STATE RESPONSIBLE FOR HIGHWAY UPKEEP

We are indebted to County Judge J. R. Porter for the following article on a subject of great interest to a large number of citizens just now. Judge Porter says:

Since there seems to be some what of a misunderstanding in the county over who is responsible for the condition of the State Highways, it might be of interest to the taxpayers of the county and those who use the highways to know that the State Highway Department alone is responsible for the maintenance and upkeep of the highways, and that the county through its Commissioners Court has absolutely nothing to do with the maintenance, upkeep, or care or supervision of the Highways in the county. The authority for this control is found in Article 6673 Revised Civil Statutes, 1925, which reads as follows:

"The Commission is authorized to take over and maintain the various State Highways in Texas, and the counties through which said highways pass shall be free from any cost, expense or supervision of such highways. The Commission shall use the automobile registration fees in the State Highway Fund for the maintenance of such highways, and shall divert the same to no other use unless the Commission shall be without sufficient funds from other sources to meet Federal aid to roads in Texas, and in such case the Commission is authorized by resolution to transfer a sufficient amount from such fund to match said Federal Aid."

This Article and the entire Highway Act have been passed upon by the Supreme Court of the State of Texas in the case of Robbins et al vs. Limestone County et al 268 S W 915. In which case it was held that public roads are State property over which the State has full control and authority.

The Commissioners Court of the county is directed by statute to expend the money of the county derived by taxation for specific purposes, and since there is no county highway fund there is not one penny of county money available for any expenses of any nature whatsoever on State Highways in the county, and if the Commissioners Court in good faith should attempt to expend county money on highways, it would be diverting public money contrary to the laws and in violation of the law and would make the individuals of the Court liable for misconduct.

Donley County has four State Highways in its bounds. These are State Highway No 5 paralleling the Ft Worth & Denver R R; State Highway No 52 from Hedley to the east county line toward Wellington; State Highway No 88 from Clarendon to Jericho, and State Highway No 75 through the north edge of the county, paralleling the Rock Island R R.

DISTRICT COURT TO OPEN NEXT MONDAY

The fall term of the District Court convenes in Clarendon on Oct. 18th--next Monday.

C. L. Goin, D. C. Moore, W. C. Watkins, U. J. Boston, T. C. Johnson and T. F. Brown have been summoned from this end of the county for Grand Jury service.

The criminal docket is light, consisting of seven or eight liquor cases, one incest charge, and one charge of assault with intent to kill.

The civil and appearance dockets are rather full, and several delinquent tax suits are to be heard. Doubtless the fall term of the Court will be taken up with the business at hand and the probable additional business emanating from the grand jury headquarters.

When in need of an Oil Cook Stove, Heater Stove, a good Mattress, Furniture, Monitor Washing Machine, or anything in the shelf line--go to Hedley Hardware.

Mrs. J. B. Stogner, Mrs. R. L. Fairris, Miss Lorene Stogner, and Hollis Stogner visited Clarendon Monday.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Franco-Italian Relations Strained by Attempt to Kill Mussolini.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
ALTHOUGH friendly relations between Italy and France are strained as a result of the latest attempt to assassinate Premier Mussolini, it is not likely there will be an actual diplomatic rupture. The Italian anarchist who threw a bomb at the dictator's automobile insists that he had no accomplices, but the Italian authorities are convinced that his crime was plotted in France and they accuse that country of deliberately sheltering conspirators against the Fascist regime. Immediately after the bomb throwing Mussolini, without naming France, uttered a warning to other nations that Italy proposed to "put a stop to certain culpable, tiresome conditions." The Italian press was more outspoken and berated France soundly, to which the French replied, officially and unofficially, with disclaimers of responsibility and advice to Italy to watch its own borders and keep out the plotters who might form their plans in other countries. There were demonstrations against the French consulates in several Italian cities, and the French charge d'affaires in Rome fled three protests. Premier Polcare called in the Italian ambassador to Paris and made it clear that France would regard further officially inspired criticism of its hospitality for foreign political refugees as an act of extreme unfriendliness. Notwithstanding this, the directory of the Fascist party issued orders which said in part:

"The land of France, for whose safety some of our 500,000 war dead fell, has been for years the most hospitable land for all those hatching in their perfidious hearts hatred against Italy."
It is there, the orders continue, that "spirits are excited, bombs are built, and those people are instructed who later will enter Italy to attempt the life of the head of the Italian regime. All this cannot longer be tolerated."
The orders declare that, if France desires to continue friendship with Italy, as the latter desires, it must change its line of conduct.
The Italian government published a list of political refugees, most of whom are living in France, and announced action that will deprive them of their citizenship.

COLORADO Republicans seem to have wrested the control of the party's affairs in that state from the hands of the Ku Klux Klan and similar secret organizations. United States Senator Rice W. Manna, directing head of the Klan in Colorado, was defeated for renomination by Charles W. Waterman, counsel of the President's oil conservation board, who was supported by the anti-Klan element. In addition, all the candidates for office who were sponsored by Senator L. C. Phipps were beaten by those supported by Clarence C. Hamlin and ex-Governor Shoup, leaders of the anti-Klan faction in the party. The Democrats nominated former Gov. W. E. Sweet for senator.

In Maryland Senator Weller, Republican, defeated Congressman John Philip Hill for the senatorial nomination to oppose M. E. Tydings, Democrat. Governor Ritchie was renominated. Senators E. D. Smith of South Carolina and Wesley Jones of Washington won renomination.

Michigan Republicans had an exciting gubernatorial fight and Gov. Alex Groesbeck was badly beaten by Fred W. Green of Ionia, mainly because Groesbeck has been exceedingly liberal in the granting of prison paroles and pardons. The Groesbeck-Green contest was so bitter that the Democrats think it will result in a split in the Republican party and the election of William J. Constock, their unopposed gubernatorial candidate.

Senator Butler of Massachusetts, chairman of the Republican national committee, and Gov. Alvin T. Fuller were renominated without opposition, and the Democrats of the state put up former Senator David L. Walsh and William Gaston to oppose them. The Democrats of Louisiana renominated Senator Edwin S. Broussard, though former Gov. Jared V. Sanders gave him a close race. Senator Dale of Vermont was unopposed for renomination.

Republican national leaders have brought out the old saying, "As Maine goes, so goes the nation," following the election last week in that state. It was won by the Republicans with ease and their majority of about 20,000 was considered quite satisfactory for an off-year. Gov. Ralph O. Brewster and all four congressmen were returned to office. The Democratic congressional committee admittedly could find little encouragement in the Maine results.

CANADA'S elections last week were watched by the United States with unusual interest, and the victory of the Liberals, it was predicted, would result in reciprocity with this country. Leaders there said the defeat of the Meighen Conservative government meant the Canadian people refused to be hived behind high tariff barriers. W. L. MacKenzie King, leader of the Liberals, had urged the wisdom of freer trade facilities, and some of his Progressive allies in western Canada are out-and-out free traders. The Liberals won 119 parliamentary seats, and of their natural allies the Progressives won 8, the United Farmers of Alberta 11, the Laborites 3 and the Independents 2. It was certain Mr. King could muster a majority of about 50 votes for his policies. It was expected Premier Meighen and his cabinet would resign promptly and that Mr. King would be called to form a new government.

SEVERAL thousand delegates of the Ku Klux Klan met in Washington for the annual convention, paraded down Pennsylvania avenue in robes, but without masks, declared themselves against the World court and also against Gov. Al Smith as a Presidential candidate, and re-elected Hiram W. Evans as Imperial wizard. Evans also said the Klan would wage war against alienism, bolshevism, Catholicism, modification of the Eighteenth amendment and European intervention in Mexican internal affairs. Resolutions were adopted demanding strict adherence to a "hands-off" policy toward Mexico's church squabble and expressing the order's sympathy with the Calles government in its "efforts to free the people from stultifying foreign influences and to popularize the education of the masses."

Every delegate to the convention took a solemn oath to attend some Protestant church every Sunday in the year, unless prevented by illness or some other emergency; and a similar oath is to be administered by the delegates to every member of the Klan.

TORRENTIAL rains, the heaviest recorded for September, swelled the rivers and streams of the Middle West into roaring floods and immense damage to crops and real property resulted. Western Illinois was hardest hit by the rains, which descended on sections of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, South Dakota, Wisconsin and Michigan. The losses ranged from $5,000,000 in Illinois to half a million in Iowa. About a score of persons lost their lives. Most of the damage falls on the corn crop.

ELECTION of non-permanent members of the League of Nations council by the assembly resulted in the choice of Poland, Chile, and Rumania for three-year tenure; Columbia, Holland and China for two years, and Belgium, Czechoslovakia and San Salvador for one year. By a special vote, Poland was declared re-eligible for election at the expiration of her three-year term, thereby becoming a semi-permanent council member. There are 18 candidates for the nine seats, including the Irish Free State and Uruguay whose representatives were bitterly disappointed by the result of the balloting.

August Zaleski, foreign minister of Poland, on behalf of the delegation from Poland, Sweden and Finland, presented a petition asking that the engine enter the battle against alcoholism. He declared the evil of alcoholism was made worse by the lack of co-ordinated international action.

After the nations signatory to the Locarno treaties had deposited with the league secretariat signed copies of the pacts, Doctor Stresemann of Germany demanded that the Rhine-land be evacuated by the allies. In an interview he said: "If Locarno has any meaning at all, it should mean the existing frontiers of western Europe are guaranteed against forceful revision, and consequently no other guarantees, such as occupied zones, are longer necessary."

Paul Boncour, French delegate, urged that a general conference on disarmament should be convoked at the earliest possible date. The league's disarmament commission adopted a modified resolution emphasizing the necessity of concluding as soon as possible a convention of the private manufacturer of arms.

MEXICO has more trouble on its hands. The Yaqui Indians of the state of Sonora, who never have been really conquered, are in revolt and the government has sent large bodies of troops to the scene. One detachment of artillery is reported to have been destroyed by the Indians. The Yaquis stopped a train on which General Obregon was travelling and seized the former president, but he was soon released, presumably after paying ransom. It is believed in Mexico City that the Indians have been stirred up by revolutionary agents sent into the country by Adolfo de la Huerta, head of the revolt against the Obregon government in December, 1923.
Jacob Rosenthal, a wealthy New Yorker, was kidnapped by bandits while motoring from Cuernavaca to Mexico City and held for ransom. Federal troops were put on the trail of the bandits, who sent warning that if they were pursued they would kill their captive. This being ignored they murdered Rosenthal.

HENRY STEVENS, firearms expert, joined his brother Willie and Cousin Henry de la B. Carpenter in the county jail at Somerville, N. J., on charges of murdering Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Millia, whose bodies were found under a crab-apple tree four years ago. The slain rector's three relatives by marriage and his widow, Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, were indicted for the murder by the grand jury. The indictment of Henry Stevens was something of a surprise, although he recently figured prominently in the revived investigation and it was officially announced that his ability, considered ironical four years ago, had been broken down.

PRESIDENT AND MRS. COOLIDGE and their summer household departed on Saturday from White Pine camp in the Adirondacks, their vacation having come to an end. The President has profited greatly physically by the outdoor life in the mountains and returned to Washington full of energy and brown as a berry. He found the White House all cleaned and repaired, and also found his secretary, Mr. Sanders, in good health again after a sea voyage.

CAPT. RENE FONCK and his crew selected for the transatlantic non-stop flight all went to the flying field at Westbury, N. Y., early Thursday morning prepared to jump off for Paris in the huge Sikorsky plane, which had been tested and approved by Lieutenant Curtin, navigator and alternate pilot. But when nearly everything was ready for the start a bad leak in the gasoline tank was discovered. So the plane was put back in the hangar for repairs and the start was postponed. Perhaps before this is read the flight will have been made or have failed. On the other hand, weather conditions may have caused indefinite delay.

SENATOR CARAWAY of Arkansas has broken out in a new spot. He says the graves of America's war dead in France have been desecrated with abusive and vulgar writings on the crosses, and urges that the bodies of all soldiers buried there be brought home. The War department says nothing of this character has been reported to it, and General Pershing, chairman of the American battle monuments commission, declared that during his recent stay in Europe he had heard nothing of such desecration.

Everything Else Failed But Tanlac Saves Her

San Antonio Woman Had Spent Hundreds of Dollars in Vain Search for Relief From Nervous Indigestion

"Utterly unstrung and almost hopeless," is the way Mrs. W. K. Smith, of 417 Grayson St., San Antonio, Texas, describes her condition at the climax of a breakdown when she was living in Corpus Christi, Texas, 8 years ago. "I had spent hundreds of dollars for different remedies and treatments," she continues. "I was almost a skeleton after years of severe dieting, had to spend many days in bed, and frequently failed to get any sleep till after midnight. Going to bed was like a nightmare. "A few bites of food would feel like a ton of lead in my stomach, and gas would create such pains I would be in agony for hours. "My sister, who had taken Tanlac and who thinks the world of it, got me to try it. Tanlac helped me immediately. Six bottles left me with energy to spare and feeling strong and happy. Now I work every day, helping my husband conduct our 'Do Drop Inn', and have gained over 30 lbs. Tanlac is wonderful!"

Many have had experiences such as Mrs. Smith relates. If you have tried other treatments without benefit, turn now to Tanlac. Tanlac is Nature's own remedy—safe, pleasant and effective—made from roots, bark and herbs. Ask your druggist for Tanlac—today!

REV. AND MRS. MEADOR GO TO NEW PASTORATE

We arrived in Hedley Nov 5th, 1925, and started to work to try to be a blessing to the Hedley people and try to prove to them that we were out only for God's cause. We want to say we have found some of the cream of the earth here, not only in the Nazarene church, but also in others. We appreciate the way the people of Hedley have stood by us. We have made mistakes and blunders, but God has helped us through it all.

We found a most wonderful bunch of business men. As we needed new pews in the church, we found these men ready to help—from banks, merchants, garages; some gave much, and those not able to give much gave a little. And we appreciated it as much as the big offerings, for it is the spirit of the giver that counts. I could mention many deeds of kindness done by the lumber men here. It has been a year of Victory. We have seen about two hundred pray through in the old time way at our altars.

But Sunday will be our last day at Hedley, as the Assembly meets the 20th of this month. We will preach our Farewell Sermon Sunday night and wait all who can to come out to this service and pray for a big time. We shall leave praying God's blessings on the Hedley people, one and all. The Lord bless Hedley.

Rev and Mrs Amos R Meador.

CONFERENCE OFFICERS
VISIT KEDLEY W. M. S.

The W. M. Society of the Methodist church was honored last Saturday afternoon and evening by having five conference officers visit them. They were: Mrs. Nat G. Rollins of Abilene, Conference President; Mrs. J. Frank Potts of Abilene, Secretary; Mrs. J. G. Merritt of Colorado, Supt. of Social Service; Mrs. J. M. Porter of Wheeler, Director of the Gibson Auxiliary; and Mrs. Louis Clement of Shamrock, Secretary of Clarendon District. These women presented the cause of the Belle Bennett Memorial, the Missionary Training School of the Methodist church. The local Auxiliary paid its quota in full, an amount equal to five dollars per member. This money will be used in building the Scarritt College for Christian Workers, in Nashville, Tenn. The women of the local society entertained their visitors with a buffet supper in the basement of the church Saturday evening, and at 7:30 a public service was held in the auditorium, at which each visitor made a brief talk. They left Sunday morning for Clarendon and other points in the district.

Bringing "The Indian Napoleon"

SURRENDER OF CHIEF JOSEPH "From Where the Sun Now Stands I Fight no More Against the White Man"

CYRUS DALLIN MODELING HEAD OF CHIEF JOSEPH

CHIEF JOSEPH

GEN. O.O. HOWARD

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

PRESENT plans are carried out, the United States is to have a new national monument wherein will be commemorated the name and fame of the greatest native military genius this country has ever known, a red man who has been called by military experts, who know whereof they speak, "the Indian Napoleon." He is Chief Joseph of the Nez Perces, and linked with his name in the proposed memorial will be that of one of our most successful Indian fighters, the late Gen. Nelson A. Miles.

For years the residents of Chinook, Mont., and Blaine county have sought to have set aside as a national memorial the site of the battlefield in the Bear Paw mountains where General Miles and Chief Joseph fought a five-day engagement and where just 49 years ago this month took place one of the most dramatic surrenders in all American history. Now it seems likely that the ambition of these Montanans to honor these two great warriors will be realized, and it is believed that the new national monument will be erected by presidential proclamation within the next year. If this is done a shaft probably will be erected on the site of the surrender and the dedication will take place a year hence, on the fiftieth anniversary of the event.

Not only is the name of Chief Joseph to be emblazoned on this shaft but further honor is being paid him by one of America's foremost sculptors, Cyrus Dallin, already noted for his Indian sculptures, has begun work on a memorial wherein, according to press dispatches, he "hopes to immortalize in bronze the bravery, patience, loyalty and sorrow of the American Indian." That being his ambition it was inevitable that he should choose Chief Joseph for his subject, for there never has been an Indian of whom bravery, patience, loyalty and sorrow were more characteristic and the story of him and of his people, the Nez Perces, is a pathetic page in American history. It is a story, too, which reflects little credit upon the American people, one of those sordid stories of greed and oppression of a weaker race which has so often marked the relations of white men and red.

From time immemorial the Nez Perces had dwelt in the vast region in Idaho, Oregon and Washington, including the valleys of the Snake, Salmon, Clearwater and Grande Ronde rivers. In 1855 Gov. Isaac I. Stevens of Washington territory made a treaty with the Nez Perces confirming their title to their ancestral home, but in 1863 by a new treaty with the tribes of the Northwest the lands of the Nez Perces were greatly reduced.

Old Joseph of the Nez Perces declined to sign the treaty, even though other chiefs did, refused to live on the proposed reservation and continued to occupy the fertile territory, especially the beautiful Wallowa valley, which his people loved most of all. Old Joseph died in 1872, bequeathing to his son Young Joseph, whose Indian name, "Hinmaton Yahlatkit," has the impressive meaning of "Thunder Rolling in the Mountains," his love for the Wallowa valley and his opposition to giving it up to the encroaching whites. For the next four years there was constant friction between the whites and the Indians and in nearly every case the whites were the aggressors. Finally in 1876 a commission decided, in defiance of all right, that the Nez Perces must go on the reservation assigned them and Gen. O. O. Howard, commander of the military department of the Columbia, was ordered to carry out the decision.

After several councils with the Indians, Chief Joseph agreed to obey the order of the commission and go on the reservation. He did this only because he felt that it would be better to submit to justice than to provoke a war in which he knew withstood the attack of Miles' soldiers. Unfortunately some of his hot-blooded young warriors refused to abide by his decision. On June 13, 1877, they murdered several settlers. There is one story of the return of the war party to the Nez Perce camp where the young warriors throw down several white scalps and announced dramatically to their people "Now you will have to go to war!"

Chief Joseph was absent from camp at the time, collecting some of his scattered tribesmen in preparation for removal to the reservation. When he returned he found that the die was cast and that he was committed to war. Even then he was resolved to make it a defensive war and not an offensive one and he conceived the bold plan of fleeing with his people to Canada, fighting only if the white men barred his path to freedom. Then began one of the most remarkable retreats in history. One historian of the Nez Perce war has written: "Xenophon has chronicled the retreat of the ten thousand; De Quincey has romanced about the migration of the Tartars; a thousand pens have recorded the annihilation of the Grand Army of Napoleon; the story of Joseph and his Nez Perces is my theme—the story of the bitterest injustice toward a weak but independent people to which the United States ever set its hand and of a military exploit of the first magnitude, which justly entitles this great Indian to take rank among the great Captains."

Undaunted by the almost insuperable difficulties of his problem—that of transporting a whole tribe, men, women and children, over a thousand miles or more of the roughest country on the North American continent and breaking through the lines of military barrier which were certain to be thrown out to intercept him, Chief Joseph set out. General Howard acted promptly upon hearing of the murders of the settlers. He began concentrating all available troops at strategic points. The first engagement took place on June 17 in White Bird canon where Captain Ferry and a small body of troops rode into a trap which Joseph had prepared for him and were disastrously defeated. In this battle the Indian chief in the handling of his men first showed those qualities of military leadership which was a promise of the stern task before the soldiers before they could hope to obey the orders from Washington.

After Perry's defeat General Howard took the field himself and the great chase was on. Howard himself has paid high tribute to the military genius of his opponent and in the weeks that followed Chief Joseph amply proved that he was worthy of all praise. For the Indian Napoleon proved that he understood the Little Corporal's tactics of defeating the enemy in detail and did it. General Howard and Colonel Sturgis both learned that to their sorrow. Even General Miles, who "naïly brought him to bay, might have learned it had conditions been different.

For here briefly is the achievement of Chief Joseph during that remarkable retreat: Encumbered with women and children, which he refused to desert and allow to fall into the hands of the soldiers as he might have done several times to facilitate his flight, and having a fighting force that never exceeded 300 warriors, he fought eleven engagements, five of them pitched battles of which he lost but one; in the other six skirmishes he killed 125 and wounded 140 of the 2,000 soldiers who fought him, but he lost 151 killed and 88 wounded of his own people. Then having distanced his pursuers and knowing that he was only 50 miles from the Canadian line and safety (for he did not know of the approach of General Miles' troops) he made the fatal mistake of stopping for a little while to give his weary tribesmen a chance for a brief rest.

Here in the Bear Paw mountains, where the memorial to him is to be erected, General Miles attacked on September 30, 1877. For five days Joseph and his little band, greatly outnumbered, withstood the attack of Miles' soldiers. Finally artillery was brought to bear upon their defenses and on October 4 Chief Joseph gave up the contest. In the meantime General Howard who had pursued the fleeing Indians across three states arrived at the battleground. One of his (Howard's) officers, Col. C. E. S. Wood, has described the dramatic scene of Joseph's surrender as follows:

"It was nearly sunset when Joseph came to deliver himself up. He rode from his camp in the little hollow. His hands were clasped over the pommel of his saddle and his rifle lay across his knees; his head was bowed down. Pressing around him walked five of his warriors; their faces were upturned and earnest as they murmured to him; but he looked neither to the right nor to the left, yet seemed to listen intently. So the little group came slowly up the hill to where General Howard, with an aide-de-camp, and General Miles waited to receive the surrender. As he neared them, Joseph sat erect in the saddle, then gracefully and with dignity swung himself down from his horse, and with an impulsive gesture threw his arm to its full length and offered his rifle to General Howard. The latter motioned him toward General Miles, who received the token of submission.

At this surrender scene, too, Chief Joseph made the speech which deserves a place with Chief Logan's famous oration. These were his words: "I am tired of fighting. Our chiefs are killed. Looking glass is dead. Too-hul-hul-suit (the medicine man or "dreamer" who had urged war upon Joseph) is dead. The old men are all dead. It is the young men now who say "yes" and "no" (vote in the council). He who led the young men (Ollicut, Joseph's brother) is dead. It is cold and we have no blankets. The little children are freezing to death. My people—some of them—have run away to the hills and have no blankets, no food. No one knows where they are—perhaps freezing to death. I want to have time to look for my children and to see how many of them I can find; maybe I shall find them among the dead. Hear me, my chiefs, my heart is sick and sad. From where the sun now stands I fight no more against the white man."

As he spoke those last words, the old chief raised his hand to the sky and with this simple gesture the career of the Indian Napoleon ended. For he kept his promise; he never fought again.

After the surrender, General Miles promised Joseph that he and his people should be returned to Idaho. As for the way in which the United States kept that promise—it repudiated it entirely! The captives were sent to Fort Leavenworth and kept there during the winter. The next summer they were put on a reservation in Indian Territory. It was an unhealthy place for anyone and for these Indians, accustomed to the high altitude of their mountain home, the hot malarious climate of the low lands was deadly. They died by the score. Chief Joseph protested and protested in vain, but the federal authorities turned a deaf ear to his pleas to be allowed to return to his old home before his people were exterminated.

To the everlasting credit of the soldier who had conquered him, it must be said that General Miles used his powerful influence to make the government keep faith. Finally in 1885 the Nez Perces were allowed to return to the Northwest, but not to the spot they loved most—the Wallowa valley. They were sent to the Colville reservation in Washington and there they lived for the next 20 years with Chief Joseph taking the lead in guiding his people in the white man's road. There on September 21, 1904, the old chief "nodding by the fire, dreaming perhaps of days of daring and deeds of valor, by which, savage though he was, he had written his name on the pages of history, slipped quietly to the ground and fell into his eternal sleep."

FOR INFLAMED BREATHING TUBES

Try Dr. Blosser's Medical Cigarettes in the Next Attack.

Nasal catarrh is not only disagreeable and offensive, but it will lead to serious trouble.

That inflamed condition of the mucous membranes of the air passages of the head, nose and throat may spread to the point where it is incurable and a danger to life.

Dr. Blosser's Cigarettes are composed of medicinal herbs, flowers and berries. The warm smoke vapor is inhaled into the affected air passages and will go where sprays, douches and salves cannot reach. They contain no tobacco or cubebs, and being harmless, are used by children, as well as adults.

If you suffer from any catarrhal trouble, plain nasal catarrh, catarrhal deafness, hay fever, asthma, bronchial irritations, or are subject to frequent colds, get from any druggist a convenient pocket-size package of Dr. Blosser's Cigarettes, and prove for yourself their pleasant, beneficial effects.

FEELING LOTS BETTER NOW

Writes Ethel May Snider Who Used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Hartford City, Ind.—Doing housework and taking care of a sick woman proved to be too much for Ethel May Snider, R. R. 1 of Hartford City, until she started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Overwork had so undermined her health that she had to give up all outside work, and when she saw this medicine advertised in the "Star" and other papers, she went to druggist and got a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. She took it regularly, was greatly benefited and now feels very much better.

Ethel May Snider's experience is similar to that of thousands of other women in all walks of life, who have sent testimonials to the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Company of Lynn, Mass.

Among those who praise the Compound are young girls who have been enabled to attend school regularly—working girls who have gained strength and endurance so necessary to them, housewives and mothers who have found that the tonic effect of the Compound has enabled them to perform their daily tasks more easily.

JAMES MICHEL RETIRES

It is reported in mining circles that James Michel, who for three years worked as a common mucker in a small Gold Mine near Idaho Springs, Colorado, has retired with a huge fortune.

Michel came to Colorado ten years ago and like hundreds of prospectors found his funds insufficient to purchase a claim, so was finally forced to accept a job as a common mucker.

There was a time when the mine did not have sufficient funds to meet their payroll, and it was at this period that Michel used his German ingenuity, accepting a small interest for his labor. However, within a few months all liabilities were paid from the sale of ore and claims, and Michel's little old investment of $162.25 grew and grew and when he retired his income was in excess of $1,000.00 per month.

Write to 410 Railroad Building, Denver, Desk 12, and they will send you information of opportunities and experiences that have eclipsed that of Michel's. (No obligation.)

Break Cake on Bride's Head

It was the custom of the Romans, 2,000 years ago, to break the wedding cake over the head of the bride as she entered her new home. The breaking of the cake was part of a solemn ceremony, and was said to be peculiarly impressive. A similar custom prevails in some sections of Scotland, where a hannock is broken above the head of the young wife as she, for the first time, enters her new home.

By HONORÉ WILLISIE

Author of "Still Jim" and "The Heart of the Desert."

The heroine, Lydia, is a wonderful girl character developing in the sort of love story American men like, for it pictures the type of girl real men are always keen about. Through a seemingly hopeless tangle of difficult surroundings, she blazes her own way to splendid womanhood. Her honesty, ambition and affectionate loyalty never waver, and are responsible for the optimism and romance which the story fairly radiates.

METHODIST W. M. S. WILL STUDY MOSLEMS

The women of the Missionary Society of the Methodist church have begun the study of a new book entitled "The Moslem Faces the Future."

The subject of the Moslem World demands a more thorough knowledge than most other mission fields. The Moslems and Christians have many things in common.

In order to do justice to this great faith, the various aspects, both good as well as harmful must be studied. The aim of the course is not to arouse hostility toward Islam, but friendship for Moslems. There is need of a wider knowledge of the Moslem world in our churches. America has a just reputation for provincialism. As a Nation they are little concerned with the rest of the world except as a market for products or a source of raw materials. It rests with Christians, whose religion professes to be world wide in its outlook and sympathies, to set a better example. Christianity has suffered much at the hands of Moslem, and has, at times, retaliated in an unworthy way. Recently great cruelties have been perpetrated by Moslems, so that some have hardened their hearts against them. No other religion is so difficult to study in a detached frame of mind. The Moslem faces the future. His past has been shaped by a remarkable culture which, like that of ancient Judaism, has been a social and political as well as a religious system. In order to appreciate the situation of our Moslem brothers and sisters—240,000,000 of the world's population, scattered in a great field from Morocco to the East Indies and extending far to north and south—we must ask ourselves some questions.

1. What is this religion like that has cut such a swath in history?
 2. How did Islam happen to spread, and what are its circumstances today?
 3. Why does the future cause such anxiety today to the Moslem and to those who are interested in his welfare?
 4. How are Moslems themselves reacting to the changes that seem inevitable?
 5. What sort of program does this create for the Christian Church? What shall be our specific objectives in such a situation?
 6. In what sense, if any, has the Christian Church of America a mandate for the Moslem world?
- These questions form a basis for the study which we have undertaken and we invite all women of the town who are interested in this world problem to meet with us each Monday afternoon at two o'clock.

The wolves were silent now. Carvel knew what that meant, and he was tensely alert. In the stillness the click of the safety on his rifle sounded with metallic sharpness. For many minutes they heard nothing but the crack of the fire. Suddenly Baree's muscles seemed to snap. He sprang back, and faced the quarter behind Carvel, his head level with his shoulders, his inch-long fangs gleaming as he snarled into the black caverns of the forest beyond the rim of firelight. Carvel had turned like a shot. It was almost frightening—what he saw. A pair of eyes burning with greenish fire, and then another pair, and after that so many of them that he could not have counted them. He gave a sudden gasp. They were like cat-eyes, only much larger. Some of them, catching the firelight fully, were red as coals, others flashed blue and green—living things without bodies. With a swift glance he took in the black circle of the forest. They were out there, too; they were on all sides of them, but where he had seen them first they were thickest. In these first few seconds he had forgotten Baree, awed almost to stupefaction by that monstrous cordon of death that hemmed them in. There were fifty—perhaps a hundred wolves out there, afraid of nothing in all this savage world but fire. They had come up without the sound of a padded foot or a broken twig. If it had been later, and they had been asleep, and the fire out—

He shuddered, and for a moment the thought got the better of his nerves. He had not intended to shoot except from necessity, but all at once his rifle came to his shoulder and he sent a stream of fire out where the eyes were thickest. Baree knew what the shots meant, and filled with the mad desire to get at the throat of one of his enemies he dashed in their direction. Carvel gave a startled yell as he went. He saw the flash of Baree's body, saw it swallowed up in the gloom, and in that same instant heard the deadly clash of fangs and the impact of bodies. A wild thrill shot through him. The dog had charged alone—and the wolves had waited. There could be but one end. His four-footed comrade had gone straight into the jaws of death!

He could hear the ravening snap of those jaws out in the darkness. It was sickening. His hand went to the Colt .45 at his belt, and he thrust his empty rifle butt downward into the snow. With the big automatic before his eyes he plunged out into the darkness, and from his lips there issued a wild yelling that could have been heard a mile away. With the yelling a steady stream of fire spat from the Colt into the mass of fighting beasts. There were eight shots in the automatic, and not until the plunger clicked with metallic emptiness did Carvel cease his yelling and retreat into the firelight. He listened, breathing deeply. He no longer saw eyes in the darkness, nor did he hear the movement of bodies. The suddenness and ferocity of his attack had driven back the wolf-horde. But the dog! He caught his breath, and strained his eyes. A shadow was dragging itself into the circle of light. It was Baree. Carvel ran to him, put his arms under his shoulders, and brought him to the fire.

For a long time after that there was a questioning light in Carvel's eyes. He reloaded his guns, put fresh fuel on the fire, and from his pack dug out strips of cloth with which he bandaged three or four of the deepest cuts in Baree's legs. And a dozen times he asked, in a wondering sort of way, "Now what the deuce made you do that, old chap? What have you got against the wolves?"

All that night he did not sleep, but watched.

Their experience with the wolves broke down the last bit of uncertainty that might have existed between the man and the dog. For days after that, as they traveled slowly north and west, Carvel nursed Baree as he might have cared for a sick child. Because of the dog's hurts, he made only a few miles a day. Baree understood, and in him there grew stronger and stronger a great love for the man whose hands were as gentle as the Willow's and whose voice warmed him with the thrill of an immeasurable comradeship. He no longer feared him or had a suspicion of him.

It was the wanderer's intention to swing over into the country of the Great Slave, a good eight hundred miles to the north and west, before the mush-snows came. From there, when the waters opened in springtime, he planned to travel by canoe westward to the Mackenzie and ultimately to the mountains of British Columbia. These plans were changed in February. They were caught in a great storm in the Wholdala Lake country, and when their fortunes looked darkest Carvel stumbled on a cabin in the heart of a deep spruce forest, and in this cabin there was a dead man. He had been dead for many days, and was frozen stiff. Carvel chopped a hole in the earth and buried him.

The cabin was a treasure trove to Carvel and Baree, and especially to the man. It evidently possessed no other owner than the one who had died; it was comfortable and stocked with provisions; and more than that, its owner had made a splendid catch of fur before the frost bit his lungs, and he died. Carvel went over them carefully and joyously. They were worth a thousand dollars.

At dawn the birds and flowers and blue skies had come back, and with them the Willow must surely have returned, and she was waiting for him now, just over there beyond the rim of green forest. Something greater than mere curiosity began to take possession of Carvel. A whimsical humor became a deeper thought, an unreasoning anticipation that was accompanied a certain thrill of subdued excitement. By the time they reached the beaver-pond the mystery of the strange adventure had a firm hold on them.

From Beaver-tooth's colony Baree led him to the creek along which kayoo, the black bear, had fished, thence straight to the Gray Loo. It was early afternoon of a wonderful day. It was so still that the singing waters of spring, singing in a mad rills and streamlets, filled forests with a droning music. In warm sun the crimson bakneeshed like blood. In the open spaces air was scented with the perfume of Blue Flowers. In the trees bushes mated birds were building their nests. After the long sleep of winter Nature was at work in all her glory. It was Unekepesim, the Matting in the Home Building Moon—and he was going home. Not to mate—but to Nepeese. He knew that there was now, perhaps at the edge of the chasm where he had left her last. They would be playing there again soon, as they had yesterday, and the day before, the day before that, and in his he barked up into Carvel's face, urged him to greater speed. Then y came to the clearing, and once more Baree stood like a rock. Carvel saw the charred ruins of the burned cabin, and a moment later the two graves under the tall spruce. He began to understand as his eyes returned slowly to the waiting, listening dog. A great swelling rose in his throat, and after a moment or two he said softly and with an effort, "Boy, I guess you're home."

pool—and of Nepeese. In his sleep he saw visions of things. He heard again the low, sweet voice of the Willow, felt the touch of her hand, was at play with her once more in the dark shades of the forest—and Carvel would sit and watch him as he dreamed, trying to read the meaning of what he saw and heard.

In April Carvel shouldered his furs up to the Hudson's Bay company's post at Lac la Biche, which was still farther north. Baree accompanied him halfway, and then—at sundown Carvel returned to the cabin and found him there. He was so overjoyed that he caught the dog's head in his arms and hugged it. They lived in the cabin until May. The buds were swelling then, and the smell of growing things had begun to rise up out of the earth.

Then Carvel found the first of the early Blue Flowers.

That night he packed up. "It's time to travel," he announced to Baree. "And I've sort of changed my mind. We're going back—there." And he pointed south.

Chapter XVI

A strange humor possessed Carvel as he began the southward journey. He did not believe in omens, good or bad. Superstition had played a small part in his life, but he possessed both curiosity and a love for adventure, and his years of lonely wandering had developed in him a wonderfully clear mental vision of things, which in other words might be called singularly active imagination. He knew that some irresistible force was drawing Baree back into the south—that it was pulling him not only along a given line of the compass, but to an exact point in that line. For no reason in particular the situation began to interest him more and more, and as his time was valueless, and he had no fixed destination in view, he began to experiment. For the first two days he marked the dog's course by compass. It was due southeast. On the third morning Carvel purposely struck a course straight west. He noted quickly the change in Baree—his restlessness at first, and after that the dejected manner in which he followed at his heels. Toward noon Carvel swung sharply to the south and east again, and almost Immediately Baree regained his old eagerness, and ran ahead of his master.

After this, for many days, Carvel followed the trail of the dog. "Mebby I'm an idiot, old chap," he apologized one evening. "But it's a bit of fun, after all—I've got to hit the line of rail before I can get over to the mountains, so what's the difference? I'm game—so long as you don't take me back to that chap at Lac Bain. Now—what the devil! Are you hitting for his trap-line to get even? If that's the case—"

He blew out a cloud of smoke from his pipe as he eyed Baree, and Baree, with his head between his forepaws, eyed him back.

A week later Baree answered Carvel's question by swinging westward to give a wide berth to Post Lac Bain. It was mid-afternoon when they crossed the trail along which Bush McTaggart's traps and deadfalls had been set. Baree did not even pause. He headed due south, traveling so fast that at times he was lost to Carvel's sight. A suppressed but intense excitement possessed him, and he whined whenever Carvel stopped to rest—always with his nose sniffing the wind out of the south. Springtime, the flowers, the earth turning green, the singing of birds, and the sweet breaths in the air were bringing him back to that great Yesterday when he had belonged to Nepeese. In his unreasoning mind there existed no longer a winter. The long months of cold and hunger were gone; in the new visions that filled his brain they were forgotten. The birds and flowers and blue skies had come back, and with them the Willow must surely have returned, and she was waiting for him now, just over there beyond the rim of green forest.

Something greater than mere curiosity began to take possession of Carvel. A whimsical humor became a deeper thought, an unreasoning anticipation that was accompanied a certain thrill of subdued excitement. By the time they reached the beaver-pond the mystery of the strange adventure had a firm hold on them.

From Beaver-tooth's colony Baree led him to the creek along which kayoo, the black bear, had fished, thence straight to the Gray Loo. It was early afternoon of a wonderful day. It was so still that the singing waters of spring, singing in a mad rills and streamlets, filled forests with a droning music. In warm sun the crimson bakneeshed like blood. He began to understand as his eyes returned slowly to the waiting, listening dog. A great swelling rose in his throat, and after a moment or two he said softly and with an effort, "Boy, I guess you're home."

Baree did not hear. With his head up and his nose tilted to the blue sky he was sniffing the air. What was it that came to him with the perfumes of the forests and the green meadow? Why was it that he trembled now as he stood there? What was there in the air? Carvel asked himself, and his questing eyes tried to answer the questions. Nothing. There was death—death and desertion, that was all. And then, all at once, there came from Baree a strange cry—almost a human cry—and he was gone like the wind.

Carvel had thrown off his pack. He dropped his rifle beside it now, and followed Baree. He ran swiftly, straight across the open, into the dwarf balsams, and into a grass-grown path that had once been worn by the travel of feet. He ran until he was panting for breath, and then stopped and listened. He could hear nothing of Baree. But that old worn trail led on under the forest trees, and he followed it.

Old Monarchical Idea

The name "Divine Right of King" is given to a doctrine that was promulgated in England in the Seventeenth century. It asserted that kings held their authority by divine appointment and were earthly representatives of the Deity. This principle relieved the sovereign of all responsibility toward his subjects, and gave him absolute claim to their obedience. The chief defenders of this dogma were Salmasius, Hobbes and Sir Robert Filmer; while Milton, Algernon Sydney and Harrington were its uncompromising opponents. The controversy died a natural death on the accession of the House of Hanover. In the Bill of Rights (1689) the right of the people to depose the sovereign, to alter the order of succession, and to confer the sovereignty on whomsoever they may think proper is distinctly set forth.—Kansas City Star.

Master Sculptor

Myron, the celebrated Greek sculptor, who lived in the Fifth century, B. C., was noted for the action of his statues, mainly of athletes. He showed them as actually engaged in contest rather than merely posing.

TOPCOATS FOR SCHOOL FROCKS OF JERSEY

IN THE realm of Junior fashions, coats tell a very different story from frocks for the coming months. In accordance with latest dictates the wraps young girls wear are quite conservative and sedate in appearance, while dresses are quite fussed up with all sorts of crafty handwork and gay trimmings.

If the little girl in the picture would let us catch a glimpse of the frock she is wearing, it would, very likely, be much be-trimmed and elaborated with ways and byways of business life. All this, because fashion insists that whether it be in study hour, playtime or any practical occasion, we must dress in gay woolsens.

Just now there is a furore for wool Jersey and not without reason, for of all materials none gives better service or makes up more satisfactorily. So Jersey cloth it is, according to the decision of the mode, and that in colors of irresistible attractiveness. Chiefest among the popular colorings for cunning detail, perhaps have a clever narrow belt with a cunning buckle 'n' everything—but mark the simplicity and styling of the coat. Of the superior quality kind is this coat. The material is of the best, being a handsome bolivia cloth. It may be navy, wine, French blue, brown or jungle green, for each is fashionable for fall and winter. One outstanding feature is the flare hemline, achieved by godets inset in a tailored way. Other interesting style highlights are its fur collar, broad turnback cuffs and single button fastening.

It is a noteworthy fact that the new cloakings are unusually good-looking practical worsted frocks are reds of every degree, especially channel red and the deep wine tones. Equally fascinating are the new greens, placing emphasis on jungle green, and as to blues, navy competes with truly lovely French blues, also royal. Cinnamon color Jersey is as smart as smart can be, but no more so than are the handsome nasturtium colors which are now so much in evidence. Which all goes to prove that there will be no lack of color when it comes to dresses planned for practical every-day wear.

One of the endearing qualities of wool Jersey is that in its suppleness and of finest texture. Favored weaves stress, first and foremost, chinchilla cloth, emphasizing cinnamon color, French blue, navy, various reds and many shades of green, notably jungle green. There are also included tweeds of every coloring.

Very interesting linings of suede-finished fabrics complement coats of chinchilla. Thus warmth and attractiveness is combined in the school-girl's coat. One does not have to draw on imagination to sense the charm of a navy blue chinchilla lined with red. Splashes of color will brighten school room and campus throughout the coming months, also the high-it yields most gracefully to any handling. Just now everything that can be is being shirred. As to wool Jersey it puts forth its best appearance under this treatment. For proof of its eminently satisfactory adaptability to the shirring process, study this picture of a typical autumn 1926 school-girl frock. See how the necessary skirt fullness is massed so cleverly to the front by means of much shirring. Then, too, see the shirred effect across the front shoulder seams. This model is developed in wine color with a beige crepe collar and tie.

Your Poor, Dear Feet

Bettina hobbled into the house, took off her buckled pumps and climbed the stairs to her own room in her stocking feet. Dropping into a chair, she carefully fitted a shoe-tree into each pump, and then took one of her feet between her hands and rocked to and fro in misery.

"My feet, my poor, dear feet," she wailed. "They're all hot and aching, and there is a big callous place on each sole, and I think the arches must be broken down or something. Each pair of new shoes I get seems to make them hurt worse, and even old shoes hit them in the wrong place, it seems to me."

"Well, dear, you girls will be stylishly shod," said her mother, going for a bowl of warm water and advising Bettina to put her feet into it for ten or fifteen minutes. "Pretty as these new short vamp, strap-topped pumps and slippers are, it stands to reason that they do not fit all types of feet, and most of you are forcing your feet into shoes that do not fit and do not support the foot where it needs supporting."

"I think that you should, first of all, hunt until you find a shoe that is both attractive and suits your foot. Various firms make a specialty of correct-fitting, yet decorative foot-gear, and you can find the right shoes if you look hard enough. But you must also take daily care of your feet—just as thorough care as you do of your complexion. When you come into the house, you should promptly take off your street pumps, take off the warm stockings that are perhaps sticking to your feet with perspiration, and bathe your feet in warm water containing a soothing pure soap. Then dry them gently, and shake a little foot powder over them before putting on fresh stockings and donning your house slippers."

"If you will rub a little fine sandpaper over the toughened or callous places on your feet, you will fit makes them soft and velvety. File the nails cut short so that they do not dig into adjoining toes. A foot powder sprinkled on the feet before putting on street shoes and slippers will tend to keep them pliable. Especially sprinkle it on the toes, where the tender skin is hot and red."

"But none of these bits of foot relief will help much unless you get shoes that fit your feet."

The Fireside Supper

"My friends the Merrivales are coming out this week, and I want them to see your house. Do have one of your fireside suppers, can't you?"

The speaker was the neighbor of a woman who had made a tradition of her fireside suppers and had become famous for them. Every one was eager for an invitation to one of these gay, unconventional parties, so different from the usual formally set dinner table; and when visitors to the community were expected, one of the choicest ways of entertaining them was to beg this particular hostess for a fireside supper.

It was all very simple. Sausages were broiled over the coals, toast was made by the guests themselves, a great pot of coffee was made on the old-fashioned iron trivet, and apples and chestnuts were roasted. The party sat around the fire, in deep chairs, divans, and on the floor, and the talk ranged from merry banter to thoughtful discussion of topics of the day. Its informality was its charm. But best of all was the originating of an individual ual form of entertainment. It had flavor—and the story of it spread abroad.

Why do not more women establish some special event and make it a tradition? Outdoor Sunday morning breakfasts, during spring and summer days, might take the place of fireside suppers. Saturday afternoon tea hours might be made a regular thing, or regular Saturday night musicales, if one has musical friends—anything that one can set apart and have recognized by one's friends as an established occasion.

"I hate to tie myself down to a regular day or evening every week," protests a matron of many interests. Yet she belongs to a reading class which meets every Wednesday, and her laundress arrives regularly every Monday morning. In other words, a more or less regular day for entertaining is only another way of scheduling life and making it run more evenly.

TO COTTON FARMERS

Much has been said about the difference in weights on cotton put up in Round Bale as compared with the usual square bale method

The point is: Square Bale bagging weighs 20 pounds, whereas Round Bale bagging weighs 5 pounds, which makes 15 pounds more weight to add to Square Bale,—commonly called tare difference.

The following table explains this difference in figures:

Difference in weight on Bagging	Square Bale Price	Money Difference	To equalize, Difference reduced to Points	Round Bale Price Should Be
15 Lbs.	10c	$1.50	30	10.30
15 Lbs.	10½c	$1.58	31½	10.32
15 Lbs.	11c	$1.65	33	11.33
15 Lbs.	11½c	$1.73	34½	11.35
15 Lbs.	12c	$1.80	36	12.36
15 Lbs.	12½c	$1.88	37½	12.38

15 Lbs.	17c	$2.55	51	17.51

We have the Square Bale press, as well as the Round Bale, and earnestly wish you to have your choice of the method which seems to you most advisable.

Our desire is to gin your cotton and let you name the method. Service as well as to please is our motto.

THE METHODIST CHURCH

All the services as usual next Sunday.

Let everyone remember that the Sunday School contest with Roby is still on. We made a good showing last Sunday, but it might have been a good deal better; 130 present with a church enrollment of about 230 looks just like somebody was not "at tending upon the Ordinances of the Church." Help to make our attendance reach 200 next Sunday.

The subject at the morning service is to be "The Greatest Need of the Hedley Methodist Church." I am planning to say some things, whether you are there or not. Be glad for you to come.

Sunday night I want to talk about some of the men whom Jesus selected as Disciples.

We would be glad to have all the membership of the church present next Sunday morning, and night too. All visitors and strangers are cordially welcome. J. W. Hawkins, Pastor.

If you want a real Wagon you will find it at Hedley Hardware. Quality and price are right. A careful inspection will convince you that they are real wagons.

CHILDRESS BEATS HEDLEY

Hedley and Childress played football at Childress last Friday. Hedley had matched the game against Childress High's second team. However, they started seven of the second team and four of the first. Hedley scored two touchdowns in eight minutes of play. Then Childress ran out their first team in a body. Our boys held them to two touchdowns in the first half, but after that the Childress fellows "went hog wild" and "mopped up," the final score standing somewhere around 49 to 12.

MEADOR-DICKSON

Rev. Amos R. Meador and Miss Mayola Dickson were quietly married at six o'clock Tuesday afternoon in the Nazarene parsonage at Wellington. Rev. H. C. Cagle, pastor, performed the ceremony.

Rev. Meador is pastor of the Nazarene church here, and has won the confidence and respect of his church and the people of the town and community. He is a man of high ideals and strong character, a noble Christian gentleman of very pleasing personality, and worthy the love and esteem of the young lady who has become his bride.

Mrs. Meador is the charming young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Dickson. She is a real Christian young lady and numbers her friends by her acquaintances. She is an active church worker and worthy to be the wife of the minister whom she has chosen for her husband.

They slipped quietly away, only the sister of the bride, Miss Mavis Dickson, going with them, and surprised all their friends.

Rev. and Mrs. Meador have accepted a work on the South Plains for another year, and will leave Hedley Monday to attend the Assembly which will be held at Lubbock. The church here greatly regret to lose the pastor they love so much, and it will be hard to get a man who can fill his place.

We wish for Rev. and Mrs. Meador a life of usefulness and service to God. —Contributed.
