THE LOST BATTALION HERE DECEMBER 26

"The Lost Battalion," a moving picture drama depicting one of the outstanding events of the World War, will be shown at the Dreamland Theatre Friday, Dec. 26, matinee and night, under auspices of the Adams Lane Post No. 287, American Legion.

We have all read of The Lost Battalion—how a band of brave American soldiers were caught in a pocket and cut off from the balance of their fellows, how they went for days with food or shelter—it will thrill you thru the entire action.

This picture is distributed by the American Legion Film Service and was produced under the direction of Major Whittlesly, who commanded the Lost Battalion. This insures its absolute authenticity.

Judge J. V. Leake of Vernon was an officer in the Lost Battalion, and the local Post has invited him to be present and make a talk when the picture is shown. Whether or not he can come is not yet known.

But, whatever you do, don't miss this picture Friday, Dec. 26—afternoon and night.

LOST:—A diamond bar pin. Finder please return to me and receive reward.

B. Y. P. U.—SOCIAL

Friday evening, Dec. 12, at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Kefler, the B. Y. P. U. had a most enjoyable social. Everyone was full of life and ready for fun. We were very sorry that some of our most faithful members could not be there. We missed you, and you do not know what you missed.

There was a goodly number of members and visitors. Many games were played.

FOR SALE—Sweet milk and butter, from a registered Jersey cow. Rich and good. See J. W. Hawkins, or phone 9.

BACK ON THE JOB

Yes, I am selling and trading again in Real Estate, so if you want to sell or trade your property I would be glad for you to list it with me.

If you want to buy, see me. I have for sale vacant lots, both residence and business. Nice residence property, well improved, from one lot up to acreage property. Two good hotels, doing good business, and improved farms, from forty acres up to two sections.

Yes, and to keep you from being mad at me, I will give you a policy in the Hedley Pro-Association for the small $3.00.

HOW GREAT MEN MAKE LOVE

AS REVEALED BY THEIR LOVE LETTERS

By JOSEPH KAYE

© by Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.

JOHN ADAMS AND ABIGAIL SMITH

THE letters of Abigail Smith Adams and her husband, John Adams, second President of the United States and father of the sixth President, form a volume of interesting reading, and of more than ordinary charm are the letters of Mrs. Adams. And they are the more to be admired when the fact is considered that she never attended school and that her educational opportunities in early years were very limited.

In a letter dated August 29, 1776, from Boston, she thus expresses her creed in life:

"... I wish for peace and tranquillity. All my desire and all my ambition is to be esteemed and loved by my partner, to join him in the education and instruction of our little ones, to sit under our vines in peace, liberty and safety.

"Adieu, my dearest friend! Soon, soon return to your most affectionate "PORTIA."

From Philadelphia, on the 22d of September, in the same year, John Adams writes his wife:

"... I am at a loss what to write. News we have no. Congress seems to be forgotten by the armies. We are most unfaithfully served in the post-office as well as many other offices, civil and military. Unfaithfulness in public stations is deeply criminal. But there is no encouragement to be faithful. Neither profit, nor honor, nor applause is required by faithfulness. But I know by what. There is too much corruption even in this infant age of our republic. Virtue is not in fashion. Vice is not infamous.

"1 October, 1776.

"Since I wrote the foregoing I have not been able to find time to write you a line. Although I cannot write you as often as I wish you are never out of my thoughts. I am repining at my hard lot in being torn from you much oftener than I ought. I have often mentioned to you the multiplicity of my engagements and have been exposed to the ridicule and censure of the world for mentioning the great importance of the business which lay upon me; and if this letter should ever see the light it would be again imputed to my vanity that I mention to you how busy I am. But I must repeat it by way of apology for not writing to you oftener. From four o'clock in the morning until ten at night I have not a single moment which I can call my own. I will not say that I expect to run distracted, to grow melancholy, to drop in apoplexy, or fall into a consumption; but I do say it is little less than a miracle that one or other of those misfortunes has not befallen me before now.

"Your favors of 15th, 20th, and 23rd September are now before me. Every line from you gives me inexpressible pleasure, but it is a grief to me that I cannot write oftener to you. . . ."

LOUIS XIV AND MADAME DE MAINTENON

AMONG the celebrated women who have played an important part in the history of France, the Marchioness de Maintenon is in the front rank. She occupies a peculiar position in that while the rest of the famous French salon sisterhood turned the picture of virtue to the wall, Mme. de Maintenon, bore the reputation of a saint.

She was born in a prison, to which her parents were committed because of religious differences. Early in life she married the famous wit and orator, Soaron—old and deformed but still very agreeable—and when he died he left her reigning mistress of a brilliant circle to which the genius and fashion of Paris gravitated.

Louis XIV of France was at this time looking for some one to whom he could entrust the education of the children which his mistress, Mme de Montespan, had presented him with, and Mme. de Maintenon was recommended. So well did the latter accomplish her trust that the king fell in love with her and made her his queen—strange whimsy of fate to supplant one favorite with the guardian of her children!

The following letter is the only one in existence that was written by the king to Mme. de Maintenon, expressing his affection:

"I take advantage of Montchevreuil's departure to assure you of a truth that pleases me too much for me to tire of repeating it. It is that I cherish you always and consider you to a point that I cannot express, and in short, whatever friendship you have for me I have more for you, being with all my heart entirely yours.

"LOUIS."

Tracing Bird Migration

A common tern banded in Malne has been reported found as far away as the mouth of the Niger river on the west coast of Africa. It is possible that the Caspian tern may likewise migrate to the eastern hemisphere, although so far no indications to this effect are to be found in the returns received from birds banded at the Lake Michigan colony.

Something to Think About

By F. A. WALKER

THE COST OF VANITY

THE farther away we get from what we are pleased to call culture and civilization, the less we see of vanity and its exacting demands on humanity. Generally, we mortals rest fairly content until the vanity bee begins to buzz about our heads and turns our imaginations adrift into unaccustomed channels, where the waters are dangerous at all times even for the strongest swimmers.

But we take the plunge with a great dash of pride.

We know it is perilous to display our weak points to our intimates, when we should hold our tongues, yet we keep incessantly "gabbing" and airing our delinquencies.

Our emotions and expressions are taken at their par value and we are measured accordingly.

But being the fools we are we keep up the farcical play and later pay a two-fold price for our folly.

But the worst part of it all is that when we once begin to make payments we discover that we must continue them with punctilious regularity during the balance of our vain lives.

The preacher may preach, the physician may warn, but youth accepts no doctrine except its own, formulated in its own mind, to be worked out in its own way, without reserve and with a terrible array of afterthought which no ingenuity of man has yet been able to turn to profitable account to the raw and green newcomers, buoyant and gay of heart in face of the coming storm.

There is now and then an exhibition of wisdom in some noble youths who have seemed to caught hold of the divine spirit and held it to a delectable old age.

But to read day after day in the papers aent the doings of youth is a daily reminder that the old world is jogging along pretty much as it did in the days of King Tut, and that the vanities of his time, were no whit less than ours or of our grandfathers and grandmothers, who ate terrapin together, or danced till morn in lace frills and ruffled cravats in pursuit of vanities for which they eventually paid the price in full.

If You Need a Medicine You Should Have the Best-- Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain--the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says, "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments, corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

You may receive a sample bottle of Swamp-Root by parcel post. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y., and enclose ten cents; also mention this paper. Large and medium size bottles for sale at all drug stores.--Advertisement.

Her Optimism

The talk had turned to psychology. This disturbing question had just been put: "When does old age really begin?"

To establish a formula was proving rather difficult, when a woman, who did not look her years, found the following:

"To me, old age is always fifteen years older than I am."--Cyrano (Paris).

Most headaches due to lack of internal cleanliness

WHEN you are constipated, poisons form in the accumulated food waste and are carried to all parts of the body. Headaches follow. Biliousness, insomnia, lack of energy, all result from constipation, which if unchecked will lead to serious results.

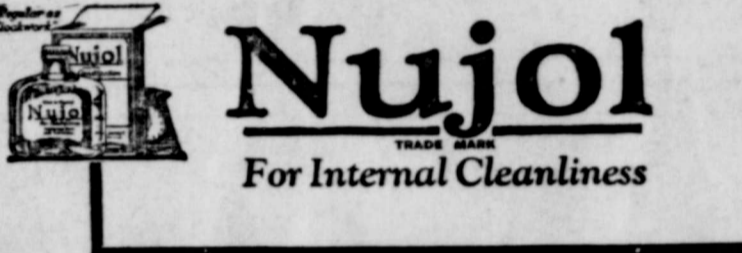

Avoid Laxatives--Say Doctors

A noted authority says that laxatives and cathartics do not overcome constipation, but by their continued use tend only to aggravate the condition.

Medical science has found in lubrication a means of overcoming constipation. The gentle lubricant, Nujol, penetrates and softens the hard food waste and thus hastens its passage through and out of the body. Thus, Nujol brings internal cleanliness.

Nujol is used in leading hospitals and is prescribed by physicians throughout the world. Nujol is not a medicine or laxative, and cannot gripe. Like pure water, it is harmless.

Take Nujol regularly and adopt this habit of internal cleanliness. For sale by all druggists.

THE MONKEYS

THE socially most important three members of Miss Kite's boarding house were lingering on Sunday evening round the supper table discussing the latest new arrival.

"Well," began Miss Pry, "her door was open the other day and I pushed it a little further so that I couldn't help seeing into the room. Do you get me--there was nothing in it, absolutely nothing, except some kind of Chi Nese idol above her desk."

"Have you noticed," went on Mrs. Whisler, her head pushed forward, her eyes starting out so that they seemed to be getting ahead of the rest of her face, "have you noticed that she is always out at nights? She came last Monday and not one night has she been in--returns when it's almost midnight. If you ask me!"

Mr. Grundy slid back in his chair and pushed his hands into his pockets, his eyes half shut: "That doesn't seem as strange to me as the fact that she's in all day. Looks as if she were hiding from something. What credentials have we, anyway, to let us know she isn't a bad sort? Sounds queer to me!"

Finally Miss Pry turned to Mrs. Whisler.

"You say she's always out in the evening?"

"She will have been here a week to-morrow, and not one night so far has she been at home."

"I think," said Miss Pry, "that we have a right--indeed a duty--to know what's going on under the roof that supports us. I think that in her absence we three should investigate this woman's room. These are unsettled times and we can't afford to trust anyone."

So, led by Mr. Grundy, they tiptoed above. The door was unlocked and they pushed it open noiselessly, groping their way into the unlighted room. They were all well past the threshold and in a huddled group in the center of the floor when suddenly the light went on. There was the mysterious newcomer, a fair-haired,

FOOD FOR THE FAMILY

A DAINTY way to serve oysters is the following:

Oysters in Crusts.

Prepare a dozen long crusty rolls by cutting in half the long way. Pull out the soft crumb until only the crusty shell is left. Fill the bottom shells with the following: Into a porcelain saucepan put four tablespoonfuls of butter, a little salt, pepper and paprika, and when the butter is hot add four dozen medium-sized oysters and toss over the fire until the gills are curled. Lift out the oysters and dredge flour into each of the lower shells. Add to the liquor in the saucepan enough milk or water to make one cupful and a half of liquid, thicken with two tablespoonfuls of flour and stir until it boils and is well cooked. Put two tablespoonfuls of the gravy over each crust of oysters. Put on the upper crusts, which should be thickly brushed with butter, and place all in a hot oven until the crusts are well-beated through.

CHRISTMAS TREE AT FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

We are arranging for a nice Christmas tree, beautifully decorated—to contain many nice things for all who have been attending our Sunday School. We are expecting Santa Claus to be at our church Wednesday night, Dec. 24, at 7:30, or likely a few minutes earlier, with a generous pack for all. Those who did not bring a special offering last Sunday, it will be gladly received this Sunday.

Below are names of committees, who we trust will not fail to act in their respective places. Splendid cooperation will assure a great time for all.

Program Committee: Mrs. A. P. Simmons, Mrs. Hobart Moffitt, Mrs. T. B. Berry and Miss Velma Raney.

Tree Committee: J. G. McDougal and Mrs. Mosley's Sunday School class.

Tree Building Committee: J. E. Blankenship, Claud Nash and C. L. Goin.

Purchasing Committee: Mrs.

M. W. Mosley, Mrs. O. L. Goin and Mrs. P. C. Johnson.

Decorating Committee: Mrs. W. C. Bridges, Mrs. Lampkin, Mrs. Raney and M. L. Sims.

Santa Claus Committee: P. C. Johnson and L. A. Dann.

REMARKS,

The pastor will preach a Christmas sermon Sunday morning. At the evening service, "The Handwriting On the Wall," Daniel 5th chapter.

Our B. Y. P. U.'s are progressing splendidly; fine interest in both Senior and Junior Unions last Sunday evening. While our Junior Union has just recently been organized, they are making a fine start under their capable and efficient leader, Mrs. E. M. McQueen. They voted a challenge to the Senior Union on some points last meeting. We hope soon to have a live, wide awake Intermediate Union as well; also an efficient Sunbeam Band.

The Pastor.

COME TO THE NAZARENE CHURCH

It is the duty of everybody to go to church. The Bible tells us not to forsake the assembling of ourselves together; so get the habit of going to church. You surely could find a church in this town that would suit you.

We are always glad for you to come to our church. Come and feel welcome.

We will have services Christmas Day at 10:30 a. m. and 7 p. m. "For unto you is born a Savior." Let's worship Him.

Services every Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night.

LETTER TO SANTA

Hedley, Texas, Dec. 17, 1924.

Dear Santa Claus:

I am writing to let you know I am expecting you again this Christmas, and what I want most. I want a pop gun and top and some marbles, and of course I want some candy, fruit and nuts. Well that will be all for me. Be sure to bring Paul and Bruce Jr. something.

Well, goodbye. From

W. L. Stewart.

POSTED—NO HUNTING

This is to notify all concerned that my land is posted according to law, and hunters and trespassers will be prosecuted.

flowers. And the sun porch, entirely enclosed, which runs across the entire front of the home is strictly in keeping with the latest American ideas of comfort. The arrangement of the six rooms of the home is interesting and efficient. The living room, occupying the entire front portion of the home, is of unusually large dimensions for a home of this type, with the fireplace placed in one end, allowing the advantageous grouping of furniture. The stairway to the second floor leads from one end of this room, and on the landing, two steps above the living room level, is a closet for cloaks and wraps. The dining room is of a size to care for the more formal meals nicely, but a breakfast room, well placed with reference to the kitchen, relieves the housewife of the work of using the larger room for the more informal meals. A downstairs lavatory is a convenience which will be very much appreciated. On the second floor are three bedrooms of pleasant size, and a bath.

TO INSURE CROP OF VIGOROUS LAMBS

Breeding ewes which are in good condition in the fall need little or no grain in winter until about a month before lambing. If given all the bright legume hay they will eat with an allowance of silage or roots in addition, writes Dorsey McAtee in the Prairie Farmer. At this time or earlier, if they are not in thrifty, vigorous condition, they should be given a limited amount of concentrates up to one-half pound per head with roughage.

The best roughages for ewes are the legume hays—clover and alfalfa—which they like and are rich in protein, and help ward off constipation, a serious danger of the ewe. Other roughages useful to feed with legume hay are bright corn fodder and oat straw which has some hay in it. Timothy hay is too constipating for ewes.

To insure a crop of strong, healthy lambs, exercise for the ewes is essential. They should have access to a dry, sunny yard, well protected from wind and storm, and on all fair days should be forced to exercise by scattering roughage over a nearby field. When the snow is deep, paths should be broken out with snow plow or stone boat. On stormy days the sheep should remain indoors.

To avoid udder troubles, ewes should be given but little grain for two or three days after lambing, and the allowance gradually increased with the demand for more milk by the lamb. With good roughage, not over two pounds of grain per ewe daily is necessary. After being turned to pasture the ewes need no additional feed, if grazing is good.

In about 147 days or five months after the ewes are bred lambs may be expected. It is wise to be close at hand during lambing time to assist the ewes or any weak lambs. Pens should be provided for the ewes and their newly born lambs. Here each ewe and her young may remain for a couple of days until they are wanted to each other and the lambs are strong enough to look out for themselves among the flock.

Corn Stover Silage Is Good for Winter Feed

The custom of raking up and burning corn stalks is considered a huge waste. While somewhat depending upon local conditions and the feed supplies, the destruction of corn stover is rightly regarded as a loss. Corn stover, plowed under, has a theoretical value in fertility of about $2 a ton, but this can hardly be figured on the acre basis of tonnage grown because stalks are hard to handle in plowing under. The feed value is far more than $2 a ton.

Feeding tests have shown that corn stover silage—made from the dry stalks by the addition of water—has a value of about two-thirds that of corn silage for wintering beef breeding cows, and probably 15 per cent as much as corn feeding dairy cows. By we mean, of course, cured minus the ears. A considerable percentage of the feeding value of corn is located in the leaves. In trials a four percent silage made from the leaves and stalks made an...

DANCE frocks gaily turn their backs upon an admiring world, fully conscious of the fact that those backs were designed to be looked at. Backs are, in fact, the most important consideration when the matter of evening dresses to be used for dancing comes up. Not every pretty evening dress that happens along will serve for dancing, but only those that are graceful and designed to swing into flowing and beautiful lines when their wearers dance.

Designers resort to various artifices to make evening dresses that will more, besides the flowers that bloom in the spring there are others that bloom in millinery fields when mid-winter approaches. Among these new varieties have made their appearance—glass flowers and carved wooden blossoms—and it is safe to predict that they will be joyously acclaimed.

In the group of hats shown here there are four models that exploit the wider-brim idea and one novel, small hat. Black lace and satin join their smart forces in the poke shape at the top of the picture, making a softly suave and flowing line about the face prove successful as dance frocks. Floating draperies, uneven hemline, sheer and supple fabrics (and trimmings that are used to weight them sometimes) soft and carefully adjusted girdles, have all proven their helpfulness. A handsome scarf is an adjunct to the evening dress that will lend it grace. Paris is making the most of the new vogue for a ripple or flare at the bottom of skirts, in dance frocks. One of these is shown in the illustration and evidently much attention has been given to its back.

The excellence of their union is emphasized by a long, narrow scarf of ermine that extends about the crown and creeps about in an intricate knot at the front. The small hat that confidently takes its stand among these aristocrats of millinery is of beaver in a deep beige shade. The new, beautiful and somewhat startling leopard-skin velvet—black and yellow

WRECKED

SYNOPSIS.—Living in the small English village of Darbury, old-fashioned and sedate place, Barbara Stockley, daughter of a widowed mother, is soon to celebrate her marriage to Hugh Stockdale, rich and well connected. Barbara is adventurous, and has planned, with an aunt, an airplane trip to Australia. Major Alan Croft, famous as an aviator, is to be the pilot. At her first meeting with Croft Barbara is attracted by his manner and conversation, different from the cut-and-dried conventions of her small town.

She knit puzzled brows, trying to follow his meaning. What keynote could there be to all the jumble of separate entities that make up life? "What keynote the world uses, I suppose, what you want to discover?" he asked.

"Do I? Is that it?" Eagerly she leaned toward him. "Oh, I wonder—What do you think it is?" He blew out a cloud of smoke; then smiled. "Goodness knows! Perhaps there isn't one. What private ones do we all use? Don't you often wonder, when you meet a number of new people—"

"But I never do meet them! It is quite an event to meet a stranger," she assured him. "Well, you shall soon meet plenty—of all nationalities. Even natives, in the Philippines."

Barbara came back to practical realities with a start. "Natives! Are they black? I should loathe them!" "Oh, no; surely not. I like them immensely." She looked at him incredulously. "But why the Philippines?"

"I have to go to Borneo and the Philippines for the firm." He plunged into details of the journey, and she listened enthralled. To flash like a meteor over France, Italy, Egypt, India, with a few days at each landing place, and the detour to the Pacific, exceeded all she had ever dreamed. The world—at last!

A subtle change in his manner gave her the impression that, inwardly, he laughed at her. "Anyway, it is a wonderful chance. I am grateful to you for giving it to me," she replied, with stilted politeness. "To me?" he asked; then gave a short laugh. "Oh, not at all. I am merely the pilot!"

"You don't regret going, Bab, dear?" she had asked. Barbara shook her head vigorously. "No! I feel a little depressed over leaving Hugh; that's all. It seems as though something—I don't know what—were ending. I suppose that's natural upon going away for the first time? Is it?" she added anxiously.

Mrs. Field knew when to keep her thoughts to herself. "Quite natural," she replied cheerfully. "And—Bab," she went on, hesitating a little, "if you need Alan's friendship for any reason, I think you would find it worth having."

"Oh," the girl said hastily. "I don't think he—we—I shall never quite understand him." Feeling that to be likely, Mrs. Field said no more. She had seen the seed, if ever it were needed.

Then the last night at home— She had looked around her familiar little room with mixed feelings. When next she slept here, what would she have learned of the things beyond that life-long barrier of hills visible from her window?

With a wail of tenderness, she remembered that, upon her return, her new life as Hugh's wife would begin. Taking the large photograph of him from the wall, she placed it carefully within her packed trunk.

And now the moment of departure had come. Croft appeared, looking big and alert in his flying kit, with an air of confidence about him which communicated itself, in some subtle way, to Barbara.

Having been detained over a matter of form in the office, he hurried their start. Hugh followed Barbara into the cabin, where she turned and clung to him. He drew her into his arms and kissed her with more passion than usual.

"We shall be married directly you return, Bab, darling," he said huskily.

course, she was no favorite with the bishop's descendant. . . . There is, proverbially, a lull before a storm. Darbury, during those peaceful days of late summer, had no intuition of the most terrible thrill of all, in these days of thrills.

Hugh, especially, was of too bright and wholesome a nature to have misgivings, when the sun shone and all seemed well. Returning one day with a friend from a morning's cubbing, it was therefore with no sense of impending disaster that he reined up at Lake Cottage and proposed calling. A small group of people, talking together near the main road, turned and cast wondering looks in his direction.

It was one of those glorious mornings at the end of September in which late summer and early autumn intermingle. Hugh glanced round with a pleased sense of appreciation.

Then he rang the bell. The face of old Martha, who opened the door, was red and swollen with weeping. Her limbs trembled, as if from sudden shock.

For a moment she gazed at him blankly, half in astonishment, half in fear; then, without a word, she burst into hysterical sobs and turned back into the house.

The color ebbed a little from Hugh's face. He looked at his friend in vague apprehension, and they silently followed the woman into the drawing room. Instead of being bright and fragrant with the flowers Barbara loved about her, it seemed strangely cold, gloomy and deserted.

A chill fell on Hugh. "Where is Mrs. Stockley?" he asked uneasily.

"Upstairs," sobbed Martha. She walked to the little bureau and picked up a telegram. Turning slowly, she half held it toward him, and the flimsy paper trembled violently in her hands.

Hugh took the telegram slowly from the woman. For a moment he looked uncertainly at her frightened face, then round the familiar room, as if dreading to read it.

At last, with an obvious effort, he raised the sheet, and turned away. . . . The telegram fluttered, unheeded, to the floor; and Hugh raised shaking hands to his head, in a vague uncertain manner. He turned slowly, his face ashen, haggard and old all at once.

His lips moved a little, but no sound came; he looked at his friend with the bewildered eye of a dumb animal awakening to some terrible pain of which, as yet, it is not wholly conscious.

Tom Westwoods picked up the telegram. It was from the London agents of Croft's firm. He read the few bald sentences so fraught with tragic meaning. The airplane, it stated, in characteristically crude words, was missing. The lifeless body of the mechanic had been found in the water, where, it was feared, the rest had perished. Search was in progress, but with small hope of success. A typhoon had swept across the seas verging upon the Philippine Islands. One wireless message of distress had come from the machine.

Then silence fell.

climbed at it with clumsy movements of a man used to troubling over personal injuries. His look was still fixed upon the girl's face.

As she gazed round the unfamiliar scene, an expression of bewilderment crept into her eyes. Remembrance slowly returning, this merged into concern, then fear. . . . Quickly it grew to terror. . . . Sitting upright, she turned wildly to the man at her side.

"Where are we? Where are we?" "We crashed on that reef," he replied quietly. "The last engine gave out—"

"But—how—did we get here?" "I found you in the water, and swam in."

Fearfully she looked toward the dark mass, as if measuring mentally the distance from shore, scarcely understanding the full meaning of this feat. Then she looked about her as if seeking somebody. . . . Finally turned to him, mutely asking the question her troubling lips dared not frame.

He laid a hand upon her shoulder, instinctively fortifying her for the complete realization of the dread that was dawning in her brain.

She caught his arm in a feverish grip, her eyes wild. "Captain Croft—tell me! The others? . . . Where is Aunt Dolly?"

A look, so full of anguish that it seemed as though the soul behind were in the tortures of hell, was her only answer.

She gazed, awestruck, for a breathless moment, at his haggard eyes and drawn blood-stained face, at the features usually so cloaked with reserve now betraying unbearable agony; then, with a hoarse moaning cry, she collapsed in an abandonment of horror at his feet.

Presently Croft raised his head, and stood up. He gave one long look seaward, to the grave of such unlimited pride and hope; to where, also, those who had risked their lives with him now lay hidden beneath the smiling blue. With a long sigh, he turned away, setting his teeth and squaring his shoulders. . . . then looked at the figure lying face downward at his feet.

Dropping on his knees, he gently raised her, so that she leaned against him.

"Come!" he urged, with forced brightness. "We must buck up, you know, and see what can be done."

"Tell me—first—what happened," she besought. "It seems like a— a hideous nightmare—" Shuddering violently, she hid her face again.

"We had some engine trouble soon after leaving the Philippines, as you know, which obliged us to return here to land," he replied. "We got caught in the center of a typhoon near the coast, and were driven completely out of our course—"

"It was awful—awful! That terrible, deafening roar!" She began again to tremble violently. "We were hurled into an air-pocket which caused us to drop nearly a thousand feet," he continued hurriedly. "That put two more engines out of action and injured the fourth. Only a miracle prevented our being dashed straight into the sea. After a bit I saw land here, and hoped to reach it in time; but she crashed too soon—"

He stopped, believing the state of her nerves. Standing up, he drew her hands, and she clung to his arm, every limb numb with agony.

His hands, he drew her turning their steps. . . . being almost . . . control, he spoke

PETER GNOME'S TALK

"I've always wanted to tell of a beautiful day I had in the late summer," said Peter Gnome.

"There were many times when I meant to tell of this day and then something came up, as they say, and I didn't get around to it—another speech which you hear made."

"I've talked enough since then but it has just happened I have never told of this beautiful day, and I should so like to have you hear of my adventures on that occasion."

All the little gnomes gathered around Peter and he began:

"It was a beautifully sunny day and the first creature I met was a lovely big spangled butterfly."

"The butterfly was very big and wore a brown suit with brown spots and silver trimmings and silver touches in the lining or underneath part of the suit."

"I am going to visit a little city girl," the butterfly told me. "She is not able to get out as she has been ill and I am going to show her a bit of the summer time, for I think I'm quite correct in speaking of myself as a bit of the summer time."

"I went to see her yesterday and went right in the open window into her bedroom. There was a big vase there filled with goldenrods and while she ate her lunch I had mine, too."

"She seemed to be so happy seeing me, that I'm going again, for as soon as she is much better she is going to make a visit to the country and she is looking forward to it so much."

"I've always meant to tell you about this butterfly and the happiness he gave the little girl," Peter Gnome said. "I went with him that day and saw the little girl greet him."

"I had on my invisible robe of course—the one I wear so that no one can see me—and I saw the butterfly flitting about among the goldenrods and I saw her smiling and talking about her own beautiful butterfly."

"When the butterfly left she called out a cheery thank you and good-by and just a little later, when the doctor came in he said she was so much better that she could go on her country visit in two more days."

"I heard her say, just as I was leaving: 'I know my beautiful butterfly made me well—and the goldenrods which my sister brought me.'

"Then I wandered away from the city and just as I was leaving I saw a little girl named Ada."

"She had chopped up some of the meat which she had not felt like finishing and was taking it around in a paper bag to the poor cats in the neighborhood. She used to take them all sorts of scraps."

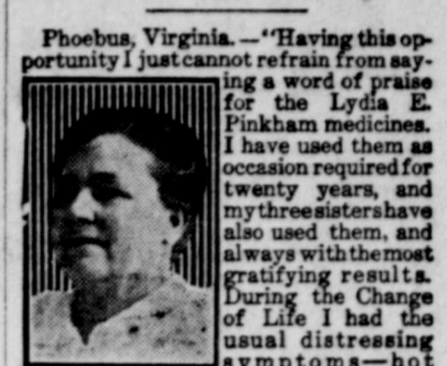

"And whenever people saw her they looked at her as though she were quite strange, but all the cats came rushing

Mrs. Bradford Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Phoebus, Virginia.—"Having this opportunity I just cannot refrain from saying a word of praise for the Lydia E. Pinkham medicine. I have used them as occasion required for twenty years, and my three sisters have also used them, and always with the most gratifying results. During the Change of Life I had the usual distressing symptoms—hot flashes, insomnia, etc.—and I am pleased to testify to the wonderful results I obtained from the Vegetable Compound. I heartily recommend it to any woman and I will be pleased to answer any inquiries that might be sent to me through the publication of my testimonial."—Mrs. H. L. BRADFORD, 109 Armistead Street, Phoebus, Virginia.

Consider carefully Mrs. Bradford's letter. Her experience ought to help you. She mentions the trials of middle age and the wonderful results she obtained from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you are suffering from nervous troubles, irritability, or if other annoying symptoms appear and you are blue at times, you should give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. For sale by druggists everywhere.

Took a Friend's Advice

Houston, Texas—"When I was comparatively a young woman I became afflicted with woman's trouble and got so I could hardly walk. I had a delicacy in submitting my case to the doctors. Finally a friend advised me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. I did so, and before I had taken three bottles I was all right. Later on in life I became afflicted with a kind of poison in my blood; for this I took the 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and gradually my blood became pure. I never again had anything like either of these afflictions."—Mrs. D. M. Wilson, 1521 Fulton St. All dealers.
