McLEAN MAYOR TELLS ABOUT WATERWORKS

The following letter from T. A. Landers, Mayor of McLean, is self explanatory. Mr. Noel's inquiry was prompted by the circulation of a report here to the effect that McLean's water system had proven very unsatisfactory. Read the facts:

McLean, Texas, Nov 8, 1924.
Mr. I. W. Noel,
Hedley, Texas.

Dear Sir:
Mr. Clay Thompson, cashier of the Citizens State Bank, has just handed the writer your recent letter in regard to McLean's water, ice and light plant, with the request that the letter be answered.

There was some opposition to our bond issue when first proposed, but now, after nearly two years of the new order of things, it would be hard to find a man who would be willing to do without these modern conveniences. Quite a number of citizens have torn down perfectly good windmill water systems and are now on the city mains. A much larger number than was expected are using electric lights. Some disastrous fires have been prevented by the prompt use of the city water.

Several new business buildings are under process of construction, as well as new residences built this summer, and there is a general air of prosperity in McLean that we could not have reasonably expected without lights and water.

An election was held the past summer that carried two to one, authorizing the City Council to order sidewalks built at the expense of the property owners affected, and other improvements are in mind.

Trusting that this is the information you desire, and assuring you that McLean is very much alive and justly proud of her municipal improvements, I am

Very truly yours

COTTON RECEIPTS MOUNTING SWIFTLY

The Informer man visited the Hedley cotton yard Wednesday morning and found "all hands on the job and going strong." Nearly 2250 bales had been weighed in up to that time, and today has started off like a record breaker in the matter of receipts.

Weigher Simmons informs us that we are more than 800 bales ahead of last year's total on this date, notwithstanding the fact that we started two or three weeks later this year. We call that goin' some.

We need a lot more nice, clear weather for picking purposes, but the indications for such are not so good just now.

THE SECOND LYCEUM NUMBER ON NOV. 18th

Hon. H. L. Cloud, Indian, Minister, Educator, Solon, will appear at the Hedley School auditorium Tuesday evening, Nov. 18th, as the second number of our Lyceum Course, in a delightfully interesting and instructive lecture entitled "An Indian on the War Path," supported by Curious Legends and Memoirs.

Mr. Cloud, battling against in conceivable odds, an Indian, the son of Cherokee parents, an orphan at an early age, has met the world and its rebuffs with a conquering smile. Making friends as he goes, his ambition and energy have placed him far in the lead of most of his tribesmen. At an early age he taught and ministered to his countrymen. His superior executive ability and knowledge of politics have also called him until today he stands as an undisputed leader in three leading fields—the School, the Church, the Law.

Hear a native American who advocates that we live longer, do better, die happier. A true patriot with a patriotic message. Remember: Nov. 18th, at the school auditorium.

NERVOUS & HALF-SICK WOMEN
Relieved by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound
These Three Letters Prove It

Lowell, Mass.—"I am sending you a few lines to let you know what good your medicine has done for me. I want you to let every one know that it has helped me in nervous troubles. I have four children and you know there is a lot to do where children are. They would come in from school and they would start telling me about their little troubles but I could not stand it. I had to send them away. I could not even walk on the street alone I was so nervous. I found one of your books and read it and then I saw in the paper about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I got it and had taken one bottle when I saw a change in myself. I was surprised. The children can talk all they would break and I had a hurting in my sides. I had been reading in the newspapers the letters of other women who had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the advertising of it appealed to me so I bought some and saw results in almost no time. I had hardly been able to do my own work and after taking the Vegetable Compound I felt like a new woman. I recommend it to my friends who have troubles like I did, and hope they will find the same results."—Mrs. M. CARPENTER, 607 W. Chase Street, Springfield, Missouri.

40 Years Old, Feels Like 20
Hagerstown, Md.—"I was very bad off with backache, a bearing-down feeling in my body and a pain in my left side. I could not be on my feet at times and once I was so bad I walked bent over on one side for three weeks. My sister read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and got me a bottle. I got so much relief that I took more until I was well. I am 40 years old and feel like 20. I am sure this medicine will help all women."—Mrs. MARY E. SANDY, 406 W. Franklin Street, Hagerstown, Md.

Comforts and Conveniences for Dairy Herd Provided in Stable

By WILLIAM A. RADFORD
Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all problems pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on the subject. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie Avenue, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

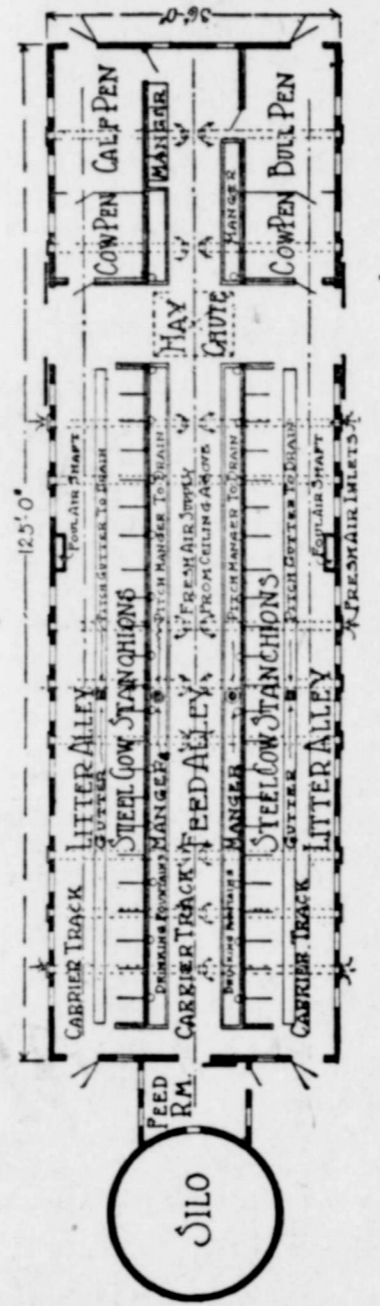

Owners of a fairly large sized herd of cows use a barn such as the one shown above for it provides a comfortable stable for the cows, the calves and the herd bull, a convenient place for caring for the animals and storage space for the grain, feed,ilage and roughage that the cows need.

Indicated on the floor plan are all the modern labor-saving and comfort-giving features that are available for dairymen. The stable floor is provided with sanitary steel stall partitions, movable steel stanchions, water cups at each stall head, pitched gutters for drainage of the liquid waste, pitched mangers, so that they may be hosed out and kept clean and a ventilating system that, no matter what the outside temperature, provides the cows with fresh, pure air, without drafts; and a feed and litter carrier.

The barn is 125 feet long and 36 feet wide. There is a center alley wide enough to permit a wagon to be driven through. The stalls are ranged along this central feeding alley, the cows facing in. At the end are four pens, one for the bull and others for the cows or calves. Between the pens and the stall rows is a driveway across the stable, with the hay chute above. This permits the hay wagons to be driven into the barn and the hay to be hoisted to the mow floor through the door in the mow floor.

At the far end of the building is a silo of sufficient size to hold the silage needed by a herd of about fifty animals the barn will house. Connecting the silo with the barn is a feed room.

The building is set on a concrete foundation with a concrete stable floor. The building is of plank frame construction of the gambrel roof type. This eliminates supporting columns in the mow and makes it convenient to handle the hay.

Feed from the silo is transported to the mangers by the overhead carrier, which also is used to take out the litter, the plan showing carrier tracks over both the feed alley and the litter alleys on either side.

SWEATERS OF KNITTED SILK; BLOUSES FOR SEMI-DRESS

SPEAKING of knitted apparel quite apropos nowadays, is the phrase, "To the queen's taste," for recorded in the history of present-day fashions is the interesting statement that Queen Mary of England has chosen not less than six knitted outfits as part of her fall wardrobe.

Nor is it to be regarded as other than a logical sequence that knitted costumes should qualify as raiment for royalty as interpreted this season in terms of picturesque tunic frocks, handsome ensemble suits, novelty top-coats, sweaters the like of which have never been equaled, not to mention scarfs, shawls and the like.

When it comes to sweater elegance, exclusive taste favors the type knitted are considering all those afternoon and evening affairs that call for semi-dress. They have presented many versions of the blouse both for semi-dress and formal wear and in the majority of them the keynote of designing and style is simplicity. With the introduction of the tunic-bouise, and the adoption of the richest fabrics for making it, the blouse takes its place in the company of formal clothes. The "ensemble" costume also invites the use of the overblouse in splendid fabrics.

The two blouses pictured are of the sort that Paris proposes for afternoon or dinner wear and both bear the approved stamp of simplicity. Vivid colors may be chosen for them, especially when they are worn with black satin skirts, and it is easy to see how very useful such blouses make themselves. For the models pictured crepe satin is used and this fabric, having a dull and a lustrous side, allows a simple design to become very interesting. In the blouse at the left of russet satin the blouse is made with the lustrous surface out, but the inserted plaided panel turns the other face of the goods out. The model has a low neckline and long sleeves which are set on to short sleeves cut in one with the blouse. Medallions embroidered in black and ecru silk are set off by their russet background and there is a narrow hip band tied at the right side.

Individuality and originality have reached their highest expression this season throughout all knitted underwear. Remarkable effects are attained in brushed wool, in clipped yarn trimmings, in knitted boucle and fur simulations, in combinations of woolen yarn with rayon or fiber silk, in gorgeous embroideries, gay colors on white knitted garments especially.

Among the knitted garments playing an important role at all fashionable

Practical Items That Are Useful to Home Owners

Small buildings, such as residences, etc., can be leveled up with a hand-level as easily as with a leveling instrument. Take a lime barrel, or any kind of a stand will do; pivot the level on a small block, and when the level is lined up with the point that you want, take a feather-edged wedge and slip under the level toward the low end. When your hand-level is level, sight over the top, and indicate to the target holder by the usual signals, the right way to move the target. After you have the first point, repeat the operation as often as necessary to level up the whole building.

A simple way to figure the number of studding required for the walls and partitions of a building, from the blueprints, is as follows:

Take a plan with a one-fourth-inch scale; with a rule measure all of the walls and partitions, in inches, shown on the blueprints. Then multiply the number of inches by three and add one for every intersection, and you will have the number of studding required.

The explanation is simple: Every inch of drawing represents a distance of four feet—four feet, spacing the studding at sixteen inches o. c., will require three studding, plus an extra one for every intersection.

The same principle can be applied where the scale is one-eighth-inch; simply multiply by six instead of three. If the scale is smaller or larger than the two mentioned, the process is the same; of course, the multiplier must be kept in the right proportion.

Foundations Should Be Watched in Home Building

There is no phase of house building where the services of a supervising architect are of greater value than when the foundations are being laid. It is the architect's business to see that the contractor puts the foundations and footings in exactly as shown in the drawings.

Perhaps the contractor makes an error in his excavations and as a result wants to make the footings a bit wider or deeper than called for. The architect will know whether this can be done with safety or not. To increase the depth or area of the footings may often prove as disastrous as to have a skimping contractor decrease their area of depth. The entire foundation may be thrown out of balance by such a move, the weight of the house distributed unevenly.

A safe general rule to follow is that the projection from the wall or column base should be not more than one-half of the depth.

If the foundations or footings are unequal in their strength or improperly placed or designed to carry the load they receive, the house will settle unevenly, cracks will appear in the walls and ceilings, window and door jams will be drawn out of plumb, and cold air, rain, dust, mosquitoes and trouble may filter in around the window casings.

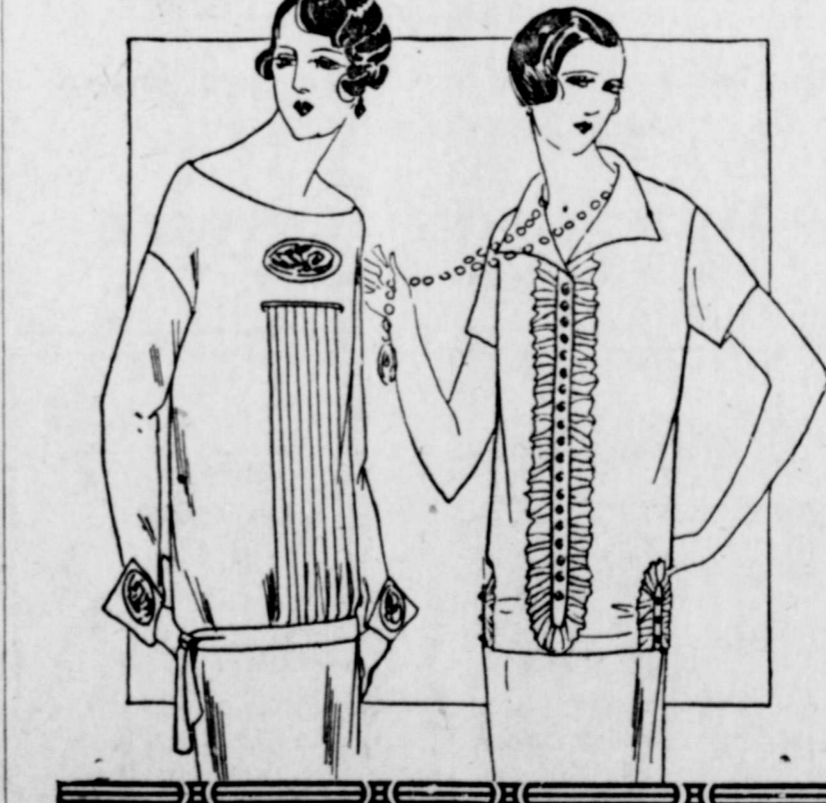

Window Sills Keynote to Color Harmony

You have given the outside of your home the proper paint protection, guarding it against the ravages of rain, wind and storm. But there are parts of the house that might be considered as both interior and exterior—the window sills. They must be painted to harmonize with the interior color scheme, and they must be properly painted to resist the elements.

All dirt and loose paint must be carefully removed from the sill before it is painted. Three coats of paint are essential, allowing plenty of drying time between coats. Thus protected, the heat of summer sun and the devastating moisture of sudden showers will not "weather" and wear away the wood of the sills. The artistic value of the sills is greatly increased by painting in harmonious and pleasing colors.

About Windows

Just as a window acts as a frame for the outside scene, it should also frame a beautiful interior. Therefore, this is the place for a beautiful grouping of pieces, especially if the window or window group is rather large.

Two Blouses From Paris.

In the pretty blouse at the right the designer has provided a rolling collar but has shortened the sleeves. Imagine it in Lanvin green satin with frills of cream-colored net and black glass buttons for adornment. It has no hip band but fits snugly with a little fullness about the bottom, gathered into side trimming. Banded crepe de chine models hold their own in the displays and many beautiful color combinations distinguish them. Then, also, blouses of rich brocades, self-sufficient so far as being decorative is concerned, velvet brocaded chiffon and metal brocades, especially in gold, are usually finished with touches of fur. Sometimes black satin or velvet is used in combination with brocades.

Parisienne seem to look upon blouses with much favor when they occasions where sportswear prevails, the three-quarter length coat, most frequently in brush wool, is the outstanding item. These are not flamboyant in color but, rather, developed in soft woolen yarns. Soft blendings of brown and tan worked in mosaic patterns are favored.

BLANKENSHIPS HERE

Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Blankenship visited this week at the home of their brother, John E. Blankenship. They have just closed a meeting at Miami, and are en route to Chickasha, Okla., where they will attend a Baptist Convention. They will then go to Dallas for another convention, and after that plan a trip to California, where they own some valuable property.

Mr. and Mrs. Blankenship are known all over the country as Gospel Singers and Evangelists, and as such have few equals and no superiors. They have been in eighteen meetings this year in which the church has gained more than 1000 additions. This in spite of unusual political activities which have largely upset other lines of endeavor.

EIG TURKEY SHIPMENT

R. S. Smith, produce dealer, shipped out a $4000 car of turkeys one day the past week, the season's first full car shipment from this place.

Mr. Smith tells us that he had to turn back nearly as many as he bought, the price being so attractive the supply far exceeded the demand at that time.

Mrs. R. E. L. Roy made the largest individual sale on that day, bringing in slightly more than 1200 pounds of turkeys for which she was paid $241.24.

MISS LULA AKERS

The Informer deeply regrets to have to chronicle the death of Miss Lula Akers, who passed away Tuesday of last week at the home of her sister, Mrs. F. G. Watt, in south Hedley.

Her death came as a shock to the many friends of the family here and elsewhere, it not having been known by them that she was seriously ill.

Since the death of her father, the late Judge J. S. Akers, a few years ago, Miss Lula has made her home with her sisters, Mrs. Watt of this city, Mrs. McCants of Giles, and Mrs. P. H. Williams of San Angelo.

Funeral services were conducted Wednesday at the First Christian church, after which the remains were taken to Memphis and laid to rest in the family burial ground.

The Informer joins their host of friends in sincere sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

RUB OFF THE DUST

TO KEEP your mind bright, your conscience clean and your vision clear, rub off the rust. Let no day pass in which you have failed to do some vigorous rubbing.

If you cannot recall past impressions in the most vivid way, your memory is rusting. Seek the rust spots, give yourself no rest until they have been found and rubbed out.

The need for diligent action is imperative. And this activity must be your own. No one else is qualified to do the work.

If there be an impoverishment of thought, rub off the gathering rust by reading instructive books, by calling up scenes from other days, by taking solitary walks along hillside paths and in the leafy aisles of the woods.

As you go from place to place keep your eyes open. Train your faculties to recall what you have seen so that you may be able at some other time to describe the mental pictures to your friends.

Stop in the fields of daisies, pluck one of the flowers, pull it apart, contemplate its exquisite formation, its dainty coloring, and let your thoughts run free with a loose rein. Do not pause until you have become fully impressed with the perfect handwork of Nature—with never a blemish or a speck of rust.

Listen to the music of the birds! There are no rusty notes in their

Reflections of a Bachelor Girl

By HELEN ROWLAND

YOU can always tell a bachelor from a married man by his responsiveness to flattery—the married man's responsiveness.

Jealousy is the autocracy of the heart; and the surest way to lose your dominion over a man's affections is to let him feel the weight of the scepter.

A man is always grateful for the gift of a woman's friendship, but he regards her love more as a "souvenir" or a "premium" than as a gift.

Neither fear nor conscience ever made a man true to a woman; a man may smoke because he wants to, or drink because he likes to; but when he loves a woman it is because he can't HELP it.

Contrary to the weather reports, this is the time of year when an eligible bachelor is most apt to get cold feet—from skating on the thin ice of flirtation.

When a man tells you that you remind him of some other woman, it is foolish to feel flattered; because when a man is in love with you, dearie, there is no other woman in the whole world just like you.

The man who lies under the car trying to fix the engine, while his wife

FRUIT FOR THE FAMILY

FRUIT should be served freely in any family, and especially where there are young children. Canned fruit in winter takes the place of the fresh fruit, which is much more desirable when it can be obtained.

A bit of pineapple added to almost any fruit combination is an improvement, as the pineapple flavor seems to enhance the flavors of other fruits. Pineapple is good for the digestion, as it contains a pepsin all its own.

Tapioca Pudding.

Drain the sirup from one can of peaches or pineapple, add enough water to the sirup to make three and one-half cups of liquid. Bring to the boiling point and add one cupful of minute tapioca and cook, stirring constantly until clear. Pour one-half in a baking dish, cover with the fruit, adding a handful of dates or raisins; pour over the remaining tapioca and bake in a moderate oven 45 minutes. Serve with cream and sugar.

Add sliced peaches, pineapple or any desired fruit to a cottage pudding, and bake in gem pans. Serve with the fruit sirup, thickened slightly and with a bit of butter and a dash of lemon juice added.

Shorter's need not be confined to the strawberry season, for many fruits may be delightfully served in that way. Even canned fruits are well liked, and when thinking of something for a change, try sliced oranges; they praiseful songs that glint and shine like streams of gold as they flow from their swelling throats.

Think whence the tuneful melodies come. Rub the rust off your intellect until it shall gleam like a mirror, reflecting the beautiful all around you. It will do you good, stir your imagination and make of you a nobler being.

To make ourselves better, to make ourselves worthy of respect, we must fight against the rust that dulls minds and darkens visions. Without active minds and penetrating visions, we have no real existence. Let us raise our eyes to the heavens and think!

Let us try to vision the vastness of space, what lies millions, billions and trillions of miles beyond. Let us get away from the eating rust and cank decay.

And above everything else, let us thank God for the wonderful things which human greed and selfishness cannot control—free as the ambient air to the humblest creature of His creation.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

THE THREE PUPPIES

They were going to be taken to a new home in the country.

They were going to belong to three boys, but for a while they would stay with their mother and with one boy. The other two boys lived in two different houses.

All were friends so the puppies and their mother would never really be separated. They could see each other every day and one would live right in the same house with his mother. The mother was walking along from the station to the house. It was quite a long walk, but she did not mind it.

The father of one of the boys was beside her and he was carrying a great big basket in which were the three puppies.

Every once in a while he stopped and the mother dog stopped, too, and he would let the puppies get out and have a little run. Then he would put them back in the basket again, for their little legs were not strong enough for the long walk.

The three boys met the three puppies and the mother dog. Oh, how delighted they were!

The puppies were so soft and furry and their little bodies were so fat.

Their little eyes looked so naughty when they were awake, but it seemed very easy for them to go to sleep, too.

One puppy was black and the other two were brown.

One was named Blackie and one was named Brownie and the third was named Tan.

They took to their new home at once and the other two boys came over to see the puppies they would have in their own homes before long.

The puppies seemed to know they were to have these boys as their masters for each took special notice of his own.

The mother dog was so proud of her little soft, warm, furry darlings and she loved it when they came to lie down close to her, falling over each other, not at all steady on their dear, cunning little legs.

The boys felt proud of the puppies, too. They could see the days ahead when the puppies would be full-grown dogs and when they would go for long walks and cross-country runs.

But the three puppies did not think much of the future. They simply thought of their warm, beautiful home, of the boys who came to see them and who seemed so fond of them, of their mother who loved them and watched over them, of the pleasant, cozy warm house in which they lived.

And they thought, too, of the games they could play—naughty, mischievous games.

They dreamed sweet dreams when they slept, but when they were awake they thought of pranks to play and frolics with slippers.

It was such fun to try to get hold of things to tear!

They weren't so unaturally good that any one worried about their health.

But they had received a beautiful welcome in the world and they wanted to show in return how jolly and merry they could be.

Even if a slipper did have to suffer, what was that compared to missing some fun?

Oh, the three puppies grew to learn so many things that they were certainly considered active.

Oh yes, no one thought the puppies were anything but healthy and well. And even sometimes they were almost too healthy in their way of playing and not getting tired, but still they were forgiven a great deal.

For they were three such nice puppies. And who wouldn't forgive three nice puppies a great deal?

Good Place to Cry

Mary Lou had been naughty and was punished. She began to wail loudly, whereupon her mother said, sternly, "Mary Lou, stop that at once. You can't cry around here, I won't have it!"

The little girl quickly dried her eyes, but a moment later, she started toward the door.

"Good-by, mamma," she said, whimsically, "I's goin' over to grandma's to cry."

WHAT ANY WIFE KNOWS

THAT all her rose leaves have turned to ten leaves.

That married life has not proved so wonderful after all.

That she would give anything to live her life all over again.

That it isn't so easy to be a successful, loving and interesting wife.

That she is no longer so pretty as she was.

That she knew her husband was going to propose long before he knew it himself.

That she also went halfway to meet him over it.

That her children are really perfectly ordinary.

That her courtship was the most ordinary, matter-of-fact affair under the sun.

That her husband does not love her quite so ardently and passionately as of yore.

That she would give ten years of her life to be as pretty as Lillian Russell.

That her husband frequently shows signs of boredom.

That she would rather be an independent worker.

That she will always love her husband, whatever happens.

HOW GREAT MEN MAKE LOVE

AS REVEALED BY THEIR LOVE LETTERS

By JOSEPH KAYE

(© by Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

WALT WHITMAN AND ANNE GILCHRIST

ANNE GILCHRIST was a passionate admirer of Walt Whitman, the poet and the man; she was free; she was the woman he admired above any other—yet they were fated to remain apart, for Walt Whitman had given his heart to another and it remained in that other's possession even after she had married some one else.

Mrs. Gilchrist was an English writer whose husband had died when she was thirty-three and left her with four children. Eight years later she read the newly published book of Whitman's first poems, "Leaves of Grass." It was a revelation to her and made her a devoted Whitman disciple.

Whitman was badly in need of such friends. His book, which he had set up with his own hands—he was a printer among other things—because he could not find a publisher for it, was universally abused and ridiculed. His unconventional metrical style and his freedom in discussing social and moral subjects both astonished and shocked readers and critics and a friendly word for his work was a holiday for the poet.

During the Civil war, Whitman had served as a volunteer nurse, and when it was over, he found he had ruined his health. Thereafter, he was partly an invalid in his home at Camden, N. J. Mrs. Gilchrist, to be near the man she loved in his affliction, came to America with her children and lived in Philadelphia and then in New York. Personal acquaintance caused no disillusionment and their platonic love continued as before.

Mrs. Gilchrist had to leave America to educate her daughter in Europe and Whitman never saw her again. She died in England in 1885.

The following is the third letter in the series Mrs. Gilchrist wrote to Whitman:

"I wrote you a letter of the 6th of September and would fain know whether it has reached your hand. If it has not I will write its contents again quickly to you—if it has I will await your time with courage and with patience for an answer; but spare me the needless suffering of uncertainty on this point and let me have one line, one word of assurance that I am no longer hidden from you by a thick cloud—I from thee, thou from me; for I have never set eyes upon thee. All the Atlantic—flowing between us, yet cleave closer than those that stand nearest—last thoughts, first thoughts, my soul's passionate yearning toward thy divine soul, every hour, every deed and thought—my love for my children, my hopes, my aspirations for them, all taking new shape, new height, through this great love. My soul has staked all upon it. In dull, dark moods when I cannot, as it were, see thee, still, still always a dumb, blind yearning toward thee—still it comforts me to touch, to press to me the beloved book—like a child holding some hand in the dark—it knows not whose—but knows it enough—knows it is a dear, strong, comforting hand. Do not say I am forward, or that I lack pride because I tell this love to thee who never have sought or made a sign of desiring to seek me. Oh, for all that, this love is my pride, my glory. . . ."

GEN. ROBERT E. LEE AND MARY PARK CUSTIS

NOT a love letter is this, in the sense of burning and passionate phrases. But the letter of a man whose heart is filled with love at all times, who needs no sudden emotion to kindle a new spurt of flame for the woman who fills his life, and the home circle she has created for him.

This letter was written by General Lee, commander in chief of the Confederate armies, to his wife, who was Mary Park Custis, great-granddaughter of Martha Washington.

"You do not know how much I have missed you and the dear children, my dear Mary. To be alone in a crowd is very solitary. In the woods I feel sympathy for the trees and the birds in whose company I take delight, but experience no pleasure in a strange crowd.

"I hope you are all well and will continue so, and I must again urge you to be very prudent and careful of those children. If I could only get a squeeze at that little fellow turning up his sweet mouth to 'keese haba!' You must not let him run wild in my absence and you will have to exercise firm authority over all of them. This will not require severity or even strictness, but constant attention and an unwavering course. Mildness and forbearance will strengthen their affection for you, while it will maintain your control over them."

Old Folks' Ailments

"I began taking Black-Draught over fifty years ago and my experience with it stretches over a good long time," says Mr. Joe A. Blake, a Civil War veteran and former Virginian, who is now a prominent citizen of Floyd, Texas. "It is the best laxative I know of for old people. . . . A good many years ago, in Virginia, I used to get bilious and I found that was the best and quickest relief I could get. Since I came to Texas I have these bilious attacks every now and then—a man will get bilious anywhere, you know—and I find that a little Black-Draught soon straightens me out. After a few doses, in little or no time I'm all right again." Thedford's Black-Draught is a purely vegetable liver medicine, used in America for over eighty years. It acts on the stomach, liver and bowels in a gentle, natural way, assisting digestion and relieving constipation. Sold everywhere. E-102

I have plenty of money to loan on farms, and will give you Quick Service. Come in and see me and let us talk it over. The rate of interest is low, and the reliability of my company is without question. L. A. STROUD, Hedley, Texas

T. E. L. ENTERTAIN

A most delightful social event was given in the Baptist Church annex last Friday afternoon when the T. E. L. Class entertained the Dorcas Class.

A very entertaining program was given and much enjoyed. During the social hour, delicious sandwiches, cake and coffee were served, and the time for departure came all too soon.

The members of the Dorcas Class are highly appreciative of the hospitality shown them by the T. E. L. Class, and hope some time to reciprocate.

The Informer office enjoyed a visit yesterday from Rev. H. W. Hanzelman, the new pastor of the Nazarene Church. Bro. Hanzelman, his wife and daughter come to Hedley from Caddo, Okla. We welcome them. Rev. J. W. Hipp, former pastor here, will return to evangelical work, his headquarters to be at Altus, Okla.

Joe Gilliam was here Saturday and Sunday from Quitaque. Joe is now covering that territory as a representative of the Ford Motor Co. and informs us that everything is looking fine and dandy thereabouts.

Ask the Informer man about the Fort Worth Record. "Bargain Days" are already here.

Robert Stroud was here from Amarillo Sunday, on a visit to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Stroud. Bob reports everybody busy in the big town.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Johnson, one day the past week, a fine boy baby Congratulations

Mr. and Mrs. J. T. McIntosh of McLean visited the W. J. Luttrell family and other relatives here Sunday.

C. M. Shook, a former prominent citizen of Hedley who now lives at Arlington, is attending to business and visiting friends here this week. He was a welcome caller at the Informer ofice Tuesday.

C. H. Dean is visiting friends here this week. He has spent the past few months at Colorado points and in Amarillo.

R. G. Adamson returned last weeks from a stay of several weeks in Colorado.

THINK THIS OVER

IF YOU LOVE YOUR SURROUNDINGS—if you've worked to make beautiful the place where you dwell, you do not want your efforts ruined by lack of foresight.

A good lawn is the fruit of hard work—rich shrubbery does not grow in a day, and a smooth pavement represents a considerable outlay.

Insurance may cover some of it—not all. There are those countless little things that money cannot replace. It may be a sad little family that will some day view the remains of what has been their home.

In your home, no doubt, there is always water when you want it. But new families are constantly moving into your town. From a business standpoint, a lack of water strangles the growth of the town.

The establishment of a good waterworks system in a town is the first step toward real civic progress. With a waterworks system a town's natural advantages become assets; without it they are useless and unprofitable.
