W. G. SMITH FOUND DEAD AT BORGER

Hedley relatives were shocked and grieved Tuesday when a message came with the news that W. C. Smith had been found dead in his tent at Borger, where he was living temporarily. His son in law, Homer Newton, his brother in law, S. C. Richerson, Ray Moreman and Fred Buntin took the hearse over there and brought his body back to Hedley. Further than that he had been gassed they could learn nothing concerning his death.

Funeral services were held at the Church of Christ at 10 a. m. Wednesday, conducted by R. R. Price of Clarendon. His body was laid to rest in Rowe cemetery, where two of his children are sleeping.

Surviving him are his widow, four daughters, Mrs. Homer Newton of Hedley, Mrs. George Threadgill of Oklahoma City, Velma and Pearl Smith of Burk Burnett, and two sons, Presley and Lonnie Smith of Burk Burnett. All these were present at the funeral, as were Mrs. Presley Smith and Mr. Threadgill.

Mr. Smith has lived in this section for 35 years, much of that time, until recently, having been spent in Hedley and Clarendon. He will be remembered by many friends as a modest, kindly and clean minded gentleman. They will learn of his death with deep regret, and join us in sympathy to the bereaved family.

Getting Into Who's Who

WHO are the most notable men and women in America? What have they done to become "notable"? How many of these notables are there? From what environments did they spring, and where do they live now?

"Who's Who in America" answers these questions for you. Volume 14, 1926-1927, is just off the press and ready again to tell the world in 2,271 pages the important facts about 26,913 men, women and—yes, children, who, in the estimation of those who compile this monumental work, are "the best known in all lines of useful and reputable achievement."

"Who's Who" was established away back in 1899 by Albert Nelson Marquis, then in the publishing and advertising business. His first volume, containing 8,602 sketches, was evidently a successful venture, for every other year since 1899 there has appeared a new edition each containing more material than its predecessor.

According to the preface, Who's Who "aims to tell just the things every intelligent person wants to know about those who are most conspicuous in every reputable walk of life—birthplace, age, parentage, education, college or university degrees, occupation, position, achievements, politics, societies, clubs, marriages, etc.—in fact the chief feature of each career, without eulogy or criticism."

Suppose we look up somebody. Let's take Henry Ford. Here's what we find:

FORD, Henry, automobile mfr.; b. Greenfield, Mich., July 20, 1863; s. William and Mary (Litogot) F.; ed. dist. sch.; Greenfield, Mich.; Clara J. Bryant, of Greenfield, Apr. 11, 1888. Learned machinist's trade; in Detroit since 1887; was chief engr. Edison Illuminating Co., organizer, 1891, and pres. Ford Motor Co. (largest mfr. of automobiles in the world, employing over 250,000 persons; turns out about 7,500 automobiles a day). Announced Jan. 1914 plan of profit-sharing involving distribution of ten to thirty millions of dollars annually to employees. Member Society Automotive Engineers, Detroit Board of Commerce, Clubs, Detroit Bankers' Detroit Athletic, Fellowship, Country, Bloomfield Hills Country, Detroit Golf, Detroit Boat, Detroit Yacht, Wolverine Auto, Automobile of America, Chartered ship, and at two expense conducted party to Europe, leaving New York, Dec. 4, 1914, with object of organizing a conf. of peace advocates to influence belligerent govts. to end war; returned home after reaching Christiania, Norway, but members of the party proceeded to Stockholm, Sweden, and Copenhagen, Denmark, and through Germany to The Hague, Main-taining corps of social workers to look after welfare of employees and families; also legal and medical dept. free of charge; school for teaching English lang.; built Henry Ford Hosp. at cost of $1,000,000. App'd. by Pres. Wilson mem. Wage Empire Bd., July 12, 1918; Dem. candidate for U. S. Senate against Truman H. Newberry, 1918. Home: Dearborn, Mich.

How does one get into Who's Who? What are the qualifications for admittance? Do you ask to be included or do you wait to be asked?

By all means wait to be asked. The publishers work on the theory that if you are somebody your name will somehow drift into their attention. Then they look into your claim to fame, and if it appears that you merit some mention in the big red book, you receive a letter requesting you to hand over certain information about yourself. This you are told to fill in on a blank which accompanies the letter. You do this, and presto! you're a notable.

On the basis of an estimated population of 114,000,000 for the United States in 1926 it is calculated that only one person out of every 4,240 is able to break into Who's Who. And breaking in, the publisher emphasizes, is accomplished solely by doing something worthwhile. It is further emphasized that no one can pay money to get his name into Who's Who, and that the mere accumulation of wealth is not regarded as an achievement of sufficient importance to call for mention in this bulky volume. Says a sentence in bold face type on page 21: "Not a single sketch in Who's Who in America has been paid for—and none can be paid for."

Under the heading "Qualifications for Admission to Who's Who in America," we find the following: "The standards of admission . . . divide the eligibles into two classes: (1) those who are selected on account of special prominence in credible lines of effort, making them the subjects of extensive interest, inquiry or discussion in this country; and (2) those who are arbitrarily included on account of official position—civil, military, naval, religious, or educational."

"The first of these two classes comprises persons who have accomplished some conspicuous achievement—something out of the ordinary, so to speak—something which distinguishes them from the vast majority of their contemporaries. This class is confined to Americans, or those who are so prominently identified with American affairs as to be the subjects of wide inquiry or discussion in the United States. Thus a few foreign actors, singers, lecturers and others are included, who, by frequent visits, or in some other way, have become the subjects of common American interest."

"The arbitrary class embraces without regard to notability or prominence in any other respect, the following: All members of congress; members of the cabinet; all United States judges; federal department heads; all governors of states, territories and island possessions of the United States; all judges of state and territorial courts of highest appellate jurisdiction; all American ambassadors, and all ambassadors and ministers accredited to this country; all American consuls at important places in foreign countries; all living American authors of books possessing more than ephemeral value; the attorneys general of the various states; all officers of the army above rank of colonel, and of the navy above the rank of captain; heads of all the larger universities and colleges; heads of the leading societies devoted to philanthropic, education and scientific aims; members of the National Academy of Sciences, the National Institute of Arts and Letters; bishops and chief ecclesiastics of all the larger religious denominations of the United States, and others who are in like manner chosen because of official relations and affiliations."

Leafing at random through the pages of Who's Who is an interesting and not at all unprofitable pastime. For here you can trace the life histories of men whose names have become household words—captains of industry, scientists, judges and lawyers, reformers, churchmen, educators, doctors, warriors, politicians, actors and even movie stars. In none of these classifications, however, are you likely to find all the names which may interest you.

One class of prominent Americans whose names are constantly in the headlines has almost no representation in Who's Who. This is the field of sport. If you're interested in the early life of

They're In—They're Not

Harold Lloyd. Jack Dempsey.

Wm. T. Tilden, Jr. Helen Wills.

Jack Dempsey, you'll look in vain for it in Who's Who. Pugilism evidently is regarded by the publisher as not in the line "of useful and reputable achievement."

Nor will you find anything about Babe Ruth, the king of swat, nor anything about such well-known national figures as Helen Wills, Willie Hoppe, billiard expert, and Bobby Jones, William T. Tilden, Jr., former amateur tennis champion, gets in, but he is listed as an author, not a tennis player. Edward Lasker, chess champion, also gets in.

If you care to take the time you'll find many interesting inclusions and exclusions. If you are a movie fan you'll probably wonder why certain stars have been included and certain others left out. Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks are mentioned, but Pola Negri and Ernest Torrence failed to make the grade. Mary Miles Minter, who hasn't appeared on the screen for several years, is given a place, while Babe Daniels is as yet nobody as far as Who's Who is concerned.

Jackie Coogan, twelve-year-old screen child, rates more than a hundred words of biography, and yet no room could be found for James Cruze, former movie actor who is now a successful director and responsible for that screen epic, "The Covered Wagon." Both the Talmadge sisters are given a place, but Marion Davies and Alice Joyce stay out. Charles Chaplin and Harold Lloyd are honored but Mack Sennett, the man who contributed to their fame, goes unsung.

Singing in opera is considered a reputable and useful occupation, and you will find a great many persons listed who follow this pursuit. Included is Marion Talley, the twenty-year-old Kansas-City girl, whose debut in New York last February created such a sensation.

Ballet dancing, however, is not so good. No mention is made of Pavlova, Isadore Duncan or Ruth St. Denis, all of whom are well known to American audiences.

Fielding Yost, athletic director at the University of Michigan, and George Huff of the University of Illinois are mentioned, while Knute Rockne, whose Notre Dame football teams have won respect throughout America, finds himself omitted. The usefulness and repute of ragtime is testified to in the appearance of such names as Paul Whiteman, George M. Cohan, Eddie Cantor and Irving Berlin. The more spectacular type of evangelism is represented by Billy Sunday and Aimee Semple McPherson.

They're In—They're Not

Aimee McPherson. Babe Ruth.

Marion Talley. Pola Negri.

Jackie Coogan. Knute Rockne.

Who were born on farms, investigation reveals. Small towns of less than 8,000 population furnished another 24 per cent, while large cities contributed 20 per cent. Suburbs of large cities furnished but 4 per cent.

In proportion to population, however, the large cities furnished twice as many notables as the average for the nation, the small cities two and three-tenths times as many, villages three times as many, and suburbs four times as many. Expressed in another way: in proportion to the population, the cities contributed nearly six times as many notables as did the farms, whereas the villages contributed nearly nine times as many, and suburbs nearly eleven times as many as the farms.

This is not taken as proof that early life on a farm was not conducive to future eminence. Numerous bits of information indicate that a large number of the older American notables spent part of their youth on farms and considered that these experiences had been helpful in their development. "Many, indeed, have spoken of themselves as having been reared on a farm when in fact they were born in a village or city and merely spent part of their formative period working on a farm, usually their summer months," says Prof. Stephen Visser in reviewing these figures for Who's Who.

Occupations of the fathers of the notables in Who's Who were found to be as follows: 35.2 per cent were business men; 34 per cent were professional men; about 29 per cent were farmers; 6 per cent were skilled or semi-skilled laborers, and only one-half of one per cent unskilled laborers.

Her Hair Fairly SPARKLES Now!

The woman who knows what to do after waving her hair doesn't fear the effect of hot irons. Nor of frequent washings. A few drops of Danderine—on comb or towel—and the hair is soft and lustrous, and behaves beautifully.

A bit of Danderine rubbed lightly into the scalp, is the one sure way to dissolve every particle of dandruff. But a few drops more make a dressing that is simply marvelous. A sheen that rivals brillianine, and no grease! Any permanent wave or water wave lasts much longer and looks much nicer when Danderine is used instead of water to "set" the wave.

Clean Kidneys By Drinking Lots of Water

Take Salts to Flush Kidneys if Bladder Bothers or Back Hurts

Eating too much rich food may produce kidney trouble in some form, says a well-known authority, because the acids created excite the kidneys. Then they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, begin drinking lots of good water and also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then set fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity; also to neutralize the acids in the system so that they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts can not injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus often avoiding serious kidney disorders.

Good Works

Alonzo Potter, president of the Big Brother movement, preached in New York a religion of good works as against a merely passive religion. "Why, my friends," he cried, "there is almost as much difference between being good and doing good as there is between being a man and doing a man."—Minneapolis News.

"Heading for the Harvest" is a beautiful picture painted by Mrs. Swafford, whose talent has for a long time been unquestioned. The theme to be found in the title of the picture is the motto of the Senior Class, "Heading for the Harvest." The following poem, entitled "At Dawning," aims at an interpretation of the beautiful painting.

At Dawning
 By Mrs. Davenport
 The clouds of the dawning, fold on fold,
 Are purple and tawny and edged with gold.
 Soft as the silence that follows a hymn
 Is the hush that lives while lights are dim
 But the phantom feet of the shadows glide
 From the poplar trees by the river side
 And the mocking bird his glad song trills
 As the day awakes in the far-off hills.
 Sudden, sweet like an angel's call
 This poet bird to one and all
 His message gives. The glad new day
 That is meant for work as well as play,
 In notes of silver and gold he sings
 Of dew on flowers, of many springs,
 Of summer days in wonder climes,
 And autumn days and harvest times!
 O, harvest fields! today they stand,
 The dawn is come and morn's at hand—
 Our dreams, our hopes thru all the days
 Are won—the parting of the ways
 Looms just ahead, but eager feet
 And hopeful hearts and courage meet
 To face the years a power yields.
 Comrades, we head for Harvest Fields!

"Come On, Lyd, Before You're Called In."

Amos said, "I'll be glad to do any-"
 The Seventh Grade gave a dialog placing before the students the facts of the World War. Miss Horne, Mrs. Moffitt and Miss Robyn were members of the committee who arranged the program.

The Senior Class went "to court" last Tuesday, but were sadly disappointed since the case they were to see was settled at 1:00 Monday night. Better luck next time. Mrs. R. E. Mann accompanied Mrs. Davenport and her class.

Hedley
 Hedley is a two side town,
 It has its ins and outs,
 Each side goes a different way
 If they can find two routes.
 Hedley is a two side town,
 It has its eyes and noses,
 The eyes will vote for anything,
 The others will oppose.

Hedley is a two side town,
 It has its warts and moles,
 Some lift the town with sewing thread,
 The others prize with poles.
 Hedley is a two side town,
 It has its square and round,
 Some boost and push to pull the hill,
 While others drag it down.
 —Alta Lois McCauley.

Hedley
 Hedley is a little old "small-town" town
 In the Panhandle of the state,
 It has its many ups and downs,
 But we all think it's great.
 There's never a thing that suits 'em all,
 There's always a balky few—
 We'll just sit and do nothing at all
 Before we'll do anything new.

But after all it's a great little place,
 We know in most all there's good,
 And Hedley can come marching up to the front
 If it only, only would.
 —Delbert Kinsey.

DR. W. B. CALDWELL AT THE AGE OF 83

"Purges" and "Physics" Bad for Old Folks

While Dr. W. B. Caldwell, of Monticello, Ill., a practicing physician for 47 years, knew that constipation was the curse of advancing age, he did not believe that a "purge" or "physic" every little while was necessary.

To him, it seemed cruel that so many constipated old people had to be kept constantly "stirred up" and half sick by taking cathartic pills, tablets, salts, calomel and nasty oils.

In Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin he discovered a laxative which helps to "regularize" the bowels of old folks. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin not only causes a gentle, easy bowel movement but each dose helps to strengthen the bowel muscles, shortly establishing natural "regularity." It never gripes, sickens, or upsets the system. Besides, it is absolutely harmless and pleasant to take.

If just fifty, buy a large 60-cent bottle at any store that sells medicine or write "Syrup Pepsin," Monticello, Illinois, for a FREE SAMPLE BOT. TLE and just see for yourself.

STORY FROM THE START

Lydia Dudley, with her baby sister, Patience, returns home from an afternoon of play. The home is an untidy home, the impoverished household of her father, Amos Dudley, in Lake City. Her father's friend and her own devoted admirer, John Levine, is discussing affairs in general. Land is getting more valuable every day. Amos thinks that it is time the Indians, who occupy a reservation twenty miles away, were moving on in order that the white men might have this land. John Levine, after talking things over, announces his intention of going into politics. The next day, Lydia, Patience and companion, Kent Moulton, playing by the lake, are accosted by an old squaw who lives on the reservation nearby. Lydia gives her food. Margery, the small daughter of Dave Marshall, the town's banker, joins them. They decide to go out on the water in a boat.

Margery hesitated. "Aw, come on!" urged Kent. "Don't be such a 'fraud cat. That's why us kids don't like you, you're such a silly, dressed-up doll."

The banker's daughter flushed. Though she loved the pretty clothes and though the sense of superiority to other children, carefully cultivated by her mother, was the very breath of her nostrils, she had never been quite so happy as this afternoon when grubbing on an equality with these three inferior children.

"I'm not afraid at all and I'm just as dirty as Lydia is. Go ahead with your boat."

They tethered Patience with Kent's cord to one of the willow trees and Margery paddled out several boat lengths from the shore and the great stone that served for anchor was dropped over. Kent took a clean dive overboard, swam ashore and disappeared along the willow path. Little Patience set up a wail.

"Baby tum too, Baby tum, too," she wept.

"I'll go stay with her till Kent comes," said Lydia, diving into the water as casually as if she were rising from a chair.

"I won't stay in this awful boat alone!" shrieked Margery.

Lydia swam steadily to the shore, then turned. Margery was standing up in the boat.

"Sit down! Sit down!" cried Lydia.

Margery, beside herself with fear, tossed her arms. "I won't stay in this old—"

There was a great splash and a choking cry as Margery's black braid disappeared beneath the water.

"And she can't swim," gasped Lydia. "Kent!" she screamed, and made a flying leap into the water. Her slender, childish arms seemed suddenly steel. Her thin little legs took a racing stroke like tiny propellers. Margery came up on the far side of the boat and uttered another choking cry before she went down again. Lydia dove, caught the long black braid and brought the frenzied little face to the surface. Margery immediately threw an arm around Lydia's neck and Lydia hit her in the face with a clenched small fist and all the strength she could muster.

"Let go, or I'll let you drown. Turn over on your back. There isn't a thing to be afraid of."

Margery, with a sob, obeyed and Lydia towed her the short distance to the boat. "There, catch hold," she said.

Both the children clung to the gunwale, Margery choking and sobbing. "I can't lift you into the boat," panted Lydia. "But quit your crying. You're safe. There's Kent."

Kent had heard the call and some note of need in it registered, after a moment, in his mind. He ran back and leaped into the water.

He clambered into the boat and reaching over pulled Margery bodily over the gunwale. The child, sick and hysterical, huddled into the bottom of the boat.

"Are you all right, Lyd?" he asked.

"Sure," replied Lydia, who was beginning to recover her breath.

It was the work of a minute to ground the boat. Then unheeding little Patience's lamentations, the two children looked at each other and at Margery.

"I'll run for her mother," said Kent.

"And scare her to death! She isn't hurt a bit," insisted Lydia. "Margery stop crying. You're all right. I tell you."

"I'll tell you," said Kent, "let's put her in Patience's carriage, and carry her home. The water she swallowed makes her awful sick at her stomach, I guess."

The fright over, the old spirit of adventure, with an added sense of heroism, animated Kent and Lydia. Margery was teased out of the boat and assisted into the perambulator, with her dripping white legs dangling helplessly over the end. Little Patience's tears were assuaged when she was placed in the doll buggy, with Margery's doll in her arms. Florence Dumbay was tied papoose fashion to Lydia's back. The bicycle was hidden in the cave and with Kent wheeling Margery and Lydia, Patience, the procession started wildly for home.

By the time they had turned into the home street, Margery was beginning to recover, but she was still shivering and inclined to sob. Other children followed them and it was quite an imposing group that turned in at the Marshall gate, just as Mrs. Marshall came to the door to bid a guest good-by.

The scene that followed was difficult for either Lydia or Kent to describe afterward. There was a hullabaloo that brought half the mothers of the neighborhood into the yard. The doctor was sent for. Margery was put to bed and Kent and Lydia were mentioned as murderers, low-down brats and coarse little brutes by Mrs. Marshall, who ended by threatening them with the police.

Old Lizzie appeared on the scene in time to take Lydia's part and Kent disappeared after Mrs. Marshall had told him that Margery's father would be around to see his father that evening.

"Is the child dead?" demanded old Lizzie, holding Patience on one arm while Lydia clung to the other.

"She was able to walk upstairs," said a neighbor. "It's just Mrs. Marshall's way, you know."

"I'll way her," snorted Lizzie. "Fine thanks to Lydia for saving the child. Come home with your old Liz, dearie, and get into the nice clean dress I've got for you."

Lydia told the story to Amos at supper-time. He was much disturbed.

"I've told you often and often, Lydia, never to endanger a child that can't swim. You and Kent should have had more sense."

The quick tears sprang to the child's eyes. She was still much shaken.

"Is this lesson enough for you, or must I forbid your playing in the water? I thought I could trust you absolutely."

"Stop your scolding her, Amos Dudley," exclaimed old Lizzie. "I won't have it. She's too nervous a child."

Amos saved a reply by a ring at the doorbell. Lizzie let Margery's father in. He was a short, red-faced man with black hair and eyes. He was too much excited now to stand on ceremony, and he followed Lizzie into the dining-room.

"This won't do, Dudley. These wild young ones of yours—"

"Wait a minute, Marshall," interrupted Amos, with a dignity that he had brought with him from New England. "Margery is all right, so we can go over this thing calmly. Sit down and listen to Lydia's story. Tell him, Lydia."

Lydia left her place and crowded up against her father's side. Old Lizzie was holding the baby.

"It was like this," Lydia began. "Baby and me were going to play by ourselves under the willows. Then Kent, he came and he played pirates with us. And then, right after we'd had our lunch, Margery she came along and Kent and I were mad—"

The child paused uncomfortably and rubbed her curly yellow head with her thin little hand in an embarrassed way.

"Why were you mad, Lydia?" In spite of himself, Marshall's voice was softening, as Amos had known it would. Lydia made a deep appeal somehow to the tenderness of men.

"Tell Mr. Marshall all you told me, Lydia," said Amos.

"Well—well, you see, it's like this. Margery's always so clean and she has lovely clothes and—and she she looks down on us other kids so we won't generally let her play with us—and she's an awful 'fraud cat and—and a tattletale. But when we got to playing Robinson Crusoe, and were digging the cave she helped and got terrible dirty, just like us, and then she wanted to be Friday's father, and then—well—now—I guess the rest of it was Kent's and my fault. We forgot what she couldn't swim and we forgot what a cry-baby she was. 'Cause you see, water's almost like land to Kent and me and we'd been swimmin' most all day, and Margery's the only kid around here that can't swim."

"Why can't she swim?" demanded Marshall. "How'd all the rest of you learn? Don't you think you were mean not to let her learn?"

Again Lydia's pellucid eyes widened. "Why her mother won't let her play with common kids like us! And us kids never learned. We've just played in the water ever since we was as big as baby."

David Marshall scowled and stirred uncomfortably. He did not look at Amos, who sat with his arm about Lydia, his thin face a lesser replica of the old engraving of Daniel Webster hanging on the wall above.

"Well, go on! How'd she come to fall overboard?"

"She and I was sitting in the boat, and baby, she was tied to a tree by a long string and she began to cry to come, too, and I jumped over to go quiet her. Kent he'd gone to get another boat. And Margery she jumped up and began to yell and wave her arms and fell overboard. Then I remembered she couldn't swim and I went back and got her and Kent came and pulled us in shore. It wasn't anything, but Margery's such a cry-baby, Lizzie, she's terrible uncomfortable."

Lydia's attention had returned to little Patience. "I'll take her up to bed," she said, "it won't take but a few minutes."

"I'll carry her," said Lizzie.

The baby opened her eyes. "No, no one cally but Lyd."

"Let daddy carry you," begged Amos.

Patience's little voice rose to a wail. "No one cally but Lyd."

She lifted the sleepy baby easily and Patience dropped her soft cheek against Lydia's and closed her eyes again. Lydia turned to Marshall. Her face was very serious.

"I know I was awful bad, Mr. Marshall, and maybe you feel as if you ought to lick me."

"Put your little sister to bed," said Marshall gravely. "And then we'll see." There was silence in the room for a moment after Lydia left it, then

"Come On, Lyd, Before You're Called In."

Amos said, "I'll be glad to do anything I can, Marshall."

"Neither of you'll lay a finger on Lydia," interrupted Lizzie. "If you want to lick anyone, go lick Elviry Marshall, the fool! Why, I knew her when she was my niece's hired girl and you, Dave Marshall, was selling cans of tomatoes over a counter. And she's bringing that young one up to be a silly little fool. Mark my words, she'll be the prey of the first fortune-hunter that comes along."

Neither Amos nor his caller spoke. In a few minutes Lydia's step sounded on the stairs. The hush of the sunset glow caught her hair, and the fine set of her head on her square little shoulders was never more pronounced than as she walked slowly toward Dave Marshall.

"I never had a licking," she said, "but I guess I deserve one and so you'd better do it and get it done, Mr. Marshall."

CHAPTER III

The Cottage

Marshall cleared his throat and reaching out, took Lydia by the arm and pulled her toward him. He could feel her muscles stiffen under his touch. The bright red color left her cheeks.

"I wouldn't think much of your father, my child," he said, huskily.

Bright Children Fail to Develop in Ability

Children who are mental giants at ten years old, are, as a rule, no better at tests of musical sensitiveness than quite ordinary children of their age. This is shown by experiments with a group of superior children, conducted by Dr. Leta S. Hollingworth of Columbia university.

Results of the experiments reported in the Journal of Educational Psychology, indicate that superior children as a group make somewhat better ratings in their judgments of time than other children of their age, but not in other musical tests.

The children were tested on pitch, tone, consonance and tonal memory. Since the brilliant children as a group were larger than unselected children of the same age, it had been expected that they might excel in such tests because of the advanced development of the anatomical structures involved in making musical judgments. This was not, however, found to be the case.—Science Service Bulletin.

New York's Gay Citizens

The other day an old friend of mine was talking with an ex-doughboy at a Broadway soda fountain. Two fair maidens were doing their time. Two couples of sodas at the time. The two bucks took little notice of them at the time. During the course of their conversation my friend asked the doughboy's telephone number, for he wanted to call him later in the day about a dinner engagement. That evening a mysterious female telephoned to the doughboy. He was curious, for she had a pleasant voice. She was evasive, but when he suggested a rendezvous she agreed. They met an hour later. She was one of the soda damsels.—New York Evening World.

Good Trick, Anyhow

Her eyelids quivered, and a tear trickled down and mingled with the beads of perspiration on her temple.—Fictorial Review.

"If he let me whip you, even if I wanted to."

Lydia took a quick look up into his face. Then she gave a little gasping sigh, her lips quivered and she leaned against his knee.

"Look here, Lydia," said Dave Marshall, "this is to be your punishment. I want you and Kent to teach Margery how to swim and how to get dirty, see? Let her play with you 'common kids,' will you?"

"Will her mother let her?" asked Lydia.

"Yes," answered Dave, grimly.

"All right," said Lydia, with a little sigh.

"I know it'll be a hard job," Marshall interpreted the sigh quickly; "that's where the punishment comes in."

"Lydia'll do it. I'll see to it," said Amos.

"You keep out, Dudley. This is between Lydia and me. How about it, Lydia?"

"If you'll boss her mother, I'll boss Margery and Kent," said Lydia, with a sudden laugh.

"It's a bargain," Marshall rose. "Good night, Dudley."

"Good night, Marshall."

Amos followed his caller to the door. As he did so Lydia heard Kent's whistle in the back yard. She joined him and the two withdrew to a bench behind the woodshed.

"I saw him through the window," said Kent, in a low voice. "What's he going to do to us? Dad's licked me, so that much is done."

Lydia told of their punishment.

"Darn it," groaned Kent, "I'd rather had another licking. I certainly do hate that girl."

"So do I," agreed Lydia. "Nothing to look forward to but worry now. O gee, Kent, I've got two pennies! One's Patience's. But let's go spend the other at Spence's!"

"Gum or all-day sucker?" asked Kent, who, in spite of the fact that he owned a second-hand bicycle, was not above sharing a penny.

"Gum lasts longer," suggested Lydia.

"What kinda gum, spruce or white or tutti-frutti?"

"You can choose."

"Spruce then. It makes the most juice. Come on, Lyd, before you're called in."

And thus ended the heroic day.

No one ever knew what Dave Marshall said to Elviry, his wife, but a day or so after, little Margery, in a fine white flannel bathing suit, appeared on the sand, about a quarter of a mile below the Willows.

Kent was a quitter! After the rescue he decided to eschew the society of girls forever and he struck a bargain with Lydia that she could have the use of his bicycle one day a week till snow came if she would undertake the disciplining of the banker's daughter alone. For such a bribe Lydia would have undertaken to teach Elviry Marshall, herself, to swim—and so the bargain was struck.

Lydia's method of teaching was one employed by most of the children of Lake City when a new child moved into the town. She forced Margery to float face downward in the water, again and again, while she counted ten. After one afternoon of this, the banker's daughter had forever lost her fear of the water and the rest was easy.

In spite of the relationship Dave Marshall had established between the two children, Margery and Lydia did not like each other. One Saturday afternoon, after banking hours, Marshall was seated on his front porch, with Elviry and Margery, when Lydia appeared. She stood on the steps in her bathing suit, her bare feet in a pair of ragged "sneakers." Her face and hands and ankles were dirty but her eyes and the pink of her cheeks were clear.

"Come on, Marg," said Lydia, "and Mr. Marshall, please, won't you come too and see how well she does it?"

"Run and get into your bathing suit, daughter," said Marshall. "Elviry, want to come?"

"No," snapped Elviry. "Lydia, how do you manage to get so dirty, when to my positive knowledge you're in the water an hour every day?"

Lydia blushed and tried to hide one ankle behind the other. "I think you're terrible impolite," she murmured.

Dave roared with laughter. "Right you are, Lydia! I guess I'll have to hitch up and drive us all over."

They drove to the Willows and Margery went through her paces, while her father watched and applauded from the shore. When they had finished and had run up and down to warm up and dry off and were driving home, Dave said:

"You'd better come in to supper with us, Lydia."

"No, thank you," answered the child. "Mr. Levine's coming to supper at our house and I have to cook it."

"Hum! What does John Levine do at your house, so much?"

"Oh, he's going into politics," answered Lydia, innocently, "and Dad advises him."

"Well, tell them you've done a fine job as a swimming teacher," Dave spoke carelessly. "I don't see why Levine wants to get into politics. He's doing well in real estate."

"Oh!" exclaimed Lydia, with a child's importance at having real news to impart, "he's going into politics so's to get some Indian land."

"Like h—i he is!" exclaimed Marshall.

"Oh, daddy!" Margery's voice was exactly like her mother's.

They were turning into the Marshall driveway and Marshall's face was a curious mixture of amusement and irritation. He kissed his little daughter when he lifted her from the buggy and bade her run to the house. Before he lifted Lydia down he paused and as he stood on the ground and she sat in the surrey, she looked levelly into his black eyes.

"I wish I had another little daughter like you, Lydia," he said. "I don't see why—but God, you can't get swans from barnyard fowls." He continued to study Lydia's face. "Some day, my child, you'll make some man's heart break, or lift him up to heaven."

Lydia squirmed.

"Well, Margery's taught now," she said hastily, "so I don't have to be punished any more, do I?"

Marshall scowled slightly. "What do you mean? Don't you want Margery to play with you?"

"Oh, sure, she can play, if she wants to, but I mean I don't have to get her and bring her into our games."

"No," said Dave slowly, "but I think it would be nice of you to sort of keep an eye on her and get her dirty once in a while. There! Run home, child, you're shivering."

With puzzled eyes, Lydia obeyed.

The most important result, as far as Lydia was interested, of the talk between her father and Levine that night was that Amos decided definitely to move the following week.

Lydia did not see the new home until she rode out with the first drayload of furniture. She sat in the high seat beside the driver, baby Patience in her lap, her thin, long little legs dangling, her cheeks scarlet with excitement and the warmth of a hot September morning. The cottage was a mile from the old home. They drove along the maple-shaded street for the first half of the distance, then turned into a dirt road that led toward the lake shore. The dirt road emerged on the shore a half mile above the Willows and wound along a high embankment, crowned with oaks.

An old-fashioned white cottage, with green blinds and a tiny front porch, stood beside the road, its back to the lake. There were five acres or so of ground around the house, set off by a white picket fence. At the gate a pine tree stood. There were oaks and lilac bushes in the front yard. Through the leaves, Lydia saw the blue of the lake.

"Our yard runs right down to the water!" she cried, as the driver lifted the baby down and she followed after. "Gee! I'm glad we moved!"

Lydia looked along the road, where an occasional house was to be seen.

"I hope kids live in those houses," she said, "but if they don't, baby and the lake are company enough for me, and Kent can come out on his wheel."

She ran through the little house eagerly. It was full of windows and being all on one floor, gave a fine effect of spaciousness. It was an old house but in excellent repair as was all John Levine's property.

Lizzie arrived on the third and final load. She brought with her a lunch that they shared with the driver. He good-naturedly set up the kitchen stove and the three beds for them and departed with the hope that they would not be too lonesome.

Lydia and old Lizzie put in an afternoon of gigantic effort. By six o'clock, the beds were made, dishes unpacked and in the china closet, the table was set for supper and an Irish stew of Lydia's make was simmering on the stove.

When Amos came up the path at a half after six, his dinner pail in his hand, he found Lydia flat on her back on the little front porch. Her curly head was wet with perspiration; face, hands and blouse were black. The baby sat beside her, trying to get Florence Dombey to sleep.

"Well," said Amos, looking down on his family, "how do you like it, Lydia?"

"It's great! My back's broken! Supper's ready."

"You shouldn't lift heavy things, child! How often have I told you? Wait until I get home."

"I want to get things done," replied Lydia, "so's I can do a little playing before school opens. Come on in and see all we've done, daddy."

Much has been said about the difference in weights on cotton put up in Round Bale as compared with the usual square bale method

The point is: Square Bale bagging weighs 20 pounds, whereas Round Bale bagging weighs 5 pounds, which makes 15 pounds more weight to add to Square Bale,—commonly called tare difference.

The following table explains this difference in figures:

Difference in weight on Bagging	Square Bale Price	Money Difference	Difference reduced to Points	To equalize, Round Bale Price Should Be
15 Lbs.	10c	$1.50	30	10.30
15 Lbs.	10½c	$1.58	31½	10.82
15 Lbs.	11c	$1.65	33	11.33
15 Lbs.	11½c	$1.73	34½	11.85
15 Lbs.	12c	$1.80	36	12.36
15 Lbs.	12½c	$1.88	37½	12.88
15 Lbs.	13c	$1.95	39	13.39
15 Lbs.	13½c	$2.03	40½	13.91
15 Lbs.	14c	$2.10	42	14.42
15 Lbs.	14½c	$2.18	43½	14.94
15 Lbs.	15c	$2.25	45	15.45
15 Lbs.	15½c	$2.33	46½	15.97
15 Lbs.	16c	$2.40	48	16.48
15 Lbs.	16½c	$2.55	51	17.51

We have the Square Bale press, as well as the Round Bale, and earnestly wish you to have your choice of the method which seems to you most advisable.

Our desire is to gin your cotton and let you name the method. Service as well as to please is our motto.

Hotel Man Says: "Take Tanlac"

After Surprising Recovery From Nervous Indigestion and Ailments Caused by a Run-Down Condition, Mr. Dresser Heartily Recommends Tanlac to Everyone.

Ed. Dresser, popular hotel proprietor, oil man and realtor, of 601 South 7th Street, Corsicana, Texas, knows what it means to lose health and energy, and how good it is to regain those priceless boons.

"Long hours incidental to hotel work resulted some years ago in a nervous strain," he writes. "I was all played out. I started taking Tanlac. It invigorated me, regulated my bowels, restored my energy.

"I have taken Tanlac ever since as a general tonic whenever I thought I was in need of something—two or three bottles especially in the Spring. I have lots of energy for my business and can recommend Tanlac as a splendid tonic for business men."

Tanlac is Nature's remedy, made from roots, barks and herbs. Tanlac helps build up strength, vanquish pain, tone up sluggish livers. Take the advice of men like Mr. Dresser, and ask your druggist for Tanlac—today!

AROUND THE HOME

By MARGARET BRUCE

Reclaiming Your Rugs

How all the old-fashioned industries and activities have been taken out of the home and turned over to commercial enterprise, haven't they? There is scarcely one of the home activities—whether making new articles or refashioning from scraps and leftovers—that isn't done better, more cheaply, and infinitely more quickly by the modern factory. Of course these machine products do not have the personal, hand-made touch that the heirlooms made by our grandmothers possess; but the modern woman has little time in which to make the braided mats, candlewick counterpanes and patchwork quilts produced in the olden days when there was more time than anything else!

The newest form of commercial making-over that I know of is the reclaiming of old carpets, rugs and clothing materials, and turning them into attractive new rugs of any size, dyed to one's chosen color and finished in either a plain solid surface or two-toned with a wide border. We all know how successfully the government reclaimed old uniforms, blankets, army shirts, and other garments during the war, and how entirely clean, sanitary, and durable such reclaimed articles can be.

The firm which reclaims our ragged, faded, and torn carpets, rugs, and portieres—otherwise useless, performs what sounds like a domestic miracle. Into the maw of their special patented process goes the shabby, the worn, and the washed out. There the material is first reduced to shreds, then washed, sterilized, carded, color is schemed, and lastly it is woven into a thick, seamless, reversible rug into which the foot sinks luxuriously.

It seems to me this is a brilliant idea on the part of the manufacturers. How many things we throw away because we are unable to utilize the portions that are still worth keeping! To bundle up all our old coats, ancient parlor carpets, dreary chenille portieres, outgrown couch covers, and ragged pieces of upholstery, and have them return to us in the shape of a handsome taupe or blue rug for the dining room or bedroom—well, it seems like magic and nothing less! The rug comes back within the week, too, and the price is less than you would think.

Confusion in a Handbag

The pretty shopper paused at the dress-goods counter, held the clerk's attention with an appealing glance (for another woman was trying to get waited on first), and groped in her beaded bag for her sample. The clerk obligingly waited for a moment, but alas! the shopper groped in vain. She drew out a daintily colored handkerchief, a card case, a powder compact, a theater-ticket envelope, a coin-purse, a nail-file, two letters, and a shopping list, but no scrap of blue georgette. She cast a despairing glance at the clerk, but that damsel had turned to the other customer. In the end the shopper had to pile all the contents of her bag out onto a squastered corner of the counter before she found the sample—which had slipped in between the two letters!

Now, I'm not recommending bunches of pockets all over our slim persons to hold our plunder, nor do I advocate carrying one powder puff or card case less. We women simply have to have all our small accessories with us and we have no other place to carry them than in our handbags. What we can do, however, is to arrange the contents of our bags so that we can find what we want without taking everything out!

A woman I know divides her handbag into a number of silk partitions or envelopes. Five or six pieces of silk fit the shape of the bag, and a tiny bit larger, all round, are sewed together on all sides, leaving the tops open. These tops are finished with tiny bands of gold galoon, as her bag is of black and gold. When the packet of partitions is stitched firmly together, it is bound with a narrow bias band, machine stitched, and the whole packet is firmly sewed to the inner seam of the lining.

In one of these envelopes she places her handkerchief and her coin-purse; in another she keeps her nail-file, compact, and lip-stick. Still another holds her card case and a small leather case holding her commutation ticket and theater tickets, a pencil and a small memorandum book containing addresses and telephone numbers. A fourth is free for samples, shopping list, or letters (the "extras" of the day).

Pretty Things that are Made at Home

AS TO Christmas presents it is time to be up and doing, for the calendar waits not for the laggard. Why not make someone happy with a "tissue twist" pocketbook like the one shown in the picture? Surely you would and I would just love to receive such a useful and beautiful gift, now wouldn't we? So will your dearest friend.

The marvelous thing about this purse of elegant appearance is, that it is made of tissue twist, which is in reality crepe paper processed and hard-twisted until it is as strong and durable as any embroidered floss. Tissue twist can be purchased at any counter where they sell fancy crepe paper, your nearest stationery store for instance. For the stamped oblong piece of imported canvas, if they haven't it at the store where you buy the tissue twist, you will be sure to find it in any fancywork department or specialty shop. It requires for this pocketbook six hanks of gray tissue twist, also one of red and two of green, also beads in three bright colors. Thread a short darning needle with the gray tissue twist and work in the background solid, over and over in strips as stamped. Then finish around the edge with the red tissue twist, sewing over and over. To keep the edge smooth and even take the stitches over a darning needle held flat and close to the canvas edge, slipping it out as you go. The flower design is now filled in with the beads, just as you see in the foreground are typical of the present mode. Copied in white, beige or pink broadcloth or heavy wash satin they serve to add to the charm of any frock.

This same tendency toward the picturesque and unusual which marks the accessory or detachable cuff, is reflected throughout all sleeve designing. Especially is the fur and cloth cuff on the coat indulging in fantastic interpretation. Frequently the fur or cloth cuff reaches well-nigh to the elbow and it flares or ripples, assumes a melon or muff shape, or perhaps buttons or loosely flaps at the pleasure of the designer.

Frocks which are otherwise unadorned bear either startling cuff versions, or if not cuffs, then unusual wrist treatments wherein much rich embroidery and coloring attract the picture. Take a strip of brocade satin the size of the canvas and sew on two inner pockets. Line the canvas piece with this, inserting a three-cornered piece of the cloth at each side to form the bag.

For lack of space full directions for making the basket and box, here shown cannot be given. Suffice it to say that tissue rope is used solidly overstitched with tissue twist. The "lazy squaw" stitch is employed, just as you see detailed in this picture. In order to work in the design, thread two needles, slipping the one under a space of stitches so as to display the color contrasts.

What's the latest fashion topic? Cuffs, the most whimsical soft, bearing such romantic titles as troubadour, cavalier and pirate. Called by any name, the new cuffs are as quaintly picturesque as those worn by ye knights of ye olden time. The schoolgirl generation is going to "just love" these deep cuffs which make

Buick Thermostatic Control provides smooth Engine Performance at 0° or 90° in the shade

Thermostatic Circulation Control is a new reason why the Buick engine is so easy to start and so pleasant to drive, in all kinds of weather.

Summer conditions prevail all year, under the Buick hood. At 90°, or at zero this valuable Buick improvement reduces the warming-up period to less than three minutes!

For this, and many other vital reasons, the 1927 Buick is the Greatest Ever Built. The engine is vibrationless beyond belief. Drive it and see what that means.

First Baptist Church Notes

Our attendance was below normal last Sunday on account of the cold wind and threatening weather, but the services were spiritual and interesting. Several classes came very nearly up to a "star report." The Lord's Supper was observed as a holy church communion, reverently and prayerfully. The B. Y. P. U. was unusually good. Some splendid special music and several visitors added to its usual good program and made it better every way. The pastor has heard several commendations on his sermons and, of course, some unfavorable comments. But he can say he aimed to hit. In fact any preaching that is undocctrinal is unscriptural, and any that does not reveal our faults and sins is not the preaching of the Lord's gospel. We love Jesus and his faithful apostles for the enemies they made as well as for the truth they preached and the friends they made for it.

Next Sunday the pastor will be in San Antonio attending the Texas Baptist General Convention. The deacons and the S. S. officers will have charge of the morning hour services and will dismiss in time for the crowd to attend the other church services. Some will wish to hear our new Methodist pastor. The B. Y. P. U. will have charge of the evening services, commencing at 6:15. They have a very fine program planned. We hope they shall have a crowded house as their program will certainly deserve. Those who attend will learn that the B. Y. P. U. has some very capable workers in religious worship. Our prayers will be with them and their audience. We feel very grateful for the good contributions that made it possible for the pastor to attend the Convention.

THE FLAMING FRONTIER
HERE NOV. 23 AND 24

The Dreamland Theatre of this city will show on next Tuesday and Wednesday, Nov 23 and 24, the "Flaming Frontier," a historical and romantic production of great merit.

It is an absorbing tale of the Old West, as spectacular and historically significant as "The Covered Wagon." It carries out the spirit of pioneer America—the Indians on the warpath, rough riding, the emigrant trail, and the great climax, "Custer's Last Stand." Also a beautiful love-story. Young and old will enjoy the "Flaming Frontier."

WHY THE LIGHT BILLS ARE HIGHER IN WINTER THAN IN SUMMER

THIS CHART SHOWS THE AVERAGE HOURS OF ARTIFICIAL LIGHT USED IN THE AVERAGE HOME, AVERAGING THE DAYS OF EACH MONTH, AND EACH MONTH OF THE YEAR.

Average Electric Lighting Hours Each Day

January.....	6 hours 32 minutes
February.....	5 hours 38 minutes
March.....	4 hours 10 minutes
April.....	3 hours 48 minutes
May.....	2 hours 57 minutes
June.....	2 hours 33 minutes
July.....	2 hours 56 minutes
August.....	3 hours 9 minutes
September.....	4 hours 00 minutes
October.....	4 hours 54 minutes
November.....	6 hours 11 minutes
December.....	6 hours 51 minutes

This chart shows why your electric bills are considerably higher in December than in June. The average use of electric lights in a residence in December is the heaviest of the year.

In December the average use is nearly 7 hours a day, whereas in June the average is only 2 hours 35 minutes. From June to January the daylight hours decrease and electric lighting hours grow. In January the daylight hours grow and electric lighting hours decrease, and this condition continues from month to month until we again reach the balmy days of June.
