evening, March 23

On the evening mentioned, thirty five pigs (supposed to have been pigs) grunted at the parlor for admittance. Some wore green ties around their necks; some were dressed in aprons. After each pig had found his partner, they went on a pig promenade. Sides were then chosen and each side took part in contests, such as pig cracker race, pie race, and pig relay. To the winning side was given an ear of good ripe corn.

At a late hour refreshments consisting of pie and coffee were served.

Y. P. M. S. SOCIAL

The Young Peoples Missionary Society had its regular business and social meeting on Thursday, March 22 at the home of their president, Miss Etta Mae Kidd.

The program consisted of each member doing some stunt, singing or speaking, or whatever happened to be their talent. We found some who could crow, and some who could bray,—well, anyway, the barnyard was well represented.

Several games were then played, and the business discussed, after which we were marched into the dining room, where delicious refreshments were served to twenty-four of our members.

COOKED FOOD SALE

Treasures in Tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen of Egypt

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with the Earl of Carnarvon. Opening of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, the "heretic" king of Egypt, revealed an unexampled storehouse of treasures. This photograph shows the interior of the tomb. Among the articles shown are a box containing the king's undergarments in the form of flons; a couch with supports in the form of "hatched" meat; a painted red box containing jewelry and ornaments; a king's stool; another couch; four alabaster unguent vases of unique type; having minute detail of Inlaid Ivory.

Box of Tut-Ankh-Amen's Underwear

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with the Earl of Carnarvon. Here in the antechamber of his tomb, is the long white wooden box which contained the underwear of King Tut-Ankh-Amen, who reigned in Egypt more than three thousand years ago. It also held many of his weapons.

and Funeral Meats

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with the Earl of Carnarvon.

In this photograph of the antechamber of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, king of Egypt, more than thirty centuries ago, the principal objects seen are the king's stool, made of solid ebony with ivory and having gold mountings; a large royal ceremonial gilt couch; the king's throne which is covered with gold and silver and inlaid with precious stones; a wood trellis stool, a large wooden casket; a carved wood and ivory chair of exquisite workmanship; wheels, bodies, poles, harness and other parts of four chariots; wood gilt trellis work from an object of unknown use.

KING'S ROBE CHEST

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with the Earl of Carnarvon. This beautiful painted casket, found in the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen of Egypt, contained the king's robes, decorated with elaborate bead and gold work of lapis-lazuli and turquoise; a gilt headrest like those used in Japan today, several pairs of sandals ornamented with inlaid gold, a black amber necklace, a collar of falcon, and other objects.

GUARDS THE SEPULCHER

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with the Earl of Carnarvon.

One of the two statues of King Tut-Ankh-Amen guarding the sealed entrance to the sepulcher of that ancient Egyptian monarch. They are of wood, covered with a black material and richly decorated with gold.

Tut-Ankh-Amen's Four Chariots

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with the Earl of Carnarvon. Here are the wheels, bodies, poles and other parts of four chariots as they were found in the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen at Luxor, Egypt. They are made of various hard woods, covered with stucco gilt, leather and inlaid ivory. The floors are of hide, in one case of leopard skin.

King Tut-Ankh-Amen's Typhon Couch of Solid Gilt

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with the Earl of Carnarvon. This view of the antechamber of the tomb of King Tut-Ankh-Amen at Luxor, Egypt, shows the royal ceremonial couch of solid gilt supported by animals of the Typhon type. Upon it is a large white wooden chest, and beneath and in front of it other objects including gold, ivory and wooden chairs.

Statues of King Guarding Doorway of Sepulcher

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with the Earl of Carnarvon. For more than three thousand years the wooden statues of King Tut-Ankh-Amen, seen in this photograph, stood undisturbed at the sealed doorway of his sepulcher in his tomb at Luxor, Egypt. In this antechamber are to be seen also the funeral flowers, a painted chest containing the royal robes and jewels, a long box containing the king's underwear and weapons, a ceremonial couch and many other objects.

PASSAGE TO THE TOMB

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with the Earl of Carnarvon. View looking down the rock-hewn passage leading to the antechamber of the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen at Luxor, Egypt, in which was found such a marvelous collection of objects. The light showing through the modern steel gate emanates from electric lamps installed by the excavators.

Alabaster Vases in King Tut's Tomb

London Times—New York Times copyright by arrangement with the Earl of Carnarvon. Cluster of alabaster unguent vases of unique type, just as they were discovered in the tomb of Tut-Ankh-Amen, the ancient Egyptian king, when it was opened. The vases still contain unguents which give off a faint odor.

King Tut-Ankh-Amen reigned in Egypt at least 3,250 years ago, and some authorities claim as far back as the days of Moses, and that it was his armies that were engulfed in the Red sea when pursuing the Children of Israel. At least his reign was as far back as that of Saul, first king of Israel.

Is Just Like a New Baby Says Fond Mother

One of the most remarkable features about Teethina is the quick relief so often observed soon after giving it to a sick and fretful child. "She was just like a new baby in a few minutes after giving her Teethina," writes Mrs. W. M. Murray, of 1329 Canaler avenue, Gadsden, Ala. "In fact," continues Mrs. Murray, "I couldn't go to sleep at night without knowing I had Teethina in the house." Mrs. Murray states an important fact that should interest other mothers who worry because of their little ones' fretfulness. With Teethina at hand she can banish all fears and take her own rest with the assurance that baby is well guarded and is safe from trouble. Teethina is sold by all druggists, or send 30c to the Moffett Laboratories, Columbus, Ga., and get a package of Teethina and a wonderful free booklet about Baby.—Advertisement.

Chess and Music Mixed.
Sir Walter Parratt, who is about to complete his fortieth year as organist at St. George's chapel, Windsor, is an enthusiastic chess player. On one occasion he undertook to play two men (in consultation) without looking at the board, while he himself played a number of pianoforte selections. The game lasted an hour and Sir Walter won handsomely.

DAIRY

CLEANLINESS IS IMPORTANT

Reduce Source of Contamination and Insure Cleanest Possible Grade of Milk.

Unclean and improperly cared for milk causes more disease and death among infants during the summer than any other one factor. But why wait until summer before taking action? "Use the cooler days of spring," say dairy specialists of the agricultural colleges, "to reduce the sources of milk contamination to a minimum, and thus insure the cleanest possible grade of milk during the critical summer season."

Cleanliness is the first of the two "C's" of the well-kept dairy. Milk from the time it leaves the cow until it is consumed is always in danger of infection from some kind of bacteria. These bacteria are constantly present on the body of the cow, in dusty, impure air, in bad water, in unclean utensils and on the hands and clothing of the helpers.

Good milk can be produced under ordinary farm conditions by observing the following points:

1. Have the barn well ventilated at milking time and see to it that no operations are going on that will stir up dust. Feed hay and sweep after milking.
2. Be sure that at least the teats and udder of the cow are clean.
3. Use a small-top, sterile milk pail and have all other utensils clean and sterile. If possible use steam; if not, boiling water.

As the bacteria that get into milk are dormant and increase slowly at lower temperatures, but will increase rapidly as long as the milk remains warm—above 50 degrees F. the second "C" in producing and handling wholesome milk under average conditions is cold. The fourth point then to be considered is that of cooling the milk as soon as produced to a temperature below 50 degrees F. and maintaining that cold temperature until the milk is delivered.

Get into the habit now of following these simple practices. It will insure the public against sour milk and unwholesome infant food in the hot days to come.

HIGH PRODUCING DAIRY COW

Animal Yielding 8,250 Pounds of Milk Yearly Uses Half of Ration for Maintenance.

A dairy cow producing 8,250 pounds of milk a year—a common production—must use one-half of her ration for the maintenance of her weight and to keep her in good condition, and has, therefore, only one-half of the ration left for making milk.

WARM WATER FOR MILK COWS

Cows Will Not Give Maximum Flow of Milk if Given Cold Water for Drinking Purposes.

Cold drinking water given to dairy cows will result in reduced quantity of milk. A cow which yields a large quantity of milk must drink lots of water; she won't drink much from an icy tank. Water tanks can be provided with heaters, or hot water can be poured into the tank.

CHILDLESS HOMES MADE HAPPY

Presence of Little Ones a Great Blessing

Four Interesting Letters

Cortland, N. Y.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound because I was weak and wanted to become strong and have a child. My husband read about it in the 'Cortland Standard' and thought it might help me. It certainly did for I now have a lovely boy fifteen months old who weighs forty pounds. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to my friends and you can certainly use my testimonial in your little books and in the newspapers, as it might help to make some other childless home happy by the presence of little ones as it has done mine."—Mrs. CLAUDE P. CANFIELD, 10 Salisbury St., Cortland, N. Y.

A Message to Mothers
Hamilton, Ohio.—"I have known about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound since girlhood, having taken it when I was younger and suffering from a weakness and backache. Lately I have taken it again to strengthen me before the birth of my child, as I was troubled with pains in my back and a lifeless, weak feeling. I think if mothers would only take your wonderful medicine they would not dread childbirth as they do. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to every woman."—Mrs. JOS. HAMILTON, Jr., 562 S. 11th Street, Hamilton, Ohio.

St. Louis, Mo.—"I want to tell you what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound did for me seven years ago. I was run down and had a weakness such as women often have. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and after being married sixteen years became the mother of a sweet little girl. I now have four lovely children—three fine boys and the little girl six years old. I had longed for children all the while and wept many a day and envied every woman with a child. I was 36 years old when my first baby was born. I recommend Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to any woman who is ailing with female weakness."—Mrs. J. NAUMANN, 1517 Benton St., St. Louis, Mo.

Was Weak and Run Down
St. Louis, Mo.—"My mother took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound when I was a girl, and when I was troubled with cramps I took it, and later when I married I again took it to make me strong as the doctor said I was weak and run down and could not have children. I took it and got along fine and now I have three girls. So you know why I keep the Compound in the house, I am a well woman and do my work and sewing too."—Mrs. JULIUS HARTMAN, 2501 W. Dodier St., St. Louis, Mo.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Judging from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming these conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

An examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the astonishing statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

Made to Greet the Spring;

Frocks for All-Day Wear

WHEN its tulip time in Manhattan—or anywhere else—our eyes are going to be gladdened by out-of-the-ordinary suits like that shown here. They will be refreshing for they are made to greet the springtime, of new fabrics, skillfully used, in simple designs. Texture of the materials, colors and color combinations account for more than half their charm. These are the new knitted weaves in silk that lend themselves to the sort of dress that American women seem to like best—dress that is smart, and has a casual quality, that registers a vivid, pleasing impression at first glance and that is simple.

As for simplicity, the suit illustrated hardly needs a description—the picture tells its story so well. You can imagine it in blue and gray with a bodice of plain gray crepe de chine to which bands of plain blue, cut from the silk, are applied, with rows of little, round, gray pearl buttons set across the top of each band. The sleeves are banded with the striped material and the skirt and steveless jacket are made of it—the jacket lined with plain crepe de chine.

There are many color combinations and patterns in the new weaves that tie touches in cut or in details of finishing are at a premium. Designers make a national reputation for themselves, turning out models that have individual touches, and the shops are full of "Sally" and "Betty" and "Barbara" and "Peggy" creations.

Two models that may be made in either wool or silk fabrics are pictured here as good examples of both the one and two-piece dress. The black crepe dress at the left has an interesting drapery drawn closely about the hips and quite full in front, where a many-colored bead ornament is placed. The long, plain sleeves are distinguished by deep embroidered cuffs in which silk floss repeats the color in the bands.

A plain skirt shorter than fashion demands and a plain blouse with sev-are inspiring to designers, for there is distinction in the suits made of them, and the mode demands distinction in suits with an insistence that has furthered the cause of the costume suit and put it in a place of first importance in spring wardrobes.

How remote the days seem when the now but unromantic shirtwaist and its trim, tailored skirt occupied nearly all the horizon, in the realm of dress for all-day wear! They play but a small part now. Frocks

Mrs. Banes Says Tanlac Ended Indigestion, Sourness and Palpitations and Made Labors Light.

"Tanlac has helped me so much I wish everyone suffering like I did would follow my suggestion to use it," said Mrs. Sadie Banes, 2037 Washington St., Kansas City, Mo., the other day.

"Before I took Tanlac my appetite was so poor it seemed beyond cultivation, and the little I managed to eat gave me indigestion and caused awful sourness and palpitation. I was simply miserable from nervous headaches, dizziness and knife-like pains in my back, always slept poorly, and felt so bad that at times I just had to quit my housework and lie down.

"Tanlac was so well suited to my case that it has only taken three bottles, half of the full treatment, to restore me to perfect health. It makes me so happy to be without an ache, pain or trouble of any kind that I go about my work humming and singing. I just can't help rejoicing over what Tanlac has done for me."

CLASS MEETING

On Friday evening, March 15, the T. E. L. Class of the First Baptist church held their regular monthly business meeting at the home of Mrs. C. O. Choper, with Mrs. E. T. Watkins as joint hostess.

After the business session an hour was spent in the study of "Building the Bible Class," one of the books in the Training Course for Sunday School Workers, taught by Mrs. L. A. Dunn. This course of study is very profitable, as well as interesting, and we urge each member to take it up.

Sixteen members and four as sociate members were present. Mrs. Monroe Smith and Mrs. L. Spalding were visitors. By motion, the date of meeting was changed so as to not conflict with the Parent Teachers Association. Hereafter we will meet on the second Friday afternoon of each month.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses, assisted by Miss Faye Cooper.

"MY PEARLS!"

SYNOPSIS.—Disliking the prospect of a month's visit to her austere aunt, Lady Erythea Lambe, at Jervaulx Abbey, and her cousin, Alexander Lambe, Almee, vivacious daughter of the Very Reverend Viscount Scroope, wanders into the park, there encountering a strange youth. He laughingly introduces himself as "Billy," American. The two ride on his motorcycle, the "Flying Sphinx," and part. With Georgina Berners, her cousin, Almee sets out for Jervaulx. She decides that Georgina shall impersonate her at Jervaulx, while she goes on a holiday. Georgina's horrified protest is unavailing. Almee again meets "Billy." He tells her his name is Spencer, and she gives her as Amy Snooka, at present "out of a job." Billy offers to take her into partnership in selling the Sphinx. In a spirit of madcap adventure, she accepts. The two proceed to the town of Stanhoe, taking separate lodgings in Ivy Cottage. That night Almee visits Georgina and learns that the deception has not been discovered. She compels Georgina to continue the subterfuge. On a trial spin, with Billy, Almee nearly kills them both by going too fast, but her nerves awaken Billy's admiration.

There was an astonished shout and a cry of warning ahead. A large carriage, with two fat horses and a fat coachman, seemed to be right on top of Almee's handlebars. She swerved and braked violently, while the horses were reined back on their haunches; the Sphinx toppled sideways, shooting Billy clean through the screen of brambles that covered the ditch.

Almee performed a sort of semi-somersault, and landed on her feet with an intoxicated stagger. For one awful moment she found herself facing the amazed occupants of the carriage.

She was conscious of the face of Georgina, very white, staring at her open-mouthed, with eyes as big as saucers. Beside Georgina sat a tremendous, elderly lady, gripping a Borgnetto, and speechless with anger. A large young man in black, his eyes watching Georgina's for size, had started up and was grasping the side of the carriage.

In a fraction of a second the truth telegraphed itself to Almee's flustered brain. Aunt Erythea!

Almee leaped the ditch like a chamois, right over the top of Billy; plunged through the tall hedge as a circus rider goes through a hoop, and vanished.

"Is anybody hurt, there?" gasped Mr. Alexander Lambe. "Is—"

"Nope. Not here," said Billy's voice feebly from the ditch. A pair of booted legs waved among the brambles.

"I never saw anything so disgraceful in my life!" cried Mr. Lambe. "Your number! I want your number. I—"

Lady Erythea, whose face was crimson, leaned forward and smote the coachman twice violently in the back with the handle of her parasol. "Drive on—fool!" she said explosively.

The coachman started and whipped up the fat horses. Mr. Lambe staggered as the carriage went forward.

"Aunt," he said, "that—that woman, who was driving, ought to be apprehended! If I had my way—"

"If I had my way," retorted Lady Erythea, "she'd be whipped! She and all her tribe. But the idiot Geravase, of course, was on the wrong side; we've no case. I hope their wretched machine is wrecked. Sit down, Alexander, do you hear!"

Mr. Lambe obeyed, protesting faintly. Georgina, with one hand pressed to her bosom, felt as though she were on the point of heart-failure.

"Hussies," said Lady Erythea, quivering, "and louts! Country's overrun with them. Decency is dead!"

The carriage jingled round the corner and disappeared.

Billy Spencer collected himself from among the brambles and regained the road, with the air of a sailor cast away on an inhospitable coast. Almee thrust an inquiring face through the hedge, and sneezed.

after this. All the same," he added, "that tank-bar is a bit awkward for your dress."

"I don't care—I can manage." "No—it's got to be fixed." His face cleared. "It's dead easy! I'll get you a pair of breeches in Syderford."

Almee, dumfounded, turned and stared at him. "What do you think you are?" she exclaimed. "The Universal Provider?"

Billy's chin stuck out sternly. "I'm your partner! Get me?" Almee looked at him thoughtfully, and smiled.

"All right, Billy," she said softly. There was a pause. "Let's go back to Ivy Cottage. You can drive."

Billy mounted the saddle joyously, stuffing his cap into his pocket. Almee took her seat behind. The Sphinx neared her homeward at an easy fifty miles an hour.

CHAPTER VI

"Thou Shalt Not Lie." Georgina Berners began the day well; though she came within an ace of beginning it very badly indeed—she was nearly late for prayers.

After the service the servants dispersed to their duties, and Lady Erythea led the way to the morning room. She kissed Georgina with the air of one conferring a benefit, and bestowed a word of approval on Alexander, who was looking at Georgina with some concern in his large eyes.

"You look a little tired, cousin," he said, "did you rest well?" "Oh, y-yes," said Georgina, "the—the journey yesterday was a little tiring."

"Perfect health," said Lady Erythea, "is not only desirable, it is a duty, in the young."

Breakfast proceeded in silence, till Lady Erythea made her announcement. "The carriage will be ready for us all at ten," she said. "Remember that one does not keep horses waiting. We shall drive to Syderford."

"In that case," said Mr. Lambe, "I must be excused now. I have many things to do before ten."

Lady Erythea watched his exit with some anxiety. "For a man of Alexander's physical development," she said, "I feel sure he does not eat enough. A mouthful of whiting and half a cup of tea! He would rather die than indulge in meat on a Friday." Lady Erythea was making excellent practice with a grilled sole. "That, of course, is quite right. But he carries some things to extremes. I am not wholly sure that Alexander is sound on the subject of marriage," continued Lady Erythea, with her customary directness. "I am, of course, a High Churchwoman. Of that faith, I know very well, there are many who hold that a priest should be celibate. I do not agree with them for one moment. Let those differ from me who will—I am afraid that narrow escape this morning has upset you, Almee," he said sympathetically.

"Yes—I was rather upset. But I am better now. Don't let us talk of it. Cousin Alexander, there is something I want to ask you," she said suddenly. "I should like your—your guidance. Imagine that somebody who was dear to me—somebody one loved very much—had got into difficulties, and was in danger of exposure. And punishment. That it was in one's power to save them. Supposing that it would help, would it be very wrong to tell a—fib?"

Alexander regarded her wonderingly. "I—"

"There is only one answer," he said sternly. "That other must make a clean breast of it, and bear his own punishment—or hers. No matter how bitter it may be. Whoever indulges in such shielding is equally guilty."

Georgina felt utterly chilled. "It is not that a little hard?" she said. "The hard way is the way of the transgressor," said Alexander, with some grimness; "there is authority for that. And yet the friend—I think you said a friend—may give all aid and succor to the sinner, even to the extreme sacrifice of himself. But deceit, even the shadow of it, must by no means enter into the matter. You are asking me what you know perfectly well. But why talk of unpleasant things," he continued, "tell me of yourself, and your life at Scroope, Almee."

There was small comfort for Georgina the rest of that day. She dressed for dinner in a state of despair. Lady Erythea, as her custom was, even when en famille, came down splendidly bejeweled, and wearing the famous Lambe emeralds—said to be worth a prince's ransom—on her some-were of naughtiness—is not wholly unattractive in a young man."

Georgina stared at her in amazement, wondering if she had heard aright. And Georgina was guiltily conscious that a similar thought had crept, unbidden, into her own mind. Lady Erythea's eyes, meeting her gaze, became stony.

"I was referring, of course," she said, with some sternness, "to the duty good women owe themselves in reforming young men of that type. In a girl, flightiness is abhorrent to me—absolutely abhorrent. Hussies are my especial aversion." She smiled, and laid a hand on Georgina's shoulder. "I don't know why I speak of them. Nor can I understand, my dear, how such a mistaken impression of you could have reached us, before we knew you."

"For," she added, rising, "I have formed my opinion of you, Almee, and my judgment is never mistaken. The woman does not lie who could deceive me. Almee, my dear, you are free to follow any occupation you choose—until ten o'clock."

Georgina made her way upstairs and sank into the most luxurious armchair in her bedroom.

"How perfectly lovely it would be here," she sighed, "if only things were proper and regular. But they aren't!"

Georgina, gazing before her, fell into a day-dream. Presently, the sound of the carriage passing beneath her window roused her with a start, and hastily donning a wrap she ran downstairs.

"Sit next me, Almee," said Lady Erythea, settling herself comfortably in the carriage. "Alexander, you will take the other seat. I dislike having anyone immediately opposite me."

For two hours, at least, all troubles were to be left behind. As the carriage bowled through the sunlit park Georgina, lying back against the cushions, under the benign gaze of Alexander, felt inexpressibly soothed.

When the carriage returned to Jervaulx, Georgina fell rather than descended from it. Almost in a state of collapse, she preserved some sort of outward composure and retreated to her bedroom as a hunted fox goes to earth.

The collision with the motorcycle on the Syderford road opened new horizons of terror for Georgina. It seemed to her like the climax of a nightmare. What in the world was Almee doing? Who was the man—it was evidently a man, though Georgina had seen little of him except his boots—that was with her. What was happening to the wretched girl?

"It's too awful!" said Georgina hysterically, "and I'm responsible. I think I shall go mad!"

Later in the afternoon, in the natural course of things, she found herself alone with Alexander in the garden. She looked at him with timid, yet hopeful eyes. Here, at least, was righteousness, kindness, wisdom. Georgina felt she could keep things to herself no longer.

"I am afraid that narrow escape this morning has upset you, Almee," he said sympathetically.

"Yes—I was rather upset. But I am better now. Don't let us talk of it. Cousin Alexander, there is something I want to ask you," she said suddenly. "I should like your—your guidance. Imagine that somebody who was dear to me—somebody one loved very much—had got into difficulties, and was in danger of exposure. And punishment. That it was in one's power to save them. Supposing that it would help, would it be very wrong to tell a—fib?"

Alexander regarded her wonderingly. "I—"

"There is only one answer," he said sternly. "That other must make a clean breast of it, and bear his own punishment—or hers. No matter how bitter it may be. Whoever indulges in such shielding is equally guilty."

Georgina felt utterly chilled. "It is not that a little hard?" she said. "The hard way is the way of the transgressor," said Alexander, with some grimness; "there is authority for that. And yet the friend—I think you said a friend—may give all aid and succor to the sinner, even to the extreme sacrifice of himself. But deceit, even the shadow of it, must by no means enter into the matter. You are asking me what you know perfectly well. But why talk of unpleasant things," he continued, "tell me of yourself, and your life at Scroope, Almee."

There was small comfort for Georgina the rest of that day. She dressed for dinner in a state of despair. Lady Erythea, as her custom was, even when en famille, came down splendidly bejeweled, and wearing the famous Lambe emeralds—said to be worth a prince's ransom—on her somewhat sony chest. As usual at dinner she was in a good temper.

There was a late delivery at Jervaulx, and a letter was brought into the drawing room afterward, addressed to Almee Scroope.

"Surely, that is your father's handwriting, Almee," said Lady Erythea. "My letter will have crossed his. Let us hear what he says."

Georgina would as soon have thought of picking a pocket as of opening another person's letter. But there was no help for it. The letter was dated Scroope Towers, Thursday. At the word of command, Georgina read it aloud, somewhat falteringly.

My Dearest Almee: I am writing to your aunt, to whom my love, but find myself with only time before the post goes to tell you I am obliged to leave Scroope earlier than I expected. As I wish to see you before I go, I will come over for an hour on Saturday. I'm sorry it is impossible for me to stay the night. I have news of importance for you.

Your loving, FATHER.

"It will be the first time," said Lady Erythea, a trifle acidly, "that anybody ever saw your father in a hurry." The letter put the finishing touch to such a day as Georgina had never dreamed of. Before she fell asleep, her pillow was wet.

CHAPTER VII

The Way of the Transgressor. Georgina awoke with a start. The light from a tiny electric torch dazzled her eyes; somebody was shaking her violently.

"Wake up, old thing," whispered Almee's voice; "it's like trying to rouse the dead. I'm anxious about you. What did they say about that little stunt on the Syderford road?"

Georgina sat up with a gasp, and clutched Almee with both hands as a drowning person clutches a life-buoy. "It's you, is it?" she said fiercely. "I've got you, Almee—make up your mind to it! This dreadful business is finished. We're done for—especially you!"

"Eh!" exclaimed Almee, a little startled. "What have you got the breeze up about now?"

"You'll know very soon! Who," said Georgina sternly, still holding her, "was that Man that was with you? Who was he?"

"Man?" said Almee. "Oh, you mean Billy. One of the best that ever stepped! A elinking good sort."

"B-Billy?" echoed Georgina in a shaking voice. "Tell me. Tell me all!" she said, tightening her grip.

"Well, why not?" said Almee, and forthwith she related the Saga of Billy. The tale, as it proceeded, seemed to affect Georgina with creeping palsy. When it ended, she was trembling violently. She made two unsuccessful efforts to speak. She reminded Almee of a hen with something stuck in its throat.

"You are staying with this Man?" gasped Georgina. "This Spencer—in Stanhoe? And he let you do it? The man's a cad!"

Almee sprang up, tearing herself loose from her cousin's hands. "How dare you say that! Cad? If there's only one gentleman on this earth, it's Billy!"

"There's no beastly sentiment in Billy, thank heaven. That's why we became pals; because we want to get away from it all. I see nothing wrong in it—nor does he."

"Then he's a fool!" said Georgina bitterly. "Oh, what can one say?" she groaned. "I know there's nothing wrong. That you are incapable of—of—"

she choked. "And this man, from what you tell me, he is just such another as you. He is not a—he is a child! Or he is from some place where things are very different from what they are with us, you are living in Eastshire—not a desert. You know what Eastshire is. If ever this comes out—as out it must—your reputation your good name are gone—finished!"

"That, I suppose, you do not care for," she said bitterly, rising and facing Almee, "but one thing I can tell you and you may believe me. This thing will kill your father!"

Almee stared at her blankly. "I know your father, better, perhaps, than you do, Almee. To Lord Scroope, black is black and white white. No one is more proud, more sensitive. That his daughter should be living in an obscure lodging, under an assumed name—with a strange man she picked up on the high road. I tell you, quite soberly and certainly, that it will break his heart."

There was a long silence. Suddenly Almee sat down on the bed and began to cry. She cried with the abandon of a child of ten, but very piteously.

"I never wanted to hurt Dad!" she sniffled. "I didn't think—I didn't see—"

"Do you understand at last?" said Georgina grimly. "Y-yes," gulped Almee slowly. "I believe I do. Dad! I—"

"We must keep it from him," said Georgina trembling, "at any cost. We must find a way, for his sake and yours. This muddle at Jervaulx cannot be hidden; we must face it. But your father must never hear of—the other thing. What are we to do? He is coming here tomorrow afternoon!"

Tearfully she gave her cousin the news in Lord Scroope's letter. Almee stared in blank dismay.

"We have till five o'clock tomorrow," faltered Georgina. "I don't care what happens to me—there's nothing I won't do to save you, Almee." Her face brightened suddenly. "I've thought of a way—"

"And so have I!" said Almee eagerly. "There's just a chance—go on—let's hear your plan!"

"If we can keep the whole thing quiet till five tomorrow we shall pull through—with luck. Should anything turn up before then, to show that you're not here where you ought to be—we're done for," said Georgina, tragically. "My plan is this: You must go at once—"

A loud clanging interrupted her, as of a vibrating hammer striking a gong. It jarred horribly on the silence of the dark abbey. Followed the crash and tinkle of breaking glass, and the sound of a fall. A second gong spoke with a brazen tongue.

Georgina went very white. "Great Scott! What's this awful row?" exclaimed Almee.

Georgina pressed a hand to her bosom. "It's—it's one of Lady Erythea's burglar alarms," she said faintly. "The house is full of them!"

In half a minute the abbey was galvanized into extraordinary activity.

"Great Scott! What's This Awful Row?" Exclaimed Almee.

Swift running feet padded along the corridors. The squeak of a maid-servant broke shrilly through the chorus.

Almee and Georgina stared at each other open-mouthed.

There was a violent pounding on the door. "Are you awake, miss?" said an excited voice. "There's thieves in the house—her ladyship's jewels stolen! Keep your door locked till she comes to you!"

The speaker was heard retreating swiftly down the passage.

"That's torn it!" gasped Almee, running to the door. "If aunt finds me here—"

She unlocked the door swiftly and opened it.

"Almee!" breathed the trembling Georgina, "don't—"

"I've got to get out, I tell you! I can't stay here!"

Almee looked rapidly up and down the passage. It was all clear. She fled at an amazing pace, and, reaching the landing, was aware of a figure of wrath, very like Britannia, but holding a fire-shovel, striding toward her. It was Lady Erythea.

Almee doubled like a hare. "Stop that woman!" cried Lady Erythea. "Stop her!"

Almee reached the head of the stairs just as Mr. Alexander Lambe, with a jacket over his pajamas, flew to intercept her.

"Stop!" he shouted commandingly. Almee, in full career, gave him a desperate two-handed push. Mr. Lambe's heels flew from under him, and he came down on the slippery oak flooring with a bearty thump.

Down the broad stairs, three at a time, sped the fugitive; in the lower hall the butler, his bald head shining like a comet in the gloom, rushed across the line of communications. Almee dodged too late; the pursuer made an active plunge, and caught her by the skirt.

"I've got her!" shouted the butler triumphantly. His voice rose to a yell as Almee kicked his shins, but he held on inexorably. "I've got her!"

ment she had vanished into the night. Alexander rushed to the open doors and stared out into the darkness. He heard the sound of the hunt somewhere beyond the fir-trees. For a moment he thought of joining it. But the starlit gloom gave faint encouragement—pursuit seemed very useless. With a sudden impulse Alexander ran back through the hall, turned on the light, and pulled open the door of the telephone call room. He snatched the receiver from the hook. "Stanhoe police station—put me through quick!" cried Alexander.

Lady Erythea descended the stairs, a superb model for Boadicea among the wreck of the Roman legions. Her eyes flashed fire, her lips were compressed in a thin, tight line, her hand gripped the brass shovel. She glared at the disgruntled butler.

"Tarbeaux!" she cried sharply. "Tarbeaux!"

Mr. Tarbeaux came forward, limping. One hand pressed a crimsoned handkerchief to his nose, which had impacted rather violently upon the good knight's breastplate. His other hand grasped a yard of torn blue cloth, which he waved before him.

"Did you stop that woman?" cried Lady Erythea.

Mr. Tarbeaux's inarticulate answer was in the negative.

"Why not, idiot!" said his mistress. "A houseful of useless incumbrances unable to stop a single—" The em-purpled handkerchief caught her eye. "Why, what is the matter, man? Are you wounded?"

"Proud—shed m' blood—ladyship's service!" sniffled Mr. Tarbeaux. "Couldn't help skirt tearin', m' lady."

"What!"

Mr. Tarbeaux, with a silent but splendid gesture, laid the piece of torn skirt upon the hall bench.

"Clue, m' lady," he said, with the air of a bankrupt making the most of his assets. "With this it should not be difficult to trace the thief."

"Trace her!" snorted Lady Erythea. "If you had held on to her there would have been no need to trace anything!"

Mr. Lambe joined them; his mild eye at once apprehended the significance of the piece of serge.

"I cannot see that Tarbeaux is to blame," he said in his aunt's ear; "he did his best, and after all it is unimportant."

"Unimportant! The infamous creature has got clear away!"

"My dear aunt! That stupid girl cannot have been the thief. You do not really suppose this burglary was committed by a woman!"

"Most certainly I do!" cried Lady Erythea. "I can believe anything of the modern woman—anything! She hid when the alarm sounded, and made a desperate dash for escape when I discovered her. It is as clear as daylight to anybody but a fool! It is certain she had my emeralds upon her at the time, and it is lucky none of you are killed—though it would be very little loss. Tarbeaux, did you recognize the creature whom you allowed so egregiously to escape?"

"No, m' lady. It was too dark. And the incident was somewhat sudden," said Mr. Tarbeaux apologetically. "It was a young person—I am unable to say more. But I am sure she was not one of our household."

"I have telephoned the police at Stanhoe," said Mr. Lambe; "they are coming immediately by car."

"A gleam of intelligence at last! Thank you, Alexander—and forgive me—I am overworked. My censure does not apply to you. The whole affair is appalling!" said Lady Erythea, clenching her hands. "My pearls, the diamond chaplet—these comparatively are trifles—but the emeralds are gone. The Lambe emeralds!"

The audience shrank before her wrath.

"It is incredible! Twelve years ago the abbey was broken into—this is the second case. I had taken every possible precaution, under skilled advice. My safe is modern; I considered I had made the house itself impregnable at night. So it would have been, had I been adequately served. What measures did you take, Tarbeaux? I was absurd enough to think I could rely upon you, in an emergency like this!"

"I retired at the usual hour, my lady, to my room in the passage," said Mr. Tarbeaux unhappily, "as I have done for years, by your instructions, in view of—er—er—an emergency like this. One of the alarms roused me; I rose immediately, only waiting long enough to don a garment—"

"Go on, man, go on!"

"While putting them—while putting it on, my lady, I sounded my bell, which connects with the other menservants' rooms, and ran into the hall. At that moment I thought I heard feet on the gravel outside, and unholting the front door I rushed out—"

"Leaving an exit for any thief in the house to escape by!" snorted Lady Erythea. "Continue your brilliant narrative."

Adjunctives. Bill—I understand he's had very expensive dealings in Wall Street? Will—No. Very expensive.

"I was in a house—and it was burgled. They thought it was me—and I scooted—they're chasing me."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

The Busy Season.

"What are your office hours?" "Brief and irregular during the campaign season," replied Senator Sorghum. "My working hours occupy most of the day and some of the night. I only go to my office when I want to rest."

Adjectives. Bill—I understand he's had very expensive dealings in Wall Street? Will—No. Very expensive.

Hedley School Notes

OUR SCHOOL

On March 15th, Miss Susan Miles, a State Inspector of High Schools, visited our school. Although the weather was very disagreeable, it did not keep us from making what we conclude was a good impression.

The report which Miss Miles sent in was indeed favorable. Our new building was especially complimented; we were commended for the splendid attitude toward our work. A few minor corrections were made, but as a whole the report was very favorable.

ATHLETICS

Although football and basketball seasons have passed, we still have good times. If you were to come around the school house at recess or noon you'd find the older boys playing "catch" or pole vaulting; younger boys playing "rollie holie"—a great game, they say, if some teacher doesn't get your marbles. To see real games of baseball you will have to visit with the 2nd and 3rd grade team, the captain of which team is C. W. Crawford, we think.

The girls are not exactly in the background. They play "last couple out," "ante over," and the like.

But, sh! We have heard of a girl's baseball nine. Now don't tell anyone who told you, and if you do, tell them not to tell.

YE COLONIAL PARTY

On February 23, Misses Trapo and Cannedy entertained the Seniors and Juniors with "Ye Colonial Party" at the home of Mrs. O. E. Johnson.

On arriving we were served with punch by Misses Snoddy and Allison, becomingly dressed as Colonial maids.

During the evening we engaged in a series of contests and played Progressive Hearts.

The costumes worn by the guests were in keeping with the occasion. The girls were typical "Martha Washingtons" in their pretty dresses and powdered hair. James Richey and Bill Johnson made a bit when they appeared with their powdered wigs and lace frills. Delicious refreshments of brick ice cream (red, white and blue) and angel food cake were served. Dainty favors of sweet peas were given.

Of all our good times, we place this one among the best.

TOM THUMB WEDDING

The Tom Thumb Wedding by the pupils of the Primary department was an enjoyable affair. Their costumes together with their talent gave them the appearance of real "grow-ups."

Lillie Putian, the bride, was represented by Jeanette Clarke. The groom, Tom Thumb, was characterized by Marvin Comp-ton. Little C. W. Crawford was ring bearer, and the solemn minister officiating was Tom Lamberson.

A large crowd attended the wedding and all expressed keen enjoyment.

QUEEN ESTHER

The dramatization of "Queen Esther" given by Miss Mary Helen McNeely, assisted by the Municipal Orchestra of Memphis, proved to be a great success. The program was rendered before a large crowd assembled in the school auditorium. This was an unusual opportunity to hear a program of classic value, rendered by one of such great talent and ability. The beautiful costume worn by Miss McNeely certainly added to the interest of the reading.

As for the music, we can say the Orchestra lived up to the splendid reputation they have made. Everyone enjoyed the fine music, and when the program closed the audience was calling for more. As the closing selection the Orchestra played "The Old Gray Mare."

Let us hope Miss McNeely and the Memphis Orchestra will come back again.

PERSONALS

Monday morning it seemed rather uncertain that we would get to come to school. We were expecting to be either snow bound, water bound, or almost buried alive by a West Texas sandstorm. Quite a few absences resulted from such uncertain weather.

Alice Bishop has been absent from school all this week. We have not learned the trouble, but we hope she is not sick and will be back in school soon.

Marion Shaw, Earl Stewart, Ora Curtis, Leslie Clifton, Ray Moreman, Granville Koger, Vera Garland, and Thomas Killian were on the absent list Monday.

Me'lba and Ernest Johnson were absent from school Tuesday. We understand they visited Clarendon and Memphis. Wonder what's so rushing.

PREP PARAGRAPHS

On one afternoon last week we "got our house in order." We dusted the wood work, erased the boards, dusted the erasers, and covered our waste basket attractively. We have appointed monitors who will keep the boards clean, and each one of us is going to bring a dust rag. The appearance of our room is now greatly improved, and we shall have an ideal room when our picture is hung.

We have almost decided as did one Prep girl who dolefully, yet wisely, remarked: "Whenever you go somewhere now you have to carry your overshoes, raincoat, overcoat, umbrella and fan, because you never can tell what kind of weather will be here next."

Mr. Weaver: "The sun gives everything its energy. It gives us our strength, and even the trains get their energy from the sun."

Allie Mae: "How do they run at night?"

The Preps were entertained last week by a visit from Mr. M. L. Raney, a Confederate veteran. He told us many interesting events that took place during the Civil War. They were enjoyed by everyone. Here's hoping he comes again soon, and stays longer. We connected what he told with what we have been studying in history, and he made it all much more interesting. We know from what he said that

In the battle of Manassas, or Bull Run, The Federals came out to see the fun, But the Confederates with their very few guns Had the pleasure of seeing the Yanks run.

A JOLLY GOOD TIME

On Wednesday afternoon we boarded the "Prep Special," bound for a journey into picnic land. The provisions and supplies were loaded into the baggage car that was allowed an advance schedule.

Soon after we arrived at the place, we were busy doing full justice to the lunch. When we had played around for a while, we demonstrated how puzzling it is to keep watch on one's toasting marshmallow when there are forty others trying to do the same thing.

One sad thing was that we were "run over" by two trains, but "accidents will happen." In spite of those misfortunes, we all enjoyed a good time, and vote ourselves as being glad we were entertainers and entertained.

Mr. Weaver: "Tom, when you have a tree with two limbs on one side, how do you prune it?"

Tom: "Cut one limb off and put it on the other side."

P. T. A.

The Parent-Teachers Association met March 16th in regular business session. An extensive "Membership Campaign" was launched, and other work was planned.

Miss Sims' music and expression pupils gave a very pleasing program.

The Social Committee then served delicious refreshments.

The next meeting will be held March 30th, at 3:30 o'clock, in the school auditorium.

ANNOUNCEMENT

There will be special Easter services at the First Baptist Church Sunday morning. There will be a special musical program. The home talent will be assisted by several out of town people.

You are cordially invited to come.

for roup, cholera and white diarrhea. Don't waste the purchasing power of your poultry. Tonic them, feed them and house them. Did you know that local dealers in Hedley paid approximately $50,000 for poultry and eggs alone in 1922?—or a volume equal to about 12% of the cotton marketed in Hedley for the same year? 12% of your income on cotton equals one-eighth of $400,000. That's lots of money; don't let it get away from you. Let's join hands in making it bigger for 1923. We are exclusive selling agents for

We also carry LeGEAR'S POULTRY FOOD; CONKEYS ROUP REMEDY, AVICOL, DON SUNG, the Chinese Egg Tonic, and
