You Should Have the Best--Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain-the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent re-sults, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large • sale."

According to sworn statements and wrified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.-Advertisement.

AGAINST THE TIDE

BESETTING you on every hand is the invisible tide which is hourly eweeping humans from their charted course and carrying them into unknown waters.

The captains of courage who have gone before, weathered the treacherous currents and reached a secure haven, are the only ones who can tell you what this opposing tide means to the young or the inexperienced, or the overconfident.

They will tell you how difficult it is to keep your honor bright; how hard It is to steer away from temptation or the habit of loose thinking; how perplexing it is to avoid the sucking shoals when you should keep cool,

HOW GREAT MEN MAKE LOVE

AS REVEALED BY THEIR LOVE LETTERS

.............. By JOSEPH KAYE

( by Wheeler Synaicale, Inc.)

NATHAN HALE AND ALICIA

NATHAN HALE died just as he came of age but the fates recompensed him to some extent by allowing him to enjoy six years of love.

When Hale was a youth of fifteen, he met Alicia Adams of his own age, beautiful and clever. Nathan's brother, Enoch, also met Alicia and he, too, found her beautiful and clever. The result was that both brothers fell in love with the young girl. Nathan, however, was the favored one and when for Tanlac, two bottles and a half he left for college, he had the happiness of knowing that his love was reciprocated.

Then something happened which threw a boulder in the path of the youthful lovers. Mamma Adams and sister Adams objected to Nathan and the long wait for his maturity and success in life and their constant persuasions at length had the desired effect. Alicia married an estimable neighbor named Elijah Ripley. She married him with regret and perhaps she was not very sorrowful when Elijah went 10 the arms of his fathers a year later and left the nineteen-year-old matron a widow.

With Ripley's death, Nathan and Alicia were again drawn towards each other. They became reunited in love and their engagement was formally announced. Then destiny again interfered. Hale joined the army and became one of Washington's most zealous officers. His duty to his country was his paramount thought and no undertaking was too dangerous for him. So it was when Washington asked for a keen-witted officer to send on an important expedition into the enemy's lines, Hale volunteered and was accepted.

The young hero never came back. Disguised as a Dutch schoolmaster, he obtained all the plans and memoranda he was after but as he was returning he was caught. The next morning. without the consolation of a minister or even a Bible, he was hanged, dying with these immortal words on his lips: "I only regret I have but one life to lose for my country !"

The following is a rhymed letter Hale sent to Alicia when the ardor of his love found mere prose inadequate to the expression of his sentiments: "Alicia, born with striking charm, with the gift to ravish and the heart to warm! Fair is thy form, still fairer in mind, with beauty, wisdom and sweetness joined. "Oh, friend sincere, of soul divinely great : sheddest thou for me, a wretch. the sorrowed tear-what thanks can I in this unhappy state return to you but gratitude sincere! Ah, dearest girl, in whom the gods have joined the real blessings which themselves approve-can mortals frown at such a heavenly mind when gods propitious shine for thy love? "Far from the seat of pleasure now I roam; the pleasing landscape now no more I see. Yet absence never shall take my thoughts from home, nor time efface my regard for thee."

DAVID LIVINGSTONE AND MARY MOFFAT

BEAUTIFUL example of pure A love was given to the world by the great explorer and missionary, David Livingstone. He married the daughter of another missionary, Mary Moffat, and the happiness of these two was ideal. In one of his letters to Mary before their marriage Livingstone wrote:

. And now, my dearest, farewell. May God bless you. Let your affection be toward Him much more than toward me; and kept by His power and grace I hope I shall never give you cause to regret that you gave me a part. Whatever friendship we feel toward each other let us always look to Jesus as our common friend and guide, and may He shield you with His everlasting arms from every evil.'

After eight years of married life, Livingstone could still feel inspired to send his wife this letter :

"Cape Town, May 5th, 1892. "My dearest Mary: How I miss you and the dear children ! My heart yearns incessantly for you. How many thoughts of the past crowd in my mind! I feel as if I would treat you much more tenderly and lovingly than ever. You have been a great blessing to me. You attended to my comforts in many ways. May God bless you for all your kindness. I see no face now to be compared with that sunburnt one which has so often greeted me with its kind looks. . . . You may read the letters over again which I wrote you at Mabosto-the sweet time, you know. As I told you before, I tell you again, they are true, true; there is not a bit of hyprocrisy in them. I never show all my feelings; but I can say truly, my dearest, that I loved you when I married you and the longer ] lived with you I loved you the better."

The fatalism of the trenches forbade any other conclusion ; and if this was so, why had he been thrown into the orbit of Zen Transley? He had not sought her ; he had not dreamed of her once in all that morning while her child was winding innocent tendrils of affection about his heart. And yet-how the boy had grinned him! Could it be that in some way he was a small incarnation of the Zen of the Y.D., with all her clamorous passion expressed now in childish love and hero-worship? Had some intelligence above his own guided him into this environment, deliberately inviting him to defy conventions and blaze a path of broader freedom for himself, and for her? These were questions he wrestled with as the shadows crept down the mountain slopes and along the valley at his feet.

For neither Zen nor himself had connived at the situation which had made them, of all the people in the world, near neighbors in this silent valley. Her surprise on meeting him at the door had been as genuine as his. When she had made sure that the boy was not seriously hurt she had turned to him, and instinctively he had known that there are some things which all the weight of passing years can never crush entirely dead. He loved to rehearse her words, her gestures, the quick play of sympathetic emotions, as one by one he reviewed them.

REDUCE DEATH LOSS IN SHIPPING HOGS

At nine of the principal live stock markets during a six-months' period in 1922 there were received a total of 28,375 dead hogs and 38,708 in a more or less crippled condition. Very recent reports from the yards at Denver "You don't say! Thanks for that tip show that the losses there during the about dressing up. in her greeting, and, a color that she would have given worlds to suppress crept slowly through her cheeks.

"I am surprised, too-and delighted," he had returned. "The little boy came to me in the field, boasting of his braces." Then they had both laughed, and she had asked him to come in and tell about himself.

The living-room, as he recalled it, was marked by the simplicity appropriate to the summer home, with just a dash of elegance in the furnishings to suggest that simplicity was a matter of choice and not of necessity. After soothing Wilson's sobs, which had broken out afresh in his mother's erms she had turned him over to a maid and drawn a chair convenient to Grant's.

"You see, I am a farmer now," he said, apologetically regarding his overalls

"What changes have come! But I don't understand; I thought you were rich-very rich-and that you were promoting some kind of settlement scheme. Frank has spoken of it."

"All of which is true. You see, I am a man of whims. I choose to live joyously."

"I know." And It was then that their eyes had met and they had fallen into a momentary silence.

"But why are you farming?" she had exclaimed, brightly.

"For several reasons. But most of all because I love the prairies and the open life. It's my whim, and I follow It."

"You are very wonderful," she had murmured. And then, with startling directness, "Are you happy?"

"As happy as I have any right to be. Happier than I have been since childbood."

She had risen and walked to the mantelpiece; then, with an apparent change of impulse, she had turned and faced him. He had noted that her figure was rounder than in girlhood, her complexion paler, but the sunlight still danced in her hair, and her reckless force had given way to a poise that suggested infinite resources of character.

"Frank has done well, too," she had said.

"So I have heard. I am told that he has done very well indeed."

"He has made money, and he is busy and excited over his pursuit of success-what he calls success. He has given it his life. He thinks of nothing else-"

She had stopped suddenly, as though her tongue had trapped her into saying more than she had intended.

What do you think of my summer home?" she had exclaimed, abruptly. 'Come out and admire the sweet peas,' and with a gay little flourish she had led him into the garden. "They tell me Western flowers have a brilliance and a fragrance which the Beat, with

But as yet he felt none of its wounds. He was concious only of a wholly irrational delight.

As the next forenoon passed Grant found himself glancing with increasing frequency toward the end of the field where the little boy might be expected to appear. But the day wore on without sign of his young friend, and the furrows which he had turned so joyously at nine were dragging leadenly at eleven. He had not thought it possible that a child could so quickly have won a way to his affections. He fell to wondering as to the cause of the boy's absence. Had Zen, after a night's reflection, decided that it was wiser not to allow the acquaintance to develop? Had Transley, returning home, placed his veto upon it? Or-and his heart paused at this prospect-had the foot been more seriously hurt than they had supposed? Grant told himself that he must go over that night and make inquiry. That would be the neighborly thing to do. .

But early that afternoon his heart was delighted by the sight of a little figure skipping joyously over the furrows toward him. He had his hat crumpled in one hand, and his teddybear in the other, and his face was alive with excitement. He was puffing profusely when he pulled up beside the plow, and Grant stopped the team while he got his breath.

"My! My! What is the hurry? see the foot is all better." "We got a pig!" the lad gasped, when he could speak.

"A pig !" "Yessir! A live one, too! He's awful big. A man brought him in a wagon. That is why I couldn't come this morning."

Sunday afternoon saw the arrival of Linder and Murdoch, with the largest teddy the town afforded. "What is the big idea now?" Linder demanded, as he delivered it into Grant's bands. "It is for a little boy I know who

The highest daily gain per head was made in the alfalfa lot that received shelled corn and tankage. The gain in that lot was 1.4 pounds as compared with .65 pounds in the alfalfa lot receiving no tankage and 1.25 pounds in "I take a snort when I want it and I the dry lot where corn and tankage were fed.

The three lots ranked as follows: Alfalfa, shelled corn and tankage, $5.11; dry lot, corn and mankage, $5.69; alfalfa and shelled corn, $6.86. Prices at that time on corn were 75 cents a bushel; tankage, $65 a ton, and pasture, one-half cent a day.

> The pigs in the lot which received no tankage practically destroyed the alfalfa by rooting, while those receiving tankage and alfalfa did not root at all. It was found that tankage greatly increased the rate of gain, reduced the cost of 100 pounds gain and saved the pasture.

Grinding Buckwheat for

Cattle or Hogs Is Best Buckwheat can best be fed to fattening cattle or hogs by grinding it rather coarsely and feeding it dry. Much better results are secured where buckwheat forms only about one-third of the ration, especially when fed to hogs. Because of its coarse outside hull, buckwheat contains too much fiber to give the best results when fed alone to hogs. The hest results will be secured when it is fed along with corn and tankage in a mixture of 60 per cent corn, 30 per cent buckwheat, and 10 per cent tankage. Practically the same results will be secured as where a ration of 90 per cent corn and 10 per cent tankage is used.

Water Supply for Stock

An abundant supply of water is an essential affecting profits in fattening live stock for market. #### CAT AND DOG

He was a very little dog and he was playful and friendly and cunning.

He lived in a big house but the house to him seemed even bigger than it was. That was be cause he was such a tiny dog and everything seemed so new to him still, He had not been in the world so very, very long. He was not really old at all. No, he was still what longed to a Girl. dog. He would never grow to be very big but he would be larger than he now was. They had all said that.

In the house lived a cat. The cat was a very big cat, and she was quite an old cat, too.

As soon as the little dog had been brought to the house the cat had taken a great interest in him.

It is not often that cats and dogs are friendly but of course nov and again they are, particularly 17 they have been brought up together.

They both belonged to a little girl named Elisabeth, whom they loved dearly.

The cat loved her more than the dog did, the cat thought; as she had been with Elisabeth longer and knew her better and so loved her more. But the dog was very devoted to Elisabeth too. The dog's name was Soft, as he was such a little soft, cunning dog, and the cat's name was Nurse. She had been called Mrs. Cat for a long time, but after Soft had been brought to the house her name was changed to Nurse.

That was because she looked after Soft and took charge of him and saw that he did not get into mischief. Soft was very fond of getting into mischief. There was nothing he liked better than a pair of new bedroom slippers or the end of a rug.

Such things were delightful playthings.

But Nurse used to follow him about and give him a little slap with her paw when he began to do things she knew he shouldn't do.

Sometimes when Soft had been missing for some time Nurse knew

Praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

"A Blessing to Suffering Women," Writes One

Louisville, Illinois. — "I certainly thank you for the great benefit I have received from taking Lydia E. Pink-ham's Vegetable Compound. I first learned about it from my step-mother who got so much help from it. Sev-eral years ago I took it for inward weakness and since then I have taken weakness and since then I have taken it during the Change of Life and it has been a great help to me. It certainly is a blessing to suffering women and I take pleasure in recom-mending it. My health has been better this summer than it has been for five years. I am now she to do for five years. I am now able to do all my work and have canned 340 quarts of fruit and vegetables this summer." - Mrs. KATE MCPEAK, Louisville, Illinois.

Wants Letter Used As Proof

Frankford, Pennsylvania .- "I am sure if women who suffer through the Change of Life as I have, with hot flashes, nervousness and other weaknesses, would give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial they would be benefited as I was. My nerves were so bad that every little noise made me jump, but now I am not bothered that way at all. My husband says he really hated to look at me I looked so miserable. I hope you will use this letter as proof of the help the Vegetable Compound is giving me."—Mrs. ABBIE HARVEY, 5701 Leonard St., Frankford, Pa.

are planted in long rows. The a high order. warm sunshine and April rain soon make the seeds grow. The cotton plant grows about four feet high. The leaves are shaped like a maple leaf. They are dark green in color A cotton field in bloom looks like a great rose garden. Each flower looks like a single holly hock. The first day the blossoms day they turn pink or red; on the third day they fall off. Now a little seed pod is formed in place of the blossom It is called a cotton boll. There are many cotton bolls on one stalk Cotten bolls are three , four and five sided. The bolls are green all Summer. Day by day they bolls turn brown and burst open. Let us peep into the opening bolls. They are filled with fluffy white cotton. It looks like snow. Now the field does not look like a rose garden. It is a great field of snowball bushes, all coming in bleom.

As the cotton pickers pick the flaffy white cotton out of the hard brown shells, they put it into bags. When the bags are full The rate of interest is low, and they empty it into baskets, and wagons carry it to the gins.

Let us look at a handful of cotton. See, there are little hard lumps in it! What can they be? Let us try to pull the cotton apart and find out what the bumps are. How hard it is to pull it apart! Oh, those hard bumps are cotton seeds! Mother children. Eliminates darning. Nature has been careful to wrap up the seeds to keep them safe
