BUCK CREEK OIL TEST MAKES GOOD PROGRESS

Messrs Hines and Duncan, who are under contract to complete the well, inform us that they are making good progress in getting ready to resume drilling out at Buck Creek.

The car load of casing from Oklahoma has arrived and is being hauled to the well, and the casing from the Bugbee test near Ashtola has nearly all been delivered at Buck Creek. Mr. Duncan, the driller, commenced running the casing Wednesday and says that he will get it all in the well by the latter part of this week.

Oil scouts and other oil representatives are much interested in this well and are constantly dropping into Hedley and out at the test to note progress.

The people of Hedley who have pushed so long and to the extent of their ability in getting this test completed, are highly elated over the progress being made.

McLEAN EDITOR HERE

The Informer man had the pleasure of having as his guest for a short while last Friday afternoon Editor T. A. Landers of the McLean News. Mr Landers is practically new at the newspaper game, but he is already doing things and getting results calculated to make us "old timers" sit up and take notice. His paper is one of the best small town weeklies in the state. Mr. Landers is a mighty pleasant man to meet, and is herewith invited to call again.

The Terry County Herald, at Brownfield, came to us the past week much improved in appearance. It having been changed from an eight column folio to a six column quarto. Editor A. J. Strickland has always given the people of his town and county a dandy good paper, and it's getting better 'n' better.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. McCants and two daughters, of Giles, visited in Hedley Wednesday.

J. B. Masterson has returned from Manitou, Colo., apparently in fine health and spirits.

BAND SECURED FOR EXPOSITION CONCERTS

A twenty piece band composed of Amarillo and professional musicians will furnish music for the Amarillo Tri State Exposition, according to Dave Derden who has been awarded the contract to furnish the band during the Exposition September 25 to 29, inclusive.

Mr. Derden states that the band he will assemble will be one of the best bands in the Panhandle and will be composed for the most part of local talent but a few professional musicians will be used.

The band will give two concerts daily of both standard and popular music.

HEDLEY CROPS ARE GOOD THOUGH NEEDING RAIN

T. R. Moreman was exhibiting some maize, kafir and feterita heads Monday that looked like blue ribbon winners, and positively refute the pessimistic opinion we have heard that our feed crop is just about "blowed up." According to all available information, our crops are in better shape than any others for hundreds of miles around. We need rain, but except in small spots our crops are not yet suffering to any great extent. The specimens mentioned at the beginning of this item were raised by J. R. and Will Ayers on one of Mr. Moreman's farms.

P. O. Johnson and son and J. T. Curtis and son returned the past week from a trip to Lubbock and various other points on the South Plains. P. O. says he may never see a Technological College, but he's done seen where one's going to be.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

IMPRESSIONS

THE introduction of a fresh object into a room, a new picture, a vase or a piece of furniture will frequently arouse a dormant mind and stir it to mental wakefulness.

The old, familiar things are quite forgotten in the presence of the late comer with its novel shape or color. If it happens to be comely, so much the better, for it exerts a more potent power in stirring new thoughts.

We all know the effect a bouquet produces in a dingy room unfamiliar with bright tints and sweet odors. The inmates of the house will pause frequently in their work to admire the flowers and poke their noses among them to inhale the fragrance.

An invalid will experience a new interest in life in the presence of a freshly cut bunch of roses. Melancholy thoughts vanish and the mind goes off picturing green swards where the sun is shining and the birds are singing.

Instead of the doleful tick of the clock, he hears the gurgling brooks, the tinkling bells of the herds in pastures and the rustling of quivering leaves.

Under the changed impression, the invalid's whole mentality is transformed. Hope lives anew. He has at last found the "lost chord" and proceeds to take up the refrain and carry it through to the end.

In mental life, especially, change of impression is necessary. Those who think most, whose mind are constantly employed, whether they know it or not, need more changes.

All change or transition of the thinking faculties from one state to another acts as a stimulus. The more pronounced the change, the greater the awakening effect.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

LITTLE DIFFERENCE

IN THIS world there are more than a billion and a half people, most of them 80 per cent or more like you. They have eyes and ears and arms and legs. They need the same kind of food, and take the same kind of meals to get it.

They love and hate, and fight and quarrel, and laugh and cry. They marry and have children. They see the same sky and the same sun and the same moon and stars. They are subject to heat and cold and pain and sorrow.

What chance have you got to rise above that deadly average? A very excellent chance, indeed. For 20 per cent of you is unlike that of the rest of humanity, and that 20 per cent is in your brain.

The head of Darwin and the head of the man who made his shoes were so greatly different—outside. But they were tremendously different—inside.

It is the difference between you and the rest of the world that will lift you above the average—if you are to be lifted at all.

If the difference is in your favor, it will count. And it need not be a great difference.

If you work while the average man loaf, you will surpass him. If you think while his brain is idle, you will surpass him very rapidly.

The disposition of most people to

It is not our failures that ruin us, but our fear and tardiness in making new beginnings after failure. It isn't the fact that you're down that counts; it's how do you take it?

MIDSUMMER DISHES

THIS is the season when garden parties, porch parties and dinners at the country clubs flourish. It depends upon the ideas of the hostess whether the function be a breakfast, luncheon, tea, dinner, supper or just light refreshments.

A cake to serve with less than is delightful to the eye as well as to the palate is prepared from a rich cake batter, baked in small oblong tins cut into such shape, frosted with white frosting and decorated with stems of angelica cut into narrow strips, fluted six or eight cakes, topping the top with different colored cordial centers which may be purchased in any confectionery store. The effect is like a small, very garden and thus the cakes are named Flower Garden cakes.

Can Rise Above Circumstances. "He who wills can do," said the ancient philosopher. Life itself is largely exercise of will power, rather than the result of circumstance. To plead the latter is virtually to confess weakness of mind and heart.

THE LONELY

By GRACE E. HALL

THERE are so many lonely! Perhaps you do not know, Or maybe you have never thought, as on your way you go; Not all are gifted with the charm that wins your nod and smile, Thought you might find a noble mind—if you but paused a while.

Some grow by cultivation, but give no hint or glow, Unless consideration some kindly friend shall show; Then, like the leaves of some new book, fresh pages they unfold, And in surprise you analyze and find them purest gold.

There are so many lonely! You surely know a few Whose lives might broaden greatly through kindness shown by you; It need not cost in dollars—not much in any line, More cordial tone can hush a moan, like soothing anodyne.

loaf, to idle, to cultivate bad habits, is in your favor. If you do none of these things you cannot help stand out as an unusual man or woman.

If in addition you consciously try to do better in all things than the average, you will succeed in doing so. Remember that out of that billion and a half there are only a few who will be your active opponents. Those few will give you real competition, not competition in the food that success is made of.

Be better than the average. Similar as you are to most men on the outside of your head, try to be different inside of your head.

It will not be easy, but it will be worth doing.

Has Anyone Laughed At You Because

By ETHEL R. PEYSEP

You are afraid to try diving? Maybe their laughter will laugh you into it and, therefore, it may do you some good. Yet diving to the land-lubber certainly does look "dreadful". It takes a lot of good courage, polished up to glistening point, to throw yourself on your head in water! You are losing a good time by not making this "head-way", but maybe if the laughers keep it up you will dive out of queue!

SO Your get-away here is: To puzzle out your reasons for fright, kill them, and dive in!

REAL HOME-LIKE SMALL RESIDENCE

Plans Are Well Adapted to Any Type of Construction, Brick or Stucco Being Particularly Effective—Has All Conveniences.

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The reason for the appeal of this home is not far to seek. It fulfills the function of a home, without frills. Neither does it call for an extraordinary outlay for those details which, while they undoubtedly make for attractiveness, also add appreciably to the cost.

The porch is a roomy portico, sheltering the entrance doorway, and the door here gives access immediately to the living room—a fine large apartment 11 feet 6 inches by 24 feet, with a space for a fireplace at one end. The dining room is a well-proportioned room, with a triple-light window. Separating the kitchen from the dining room is a passageway which could be equipped with cupboards to serve as a butler's pantry. Note that the kitchen has a portion set off to hold the refrigerator, with a door for outside icing. There are two bedrooms, one 12 feet by 11 feet, and the other 10 feet 6 inches by 11 feet, and each has ample closet room. There is a linen closet off the hallway that connects these bedrooms with the bathroom.

While this house is shown for frame, it would appear to excellent advantage in stucco, or in a light-colored clay or cement brick. If finished in frame it should be preferably painted white or in a light cream or gray color, with white trimming. The terrace, which extends across the front, if equipped with flower boxes, will add a cheerful note of color and make the place yet more livable and attractive.

The windows, also, are a detail which should not be overlooked. Although the windows used here are attractive, an excellent effect could have been had if they were so made that the square paneled effect of the windows extended downwards to the center line; or the front windows could be handled as French doors, opening out on the terrace.

This handling of the windows would have some definite effect upon the decorative handling of the living room. It ought to be a very light-colored room; that is, the walls ought to have a light-toned painted, kalsomined or wallpaper covering. A plain cream or gray would go very well, and with long drapes at the window of some contrasting color, would form a decorative setting for the room and its other furnishings which would be attractive, indeed.

Observe that there is a window in the attic. This is a very small detail, but one often overlooked. It has a great deal to do with the comfort of the dwellers in this house can have or cannot have in the hot days of summer. A glass window, easily opened; or, better still, a louver window, which could remain open all summer long without having to be watched for closing when there was rainy or stormy weather, would help greatly to maintain a comfortable temperature in the living rooms of the house.

Shrubby is called for in the landscaping of a lot of any type or size, and more so when there is a question of making a house like this show up to the best advantage. Good landscaping of the home lot can relieve a lot of that impression of sameness which many desire, in order to have their particular place look truly individual. In the case of a house of this type, which is of no particular architectural period, but is simply sane and sensible as to design, proper landscaping with trees and shrubbery will bring out all its good points and make it look anything but plain.

FEWER CRIMES OF VIOLENCE

Criminals Now Prefer Swindling to Acts of Physical Brutality, According to English Official.

Swindling has taken the place of violence as the most prevalent type of crime, says Sir Leonard Dunning, inspector of constabulary for England.

"Crimes of violence have steadily decreased for years," says Sir Leonard in a report, "Modern crime is civilized and educated because the criminal of today knows that it is far safer and more profitable to swindle hundreds than to rob one by knocking him in the head."

It has been stated that there are hundreds of professional criminals in England whom the police are powerless to arrest. Many of these people derive very large incomes by trading upon the credulity of a certain section of wealthy people. In the vast majority of cases the criminals are never prosecuted either because of the difficulty of proving the fraud against them or because the people victimized do not want publicity.

One of the most popular means during the last few years has been for the criminal to gain entrance to vari-

The Secret Adversary

by Agatha Christie

JULIUS SLEUTHS

SYNOPSIS.—Realizing that she has a possible chance of being saved, as the Lusitania is being sunk, a stranger gives a young American girl a package which he asks her to deliver to the American ambassador in England. She is saved. In London, former Lieut. "Tommy" Beresford, and Miss Prudence Cowley—"Tuppence"—discharged army nurse, form an organization, "The Young Adventurers, Ltd." They are both broke and consequently ready for unorthodox methods. They write out an advertisement. Tuppence makes a business appointment with a man, Edward Whittington, who offers her easy employment, but on giving her name as "Jane Finn," which she had heard on the street, Whittington disappears. In answer to an advertisement signed "Jane Finn" the two receive notes from "Mr. Carter" and "Julius P. Hershelmer." Carter, a high government official, speaks of a mysterious "Mr. Brown" as head of the Bolsheviks in England, and engages the pair to find Jane Finn, who he is seeking for important reasons of state. Next day the pair visits Hershelmer, American millionaire. He is looking for his cousin, Jane Finn, who had disappeared after landing from the Lusitania's boats, and employs them to search for her. They discover a Mrs. Vandemeyer is a Lusitanian survivor. Tuppence recognizes Whittington in a caller on Mrs. Vandemeyer. Tommy trails him. Whittington leaves for France. Hershelmer follows him. Tommy trails Boris, Whittington's companion, to a house in Soho. He overhears details of a Bolshevik and labor plot to overturn the government. Success apparently depends on finding a secret treaty made between the allies during the war. Tommy is caught listening, and knocked senseless. Sensing sinister relations between Whittington and Mrs. Vandemeyer, Tuppence disguises herself and becomes a parlor maid. During a conversation between a visitor, "Boris," and Mrs. Vandemeyer, in which the name of Sir James Peel Edgerton, famous criminal lawyer, is mentioned, Tuppence hears talk of an "organization." Next day Edgerton visits Mrs. Vandemeyer, and on leaving advises Tuppence to give up her position, but refuses to give a reason.

CHAPTER VII

Julius Tells a Story.

Dressed appropriately, Tuppence duly sallied forth for her "afternoon out." Albert was in temporary abeyance, but Tuppence went herself to the stationer's to make quite sure that nothing had come for her. Satisfied on this point, she made her way to the Ritz. On inquiry she learnt that Tommy had not yet returned. It was the answer she had expected, but it was another nail in the coffin of her hopes. She inquired for Julius Hershelmer. The reply she got was to the effect that he had returned about half an hour ago, but had gone out immediately.

Tuppence's spirits revived. It would be something to see Julius. Perhaps he could devise some plan for finding out what had become of Tommy. She wrote her note to Mr. Carter in Julius' sitting-room, and was just addressing the envelope when the door burst open.

"What the h—!" began Julius, but choked himself abruptly. "I beg your pardon, Miss Tuppence. Those fools down at the office would have it that Beresford wasn't here any longer—hadn't been here since Wednesday. Is that so?"

Tuppence nodded. "You don't know where he is?" she asked faintly.

"I? How should I know? I haven't had one darned word from him, though I wired him yesterday morning."

"I expect your wire's at the office unopened."

"But where is he?"

"I don't know. I hoped you might."

"I haven't had one darned word from him since we parted at the depot on Wednesday."

"What depot?"

"Waterloo. Your London and Southwestern road."

"Waterloo?" frowned Tuppence.

"Why, yes. Didn't he tell you?"

"I haven't seen him either," replied Tuppence impatiently. "Go on about Waterloo. What were you doing there?"

"He gave me a call. Over the phone. Told me to get a move on, and bustle. Said he was trailing two crooks."

"Oh!" said Tuppence, her eyes opening. "I see. Go on."

"I hurried along right away. Beresford was there. He pointed out the crooks. The big one was mine, the guy you bluffed. Tommy shoved a ticket into my hand and told me to get aboard the cars. He was going to sleuth the other crook." Julius paused. "I thought for sure you'd know all this."

"Julius," said Tuppence firmly, sit down in that armchair and tell me the whole story with as few fancy turns of speech as possible."

"Well," began Julius, "I got into one of your dear old-fashioned first-class British compartments. The train was just off. I did a bit of prospecting along the corridor to the next coach. Whittington was there right enough. When I saw the skunk, with his big sleek fat face, and thought of poor little Jane in his clutches, I felt real mad that I hadn't got a gun with me. I'd have tickled him up some."

"We got to Bournemouth all right. Whittington took a cab and gave the name of an hotel. I did likewise, and we drove up within three minutes of each other. He hired a room, and I hired one too. So far it was all plain sailing. Well, he just sat around in the hotel lounge, reading the papers and so on, till it was time for dinner."

"I began to think that there was nothing doing, that he'd just come on the trip for his health, but I remembered that he hadn't changed for dinner, though it was by way of being a slap-up hotel, so it seemed likely enough that he'd be going out on his real business afterward."

"Sure enough, about nine o'clock, so he did. Took a car across the town—mighty pretty place by the way, I guess I'll take Jane there for a spell when I find her—and then paid it off and struck off along those pine-woods on the top of the cliff. I was there, too, you understand. We walked, maybe, for half an hour. There's a lot of villas all the way along, but by degrees they seemed to get more and more thinned out, and in the end we got to one that seemed the last of the bunch."

"It was a pretty black night, and the carriage drove up to the house was dark as pitch. I could hear him ahead, though I couldn't see him. I turned a curve and I was just in time to see him ring the bell and get admitted to the house. I just stopped where I was."

"Whittington didn't come out again, and by and by I got kind of restive, and began to mouch around. All the ground floor windows were shuttered tight, but upstairs, on the first floor (it was a two-storied house) I noticed a window with a light burning and the curtains not drawn."

"Now, just opposite to that window, there was a tree growing. It was about thirty feet away from the house, maybe, and I sort of got it into my head that, if I climbed up that tree, I'd very likely be able to see into that room. So I started up."

"It wasn't so easy by a long chalk! The rain had made the boughs mighty slippery, and it was all I could do to keep a foothold, but bit by bit I managed it, until at last there I was level with the window."

"But then I was disappointed. I could only see sideways into the room. Just as I was going to give it up, and climb down ignominiously, someone inside moved and threw his shadow on my little bit of wall—and, by gum, it was Whittington!"

"After that, my blood was up. I'd just got to get a look into that room. It was up to me to figure out how. I noticed that there was a long branch running out from the tree in the right direction. If I could only swarm about half-way along it, the proposition would be solved. Very cautiously, inch by inch, I crawled along. At last I got safely to where I wanted to be."

"There was a table with a lamp on it in the middle of the room, and sitting at that table, facing toward me, was Whittington right enough. He was talking to a woman dressed as a hospital nurse. She was sitting with her back to me, so I couldn't see her face. I couldn't catch a word of what they said. Whittington seemed to be doing all the talking, and the nurse just listened. He seemed very emphatic—once or twice he beat with his fist on the table."

"Presently, he seemed to get to the end of what he was saying. He got up, and so did she. He looked towards the window and asked something—I guess it was whether it was raining. Anyway, she came right across and looked out. Just then the moon came out from behind the clouds. I was scared the woman would catch sight of me, for I was full in the moonlight. I tried to move back a bit. The jerk I gave was too much for that rotten old branch. With an almighty crash, down it came, and Julius P. Hershelmer with it!"

"Oh, Julius," breathed Tuppence, "how exciting! Go on."

"Well, luckily for me, I pitched down into a good soft bed of earth—but it put me out of action for the time, sure enough. The next thing I knew, I was lying in bed with a hospital nurse (not Whittington's one) on one side of me, and a little black-bearded man with gold glasses, and medical man written all over him, on the other. He rubbed his hands together, and raised his eyebrows as I stared at him. 'Ah!' he said. 'So our young friend is coming round again. Capital. Capital. I think that'll do for the present, sister,' and the nurse left the room in a sort of brisk, well-trained way. But I caught her handing me out a look of deep curiosity as she passed through the door."

"That look of hers gave me an idea. 'Now, then, doc,' I said, and tried to sit up in bed, but my right foot gave me a nasty twinge as I did so. 'A slight sprain,' explained the doctor. 'Nothing serious. You'll be about in a couple of days.'

"I noticed you walked lame," interposed Tuppence.

Julius nodded, and continued. "How did it happen?" I asked again. He replied dryly. 'You fell, with a considerable portion of one of my trees, into one of my newly planted flower-beds.'

"I liked the man. He seemed to have a sense of humor. I felt sure that he, at least, was plumb straight. 'Sure, doc,' I said, 'I'm sorry about the tree, and I guess the new bulbs will be on me. But perhaps you'd like to know what I was doing in your garden?' I think the facts do call for explanation, he replied. 'Well, to begin with, I wasn't after the spoons.'

"He smiled. 'My first theory. But I soon altered my mind. By the way, you are an American, are you not? I told him my name. 'And you?' 'I am Doctor Hall, and this, as you doubtless know, is my private hospital.'

"I made up my mind in a flash. 'Why, doctor,' I said, 'I guess I feel an almighty fool, but I owe it to you to let you know that it wasn't the Bill Sikes business I was up to.' Then I went on and mumbled out something about a girl. I trotted out the stern guardian business, and a nervous breakdown, and finally explained that I had fancied I recognized her among the patients at the home, hence my nocturnal adventures."

"I guess it was just the kind of a story he was expecting. 'Quite a romance,' he said genially, when I'd finished. 'Now, Doc,' I went on, 'will you be frank with me? Have you had here at any time a young girl called Jane Finn?' He repeated the name thoughtfully. 'Jane Finn?' he said. 'No.'

"I was chagrined, and I guess I showed it. 'You are sure?' 'Quite sure, Mr. Hershelmer. It is an uncommon name, and I should not have been likely to forget it.'

"Well, that was flat. It laid me out for a space. I'd kind of hoped my search was at an end. 'That's that,' I said at last. 'Now, there's another matter. When I was hugging that darned branch I thought I recognized an old friend of mine talking to one of your nurses.' I purposely didn't mention any name because, of course, Whittington might be calling himself something quite different down here, but the doctor answered at once. 'Mr. Whittington perhaps?' 'That's the fellow,' I replied. 'What's he doing down here? Don't tell me his nerves are out of order?'

"Doctor Hall laughed. 'No. He came down to see one of my nurses, Nurse Edith, who is a niece of his.' 'Why, fancy that!' I exclaimed. 'Is he still here?' 'No, he went back to town almost immediately.' 'What a pity!' I ejaculated. 'But perhaps I could speak to his niece—Nurse Edith, did you say her name was?'

"But the doctor shook his head. 'I'm afraid that, too, is impossible. Nurse Edith left with a patient to-night also.' 'I seem to be real unlucky,' I remarked. 'Have you Mr. Whittington's address in town?' I guess I'd like to look him up when I get back. 'I don't know his address. I can write to Nurse Edith for it if you like.' I thanked him. 'Don't say who it is wants it. I'd like to give him a little surprise.'

"That was about all I could do for the moment. Of course, if the girl was really Whittington's niece, she might be too cute to fall into the trap, but it was worth trying. My foot soon got all right. I said good-by to the little doctor cuap, asked him to send me word if he heard from Nurse Edith, and came right away back to town. Say, Miss Tuppence, you're looking mighty pale?"

"It's Tommy," said Tuppence. "What can have happened to him?"

"Buck up; I guess he's all right really. Why shouldn't he be? See here, it was a foreign-looking guy he went off after. Maybe they've gone abroad—to Poland, or something like that?"

Tuppence shook her head. "I've seen that man, Boris something, since. He dined with Mrs. Vandemeyer last night."

"Mrs. Who?"

"I forgot. Of course you don't know all that."

"I'm listening," said Julius, and gave vent to his favorite expression. "Put me wise."

Tuppence thereupon related the events of the last two days. Julius' astonishment and admiration were unbounded.

"Bully for you! Fancy you a medical. It just tickles me to death!" Then he added seriously: "But say, now, I don't like it, Miss Tuppence. I sure don't. These crooks we're up against would as soon croak a girl as a man any day."

"Oh, bother me!" said Tuppence impatiently. "Let's think about what can have happened to Tommy. I've written to Mr. Carter about it," she added, and told him the gist of her letter.

Julius nodded gravely.

"I guess that's good as far as it goes. But it's for us to get busy and do something. I guess we'd better get on the track of Boris. You say he's been to your place. Is he likely to come again?"

"He might. I really don't know."

"I see. Well, I guess I'd better buy a car, a slap-up one, dress as a chauffeur and hang about outside. Then if Boris comes, you could make some kind of signal, and I'd trail him. How's that?"

"Splendid, but he mightn't come for weeks."

"We'll have to chance that. I'm glad you like the plan." He rose.

"Where are you going?"

"To buy the car, of course," replied Julius, surprised. "I'll be round in it in half an hour."

Tuppence got up.

"You're awfully good, Julius. But I can't help feeling that it's rather a forlorn hope. I'm really pinning my faith to Mr. Carter. By the way, I forgot to tell you of a queer thing that happened this morning."

And she narrated her encounter with Sir James Peel Edgerton. Julius was interested.

"What did the guy mean, do you think?" he asked.

"I don't quite know," said Tuppence meditatively. "But I think that, in an ambiguous, legal, without prejudicial lawyer's way, he was trying to warn me."

"Why should he? See here, we don't want any lawyers mixed up in this. That guy couldn't help us."

"Well, I believe he could," reiterated Tuppence obstinately.

"Don't you think it. So long. I'll be back in half an hour."

Thirty-five minutes had elapsed when Julius returned. He took Tuppence by the arm, and walked her to the window.

"There she is."

"Oh!" said Tuppence with a note of reverence in her voice, as she gazed down at the enormous car.

Friday and Saturday passed uneventfully. Tuppence had received a brief answer to her appeal from Mr. Carter. In it he pointed out that the Young Adventurers had undertaken the work at their own risk, and had been fully warned of the dangers. If anything had happened to Tommy he regretted it deeply, but he could do nothing.

This was cold comfort. It seemed to the girl that, for the first time, she realized the sinister character of the mission they had undertaken so lightly-heartedly. It had begun like a page of romance. Now, shorn of its glamor, it seemed to be turning to grim reality. Tommy—that was all that mattered. Many times in the day Tuppence blinked the tears out of her eyes resolutely. "Little fool," she would apostrophize herself, "don't snivel. Of course you're fond of him. You've known him all your life. But there's no need to be sentimental about it."

In the meantime, nothing more was seen of Boris. He did not come to the flat, and Julius and the car waited in vain. Tuppence gave herself over to new meditations. Whilst admitting the truth of Julius' objection, she had nevertheless not entirely relinquished the idea of appealing to Sir James Peel Edgerton. Indeed, she had gone so far as to look up his address in the Red Book. Had he meant to warn her that day? If so, why? Tuppence decided, with her usual shake of the shoulders, it was worth trying, and try it she would. Sunday was her afternoon out. She would meet Julius, persuade him to her point of view, and they would beard the lion in his den.

When the day arrived Julius needed a considerable amount of persuading, but Tuppence held firm. "It can do no harm," was what she always came back to. In the end Julius gave in, and they proceeded in the car to Carlton House terrace.

"It's no place for a young and inexperienced girl."

A man of letters ought to succeed for a spell, at least.

FARM LIVE STOCK

Prosperity of Farming Depends on Live Stock

Live stock provides an outlet for three-fifths of the crop acreage in the United States, besides 65,000,000 acres of improved pasture, 150,000,000 acres of unimproved grass land pasture, 175,000,000 acres of woodland pasture, and 500,000,000 acres of grazing land in the arid and semi-arid sections of the West, according to C. W. McCampbell, head of the department of animal husbandry at Kansas State Agricultural college. All told, live stock furnished an outlet for 80 per cent of the total food and feed produced by tame and wild vegetation in the United States.

Live stock, by utilizing advantageously and efficiently the various pastures and forage crops, makes possible a system of crop rotation that aids materially in maintaining soil fertility and controlling plant diseases, insects and weeds.

Live stock provides, in the form of manure, the most reliable and practical fertilizer that can be used to maintain soil fertility. The production of grain takes from the soil large amounts of phosphorus, potash and nitrogen. When grain is sold off the farm where produced these elements of fertility are completely lost, but when grain is fed to live stock 80 per cent of the phosphorus, potash and nitrogen is returned to the soil in the form of manure. Manure also adds to the soil that necessary constituent humus which commercial fertilizers do not.

Salt, Lime and Iodine Needed in Stock Rations

"Salt, iodine and calcium are needed in every well-balanced live stock ration," declared E. B. Hart of the agricultural chemistry department, University of Wisconsin.

"Salt is an essential factor in a well-balanced ration," declared Mr. Hart. When used it is usually in the form of ordinary salt or sodium chloride. The chlorine upon entering the stomach forms hydrochloric acid, and this acid is necessary for proper and complete digestion. The animal with a roughened coat is one which is not receiving proper nutrition, and this improper nutrition may sometimes be traced to a lack of salt in the ration.

"Nearly all common foodstuffs are very low in iodine content," said Mr. Hart. "The greatest loss resulting from a deficiency of iodine is in the birth of country pigs. The gutter region of this half is in the Northwest and it is in this section that high losses are incurred. The fact that it has not put in an appearance on your farm does not necessarily mean that it never will. And a little iodine in the form of sodium or potassium iodide will serve as an insurance against trouble of this type."

"Calcium is being given off constantly in the form of salts in the milk of a dairy cow, and some provision must be made to replace this. It has been found that alfalfa hay cured under caps carries a vitamin which aids in calcium assimilation. Lime or bone meal added to the roughage will also help to overcome the constant drain on the calcium supply of the body."

Combinations Outlined for Production of Pork

"Why fatten hogs with corn and wheat when each of the following combinations will produce 100 pounds of pork?" is the pertinent question when reading over the following feeding summary made by Professor Fieldsted of the Oregon Agricultural college:

- 1, 470 pounds barley, ground.
- 2, 400 pounds barley, ground, plus 20 pounds digester tankage.
- 3, 332 pounds barley, ground, plus 350 pounds skim milk or buttermilk.
- 4, 246 pounds barley, ground, plus 123 pounds middlings, plus 220 pounds buttermilk or skim milk.
- 5, 236 pounds barley, ground, plus 118 pounds middlings, plus 511 pounds barabae.
- 6, 320 pounds barley, ground, plus 160 pounds middlings.
- 7, 252 pounds barley, ground, plus 156 pounds middlings, plus 30 pounds digester tankage.
- 8, 206 pounds barley, ground, plus 200 pounds middlings, plus 20 pounds digester tankage.

Good Feeds for Growing Pigs or the Brood Sow

A mixture of 60 per cent barley and 40 per cent oats will be a good mixture for growing pigs or brood sows. This mixture would be improved upon by making it 40 per cent barley, 30 per cent oats, 20 per cent middlings and 10 per cent tankage. For fattening pigs a ration of 90 per cent barley and 10 per cent tankage or 60 per cent barley, 30 per cent middlings, and 10 per cent tankage will be found satisfactory.

Growth and Development of Pigs Must Be Rapid

The pigs should be fed grain as finished as early as possible if the pork is to be economically produced. Growth and development of pigs should be rapid if the bacon is to be profitable. A little neglect at the critical season may retard the growth of pigs. When the pigs are to be finished they may be confined in pens unless there is a luxuriant pasture whence plenty of grain may be fed.

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It

Applicants for Insurance Often Rejected.

Coming from reports from druggists who are constantly in direct touch with the public, there is one preparation that has been very successful in overcoming the conditions. The mild and healing influence of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is well known. It stands the highest for its remarkable record of success.

Examining physician for one of the prominent Life Insurance Companies, in an interview on the subject, made the following statement that one reason why so many applicants for insurance are rejected is because kidney trouble is so common to the American people, and the large majority of those whose applications are declined do not even suspect that they have the disease. Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is on sale at all drug stores in bottles of two sizes, medium and large.

However, if you wish first to test this preparation send ten cents to Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., for a sample bottle. When writing be sure and mention this paper.—Advertisement.

FRIENDS NOTICED IMPROVEMENT

Wonderful Results from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Beloit, Wis.—"My female trouble was brought on by overwork. I had worked excessive hours in stores and had to do heavier work than my strength could stand, and had to be on my feet most of the time. Finally I had to give up this work entirely and stay at home. Doctor's medicine did not give me much relief, and my mother wanted me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took a couple of bottles of it and thought it didn't help me as much as it should, so I gave it up to try something else. Nothing I took helped me much, so I finally decided to give the Vegetable Compound another trial and to take enough of it to make sure it would help me. I have taken it over a year now and it has brought wonderful results. I have gained from 38 to 110 pounds and am keeping house now. My friends all notice the change in my health. I will be glad to answer all letters that women write to me about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. W. G. MONSON, 1515 Park Ave., Beloit, Wis. Mrs. Monson is willing to write to any woman suffering from such troubles.

WAKE UP

For they that sleep sleep in the night, and they that be drunken are drunken in the night. But let us who are of the day be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love, and for an helmet the hope of salvation. Love worketh no ill to his neighbor: therefore love is the fulfilling of the law. And that, knowing the time, that now is high time to awake out of sleep, for the world is going to hell and destruction faster than ever before in world history. If there ever was a time that we as Christians ought to be waking up, it is now, for there is sin on every hand. Oh just think of the many all around us going down in sin every day; and we as Christians say that we can't find any place to work. There are places open all around us, if we could only wake up and see. Even our own dear children in our own homes are out of the Ark of Safety, and we are not alarmed about their condition. It behooves us as Christians to be up and about our Master's business, for Jesus says: "Watch ye and pray, lest ye enter into temptation."

I realize more and more each day that we must stay on our knees in prayer if we would live close to God and accomplish anything for him. We may have some lost one on our hearts and we will pray for that person a few times, then if he isn't saved we become weary and give up. But God said: Pray continually; pray without ceasing. I can recall one or two instances where I prayed for some one a whole year before God answered my prayers. Many a time there will come great trouble upon us, and we are so sound asleep that we can't call upon God until it is too late. As I was praying the other night, it seemed as though God rolled the lot of this town upon my heart until I could hardly stand it. It seemed as though the town looked so awful; when I arose from my knees I went out on the porch and looked over the town to see if it really did look so bad.

Oh, how I wish I could take my Bible and go into every home where there is sin and help them to a Savior who is able to save to the utmost all those who come to him—though I know I can't. There are my nearest neighbors out of Christ (My unsaved sinners, my friend, I love your soul and want to help you).

How can people sit under the sound of the Gospel, and hear it preached day after day, and turn it down? How I wish sometimes that I could go to the foreign fields and tell those poor people about my Christ who has done so much for me. I would be the happiest person in the world if I could just put my whole life into his service. Ah, my unsaved sinner friends, there is coming a time when you are going to wake up—but too late then; and you will have to lift up your fruitless cries in a devil's hell. Oh, how willingly you would give ten worlds like this just for thirty minutes to get ready to meet God.

My Christian friends, let's do all we can for these unsaved. Let's clear our hands of their blood and hear the Master say: "She hath done what she could." We must clear our hands of their blood, for heaven is too great to miss, and hell is too awful a place to go. I don't want to go there; do you? Heaven is my home; is it yours?

A Dorcas.

ECONOMIES IN USE OF GAS OVENS

Either of These Two Good Types of Oven Will Save Gas.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
A small portable oven used over a burner on the top of a gas stove effects considerable saving in gas consumption, points out the United States Department of Agriculture. Baking small amounts of biscuits, muffins, potatoes and other foods requiring high temperatures for a short time in a large oven wastes gas needlessly. Double walls and, if possible, some insulation should be insisted on when selecting one of the various types of small portable ovens.
The oven burners in the ordinary gas stove oven may use 40 to 50 cubic feet of gas an hour when turned on full at the higher pressures. A large proportion of this heat is lost unless the oven is insulated between the outer and inner walls. Asbestos paper one-eighth inch or more thick may be used in small ovens, but larger ovens need better insulation than this.
Low or moderate baking temperatures can be used to a much greater extent than most cooks realize. Preheating the oven often consumes 50 per cent of the entire amount of gas and is in many cases entirely unnecessary. Many foods could be started in a cold oven.

STRONG DRAFTS ARE HARMFUL TO CANARY

Songsters Are Susceptible to Changes in Temperature.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Canaries are susceptible to sudden changes in temperature, and cold drafts may soon prove fatal, says the United States Department of Agriculture. In choosing a place for the cage, direct exposure to a strong draft of cold air must always be avoided. A cage may be placed on a small shelf along the wall, or suspended from a bracket attached to the wall or window casing. Swinging brackets are inexpensive and are convenient for use when it is impracticable to fasten hooks in the ceiling.

When one or two canaries are kept as pets, it is usual to suspend their cages before a window, where the birds may enjoy light and sunshine. This is a good practice where the window is kept closed during cool or stormy weather, and the joints are tight. It may be necessary to line the edges of the window frame and the junction of the upper and lower halves of the window with weather-stripping to prevent drafts, and it is best to suspend the cage so that it will hang opposite or below the junction of the two halves of the window frame. The room must remain at a fairly even temperature day and night, and in cold weather it is well to cover the cage with a towel or other light cloth at night. A cage should never be suspended directly above a radiator, and it is best to avoid keeping birds in small kitchens, as the fluctuations in heat are perhaps more marked there than in any other part of the house. Exposure to damp air may prove fatal.

The cage must be kept scrupulously clean if the canary is to remain in good health and free from vermin. The supply of water should be renewed daily, and the seed cup replenished at least every other day. The receptacles for these necessities should be cleaned and washed carefully at short intervals. Cages that have removable bases should have the tray in the bottom covered with several thicknesses of paper, or with heavy, coarse-grained sandpaper, known as gravel paper, that may be secured from dealers in bird-cage supplies. This should be renewed whenever the cage is cleaned, and, in addition, the pan should be washed in hot water from time to time. Lime on the perches may be removed by means of a scraper made of a bit of tin fastened to a wire or tacked at right angles to a stick small enough to pass easily between the wires of the cage. Cages with bottom attached should be provided with a sand tray that slides in and out through a slot in the front.

PLAN TO USE STRAWBERRIES

Sauce Which Can Be Served With Rice or Cottage Pudding Is Very Good.

Strawberry sauce, which can be served with boiled rice or cottage pudding, is good, say food specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture. It is a good way, too, to use the wild berries that are sometimes brought home from a tramp through the meadow.

Strawberry Sauce,
1/2 cupful butter, 1/4 to 1/2 cupful 1 cupful powdered strawberries, sugar.

Rub together the butter and the sugar, then add the strawberries, a few at a time, beating until the fruit is mashed. If you object to the curdling of the sauce, which affects the appearance only, rub the white of one egg thoroughly into the butter and sugar before adding the berries. This prevents the fat from the action of the acid of the berries.

SKIM MILK HAS FOOD VALUE

There is Left All of Sugar and Most of Mineral Substances, but Also Proteins.

Whole milk, as every one knows, is an indispensable food for the young, and even in the diet of the adult it is desirable. For cooking purposes, however, skim milk is very satisfactory, although it lacks the valuable food constituent, butterfat. There is left nevertheless in the skim milk, not only all of the sugar, which amounts to about 4 1/2 parts in every 100, and also most of the mineral substances, but also most of the proteins. The last named class of substances is important, because besides supplying muscle and tissue-building material, they also serve as fuel for the body, as fats, sugars and starches do.

Since the nutritive part of skim milk consists very largely of protein, it is to be classed with such food materials as eggs, meat, fish, poultry and cheese (though it is more delicate than those foods), rather than with such substances as sugar, which serve only as fuel. Two and a half quarts of skim milk contain almost as much protein and yield about the same amount of energy as a pound of round of beef.

Whole, unskimmed milk has, of course, a more pleasing taste to many people, and those who do not need to consider the additional cost will no doubt always prefer it. Children should always be given whole milk. When used for cooking, however, the difference in taste between skimmed and unskimmed milk is not so perceptible, and there are many uses to which skim milk can be put in the preparation of foods. In the making of cereal mushes, for instance, the use of skim milk in place of water adds greatly to the nutritive value, particularly by raising the amount of tissue-forming materials.

PROPER USE OF GAS STOVE

For Best Results Burners Must Be Kept Clean and in Good Condition—Have Clear Flame.

For good results in using a gas stove keep the burners clean and in good condition, and adjust the air shutters properly, advises the United States Department of Agriculture. The flame should be clear, blue and of uniform height. The screw on the air shutter can be adjusted easily with a screwdriver. The flame should be long enough to reach the bottom of the saucepan, but not so long that it will reach its side. The burner should be set as close as possible to the bottom of the saucepan in which food is cooking. One and one-half inches between the upper surface of the burner and the bottom of the pan is enough, in most cases, and sometimes less will suffice. However, the vessel should not sit so close over the flame as to touch the inner blue cone or core of the flame, for in that case combustion becomes imperfect to such an extent that carbon monoxide, a poisonous gas, may be formed.

Remove tar with kerosene, then warm water and soap.

Press ribbons on the wrong side and there will be no iron shine.

Only paper plates and napkins should be used on a picnic luncheon.

Gilt frames can be renewed by washing first with vinegar and then polishing with paraffin.

Mold your left-over vegetables in gelatin and they will add an appetizing salad to any menu.

Hats to Answer Every Need; Flatter the Awkward Age

EVERY woman who experiences difficulty in finding hats that are not only becoming, but fashionable as well, must be delighted with the present styles in summer hats. Wide as well as narrow brims, deep and shallow crowns, poke and off-the-face shapes are all equally in good style, and it remains only to choose the most becoming of these to face the summer with the satisfaction of being properly hatted.

In the group of summer hats shown below, the model at the top is particu-

At the left a little dress of crepe de chine has its simple line relieved with double rows of deep platted ruffles about the skirt and a large square bertha of lace trimmed with ribbon rosettes and long streamers. The blouse is made full and is gathered at the waist with a ribbon belt. The slashed sleeves have a picot edge and are latticed with narrow ribbon. They

The brim is of fine milan, edged with a narrow taffeta ribbon. For very dressy affairs the picture hat at the right recommends itself as a charming note in the summer costume. It is of orchid hair-braid, with a shadow brim of georgette in the same tone. The crown and top brim are trimmed with wool embroidery and large flat appliques of stuffed silk flowers.

This is a one-piece slipover model with kimono sleeves and a belt of wide two-tone ribbon. The short sleeves are edged with ribbon and cut in a point which is turned back and fastened with a little silk ball. Two narrow ribbons of crepe de chine are tied over the belt at the right side and are finished with silk balls at the ends. Dotted swiss in darker tones such as navy and wine is combined with trimming is of metallic leather, combined with gray wool embroidery. The vogue for black and white is evident in the model shown below. It is of white felt, with a facing of black georgette. Black-and-white yarns are used in an all-over embroidery design on the crown and top brim.

The problem presented in properly outfitting the early 'teens is always difficult, but with so many designers turning their attention to the "awkward age" it is always possible to find something in smart outfits that modify the sharp angles of early youth and combine simplicity with that touch of sophistication so ardently desired by the wearer. FOUR O'CLOCK IS TEA HOUR MUSSELS TO BE CULTIVATED Almost Sacred Institution in Buenos Aires, and Practically Observed by All Classes.

Tea is an institution in Buenos Aires. All offices swear off work temporarily at 4 o'clock each afternoon, while white-coated porters bring steaming cups around to the employees, and employers gather up canes and derby hats and saunter forth for the nearest tea salon. Because of the size of this fashionable promenade, Calle Florida, the Fifth avenue of Buenos Aires, is closed to vehicle traffic from 4:30 to 7:30, says the World Traveler magazine.

The city imbibes its coffee and tea publicly. In the mornings the streets are congested with waiters from bars carrying nickel pots of Brazilian coffee to tardy office clerks. The Avenida is swamped with other alcoholic drinkers who, by paying for a 10-cent cup of coffee at a sidewalk table, get a post of vantage for the purpose of ogling pretty women out on shopping expeditions.

Adequate Supply of Raw Material for the Pearl-Button Industry Is Object Sought.

An important step toward insuring an adequate supply of raw material for the pearl-button industry is being made by the United States bureau of fisheries, which, for the first time in history, is cultivating fresh-water mussels during the entire first year of their growth. The activity of mussel culturists heretofore has been confined to getting the young bivalves well started in life, during the brief period when they attach themselves to the gills and fins of fish. Now, however, as a check upon the effectiveness of their work, the fish will be kept in large wooden troughs until the mussels drop off, after which the latter will be retained in the wooden tanks for a year, the better to observe and facilitate their growth. The mussels will then be planted in their natural environment to complete their life cycle.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Grape-Nuts
A FOOD

The Meat of the Wheat

STARCH is the "meat" of the wheat berry. It is the great energy-producing element of the grain. But, in order to do you any good, it must be thoroughly digested, and it is right here that such a food as Grape-Nuts renders special service.

Grape-Nuts, made from wheat and malted barley, supplies the meat of the wheat in most digestible form.

That is because in the making of Grape-Nuts a large proportion of the starch is converted into dextrins and maltose—forms into which all starch elements must be changed before they can be assimilated by the system.

Grape-Nuts not only digest easily, but also aids in the digestion of other foods.

Crisp, delicious Grape-Nuts with milk or cream is a complete food. It supplies the life-essential vitamin-B; also iron, phosphorus and other important mineral elements for nerve, tooth, bone and other body structure.

The daily use of Grape-Nuts is a form of health insurance which has demonstrated its value for more than 25 years.

Miss Ann Riehey's Expression Class from McLean came over last Friday, and in the evening at the high school auditorium presented "Deacon Dubbs," a delightful comedy drama in three acts.

A good audience greeted the players, and thoroughly enjoyed the play. Each member of the cast "carried on" like a veteran, the numbers between acts were pleasing, and the whole formed an evening's entertainment not soon to be forgotten.
