HEDLEY BAPTISTS ARE TO HAVE NEW PASTOR

Rev. K. E. Keller of White Deer has accepted a call to the pastorate of the First Baptist Church of this city, and plans to be here and take up the work by the first Sunday in June.

Brother Keller has been here this week, and made a good impression on all our people who met him. He has preached in the local church two or three times.

The Informer is pleased to welcome Rev. and Mrs. Keller to Hedley and bespeaks for them the hearty co-operation of our people that the best possible results may accrue from their labors.

LEGIONAIRE CAFETERIA

Clarence Clifton has opened a short order lunch room in the new building two doors east of the postoffice. He has fitted up a cozy place, and invites the people to come to see him.

The quality of food and service dispensed by Mr. Clifton gives promise of a profitable business for the Legionaire Cafeteria.

Remember! Community Fair Mass Meeting on next Saturday, May 19th.

L. Spalding returned Tuesday from a visit to his father, D. Spalding, who has been quite ill at his home in Grayson county. Mr. Spalding reports his father much improved, but we regret very much to learn of the death of one of his nephews a few days ago.

BAILEY BROS.

Mrs. P. T. Boston left Monday for Stephenville in response to a message that her aunt, Mrs. Howell, of that city, was seriously ill.

Later—Another message, received yesterday morning, conveyed the sad news that Mrs. Howell had passed away.

B. N. Stewart writes us that he and his family are comfortably located in their new home at Springdale, Ark, and like it just fine. He says fruit crop prospects are the best in many years. He has met a number of former Donley county folks there. He orders the Informer sent to him at Springdale, and sends his best regards to old Hedley and the many good people here.

R. W. SCALES HOME DESTROYED BY FIRE

Wednesday afternoon at about 4:30 the home of R. W. Scales, in the northern edge of town, was discovered in flames, and was soon completely destroyed, together with nearly all of its contents.

Mrs. Scales was visiting with a friend in another part of town, and none of the family were at home except two of the boys who were in the barn shucking corn for the stock. So it is not known just how the fire originated, although it is practically certain that a mouse in the closet was responsible, since the part of the house in which the closet was located was the first to be seen ablaze.

Some insurance was carried, but not enough to keep the loss from being a heavy one. This misfortune is much regretted by the many friends of the Scales family.

Remember! Community Fair Mass Meeting on next Saturday, May 19th.

HOME ECONOMICS CLUB WILL MEET WEDNESDAY

The Hedley Home Economics Club will meet next Wednesday afternoon, May 16, in the Methodist church basement. Following is the program:

Making and Serving Doughnuts—Mrs. J. B. Masterson.
A good attendance is urged.
Members who have no year book may get one by calling on the Club President, Mrs. C. E. Johnson.

Reporter.

J. W. Blankenship returned the first of the week from Mercedes, in the Rio Grande valley, where he spent the winter at the home of his son, C. E. Blankenship. He is looking well, and says he feels the same way. His many Hedley friends are glad to see him again.

FOR SALE—Victoria. Call Mrs. O. R. Culwell.

METHODIST REVIVAL

Revival begins at the Methodist Church on the fifth Sunday in July.

Rev. J. T. Hicks, pastor of the Memphis church, will do the preaching.

All are invited to attend and take part in the meeting.

HEDLEY RESTAURANT

We have leased the Hedley Restaurant, and invite all our friends and the general public to call on us when hungry. We will treat you right and appreciate your patronage.

Not a Laxative

Nujol is a lubricant—not a medicine—so cannot gripe.

When you are constipated, not enough of Nature's lubricating liquid is produced in the bowel to keep the food waste soft and moving. Doctors prescribe Nujol because it acts like this natural lubricant and thus secures regular bowel movements by Nature's own method—lubrication. Try it today.

For Semi-Formal Costumes; in Decorative Accessories

IF CHARMING dress adds to one's summer pleasures, then we all have in anticipation a season of exceeding joy, for clothes as planned for the coming sunshine months are adorable. One of the prettiest forecasted fashions is the white crepe-plaited skirt with jacquette of bright-printed silk.

One can get a foretaste of this coming vogue by studying the picture provided she owns a collection of decorative accessories, oftentimes appears better dressed and presents a more pleasing variation than she who boasts a wardrobe which numbers many expensive and elaborate costumes.

At present fanciful girdles and corsages are the dominating feature throughout the realm of dress. In these intriguing fantasies one has the satisfaction of indulging one's imagination to the utmost.

A FORETASTE OF THE COMING VOGUE

Two interesting corsage ornaments are illustrated here. The one to the right is made of loops of ribbon, including silver, gray, French blue and rose, in connection with nacre-colored beads which look like seashells. Streamers of the variegated ribbon are attached. The flower-like girdle to the left suggests large ribbon daisies and artificial flower centers carry out the idea. Streamers so essential, according to the designer's theory, are of ribbon.

There is considerable braiding in many of the jacquette models. That is, the body may be of figured silk, sented herewith. Where is the feminine mind that can ignore such an appealing motif? It will not be long before most of us will be wearing silken plaited skirts with a jacquette made along similar lines to the one in this picture.

Batik crepe jacquettes figure conspicuously among the newest ideas. Sometimes these have the hip band and collar of a solid material.

WHERE RIBBONS PLAY CHARMING ROLES

bon, identical to that of which the flowers are made. The daisies are of velvet ribbon, carried out in tones of yellow, which shade to brown, the graduation achieved by hand-tinting.

A charming floral corsage is designed of purple and orchid narrow ribbon, shirred to imitate violets. These are crushed into a large rosette with myriads of narrow green streamers fluttering to the hem of the skirt.

After all, it is not the dress which counts so much as the accessories. The possessor of a simple crepe frock,

PE-RU-NA

ANOTHER WOMAN WHO IS THANKFUL FOR

"I have taken several bottles of Pe-ro-na and find it a great benefit. I had pains in my stomach and bowels, but by the use of Pe-ro-na and Iap-e-lin, I am well and strong again. I always have a few bottles in the house." Miss OMAH GRAY, 25, 7 D St. S., Box 39, Nichols, Iowa

Mrs. Gray's experience is just more evidence that Pe-ro-na is quite as good a remedy for catarrh of the stomach, bowels or other organs as it is for coughs, colds and nasal catarrh. Pe-ro-na is a wonderfully fine medicine to have in the house for everyday use.

WHEN NOBILITY BREWED BEER SCORE ONE FOR PERFORMER

English "Upper Classes" Proved Not to Have Been Dependent on Commercial Product.

Small Boy Must Have Retired From That Particular Encounter in Some Confusion.

Relics of "ye olden days" show that beer was brewed on their own estates by the nobility in very ancient days. On the site at present occupied by Hay Hill once stood a farmhouse belonging to the Berkeley estate, which comprised the land upon which Devonshire house stands. Recent clearing away of debris in the fine old gardens has brought to light the old vaults belonging to the original farmhouse, which dated back from the late Tudor period. When Berkeley street was cut through in 1600 the old farmhouse was pulled down, but only to the street level, so that the original vaults have been found preserved below the street. The brewing house has been cleared of debris. Brickwork believed to go back beyond 1600 has been found, and it is believed that the two mash tubs bearing the lettering "D.D." now on view in the vaults of Devonshire house, were brought from the original brewery.—London Mail.

At a point during the course of an address before members of the Carnation club the other day, Representative William D. Upshaw of Georgia had occasion to be "reminded" of a certain vaudeville performer whose imitation of dogs comprised the chief feature of his act.

"On his way to the theater in the small town where he was appearing," said the congressman, "the actor was accosted by a youth who wanted to know if he wasn't the man down to the Palace theater who barked like a dog."

"Yes," replied the imitator, rather complimented on being recognized.

"Gee," laughed the boy, "I got ya beat when it comes to makin' noises like a dog."

"That may be true," snapped back the performer, "but, then, you must remember I had to learn it."—Exchange.

Few men can resist the temptation to swallow undeserved praise.

What to Eat and Why

A Natural Supply of Vitamin

The word "Vitamin" is new, but the thing itself is as old as the human race. It is the energizing, vitalizing, growth-producing element in the right food. Its absence is a serious fault of the wrong food. When the food is right, there is no need to go to the drug store for Vitamin.

Grape-Nuts, the famous ready-to-eat cereal, supplies the natural Vitamin from the wheat, and a further supply is included in the cream or milk with which Grape-Nuts is eaten.

Grape-Nuts is delightfully crisp and appetizing, with a flavor which happily suggests the wholesome, health-building goodness which the food contains. Phosphorus and iron, as well as Vitamin, with a bran content to stimulate intestinal action, are supplied by Grape-Nuts. Many of our modern, "refined" foods lack these vitally necessary elements.

Grape-Nuts digests easily and is assimilated quickly, and is splendidly nourishing and energizing. You'll find better health and fitness, in the natural way, with Grape-Nuts as a regular part of your diet.

There's genuine economy in Grape-Nuts—many servings of this exceptionally nourishing food to the package. At your grocer's—ready to serve. Grape-Nuts—the Body Builder. "There's a Reason." Made by Postum Cereal Co., Inc., Battle Creek, Michigan.

MRS. J. MILLER TELLS OF GAIN

Declares Tanlac Overcame Stomach Trouble, Restoring Health, Strength and Weight.

"I am now strong and happy and go about my household singing, so I think it is only natural that I should praise Tanlac, since that is what has given me such splendid health," declared Mrs. J. Miller, 119 Johnston Ave., Kearney, N. J.

"For a year before I started taking Tanlac I was simply in a wretched health from stomach trouble and a run-down condition. My appetite left me, I was eating scarcely enough to keep going, and was often so weak I could hardly do any household work. My food often disagreed with me, and I would have suffocating spells and heart palpitation that nearly drove me frantic."

"My mother had been helped wonderfully by the Tanlac treatment, and when she advised me to take it I started right in. It has built me up five pounds, my digestion is perfect, my appetite splendid, and I am always talking Tanlac now. It is simply grand."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists. Over 25 million bottles sold.—Advertisement.

Mentioned It to Morphew.

From a Story—"To his considerable surprise, Shane, on getting into bed, fell immediately into a deep but restful sleep."

If you use Red Cross Ball Blue in your laundry, you will not be troubled by those tiny rust spots, often caused by inferior bluing. Try it and see.—Advertisement.

Economy.

FRECKLES

Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With Othine—Double Strength

This preparation for the treatment of freckles is usually so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold under guarantee to refund the money if it fails. Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, and some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely. Be sure to ask the druggist for the double-strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.

Mother Didn't Even Know Her Baby Cut Teeth

Teethina acts almost like magic in cases where babies, during their first months of life, appear weak and do not seem to grow. Mrs. Eliza Wilson's baby is a case in point. Mrs. Wilson lives at 208 N. Houston St., Denison, Texas, and writes:

"My baby was sick and fretful at two months, and so thin and poor and weak it was pitiful to look at her. She would cry for hours and draw all up in pain and nothing we could do helped her a bit. I was told about Teethina and the very first dose relieved her pain and now she is never sick at all. Actually, I never knew when her teeth came till they are through the gums."

Teethina is sold by all druggists, or send 30c to the Moffett Laboratories, Columbus, Ga., and get a package of Teethina and a wonderful free booklet about Baby.—Advertisement.

A FEELING OF SECURITY

You naturally feel secure when you know that the medicine you are about to take is absolutely pure and contains no harmful or habit producing drugs.

Such a medicine is Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, kidney, liver and bladder remedy. The same standard of purity, strength and excellence is maintained in every bottle of Swamp-Root.

It is scientifically compounded from vegetable herbs. It is not a stimulant and is taken in teaspoonful doses.

It is not recommended for everything. It is nature's great helper in relieving and overcoming kidney, liver and bladder troubles.

A sworn statement of purity is with every bottle of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root.

If you need a medicine, you should have the best. On sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to try this great preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

GROWING SUGAR BEETS FOR PROFIT

Cultivating Sugar Beets.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

Although well suited to the growing of sugar beets with respect to climatic and soil conditions Minnesota has been among the more backward of the producing states in extending its acreage. At present there is only one beet sugar mill in the state, compared with three in Iowa near the Minnesota line and six in Wisconsin. Minnesota is one of the states where sugar beets can be grown under humid conditions; farther west irrigation usually is necessary.

In addition to the very important factors of soil and climate, the question of labor and the availability of a sugar factory should receive careful consideration in any locality where beet growing on a commercial scale is contemplated. Sugar beets require an unusual amount of hand labor, as will be seen from the following statements with reference to the growing of the crop. The labor may be obtained locally, but in most sugar beet areas it is necessary to import from other sections of the country, at least a part of the required hand labor. The delivery of the beets at the mill involves a consideration of both the wagon roads and the railroads. If the wagon roads are good, beets may be grown three or four miles from the mill without making the cost of delivering excessive. As a rule it is not considered profitable to haul beets by rail more than from 50 to 100 miles, depending upon condition.

Any Soil is Satisfactory.

Provided the climatic conditions are favorable, any good soil if properly drained, fertilized and otherwise fitted as a seed and root bed will produce satisfactory sugar beets. Sandy soils and clay loams, however, are generally regarded as the best soils. In general, more depends upon the physical condition of the soil and the way in which it is worked than upon its strict classification. The physical condition depends upon a number of factors which are of prime importance in the selection and preparation of the ground. For example, the soil should be well drained and at the same time it should be capable of holding a sufficient amount of moisture for the needs of the beets. Even the so-called muck soils will produce good beets if they are well drained and properly worked. On the other hand, the loamy soils will sometimes produce very poor crops if not well drained or if otherwise improperly handled by working when too wet or too dry.

Hardpan soils should be avoided, especially if they are so near the surface that they will interfere with the proper growth and development of the roots. Very porous or gravelly subsoils which permit leaching will not give the best results with sugar beets any more than with other crops. The field selected should be reasonably free of weeds, as extreme toughness of ground adds very materially to the cost of growing beets. The field, too, must be kept free of weeds if satisfactory results are to be obtained at all.

Other things being equal, an average temperature of 70 degrees F. during the growing season, which is usually from May to September, inclusive, will give the best results so far as the sugar content of the beets is concerned. With a high temperature the sugar does not seem to form readily, and if the temperature is too low the beets do not grow well and the tonnage is correspondingly low. Spring and fall temperatures, too, have much to do with the success or failure of beet culture.

Favorable for Sugar.

Cold nights and moderately warm days in the latter part of summer and in the fall are most favorable for the storage of sugar in the beets. The great danger from extreme cold in the fall is that the beets may be frozen in the ground. Growers should aim to get their beets out of the ground and delivered to the sugar company or protected from the cold before freezing weather sets in. If the roots themselves freeze after they are harvested, no great damage will result, provided they remain frozen until they are worked through the mill, but if they alternately freeze and thaw, they will soon blacken, decay and become worthless for sugar-making purposes. Frozen beets should not be put into the factory sheds with the expectation of leaving them for any length of time, as they will certainly spoil. The only safe way is to get the beets out of the ground before they freeze and put sufficient covering over them so that they will not be frosted.

Two important points in plowing for sugar beets should be kept in mind, namely, the time and depth. Experience has shown that the best results are generally obtained by plowing for beets in the fall. Taking advantage of this fact, the beet grower will try to arrange his work and his crop rotation so that he can plow his beet ground in the fall, provided the soil and weather conditions will permit. It has been demonstrated that deep plowing, especially of the heavier soils, if done in the fall, will give the best results for sugar beets. If the soil is deep and well supplied with humus and is plowed in the fall, it is hardly possible to plow too deep, provided the ground is in condition to be plowed at all. If the soil is shallow and underlain with clay, it will be better to plow only one or two inches deeper than usual, and then use the subsoil plow. If the plowing must be delayed until spring it is not advisable to plow more than one or two inches deeper than the ground was previously plowed.

Object of Plowing.

The whole object of plowing should be to make a deep, rich seed and root bed which can be penetrated easily by the beet roots and from which the plants can draw an abundant supply of food necessary for their constant and rapid growth. The seed bed must be firm enough to hold the plants securely in place and to retain a good supply of moisture, but not so compact that the air cannot circulate freely through it. If the seed bed is carefully selected, properly supplied with humus, and thoroughly prepared, the success of the crop is more than half assured.

Considering the yield and quality of the beets as compared with the cost of growing them with different widths of rows, 20 inches is generally satisfactory, although this width of row requires a special cultivator. Good, strong land that is capable of growing a satisfactory row of beets every twenty inches will soon pay for a beet cultivator in the extra yield when compared with the wider row in which a corn cultivator could be used. Shallow planting, one-half to three-fourths of an inch, is advisable provided there is moisture enough in the soil to produce germination.

At present practically all sugar beet seed is planted in solid rows. As soon as the plants have developed from four to six leaves, they must be spaced and thinned, since they must stand one in a place at intervals of from eight to twelve inches in the row in order to produce beet roots satisfactory in yield and quality.

The beets should receive a good hoeing at the time they are thinned, the earth loosened on all sides and weeds carefully removed. The number of subsequent hoeings will depend upon local conditions. Cultivation should begin just as soon as the rows can be followed. It is usually possible to cultivate once before the spacing and thinning are done. A second should be given as soon as they straighten up after thinning. No fixed rule can be laid down as to the number of cultivations that a field should receive during the season. This must be governed by soil and weather conditions and by the presence of weeds.

Operation of Harvesting.

Harvesting sugar beets consists of three distinct operations—lifting, pulling and topping. The lifting is usually done either with a double-pointed implement somewhat resembling a two-pointed plow, or by means of a side lifter, which is a small shoe or plow on the end of a long shank. After the beets are loosened they should be thrown into piles. In knocking off the earth from the beets care should be taken not to bruise the roots unnecessarily. In topping, the beets should be cut off squarely at the lowest leaf scar. This is usually done with one stroke of a heavy knife.

The beets should then be covered to prevent evaporation. The roots work much better in the mill if they are kept fresh and crisp, and they lose considerable weight if exposed to the sun and wind.

CHAPTER XVII

Complications.

"Either you are working too hard, Alexander," said Lady Erythea, inspecting her nephew through her lorgnette, as they rose from the luncheon table, "or the burglary has been a greater shock to your nerves than I should have suspected. I do not like to see you wearing that pallid and constrained expression. Your sister will be quite concerned about you. She arrives, you remember, by the evening train."

"Diana!" said Mr. Lambe. "I had quite forgotten that she was due here." Georgina started slightly, and looked perturbed.

"She is coming," said Lady Erythea, "to investigate the Jervaulx ghost. Certainly, she might have done it before. But I believe she has only recently become a member of the Psychological Research society. She is quite enthusiastic about it—so far as Diana can be enthusiastic about anything. Indeed, her letter is so technical as to be unintelligible to me."

"I did not know there was a ghost here," said Georgina, wide-eyed.

"I should not like to say that there is. But it is a tradition in the family, and has been well vouched for. I have never seen it. Diana seems to imply," added Lady Erythea a little acidly, "that only those who are advanced, and in tune with the infinite, see such things. If she thinks she is more spiritual than I, she is welcome to try. She will discover nothing whatever." Lady Erythea turned to her nephew. "Bertrand de Jussac is coming also."

"De Jussac?" cried Alexander, starting at her.

"Yes. You know him, I think."

"I have met him, of course," said Mr. Lambe dryly. "I should have thought this was the last house that so frivolous a person would wish to visit. Why is he coming? Surely he is not interested in the ghost?"

"In the ghost—no," said Lady Erythea, with a faint yet serene smile, "but possibly his interest may arise. I approve him. A young man of excellent standing and irreproachable descent."

"Descent is the word," said Mr. Lambe rather curtly, and left the room.

"How long is—Diana going to stay here?" Georgina asked anxiously.

"Two days—but it is possible she may be persuaded to prolong her visit," said her ladyship placidly.

"What is the Vicomte de Jussac like?"

"D'Artagnan—in the flesh. With a touch, perhaps, of Porthos. The type which it is a good woman's mission to reform. But this is outside your province, Almee," she said abruptly, and laid a hand on the girl's shoulder.

"Go, my dear child, and get your cousin away from his books. Take him for a drive and some fresh air."

Georgina left the room obediently. But instead of seeking Alexander, she hunted, with an agitated face, for Almee.

"Hullo! What's the trouble now?" exclaimed Almee. "I say, Georgie, dear, I'm beastly sorry about being in the arbor. I couldn't help—"

"Oh, never mind that now!" broke in Georgina distractedly. "A much worse thing's happened. I knew how it would be. Lady Diana Lambe is coming; she'll be here in an hour or two."

Rapidly she repeated the news concerning the two expected guests. Almee received it with consternation.

"Cold Lambe!" she exclaimed. "Coming here? As if I hadn't enough to bear without that! It's the worst news yet."

"Wh-what did you call her?"

"It's what everybody calls her in London—Cold Lambe. It fits her like a glove. A beautiful, frigid beast!"

"Almee! She knows you, doesn't she?"

"Of course. She lives in town. She's the only one of the Lambes I do know. And Diana hates me, and—well, I've never pretended to like her, either. She's perfectly pitiless; she'll give me away like a shot, and flatten me out. She'll be all over it!"

"Let us hope," said Georgina breathlessly, "that Monsieur de Jussac will—er—distract her attention; keep her occupied. Lady Erythea says—"

Almee sat on the bed and exploded with laughter.

"That aunt of mine is incorrigible!" she gasped. "I tell you it's perfect rot. You might as well try to melt an iceberg fresh from the Pole. This French vicomte won't stand the slightest chance."

"Do you know him, too?"

"I've heard of him. They say he's rather a—er—a rip. I expect that means he's a good sort. But Diana—heaven preserve us! Well, she probably won't know me in this rig, but she'll know you're in the wrong horse. And then zizz! boom!—up we all go in the air! You and Billy, and me—and Alexander!"

Georgina sat down and pressed her hand to her forehead.

"Almee," she said faintly, "the burglary, and all the rest of it, has upset me. I don't feel well. I—I have headache, and I can't come down to dinner. I shall go to bed."

"What a trump you are!" said Almee, kissing her with intense affection. "It's the very thing. I'm so sorry, Georgie. It'll be beastly dull for you in bed, dear."

"I shall like a little dullness," said Georgina pathetically, as she left the room, "it will be restful. Goodbye, dear. You will have to keep out of Diana's way as best you can."

"I'll take jolly good care I do," murmured Almee fervently, as she put her cap straight. "Even Billy can't help this time!"

CHAPTER XVIII

"Cold Lambe!"

Lady Diana might have been the original of that tedious young woman who was described by the poet as "divinely tall and most divinely fair." She was without doubt strikingly beautiful, a type of the large and very pale blonde. But an atmosphere of frigidity surrounded her, which many people found repellent.

"My dear aunt," she said calmly, entering the drawing room and kissing Lady Erythea, "so good of you to have me for this flying visit. Alexander, how are you?" She touched her brother's cheek with her lips.

"You will have a clear field for your investigations, my dear," said Lady Erythea, "and I hope the advances you have made in psychic science will—er—bring you to terms with the ghost. But I doubt it. By the way, your cousin Almee is here, as I told you. But she is unwell and is keeping her room. I am rather anxious about her. Incidentally, we shall have another guest; I expect Monsieur de Jussac today."

"Monsieur de Jussac," exclaimed Diana. She paused. Lady Erythea watched her somewhat keenly. "What brings him here?" said Diana.

"He is very anxious," said Lady Erythea glibly, "to examine the Lambe collection of armor. We have a suit of mail which is believed to have been captured at Crécy; there is a tradition that it belonged to one of the De Jussac family."

Lady Diana looked incredulous.

"And I understand he is interested in psychic matters, and anxious to improve his knowledge."

"That is something in his favor," said Diana with suspicion.

"I expect that is his car," said Lady Erythea.

A rakish automobile of semi-racing type was observed sweeping along the park drive. The Vicomte de Jussac had motored direct from town.

A minute later he presented himself. Bertrand de Jussac was tall, and for his age, rather full-bodied. His complexion was healthily ruddy, he had a little black mustache and a jolly, roving dark eye. In spite of his very material appearance, he had undoubtedly the bel air. He raised Lady Erythea's skinny fingers to his lips.

"Enchanted, dear lady, to pay homage to you sur vos terres. How very amiable of you to invite me!"

Lady Erythea bestowed on him the smile she reserved for elder sons.

"Charming to have you. You know my niece, surely?"

Bertrand's little start of surprise was admirably done. He bent low over Diana's hand, but refrained from kissing it.

"But this is delightful!" exclaimed Bertrand. "You told me in town, Lady armor than I do. Why not show it to Monsieur de Jussac, so that he may commence his studies. You will find most of it in the hall."

"I think Monsieur de Jussac had better pursue his own investigations, for I shall be fully occupied with mine," said Diana, "and for the present I will retire to my room, if you will excuse me, Aunt."

She glided majestically through the doorway.

The Vicomte's eyes followed Diana's departure.

"Adorable blonde!" he mused. "The invincible phlegme britannique. But it is the icy, inaccessible peak that spurs the courage of the mountaineer!"

He sat down and made himself particularly pleasant to Lady Erythea.

When the party of four assembled for dinner, Lady Erythea was amiable and resplendent in purple, Diana frigid and ethereal in pale yellow, while Alexander at first wore the air of the Jackdaw of Rheims molting under the abbot's curse. But Bertrand de Jussac, looking like a revived D'Artagnan in evening dress, contrived to chase heaviness away.

His merry, infectious laugh and quick sallies uplifted the spirits of the others. He made a deeper impression than ever on Diana Lambe, and with the usual perversity that seized her when in mixed company, she felt it due to herself to become the more openly hostile.

"I do not understand how you can defend the spirit of the age," she said coldly, in answer to a sally that made even Alexander smile. "The days of chivalry are dead. What romance can one attach to the modern young man? But in the days of heraldry, when men were splendid in helm and gorget and camail—ah, then," she exclaimed, with a rare touch of enthusiasm, "romance flourished indeed—"

"Talking of mail," said Lady Erythea blandly, "the ghost always appears in a complete suit of it, though his coming is noiseless as a breath of mist. I regret to tell you, Vicomte, that he came to a bad end through a romantic passion."

"Why regret?" protested Bertrand. "I will wager 'twas worth it."

"Because he was reputed—or disreputed—to be an ancestor of yours; a De Jussac taken as hostage by Sir Piers Lambe—after a most gallant resistance," said Lady Erythea smiling.

"While here he engaged the affections of a daughter of the house, and being discovered, was permitted to don his armor and debate the matter with Sir Piers. His end was—tragic."

"No end can be wholly tragic, if reached by the path of a great passion. To every rose its thorn. I applaud him!" Bertrand raised his glass. "To you, nameless ancestor!"

He replaced the glass appreciatively, and Mr. Tarbeaux refilled it. "Touching this ancestor, Lady Diana—"

But his hostess had given the signal, the ladies rose, and the two men were left alone—a custom that still lingered at Jervaulx. De Jussac did not find Mr. Lambe a very exhilarating companion, but Alexander, though drinking only water, kept him at the table an unconscionable time. When eventually they reached the drawing room Alexander departed at once to his library, and Bertrand found that Diana had retired.

"I must apologize for my niece, Vicomte, but she has gone to her room; to achieve the proper psychic attitude, or whatever she calls it, for her inquiries as to this absurd ghost," said Lady Erythea. "She can, of course, do nothing tonight. And as it is late, and you will not wish to sit up talking to an old woman—"

"Most spirituelle of hostesses," protested the Vicomte, "I should like to sit and talk to you all night, if you will allow me—"

Diana put her head inside the door. "I told you, Aunt," she said, "that my stupid maid lost herself at the terminus, and I cannot retire unattended. May I have yours?"

"My own incumbrance has been away for two days," said her aunt, "but we have a parlor maid who really attends to one's hair very soothingly; she did mine last night." Lady Erythea pressed the bell.

The butler appeared, "Tarbeaux, you will tell Snooks to attend Lady Diana in her room."

"Very good, m' lady."

Mr. Tarbeaux found Almee on her way upstairs to bed, and gave her the order. Almee was astonished, and secretly panic-stricken.

"This has absolutely finished it!" she reflected. "I might as well bolt at once." Suddenly she came to a resolution. "But—I'd better go. I shall run against her sooner or later. And anyhow she'll be alone. Di's such a fool she may not know me."

Almee reached the bedchamber, where Lady Diana had just arrived. She scarcely glanced at the parlor maid, and donning a light wrap, seated herself before the mirror.

"Take down my hair," she said curtly, "and if your fingers are cold, warm them first at the fire. I abhor being touched by cold fingers."

Almee's fingers itched to warm themselves by a totally different method. But she held them to the fire, and then set about her task. She had hardly commenced when Diana's pale blue eyes, catching sight of her in the mirror, opened in a stare of amazement.

"Who did they say you were?" she said in a grating voice.

"S-Snooks, m' lady," said Almee, dropping a curtsey.

"Snooks! You are Almee Scroope! Don't deny it!" said Diana fiercely. "Don't attempt to deceive me. I should know you in a thousand. What is the meaning of this—masquerade?"

Almee surrendered.

"Yes, Di—it's me! For goodness' sake don't shout." For once Almee lost her head. "Aunt doesn't know I'm here, you see. Don't give me away. I'll try and explain—"

"I don't want your explanation. You will explain to Aunt!" rasped Diana.

"I can see by your manner there is something more in this than mere folly! I've had my suspicions, from what Aunt has said—"

"Di," exclaimed Almee imploringly, "there's no use trying to hide it now—"

When the party of four assembled for dinner, Lady Erythea was amiable and resplendent in purple, Diana frigid and ethereal in pale yellow, while Alexander at first wore the air of the Jackdaw of Rheims molting under the abbot's curse. Almee's fingers itched to warm themselves by a totally different method. But she held them to the fire, and then set about her task. She had hardly commenced when Diana's pale blue eyes, catching sight of her retired. Almee made her way to Georgina's bedroom door, and rapped stealthily for some time, for the door was locked. It seemed impossible to arouse Georgina, and after a lengthy effort Almee desisted. Lady Erythea's room was next door, and even the deaf hear when they are not wanted to.

Finally, Almee crept down into the hall, where the suits of armor loomed grimly in the half-light, a silent, threatening host. It was impossible to get out of the house. All conceivable outlets were secured, since the burglary. Almee passed through the paneled dining hall. The darkness got on her nerves. She switched on a single electric light, and looked round her hopelessly.

"Two or three more days, and I believe Billy would have pulled me through," she said dully. "I know he would. Now, it's all up. I'm done. And I can't get to Billy."

Almee dropped into an armchair, buried her face in her hands, and began to cry. She cried like a child that has hurt itself.

A large figure stole into the room with a remarkably noiseless step. It was the Vicomte de Jussac. He started as he caught sight of the forlorn figure in the chair, and stared in surprise. The spectacle of a damsel in distress at once roused generous sentiments in the beau sabreur.

He crossed the room and seated himself on the arm of the chair.

"Away, dull care," murmured Bertrand. "Such eyes as those—I cannot see them but I am sure they are adorable—were never made for weeping. Tell me your sorrow, ma petite," he said gently; "it shall be swept away!"

"I'm in awful trouble!" sobbed Almee.

"Alas! But let me help you. Here am I, a big, gross fellow, but very capable, sent by the gods to aid you. It is what I am for!"

Almee dropped her hands and stared at him, startled.

"Are you Monsieur de Jussac?" she stammered.

"Infinitely at your service, mademoiselle."

Almee's eyes searched his face. It was rather closer to hers than appeared necessary, but it was undoubtedly sympathetic.

"Tell me!" he murmured.

Almee hesitated.

"Well, I will tell you. I've got to tell somebody, or I shall go mad!" said Almee with a rush. "Anyway they'll know it tomorrow. I'm not the parlor maid. I'm Almee Scroope—Lady Erythea's niece."

"Hein!" exclaimed the Vicomte. He rose to his feet, staring at her, and twisted his mustache—a habit in moments of bewilderment.

Almee plunged into her tale breathlessly. She made it brief; it was also very jumbled. But the thread managed to unravel itself. Before she finished, Bertrand turned away. His shoulders quivered and shook, the back of his neck was crimson.

"You're laughing!" cried Almee accusingly.

"But no!" gasped the Vicomte, choking. "It is grief. Grief and sympathy—for you—mademoiselle."

"You are laughing!" said Almee stepping in front of him. "Go on then—laugh! If you can laugh at that, you're—you're all right! Billy says—"

She checked herself, and suddenly began to laugh, too; a very rainbow of laughter and tears. "But what's to be done? It's the finish!"

Bertrand turned and caught her by the hands.

"We shall find a way!" he cried. "Courage! Bah! but that is an imbecile remark. If you had not courage you would not be here. Who should betray you?"

"Diana," Almee told him of the encounter in the bedroom.

"It cannot be! She has a heart. Under that icily exquisite exterior, a warm heart beats. It must be softened."

"A heart? Di? She's a—"

Almee stopped just in time. "I'm afraid it's quite hopeless. I only told you because I was in despair."

"A De Jussac never despairs! Especially when there is a charming little lady to be rescued from the Philistines. The difficulty must be overcome at any cost. Ah!" he exclaimed, coming near to her. "I believe I have it! Listen—"

"Oh!" said Almee with a gasp. She had become conscious that they were not alone.

Alexander stood before them, in a black dressing gown, a candle in his hand. He only needed bell and book to be the very image of an abbot in the act of pronouncing excommunication. De Jussac started violently, and frowned. Alexander took no notice of him; his eyes were fixed on Almee.

"Yes," gasped Diana. "Don't—speak so loud, Almee—"

CHAPTER XIX

Arms and the Man.

The housekeeper looked bewildered. Diana's wrath agitated her. Almee was standing quietly in the middle of the room, her hands behind her.

"I dare not disturb her ladyship now that she has retired for the night and her room is locked," said the housekeeper; "my orders are strict. May I suggest that you see her yourself, my lady? If there is anything else I can do—"

Diana paused, and appeared to reflect.

"No," she said curtly. "You can go." When the housekeeper had left the room, Diana turned to Almee.

"You will come with me now—to Aunt!"

"I'll do nothing of the sort," retorted Almee defiantly. "Go and speak to her yourself, if you want to. Rouse her out of bed now, and tell her all you know. I shall get it hot; I'm used to that—but there's one consolation, she'll jolly well flatten you out, too!"

Again Diana hesitated. She saw herself roaring accusations into the ear-trumpet of an infuriated aunt newly aroused from slumber.

"I am tired, and I do not wish for a scene at this time of night," she said, fixing Almee with a malignant eye. "On consideration, I shall leave this affair till the morning. And now—you may go."

She stood away from the door.

"Won't you be decent about it, Di?" said Almee imploringly. "I don't care for myself, but it's going to be awful for Dad. I—I—if you'd only let me tell you—"

"I have no desire to listen to a discreditable story, at which, no doubt, I could give a very good guess. As for your father, he must face the consequences of having allowed you to behave as you do. I have no more to say," replied Diana with cold disdain.

Almee's eyes blazed at her.

"You utter beast, Di!" she said, and flung out of the room.

For half an hour Almee mused upon the situation, and mentally pronounced it hopeless. The dreary bedroom became impossible to her. She opened the door; the house was in darkness; everyone, apparently, had retired.

Almee made her way to Georgina's bedroom door, and rapped stealthily for some time, for the door was locked. It seemed impossible to arouse Georgina, and after a lengthy effort Almee desisted. Lady Erythea's room was next door, and even the deaf hear when they are not wanted to.

Finally, Almee crept down into the hall, where the suits of armor loomed grimly in the half-light, a silent, threatening host. It was impossible to get out of the house. All conceivable outlets were secured, since the burglary. Almee passed through the paneled dining hall. The darkness got on her nerves. She switched on a single electric light, and looked round her hopelessly.

"Two or three more days, and I believe Billy would have pulled me through," she said dully. "I know he would. Now, it's all up. I'm done. And I can't get to Billy."

Almee dropped into an armchair, buried her face in her hands, and began to cry. She cried like a child that has hurt itself.

A large figure stole into the room with a remarkably noiseless step. It was the Vicomte de Jussac. He started as he caught sight of the forlorn figure in the chair, and stared in surprise. The spectacle of a damsel in distress at once roused generous sentiments in the beau sabreur.

He crossed the room and seated himself on the arm of the chair.

"Away, dull care," murmured Bertrand. "Such eyes as those—I cannot see them but I am sure they are adorable—were never made for weeping. Tell me your sorrow, ma petite," he said gently; "it shall be

SENATOR JOHNSON DIES AT MEMPHIS

The Informer man and many other Hedley friends were much grieved last Saturday to learn that W. A. Johnson had passed away suddenly some time Friday night at his home in Memphis. He was ill only a few minutes, we are told.

Mr. Johnson was one of the Parbuckle's most prominent and useful citizens. As newspaper man and politician he has gained recognition throughout Texas and the Nation as a leader and a doer of things. In both these fields he has accomplished much that will redound to his honor and to the good of the people. He was never found on the wrong side of any moral issue, never straddled the fence. His town, his State and his church have lost a valiant soldier whose place will be hard to fill.

His sorrowing widow, son and daughter have the deep sympathy of a host of friends and well wishers.

HOBO Kidney & Bladder Remedy Gets Results

Like a reprieve from the death sentence came this unusual herb remedy to Ethel Beams of Silsbee, Texas. If you are afflicted with similar troubles her letter will show you.

"Silsbee, Texas
Nov. 22, 1922

I was treated for about one year by physicians in Silsbee and Beaumont and they suggested taking me to Galveston to one of the greatest specialists in the South, and he pronounced my case as Bright's Disease and Diabetes, said that I would not be living in ninety days. Several friends recommended Hobo Kidney and Bladder Remedy to me. The third bottle of Hobo began to relieve me, and after taking fourteen bottles I was cured. The last analysis showed there was no albumin or sugar in the urine. I can say that Hobo saved my life and gladly recommend it to anyone suffering from like troubles.

Ethel Beams,

Hobo is a new and effective balm for kidney and bladder treatment. Made of herbs—no alcohol to irritate—no drugs to form habit. Sold and recommended by good druggists everywhere.

BUILDINGS SAFE FROM FIRE

Concrete Blocks Used in South Dakota Because of Availability and Simplicity.

The use of permanent building materials is coming to be standard practice among the more progressive farmers of the country who appreciate the economy which can be gained thereby.

The accompanying photograph illustrates some farm buildings in South Dakota. The owner of the farm having passed through the pioneer stage and being ready to improve his holding with modern buildings uses concrete block as a building material because of their availability, simplicity and permanence.

Buildings of this kind resist the ravages of storm, fire and decay and are an economical investment from every standpoint. The barn roof has been built of frame construction since the cost of the necessary fireproof frame to support a fireproof roof would necessitate uneconomical maintenance charges.

PROPER RATION FOR CALVES

Ground Oats and Oil Meal Are Favored in Small Amounts at Start, Gradually Increasing.

A good grain ration for the calves will be ground oats—seven or eight pounds to one pound of oil meal. For a few days feed one pound per head per day and be sure all calves get their share, when you can increase the grain to all they will clean up twice daily. Feed silage to the calves when they begin eating well by feeding all they will clean up in half an hour. Much trouble is always avoided in getting calves going along well if you are careful in the starting of the calves on new feeds and increased rations. About two pounds of silage per head to start them on would be sufficient, noting that all the calves get to eating. The calves will pay well for the time spent in bedding them well and giving them comfortable quarters during cold snowy weather. As soon as the calves are eating regularly and well and cleaning up the feed before they leave the trough, they should gain between one and a half pounds to two pounds daily. If they are soggy, close to the ground kind of calves, they should do well for you and make baby beef.

After a few weeks, part of the ration, say one-third to one-half, could be ground barley or corn. They will certainly not make enough gain in flesh on silage alone.

SIMPLE REMEDY FOR SCOURS

According to New Jersey Specialists Trouble is Result of Carelessness in Feeding.

Ordinary scours in calves are a simple digestive disorder, the result of carelessness in feeding, according to New Jersey dairy specialists. They should be attended to at once. Cut the feed in half and give a dose of castor oil (one-half pint). Clean and disinfect all utensils.

White scours is a germ disease and is usually fatal. Prevention methods constitute clean quarters for cows at calving time, thoroughly disinfecting the calf's navel at birth and clean quarters for calves with plenty of sunlight.

A good remedy when calf scours are prevalent is as follows:
One ounce blismuth subnitrate.
One-half ounce salol.
Three ounces bicarbonate of soda.

Give one teaspoonful of this mixture in one-half pint of milk three times daily.

Good Sire Will Help

The fixed charges of maintaining a cow that milks 4,000 pounds of milk a year is but little less than those of maintaining a cow that milks 6,000 pounds of milk. A good herd sire will put the herd on the road to cheaper production by increasing production.

Milk Feed Cost Varies. Dairy improvement association records show that the feed cost of 100 pounds of milk varies from 40 cents to $1.30, depending largely on the production of the herd.

BARN PLANNED FOR LARGE DAIRY HERD

Building Will House More Than 50 Cows Comfortably.

HAS ALL MODERN EQUIPMENT

Makes a Fine Addition to Any Farm Group—Well Ventilated, Weather-Proof Stable That Will Keep Cows Productive.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

Farmers whose principal business it is to produce milk need well-constructed and fully equipped buildings to house the herd if they are to get the greatest profit out of their activities. For it is a well ventilated, weatherproof stable in which the cows are most comfortable and the feed they consume is turned into milk.

The barn shown in the accompanying illustration was designed and built for an Illinois dairyman. It has single stalls for 50 cows, pens

6-inch extension. By this arrangement the calves are shut away from their mothers and can be cared for separately. Also by having a home to themselves they are less liable to contract diseases than the youngsters are prone to get when housed with the older and more hardy animals.

While this barn is rather large, it has no waste space. Its width permits two rows of stalls with a driveway between them and the correct amount of space along either side for the litter alleys. The silos house enough silage to carry the animals through the winter, while the mow space holds the roughage and bedding necessary for 50 cows.

But what is more important is that this barn will protect the animals during the cold months—keep them warm and healthy and at a high state of productivity. That is what makes it a profitable investment.

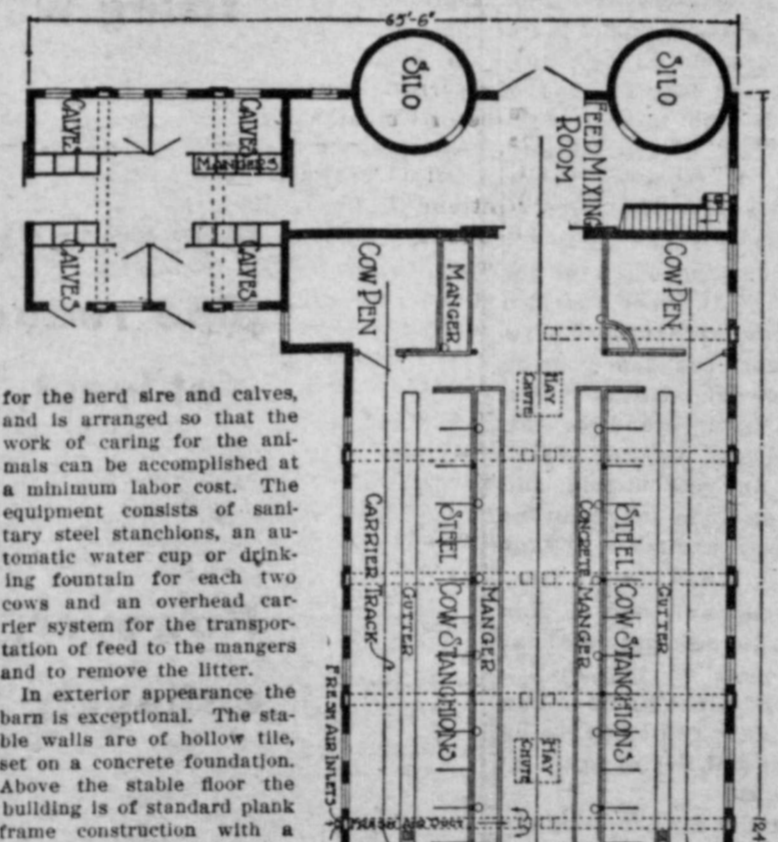

Farm buildings such as this are carefully planned by experienced architects. Lumber dealers, builders and local architects have plans for buildings like this ready for their clients to build from.

SOURCE OF HER INSPIRATION

Youthful Writer Had No Use for the "Lesser Lights" of the Literary World.

A lady, young in years and young in her work, writes the fashion notes for a monthly publication, says a writer in the Philadelphia Ledger. She loves to talk of her work, especially to men, and here is a sample of a recent conversation wherein she figured.

"To this man, who had been immediately claimed as a listener after his infor the herd sire and calves, and is arranged so that the work of caring for the animals can be accomplished at a minimum labor cost. The equipment consists of sanitary steel stanchions, an automatic water cup or drinking fountain for each two cows and an overhead carrier system for the transportation of feed to the mangers and to remove the litter.

In exterior appearance the barn is exceptional. The stable walls are of hollow tile, set on a concrete foundation. Above the stable floor the building is of standard plank frame construction with a gambrel roof that adds to its beauty. Ventilation in the mow floor is provided by four projecting windows in the roof, while the roof projection at the end provides for a hay carrier for mowing away the roughage needed by the animals throughout the year.

It is the stable floor, however, that has been given the most thought to make it modern. A suction ventilation system is installed, fresh air intakes admitting air to the stable and the suction ventilators on the roof carrying out the foul air. This system of ventilation provides a continuous supply of fresh air, without drafts. The single stalls are set so that the cows face in. The numerous windows admit sunlight to the gutters, helping to keep the barn sanitary and free from disease. A continuous supply of fresh water is carried to the drinking fountains by a water pressure system which also provides water for hosing out the gutters and washing the stable floor.

Probably the greatest labor-saver in a dairy barn is the overhead carrier system, by which the feed is carried to the animals, and the manure removed with but one handling. It will be noted by the floor plan that the carrier system leads to the feed room between the two hollow tile silos. By this method the ensilage is thrown down, loaded into the carrier and transported directly to the mangers. The feed room also has bins and storage space above for the ground feeds that are used to give the cows a balanced, milk-producing ration.

The main portion of the building is 36 feet wide and 124 feet long. The calf pens at the end form a 29-foot introduction to her, she began to tell of her hopes and aspirations. It wouldn't be long, she felt sure, before she would be recognized as an authority, and she was hopeful that her articles would be copied far and wide.

The man assured her that he thought fame would surely come and then she told him that not only was she anxious to have good fashions, but also she wished to become a brilliant writer.

"Then, of course, you have read Herbert Spencer and Robert Louis Stevenson on style," he responded with a laugh, thinking to help her out.

"Oh, no, I haven't, and I don't think I will need to. I go to the best stores for mine."

Don't Take Calomel! "Dodson's Liver Tone" Acts Better and Doesn't Gripe, Salivate or Make You Sick—Don't Lose a Day's Work—Read Guarantee!

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. It's horrible! Take a dose of the dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver, which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you are sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated, or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone to-night.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store and get a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone for a few cents. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it can not salivate or make you sick.

Notice is hereby given that an election will be held on the 19th day of May, A. D. 1928, at the Chamberlain School House, in Common School District No. 20 of this County as established by order of the Board of County School Trustees of this County, of date the 5th day of February, A. D. 1916, which is recorded in Volume No. 1, pages 3 and 4 of the School District Records of Donley County, Texas, to determine whether a majority of the legally qualified, property tax paying voters of that district desire to tax themselves for the purpose of supplementing the state school fund apportioned to said district and to determine whether the Commissioners' Court of this county shall be authorized to levy, assess and collect annually a tax of and at the rate of not exceeding One Dollar ($1.00) on the One Hundred Dollars ($100.00) valuation of taxable property in said district for said purpose.

Horace Reed has been appointed presiding officer for said election and he shall select two judges and two clerks to assist him in holding the same, and he shall within five days after said election has been held make due return thereof to the Commissioners Court of this county as is required by law for holding a general election.

All persons who are legally qualified voters of this State and County and who are resident property tax payers in said District shall be entitled to vote at said election, and all voters who favor taxation for school purposes shall have written or printed on their ballots the words:

"For School Tax "

And those opposed to such taxation shall have written or printed on their ballots the words:

"Against School Tax "

Said election was ordered by the County Judge of this county by order made on twelfth day of April, A. D. 1928, and this notice is given in pursuance of said order.

Dated the 14th day of April, A. D. 1928

H. C. Brumley, Sheriff
Donley County, Texas.

CITATION

The State of Texas.

To the Sheriff or Any Constable of Donley County—Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summon L. E. Crowder by making publication of this citation once in each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, if there be one published there in, but if not, then in the nearest county where a newspaper is published, to appear before me, Leon O. Lewis, Justice of the Peace of Justice Precinct Number Two in Donley county, Texas, at a regular term of the Justice's Court for said Precinct No. Two in said county of Donley, to be held at my office in the town of Clarendon, in the county of Donley, on the 30th day of April, A. D. 1928, to answer the suit of W. E. Bray, Plaintiff against L. E. Crowder, Defendant, being numbered 1205 on the docket of said Court, the plaintiff's demand being for the sum of $15.00 due upon a verified and itemized account filed here with for work and labor done by plaintiff for defendant at the defendant's instance and request. Plaintiff alleges that said sum of $15.00 is due and unpaid, and asks for citation, judgment for debt, interest and costs, and for relief, general and special, etc.

Herein fail not, and of this writ make due return to the next regular term of the Justice Court for Precinct Number Two in said county of Donley, to be held on the 30th day of April, A. D. 1928, next.

Given under my hand this the 13th day of April, A. D. 1928.

Leon O. Lewis,
Justice of the Peace,
Precinct No. 2, Donley
County, Texas.
