and warm water, well rinsed and dried in the sun.
- Mix a little butter with macaroni after it has been boiled and drained to keep it from sticking together.

Floor Plan.

ing rapidly, that very soon the bungalow was built stronger and came to resemble more the home and less the whim. Bungalows are now built of brick and frame, equipped with heating plants for the cold climates, and always open fireplaces. In the warm climates a gas heater is often added to take off the chill of cool evenings.

But without doubt the attraction of the bungalow lies in its adaptability to variety in design. Each one is different and a whole street of bungalows can be free from any taint of monotony. The design offers the owner individuality which is the goal which most of us seek. And it is cozy, indefinitely and undeniably so.

Coziness springs from compactness and arrangement. A glance at the photograph shown here will serve to give that impression. This building is small with an artistically treated exterior of frame on concrete foundation—the walls do not have to be solid, footings being used in many sections. A wide chimney provides the draft for an equally wide fireplace in the living room. This chimney is covered with stucco.

In place of the usual porch, this dwelling has a terrace extending across the front paved with brick on end. A glass-paneled door opens the way into the living room, no space being wasted on preliminary vestibules or stucco over metal lath. The cost will depend upon the location, prices varying in different parts of the country. But regardless of the materials used, the design will always be one that will please not only the owner but the casual passer-by.

Harbingers.

Two old friends happened to meet in a street car and fell to discussing the weather.

"I'm never sure that spring is here," said one, "until I see the birds building their nests."

"That used to be a good sign when we were boys," replied the other, "but now we have better ways of telling. I'm more convinced when I see middle-aged men put in their appearance with bundles of golf clubs slung over their shoulders."

We Trow Not.

"I see Boston now has a press agent."

"No circus methods will be used in advertising that erudite city, I hope."

Lincoln's Climatic Paint

There's nothing that adds more to the value and appearance of that home than a nice coat of paint. There is no paint that will give you a better or more lasting coat than Lincoln's Climatic. It has been tested for each climate, and only paint suited to the individual climate will be sold there. There is a wider difference in paint than in any other commodity. You can buy cheaper paints than Lincoln's Climatic, but when it comes to amount of surface covered and the lasting qualities, it can't be excelled. Let us give you an estimate on your paint bill.
