HAD PLENTY OF RAIN DURING PAST WEEK

Rain which started last Friday night has almost put a quietus on all outdoor activities the past week, and at the time this is written (Wednesday morning) the sky is still overcast with clouds, but with some evidences of clearing. The ditching and pipe laying for the waterworks system, aided by the rain, have put our uptown streets and sidewalks in very bad condition, but a day or two of sunshine will remedy that.

Cotton farmers, ginners and pickers have spent an idle, rest less week, and are anxious to get back on the job.

As is always the case in wet weather, all walks approaching the school building are in bad condition. Something should be done about this.

THE kidneys are the blood filters. If they fail to function properly there is apt to be a retention of toxic poisons in the blood. A dull, languid feeling and, sometimes, toxic backaches, headaches, and dizziness are symptoms of this condition. Further evidence of improper kidney function is often found in burning or scanty passage of secretions. Each year more and more people are learning the value of Doan's Pills, a stimulant diuretic, in this condition. Scarcely a nook or hamlet anywhere but has many enthusiastic users. NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Developments in Mexican Situation—Lively Doings in Geneva.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
JAMES A. FLAHERTY, supreme knight of the Knights of Columbus, accompanied by the members of the supreme council, called on President Coolidge at White Pine camp and dispelled the popular idea that his order asks that the United States intervene in the Mexican religious controversy. It does not even ask the lifting of the embargo on arms shipments to Mexico, he declared. Instead, it desires only the exercise of whatever good offices the United States can extend under international law to ameliorate conditions in the neighboring republic. He placed much blame on the policies of the last three American administrations, and Mr. Coolidge, who has pursued a policy of "hands off" in the quarrel between Calles and the church, was said to have listened "kindly and patiently" to what the delegation had to say.

Down in Mexico City the congress has assembled and it is expected that the religious situation will be taken up very soon. The President's message dealt with it at some length. There was said to be a good chance that congress, although made up of over 80 per cent of government men, would make certain concessions to the Catholics which may remove some of the objections of the church. The Catholic League for Religious Defense, however, is not dissatisfied with the present situation, its secretary asserting that the economic boycott is so successful that it has practically paralyzed the economic life of the nation. Says he:

"Commerce in Mexico, according to statements by the chamber of commerce itself, has fallen off 50 per cent since the opening of the economic boycott, and industrial organizations are complaining of a large overproduction because of lack of consumers."

"In the interior the boycott is felt terribly. Entire cities, towns and villages have subjected themselves to heroic sacrifices of abstinence. In Aguas Calientes, Arades, and Penjamo no beans are eaten this month, and the civic government in these places is on the verge of bankruptcy."

"This is only the beginning. As time goes on the lines will be drawn tighter. The final effect of the boycott will be to force capital to face the situation and take means of meeting it. It either must further the ends of the boycott or force the government to repeal the objectionable anti-Catholic legislation."

IN MORE ways than one the world court cut quite a figure in the week's news. In Geneva the conference of representatives of 37 nations began discussion of the admission of the United States with the reservations made by the senate. The first three reservations were quickly accepted, but opposition developed to the fourth, which would prevent the League of Nations from amending the court statutes without America's permission. Sir George Foster of Canada led the opposition and was warmly seconded by Markovitch of Jugoslavia. The debate grew rather hot but South American delegates intervened to smooth things over. Final action on the fourth reservation was postponed and discussion of the fifth was begun. This provides that the world court shall not, without the consent of the United States, entertain any request for an advisory opinion touching any dispute or question in which the United States has or claims an interest. The belief prevailed in Geneva that the basis of this reservation is a desire on the part of the United States to prevent any attempt by the council of the League of Nations to seek advisory opinions either on immigration problems or questions affecting the Monroe doctrine and Latin America. It was thought likely the reservation would be turned over to a commission for study and advice.

MEANWHILE California was holding a primary election in which the world court was prominent. Senator Shortridge, pro-court, was running for renomination by the Republicans and was opposed by Robert M. Clarke, backed by Senator Johnson and other anti-court leaders. At this writing incomplete returns indicate that Shortridge was victorious by a considerable plurality. Lineberger, anti-court and wet, was trailing far behind. Lieut. Gov. C. C. Young, also supported by Johnson, was leading Gov. Friend W. Richardson and the four other candidates for the Republican gubernatorial nomination. Congressman Florence P. Kahn, who is decidedly wet, was renominated, and the wets were leading in several other congressional districts.

On the Democratic side John B. Elliott, who was endorsed for senator by William Gibbs McAdoo, was leading Issador Dockweiler, whom he accused of complicity in a Tammany Hall plot to capture California democracy. But Carl Alexander Johnson, San Diego, dry, also bearing the McAdoo endorsement, was trailing Justus S. Wardell in the gubernatorial race. Wardell also was accused by the McAdoo candidates of trafficking with Tammany.

SENATORS TRAMMELL of Florida and Gooding of Idaho, both of whom voted for American entry into the world court, have changed their minds and are now ready to vote for withdrawal of the ratification. Mr. Trammell said he would offer a resolution for such action when the senate meets in December. The defection of these two would not materially affect the situation, and at the summer White House it was made known that President Coolidge does not anticipate a victory by the anti-court forces. It may be mentioned that Col. Theodore Roosevelt, speaking in the Middle West, declared himself against the world court, though supporting the Coolidge administration in all other respects.

"M" A FERGUSON lost her chance for another term when she was defeated in the run-off primary by Dan Moody by nearly two to one. The attorney general, whose nomination by the Democrats is equivalent to election, said the plan was not an issue and Jim Ferguson had found it impossible to make it one.

It appears at this writing that a run-off primary will be necessary September 14 in South Carolina where neither Senator E. B. Smith, Edgar A. Brown nor N. B. Dial had a clear majority for the senatorial nomination. They were standing in the order named.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS delegates were trying hard to find some way to satisfy Spain and Poland and at the same time admit Germany to membership and a permanent seat in the council. The commission at work on plans for reorganization of the council decided that Spain could not have a permanent seat. It adopted Lord Cecil's scheme giving Spain and Poland semi-permanent seats the tenure of which is three years, with a declaration of their re-eligibility.

It seems likely, however, that Spain will quit the league entirely as a result of the refusal of Great Britain and France to attend a conference on the status of Tangier. As was recounted last week, Spain insists that the Tangier district be added to her Morocco protectorate, and the Spanish foreign minister has said flatly that Spain will withdraw from the league unless this is granted. In the house of commons Sir Austen Chamberlain, foreign minister, said Britain was willing to discuss with Spain and France the former's request for a league mandate over Tangier, but with due regard for existing treaties. He did not think Geneva was a good place for such a discussion.

Italy is now tied up with Spain by a new treaty of alliance which it is admitted is a direct threat to France in so far as the rule of the Mediterranean basin is concerned. European diplomats were wondering if Mussolini and De Rivera would try to sabotage the meeting of the league.

OVERRIDING the veto of Governor General Wood, the Philippine house of representatives passed the senate bill providing for a plebiscite in the islands on the question of independence. The measure is now up to President Coolidge, who will have six months in which to act after it reaches him. He will have reports from both Governor General Wood and Col. Carmi Thompson, his personal investigator there, to help him make up his mind. In Washington it is believed he will support Wood.

FAYAL, chief of the Azores Islands, was hit by a disastrous earthquake that ruined most of the homes in the town of Horta and that was followed by a tidal wave that caused great damage in the village of Feteira. Though probably not more than a score of persons were killed, the injured number several hundred and material losses were immense. Fortunately the temblor came in the daytime when most of the inhabitants of the island were out of doors. The quake was the severest ever experienced in the archipelago.

At about the same time there were earthquakes in several regions of Mexico, and a little earlier Maine had some shocks.

AMERICA has lost two more of her best aviators through airplane accidents. Commander John Rodgers of the navy, hero of the Hawaii flight, fell with his plane into shallow water and was fatally injured. Lieut. Cyrus K. Bettis of the army, who crashed into a mountain in Pennsylvania in a fog, died in a hospital in Washington from spinal meningitis which developed after it was thought he was on the way to recovery.

SERIOUS labor trouble broke out in Manville, R. I., where a mob of 1,800 striking textile mill workers fought a battle with a small force of state police and deputy sheriffs, after an attempt to set fire to a mill. The officers used tear gas bombs, revolvers and riot guns and a number of the rioters were wounded, as were three of the officers. The governor sent a detachment of state troops to maintain order.

In Chicago another open and closed shop struggle flared up. A strike of structural iron workers was called on a skyscraper in course of construction as a starter, and the citizens' committee to enforce the Landis award promptly called in strikebreakers to take the places of the union men. Other artisans' unions are likely to become involved. The committee announced it would support any contractor in Chicago who desired to erect steel on the open shop basis.

The long-standing fight between President Lewis of the United Mine Workers and President Farrington of the Illinois miners' union, has resulted in the suspension of the latter by the state executive board. He was forced to admit that he had contracted to enter the employ of a big mining firm whenever he should quit office.

IF RUDOLPH VALENTINO had any sense of humor he must be laughing in his coffin over the outburst of mushy sentimentality and mawkish emotionism that has followed his lamentable death. Enough here to say that after funeral ceremonies in New York, the remains of the screen star were transported in a special car to Hollywood for burial.

GERTRUDE EDERLE did not long maintain her supremacy as a swimmer of the English channel. Her feat was duplicated by Mrs. Clementson Carson of New York, the mother of two children; and a few days later Ernst Vierkoetter of Germany swam across from France to England in the record time of 12 hours and 42 minutes.

DURING the second year of the operation of the Dawes plan, just ended, Germany met nearly 64 per cent of its reparations payments by means of deliveries of materials. The total payments amounted to 1,220,000,000 gold marks (about 290,360,000), and the deliveries in kind 656,800,000 gold marks (about $156,318,000)

GIRLS OF SCHOOL AGE LEARN VALUABLE LESSON

Find Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Dependable Medicine

LOUISE LOUTHAN
ROUTE 2, CHARLESTON, ILLINOIS

From the days of the polonaises to the days of the radio, mothers have given this dependable medicine to their daughters. School girls are often careless. They get wet feet. They overstudy or they tire themselves with too many dances and parties. They get run down. Many an active girl of today, like the demure maiden of the 1870's, has found that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is helping her to find better health and energy. "I gave my fifteen-year-old girl Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it did her a wonderful lot of good. She had been out of school for four months. I read the advertisements of the Vegetable Compound, and since she has taken it she has improved and has gone back to school again. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to other mothers with girls who are not as strong as they should be."—Mrs. ALICE LOUTHAN, Route 2, Charleston, Illinois.

"My daughter was out of school two terms. I have known about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound all my life and finally decided that she should try it. Three bottles helped her in various ways for the next couple of years."—Mrs. W. E. GILLETTE, 986 E. 52nd Place, Los Angeles, Calif.

"I have always been sickly, and until I was fourteen my father was very strict about my perfect attendance at grammar school. I have gone to school through hard storms and often taken cold. When I was fourteen I took to my bed and did not get up for eighteen months. Everyone thought I could not live. Just four months ago I began taking your wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I could notice a great change almost at once. Now I feel like a new person. I wish all girls would try Lydia E. Pinkham's wonderful medicine."—Mrs. C. M. SMITH, Union Village, Vermont.

He now has a nation-wide job of checking road maps for one of the largest map firms in the world. His scout car looks like a laboratory or a power house, and on the instrument board are found a tachometer, aneroid barometer, ammeter, oil gauge, gasoline gauge, ignition and light switches, speedometer, odometer and clock. Among the equipment are shovels and tow chains, ax, portable typewriter, compass, sleeping outfit, a gallon of gas, a gallon of oil and clothes for eight or ten weeks.

New Monuments for Explorers

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ONE hundred and twenty years ago this month the little village of St. Louis was aflame with excitement. A horseman had ridden furiously from Fort Bellefontaine to carry some wonderful news. A little fleet of boats, carrying a party of men who had long been given up for dead, was sweeping down the Big Muddy and would soon be pulling up to the water front. And this was the scene which followed—the depiction is from the pen of Emerson Hough:

"Laughing, talking, ejaculating, weeping in their joy, the people of St. Louis hurried out to meet the men whose voyage meant so much. At last they saw them coming, the paddles flashing in unison in the horny hands which tirelessly ve the boats along the river. They could see a—men with long beards, clad in leggings of hide, moccasins of buffalo and deer; their head-dresses those of the Indians, their long hair braided. And see, in the prow of the foremost craft sat two men, side by side—Meriwether Lewis and William Clark." Two young Virginians had returned from their "magnificent adventure!"

On that same day, September 23, 1806, a resident of St. Louis sat down to write to the Baltimore Federal Gazette these words, "When they arrived three cheers were fired. They really have the appearance of Robinson Crusoe—dressed entirely in buckskin." On that same day Meriwether Lewis wrote to President Jefferson the first report of their expedition that he had been able to send in a year and a half. Here is what he said, "In obedience to your orders we have penetrated the continent of North America to the Pacific ocean and sufficiently explored the interior of the country to affirm that we have discovered the most practicable communication which does exist across the continent by means of the navigable branches of the Missouri and Columbia rivers." A modest report, that! Could he have looked into the future he might have added, "We have blazed the trail for civilization across half a continent. We have joined the Oregon country to your Louisiana Purchase. We have given to our nation the rich territory of the Pacific Northwest and California."

Despite the proverbial ingratitude of republics, it must be said to the credit of the United States that in the case of Lewis and Clark, at least, their achievement brought the reward it so richly deserved. Their return to Washington was a triumphal procession. They were guests of the nation, feted and honored everywhere. Captain Lewis was made governor of the new Territory of Louisiana. Captain Clark was made a general and agent for all the Indian tribes in the West. Besides these commissions, congress granted them 1,600 acres of land.

Nor have these valorous young captains been forgotten during the hundred years that have intervened since their exploit. Cities, counties and automobile trails bear their names. Their memory was honored at the Louisiana Purchase exposition in St. Louis in 1904 and when Portland, Ore., held an exposition a little later it was named the Lewis and Clark exposition, and their names were on the lips of every American.

Last year, at the inspiration of Ralph Budd, president of the Great Northern railway, the Upper-Missouri Historical expedition, composed of a number of eminent historians, visited five historical sites in the West. One of them was at the town of Meriwether in Glacier county, Mont., where a tall shaft had been erected to the memory of Meriwether Lewis, commemorating the farthest north point reached by the Lewis and Clark expedition. A deed for the site of this monument and the monument has recently been presented to the state of Montana by President Budd and it is now state property. Last year, also, the Bitter Root chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution unveiled a tablet at Traveler's Rest creek, near Lolo, Mont., where the Lewis and Clark expedition camped on September 10, 1805. Montana proposes to pay further honor to the pathfinders and at the present time several cities are competing for the privilege of being the site of a state memorial to the explorers, authorized at the last session of the Montana legislature.

This year the idea of the Upper Missouri River Historical expedition was repeated in a Columbia River Historical expedition, sponsored by the governors of the six Northwest states and Presdent Budd of the Great Northern, whose members made their pilgrimage in July, dedicated three monuments and held memorial celebrations in honor of several pathfinders, missionaries and traders at different places en route.

DEDICATING ASTORIA MONUMENT

The final celebration was at Astoria, Ore., where a tall shaft, the gift of Vincent Astor of New York, was unveiled. This monument was erected principally to honor John Jacob Astor, the man who looms largest in the history of the American fur trade. But upon the column, which towers 126 feet in the air from its position on a hill 626 feet above the river, is a ribbon-like frieze, depicting in fresco the historical events connected with the name of Astoria. The pictured story of John Jacob Astor and the fur trade is there, as is the story of Capt. Robert Gray, who discovered and named the Columbia river in 1792. It also bears the names of Lewis and Clark, who first saw the Pacific and realized that they had come to the end of their quest, near Astoria. Four miles away and easily in sight of the new Astoria monument, they built a winter camp, Fort Clatsop, and stayed there until March 23, 1806, when they set out for St. Louis. But Montana and Oregon are not the only states that have thus remembered Meriwether Lewis.

Tennessee, where he is buried, also has done honor to his name. And thereby hangs the tale of the tragedy of the brave young leader's untimely death and one of the mysteries of American history. In September, 1806, Governor Lewis left St. Louis for Washington. Unattended he made his way through the Chickasaw country of Tennessee and one October evening came to the tavern of Robert Grinder, a half-breed, on the old Natchez Trace. Lewis engaged a room at the tavern. During the night a shot was heard and he was found dying with a pistol beside him.

Historians disagree as to who fired the shot. There is one theory that in a fit of melancholy he committed suicide. President Jefferson is said to have accepted that belief and it persisted for many years. But later research supports the belief of the settlers on the Natchez Trace that Lewis was murdered for his money, and the name of "Old Grinder" is linked with the crime.

Lewis was buried near the tavern and it was not until 40 years later that the Tennessee legislature honored his memory by naming a county after him and erecting over his grave a monument at a cost of $500. The ravages of time have seriously defaced the monument, however, and now citizens of Tennessee are planning to build over it a dome-shaped shrine, supported by Grecian columns, each representing one of the states of the Louisiana Purchase, to shield the old monument. Several years ago the federal government authorized the purchase of the tract of land upon which the monument stands and its maintenance as a memorial park. Plans for the new memorial call for statues of Lewis and his companion, Captain Clark, and one of Sacajawea, the Indian girl who was their guide and who did so much to insure the success of the expedition.

Mention of the name of Sacajawea recalls one of the most romantic aspects of the Lewis and Clark expedition, that of a sixteen-year-old Indian mother with a tiny babe strapped on her back, who, as the journals of the expedition record, "guided us unerringly through mountain passes. Intelligent, cheerful, resourceful, tireless, faithful, she inspired us all." In view of the value of her services to the expedition, it is altogether fitting that she should be held in grateful remembrance by the American people. Her memory is preserved in two notable statues. One by Alice Cooper (shown in one of the illustrations of this article) was one of the most admired bits of statuary at the Lewis and Clark exposition in Portland and it now stands in the city park there. Another stands on the state capitol grounds in Bismarck, N. D.

It is interesting to note that, as in the case of Meriwether Lewis, there is a mystery connected with the death of Sacajawea. According to one account she died on the Wind River reservation of her native people, the Shoshones, on April 9, 1884, and was buried in the Indian cemetery there. A monument was erected over the grave in 1906 but since that time there has been a controversy among historians as to whether this grave really holds the bones of Sacajawea. Finally, the bureau of Indian affairs appointed Dr. Charles A. Eastman, the well-known Sioux Indian author and historian, to make an investigation and determine if possible where she was buried.

After a three-months' investigation among three tribes, the Shoshones, Gros Ventres and Comanches, Doctor Eastman reported his belief that the woman who was buried near Fort Washakie on the Wind River reservation in Wyoming, was the girl who guided Lewis and Clark. This supports the conclusions reached by Dr. Grace Raymond Hebard, historian of the University of Wyoming, from evidence which she gathered while making a similar investigation.

David Hilger, secretary of the Montana Historical society; L. F. Crawford, curator of the North Dakota Historical society, and Doane Robinson, superintendent emeritus of the South Dakota department of history, however, do not concur in this belief. They contend that she died December 20, 1812, at Fort Manuel on the Missouri river in South Dakota. If they are correct—and they believe that their evidence is indisputable, just as Doctor Eastman believes that he is fully justified in his conclusions—the grave of Sacajawea can never be marked, for the Missouri river has long since swept away the site of Fort Manuel and with it the spot where the Indian girl was buried.

The controversy was started last year when the proposal was made that congress appropriate $5,000 to erect a suitable monument over the supposedly authentic grave near Fort Washakie and this was followed by Doctor Eastman's investigation, authorized by the Indian department.

In view of all these conflicting opinions, it is difficult for the layman to decide just when and where Sacajawea, or Sakakawea, died and where she was buried. Perhaps it doesn't make much difference. Wherever she lies, her name has a permanent place in our history and her memory is enshrined with that other Indian heroine, Pocahontas of Virginia, in the hearts of all Americans.

Tanlac Saves Lincoln Couple From Years of Suffering

Threatened With Complete Loss of Health, Couple Now Being Congratulated by Friends on Their Surprising Recovery

If you are nearing the tragic moment when good health will slip from you; if indigestion, nervousness, kidney disorders and other ailments torture you, benefit from the remarkable experience of August W. Wuelser of Lincoln, Neb., and his charming wife. In his comfortable home, 1916 U Street, Mr. Wuelser recently said: "Our condition was unbearable. We suffered from stomach trouble, nervousness, headaches and no appetite for food. And when we did eat we had indigestion and gastritis pains. "We both looked underfed, weak and scrawny. We sought relief, without success, till Tanlac came to the rescue. "Since then neither Mrs. Wuelser nor myself have hardly had a sick day. We feel stronger and healthier, eat everything without a thought of pain. This great tonic saved both of us from suffering. I want to tell the world Tanlac is a great medicine."

Mr. and Mrs. Wuelser are only two of thousands now enjoying the benefits of good health and vital strength, thanks to Tanlac, the safe, effective remedy made from roots, barks and herbs, according to the famous Tanlac formula. Ask your druggist for Tanlac—today! More than 40 million bottles sold.

A Good Listener

It has often been said that a woman (or a man either, for that matter) does not need to be a good talker if she or he is a good listener. A woman frequently gains the reputation of being charming solely because she knows how to listen sympathetically and with interest to what others are telling her.

This isn't hard to do when one is out among persons whom one knows more or less well. Courtesy compels a certain amount of real or apparent attention to the remarks of one's dinner companion, and many a discerning woman has discovered that the way to attract a man is not to impress him with cleverness but to let him impress her with his! The better one knows a friend, however, the harder it becomes to listen patiently and attentively, if one is not specially interested.

Hardest of all is it to be a good listener in one's own family. When the man of the house starts on a long harangue about the office and the men working in it, with details about a business deal and an arraignment of his opponents in the field of competition, it takes every ounce of concentration his wife can muster to keep her mind on what he is saying, not to let her thoughts meander off to her own affairs, and to put in an occasional interested question.

Yet these very matters are the foremost things in his life and reviewing them for her sympathetic ear often helps him to think out the way of solving a difficulty, or aids in getting resentment out of his system. If she will stop and think how equally difficult it must be for him to listen patiently to her tales of inefficient servants, the doings of neighbors, or the details of household management, it will help her to be the good listener that every homemaker must learn to become.

To listen attentively to the long-winded stories the children bring in, to follow their development by listening to their confidences and encouraging them, is not only to be a good mother but to be as courteous and thoughtful as she expects the children to be in turn.

Our Comfortable Clothes

We women ought to be very grateful. It seems to me, for the increased comfort of our clothes as compared with the fashions of the past. The March magazines of a generation or two ago bristled with illustrations of pretty girls being driven along before a brisk wind like a boat under full sail, their wide skirts blown over their heads and their petticoats, many in number, resembling the myriad petals of a huge rose! Nowadays the snug young woman in her straight, narrow sport coat or fur jacket and slim skirt, cleaves the stiffest gale without so much as the flutter of a hem.

It has interested me to see how persistently woman has rejected attempted styles that made her uncomfortable or hampered her movements. Probably our growing love of athletics, outdoor life, and greater physical activity have been the cause of this demand for freedom in dress. Long trains that swept the ground, corsets that bound the waist, layers upon layers of underclothes, are not to the taste of the woman who likes to take a brisk walk, play tennis or golf, and dance with the abandon of a young nymph.

When, early this last winter, long skirts made their appearance, with panniers that dipped to the very dust (and accumulated it), and the era of street-sweeping seemed about to return, some women friends and I made a prediction that this fashion would never see the season out. And it hasn't! Skirts are a little longer than last year, to be sure, but the ultralong ones have been barred, and they have now settled upon that stage of comfort and grace combined that was not found in either the extremely short or the excessively long ones.

Small, close-fitting hats for winter are another of the comforts which women have made popular. Hatpins? Never! Broad-brimmed picture hats to catch the vagrant gusts—not at all! In summer the wide shade hat may be comfortable, to shut out the sun, but don't try to force them on us in winter.

The manufacturers are growing wise. They know that when an uncomfortable style is introduced, only a few silly young girls will adopt it.

THROUGH A WOMAN'S EYES

By JEAN NEWTON

"Each Man's Wishes Make His Heaven"

A young woman complained to me the other day of her disappointment in not being able to make her mother happy.

"It was always my hope," she said, "to be able some day to give her the things she missed when we were children. I wanted her to have the luxuries that other women have, many of which she sacrificed so that we might have other advantages.

"Now that my dream has come true, and she could wear beautiful clothes and enjoy everything about town, she does not care for any of these things. It seems impossible for me to make her happy.

"When my husband and I want to take her out with us she prefers to stay at home. When we propose that she accompany us on an interesting trip she says she would not enjoy it. When we go with her to a summer hotel she says she wishes we would let her go to a farm.

"It is the disappointment of my life that now when I could give her everything her heart desires nothing seems to give her pleasure. It is a tragedy."

The only thing about the situation that is tragic, little girl, is your unhappiness, brought about by your refusal to recognize what constitutes happiness for your mother.

Yours is not an uncommon situation. It is the story of many children grown to manhood or womanhood, successful, who would revel in sheer giving to those who have given so much to them. They do not realize what a foreign saying has put so aptly—that "Each man's wishes make his heaven."

We cannot be happy according to some one else's idea of happiness. What constitutes pleasure to some of us is boredom to others, and many things that we enjoy when we are young, attract us not at all when we have reached middle or old age.

There are some men and women, who, no matter how old they may be, retain a childlike pleasure in excitement and costly amusement, who enjoy spending money and seeing the sights. But most parents find contentment in seeing their children happy and successful, and prefer living quietly and in accordance with their old habits to following the pace their children would set for them.

Wise sons and daughters will recognize this and will not chafe at being "unable to make her happy." The daughter who calls this the disappointment of her life should find ample consolation in the knowledge that her success and happiness alone mean contentment and joy for her mother, that her thoughtfulness and devotion in themselves constitute the realization of her mother's dream even though the older woman may not care to take advantage of the pleasures her daughter feels she should enjoy. Let daughter continue to manifest this thoughtfulness and devotion and she need never worry because her mother's requirements are less than she would like to supply.

"I Am Useless"

Nothing is so sad as the cry, "I am useless." And happily, none of us need ever be.

No matter how humble one's station in life may be, the person is rare whom some one does not look up to and take, more or less as an example, and whose influence, therefore, is not worth something. There is no one, indeed, who comes in contact with others who cannot leave his or her mark in some good influence or contribution.

A kind word, a generous act, an encouraging smile, a bit of self-restraint—these are jewels all of us are rich enough to scatter every day of our lives, and which while enriching and gladdening others will not diminish our own store, but will, in fact, increase our portion of happiness.

The finer, nobler aspects of daily life are not necessarily of a spectacular nature. Greatness in largest measure is displayed, not in famed feats of historic valor, but in ordinary, common every-day existence.

There is the strength of patience, the nobility of forgiveness, the courage of faith in the face of disappointment, the heroism of sustained good spirits when all about is dark, the service of instilling cheerfulness, peace and good-will in the hearts of others.

There is none of us so humble that we cannot in some measure play the part of a sower. The Talmud says: "Happy are those who have many around them, for they are rich in opportunities and may sow plentifully."

The woman should read that who says: "My family is grown and can get along without me; I am useless."

A Wet Ordination

In 1785 the ordination of a minister in the town of Beverly, Mass., was not a dry affair. Judging from these items in an old bill of expenses. "Thirty bowls of punch before going to church; ten bottles of wine, before attending meeting; forty-four bowls of punch, twenty-eight bottles of wine, eight bowls of brandy and some cherry rum, while at dinner." And six persons drank tea.

First Thing He Knew About the Accident

There had been a minor accident and a slight interruption in the flow of traffic. Complaint came in a stream from the mouth of the driver of a small car. The patrolman lent an ear. The young man, the victim, stood still, looking faintly amused.

When the driver had worn himself out, the patrolman turned to the young man.

"Well," he said, "you tell your side of the story."

The youth regarded him, took a cigarette from his lips, and cast it carefully into the gutter. The gesture was one of easy arrogance.

"Why," he explained, "I was crossing the street. I felt something brush me, and when I looked up I found this fellow's—er—car on my foot."

Age of Luxuries

Not to be entirely outdone by reports of purchases of solid gold dinner plates at very high prices, a special order has just been placed in New York by a certain woman for teaspoons of the solid metal at $500 a dozen. In another case an order has been sent in to a well-known concern in New York calling for six fancy goblets wrought in solid gold. Just what they will cost the purchaser was not known, as the price had not been calculated for the style of goblet wanted. That this is a minor factor in the transaction, however, is indicated by the fact that the order was "signed, sealed and delivered" by the purchaser on the assurance of the selling house that it could be executed as desired.

Lusitania Still Cruising

Every once in a while you will read in the newspaper that some treasure-seeking expedition is about to raise the Lusitania. But you never hear it has been raised. A French salvage expert holds the opinion that the big ship never went to the bottom.

The sea where it sank is very deep, and the tremendous pressure from below, he thinks, kept the great liner afloat many fathoms down. Its great hull has probably floated hundreds of miles distant in the 11 years that have passed since the German submarine fired its fatal torpedo that sent so many women and children to a watery grave.—Capper's Weekly.

Forcible Reunion

Charles C. Rutledge and L. Burton Ferguson, former classmates at the University of Pittsburgh, pledged frequent meetings with each other when they graduated. They never ran into each other, however, until their cars met with a crash on the William Penn highway. Onlookers were astonished to see both men jump from their machines and shake hands vigorously.

The man's hatred was different from the beast's, but perhaps even more implacable. With McTaggart it was not hatred alone. There was mixed with it an indefinable and superstitious fear, a thing he laughed at, a thing he cursed at, but which clung to him as surely as the scent of his trail clung to Baree's nose. Baree no longer stood for the animal alone; he stood for Nepeese. That was the thought that insisted in growing in McTaggart's ugly mind. He had not ceased to hate Baree; he still hated him as he had never hated a man, but he had an even greater reason now for wanting to kill him. It came to him first in his sleep, in a restless dream, and after that it lived, and lived—the thought that the spirit of Nepeese was guiding Baree in the ravaging of his trap-line!

It was in January that McTaggart caught his first glimpse of Baree. He had placed his rifle against a tree, and was a dozen feet away from it at the time. It was as if Baree knew, and had come to taunt him; for when the Factor suddenly looked up Baree was standing out clear from the dwarf spruce not twenty yards away from him, his white fangs gleaming and his eyes burning like coals. For a space McTaggart stared as if turned into stone. It was Baree. He recognized the white star, the white-tipped ear, and his heart thumped like a hammer in his breast. Very slowly he began to creep toward his rifle. His hand was reaching for it when like a flash Baree was gone.

This gave McTaggart his new idea. He blazed himself a fresh trail through the forests parallel with his trap-line but at least five hundred yards distant from it. Wherever a trap or deadfall was set this new trail struck sharply in, like the point of a V, so that he could approach his line unobserved. By this strategy he believed that in time he was sure of getting a shot at the dog. Again it was the man who was reasoning, and again it was the man who was defeated. The first day that McTaggart followed his new trail Baree also struck that trail. For a little while it puzzled him. Three times he cut back and forth between the old and the new trail. Then there was no doubt. The new trail was the fresh trail, and he followed in the foot-steps of the Factor from Lac Bain. McTaggart did not know what was happening until his return trip, when he saw the story told in the snow. Baree had visited each trap, and without exception he had approached each time at the point of the inverted V. After a week of futile hunting, of lying in wait, of approaching at every point of the wind—a period during which McTaggart had twenty times cursed himself into fits of madness, another idea came to him. It was like an inspiration, and so simple that it seemed almost inconceivable that he had not thought of it before.

He hurried back to Post Lac Bain. The second day after he was on the trail at dawn. This time he carried a pack in which there were a dozen strong wolf traps freshly dipped in beaver oil, and a rabbit which he had snared the previous night. Now and then he looked anxiously at the sky. It was clear until late in the afternoon, when banks of dark clouds began rolling up from the east. Half an hour later a few flakes of snow began falling. McTaggart let one of these drop on the back of his mittened hand, and examined it closely. It was soft and downy, and he gave vent to his satisfaction. It was what he wanted. Before morning there would be six inches of freshly fallen snow covering the trails.

He stopped at the next trap-house and quickly set to work. First he threw away the poisoned bait in the "house" and replaced it with the rabbit. Then he began setting his wolf traps. Three of these he placed close to the "door" of the house, through which Baree would have to reach for the bait. The remaining nine he scattered at intervals of a foot or sixteen inches apart, so that when he was done a veritable cordon of traps guarded the house. He did not fasten the chains, but let them lay loose in the snow. If Baree got into one trap he would get into others and there would be no use of toggles. His work done, McTaggart hurried on through the thickening twilight of winter night to his shack. He was highly elated. This time there could be no such thing as failure. He had sprung every trap on his way from Lac Bain. In none of those traps would Baree find anything to eat until he came to the "nest" of twelve wolf traps.

Seven inches of snow fell that night, and the whole world seemed turned into a wonderful white robe. Like billows of feathers the snow hung to the trees and shrubs; it gave tall white caps to the rocks, and underfoot it was so light that a cartridge dropped from the hand sank to the bottom of it. Baree was on the trap-line early. He was more cautious this morning, for there was no longer the scent or snowshoe track of McTaggart to guide him. He struck the first trap about halfway between Lac Bain and the shack in which the Factor was waiting. It was sprung, and there was no bait. Trap after trap he visited, and all of them he found sprung, and all without bait. He sniffed the air suspiciously, striving vainly to catch the tang of smoke, a whiff of the man-smell. Along toward noon he came to the "nest"—the twelve treacherous traps waiting for him with gaping jaws half a foot under the blanket of snow. For a full minute he stood well outside the danger line, sniffing the air, and listening. He saw the rabbit, and his jaws closed with a hungry click. He moved a step nearer. Still he was suspicious—for some strange and inexplicable reason he sensed danger. Anxiously he sought for it with his nose, his eyes, and his ears. And all about him there was a great silence and a great peace. His jaws clicked again. He whined softly. What was it stirring him? Where was the danger he could neither see nor smell? Slowly he circled about the trap-house; three times he circled round it, each circle drawing him a little nearer—until at last his feet almost touched the outer cordon of traps. Another minute he stood still; his ears flattened; in spite of the rich aroma of the rabbit in his nostrils something was drawing him away. In another moment he would have gone, but there came suddenly—and from directly behind the trap-house—a fierce little rat-like squeak, and the next instant Baree saw an ermine whiter than the snow tearing hungrily at the flesh of the rabbit. He forgot his strange premonition of danger. He growled fiercely, but his plucky little rival did not budge from his feast.

And then he sprang straight into the "nest" that Bush McTaggart had made for him. . . . The next morning Bush McTaggart heard the clanking of a chain when he was still a good quarter of a mile from the "nest." Was it a lynx? Was it a fisher-cat? Was it a wolf or a fox? Or was it Baree? He half ran the rest of the distance, and at last he came to where he could see, and his heart leaped into his throat when he saw that he had caught his enemy. He approached, holding his rifle ready to fire if by any chance the dog should free himself.

Baree lay on his side, panting from exhaustion and quivering with pain. A hoarse cry of exultation burst from McTaggart's lips as he drew nearer and looked at the snow. It was packed hard for many feet about the trap-house, where Baree had struggled, and it was red with blood. The blood had come mostly from Baree's jaws. They were dripping now as he glared at his enemy. The steel jaws hidden under the snow had done their merciless work well. One of his forefeet was caught well up toward the first joint; both hind feet were caught; a fourth trap had closed on his flank, and in tearing the jaws loose he had pulled off a patch of skin half as big as McTaggart's hand. The snow told the story of his desperate fight all through the night; his bleeding jaws showed how vainly he had tried to break the imprisoning steel with his teeth. He was panting. His eyes were bloodshot. But even now, after all his hours of agony, neither his spirit nor his courage were broken. When he saw McTaggart he made a lunge to his feet, almost instantly crumpling down into the snow again. But his forefeet were braced. His head and chest remained up, and the snarl that came from his throat was tigerish in its ferocity. Here, at last—not more than a dozen feet from him—was the one thing in all the world that he hated more than he hated the wolf breed. And again he was helpless, as he had been helpless that other time in the rabbit snare.

The fierceness of his snarl did not disturb Bush McTaggart now. He saw how utterly the other was at his mercy, and with an exultant laugh he leaned his rifle against a tree, pulled off his mittens, and began loading his pipe. This was the triumph he had looked forward to, the torture he had waited for. In his soul there was a hatred as deadly as Baree's, the hatred that a man might have for a man. He had expected to send a bullet through the dog. But this was better—to watch him dying by inches, to taunt him as he would have taunted a human, to walk about him so that he could hear the clank of the traps and see the fresh blood drip as Baree twisted his tortured legs and body to keep facing him. It was a splendid vengeance. He was so engrossed in it that he did not hear the approach of snowshoes behind him. It was a voice—a man's voice—that turned him round suddenly.

The man was a stranger, and he was younger than McTaggart by ten years. At least he looked no more than thirty-five or six, even with the short growth of blonde beard he wore. He was of that sort that the average man would like at a glance; boyish, and yet a man; with clear eyes that looked out frankly from under the rim of his fur cap, a form lithe as an Indian's, and a face altogether that did not bear the hard lines of the wilderness. Yet McTaggart knew before he had spoken that this man was of the wilderness, that he was heart and soul a part of it. His cap was of fisher-skin. He wore a windproof coat of softly tanned caribou skin, belted at the waist with a long sash, and Indian fringed. The inside of the coat was furred. He was traveling on the long, slender bush-country snowshoe; his pack, strapped over the shoulders, was small and compact; he was carrying his rifle in a cloth jacket. And from cap to snowshoes he was travel-worn. McTaggart, at a guess, would have said that he had traveled a thousand miles in the last few weeks. It was not this thought that sent the stranger and chilling thrill up his back; but the sudden fear that in some strange way a whisper of the truth might have found its way down into the south—the truth of what had happened on the Gray Loon—and that this travel-worn stranger wore under his caribou-skin coat the badge of the Royal Northwest Mounted Police. For that instant it was almost a terror that possessed him, and he stood mute.

The stranger had uttered only an amazed exclamation before. Now he said, with his eyes on Baree:

"God save us, but you've got the poor devil in a right proper mess, haven't you?"

There was something in the voice that reassured McTaggart. It was not a suspicious voice, and he saw that the stranger was more interested in the captured animal than in himself. He drew a deep breath.

"A trap robber," he said. The stranger was staring still more closely at Baree. He thrust his gun stock downward in the snow and drew nearer to him.

"God save us again—a dog!" he exclaimed.

From behind, McTaggart was watching the man with the eyes of a ferret.

"Yes, a dog," he answered. "A wild dog, half wolf at least. He's robbed me of a thousand dollars' worth of fur this winter."

The stranger squatted himself before Baree, with his mittened hands resting on his knees, and his white teeth gleaming in a half smile.

"You poor devil!" he said sympathetically. "So you're a trap robber, eh? An outlaw? And—the Police have got you? And—God save us once more—they haven't played you a very square game!"

He rose and faced McTaggart.

"I had to set a lot of traps like that," the Factor apologized, his face reddening slightly under the steady gaze of the stranger's blue eyes. Suddenly his animus rose. "And he's going to die there, inch by inch. I'm going to pay for all he's done." He picked up his gun, and added, with his eyes on the stranger and his finger ready at the trigger, "I'm Bush McTaggart, the Factor at Lac Bain. Are you bound that way, m'sieu?"

"A few miles. I'm bound up-country—beyond the Barrens."

McTaggart felt again the strange thrill.

"Government?" he asked.

The stranger nodded.

"The—Police, perhaps," persisted McTaggart.

"Why, yes—of course—the Police," said the stranger, looking straight into the Factor's eyes. "And now, m'sieu, as a very great courtesy to the Law I'm going to ask you to send a bullet through that beast's head before we go on. Or shall I?"

"It's the law of the line," said McTaggart, "to let a trap robber rot in the traps. And that beast was a devil. Listen—"

Swiftly, and yet leaving out none of the fine detail, he told of the weeks and months of strife between himself and Baree; of the maddening futility of all his tricks and schemes and the still more maddening cleverness of the beast he had at last succeeded in trapping.

"He was a devil—that clever," he cried fiercely when he had finished. "And now—would you shoot him, or let him lie there and die by inches, as the devil should?"

Revenged

A busy housewife came into the sitting room, a determined look in her eyes.

"I shall have to punish those children," she began.

"What have the little beggars been up to now?" asked father, looking up from his newspaper.

"Why, they've made a mess of my sewing room," explained his wife. "Needles, reels of cotton, scissors—everything had been hidden away in the most unexpected places. It's exasperating."

Her husband laid down his paper and smiled.

"I did that," he said calmly. "You tidied up my desk so beautifully the other day that I thought it only fair to return the compliment. So I tidied up your sewing-room."

COAT OF MOST SM HANDSOME AF

IF YOU are planning on making your coat of last season serve for the coming autumn and winter you are likely due for a disappointment. That is, if you aspire to be up-to-the-minute in style. According to the newly arriving fashions a radical change is taking place throughout all costuming. Simple styling, such as we have been enjoying these several seasons past, is giving way to greater elaboration. Not only does this apply to creative design but to fabrics as well, which are choicely elegant and unique as to weave and coloring.

The coat in the picture handsomely interprets certain new style trends.

Fashion mood is changing. Simplicity is becoming a past word in the vocabulary of the mode. The sartorial trend is toward those elegancies and intricacies and arresting graces which go to make up the ultrafeminine type. Our afternoon frocks are to be charming conceptions of beautiful color, exquisite fabric with elaborate styling and detailing, says the mode's foreword.

Snap-shotted at the Grand Prix races were these two Paris gowns here illustrated. The one to the left might well be captioned "a study in silk," for it is a masterpiece of artistry both as to color and fabric manipulation. The

MOIRE COAT WITH MONKEY FUR

Note the new wing sleeves which add a stately grace to this model. A blouse effect across the back is also one of the new notes expressed in this exclusive coat of formal styling. However, this is adroitly accomplished by not disturbing the slim silhouette.

As before said, fabric-elegance is another of the season's special hobbies. Just now moire silk, both for dresses and coats, is causing quite a ripple of excitement throughout all fashiondom. The fact that black moire is the selected medium for this winged-material is a colorful silk print, with a unique and decorative banding on the skirt accomplished by uniting strips of silk each of which repeat a tone or tint found in the patterning of the fabric itself. This roman stripe effect is revealed at the front opening of the blouse.

Since we are to have modes of distinctly sophisticated and elegant mien, stressing a more feminine type, this means the employment of much lace. The exquisite beige lace dress, which the lady to the right in this picture is sleeve coat adds to its prestige as strictly the last word in costology.

Elaborate fur trims are to prevail on dressier coats this season, which accounts for the lavish use of monkey fur on this particular model, for 'tis said in Paris that monkey fur will again be a favored trim.

One hears considerable about deep armhole effects in the new coat versions, also dolman treatments which are manifest in many of the advance showings. Collars are widely varied.

Interesting also is the fact that many of the coming coats will be either fur-lined or lined with fine woolen material.

wearing, has for its foundation a self-colored crepe faille silk, the same bordered with a broad caramel-colored velvet ribbon.

Formal and feminine elegance will express itself in velvet this autumn and winter, both for the afternoon costume and the evening gown. There will be a lavish application of richly ornate embroidery done not alone in floss and chenille, but elaborated with nail heads, rhinestones, beads and tinsels. Much of this handiwork will be confined to the sleeves, for novel sleeves are forecast to play a prominent role in the designing of our dressier frocks. JULIA BOTTOMLEY.

FOR INFLAMED BREATHING TUBES

Try Dr. Blosser's Medical Cigarettes in the Next Attack.

If you have catarrh you are in danger of losing your hearing. The first symptoms of catarrhal deafness are roaring or buzzing sensations and a stopped-up feeling in the ears. A neglected cold, or an uncurbed cold, leads to catarrh, and as everybody knows, catarrh affects the eyes, ears, nose, throat, lungs and frequently undermines the general health.

The secret of the successful medication of these hidden parts was discovered by Dr. Blosser in his medical practice. This remedy is applied by smoking a certain combination of medicinal herbs (containing no tobacco) in a pipe or cigarette. Dr. Blosser's Remedy produces a dense smoke vapor which is inhaled or forced into the Eustachian tubes leading to the middle ear. It penetrates to parts impossible to reach with balms, salves, sprays, douches, pills, tablets, liquids and so-called "constitutive" treatments. This Remedy is absolutely harmless and is being used successfully by adults and children.

You can get from any drug store a convenient pocket size package of Dr. Blosser's Cigarettes and prove for yourself their pleasant beneficial effects.

With so few present last Sun-

Since we had so few last Sun-

TESTIMONIALS

THIS IS TO CERTIFY that my son, Johnny, got well by taking Chiropractic adjustments from John W. Fitzjarrald after three
M. D.'s had given him up to die.
They said he had heart trouble,
they said his heart was displaced 1 1/2 inches to the right, enlarged one inch and also had leaky heart valves. They made this statement after X Raying him; they just gave him three weeks to live.
So I carried him to Fitzjarrald, the Chiropractor, and he began to improve from the first. He had his first adjusting about February 1st, 1922, and was able to pick cotton and gather feed that fall. Although he had been dead for several weeks according to the prophecy of three M. D.'s who think they are of the best in their line in Hall County. Johnny never took any medicine whatever after he had his first adjusting.

been taking adjustments from him with best results. I have used said was up to date, but will say

I have got more benefit from Dr.
John W. Fitzjarrald than from all the rest. The Medical Doc-

they gave me no relief. Fitzjarand he began adjusting me and I got all right. And now I can't

POPULAR MECHANICS PRESS
CHICAGO

Here's "the most remarkable book ever published for farmers," says one authority.
It is remarkable in the extreme practical nature of its contents, in the wide range of farm subjects covered, in the world of illustrations it contains, and in the extremely low price.

861 Discoveries

TO COTTON FARMERS

Much has been said about the difference in weights on cotton put up in Round Bale as compared with the usual square bale method

The point is: Square Bale bagging weighs 20 pounds, whereas Round Bale bagging weighs 5 pounds, which makes 15 pounds more weight to add to Square Bale,—commonly called tare difference.

The following table explains this difference in figures:

Difference in weight on Bagging	Square Bale Price	Money Differ- ence	Difference reduced to Points	To equalize, Round Bale Price Should Be
15 Lbs.	10c	$1.50	30	10.30
15 Lbs.	10½c	$1.58	31½	10.82
15 Lbs.	11c	$1.65	33	11.33
15 Lbs.	11½c	$1.73	34½	11.85
15 Lbs.	12c	$1.80	36	12.36
15 Lbs.	12½c	$1.88	37½	12.88
15 Lbs.	13c	$1.95	39	13.39
15 Lbs.	13½c	$2.03	40½	13.91
15 Lbs.	14c	$2.10	42	14.42
15 Lbs.	14½c	$2.18	43½	14.94
15 Lbs.	15c	$2.25	45	15.45
15 Lbs.	15½c	$2.33	46½	15.97
15 Lbs.	16c	$2.40	48	16.48
15 Lbs.	17c	$2.55	51	17.51

Bale, and earnestly wish you to have your choice of
