"SPUDDED IN"

The spudding in of the "Sam Moore No 1" in the south part of Hedley has created much excitement(?) especially among the boys. Mr. Moore is driller, and is ably assisted by Merlin Crouch and J. H. Bennett.

It is hoped that the bit will soon be lost in an "ecean of oil," with the liquid gold freely flowing Our former disappointments would thus vanish, and Hedley would become one of the most noted oil fields of Texas.

"HOW TO GET THE LAST TICK"

Much Valuable Experience Accumulated by Scientists Given in Recent Circular,

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

As the territory infested by the cat-He tick gradually contracts under the pressure of eradication work, the difsculties in the way of further reduction of the area increase. In the 15 years since the campaign was started to starve and poison the tick out of existence, counties and states have been freed of the insect at a rapid rate but there are knotty spots in the remaining ticky territory, and progress toward the goal of a tick-free country will be slower than in the past.

However, those who are now engaged in cleaning up infested country have the advantage of much valuable experience accumulated by scientists, veterinarians and local authorities, while more than 500,000 square miles were being made tickless. These fundamental facts, a knowledge of which is essential to those taking the lead in eradication, particularly the inspectors, have been gathered into a circular, "How to Get the Last Tick," by W. M. MacKellar, one of the inspectors for the United States Department of Agriculture who has had years of experience in various infested

CHANGE PIG PASTURE OFTEN

Healthy Animals Become Infested With Internal Worms From Feed, Water and Soil

The main trouble which hog raisers have in raising pigs seems to be that when a trouble, such as worms, gets started in the lot- they let it spread too rapidly over the entire herd. Healthy pigs become infested with inworms from feed, water and soil which has become infested by other pigs having the same trouble.

The logical thing, then, is to see that pigs have a frequent change of pasture. This is not so big a problem where they are given plenty of range. There are other desirable points in having a range of pasture for the growing pigs, although they can be raised successfully, and are so raised. in close quarters if these are kept clean. Dividing up a pasture and letting the pigs run a while in each part will keep the pigs healthy and give the pasture a chance to come back when not in use.

SUPERIOR CORN FOR SILAGE

Some Growers Can Use to Good Advantage Larger Variety-Choice Should Be Limited.

"Generally the same variety of corn grown for grain production will prove satisfactory for silage also," says Prof. A. C. Arny of the division of farm crops and farm management, Univer sity of Minnesota. "However, since it is not necessary that corn for good silage should mature beyond the be ginning of the dent stage before cutting. some growers, particularly those in the northern part of the state, can use to advantage a somewhat larger corn for this purpose. The choice should be limited to varieties which will produce ears that reach the beginning dent stage before killing frosts."

Washington,-Of interest in connection with many reports of destructive forest fires in several parts of the country is a circular of the biological survey of the United States Depart ment of Agriculture stressing the effect of such fires on game and game preservation. A fire which rages over any large area destroys not only the birds and other game, themselves, but their food and shelter, and though one takes little interest in forest-fire prevention for the sake of preserving trees, he may be more interested in saving the game and fish.

Ed Rents a Baby for 50 Cents

By FRANK H. WILLIAMS

Just inside the door to the day nursery Ed Carmichael gingerly placed the squalling baby he was carrying on a nearby chair. Then he looked around guiltily and mopped his per-

What a crazy undertaking it was he had embarked on! And all for the sake of becoming acquainted with the piquantly pretty young lady standing at the receiving counter just behind the little placard announcing her name to be "Alice Trennam."

What would this young lady say if she knew Ed had rented the infant for the day for fifty cents? What would she think of a young man who was so backward with women as to be forced to the adoption of such a unique plan as this for meeting a young lady?

Ed, having mopped his brow, went forward to the desk. The girl, who on nearer view seemed prettier than ever, greeted him with a friendly emile.

"What is the baby's name and age?" she queried.

Ed gulped. For a moment he felt panic-stricken. Then he remembered hearing the baby's big brother, from whom he had rented the child, call it "Benny."

"Benjamin," gasped Ed. "Ageabout ten months," he hazarded. "We require all parents to sign the cards," said Miss Trennam, smiling up at him in an impersonal sort of way. "Please sign here." She indicated a dotted line on the card Ed felt his knees giving way. Here was a complication he hadn't looked for. She thought him to be the baby's father! It was too late to retreat now. Weakly he signed his name.

"And the baby's mother is-" queried Miss Trennam. "Dead!" ejaculated Ed, turning and bastily stalking from the place. Outside the nursery Ed stood for a moment. Whew! It had been an ordeal. But he'd met her! And now he was more convinced than ever that she was the only girl in the world for

If only he could meet her and talk with her every day.

Why-here a thought came to him -he might rent the infant every day from the youth who had it in charge, and in this way see and talk to the beautiful Miss Trennam,

But it took some dickering with the infant's diminutive guardian to put the deal over.

"What you want with Benny?"

asked the guardian suspiciously. "I like children. I haven't any of my own. That's why I want to rent Benny," Ed explained, hoping that any white lies involved in this explanation would not be held against him.

"I don't know," said the guardian dublously. "Maw was gone the other day-all day. I don't know what she'd say. Mebbe-"

"Then you'll be here in the morning?" demanded Ed eagerly.

"Y-y-e-s," hesitated the guardian. The next day when Ed presented Benny at the receiving counter of the nursery Miss Trennam was quite friendly indeed, "Does he sleep well at night?" she asked.

"Yes, perfectly," said Ed. "What a good child!" the girl cried. It seemed to Ed hat she gazed at him rather curiously despite his prompt

The next morning found Ed at the usual place at the usual hour.

But where was the guardian? Where was Benny?"

Ed stewed and fumed. What was the cause of the delay? Wouldn't the child ever bring the baby? The baby was absolutely necessary now to further his courtship of the fair Miss Trennam. He simply must have Benny -simply must.

When Ed, tremendously upset, was contemplating the wreck of his dreams, the guardian breathlessly turned the corner. "Here," cried the youth, pushing the infant into Ed's waiting arms. "I had to do some errands. Gimme the cents. I gotta hurry."

Ed did as directed. He was in a hurry himself.

Was it because Ed was upset that his morning's talk with Miss Trennam was so unsatisfactory? And was the premonition of evil which hovered over him during the day due to the same reason? That sight when Ed went to the ursery to recover Benny and restore him to his brother, a new young lady was in charge of the counter

"Where is Miss Trennam?" queried "Miss Trennam is not on duty the afternoon," was the reply. And it seemed to Ed that there was an altogether uncalled-for coldness and aloofness in her voice and manner. He wondered desperately what was the matter with Miss Trennam and with the nursery as he gave the tightly bundled infant to the guardian. On the next morning the youthful guardian of Benny was late, even later than before. But at last the boy ar-

"Here," the youth cried, placing the baby in Ed's arms. "Oh, gee!" Ed's thoughts were abstracted and unhappy as he entered the nursery. And his mood was not helped when he liscovered Miss Trennam again missing and a colder, more aloof atm there than ever noticeable in the Abstractedly he waited for her to go through the usual formalities. He saw the usual card filled out and then saw the girl start to unwrap the tightly wrapped child. Ed lingered, minded to ask about Miss Trennam. Then he was startled to hear the girl at the counter utter a little shriek. "Alice, come here quick!" cried the

From an adjoining room Miss Trennam hurried forth. Ed quailed as he saw her shoot a single hostile glance

"Look at this baby!" cried the girl at the counter, "See what this-this person just brought in!" In fascination Ed saw Miss Trennam go to the counter and pick up the infant, As Miss Trennam raised the infant in her arms Ed collapsed weakly intoa nearby chair. "Impossible!" cried Miss Trennam, gazing at him with blazing eyes. Really, under the circumstances, Ed couldn't blame her for her outburst, The infant Miss Trennam was holding in her arms was a dusky brown. "Why-why-" gasped Ed weakly.

Miss Treanam glared at him. "It was bad enough when you brought in an Italian baby yesterday!" Miss Trennam exclaimed. "But now-a black one!'

"Let me explain," Ed began weakly. "Explain-nothing!" eried Miss Trennam. She turned and began loftily walking from the room. At this moment there was a commotion at the door of the nursery. The youth from whom Benny had rented the babies came rushing in and hurled himself at Ed. "Oh, mister," he panted. "I got to take little George Washington Jones back! I borrowed him for the day without his mother knowing and sheshe-well, I gotta get him back quick, that's all !' Ed saw Miss Trennam stop and turn interestedly at this commotion. At this moment Ed saw his big chance and seized it. He caught the youth in his arms. "Did you borrow that Italian child yesterday?" Ed asked.

"No, I rented him, for 25 cents," the boy explained. "But his mother wouldn't let me have him today. And my aunt took Benny away, and-

"And so you borrowed this colored child for me?" suggested Ed. "Yes," said the boy. "Gimme him quick. "And you did all that just to meet me?" said Miss Trennam some weeks

"Yes, are you sorry?" demanded Ed, boldly. "No," said Miss Trennam, frankly.

And Ed kissed her.

MYTH OF "DRAGON'S TEETH"

Army of Warriors That Literally Sprang to Arms and Aided in Founding City.

Some strange things are contained . in the myths. One of them is the Greek story of the sowing of the dragon's teeth.

At the bidding of the oracle of Apollo, Cadmus set out with a party of retainers to found the city of Thebes. The sacred serpent of Mars captured the retainers, killed them and itself was killed by Cadmus.

A voice instructed Cadmus to remove the monster's teeth and sow them in a field. As he completed this task, points of spears broke through the clods, then helmets, then armorclad bodies of men, until finally a host of warriors stood in the field. "Meddle not with our civil war," said one of the warriors as Cadmus advanced to meet what he thought was a new array of enemies. Thereupon the warriors began to fight among themselves, until 'all except five were killed. These five joined Cadmus and helped him to build Thebes.

Regular Red Leg.

A red-legged partridge-"A common bird in France and Italy," according to the account, but a rare arrival in England-has been sent to the London zoological gardens. The visitor was seen and caught by a workman in a London suburb. It seems a mercy that human tourists are not treated in the same way-how awkward if a tweedlegged arrival in Italy were immediately seized and detained for life? However, the incident does suggest a definite advance; at any rate, the redlegged partridge was not promptly shot and stuffed. In the zoo it will at least be safe from the man whose one idea is to welcome any strange bird visitor with a gun.-Christian Science Monitor.

Charge of the Scots Greys. In the memorable charge at Waterloo of the Scots Greys, in which General Ponsonby was killed (and which so forcibly struck Napoleon that he said to Lacoste, the Belgian guide, who stood by his side, "Ces terribles chevaux gris! comme ils travaillent!") Sergt, Charles Ewart of the regiment captured, after a most desperate struggle, the eagle of the French Fortyfifth regiment, on which were inscribed the words, "Jena, Austeriltz, Wagram, Evlau, Friedland," In comme tion of this event the badge of the "eagle" was conferred on the Scots Greys, and Sergeant Ewart was promoted to an ensigncy in the Third veteran battallon.

It Consists of Screen Cylinder With Frame Made of Barrel Hoops-Total Cost of Material If Bought' Should Be About $1.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) A fly trap, which appears from extensive tests made by the United States Department of Agriculture to be best for effective trapping, durability, ease of construction and repair, and cheapness, may be made as fol-

It consists essentially of a screen cylinder with a frame made of barrel hoops, in the bottom of which is inserted a screen cone. The height of the cylinder is 24 inches, the diameter 18 inches, and the cone is 22 inches high, and 18 inches in diameter at the base. The material necessary for this trap consists of four new or secondhand wooden barrel hoops, one barrel head, four laths, 10 feet of strips one to one and one-half inches wide by

In constructing the trap two of the hoops are bent in a circle (18 inches in diameter on the inside, and nailed together, the ends being trimmed to give a close fit. These form the bottom of the frame (A), and the other two, prepared in a similar way, the top (B). The top (C) of the trap is made of an ordinary barrel head with the bevel edge sawed off sufficiently to cause the head to fit closely in the hoops and allow secure nailing. Housekeeper Is at Loss to Know How to Please Everybody.

Salad Is Indefinably Better for Having Bit of Garlic Rubbed Around Bowl-Bay Leaf Gives Touch to Many Soups.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) When some members of a family are strongly prejudiced against such flavors as onion, curry, bay leaf, garlic or celery, while others deplore the lack of these flavors in cookery, the housekeeper is at a loss to know how to suit everybody. As a rule, however, the most skillful cooks are those who know how to use just a suggestion of flavoring where it adds greatly to the effect of a dish but almost defies detection. Thus a salad is indefinably better for having a bit of garlic rubbed around the bowl in which the dressing is mfxed; an oxtail soup is improved by a thin half slice of lemon added to each portion at serving time; veal cutlet is tastier if a few drops of lemon, onion juice and Worcestershire sauce are sprinkled over the meat before it is cooked; white sauce for creamed chicken is just "different" for having a saltspoonful (or even one-quarter of that amount) of curry powder added, ing to do with curried chicken. To use onion flavor so that it will not be objectionable to those who dislike to meet a chunk of onion in any dish, the United States Department of Agriculture suggests squeezing the juice out with a lemon squeezer. To flavor a milk soup or sauce with onion or celery a few pieces of either may be cooked with the milk a few minutes and then removed before the soup is completed. Bay leaf judiciously used gives a touch to many soups, gravies, and jellied stocks which is pleasing if sufficiently masked. The secret of clever flavoring is to add unusual ingredients delicately and not obtruing Pests That Have Gained Access to House. Sticky fly papers are of some value in destroying flies that have gained access to houses, but they have marked limitations and numerous objectionable features. For use out of doors traps are much more effective and economical.

The following method of preparing fly paper is given in Farmers' Bulletin 734 recently reissued by the United States Department of Agriculture:

"Take two pounds of rosin and one pint of castor oil, heat together until it looks like molasses. Take an ordinary paint brush and smear while hot on any kind of paper-an old newspaper is good-and place several about the room. A dozen of these may be made at a cost of one cent."

QUALITY OF CREAM TO WHIP

Material Should Contain at Least 30 Per Cent of Butter Fat and Kept Very Cold.

It should contain at least 30 per cent butter fat to produce , end of saving the temper of the milkideal results, and be kept very cold Pasteurization tends to lower the whipping quality of the cream, and homogenization is very harmful to it. USE MORE REGISTERED SIRES

Notable Progress Is Reported in Move ment to Replace Scrub Bulls With Purebreds.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) There is every reason to believe that the replacement of scrub and grade sires by purebreds is on the facrease. Reports received by the United States Department of Agriculture from county agents in various parts of the country show that the "Better Sires-Better Stock" movement is having a noticeable effect. A recent statement by M. G. Lewis, county agent of Rockbridge county, Va., is typical of a large number.

"The purebred bull movement." says Mr. Lewis, "Is progressing rapidly. Since January 1, 16 farmers have disposed of grade or scrub bulls and are using registered bulls instead. On the other hand, there are no less than 50 men in the county who still persist in holding out against the progress and development of the live stock interests of the county by keeping inferior grade or scrub bulls. I have a list of 56 owners of such bulls. Some of these men have grades that are fairly good individuals, while others have scrubs that are the worst kind of a disgrace to the community and to the county.

"The cost of a good registered bull is so small now that it is a mystery why any farmer will keep anything else. Many records have been kept during the last few years to prove out the actual value of a purebred bull in dollars and cents."

Some of these actual figures were obtained recently by the Department of Agriculture through an inquiry sent out to more than 500 farmers throughout the United States. These men gave it as their opinion that in all kinds of farm stock purebreds have an earning power more than 40 per cent better than common stock. It is noteworthy that in the case of dairy cattle, whose productive power can be easily measured, purebreds were considered to be 47.8 per cent better than common cows. The lowest percentage given for any kind of stock was 36.8

FLIES DECREASE MILK YIELD

Spraying Furnishes Means of Reliev ing Cow For the Time and Saves Temper of Milker.

The irritation of cows caused by flies not only lessens the milk produced, but, due to the restlessness of the cows, is a frequent cause of inefficient milking.

The fly spray furnishes a means of relieving the cow for a time at least ers. The following fly repellant mixture is recommended:

Four and one-half quarts of coal tar dip, 41/2 quarts of fish oil, 3 quarts of whale oil, 11/2 quarts of oil of tar and 1/2 ounce of oil of pennyroyal. Dissolve 3 pounds of laundry soap in water, add the ingredients of the spray and bring the whole up to 30 gallons

This quantity will spray 40 cows twice a day for 10 days. The spray should be applied in the morning after milking and in the afternoon when the cows are in the barn for silage or green feed.

PURE PLANTING SEED

A. D. Mebane Solves Above Problem

MEBANE is to Cotton Seed what Sterling is to Silverware, a guarantee of quality. However, of late years the Cotton Seed Buyer has been swindled in the purchase of Planting Seed from some unscrupulous dealers, who have represented they had pure Mebane Seed, when the Seed they were selling was in many cases not Melbane Seed at all, and if Mebane, so many years from the Original Seed that the alities which make Mebane THE BEST had run out.

Mr. A. D. Mebane, knowing full well the wishes of the farmer, and realizing that it was not only a reflection on the quality of his Seed-which has stood the test for over twenty yearsbut also having the interests of his fellow farmers at heart, in seeing that they should get his PEDIGREED PLANTING COTTON SEED, when they so desired, conceived of a plan by which he could supply the great demand and protect the Buyer.

Mr. Mebara has had his trademark registe i. IT IS THE NAME MEBANE IN GREEN LETTERS WITHIN A BRIGHT RED CIRCLE, which will be upon every sack, and upon the back of the sack, OVER HIS SIGNATURE, will be the trademark with his words of caution, that only "THE ORIGINAL AND GENUINE MEBANE PEDIGREED PLANTING SEED BEARS THIS TRADEMARK."

In order that Mr. Mebane can devote his entire time to the culture of his Seed upon a large scale, it was necessary that a sales agency be organized for the proper distribution of his Seed; hence the A. D. MEBANE SALES AGENCY, which agency will distribute only Pedigreed Mebane Planting Seed, in Trademarked Sacks.

If you want the BEST BY TEST—for when better planting seeds are grown, A. D. Mebane will grow them—write us for prices, which we shall be pleased to quote and also send descriptive literature.

It was written on the top sheet of a still thick pad of paper, and my fingers fairly tingled suddenly, to go on and cover those unused white sheets-tell what hap pened next-tell the rest of the story not for the sake of the story-but for my sake. So I brought the manuscript down to my own room, and this evening I have commenced to write. I can't finish it tonight, of course. But I have tomorrow, and still tomorrow. (I have so many tomorrows now! And what do they all amount to?) And so I just keep writing, as I have time, til

I bring it to the end. I'm serry that it must be so sad and so ry an end. But there's no other way, of course. There can be but one ending, as I can see. I'm sorry. Mother'll be sorry, too. Of course, if Jerry and I hadn't-But this is no way to begin. Like the little Mary Marie of long ago I am in danger of starting my dinner with ice-cream instead of soup! And so I must begin where I left off, of course. And that was at the wedding.

I remember that wedding as if it were yesterday. I can see now, with Mary Marie's manuscript before me, why it made so great an impression upon me. It was a very quiet wedding, of course-just the members of the family present. But I shall never forget the fine, sweet loveliness of Mother's face, nor the splendid strength and tenderness of Father's. And the way he drew her into his arms and kissed her, after it was all overwell, I remember distinctly that even Aunt Hattie choked up and had to turn her back to wine her eyes.

They went away at once, first to New York for a day or two, then to Andersonville, to prepare for the real wedding trip to the other side of the world. I stayed in Boston at school.

In the spring, when Father and Mother returned, and we all went back to Andersonville, there followed a long period of just happy girlhood, and I suspect I was too satisfied and happy to think of writing. After all, I've no-ticed it's when we're sad or troubled over something that we have that tingling to cover perfectly good white paper with "confessions" and "storles of my life." As witness right now what

I had fust passed my sixteenth birthday when we all came back to live in Andersonville For the first few months I suspect that just the glory and the wonder and joy of living in the old home, with Father and Mother happy together, was enough to fill all my thoughts. Then, as school began in the fall, I came down to normal living again, and became a girl—just a growing girl in her teens.

How patient Mother was, and Fath-

I wonder why? Certainly it came to me. True to type I cried by the hour over fancled slights from my schoolmates, and brooded days at a time because Father or Mother "didn't understand." I questioned everything in the earth hereath and the heavens above; and in my dark despair over an averted glance from my most intimate friend, I meditated on whether life was, or ns ot, worth the living, with a pre-

He talked with me not to me about the hirds and the trees and the sunsets. and then about the deeper things of life, until before I realized it, I was sane and sensible once more, serene and bappy in the simple faith of my childhood.

I was seventeen, if I remember rightly, when I became worried, not over my heavenly estate now, but my earthly one. I must have a career, of course. No namby-pamby everyday living of dishes and dusting and meals and bables for me. It was all very well, of course, for some people, Such things had to be. But for me-

I could write, of course, but I was not sure but that I preferred the stage. At the same time there was within me a deep stirring as of a call to go out and enlighten the world, especially that portion of it in darkest Africa or deadliest India. I would be a mission-

Before I was eighteen, however, I had abandoned all this. Father put his foot down hard on the missionary project, and Mother put hers down on the stage idea.

So I wrote stories-but I did not get any of them printed in spite of my earnest efforts. In time, therefore, that idea, also, was abandoned; and with it. regretfully, the idea of enlightening the world at all.

Besides, I had just then (again if I remember rightfully) fallen in love. Not that it was the first time. Oh, no, not at eighteen, when at thirteen I had begun confidently and happily to look for it! What a sentimental little piece I was! How could they have been so patient with me-Father,

It was Paul Mayhew-yes, the same Paul Mayhew that had defied his mother and sister and walked home with me one night and invited me to go for an automobile ride, only to be sent sharply about his business by my stern, inexorable Aunt Jane, Paul was in the senior class now, and the handsomest, most admired boy in school. He didn't care for girls. That is, he said he didn't. He bore himself with a supreme indifference that was maddening, and that took (apparently) no notice of the fact that every girl in school was a willing slave to the mere nodding of his head or the beckoning of his hand.

This was the condition of things when I entered school that fall, and perhaps for a week thereafter. Then one day, very suddenly, and without apparent reason, he awoke to the fact of my existence. Candy, flowers, books —some one of these he brought to me every morning. All during the school day he was my devoted gallant, dancing attendance every possible minute outside of session hours, and walking home with me in the afternoon proudly carrying my books. Did I say "home with me"? That is not strictly true—he always stopped just one block short of "home"—one block short of my gate. He evidently had not forgotten Aunt sane, and did not intend to take any feelish risks! So he said good-by to me always at a safe distance. This went on for perhaps a week Then he asked me to attend a school sleigh-ride and supper with him.

I was wild with delight. At the same time I was wild with apprehension. I awoke suddenly to the fact of the existence of Father and Mother, and that their permission must be gained. And I had my doubts—I had very grave doubts. Yet it seemed to me at that moment that I just had to go on that sleigh-ride. That it was the only thing in the whole wide world worth while. I can remember now, as if it were yesterday, the way I debated in my mind as to whether I should ask Father, Mother, or both together; and if I should let it be seen how greatly I desired to go, and how much it meant to me; or if I should just mention it as in passing, and take their permission practically for granted.

I choose the latter course, and I tool going to do. Some way, he had never seemed like that at school. And I was afraid Mother wouldn't like that. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

WANT WHAT YOU NEED

PHILOSOPHERS tell us we can have anything we want, provided we want it enough.

With certain qualifications this is true. It explains why many men get things out of life that their friends never expected to get. They wanted them, and they got them.

Getting things in that way fo. most people involves considerable sacrifice. For example, if a dry goods clerk wants an automobile he may get it, but he will have to skimp pretty beavily on his clothes and d'et if he gets while he still remains a dry goods

It is for this reason that when you begin wanting something, it will pay you to want what you need.

That will involve thought, or none of us know what we need until we levote considerable time to reflection

There are men who want new wives when they have perfectly good wives at home. They don't need them, and therefore ought not to want them.

There are other men who went wealth, when they don't need wealth. Still other men want steam yachts when row boats would do them more good, and private swimming pools when they would get more fun and

They may get these things, but they will be no better off when the

The wanting habit can grow into very bad habit, indeed, unless you are careful to want what you need. It is well to remember in this connection that there are some very important needs that you ought to want first of all.

One of them is a good reputation, Another is good health. A third is Want these badly enough to get

The custom of throwing confetti was introduced into France several centuries ago, and was especially popular at the fetes of Mi-Careme (Mid-Lent) and Mardi-Gras (Shrove Tuesday). But the French, possibly because they took their pleasure less seriously than the Italians, substituted bits of gaily colored paper for the hard pebbles or candles, and when the custom was introduced into the United States by the French settlers of Louisiana and other sections, confetti was understood to mean

The amount of confetti used in Paris is apparent from an account of one of the Mardi-Gras celebrations, when it was estimated by one of the local newspapers that pounds were sold during the three days preceding Ash Wednesday. At an average price of twenty cents a pound, some $300,000 was spent upon this form of amusement alone.

word was originally applied to the small hard bon-bons formerly thrown during the carnival days in Rome, Naples and other cities in the southern section of Europe. These candies are known as coriandeli, and the term "confetti" is applied to the cheaper and more popular substitutes-hard pellets about the size of a halfstone which are carried in bags by the masked revellers and thrown from tin

Children Cry For

Special Care of Baby.

That Baby should have a bed of its own all are agreed. Yet it is more reasonable for an infant to sleep with grown-ups than to use a man's medicine in an attempt to regulate the delicate organism of that same infant. Either practice is to be shunned. Neither would be tolerated by specialists in children's diseases.

Your Physician will tell you that Baby's medicine must be prepared with even greater care than Baby's food.

A Baby's stomach when in good health is too often disarranged by improper food. Could you for a moment, then, think of giving to your ailing child anything but a medicine especially prepared for Infants and Children? Don't be deceived.

Make a mental note of this:- It is important, Mothers, that you should remember that to function well, the digestive organs of your Baby must receive special care. No Baby is so abnormal that the desired results may be had from the use of medicines primarily prepared for grown-ups.
