MRS. MARTHA HEATH

Born in Benton county, Ark., Nov. 21, 1848; died at Perrin, Jack county, Texas, March 5, 1923.

Through the period of time marked by the dates above, Martha Ford Heath lived her long and useful life. Was married to R. M. Heath Nov. 5, 1867; came to Texas in 1866, settled in Grayson county, later living in Jack and Donley counties.

Sister Heath was the mother of thirteen children, nine girls and four boys, ten of which survive her. There are fifty six grand children, and fourteen great grandchildren. Since the death of her husband, twenty six years ago, she has lived with her children. It was during the time she was making her home with Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Acord, in Hedley, that the writer came to know her.

For nearly half a century the good woman has been a devout Christian, loyal to the Savior in her personal devotion and loyal to the cause He came to establish. All through the long life she cheerfully accepted the heavy responsibilities that came to her in the raising of a large family. The strength and beauty of her life was radiant at the evening tide. Happy and hopeful always, she was the dispenser of sunshine. Remarkably strong for one of her age, she was constant in her attendance upon the various meetings of her church, and always carried with her an assurance of faith that made easy many difficult problems.

The last work she ever did was to make a scarf for the pulpit stand in her church. When she had finished it, she went immediately to her bed for the last time in this life.

We look back over these long years of toil and hardships, fierce struggles and glorious triumphs, and lift our hearts in humble gratitude to the Father for the gift of such lives as hers, in which heavy responsibilities with all their hardships were looked upon and welcomed as opportunities for service, and where sacrifices were considered a joy.

May the quiet calm of the divine peace, which was hers, in the evening of life be the priceless heritage of her own loved ones. "And at evening time there shall be light" Zech 14:7

ADAMSON-LANE POST PASSES RESOLUTIONS

It has become necessary for the Adamson Lane Post of the American Legion to pass the following resolutions in regard to our Club Rooms, and hereafter all members will be governed by these rules, which were adopted by the entire membership:

Whereas, the aim of the Adamson Lane Post of the American Legion is to be a co worker of all Posts, to assist in all National problems, and in any problems that may rise up in the community, thereby making the Post an asset to the community;

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. This club room will be open to visitors on Friday of each week, from 1 p. m. to 12 p. m., only.

2. Each member of this Post will be limited to one visitor on each set aside date.

3. Be it hereby resolved and affirmed that no minors be allowed in the said club rooms at any time.

4. Further be it resolved that on special occasions the Executive Committee shall pass upon and decide on anything pertaining to visitors.

5. Be it resolved that all Ex-SERVICE Men eligible for membership in the American Legion are welcome to the use of the club room and all amusements therein.

6. Be it resolved that members refrain from issuing general invitations other than to his accompanying guest.

7. Further be it resolved that a copy of these resolutions be published in our city paper, and also placed on our bulletin board and in our club room.

WOMAN SO ILL COULD NOT STAND

Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Made Her Well and Strong

Glens Falls, N. Y.—"For over two months I was so sick I was not able to stand on my feet, and my husband did my housework. The doctor said an operation might be necessary. I read testimonial letters about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and began to take it. Before I had finished taking the first bottle I saw what good it was doing me. I am now well and strong, doing all my work for a family of four, all my washing and my sewing, which I think is remarkable, as I had not dared to run my sewing machine, but had done all my sewing by hand. I truly feel that were it not for your medicine I would not be here today as my case seemed very serious."—Mrs. GEORGE W. BURCHELL, Glens Falls, N. Y.

Pretty Things that are made at Home

RIBBON novelties may come and go, but the ribbon shopping bag goes on forever. It goes on being made of the new enticing ribbons that reflect the mode, and it goes on wearing out, to be replaced by a new one. It is a bit of elegance—and sometimes a bit of magnificence—that appeals to the love of finery and luxury that is born right in us, and it is something which most women can make for themselves.

These attractive bags, shown in the picture, do not appear to require more than the average knowledge of sewing, to make them. One of them is a combination of brocade ribbon with a plain satin ribbon, having a narrower ribbon, in a contrasting color, stitched to it. The lengths of ribbon are machine stitched together, the raw edges of the seam turned under and sewed down. A narrow hem along one edge forms a casing for ribbon hangers and the other edge is drawn up to form the bottom of the bag. Two very handsome silk tassels decorate it.

A plain heavy satin ribbon makes the pretty tailored bag at the center of the group, which depends on a narrow pin-striped ribbon and neat tucks for its embellishment. This pin-striped ribbon will not keep us from anticipating it by the purchase of a hat for Easter, which falls this year on the first day of April.

Nothing more beautiful or desirable in millinery will follow these first displays and it is good business to make an early selection while materials are at their best; for sometimes manufacturers undertake to cheapen them as they grow in popularity. It is a season of many fabric hats—as may be gathered from the models that make up the group pictured here. These are either all fabric or fabric and braids combined. They are a cheerful company in which color and lustrous surfaces combine to make brilliant millinery. There are two all-black hats among them, but all-black in gleaming materials that cannot be somber.

One of these appears at the top of the group in which taffeta is laid over a braid body, and decorated with braid stitched over it. Two loops of handsome moire ribbon fall over the brim. The little poke shape at the right is made of taffeta also, in blue and tan, changeable weave, with silk flowers repeating these colors.

A lovely wide brimmed hat, at the

is doubled lengthwise to form the handles. A celluloid mounting is used for this model, which is lined with soft satin. It is pretty in brown with tortoise shell mount. The remaining bag, of black moire, is lined with changeable taffeta and has a strap that fastens with a snap fastener. The hangers are of heavy black grosgrain ribbon.

Along with the appearance in the North of the joyously welcomed pussy willow, comes the survey of accepted styles in spring millinery by the women who are to wear it. Many of these styles are the survivors of that buoyant fashion promenade that is passing in review in the southern resorts where their record of success for yesterday presages a further triumph for tomorrow. The weather man may do all he can to discourage the belief that spring is anywhere near, but that left, is of tassel braid—its crown covered with figured silk in many strong, rich colors, repeated in the border of narrow ribbons that edge the underbrim. A large cluster of grapes, that take up these colors and repeat them in other tones, serves for trimming. Another interpretation of the poke shape is shown made of novelty cloth in bright red with applique in black lacquered foliage finished with black ribbon and ends. Finally a smart little draped shape of a lustrous fabric supports two long ostrich quills.

Three-Piece Costumes.
Three-piece costumes of marlen and velveteen have straight-line frocks with tops of brocaded crepe de chine. They have round necklines and practically no trimming.

Fox Fur.
Pearl gray gowns, with capes to match, are trimmed with wide bands of gray fox. The entirely white costume is frequently embellished with white fox.

PE-RU-NA

For Coughs, Colds and Catarrh

Mr. E. W. Marshall, Erempton, Michigan, suffering from Systemic Catarrh involving Head, Nose, Throat and Stomach, claims a complete cure. His letter is convincing: "For the past two years I have been troubled with systemic catarrh. I used several boxes of Pe-ru-na tablets and they have effected a complete cure. I do not hesitate to recommend Pe-ru-na for all catarrhal conditions."

Mr. Marshall is just one of many thousands who have been benefited by Dr. Hartman's famous medicine in the past fifty years. It is by stimulating the digestion, enriching the blood and toning up the nerves that Pe-ru-na is able to exert such a soothing, healing influence upon the mucous membranes which line the body. It is a wonderfully effective remedy to restore strength after a protracted sickness, the grip or Spanish influenza.

SENIOR NOTES

The Seniors did not get in their news in time last week. Our reporter has been sick for some time and her business has not been quite properly looked after. Hurry back, Reporter.

The new month has started and many smiles are in evidence. But say! Did you hear that April 1st tells the tale?

Last Thursday the weather man sent a "ripping good spell" — wind and sand, don't you know. But the puzzling thing is, how did that north wind bring in an inspector from the south? Just the same, we experienced both shocks. It never rains but it pours.

James had been cutting up in English class. Miss Trapp, distracted, took him to the hall to punish him. She said, "I imagine after you have taken this whipping you'll promise to be good." James replied "Wouldn't it be more convenient for both of us if I promise to be good now?"

Puzzle: How do the Senior girls get their mouths into such a position as to spit on their "spit" curls?

Can anyone tell us who it was came near ruining our "rep" Thursday afternoon when Miss Miles was leaving?

The new piano purchased for the school by the Parent Teacher Association has been placed in the auditorium. We simply could not do without it.

JUNIOR JOBS

Gertrude Noel is absent from school this week on account of sickness. We wish her a speedy recovery.

Miss Trapp, in English class: "Bernice, have you seen Hugh today?"

Bernice: "No ma'am, I haven't saw him."

Miss Trapp: "You shouldn't say haven't saw; say haven't seen."

Bernice: "I never could speak correct English properly."

One day Jessie Lee heard a crowd talking about some vases that were dug up in an ancient city. Not having heard the first of the conversation, she exclaimed: "What? Dug up? Out of the ground?"

"Yes" was the reply.

"Just as they are now?" she asked, her curiosity increasing.

"Oh, they have been cleaned up a bit but they were found about as you now find them."

"Well," said Jessie Lee, shaking her head, "you may say what you like, but I don't for one minute believe that they ever dug ready made vases out of the ground."

Just think! Wouldn't you like to go around the world? Keep on thinking about it, and maybe some day 'fore you know it rates will be low enough for you to go.

We were all delighted to have Miss McNeely visit us Friday afternoon in chapel. She gave three readings which were certainly enjoyed. One of them taught us the beauty of gum chewing; another taught us how to describe any dog. Here's hoping Miss McNeely will come to see us again.

SOPH SPECIALS

Alton Quisenberry was absent a few days last week.

Faye Cuwell was absent last week.

Malard Moore and Ray Moreman are back in school after a few days absence.

Why did Ila take Myrtella's throw-stuff?

Bill: Saw, Burke, if zero is freezing point, what is sq ezing point?"

Burke: "Don't know; what?"

Bill: "Two in the shade."

Leonard: Miss Trapp, how old are you?

Miss Trapp: Why, I have seen twenty one summers.

Leonard: Poor lady, was you blind twenty?

Ila, Jewell and Stella Mae were cross Tuesday, and when asked why, they said: "O, I just washed my head and can't do anything with it."

Miss Trapp: I want to see the girls who are in the Operetta after school.

Leon: What?

Miss Trapp: It doesn't make any difference.

Ansi: Oh I know; Alma told me.

The Sophs liked Miss McNeely's appearance while chewing gum. She said she thought it helped one's looks. Miss Trapp sent an order to Brooks Pharmacy for a hundred cartons of chewing gum. We hope this is a rush order.

FRESH "KNUZ"

The "fish" seemed to be cast on an isle when they came to school Monday after the awful storm and found their room covered with sand. Because of the industry of the class the room was soon cleaned and we were comfortable once more.

Ruby Mosley spent the week end in Clarendon.

We are glad to welcome R. A. Shaw and Weldon Bennett back to school after a siege of the chicken pox.

Christine Spurlin, Mollie Clifton, Pauline Stewart and Clifton Miller were on the "missing" list Monday.

Hazel Boone was taken to Amarillo Sunday for an operation, but it was found that the operation was not necessary. We hope she will soon be in the ranks again.

Mai McFarling spent the week end in Memphis.

The Misses Spier, of Bray, visited Lillie Mae Steel in school Monday.

The Freshies were given a test on Algebra Tuesday. We are waiting anxiously for the result.

PREP PARAGRAPHS

WE WISH WE HAD

If we don't stop talking
When the teacher says so—
We wish we had!

If we speak without Permission to do so—
We wish we had!

If we don't write our themes,
(We have so many, it seems—
We wish we had!

If we don't write our Rhythmic
Problems on the board—
We wish we had!

If someone asks us for candy,
(Specially when it's nice and dandy),
And we don't, and the teacher
Finally gets it all—
We usually wish we had!

If we aren't good, but very bad—
We always, always wish we had!

LIFE IN THE SCHOOLROOM

Oh, they give us a test
'Most every day,
But we do our best
In every way.

If we laugh, cut up, talk or chew gum,
Our teacher looks so awfully glum;
And if we're not good, but very bad,
Why, after a talking we always get sad.

When the teachers are gone
We always joke,
But if they catch us eating
Why, we nearly choke.

But, oh! sometimes
We have lots of fun,
Especially when our teachers are good,
And then—they are liked by everyone.

One of our jolly Preps has been absent a few days because of an injury. We have missed Theopal very much, and hope she will soon be back with us.

In agriculture class Frances Kendal asked innocently: "Mr. Weaver, is the careless weed called 'keerless,' and does it have stickers on it?"

Day by day in every way
We're getting kinder and kinder,
Although the teacher can not say
We never try to mind her.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

WORDS OF CHEER

IF YOU cannot give frequent, encouraging words of cheer to your home-mates and to those with whom you come in contact during your working hours, it would be better to bridge your tongue and seal your lips.

A rough word roughly spoken, produces nothing but evil and drives many a sensitive soul to despair. It arouses animosity and hate, quite the opposite of a kindly word which awakens slumbering emotions and kindles a beneficent flame of love.

It may at times, especially when you are not in a pleasant humor, cost a great effort to launch the cheerful word, but if you will brush aside your own turbulent feelings, and send forth the cheer and sunshine of which you are capable of doing, you, too, to your amazement, will participate in their delicious sweets and enjoy the thrill of an unanticipated pleasure.

From the first moment when you begin to practice the scattering of cheering words, the whole atmosphere around you changes.

The world somehow seems drawn closer to heaven, and everything and everybody about you appears brighter and happier.

In reality, there is no change except in yourself. You have soon happiness and are reaping happiness.

You have flung broadcast the sanctified blessings and they are returning to you from every point of the compass, filling your soul with a joy unspeakable.

It is you who are nearer heaven, participating in its delights without knowing it, growing more lovable as the years speed by, dim your eye and whiten your hair.

Old friends turn to you in their sorrow for comfort.

The boys and girls go out of their way to meet and greet you.

Even the derelicts have in some manner heard your praises sung and respect you.

Their bleary eyes brighten and their tough old hearts soften when your name is spoken, in spite of their general belief that they are invulnerable to the gentle touches of kindness.

The greatest workers for the uplifting of humanity are the little words of cheer, which, when fitly spoken, often change beasts to men, spur them to loftier endeavor and turn their terrible night into a glorious day.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because —

By ETHEL R. PEYSER

You like good music? You have a reputation for liking good music; you don't like substitutes. You get more enjoyment and fodder out of an evening at a symphony concert than out of "jazz." You know that a dance tune out of Beethoven, Mozart or Brahms not only makes you over if you are tired but gives you your money's worth for a month. Why should you care if they laugh? You have liked good "jazz," maybe, that is written with artistry and melody yet on the whole you like what is called "good music." Rejoice over it. You taste of the stuff that gods are made of and you are the luckiest of mortals, for god food is rare today.

SO

Your get-away is here: Ask your friends, "What music lives longer and why, 'Dardanelle' or 'Aida'?" and "Why do the most lionly popular tunes die in a few minutes?" 'Nuf said.

Uncommon Sense

RESULTS COUNT

AN ATHLETE desiring to prove to Epictetus that he was growing strong showed him his dumb-bells. "I don't want to see the dumb-bells," said the philosopher. "I want to see your muscles."

It is results, not methods, that count with a man.

Many wealthy men have libraries stocked with the world's best literature, yet remain illiterate.

Abraham Lincoln had a Bible and a copy of Shakespeare, and was an educated man.

The world wants to know what you are, not how you became what you are.

Scores of young engineers proudly exhibit degrees from technical schools without being able to secure responsible positions.

But any young engineer who can show a capitalist a cheaper and better way to accomplish something important, can get a paying job.

Your training is your own affair. The affair of your prospective employer is the equipment for the job that your training has given you.

The "talent" before a prize fight do not care what sort of apparatus a contender is using. They place their bets on opinions formed from the way he is hitting in practice.

You must decide for yourself what profession you will follow, and take the advice of others as to the best way to train for it.

But do that training in private, and don't brag about it afterward.

The man you will have to work for will not ask you how many hours you spent on Latin and Greek, mathematics or psychology. He will ask you what you can do.

Show him what you can do, and if you can do it well, you have a chance. If you can't do it well, all your training, all your diplomas, all your letters of recommendation, will be worth absolutely nothing to you.

THE STAR

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THERE is a star that hangs upon the east That shines a little clearer than the rest, Each night diminished not, nor get increased— A changeless jewel on the azure breast Of eventide. Each twilight it returns And with celestial tenderness it burns.

The struggle had been hard the whole day through; All day the sky had glittered with the sun; And then came night, and then came deeper blue, The winds were still, songs hushed, the day was done— And then the star, my perfect star, came out And ended disappointment, ended doubt.

The struggle had been hard the whole day long. The rivalry of competition, all The ceaseless battle of the right and wrong; I saw bad men arise and good men fall And marvelled much that things are as they are— And then came night, and then again the star.

I do not know her name, that lovely light. Astronomers may call her what they will. To me the world's a-sky, and life is night; But there's a star, one star unchanging still That shines for all, for age, for eager youth. One star undimmed—and I have named her Truth.

Mother's Cook Book

Let us be better men! Whether with pick or pen, The labor we do is a work worth while If our hearts are clean and our spirits smile. And out of the ruck and rust and stain We make some growth and we mark some gain. —Author Unknown.

FEEDING THE FAMILY

THIS is the daily task of twenty million housewives in America—to provide a good meal for the family. As 90 per cent of our housewives must use economy, it is vital that they know how to spend the money provided them, for the best food. Our grocers tell us it is not the wealthy housewives, as a rule, who buy food, fruit, vegetables and luxuries out of season, but those who can least afford it. It is often a lack of knowledge of food values, and carelessness and indifference in regard to expenditures.

It should be the aim, and is, with a large majority of housekeepers, rich or poor, to feed the family well, with as little waste as possible and with as small a money outlay. Food is the big item in the weekly budget of the growing family and there is no one who can do more than suggest as to the wise spending of the income, for each family has its own problems which must be worked out in the same manner that a mother manages her children—no two need the same training or discipline.

Growing boys and men at active labor need substantial, filling meals. The boys need as much as grown men, for they are building their bodies as well as burning up food in their activities.

Men who are in offices, or occupied in positions where the brain is active and the body has little exercise, need much less of the energy-producing food. Their food should be of such combinations as are easily digested, though of course it should be nourishing as well. Pork and beans, ham and fried eggs, corn beef and cabbage are foods which the laborer or outdoor worker may eat freely, as such food is necessary.

Put as much interest into the planning of meals and the serving of them as is put into a game of bridge or a "movie" picture and we will have made a start toward the millennium.

THE ROMANCE OF WORDS

"CRYSTAL"

THE strange and erroneous notion current among the natural philosophers of antiquity—and of modern times down to a comparatively recent date—concerning the origin of crystal, was plainly traceable to the confusion occasioned by the object itself.

According to these teachers of a former day, crystal was ice which had undergone a peculiar process of induration so as to totally lose its power of being melted. In fact, Pliny, supporting one error with another, states that crystal is found only in countries which are extremely cold. Up to some two hundred years ago this idea about the formation of the substance still persisted, for Sir Thomas Browne considers it worth while to place it first and foremost among the "Vulgar Errors" which he sought to dissipate.

Though the mistake is more amusing than dangerous, it is easy to see how it arose, for the Greek word chrysallos, or ice, was early transferred to that quartz which closely resembles ice. In a little time it was tacitly assumed that the two substances were the same—a belief which persisted for many years. (© by the Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

DAIRY POINTS
KEEP YOUNG HEIFER GROWING

Winter Rations for Animal Important if Profitable Milk Producer is Expected.

The dairy heifer, since she is for the present unproductive, is likely to be neglected after the pasture season is ended. To keep the young stock growing normally during the winter months the department of dairy husbandry of the Missouri College of Agriculture suggests the following rations:
If silage and clover or alfalfa hay are available, feed from two to five pounds of corn or other farm-grown grains available, depending upon the age of the animals. Heifers close to calving time can profitably be fed somewhat larger quantities of grain.
If silage is available but no clover or alfalfa hay, a good ration would consist of silage and fodder or mixed hay with a grain mixture consisting of equal parts of corn and linseed meal. Cottonseed meal or gluten feed may be fed in place of linseed meal.
Where clover or alfalfa hay is fed alone dairy heifers will do fairly well

WOMEN NEED SWAMP-ROOT
Thousands of women have kidney and bladder trouble and never suspect it. Women's complaints often prove to be nothing else but kidney trouble, or the result of kidney or bladder disease. If the kidneys are not in a healthy condition, they may cause the other organs to become diseased.
Pain in the back, headache, loss of ambition, nervousness, are often times symptoms of kidney trouble.
Don't delay starting treatment. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a physician's prescription, obtained at any drug store, may be just the remedy needed to overcome such conditions.
Get a medium or large size bottle immediately from any drug store.
However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

ICE WATER FOR DAIRY COWS

Animals Dislike It as Much as Human Beings in Winter, Says Kansas Dairyman.
Although people drink large quantities of ice water in summer, they do not like it in cold weather. But the only ice water that dairy cows get is in winter, and they like it then as little as do human beings, according to C. R. Gearhart, extension dairyman of the Kansas State Agricultural college.
Cows producing milk require large quantities of water. They will diminish their milk flow rather than drink cold water so often furnished them.
Water which is stored in tanks in winter should be warmed with a tank heater, says Mr. Gearhart. These are made to burn coal, wood, or corn cobs. When only one or two cows are to be watered, a teakettle of boiling water will take the chill off of the half barrel of water necessary for them.

GRADING OF CREAM IS URGED

Surest Means of Producing Good Butter, Says Dairy Specialist at University Farm.
Pointing out that cream grading is the surest means of producing good butter, A. J. McGuire, dairy specialist with the university agricultural extension service, adds that Eastern markets are scoring butter closer than ever before. "There is real competition," he says, "for the best markets, and if co-operative creameries are to hold such markets they must make good butter and see that it is sold as such. A cream-cooling tank on every farm makes cream grading easier, both for creamery men and for patrons. Are you urging cream cooling and cleanliness of cream separators? This should precede cream grading."

METHOD FOR FEEDING COWS

Dusty Hays or Feeds That Are Liable to Taint Milk Should Be Given After Milking.
Hays that are dusty or feeds that are liable to taint milk should be fed after the cow is milked. A fine method for feeding is to feed hay three times a day and silage and grain twice. If grain is fed only once the cow is liable to have digestive troubles and this will affect the milk flow.

Only Safe Bull.

The safe bull is the one that is never given an opportunity to be otherwise, and that is not permitted to run at large in the pasture with the cows.

Feed and Care of Cows.

Regularity in feeding and caring for dairy cows and keeping them comfortable are quite as important as good feeding.

Expensive Substitutes.

Stock tonics are expensive substitutes for good feeding and care.

"I was so weak and run down and had lost so much weight and strength I just felt broken down all the time. I got up mornings awfully nervous, with no appetite, feeling like I hadn't slept a wink, and while on the job my nerves were so unstrung that the noise in the factory just tortured me. IMPRESSING HIS BEST GIRL

Plumber Felt He Had a Right to Be Proud of His Important Family Connections.
He was quite evidently a plumber, and as he sat with his "best girl" back of the Woman upon the bus he explained that he had been working a little harder lately—the cold weather made them work harder in those buildings which were unheated and in which they were putting the plumbing. It was different in the summer, when the buildings were restfully cool.
And then the bus passed by the big "mansions" on the drive.
The plumber began to boast. Pride is so curious a thing.
"My dad," he said, "had the contract to put in the plumbing in almost every well house in this city. Yep," he continued boastfully, "he's got the finest lot of customers you'd ever find."
And the girl whispered happy and proud admiration of the splendid family into which she was about to marry.—Chicago Journal.

Why Farmers are Turning to

In 1922 Chevrolet jumped from seventh to second place in sales of all cars, and to first place in sales of fully equipped modern cars.
Purchases by farmers were the chief factor in this remarkable development.
Farmers want automobiles not only of low first price, but also of low later cost for operation and maintenance.
They want room, comfort, and the ability to stand up under hard conditions.
They find that Chevrolet, fully equipped as sold, is the best value per dollar in the low-price field, and neighbors tell them it costs less per mile to operate.

Has your mealtime drink said "Pay up!"

A GOOD many people have had that message from coffee or tea after the drug, caffeine, has had its effect upon nerves or digestion.
Frequently the message comes at night, when nerves won't quiet down and sleep won't come, after the dinner cup of coffee.
There's no unfriendly after-notice from that good cereal beverage, Postum.
Postum delights the taste, gives comfort and satisfaction, and is free from any possibility of harm to health.

Try Postum with your meals for a few days and let the whole family, the children included, share in its appetizing, invigorating goodness. It will bring better nights and brighter mornings.
Your grocer sells Postum in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) prepared instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling water. Postum Cereal (in packages) for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being prepared; made by boiling fully twenty minutes.

The Joy of Living

"PARTNER!"

SYNOPSIS.—Disliking the prospect of a month's visit to her austere aunt, Lady Erythea Lamb, at Jervaux abbey, and her cousin, Alexander Lamb, Almee, vivacious daughter of the Very Reverend Vincent Scroope, wanders into the park, there encountering a strange youth. He laughingly introduces himself as "Billy," American. The two ride on his motorcycle, the "Flying Sphinx," and part. With Georgina Berners, her cousin, Almee sets out for Jervaux. She decides that Georgina shall impersonate her at Jervaux, while she goes on a holiday. Georgina's horrified protest is unavailing. Almee again meets "Billy." He tells her his name is Spencer, and she gives her as Amy Snooks, at present "out of a job." Billy gives her a spin on the Sphinx and she finds it a glorious experience.

CHAPTER III—Continued

"Say! Let me find you one! I've a brain-wave!"

"What do you mean?"

"Go shares with me!"

"Shares?" echoed Almee. She was conscious of a curious little thrill. "Share what?"

"See here!" said Billy, eyeing her keenly. "When we were doing fifty-five on the Sphinx, you never wilted—never turned a hair!"

"Of course not. It was gorgeous." He came nearer, intensely earnest. "Know anything about motor engines?"

"I've often taken down the old 'bus at home, on a wet day, and re-assembled it."

"Where was that?"

"At the place where I had a job," said Almee.

"Great!" he cried. "You're the thing I've been looking for all these months. Now, listen to the brain-wave. I'm over here to sell the Sphinx. There's a big deal on in London. But what I want's a quiet spot where I can develop some of the gadgets with no troops around to steal 'em. Get me?"

"Yes, go on," said Almee, catching his enthusiasm.

"I'm heading now for a little town called Stanhoe, thirty miles south of here. Stanhoe's quiet as the tomb. I've struck it before. There's an old mill I believe I can get hold of, and fit up as a garage and workshop."

"Yes, I see!" said Almee eagerly.

"Come on into it with me—come to Stanhoe!" said Billy explosively. "You'll catch on to the Flying Sphinx in a minute, an' then popularize her as a lady's mount! The finest mount for a girl ever put on the market. There isn't one yet. You can do it! You've got the nerve—an' the grit! I'll teach you to tend an' drive her. Will you come?"

"Will a duck swim?" cried Almee.

"Of course I'll come!"

"Fine!—partner!" cried Billy, flinging out a bumpy hand.

Almee took it, and received a shake that bruised her fingers.

"Take your perch, old chap!" said Billy, straddling the Sphinx. "Off for Stanhoe!"

They whirred down the long slope with the westerling sun broad on their right above the fir-trees. It was a roughish ride on the carrier. There was no pillow-seat; Billy was evidently not accustomed to carry passengers.

"Say," said Billy, over his shoulder, "I didn't catch your name, did I?"

"Almee—Snooks," replied the passenger on the spur of the moment, as well as she could for the wind whistling in her teeth.

"Snooks!"

Almee laughed. It was very like Scroope, and quiet as musical.

"Near enough!" she gasped. "But 'old chap' will do. Is that American?"

"American? Gee, no! It's the only English I know. Let it go at that—Amy is too feminine for a partnership. And now we'll let her out. This," said Billy joyously, as he opened the throttle wide, "is what the doctor ordered!"

The Flying Sphinx, freighted with the partners, roared down the hill and devoured the miles to Stanhoe.

On the outskirts of the little market town of Stanhoe was a cyclist's rest-house. Here the two travelers had tea under a laburnum tree on the lawn. Billy locked the amazing motorcycle in a shed, by the proprietor's leave, and the pair walked into the town on foot.

Two more utterly innocent and care free young people never entered an English village on an April day. No lot of doubt, of fear, or hesitation assailed them. Billy, intensely masculine though he was, appeared to be possessed of a virgin mind. Such a thing, though uncommon, is by no means nonexistent among the sons of Adam. It may be that the air of the Colorado foothills favors its growth. His possession of it called for no comment from Almee. Her mind was of the same color.

It did not enter into their heads for a moment that anybody could put a ubiquitous construction on their association with each other. Had such an idea dawned, they might possibly have argued and parted company on the spot. Almee left Billy suddenly and addressed an inquiry to an elderly man who stood beside a farmer's cart. In a moment she rejoined him.

"Mrs. Sunning, 2 Ivy cottage, lets lodgings," announced Almee triumphantly. "You don't mind lodgings, do you? Better than a hotel—more freedom."

"Freedom for mine!" said Billy. "Let's try it!"

Ivy cottage proved to be a pretty little Jacobean building fronting on a green lane just outside Stanhoe. An apple-cheeked woman, who was picking weeds out of the path, announced herself as Mrs. Sunning, and Billy at once stated his needs, offering to pay in advance.

"Why, yes, sir," she said, smiling, with a civil bob to Almee. "I've a nice sitting room and a lull bedroom; Mrs. Dale, next door, has another, if you can do with that?" Mrs. Dale appeared, and confirmed the offer. Both of them looked at the pair with smiling interest and wonder.

"Great!" said Billy. "You take the room here, old chap, and I'll take the other. We'll share the parlor."

Almee accompanied Mrs. Sunning indoors; the little parlor was clean and cozy, the bedroom, upstairs at the back, tiny but clean.

Almee made her toilet, descended to the parlor and ordered a meal. Mrs. Sunning acquiesced in everything.

"He's a wonderful pleasant gentleman, Mr. Spencer," she remarked, and then, hesitating and reddening, she looked at Almee. "I suppose, miss, she said with much embarrassment, 'It's all right?'"

Almee stared.

"All right? How?" she said. "Everything's all right. Very much so!"

The woman's eyes betokened belief and relief.

"Bless your pretty face, who'd think anything else?" she said. "You'll excuse my asking, miss. You see, Lady Erythea is my landlord, and she owns all Stanhoe."

Almee felt a galvanic shock.

"Whom did you say?" she asked dazedly.

"Lady Erythea Lamb of Jervaux abbey, the big place half a mile south the cross roads. She fares wonderful strict, she do. It's as much as my tenancy's worth to have any goings-on here. That's all."

The woman left the room. Almee stared round her blankly, then collapsed into a chair. She flung her arms across the table, buried her head in them, and broke into paroxysms of impish laughter.

"Oh, my Christian aunt!" she sobbed. "My Georgie! My Alexander!"

Her shoulders were still shaking wildly when Billy came in.

"Say, what's wrong?" he exclaimed in alarm, as Almee raised a tear-stained face. "Crying—eh? No, laughing! That's good! That's the cure for sentiment! But what's the joke?"

"Just something I thought of, that's all," said Almee, wiping her eyes.

"That's all right," said Billy impatiently. "Guess I ain't inquisitive. But folks mostly tell me their troubles sooner or later."

"I suppose they do," said Almee, regarding him thoughtfully.

Mrs. Sunning brought an abundant meal; chiefly eggs and tea. Almee found it the merriest feast she had ever sat down to. Finally, she accompanied Billy to Mrs. Dale's door, and, returning, retired to her own room. She was about to let down her hair, but desisted, and instead sat on the bed for some time, thinking. She heard Mrs. Sunning retire, and presently silence reigned throughout the house.

A curious sense of loneliness crept over Almee's spirit. She remained sitting for nearly half an hour. Presently she blew out the candle, and leaned out of the open window. The window of Billy's room at the other end of the building was in darkness. It had not taken Billy long to retire.

Almee stayed awhile at the window. She returned to the bed, and reflected again. In that reverie a vision floated before her as of trees and sunlight, and her partner's yellow hair flickering in the breeze.

"Billy!" she murmured thoughtfully. "Old chap!"

"A very proper letter," said Almee, affixing a stamp to the envelope, with a determined thump. "One should always consider one's parents, and spare them pain. And that postscript is a touch of genius; the only thing in the universe Dad is afraid of is mumps. He hasn't had them, and he says they are a formidable affliction to the aged, and very undignified. And it's quite true; I saw five children at Stanhoe with mumps this afternoon. I should hate to tell a fib. Unless," she added, wrinkling her smooth brow, "it became absolutely necessary."

She moved toward the window. "Almee!" cried Georgina, starting up panic-stricken. "You're not going! Are you serious about this?"

"Not a bit. And don't you be, either," said Almee, as she clicked off the switch of the electric. "See you tomorrow—if I can. Good night, old thing."

The room was plunged in darkness, and there was a scraping sound at the window.

"Almee!" gasped Georgina wildly, fumbling round the wall for the switch. It was some time before she found it, and when she turned it on the room was empty.

"Almee!" cried Georgina, leaning out of the window.

There came a sudden thumping on the bedroom door.

"Almee!" said the stern voice of Lady Erythea. "Why is your light on at this hour? Is anything wrong?"

"No-no—no—no!" said Georgina, choking, "n-nothing much."

"Extinguish your light instantly, and go to sleep!"

With shaking fingers Georgina turned off the switch, and undressed pettishly in the dark. She crept into bed and thought of Alexander—the one touch of untroubled calm on the waters of Jervaux.

CHAPTER V

On the Job.

Morning and the song of birds.

The sunshine streamed into the room, bringing with it the God-given fragrance of an April morning; the scent of rain-sprinkled earth, wall-flowers and greening thorn-hedge. Almee stood and drank it in thankfully, till she realized with a shock that it was past ten.

The only bath available at Ivy cottage was a tub of spring water. Almee made the most of this, and, dressing hurriedly, came downstairs glowing like a picotee. Billy was in the parlor.

"Morning!" he cried.

"Have you been down long?" exclaimed Almee.

"'Bout three hours!" he chuckled. "I've covered sixty miles since then. Just a little breather."

"Why—you haven't waited breakfast for me, have you?" she cried.

"Oh, that's all right. Rang a baker up an' got a roll an' milk at Syderford. Nothing done yet—couldn't breakfast without my partner."

Mrs. Sunning, with bare, dimpled arms and her face wreathed in smiles, brought in the breakfast. There were brown ducks' eggs, cream, water-cresses and a brace of brook trout.

Billy glanced at his companion from time to time, with a quiet watchfulness.

"Sleep all right, old chap?" he asked presently.

"Rather. Didn't wake up till just now," said Almee, taking a large spoonful of comb honey. "Did you?"

Billy paused.

"Middling," he said slowly. "Say, partner, what'd you like to do now? Rest a bit?"

"Rest!" said Almee scornfully. "I want to live, not rest!"

"Ready to get busy on the Sphinx, an' cleave the ether?"

"Yes, right away."

"Good! I'll get her fixed."

Twenty minutes later they met by the shed where the Sphinx was stored. As Billy wheeled the machine out, he looked keenly into Almee's eyes.

"Partner," he asked, "you haven't anything on your mind, have you?"

Almee laughed aloud. Her eyes sparkled.

"Do I look as if I had?"

"No, by the Great Horn Spoon, you don't!" said Billy, eyeing her with a flash of admiration. "You look as if you'd face the world and laugh at everything it handed you—from a bunch of roses to sudden death. You're IT! Come on."

They went out through the little gate. Billy did not offer to mount the Sphinx till they were clear of the lane. When he stopped, Almee observed for the first time that the Sphinx had a brand-new spring pillow-seat clamped to the carrier.

"What's this for?" exclaimed Almee.

"Why, for you, old chap. Easier riding."

"I didn't need it, Billy. The carrier was good enough."

"Nope," said Billy with determination, "not nearly good enough. Carrier! You ain't baggage, are you?"

"Don't know. It's what a lot of people have called me."

"Who?" said Billy indignantly.

"Oh, frumps."

"There's a lot of indiscriminating people about," said her partner abruptly.

The Sphinx started, and Billy threaded lanes at an easy pace. The soft wind of the morning caressed them as they rode. Not that it had any pacifying effect on Almee's spirit. The sense of adventure mounted to her head like wine.

"Here we are!" said Billy, turning onto a long, deserted stretch of high road, running delightfully level and straight. He let the Sphinx out. For eighty seconds the hedges flashed by like long green streamers. At the end of a mile and a half Billy stopped and dismounted.

"Now," he said, "we're not going to talk about how to sell the Sphinx yet awhile; the first thing is to put you wise to her. You've got to know her inside out and backwards—and she's the sweetest thing that ever burned gas. Now, look here!"

Almee kneeled eagerly on the grass, and Billy fluently explained, dismantling the parts as he talked.

For twenty minutes she followed him, testing for herself.

"Why," said Billy with delight, stopping and looking at her, "it's like teaching a duck to swim! You catch on quicker than I can show you—you were born to it!"

"I'm an infant to you," said Almee admiringly. "What a head you've got. It's everything a motor engine ought to be, but never is. Let's take down the cylinder."

They busied themselves dismantling and re-assembling the engine.

"I'll show you how to drive her now," said Billy. "Stationary, till you get the hang of her."

Almee mounted the saddle, while the machine remained on its stand, and Billy showed her how to control the engine running free with the clutch out. She took longer to grasp this. The controls, though simple, were of an unusual type. In ten minutes, however, she mastered them pretty efficiently.

"Fine!" said Billy enthusiastically. "Partner, the Sphinx is your big sister! Now we'll run her on the road—I'll ride the pillion an' coach you. But for the land's sake go easy with the throttle. She'll rush you clean off the British isles if you give her any gas."

Almee started dead slow. The ease and resiliency of the drive, once the Sphinx was running, astonished her. Gradually Almee increased speed to fifteen and twenty miles. She was intoxicated by the sense of power, answering to the least touch of her fingers.

"Glorious!" she gasped.

"You're doing fine," said Billy, watching keenly. He made her practice stopping and starting, including emergency halts. "Say, isn't she the last word in lady's mounts?"

"Rather!" said Almee, in spite of a sense of difficulty with her dress and the Sphinx's tank, low though it was. "Except—I feel as if I were all stockings."

"Stinks! what of it?" he answered impatiently. "There's nobody here to see. Try her on the high gear now."

Almee changed gear deftly enough and for awhile drove steadily. But the intoxication of speed confused her senses. She made the one mistake she had been warned against. The Sphinx dashed forward like a whipper, and, in trying to rectify the error she made it worse.

"Throttle down!" said Billy sharply.

Intending to obey, Almee blundered again, and closed down the extra an inlet. The Sphinx roared in protest and shot ahead like a bullet from a gun. The pace was awful. How the machine kept on the road was a miracle. Every moment promised a deastating crash. In front was a right-angled bend, inviting sudden death. Billy leaned swiftly forward.

"Valve-lifter—left!" he said quietly in her ear. Almee's left hand tightened on the lever—just in time. The steady voice—when a fool would have yelled aloud—brought all her faculties back; she throttled down as the machine slowed, and swung round the bend safely at a bare eight miles an hour—but without sounding the horns.

"Cad! If there's only one gentleman on this earth, it's Billy."

"Why do they always depict Eche as a woman?" "Because woman always has the last word."

She Dropped.

"Almee!" Cried Georgina.

Billy Leaned Swiftly Forward.

P. S.—In case you thought of coming over to see me soon, I ought to mention that the whole place is simply devastated with mumps. Of course it's quite all right for me, because I've had them.
