FROM THE SILENCE

FROM the silent activity of the human brain come the world's great est achievements, in the arts, in music, in letters and in statesmanship. Moving night and day, unceasing in its efforts to attain a higher plane, the mind of man is ever reaching out to unexplored realms in its perpetual quest for something new-something greater. grander and more sublime than is known today.

And in this quest the silent mind is the most potential force in the universe.

Every material thing in time must eventually yield to this awe-inspiring energy. If you will closely observe the men who are stirring the world by their accomplishments, who are rising above impending obstacles to new heights, who are sweeping away ancient traditions, startling mankind with the flaring torch of newly discovered truths, all having a bearing on a higher and better life, you will find they are souls of silence, dweiling with the stillness of their own thoughts.

Only the silent minds can separate the gold from the dross; only the silent minds venture the dizziest elevations and dare strike a new note that rings nature, with whom they walk arm and arm on intimate terms, gathering from her her secrets and using them for the plifting of the world's peoples.

Such minds seek solitude, for it is in the quiet seclusion of their own chosen environment that they go forth in search of life and light and treasure, far too rich and elusive to be found except by souls who hunt in silence and are willing if necessary to give a lifetime to the quest. In this respect the silent man roes far beyond all the louder types. Beiag humble, sincere, patient, earnest and devoted to his cause, he never falters in the work he has set himself to do. He holds resolutely to his purpose. tranquilly wending his way without noise or bluster.

He has a certain rugged ardor of emperament which never admits defeat or loss of faith. He is the type of man that changes the destinies of nations overnight; not an actor, not an mitator, but a creator, a prototype of divinity itself, vested with power of relevation, with which he was born.

No matter how good a brain a man has, there are problems that tax it to the utmost.

There is too much "splendid isolation" of individuals.

MOST of a married woman's life is spent in thinking up devices for curing a man's little vices.

What a man calls his "friendship" for a woman is always either the beginning of love, or what is left of it. after the romance and the thrills are gone.

A woman's accusations roll right off a man's consciousness like water off a rubber coat; but her dead silence is sometimes so fraught with meaning that it makes him shiver with apprehension.

A mind-woman is the lily that adorns a platform; a heart-woman is a rose that sweetens a man's own home. The average man always marries one of these-and then spends his life thinking wistfully of the other.

A woman seldom finds real love until she has grown weary looking for it, as begun to look for the amuse ment and diversion of synthetic sentiment.

The slippers were bedroom slippers and they were knitted ones. They were very magnificent.

They had fluffy, knitted borders, and beautiful blue bows with a little shining button in each bow.

They had soft soles and lovely white fleecy linings. They were warm without being heavy.

And oh, they always were so beautifully made. Some people made things and they dida't fit and you had to pretend to like them. But with mother's things it was different.

She made them so you were proud and not ashamed to wear them. If no one noticed your feet and you were wearing a pair of mother's slippers you at once drew attention to your feet.

Well, several months had gone by and Melly had only worn her slippers once

She had put them away on the shelf with a big white handkerchief around them so they would keep clean until . she began to really wear them quite often.

That was the way her mother did. She kept the slippers in a big white handkerchief while they were waiting for the time when they would be given.

And her mother had a way of hiding the slippers and of making them when no one saw her at it, so that they had always come as a surprise. No one had ever expected their slippers just the time they had been given them

This is one of the many "Twoon-an-Island" stories that have a popular ever since Charles heade's classic, "Foul Play," was published in 1869. So, of course, it is a story of adventure, love-and sex. Briefly, a young man and a young woman are wrecked in an airplane, land on an out-of-way island inhabited by canaibals, and fail in love. The sit-uation is still further compli-cated by the fact that the girl is engaged to a man in England and has been brought up among people who are strait-laced and narrow-minded beyond belief. But love finds a way-as it usually does-even on cannibal-infested islands.

LOVE FINDS A WAY

A feature of the story, of course is the study of the girl's mind ard heart in her struggle between love and duty, with Mrs. Grundy thrown in for good measure. So it is a story that a woman could write better than a man. The author is a English-woman, Clive Arden. Her story man is not only her first novel, but a prize novel. It caused a sensaon last year in England, has duplicated that success here and s now being shown in moving pictures in various parts of the country, the picture rights having been purchased for a very large price.

Quite an interesting problem. isn't it-two people in love, res-cue improbable and no minister handy to tie the knot and trans-form sorrow to happiness!

It was as yet not quite sure of its line, though painfully anxious to appear assured-one half shocked at the other half's doings, and altogether rather mixed.

This had been apparent, a year ago, when divorce had raised its ominous head for the first time within the memory of living inhabitants. Divorces took place elsewhere, of course, and Darburyltes read and discussed the newspaper accounts with avidity ; but there be private trouble between the rect, piercing look fastened upon her. engaged couple? But the girl herself went about as usual, only a suppressed excitement deepening the already deep blue of her eyes, bubbling out occasionally into scraps of confidential speech which yet were no confidences at all.

"Such an adventure !" she exclaimed. when Miss Brown sought to probe to the soul of this problem. "The only one I have ever had. There will never be such another chance."

This from one who should have been deep in the adventure of marriage! Miss Brown was rather shocked. Hugh, she learned, had been averse to the idea at first. Quite right and proper! He had also steadfastly refused to go too; and Darbury had agreed with the decision. That a man should give up the routine of anturan' pursuits was unheard of Besides, he managed his father's extensive property, and the harvest would soon be in full swing. Darbury, like Hugh, was essentially practical.

Great difficulty, it transpired over the tea cups, had been experienced in overcoming Mrs. Stockley's objections. But as she, like many weak women, usually took refuge in tears when thwarted, little direct information was obtained.

At the same instant Mrs. Field came briskly round the corner of the tent. "Ah !" she cried. "You are here first, Alan." Then, turning to Barbara, "I want to introduce you both," she said. taking an arm of each.

And Barbara, feeling uncomfortably self-conscious, too bewildered to do more than stammer a conventional greeting, was forced to lift her eves to his. They were deep-set and gray like those of his cousin, but lacking the tenderness which lurked in hers; the little lines at their corners, surely betokening humor, appeared out of place. In her rapid glance she was dimly aware of great height, broad shoulders and a lean, deeply tanned, clean-shaven face. "Alan borrowed a car and turned up last night." Mrs. Field smoothed over the impending awkwardness; but at that moment some one called her away. There fell a silence, which the girl racked her brains in vain to break. She was somehow conscious of feeling acutely disappointed. This was the man who, to her inexperienced mind,

Even if, as she had told Miss Brown, it did not matter, it was, nevertheless, very disappointing.

Before the pause became too uncomfortable, Mrs. Field returned and insisted upon having tea. On these occasions tea suggests a gathering of the clans. All the little cliques of the quee and discuss the news they have glenned.

Barbara was detained at the entrance; and Mrs. Field looked at her cousin with kindly enthusiasm, when they found a vacant table. "Well, Alan? Isn't she a dear girl?

smiled again. No modern affectation showed in Croft's dancing. He abandoned himself to the rhythm of the music, with an ease which swept the girl along in sympathetic exhilaration. She forgot the imperfect floor, the clumsy couples, the staring eyes, mere instinctive dislike of this strange man, and surrendered herself to the rare joy of perfect harmony in movement. When, for an instant, she glanced up at her partner, she saw in his face a corresponding light which filled her with a momentary sense of fellowship.

Afterward, they strolled out on the terrace, flooded in the red gold of the setting sun. Barbara sat upon the low parapet. Croft flung his long legs over and drew out his cigarettes. Presently she found his glance fixed upon her. "Well?" he asked, without preliminaries. "What about our little trip? Have you counted all the risks?"

"Risks? No! Or I might never get there !"

His quick look of approval was lost on the girl, as she glanced away with a laugh

"That's my creed." From the determined lines of his well-cut lips, she judged this to be the truth

"But your 'heart's desire'?" he went on; "what do you mean by that?"

She flushed faintly; the shy reserve in her nature ever made personal talk difficult.

"Surely you have that?" he suggested boldly, waving his clgarette toward the diamond scintillating on her finger.

"Oh, yes. Yes. I have, of course in that way," she replied hurriedly. The band struck up a stirring jazz tune, a medley bringing hints of tomtoms, drums, rattling castanets, the uncouth music of the East.

"Oh !" she cried involuntarily

"COMMAND your mistress; give me this happiness-"

In such impassioned words the Comtesse de Nicolsen addressed the soldier of fortune, John Paul Jones. The comtesse was beautiful, the wife of a highly placed emissary to France from Holland, rich and surrounded by members of the most exclusive society, but it was John Paul Jones, the commander of a ragged makeshift for a navy, who ruled her heart. John Paul Jones was one of the first American sea fighters. He was a remarkable man in that, aside from his adventurous instincts, which placed him on the sea at the age of twelve, he was educated, polished, possessed a charming manner, a good conversationalist and made fair verse when properly inspired by beauty. After Jones had served brilliantly in the new Continental navy he put himself in the service of Catherine of Russia. The intrigues of Catherine's court disgusted him and he went to Paris, his favorite city, and died there of dropsy. Two women loved Jones and he is recorded as loving only one, Aimee de Telison. But love letters found among his effects show to what extent the attachment between him and the Comtesse de Nicolsen, whom he called "Delia," after a sentimental poem of the time.

"Pardon me, oh. my beloved," wrote the comtesse, while tears stained the sheet, "if I am indiscreet, but I am tortured with fears on your account, fears which I felt at L'Orient, but which, observing your reticence on all "When there is a chance of getting such matters, I never dared to express. and even liked by everybody else, was an unheard-of idea. The topic, thrilling in the press, appeared indecent in these circumstances. Although it was Major Randall who had obtained the decree; and although his wife, instead of offering a defense, had brazenly gone away with another man, yet most people shrank from his society. As Mrs. Stockley, the widow of the late vicar, sagely remarked : "There are often two sides to these things; you never know."

Even the squire and Mrs. Rochdale, kindliest of the "old order." began to show a slight coldness. They placed the hospitable doors of Darbury house ajar, so to speak, instead of wide open, hinting to their only son that a little less golf with the major might be wise But Hugh laughed at the hint, in his easy-going way. "That's all his funeral, not mine"; thus he waived responsibility for the morals of the house of Randall.

A wholesome young Briton, Hugh would abominate shady actions, if brought actually into contact with them; but he lacked the imagination to visualize what failed to interest him. His own purpose was single, his own heart fixed. Barbara Stockley, only child of the late vicar, had filled it entirely, since the days of frocks and perambulators. Growing up together, inseparable, their engagement was a foregone conclusion. Nobody therefore had been surprised at its public announcement upon Hugh's return from the war.

The wedding had been fixed for the following December. The happy pair were to live in one of the pretty modern houses at Hillbeak during the old squire's lifetime, continuing all their activities in Darbury as usual. Everybody would call upon them ; and everything would be nice, respectable and conventional.

The Darburyites, hearing that the stranger had at last arrived, soon clustered round for introductions, anxious to impress him with their own intelligence. But, with Barbara, they were doomed to bitter disappointment: for this hero refused to be lionized, and declined to talk "shop." Their intelligent overtures left him unimpressed; no pumping drew other than the briefest trickle in reply.

Slowly, to Barbara, the time wore on. More and more weary of the monotony, sick of the smell of chocolate. she became consumed with restlessness.

All the social world had left long ago. From the glass walls of the winter garden came the exhilarating, if garish, strains of dance music, tantalizing in their infectious rhythm. Barbara hummed the tune, tapping he: foot in unison, occasionally surprising her companions by performing a few revolutions round the tent. "The craving to rive-really live !for a time! To get out into the world; to-to experience everything instead of just reading about it all; to-feel life itself! In huge cities, among vast crowds. I want to find out-" She hesitated, looking away over the meadows, with a puzzled frown. "Something seems lost, missing in some way. I-I can't explain." She turned back to him, the color in her face heightened. But he did not laugh as Hugh would have done. "'Huge cities'?" he queried slowly. "You think you will find it in them? Why not in remote villages?"

"Oh, no !" she cried. "Nothing ever happens in them! Villages are only full of little obscurities. I want to sample bigger things-"

"They will be but 'little obscurities' in fresh places," he interrupted. "The whole world is only composed of little notes, you know, and their reverberations."

She listened in surprise. In her experience, talk like this, especially from a man, was unusual; but from one famed for a life of action it seemed little short of miraculous.

The time for parting came and Jones wrote the message that announced the day of his leaving. And his note was as tear-stained as her letters had been, as her reply shows: "Your letter of Tuesday . . . tears my heart and augments my despair. With the grief of a desolate child I kissed the dear marks of your tears while those that fell from my eyes were the cruelest, the bitterest of my life.

The most fervid fires, however, burn themselves out in time: neither died from grief at the separation, and when the lovers met again it was on the basis of disinterested friendship.

DANIEL O'CONNELL AND MARY O'CONNELL

THE following beautiful expression of love was written by the great Irish patriot, orator and lawyer. Daniel O'Connell. To his sweetheart? No: to his wife, after twenty-three years of married life. And it is but one of many such epistles, written up to the end of the O'Connells' thirtythree years of happiness together.

"My own and only love, it was Kate (his daughter) that wrote the letter I got this morning, and I do most tenderly, tenderly love Kate. Yet, sweetest Mary, I could have wished to see one line also in the handwriting which gives me recollections of the happiest hours of my life and still blesses one with inexpressible sweetness and comfort when we, sweetheart, darling, are separate, All the romance of my life envelopes you and I am as romatic in my love this day as I was twenty-three years ago when you dropped your not unwilling hand into mine.

"Darling, will you smile at the love letters of your old husband? Oh, no, my Mary, my own Mary will remember that she has had the fond and fnithful affections of my youth and that if years have rolled over they have given us no cause to respect or love each other less than we did in early life."

O'Connell's "own Mary" was his cousin, Mary O'Connell, whom he married when he was twenty-seven.

Sheep Profitable to Farmers if Flock Is Properly Handled

By W. A. RADFORD

Mr. William A, Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all problems pertaining to the subject of building work on the farm. for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on the subject. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 1827 Prairie avenue, Can cago, Ill., and only inclose two-cent stamp for reply.

During the last two years and at the present time sheep have brought a profit to farmers. The price per pound of lambs and mutton in the live stock markets has topped all other meat animals, while their wool also brings a high price per pound.

Handling a flock of sheep is not a difficult farm job. They are simple eaters and can derive sustenance from pastures that would not support other grazing animals. The mother ewe more often produces twins than single progeny, while triplets are not at all uncommon. With lambs six weeks old Double doors at either end permit worth about $10 the owner does not have to devote much time or feed to bringing the lamb crop to a marketable stage, while the wool clip now is quickly disposed of.

There are a few simple rules of sides allows the owner to keep some handling sheep, however, that must be of the flock penned up while allowobserved. Pastures that are in- ing the others to pass in and out of

LOWER CALIFORNIA IMPROVING ROADS

Southern California during the first six months of 1924 contracted for more than $5,000,000 of road work, one-third of which has been state funds, and the remaining two-thirds provided by the counties. This money will be applied on the construction and improvement of more than 350 miles of highway. There were 46 different projects undertaken.

In addition to this road work there were 13 bridges placed under construction, totaling nearly 1.200 feet in length and involving expenditures of more than $124,000.

These figures are estimated from records of the engineering department of the Automobile Club of Southern California, which organization has always been a strong proponent of good roads, and which keeps tab of the highway construction throughout that section.

California now has more than 15,-000 miles of surfaced reads. This state is called upon not only to provide adequate highways for its 1,200,-000 motor vehicles, but it must also he prepared to take care of an everincreasing number of visiting motorists. During the present year it is estimated that some 300,000 cars entered the state and made use of the roads for touring purposes, and were under no further expense for use of the highways than the 2 cents a gallon gasoline tax, which is levied upon all automotive vehicles.

Farmer Is Booster for

Hard-Surfaced Highway Once upon a time it was difficult for the farmer to raise vegetables profitably because of the difficulty in getting them to market promptly and economically. - The same held true in the selling of butter and eggs from the farm. Paved highways, however, have changed all this. With his automobile or light truck he may carry the produce of the farm into the city and put them on the market quickly. This is especially important in the case of green vegetables and fruits, which are late winter months and must be fed on likely to spoil unless they are marketed quickly.

With good roads available, there is ersed by paved roads of the better their produce profitably.

Travel Through Wyoming

A study of the prices paid for creamery butter over a period of 15 years shows that invariably the price per pound paid for butter on the larger markets of the United States is highest during the fall and winter and lowest during the spring and summer months. Therefore, a farmer who breeds his cows to freshen in the fall will get more from the volume of cream produced than he would get from the same volume in the spring, points out J. P. LaMaster, chief of the dairy division of Clemson college.

The fall calf is also cheaper to raise because it is fed milk, grain, and hay during the winter months, and by spring is old enough to get a considerable amount of its feed requirements from pastures; while spring-born calves must be fed milk and grain during summer, then grain, hay and silage the following winter, thus making the spring-born calf cost considerably more at one year of age than a calf born in the fall. Furthermore, the farmer has more time to devote to the care of the calves in fall and winter than in the Ellen-"What became of Ann after spring and summer season, when crops she married the coast guard?" Nellrequire most of his attention. This "Oh, they're lighthousekeeping now." same thing applies to mature cows in that they are giving their greatest flow Important to All Women during the slack winter months and are dry or nearly so during the dry, hot, busy season. The cow that freshens in the fall is fed dry feeds during her heaviest production when the product sells at the highest price, and therefore yields a greater return on the feed consumed. This production comes at a period of the year when it is easier to deliver a cream of good quality because of cool weather conditions and lack of flies and dust. On the other hand, the cow that calves in the spring produces her heaviest yield during the busy summer when hot weather and flies make it difficult to deliver a high quality product to the creamery and when the price is lowest. The spring-freshened cow does not improve in her milk flow during the fall and winter months, but usually goes down in milk during the hot summer months, thus making it difficult for her to return a profit on dry feeds. She will .lso be dry in dry feeds when she is not returning an income.

When spring comes new pastures still another avenue of transportation help boost the mlik flow of the cow open to the farmer. It is the parcel which freshens in the fail, and thus post rural deliveries. In sections she will finish her lactation period where the country districts are trav- with high production. Should walls and ceilings dominate the decorative scheme of the room, or should they serve as complementary better all the time. Today modern backgrounds for the furnishings?

Of course, in public buildings, hotels, clubs and theaters a considerable amount of interest must be given to few years ago. the interior by wall decoration, and this is supplied by architectural form.

But what of the home living room or dining room, where the interest is not given by elaborate combinations of pilaster, cornice and panel?

It must be accomplished through the texture and decoration of wall surfaces. To quote from an authority: "The eve is readily satisfied with texture indicated by pleasing contrast in light and dark color and does not demand actual, tangible texture as in fabrics. Thus a wall may be covered with a smooth paint film, which can be their factories models of cleanliness easily washed, and yet have a most pleasing, visible texture."

How much interest the walls of the home should possess depends upon the room-a living room where the walls serve as a background, or a formal reception room where the walls are a special feature of interest.

Other factors to be considered are size of room, its lighting, the decorative scheme and color. The small room is made to appear smaller with large obtrusive figures from which there is no escape, and the large room appears larger if wall texture is too fine.

Cows Do Not Like Rye as Well as Other Feed

The most that can be said against rye as a food for dairy cows or, for that matter, for any live stock, is that it lacks palatability. The animals don't like it as well as they do wheat or corn and many other foods. They always fail to do as well on things they don't relish as they do on things they like. This is probably due solely to the fact that they do not eat as much. It is the extra pound of food that the animal eats that makes him fat, or that makes the cow give the extra pound of milk.

There is very little difference in the chemical composition of rye or wheat, but wheat is considered the better known as Bird's Eye pass across the food. Animals like it better. Rye contains seven-tenths of 1 per cent more digestible protein than wheat, the Yellowstone highway between Cas- and ought to be a little better to balper and Thermopolis is 13 miles in ance up a home-grown ration, but the Ordinarily it is more profitable to grind the wheat or rye, seil the flour for human food and feed the bran and middlings. The by-products contain a greater per cent of protein and are more effective in making a balanced ration out of home-grown roughage. Get rid of constipation by internal cleanliness HEADACHES, biliousness, sleepless nights, heaviness, are Nature's warning that intestinal poisons are flooding your system. If this is allowed to continue, you may become a victim of serious organic disease.

Laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, says a noted authority, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition and often lead to permanent injury.

Why Physicians Favour Lubrication

Medical science has found at last in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and ou of the body. Thus, Nujol brings inter-Del cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol 1s not a medicine or laxative and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.
