BUCK CREEK WELL GETS BUSY AGAIN

Messrs Hines & Duncan are again busy on the job out at the Buck Creek oil test, taking out the casing that was jambed in the accident in the well some ten days ago.

They expect to have it all out and reset and ready to begin drilling again by Monday next. They were down on the cap rock at the time of the accident and were greatly pleased with the formation there, as there was a showing of both oil and gas.

Both Mr. Hines and Uncle Charley Duncan, the driller, are of the opinion that they will get what they are after before reaching the contract depth of 3347 feet, and from the showing at 3347 feet we believe that their opinion is well founded.

SCHOOL OPENING IS BIG EVENT MONDAY

Perhaps the best and largest attended opening exercises in the history of the Hedley Public Schools took place in the school auditorium last Monday morning, beginning at 10 o'clock and continuing until 12. Not only was the large auditorium filled to its capacity, but much of the space around doors and windows was taken up by those who failed to get inside.

The stage was occupied by the Faculty, Board of Trustees, and Revs. K. F. Keller, S. H. Young and I. J. Sparlin. The pupils were grouped in the front half of the room. Supt. Snider was master of ceremonies.

Rev. S. H. Young delivered the invocation, and was followed by Rev. K. F. Keller in a timely, appreciated talk. Then D. C. Moore, of the School Board, was called on and responded in his usual capable way—interspersing his remarks with bits of wit and humor for which he is noted. Principal Graves made a short but impressive talk, followed by Miss Bulman, music teacher, who also rendered a beautiful piano solo. Mrs. Graves, expression teacher, gave a reading which so delighted the audience that she was forced to respond with an encore number. Supt. Snider wound up the program with a splendid talk that was full of good things and promised much for the welfare of pupils and school.

With a good Faculty, a good Board, and the co-operation of patrons as manifested on opening day, the school outlook is very bright.

St. Louis smoker moves into second place

With 405 cans to his credit
Mr. Thurston smokes his way towards the lead

Mr. Byron Thurston of St. Louis is more than qualified for membership in the Edgeworth Club. His position in the championship-smoker class is not so well established. Mr. Thurston's interesting letter follows:

Hotel Garni, St. Louis, Mo.
Larus & Brother Company,
Richmond, Va.
Gentlemen:
I have often heard of great smokers of one kind or another.
I have smoked 405 cans of Edgeworth Plug Slice size without stopping.
Now if you know of any other record I would be glad to hear from you. I smoke one can of tobacco in two days and enjoy every pipeful.
Yours truly,
(Signed) Byron Thurston.

More than a year ago a Burlington, Vermont, Mr. H. F. Baldwin, wrote in suggesting that he had smoked more Edgeworth than any other living man. At that time he had smoked over 1000 cans of the same size purchased by Mr. Thurston, distributed over a period of nearly a score of years.

So while it appears today that Mr. Thurston is well behind the leader, if he continues smoking a can every two days, it may be only a matter of years before he will be well in advance of the entire field.

Still, it is a big country and there are a lot of Edgeworth smokers. You can never tell when a new record will be set up to be the cry of all smokers.

Edgeworth has something about it that pleases smokers. No matter how long you smoke Edgeworth, but those who do generally remain steadfast in their loyalty to the tobacco year after year.

If you have never tried Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will be glad to send you free samples of both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed.

Then you can smoke a few pipefuls and judge for yourself whether or not the tobacco is as good as great many veteran pipe smokers claim it is.

Just drop a postcard to Larus & Brother Company, 66 South 21st Street, Richmond, Va., and the free samples will be forwarded to you promptly.

If you will also include the name and address of your regular tobacco dealer, your courtesy will be appreciated.

Edgeworth is sold in various sizes to suit the needs and means of all purchasers. Both Edgeworth Plug Slice and Ready-Rubbed come in small, pocket-size packages, in attractive tin humidor and in handy intermediate sizes.

To Retail Tobacco Merchants: If your jobber cannot supply you with Edgeworth, Larus & Brother Company will gladly send you prepaid by parcel post a one- or two-ounce carton of any size of Plug Slice or Ready-Rubbed for the same price you would pay the jobber.

Judging from the freckles on the summer girl's face, the open season for sun spots is now on.

Baby Was Soon Playing With Daddy Again

"My baby cut two teeth at 4½ months and cried so much I could hardly quiet her. Really I didn't know what to do till friend said give her Teething, which I did, and in a day or two she was laughing and playing with Daddy again. She has cut several teeth since and they never gave her a bit of trouble," writes Mrs. Charles H. Parnass, 231 South Road, Mobile, Ala.

Many a distracted mother would find comfort and relief if she would give her baby Teething all through its teething time. It soothes the irritated gums and relieves every distressing symptom.

Teething is sold by leading druggists, or send 30c to the Mott's Laboratories, Columbus, Ga., and receive a full-size package and a free copy of Mott's Illustrated Baby Book—Advertisement.

Uncommon Sense . . .

By JOHN

WATCH YOUR STEP

AMBITION is necessary to success. But unless your particular ambition is attainable, it will only be a trouble to you.

A boy who is stone deaf may aspire to be a great violinist, but he never will be.

A youth with no eye for perspective or sense of the beautiful may toll his life away trying to paint, and produce only worthless daubs.

The mountain climber who wants to get to the top of a peak does well to select a mountain that can be climbed.

He may discover, after he is well up one height, that no further progress is possible.

It will be slow, wearisome work descending and beginning the slow, laborious ascent of another mountain. But unless he is willing to do that he will never be a success as a mountain climber.

Few men get the right start in life at the beginning. Most of us discover at some time or other that the way we are traveling is the wrong way, and that it will lead us to no worth while destination.

The thought of going back and beginning all over again is staggering. But there is no other way, if we mean to succeed.

Be as careful as you can in picking your career in the beginning. With your own judgment and knowledge of yourself, and with all the advice you can get, choose a vocation that you are fitted for.

But, if it so happens that you have chosen wrong, don't be afraid to descend that particular mountain and start up another that has a clear trail to the top.

It will be hard work—much harder than starting right in the first place. But it must be done.

And do not count the effort that appears to have been thrown away as wasted. The work that you put into the first vocation, while it may not directly contribute to later success, will have sharpened your faculties and trained your mind.

And because you have done it, and because it has taught you how to work, the tasks that must be done to bring you to success will be far easier than they would have been if you had never tried at all.

ART

By GRACE E. HALL

SLY elves steal in and paint the flowers
With gorgeous hues in still night hours,
Their brushes wondrous fine;
The dew a crystal drop imparts
To linger prisoned in the hearts
Like magic wine.

The tints of mystic mountain haze,
The pastel tones of twilight rays
All re-appear—
The Autumn's bronze and yellow gold
Within some flower's heart unfold,
When Spring is here.

We pause and quaff the incense rare
That blossoms toss upon the air,
Drink deep the gift,
Ere earth again receives her own,
As petals fall and lose their tone,
And in the soft winds drift.

But oh, the wonder of such art!
The mystery within the heart
Of each sweet flower!
The elfin artists paint with care—
We see their skilled touch everywhere
In blossoming woodland bower.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

OUR TONGUES

IN THOSE dear intimacies in the sacred environs of home, in legislative halls, in the tragedies of love and war, in our business relations with one another and in all the affairs of life, the tongue plays the leading role. And this it continues to do from the moment it frames its first word until it ceases to function and the curtain goes down on the final act.

It is the most potential power for good or evil, capable of filling hearts with the utmost joy or breaking them beyond repair.

To suffer day after day under the lash of a tongue that is continuously upbraiding, that cracks and snaps upon the slightest provocation, and often without any provocation at all, is a punishment which sensitive mortals cannot long endure without wishing for an early return to the dust.

In the house of nagging tongues, happiness rests on a precarious base, liable at any moment to topple over and break to pieces.

Marriage under such conditions is not an Arcadia, but a land of terror where a few cruel words may sweep a home from its comfortable foundation.

Husbands and wives are amiable and kindly enough until mischievous tongues break loose and open hostility.

Mother's Cook Book

We all know those houses scrubbed to a sort of raw cleanliness and reeking with the martyrdom of an overworked wife, from which the unwary guest beats a hasty retreat and to which the family returns only to eat and sleep. The feminine head of such a house is a business failure.—Hazel Kewly.

WAYS THAT ARE DIFFERENT

It is a relief to get away from the customary and the usual method of serving various dishes. If one has never experimented with the common foods there is much about surprisingly good food yet to learn.

Have you ever fried turnips? Boil them until tender as usual and slice. When cool dip in egg, then in sautéed cracker crumbs and fry in drippings or butter.

Fried apples are delicious. If the young green ones are used they need not be peeled. Slice, peeling and all, and fry in hot fat. When barely done sweeten with sugar and brown a little. Serve with pork roast or chops. A combination well liked by when lovers.

A combination well liked by when lovers is a half-dozen sliced onions cooked in a little water until nearly tender, then the apples and fat added to this, cooking, adding enough sugar to make them palatable, as well as a generous amount of salt.

Escalloped Cabbage.
Shred and boil cabbage as for soup. Sauté a white sauce. Fry a casserole and put in a layer of white sauce, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and cheese; repeat, finishing the top with buttered crumbs. Season with salt and pepper and bake twenty minutes in a moderate oven. The white sauce if prepared with thin cream will make a dish most nutritious as well as delicious.

Tomatoes and Macaroni With Fried Onions.

Peel, slice and fry six small onions in two tablespoonfuls of butter; when done add a tablespoonful of flour and brown. Add a can of tomatoes or the equivalent of fresh sliced tomatoes, salt, pepper and a cupful of cooked macaroni. Boil until smooth. Serve with grated cheese on top.

Fruit Salad in Apple Cups.

Take round apples of any good color, green, red or yellow. Cut off the top of the stem and as desired scoop out the apple and cut into fine bits, such as pineapple, grapefruit and a few cherries, with a dash of lemon juice, add a mild salad dressing and fill the shells. Set on apple tines and decorate with leaves of parsley.

Shred and boil cabbage as for soup. Sauté a white sauce. Fry

Motor to Church in Comfort

The Chevrolet 5-Passenger Sedan is most popular for family use, because it affords comfort, weather protection and the home atmosphere all the year 'round for five people—yet may be economically operated with only one or two passengers.

Its power, reliability and low upkeep appeal to men. Women like its handsome lines, fine upholstery, plate glass windows with Ternstedt regulators, and fine finish. Everybody appreciates its great value at $860, f. o. b. Flint, Mich.

Cruel Words.
The wife had been away from home all afternoon, and when she returned her husband was reading. She dropped wearily into a chair and closed her eyes for a rest when her husband began to ask questions.
"Oh, don't talk to me," she begged, "I'm so tired."
"I wanted to rest myself," he returned, "but was kept from doing so by the noise you made."
"I was away," she said.
"But there were echoes," he returned.

Drab Life.
Harold Bell Wright, the successful novelist, was defending, at a dinner in New York, the idealistic as contrasted with the realistic school of fiction.
"Let us have idealism and romance in our books," he said. "It is the only place where jolly things are to be found, you know. Life itself is drab and ugly and uneventful."
Mr. Wright laughed, then added: "In life nothing ever comes off except buttons."

Electricity Aids Fishermen.
Are you an electrical fisherman? If not, all you need in order to class yourself in this category is the new artificial minnow, which is made luminous by electricity and resembles a wriggling worm when cast into the water. It is reputed to attract fish day or night. Fine wires protect the bait from breakage and an electric battery supplies the current.

More Likely.
"Newspapers make use of some very strange expressions," remarked Mrs. Snuggs.
"Do they?" replied her husband.
"For instance, here is an article which speaks of speculators pocketing their losses, when I should suppose that they really unpocketed them."

Ever stop to think of this?

We are what we eat!

It's a startling fact, yet a simple truth. This is the reason every one should know that his food is really nourishing—not merely filling. Grape-Nuts—made from wheat and barley—is one of the few cereal foods that includes the vital mineral salts so necessary for supplying proper nourishment for nerve and bone structure. In Grape-Nuts, too, is retained the important vitamin-B of the wheat. No food has greater influence in strengthening the body of a growing child than Grape-Nuts. And remember, children need the very best there is in the way of nourishment. Grape-Nuts is just as delicious as it is healthful, whether served right from the package as a breakfast cereal with milk or cream, with fresh or stewed fruit, or made into an appetizing recipe. Try the suggestion given below.

GRAPE-NUTS ICE CREAM

Prepare plain flavored ice cream in the usual way. Just before the cream hardens in freezing, add Grape-Nuts as it comes from the package, in the proportion of one-half cup of Grape-Nuts to one quart of cream. If you buy ice cream ready-made add Grape-Nuts in place of nut meats. You'll find the resulting flavor unique.

ECONOMY

First buying large boxes of GRAPE-NUTS for full price means more cereal and less money spent.

PANNIER IN PARTY FROCKS; GIVE FORECAST FOR FALL

OF ALL the problems that agitate the pretty head of the debutante that of "What shall I wear?" is the one that comes oftenest to her lips. In sports clothes and the simple wash dresses favored for summer the choice of cut and material is relatively a simple affair, but in costumes for formal wear, particularly the party dress that must answer the needs of dances, dinners and parties through the late summer and early fall months, the advent of new styles and the embarrass-

Shows Several Radical Departures

ment of choice in the materials complicate matters somewhat. The blouse fastens with a large leather-covered button at the neck and four of the same buttons at the waistline. The use of leather as a blouse trimming is something of an innovation, although it made its appearance in sports costumes early in the season. Elaborate stitchery is still the favored trimming of both blouses and jackets and much of it is of oriental inspiration. Just at the present time there is a furore in Paris for Chinese styles in gowns, hujs and wraps, following the success of the great Bal du Grand is threaded through this, forming the belt. No one expects the draped, bouffant or panner skirt to supplant the straight lines of the present styles for informal wear. The plaited skirt, however, seems to be yielding in favor to side flares and other variations that do not change the lines of the figure. If present indications are to be trusted, the current vogue for smart blouses will be a feature of the fall fashions. In fact, the new models being shown are made up in materials that are adapted, in both color and texture to fall wear, and while they may be worn now with perfect propriety, they forecast the approach of the first keen winds of autumn. The blouse illustrated shows the style tendency toward longer lines and the new placement of ornamentation. It is of crepe marocain, in a soft tone of brown, and is trimmed with a cut-out design of light tan leather. As may be seen, the trimming is confined to the collar, cuffs and lower corsage, and this manner of placing the ornamentation seems to be gaining in favor over the allover patterns that have

PLAN TO MAKE SUNDAES AT HOME

Crushed Peach Ice Cream and Chocolate Sundaes.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Far from the soda fountain—out in the country, at shore or mountain resort—the children may enjoy chocolate sundaes and fruit ice creams of many kinds if ice is procurable and if they are willing to furnish the labor when it comes to turning the freezer. The small boy who is not willing to help out in exchange for the privilege of licking the dasher would be hard to find.

Plain Vanilla Ice Cream.

1 qt. market cream (usually 16 to 18 per cent fat), 3/4 pint whole or evaporated milk, 3/4 pint sugar (1/2 pound), 1/2 teaspoonful vanilla.

This recipe is recommended by the United States Department of Agriculture. It can be served with a hot or cold chocolate syrup as chocolate sundaes; it is good with maple syrup poured over it and a few chopped walnut meats; with crushed fruit in syrup it may be some other kind of sundae—either strawberry, peach, raspberry, pineapple (the pineapple should be cooked or canned), apricot, or any other preferred fruit according to the season.

The recipe can also be varied by introducing different flavors into the mixture before freezing it. A cupful of sweetened fruit pulp is the right amount for the quantity of cream and other ingredients in the recipe. Half a pint of sweetened peach pulp (made from three peaches and one-fourth of a pound of sugar) is enough for about two quarts of the crushed-peach ice cream illustrated. A few tablespoonfuls of caramel flavor in vanilla ice cream give a pleasant variation.

After combining all the ingredients for any ice cream, the mixture should be put in the refrigerator for several hours to improve the texture and make it easier to freeze. When packing the freezer six pounds of finely crushed ice should be used for each pound of salt. If the freezer is turned slowly and steadily for eight minutes at the beginning it will only need to be turned fast for about two minutes.

To mold ice cream after it is sufficiently frozen, any clean cut of suitable shape, with a tight-fitting lid, may be used. Baking-powder tins, lard pails, or coffee tins, if they permit turning the ice cream out in good shape, may be used. The mold should be well filled to prevent water from coming into it. When it is time to unmold the cream, the mold should be slightly warmed in hot water and a hole made through the center of the cream with a pencil or rod to admit air.

Chocolate Ice Cream.

To plain vanilla ice cream add one-half cupful of chocolate syrup made by cooking three tablespoonfuls of powdered chocolate or cocoa and four tablespoonfuls of sugar in one-half a cupful of water. Mix, let stand in refrigerator several hours, and freeze.

HOW VARIOUS FOODS MEET NEED OF BODY

Recent Bulletin of Much Interest to Housekeepers.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

A new and graphic method of showing the composition of 50 common foods has been followed in Department Bulletin No. 975, Food Values: How Foods Meet Body Needs, by Emma A. Winslow, which has just been issued by the United States Department of Agriculture. The bulletin is of interest both to dietitians and to housekeepers. A chart for each food shows, by lines of different lengths, what percentage of the total necessary fuel and protein and also of three of the important minerals—lime, iron, and phosphorus—is contained in a pound of that food, thus making it possible to compare foods with respect to any of their nutrients.

The charts do not show whether or not the foods graphically illustrated are sources of vitamins, but certain paragraphs discuss this important phase of nutrition in detail. The comparison made by the charts is helpful in combining food materials so as to make a complete ration, for it shows not only what a given food supplies but also what it lacks.

A glance at the milk diagram, for example, shows that a pound (pint) of milk supplies over eight-tenths of the calcium (lime) a man needs per day, and less than one-tenth of the iron. The other foods of the diet should therefore include some in which iron predominates, and turning over the pages of the bulletin it is possible to find many such very easily.

Vegetables and fruits, it is seen from the charts, are useful in supplying mineral substances and bulk in the diet without unduly increasing the protein and fuel. Milk, eggs, cheese, fish, meats, and almost all the foods depended upon to supply efficient protein, are, with a few exceptions, of animal origin. Peanuts and soy beans, however, differ from other legumes such as dried beans, peas, and lentils, in containing efficient or adequate protein. Milk is one of the best foods for young and old and cannot be satisfactorily replaced in the diet of growing children. Some of the protein foods are rich in mineral substances. Meat and egg yolks supply iron, milk furnishes calcium, and peanuts phosphorus. Many of these protein foods, especially milk and egg yolks, are valuable sources of vitamins A and B.

Cereal foods provide protein and energy in about the proportion needed by the body. Their protein is, however, of such kind that it needs to be supplemented by milk, eggs, cheese, and fish foods. When made from the whole grain, cereal foods also supply some mineral substances and vitamins, but a diet containing large proportions of refined cereal foods must be supplemented by plenty of dairy products, vegetables, and fruits. The various kinds of cereals differ little in fuel value. Rice, wheat flour, and corn meal, for example, all yield about 1,000 calories to the pound.

Sugar and energy foods are valuable for fuel. A few sweet foods such as maple syrup, jelly, and preserved fruits also contain small amounts of protein and mineral substances. Sweets in proper amounts are an important part of the diet, when served at the right time.

Fats and fat foods as a class have a higher fuel value than those of any other group. They add flavor and richness to the diet, but should not be used to excess. Milk fat is a particularly rich source of vitamin A. Butter and cream are, therefore, far more important than most other fats in the diet of growing children. Chocolate and nuts, which are fat foods, also contain generous proportions of protein and minerals.

In estimating the value of a "made" dish containing materials from several different groups it has been convenient to chart these in the form in which they are eaten.

The bulletin, "How Foods Meet Body Needs" is available free on application to the United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

WAYS FOR COOKING CHICKEN

Steam Pressure Method Saves Time Fuel, Labor, Heat and Much of Food Value.

Chickens cooked under steam pressure is delicious, states the United States Department of Agriculture. This method saves time, fuel, labor, heat and food value. Smothered chicken can be prepared as for frying, dredged with flour and browned in hot fat in the bottom of the pressure cooker. It is then seasoned with salt and pepper and transferred to the rack of the cooker, with one-half cupful of water below. When the cooker is closed it is brought up to 15 pounds pressure and maintained there 40 to 60 minutes, depending on the age of the fowl. The stock should be thickened and served with the chicken.

Roast chicken with dressing and chicken fricassee can also be prepared in the pressure cooker. A lower pressure and longer cooking is preferred when the fowl is left whole.

Rub scorched spots with peroxide.

Rub coffee stains with glycerin, rinse and press.

Chocolate stains can be removed with borax and water.

When lice appear on ferns, stick sulphur match heads in soil about the roots.

When cheese becomes dry, steam it for half an hour over a saucepan of boiling water.

WHO'S WHO—and WHEREFORE

Brookhart After Scalp of Middleman

Senator Smith W. Brookhart of Iowa is back from a ten-week trip to Europe. Immediately upon arrival he went to Washington and urged Secretary Hughes to recognize the soviet government of Russia. He suggested as a preliminary step an effort on the part of the United States to revive trade relations, even before the full diplomatic course is resumed. He said Russia had the most stable government in Europe and its people were happy and contented.

The senator returned to America stronger than ever in his opposition to entanglement in the Old World chaos through the League of Nations or the world court.

Senator Brookhart was understood to have urged the necessity of an extra session upon Secretary Hughes.

And the senator is out for the scalps of the middlemen. "There are 1,000,000 farmers and 1,000,000 laborers in this country," asserts the farmer-senator. "Then there are about 1,000,000 middlemen, and they fix the prices for the rest without taking into account the cost of production. The farmer gets 37 cents out of the dollar that the laborer, his best customer, pays for his products, while the laborer, whose best customer is the farmer, gets about 20 cents out of the dollar that is paid for what he makes. "That's why they can both get together on one basis; they're both working for the elimination of the middleman, who takes the rest of their dollar."

Magnus Johnson May Have to "Bach It"

Magnus Johnson, the new senator from Minnesota, may have to "bach it" next winter in Washington. Anyway, the idea of leaving the 140-acre farm in Meeker county, about 80 miles northwest of St. Paul, and living in the capital, doesn't seem to be making a hit with Mrs. Johnson and the three sons and three daughters. Of course, they may change their minds, but Mrs. Johnson's latest photograph, reproduced herewith, apparently portrays a woman who knows her own mind.

"Ma's got ideas, she has. I don't know but what she had a little something to do with my getting on," says Magnus. "Besides working on the farm she was clerk of the school board. She taught me all the English I know. My first wife was a Swedish girl—a fine, hard-working girl, she was. She died two years after we married. Then I married a Yankee girl and she's fine, too."

Mrs. Johnson was born on the adjoining farm and is a descendant, on her mother's side, of Israel Putnam. While Johnson was campaigning, "ma" and the six children were doing their part by upholding "pa's" reputation as a real dirt farmer.

"Washington is a lovely place," Mrs. Johnson said, "but I have made no plans. Yes, I approve of women entering politics. I approve also of husbands going into politics. But I have a family of six children. I am very busy on the farm while my husband is away. I guess that's my big job."

Manuel Quezon May Be With Us Again

It looks as if Washington is to see Manuel Quezon again. He was Philippine commissioner for several years and was joint chairman with Sergio Osmena of the independence mission of 1922. If he comes again, it will be in consequence of the controversy with Governor General Leonard Wood which resulted in the wholesale resignation of cabinet members and members of the council of state. Quezon is president of the senate and head of the new Collectivista party and has headed the non-co-operative movement against the governor general's administration.

The parliamentary mission, if it comes, may be headed by Osmena, former speaker of the house of representatives. In any event the mission's purpose will be to appeal direct to President Harding. Secretary of War Weeks has taken the position that the controversy is one that should be passed upon and settled by the president.

The situation is further complicated by the passage of a resolution by the legislature, asking that a Filipino governor general be appointed to succeed General Wood—unless immediate independence is to be granted the Philippines.

Gen. Feland Moves Up in "Devil Dogs"

Brig. Gen. Logan Feland, U. S. Marine Corps, has been appointed assistant to Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, in command of the Marine Corps since 1920. He was born in Hopkinsville, Ky., in 1869 and was graduated from Massachusetts "Tech" in 1892. He was captain of a Kentucky infantry company in the Spanish-American war and in 1896 entered the Marine Corps as a first lieutenant. He served in Cuba, the Philippines, Panama and Santo Domingo and arrived in France June 13, 1917. He commanded the Fifth regiment of marines, July 17, 1917, to the armistice. He saw much hard fighting and was cited and decorated for his gallantry and efficiency. He was awarded D. S. C.; Croix de Guerre; Croix de Guerre with palm four times; army D. S. M. and navy D. S. M., and made officer of the Legion of Honor. His citations contain such phrases as, "for energy, courage and disregard for personal safety"; "for success in an operations undertaken by his regiment"; "for remarkable ardor and tenacity in driving the enemy back for a distance of 11 kilometers." His fighting included Bois de Belleau, Champagne and Soissons.

The Secret Adversary

By AGATHA CHRISTIE
(Copyright Duff, Mond & Company)
CHAPTER VIII.—Continued.

It was absurd, this giving way to nerves! Slowly she went out of the room. Julius and Sir James were talking it a low voice. Sir James turned to her.

"Lock the door on the outside, please, Miss Tuppence, and take out the key. There must be no chance of anyone entering that room."

The gravity of his manner impressed them, and Tuppence felt less ashamed of her attack of "nerves."

"Now, Miss Tuppence," said Sir James, "you know this place better than I do. Where do you suggest we should take up our quarters?"

Tuppence considered for a moment or two.

"I think Mrs. Vandemeyer's boudoir would be the most comfortable," she said at last, and led the way there.

Sir James looked round approvingly. "This will do very well, and now, my dear young lady, do go to bed and get some sleep."

Tuppence shook her head resolutely. "I couldn't, thank you, Sir James. I should dream of Mr. Brown all night!"

"But you'll be so tired, child."

"No, I shan't. I'd rather stay up—really."

The lawyer gave in.

Tuppence related her adventures.

"There's one thing I don't get clearly," said Julius. "What put her up to clearing out?"

"I don't know," confessed Tuppence. "Sir James stroked his chin thoughtfully."

"The room was in great disorder. That looks as though her flight was unpremeditated. Almost as though she got a sudden warning to go from some one."

"Mr. Brown, I suppose," said Julius scoffingly.

The lawyer looked at him deliberately for a minute or two.

"Why not?" he said. "Remember, you yourself have once been worried by him."

Julius flushed with vexation.

"I feel just mad when I think of how I handed out Jane's photograph to him like a lamb. Gee, if I ever lay hands on it again, I'll freeze on to it like—like a—!"

"That contingency is likely to be a remote one," said the other dryly.

"I guess you're right," said Julius frankly. "And, in any case, it's the original I'm out after. Where do you think she can be, Sir James?"

The lawyer shook his head.

"Impossible to say. But I've a very good idea where she has been. At the scene of your nocturnal adventures, the Bournemouth hospital."

"There? Impossible. I asked."

"No, my dear sir, you asked if any one of the name of Jane Finn had been there. Now, if the girl had been placed there it would almost certainly be under an assumed name."

"Perhaps the doctor's in it too," suggested Tuppence.

Julius shook his head.

"I don't think so. I took to him at once. No, I'm pretty sure Doctor Hall's all right."

"Hall, did you say?" asked Sir James. "That is curious—really very curious."

"Why?" demanded Tuppence.

"Because I happened to meet him this morning. I've known him slightly on and off for some years, and this morning I ran across him in the street. Staying at the Metropole, he told me."

He turned to Julius. "Didn't he tell you he was coming up to town?"

Julius shook his head.

"Curious," mused Sir James. "You did not mention his name this afternoon, or I would have suggested your going to him for further information, with my card as introduction."

"I guess I'm a nut," said Julius, with unusual humility. "I ought to have thought of the false name stunt."

A silence settled down over the party. Little by little the magic of the night began to gain a hold on them. There were sudden creaks in the furniture, imperceptible rustlings in the curtains. Suddenly Tuppence sprang up with a cry.

"I can't help it. I know Mr. Brown's somewhere in the flat! I can feel him."

"Sure, Tuppence how could he be? This door's open into the hall. No one could have come in by the front door without our seeing and hearing him."

"I can't help it. I feel his hair!"

She looked appealingly at Sir James, who replied gravely:

"With due deference to your feelings, Miss Tuppence (and mine as well, for that matter), I do not see how it is humanly possible for anyone to be in the flat without our knowledge."

The girl was a little comforted by his words.

"Sitting up at night is always rather jumpy," she confessed.

The hours drew on. With the first faint glimmerings of dawn, Sir James drew aside the curtains. Somehow, with the coming of the light, the dreads and fancies of the past night seemed absurd. Tuppence's spirits revived to the normal.

"Hooray!" she said. "It's going to be a gorgeous day. And we shall find Tommy. And Jane Finn. And everything will be lovely. I shall ask Mr. Carter if I can't be made a Dame!"

At seven o'clock Tuppence volunteered to go and make some tea. She returned with a tray, containing the teapot and four cups.

"Who's the other cup for?" inquired Julius.

"The prisoner, of course. Perhaps you'd both come, in case she springs on me, or anything. You see, we don't know what mood she'll wake up in."

Sir James and Julius accompanied her to the door.

"Where's the key? Oh, of course, I've got it myself."

She put it in the lock, and turned it, then paused.

"Supposing, after all, she's escaped?" she murmured in a whisper.

"Plumb impossible," replied Julius reassuringly.

But Sir James said nothing.

Tuppence drew a long breath and entered. She heaved a sigh of relief as she saw that Mrs. Vandemeyer was lying on the bed.

"Good morning," she remarked cheerfully. "I've brought you some tea."

Mrs. Vandemeyer did not reply. Tuppence put down the cup on the table by the bed and went across to draw up the blinds. When she turned, Mrs. Vandemeyer still lay without a movement.

With a sudden fear clutching at her heart, Tuppence ran to the bed. The hand she lifted was cold as ice.

Mrs. Vandemeyer would never speak now.

Her cry brought the others. A very few minutes sufficed. Mrs. Vandemeyer was dead—must have been dead some hours. She had evidently died in her sleep.

"If that isn't the cruellest luck," cried Julius in despair.

The lawyer was calmer, but there was a curious gleam in his eyes.

"If it is luck," he replied.

"You don't think—but, say, that's plumb impossible—no one could have got in."

"No," admitted the lawyer. "I don't see how they could. And yet—she is on the point of betraying Mr. Brown, and she dies. Is it only chance?"

"But how?"

"Yes, how! That is what we must find out. He stood there silently, gently stroking his chin. "We must find out," he said, quietly, and Tuppence felt that if she was Mr. Brown she would not like the tone of those simple words.

Julius glanced west to the window. "The window's open," he remarked.

"Do you think—?"

Tuppence shook her head.

"The balcony only goes along as far as the boudoir. We were there."

"He might have slipped out—"

suggested Julius.

But Sir James interrupted him.

"Mr. Brown's methods are not so crude. In the meantime we must send for a doctor, but before we do so, is there anything in this room that might be of value to us?"

Hastily, the three searched. A charred mass in the grate indicated that Mrs. Vandemeyer had been burning papers on the eve of her flight. Nothing of importance remained, though they searched the other rooms as well.

"There's that," said Tuppence suddenly, pointing to a small, old-fashioned safe let into the wall. "It's for jewelry, I believe, but there might be something else in it."

The key was in the lock, and Julius swung open the door, and searched inside. He was some time over the task.

"Well," said Tuppence impatiently. "There was a pause before Julius answered, then he withdrew his head and shut the door.

"Nothing," he said.

In five minutes a brisk young doctor arrived, hastily summoned. He was deferential to Sir James, whom he recognized.

"Heart failure, or possibly an overdose of some sleeping-draught," he sniffed. "Rather an odor of chloral in the air."

Tuppence remembered the glass she had upset. A new thought drove her to the washstand. She found the little bottle from which Mrs. Vandemeyer had poured a few drops.

It had been three parts full. Now it was empty.

CHAPTER IX

A Consultation

Nothing was more surprising and bewildering to Tuppence than the ease and simplicity with which everything was arranged. Tuppence and Sir James' skillful handling of the doctor occupied quite readily that Mrs. Vandemeyer had accidentally taken an overdose of chloral. He doubted whether an inquest would be necessary. Sir James and his young friends had been paying a call upon her, when she was suddenly stricken down and they had spent the night in the flat, not liking to leave her alone. Did they know of any relatives? They did not, but Sir James referred him to Mrs. Vandemeyer's solicitor.

Shortly afterward a nurse arrived to take charge, and the others left the ill-omened building.

"And what now?" asked Julius, with a gesture of despair. "I guess we're done and out for good."

Sir James stroked his chin thoughtfully.

"No," he said quietly. "There is still the chance that Doctor Hall may be able to tell us something. The chance is slight, but it must not be neglected. I think I told you that he is staying at the Metropole. I should suggest that we call upon him there as soon as possible."

It was arranged that Tuppence and Julius should return to the Ritz, and call for Sir James in the car. This program was faithfully carried out, and a little after eleven they drew up before the Metropole. They asked for Doctor Hall, and a page-boy went in search of him. In a few minutes the little doctor came hurrying toward them.

"Can you spare us a few minutes, Doctor Hall?" said Sir James pleasantly. "Let me introduce you to Miss Cowley. Mr. Hershelmer, I think, you already know. Can we have a word with you in private?"

"Certainly. I think there is a room here where we shall be quite undisturbed."

He led the way, and the others followed him. They sat down, and the doctor looked inquiringly at Sir James.

"Doctor Hall, I am very anxious to find a certain young lady for the purpose of obtaining a statement from her. I have reason to believe that she has been at one time or another in your establishment at Bournemouth. I hope I am transgressing no professional etiquette in questioning you on the subject?"

"I suppose it is a matter of testimony?"

Sir James hesitated a moment, then he replied: "Yes."

"I shall be pleased to give you any information in my power. What is the young lady's name? Mr. Hershelmer asked me, I remember."

He half turned to Julius.

"The name," said Sir James bluntly, "is really immaterial. She would be almost certainly sent to you under an assumed one. But I should like to know if you are acquainted with a Mrs. Vandemeyer?"

"Mrs. Vandemeyer of 20 South Audley Mansions? I know her slightly."

"You do not know that Mrs. Vandemeyer is dead?"

"Dear, dear, I had no idea of it. When did it happen?"

"She took an overdose of chloral last night."

"Purposely?"

"Accidentally, it is believed. I should not like to say myself. Anyway, she was found dead this morning."

"Very sad. A singularly handsome woman. I presume she was a friend of yours, since you are acquainted with all these details."

"I am acquainted with the details because—well, it was I who found her dead."

"Indeed," said the doctor, starting. "This is very sad news, but you will excuse me if I say that I do not see how it bears on the subject of your inquiry."

"It bears on it in this way. Is it not a fact that Mrs. Vandemeyer committed a relative of hers to your charge?"

Julius leaned forward eagerly.

"That is the case," said the doctor quietly.

"Under the name of—?"

"Janet Vandemeyer. I understood her to be a niece of Mrs. Vandemeyer's."

"And she came to you?"

"As far as I can remember in June or July of 1915."

"Was she a mental case?"

"She is perfectly sane, if that is what you mean. I understood from Mrs. Vandemeyer that the girl had been with her on the Lusitania when that ill-fated ship was sunk, and had suffered a severe shock in consequence."

"We're on the right track, I think," Sir James looked round.

"As I said before, I'm a mutt!" returned Julius.

The doctor looked at them all curiously.

"You spoke of wanting a statement from her," he said. "Supposing she is not able to give one?"

"What? You have just said that she is perfectly sane."

"So she is. Nevertheless, if you want a statement from her concerning any events prior to May 7, 1915, she will not be able to give it to you. Janet Vandemeyer is suffering from a complete loss of memory."

"What?"

"Quite so. An interesting case, a very interesting case. Not so uncommon, really, as you would think. There are several very well-known parallels. It's the first case of the kind that I've had under my own personal observation, and I must admit that I've found it of absorbing interest. There was something rather ghoulish in the little man's satisfaction."

"And she remembers nothing," said Sir James slowly.

"Nothing prior to May 7, 1915. After that date her memory is as good as yours or mine."

"Then the first thing she remembers?"

"Is landing with the survivors. Everything before that is a blank. She did not know her own name, or where she had come from, or where she was. She couldn't even speak her own tongue."

"But surely all this is most unusual?" put in Julius.

"No, my dear sir. Quite normal under the circumstances. Severe shock to the nervous system. Loss of memory proceeds nearly always on the same lines. I suggested a specialist, of course, but Mrs. Vandemeyer opposed the idea of publicity that might result from such a course."

"I can imagine she would," said Sir James grimly.

"I fell in with her views. There is a certain notoriety given to these cases. And the girl was very young—nineteen, I believe. It seemed a pity that her infirmity should be talked about—might damage her prospects. Besides, there is no special treatment to pursue in such cases. It is really a matter of waiting."

"Waiting?"

"Yes, sooner or later, the memory will return—as suddenly as it went. But in all probability the girl will have entirely forgotten the intervening period, and will take up life where she left off—at the sinking of the Lusitania."

"And when do you expect this to happen?"

The doctor shrugged his shoulders.

"Ah, that I cannot say. Sometimes it is a matter of months, sometimes it has been known to be as long as twenty years! Sometimes another shock does the trick. One restores what the other took away."

"Another shock, eh?" said Julius thoughtfully.

"Exactly. There was a case in Colorado." The little man's voice trailed on, voluble, mildly enthusiastic.

Julius did not seem to be listening. He had relapsed into his own thoughts and was frowning. Suddenly he came out of his brown study, and hit the table such a resounding bang with his fist that everyone jumped, the doctor most of all.

"I've got it! I guess, doc, I'd like your medical opinion on the plan I'm about to outline. Say Jane was to cross the herring pond again, and the same thing was to happen. The submarine, the sinking ship, everyone to take to the boats—and so on. Wouldn't that do the trick? Wouldn't it give a mighty big bump to her subconscious self or whatever the jargon is, and start it functioning again right away?"

"A very interesting speculation, Mr. Hershelmer. In my opinion, it would be successful. It is unfortunate that there is no chance of the conditions repeating themselves as you suggest."

"Why, yes. What's the difficulty? Hire a liner—"

"A liner!" murmured Doctor Hall faintly.

"Hire some passengers, hire a submarine—that's the only difficulty, I guess. Governments are apt to be a bit bit-hounded over their engines of war. They won't sell to the first comer. Still, I guess that can be got over. Ever heard of the word 'graft,' sir? Well, graft gets there every time! I reckon that we shan't really need to fire a torpedo. If everyone hustles round and screams loud enough that the ship is sinking, it ought to be enough for an innocent young girl like Jane. By the time she's got a life-belt on her, and is being hustled into a boat with a well-drilled lot of artistes doing the hysterical stunt on deck, why—she ought to be right back again where she was in May, 1915. How's that for the bare outline?"

Doctor Hall looked at Julius. Everything that he was for the moment incapable of saying was in that look.

"No," said Julius, in answer to it. "I'm not crazy. The thing's perfectly possible. It's done every day in the States for the movies. Haven't you seen trains in collision on the screen? What's the difference between buying up a train and buying up a liner? Get the properties and you can go right ahead!"

Doctor Hall found his voice.

"But the expense, my dear sir. His voice rose. "The expense! It will be colossal!"

"Money doesn't worry me any," exclaimed Julius simply.

Doctor Hall turned an appealing face to Sir James, who smiled slightly.

"Mr. Hershelmer is very well off—very well off indeed."

The doctor's glance came back to Julius with a new and subtle quality in it. This was no longer an eccentric young fellow with a habit of falling off trees. The doctor's eyes held the deference accorded to a really rich man.

"Very remarkable plan. Very remarkable," he murmured. "The movies—of course! And you really mean to carry out this remarkable plan of yours?"

"You bet your bottom dollar I do."

The doctor believed him—which was a tribute to his nationality. If an Englishman had suggested such a thing, he would have grave doubts as to his sanity.

"I cannot guarantee a cure," he pointed out. "Perhaps I ought to make that quite clear."

Essentials for Caring for Milk in Hot Season

During the winter months it is comparatively easy to handle milk so it will keep sweet. In the summer months comes the real test. You cannot handle milk and cream successfully during the summer without trying some means of cooling it quickly and keeping it at a low temperature. The use of a tank is the most satisfactory means which can be employed. The pump should be kept going so that fresh water direct from the well is flowing through this cooling tank. On many farms where such a tank is used all the water going to the various stock tanks is first pumped into the cooling tank, the overflow water going to the stock. Keeping milk sweet is almost entirely a matter of cleanliness and temperature regulation.

You cannot call yourself a successful dairyman until you have learned how to produce clean milk. Milk is a human food and should be treated as such. Dirty milk always carries more quickly than clean milk and quite often has other bad flavors. These bad flavors and the souring are caused by bacteria, which are tiny organisms too small to be seen with the naked eye. They are everywhere present and every particle of dirt has upon it large numbers of these tiny organisms. Most of the bacteria which get into the milk come from dirt on the cow, which falls in the pail while you are milking. These organisms also get into the milk from the utensils, such as cans, pails, strainers, coolers and separators which have not been properly cleaned and sterilized before used.

The bacteria reach their greatest activity and multiply most rapidly when the temperature of the milk is high. They increase very slowly at lower temperatures and for this reason milk should be cooled as quickly as possible and kept at least as low in temperature as water fresh from the well. Milk would never sour if it were possible to keep all the bacteria out of it, but some of these organisms get in spite of our efforts to keep them out, and the only thing we can do to keep them from increasing rapidly in numbers.

Briefly, then, the essentials in caring for milk in the summer months to milk in as cleanly a manner as possible, wiping the flank and udder of the cow with a moist cloth before milking, or even washing if these parts are very dirty, careful cleansing and scalding of utensils, protecting the milk from flies and dirt after it has been drawn and finally cooling it as quickly as possible and holding it at a low temperature. It may be possible to get along without a milk house or milk room but the best results in keeping milk or cream in the proper condition will come from having a room planned for the purpose of handling milk in the best manner possible and the cooling tank is perhaps one of the most essential features of the milk room.

Causes and Control of White Scours in Calves

White scours is sometimes a source of severe loss in very young calves. While usually considered as an acute contagious disease of calves, it frequently occurs as a chronic condition which may be fatal to the calf but which retards its growth and development markedly.

Veterinarians at Cornell University regard an acid condition of the droppings of the calf as an important symptom of this disease. The acidity results from bacteria which are usually introduced through the milk fed to the calf. The acid prevents the digestion of the casein of the milk, thus producing the whitish appearance of the droppings, which is characteristic of the disease. The navel of the newborn calf is also a frequent source of infection.

At Cornell the preventative measures taken for this disease include bathing the navel with an antiseptic and applying a drying powder to close up the opening as soon as possible. The amount and temperature of the milk fed the calf is carefully regulated and great care used to feed under the most sanitary conditions.

Control methods employ the use of barley water, made by adding boiling hot water to finely ground barley and allowing it to stand until nearly cool.

In severe cases the milk is replaced altogether by barley water for a temporary period. Usually, however, equal parts of barley water may be used with whole milk. The principal use of the barley water is to soothe the inflamed membranes of the intestines.

The acidity is corrected by giving a solution of one ounce of bicarbonate of soda and two drams of aromatic in a pint of water. This is given three times daily and has proved very effective. It can be given to the calf by means of a funnel and rubber tube.

Sweet Clover Makes Hay of Excellent Quality

First year sweet clover makes practically as good hay as alfalfa. It should not be mowed until late in the season, however, or the hay might be injured. Second year sweet clover is more rank in growth and makes a coarser hay, but if cut at proper time a very good quality of hay can be obtained. It should be cut before it starts to bloom or preferably on a cloudy day or in the afternoon.

THOMPSON BROS.

Rev E. L. Sisk of Wellington was a visitor in Hedley Tuesday and a pleasant caller at The Informer office.

GLYNNIE IRENE ADAMSON

At an early hour August 30th, the pure, sweet spirit of Glynnie Irene, the little seven year old daughter of Mr and Mrs S. G. Adamson passed into the joys of eternal love.

Near the close of that day she was tenderly laid to rest in the Rowe Cemetery. Many sad hearts turned from the little flower strewn grave.

Asleep to earth, sweet darling child,
But yet awake to heaven
And all the joys that'er have smiled
And peace that love has given.

Asleep to grief, asleep to care,
And yet awake to gladness,
Awake to all that's bright and fair,
Asleep to every sadness.

Asleep, our darling one, to pain
And ev'rything annoying,
Awake to life's sweet, glad refrain,
And ev'ry day enjoying.

Asleep, sweet darling child, to earth,
But yet awake to heaven,
Awake to freedom, life and mirth
And all the peace that love has given.

Paint your house with

THE above picture shows that one gallon of SWP house paint covers 360 square feet of surface, two coats. Ordinary paint covers from 200 to 250 square feet. That is the first saving. SWP, though heavy-bodied, flows easily and evenly, thus cutting down the time required to apply it. That is the second saving. SWP outlasts two or three paintings with ordinary paint, saving the cost of materials for repainting and also saving the labor cost which is about 75 per cent of the total expense.

In buying paint it's the area a gallon covers, not the cost per gallon, that determines its economy. We carry a complete line of SWP. If you plan to paint your house, let us help you.
