The wide, shallow lot presents a problem in house design which is peculiarly its own. In any home design the front of the house is of the utmost importance, but here the front is of in bookcases and it forms a retreat proportionately greater consequence because of its greater expanse and the relatively small side expanse. The eye of the observer is focused almost exclusively on the front of the house. Because of this fact the front should be especially attractive and well balanced, a failure to maintain balance will spoil the entire effect. This does not mean, however, that the entrance must be placed exactly in the center and that both sides of the center must be identical. Balance has been obtained in the house illustrated ere without doing either of these things, and thereby it has avoided any effect of stiffness or formality.

To the left, the entire space is occupied by the living room with its library nook. This is in reality one large room with one end partially partitioned, but with a great arched where one may partially withdraw the living room, to read or work, undisturbed. The remainder of the living room is nearly square and has a large fireplace at one side.

To the right of the reception hall is the dining room. This is somewhat smaller than the living room, but sufficiently large for any demand which may be placed upon it. Let Tanlac restore your health

If your body is all fagged-out and run down, if you are losing weight steadily, lack appetite, have no strength or energy—why not let Tanlac help you back to health and strength?

So many millions have been benefited by the Tanlac treatment, so many thousands have written to testify to that effect that it's sheer folly not to make the test.

Tanlac, you know, is a great natural tonic and builder, a com-pound, after the famous Tanlac formula, of roots, barks and herbs. It purges the blood stream, revitalizes the digestive organs and enables the sickly body to regain its vanished weight.

You don't need to wait long to get results. Tanlac goes right to the seat of trouble. In a day or so you note a vast difference in your condition. You have more appe tite, sleep better at night and the color begins to creep back into your washed-out cheeks.

Don't put off taking Tanlac another precious day. Step into the nearest drug store and get a bottle of this world-famed tonic. That's the first important step back to health and vigor. Every day's delay means unnecessary suffering. for Tanlac starts to clean out and tone up the system right away. And

"Stop constipation if you wish to live long. Take a little Nujol every day—that will keep you regular."

Nujol relieves constipation in Nature's way

Constipation is dangerous for any-body. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body. Medical authorities approve Nujol because it is safe, gentle and natural in its action.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency—temporary or chronic—in the supply of naturallubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular elimi-nation without overtaxing the intestinal muscles. Nujol can be taken for any length of time without ill effects. To insure internal cleanliness, it should be taken regularly in accordance with the directions on each bottle. Unlike laxatives, it does not form a habit and can be discontinued at any time. Ask your druggist for Nujol today and begin to enjoy the perfect health that is possible only when elimination is normal and regular.

Damoan was yelling for his Choctaws to chase me, but the bulk of them were back at the exit and the others were tardy in taking up the pursuit.

As for the Humas, they paused to tie Six Fingers' hands behind his back. By the time they were pounding after me I had secured my musket and was at the patch of vines behind the girl's cabin. Thrusting my feet through I was clear except my shoulders when the wild mob passed the cabin and surrounded the one I had occupied. The women had snatched burning brands from the fires, and these Illuminated the scene. Through the mesh of vines I saw Six Fingers being dragged between two warriors; and as the savages came to a halt I heard him scream:

"Good lack! This will be death!" Pirate and murderer that he was I could not help the wish that he might find a quick death, rather than to roast slowly on the bed of torture. Utterly bad as he was he was born an Englishman, and if it had not been for narrowing the girl's chances of escape I should have been tempted to shoot him because once he had been an English lad.

The chief's grandson, bolder than the others, ran forward with ax and torch and thrust his head inside the cabin. Turning back he shouted that I was gone. Almost the same moment Damoan ran into the cabin in front of me and yelled to the red men that Labrador and the woman were gone. When he appeared in the torch-light he was insane with rage, and catching a glimpse of Six Fingers' writhing figure he screeched like a panther and fell upon him as if intending to tear him to pieces with his bare hands.

"I can tell their plans!" screamed Six Fingers in English as Damoan's fingers began ripping his face. "Tell them! Tell them! Or I'll

I led the chase that night toward the east; and so long as I traveled in that direction I took pains occasionally to betray my position. This procedure gave the girl and Labrador more time to escape, for I knew Damoan would bend every endeavor to overtake me. Toward morning I swung back in a wide circle, planning to strike the Mississippi near the Tunica village at the upper end of the Portage of the Cross. There I was sure to find a canoe in which to push on after my friends.

That night I skirted the Tunica village and stole some corn from an outlying village and was fortunate enough to find a small canoe containing a fish net made of linden-bark fiber and some lines equipped with hooks and fishbone. I made excellent progress that night, nor did I observe anything to indicate my foes had discovered my return to the river.

It was not until I reached the cliffs of Natchez and was reconnitering the mouth of Little river that I made two Important discoveries-one brought great joy, the other impelled me to paddle with desperate haste into the tributary. Ahead of me, some distance up Little river, was a pirogue containing two persons. One of the couple looked like a boy and was not using a paddle. In the next moment I had glimpsed a long pirogue turning a bend of the big river below me. It held at least a dozen Indians and their six-foot paddles were flashing rapidly. I did not believe I had been seen as I was disappearing into the tributary when this strange craft showed its nose around the bend.

The canoe ahead now discovered me and the slim figure vanished by dropping flat, and the other abandoned the paddle to pick up a musket. I waved my cap and Labrador turned about and began paddling to meet me. I violently gestured for him to go back, behind me. As he swung his pirogue pail."

and stretched out both hands to me. We were within three miles of White Apple, the principal town of the Natchez, which in turn was within three miles of Fort Rosalie. Let us but get inside the village and I would have no fear of either the French at the fort, or of Damoan and the Choctaws pursuing me. The Natchez were on the eve of war with the French. They were a very haughty people; there would be no subtle evasion of their on my cabin I risked calling the girl's laws to please Bienville even if the red warrior's post did not stand between them. The three of us would have full measure of protection from the Great Sun and his brother and war chief. Tattooed Serpent. So my heart was light when I drew up alongside Labrador's pirogue and was greeted by his amiable grin and a tremulous handelasp from the girl.

The girl's face was sober at hearing there was relief in her bearing. We gret escaping an audience with the dragged the canoes under some bushes, and, being in familiar country, took the shortest cut to White Applesometimes called White Earth.

When we had all but come to the village we heard a peculiar howl, which startled Labrador and me because we knew what it meant, and which frightened the girl because she could imagine it to mean almost anything unwholesome. I motioned for Labrador to make a detour, but before we knew it we were through the bushes and in an opening close to the Then I saw the Serpent and La village, and the girl was staring with Glorieuse, "The Proud." I whispered as balkebiche came forward and cordially much to her, and she became quiet and greeted me, finding me a stool while curionsly watched the peculiar pro-

"It is all make-believe," I whispered, trying to hurry her on. "We will go to the village. If Damoan did not see me enter the river he will learn from the fort that none of us have passed."

So we walked toward the village, and, the rehearsal being finished, the Natchez came after us. But such was their courtesy that they would not pass us; and those who desired to reach the village quickly swung far to one side as if taking an entirely different course.

Labrador was frowning heavily and in Choctaw said:

"Friend: there was no word-bearer, nor any medicine man among those to be sacrificed. The dead must be a woman. The three old women were her kinswomen. The two men were her servants. If it was La Glorieuse there would be many more servants."

He named a woman of noble rank, called "The Proud" by the French because of her aristocratic bearing, her contempt for commoners, and her ignorement of any Frenchman unless he possessed rank. It was known that Labrador." Tattooed Serpent war enamored of her, but both being nobles marriage between them was impossible. No; the They noticed the absence of Six funeral procession was scarcely worthy of a woman who enjoyed the favor of Olabalkebiche, head war chief, as well as a brother of the Great Sun.

"It is not La Glorieuse," I said. Labrador sighed.

"Ah, that grande dame! Why couldn't it be her!"

"That is queer talk," I rebuked, 'How has the Proud One ever harmed you?" "It is I who harmed her-as she thinks. I married her sister. She some plan for immediate flight. never forgave her sister for marrying as to be weather-proof. The Natchez were much different from any Indian tribe I ever encountered, or heard of. The practice of human sacrifices on the death of the elect smacked of ancient Eastern civilizations; and the worship of the sun reminded one of the stories brought back from Central and South America. And yet their language was linked up with the dialects of the Choctaws, Chickasaws and Creeks.

I accosted an "ancient" warrior-so called to distinguish him from "young" warriors and "apprentice" warriors, and referring to skill rather than to age-and asked if I could secure an audience with the Great Sun. He told me the Great Sun was absent inspecting the temple and sacred fire in a neighboring village. He believed 1 could see Tattooed Serpent, however. I told Labrador to take the girl to the edge of the village and wait while I paid our respects to my old acquaintance, the war chief. She was such violent news, and yet I fancied glad to do this; nor did Labrador regreat chief, whose mistress' sister he had married and deserted.

I went to the cabin next to the temple and informed an aged man. the Serpent's word-bearer, that I wished to see the chief. He disappeared through the low doorway and very soon returned and motioned for me to enter.

As the door furnished the only light, and as the room was thirty feet square, I could not make out the interior until the sun-glare left my eyes. he seated himself on the edge of his bed. He clapped his hands, and a servant brought a pipe, which the chief lighted for me to smoke ceremoniously. After he had done likewise, he said:

Delicious Humor of Nye Fooled English

On the seventy-fifth anniversary of Bill Nye's birth, a tablet, a memorial window and a granite monument were unveiled at Fletcher, near Asheville. showing his quaint humor and lovable personality have not been forgotten.

At one time he served as postmaster at Laramie, Wyo., an appointment which incidentally brought forth his famous letter addressed to President Arthur and containing his resignation.

In the letter he directed the President where to find everything, explaining that the postal cards he had read were carefully pigeonholed apart from the unread ones. He continued: "If Deacon Hayford does not pay up his box rent you might as well put his letters in the general delivery, and when Bob Head gets drunk and insists on a letter from one of his wives every day in the week, you can salute him through the box delivery window with an old Queen Anne tomahawk that and in pantomime announced the peril you will find near the Etruscan water

So tickled were the officials at Washington with this letter that they published it far and wide. To Nye's huge delight an English paper editorially commented in shocked amazement on the ways of American post-

Wouldn't Bear Out Theory

Theoretically, a head-on collision between two freely moving bodies of the same weight and type would result in an equal shock to both, regardless of their speeds. The forces of impact act equally on both bodies, and in the case of two automobiles would tend to throw all occupants forward in their respective cars with equal violence. However, in an actual dully replied. collision between autos involving speeds as high as 50 miles per_hour, so many unevaluated factors would enter that it is probable that results would seldom, if ever, be exactly as expected from the Ideal theoretical conversation of the average person in

"Undoubtedly," I promptly assured him, frantic to get outside and have a talk with Labrador and agree upon

I managed to close the interview without sacrificing ceremony and politeness and hastened to find my friends. When I came to the edge of the village my roving gaze halted on a dramatic scene. Labrador sat on a log tearing at his long hair while La Glorieuse and mademoiselle faced each other, both declaiming in French. I heard La Glorieuse jeering:

"He was unworthy to marry a Natchez woman; yet you take him for a husband."

"He is not my husband!" cried mademoiselle. "Mon Dieu! What a terrible creature you are! Why do you talk to me? I would be alone. Have you no corn to pound; no man's work to do?"

"You will soon be alone so far as this French runaway is to be counted," hissed the Proud One, throwing up her head and stalking away. I stepped forward. Labrador

"You know who the dead woman is?" I asked him in Choctaw. "The furious one has told me. Mon Dieu! She says they wait for me to paint my hair and be strangled by four men at each end of the rope!" "Speak in Franch, and be careful." I warned, observing that mademoiselle was about to break bounds, her taste for battle whetted by her talk with the Natchez woman. In French I re-

"There is to be a funeral tomorrow. I think we better start away before then. Let us go aside and talk it over.'

We shifted our position to the shade of some trees. The Natchez were watching us furtively. They had witnessed the scene between the two women, and they were curious, of course. They also knew that Labrador's return was likely to lend new interest to the funeral. I felt no concern for my personal safety; nor did the matter of the girl's escape press for my immediate attention. Labrador's predicament, however, demanded prompt action.

In Choctaw I told him: "They do not intend that you shall escape." Before he could reply the girl passionately broke in with: "If I am to be treated as a child I will withdraw. I was taught it was not courteous to converse in an unknown tongue before Taking a sudden resolve, I told her: "You speak with much sense. You are not a child. I will not keep it from you. The ancient custom of the Natchez demands that when a noble dies the surviving husband or wife shall die during the funeral ceremony. Our friend was the husband of the woman who is to be buried tomorrow. The dead woman was the sister of La Glorieuse, the woman you had words with."

"Ciel! What a horrible people! I felt it in the air. That procession of painted men and women! Mon Dieu! Poor Monsieur Labrador! Beheid the forest, monsieur. Fly! Hide yourself! Now! Voila tout!"

And she stamped a small moccasin imperiously and gestured for him to

"That's a funny expression," said the other tortoise, "to speak of boastful kind of boasting."

"I like it," said the Giant Tortoise, "for some boasting is so great that it is actually boastful boasting. Ah, in my home on an island in the Pacific ocean I used to say to my children and grandchildren:

"'Don't boast, my dears. If you're fine and if you amount to something it will be found out without your having to boast. In fact if you boast it may be thought to be boasting and nothing else! So when the child boasted of her weight it seemed like boasting and nothing else, most as-

Foot Comfort Demonstration

Friday, April 2nd

Foot troubles are universal. Government records show that 7 out of every 10 adult people have some form of foot trouble.

You are probably a victim of foot trouble yourself. It may be only a corn, a callous, a bunion or some more serious trouble such as weak and broken-down arches. You might not know the nature of your trouble but you do know that your feet ache, pain, and get all tired out on the slightest provocation.

SOMETHING TO THINK ABOUT By F. A. WALKER

THE CAPABLE MIND

MEN and women with penetrating judgment go about the filling of their minds with cool deliberation, separating the grain from the chaff, and using only the precious kernel.

If students of art or literature, sincere in their desire to advance and achieve, they use good sense without vanity in packing their memory with things of use which can be turned to profitable account when they sit at their desks, to begin their life-work.

If in the trades, prompted by a wish to surceed, they are none the less cautious in the appropriation of ideas and and Austrian kings. So it was, that, methods which will prove helpful and on his deathbed, Ferdinand I divided speed them on the way of accomplishment.

The capable mind, controlled by calm judgment, is ever the master in the manifold vocations in which humans are engaged in the stern conquest for competence and comfortable existence.

On the other hand, those persons deficient of judgment and mind, inclined to "catch as catch can," store their brains with veritable trash, and keep dismay that there is no longer room in of freedom to Protestant princes. But flavor to the marmalade, their thoughts for things of real worth.

Instead of burning the midnight oil sitting at the feet of Wisdom, they have wasted their time and vigor in pursuit of frivolity and ignorance.

Their brains are as empty of sap as an autumn leaf.

A little while ago they were fellow parts of the world, humorous, strong, supple and living a life of thoughtfulness, given to flashy dress, moving with a rakish abandon among their chosen associates, forgetting in their vanity the emptiness of their foolish minds and the futility of making a tawdry show.

And there is another side to this, for now and then a sudden jolt wakes them up, and they become their own best critics!

But repentance comes too late. Uneducated, frayed out in nerve and body and incapable of making another effort to redeem themselves, they gradually lose their remaining self-respect, turn their backs on Hope and drift till the end of their days among the failures.

THE GREAT SECRET

IT WAS raining, it had been raining, and it looked as though it would keep on raining. Conklin Waterman son Ainsworth's New Monthly Magabuttoned his coat tighter about him. as, jostled by the dense throng, he continued his dissertation

"Yes sir!" he cried, "the reason why this is the greatest li'l country in the world is because everybody's absolutely free and equal and on the same social plane, and one man's as good as the next and he knows it, and so does the next."

The rain grew a trifle thicker and much colder. Conklin Waterman went on: "The great secret of it is, there's no social caste in this country. We fond of animals, especially dogs and value our neighbors for their moral worth; and who their grandfolks were, is a mere bag o' shells. Offer the average citizen a title, and he'll kick you from here to hereafter for insulting him. That's the great secret." A loud assenting murmur went up from the crowd. And, while we are on the subject of the crowd, let us idly learn why it is assembled and for what purpose it waits so patiently in all this disagreeable weather. It is waiting to cheer the king of Spain's brother-in-law as he whizzes

Last Sunday being a bad day,

The text at the morning preach ing service is to be, "And go quickly and tell his disciples. Be is risen from the dead." Matt. 28:7. What better day of all the year could there be for all who profess to be Christians to at tend the church services than on Easter Sunday. We plan to give an opportunity for any one to unite with the Methodist church and also the opportunity will be given for infant baptism

Let all the secretaries and teachers note the meeting at 8:80 of the Workers Council of the Sunday school.

This is the regular time for our Church Conference at the evening hour. So there will be only a short devotional service and then the business session of the church. Visitors are well come, but the members are es pecially urged to be at this church conference session.
