NEW BRICKS WILL REPLACE OLD FRAMES

This is a big week in Hedley, and we are publishing herewith a news item we've been wanting to publish a long time.

The four old frame business houses, beginning at the corner of Main street and the Highway, are being torn down, and will be replaced by modern brick buildings. The Security State Bank is putting up the corner building, T. M. Little the next two, and G. L. Armstrong the fourth.

The houses that are being torn down are among the oldest in Hedley, at least two of them having been moved here from old Rowe in 1906.

The tenants have taken up temporary quarters at various places: G. L. Armstrong's grocery and market is in Whitfield's South Main Garage, across the track; J. M. Clarke in Crozier's feed store, old postoffice building; Hoffman's barber shop at the Wall shoe store; R. R. Mobley at Frank Kendall's store. They ask their friends to call on them at these places.

We understand the contracts call for a superior quality of light colored brick, and the buildings when completed will be a real ornament to the town. Speed Bros. of Clarendon have the contract for the corner building, and a Memphis contractor has the other three.

Information is given out that at least two new businesses will be established here by the time these buildings are completed, but we are not authorized to put out any definite statements at this time. We're coming alive, though—we have authority to say that much.

"Watch Hedley Grow!"

REMOVAL NOTICE

Beginning Monday, August 13, my Barber Shop will be located in the building with A. L. Wall's Shoe Shop, on the east side of Main street. We will be located there several weeks, and want all our customers and friends to call on us.

P. C. Johnson has returned from a trip "down in Texas." First he went with his brother, Ed Johnson, and family to their home at Teague. Then he went to Marlin and tried out the hot baths in those famous curative waters. P. He must have gotten some of the meanness stewed out of him, because he looks better.

"THE CONQUEROR"

James Cook

MONUMENT TO
CAPTAIN COOK IN KEALAKEUA BAY

ANCIENT HAWAIIAN PLACE OF WORSHIP

By KATHERINE POPE

Author of "Hawaii, The Rainbow Land."

T HIS summer that portion of the United States known as the Territory of Hawaii celebrates the fact that just one hundred fifty years ago the brave English explorer, Capt. James Cook, discovered this group of islands lying off quite by itself there in mid-Pacific.

A century and a half ago the "Eight Islands" (the number is really twelve) were unknown to the civilized world; but now their anchorage there in the great ocean is frequently called "The Crossroads of the Pacific." For today the port of Honolulu is crowded with ships from myriad routes that center there. Ships come from New Zealand far to the south, and greet craft from San Francisco, Vancouver, even distant Vladivostok. To the east and west meet in Honolulu, vessels from Asiatic waters seek harborage near those from Panama and from South American ports. A great change from that January day, 1778, when Captain Cook and his party, voyaging from the South seas toward the northwest coast of America, discovered in latitude 21 degrees 12 minutes 30 seconds north bits of land rising here and there above the waste of waters, and then made landing on Kaula, northernmost of the Hawaiian Islands.

The English explorer, out of compliment to his patron and friend, the earl of Sandwich, decided to christen these isles that he had come upon "The Sandwich Islands." And for long they bore this name; and still today the name clings to the group, which Mark Twain called "the loveliest fleet of islands that lies anchored in any ocean."

Captain Cook's discovery of Hawaii marked a turning point in the history of the little land. For Cook's account of the place and people made known to the world the existence of a land of plenty sorely needed as a port of call for the voyagers abroad now in this period of discovery. Captain Cook found the first natives encountered timid, afraid to come aboard his vessels, the Discovery and the Resolution, although several of the canoes did approach quite close, and the occupants offered to barter fish, pigs and potatoes for nails and bits of iron. Cook, who is famed for the care with which he looked after the health of his men, seized this opportunity to obtain fresh provisions, his supply of turtle by now being exhausted.

Presently the bartering natives lost their timidity and consented to come aboard the vessels. But these at once beginning to help themselves to whatsoever pleased their fancy, the hosts had to keep a sharp watch on the guests. Cook, who was in need of fresh water as well as fresh food, proceeded slowly along the coast of Kaula on the lookout for a suitable landing. As the vessels made their way along the coast, natives swarmed on the shore, and on the hills above the water, to observe the strange visitants. As they gazed upon the advance of the tall-masted ships, the watchers on land cried: "Look! moving islands of forests!"

"No," said others among them, "these are temples to the high god Lono."

Concerning the beings upon the strange ships, they regarded these as more than men, as gods returning to isles where once they had dwelt. For the old chants of the land sang of a past day when gods walked among men; also related that the same gods would come back sometime.

The white men went ashore heavily armed, for these were uncharted islands, the character of the dwellers thereon most uncertain, their hospitality waiting to be proved. But as the white men stepped ashore at Waimea, Kaula, the natives fell down before them in adoration, received them with rejoicing. A supply of excellent water was found, and the next day the natives gladly helped in rolling the casks back and forth. Meanwhile brisk bartering was carried on between islanders and visitors, and, too, the latter made some exploration inland. Cook's record of the natives here reads: "No people could trade with more honesty than these people, never once attempting to cheat us, either ashore or alongside the ship."

The exploring party remained for two weeks in Hawaiian waters, and obtained a valuable addition to the ships' supplies for the long voyage north; very good sweet potatoes, between sixty and eighty pigs, some salt, also salt-fish, a few fowls, and the excellent taro-root that was the chief food of the island people. Whilst the nails and iron objects received in exchange by the natives were highly valued in a land where tools had to be made of stone, of wood, of bone, or of shell. Valued by the Hawaiians, also, were two pigs of English breed and three goats that Captain Cook turned over to the care of one of the chiefs when his party resumed the voyage northward.

The natives gave so generously of their provisions to the visitors because they thought Captain Cook the great god Lono, whose return to Hawaii had been prophesied. Messengers were sent about the islands to tell the chiefs of the strange beings that had come to Hawaii. The messengers said, "The men are white, their skin is loose and folding; their heads are angular; fire and smoke issue from their mouths; they have openings in the sides of their bodies in which they thrust their hands and draw out iron, beads, and other treasures."

Captain Cook now cruised here and there about the group, and made no small advance in acquaintance with the natives. And again he and his party were welcomed, again they were given high honors, again out to the Resolution and the Discovery the outrigger-canoes tolled laden with presents of much value, the best that the land had to offer.

In order to refit the ships and take in water, the vessels anchored in a fine large bay, Kealahou, on the western shore of the southernmost island, Hawaii. Here, immediately the vessels were surrounded by hundreds of canoes, with swarms of visitors begging to come aboard—a marked contrast to the earliest attitude of the islanders.

There was one state occasion when the old king, with a retinue of followers, among them Prince Kamehameha, later to be known as The Conqueror, went out to the ships bearing rich gifts, with royalty arrayed in picturesque feather helmet and in feather mantle that swept the ground. Gifts were exchanged; the white men gave to the natives seeds that were to add richly to the plant life of Hawaii, gave, too, goats, cloth, and weapons, whilst not alone the best that the land had to offer in the way of food was presented by the islanders to the white men on this visit of state, but upon the leaders in Cook's party were bestowed rich treasure of the art of the Hawaiians, rare samples of the precious featherwork for which the people are justly famed.

Alexander, born in Hawaii and historian of the land of his birth, writes this of the honor shown Captain Cook by the Hawaiian ruler: "The king made a grand ceremonial visit to the ships, with three large canoes attended by chiefs wearing their feather cloaks and helmets and armed with spears and daggers, and by priests bearing gigantic idols of wickerwork, covered with red feathers, with eyes made of mother-of-pearl and mouths set with double rows of sharks' teeth."

"After paddling around the ships, chanting prayers or hymns, they went toward the observatory where Captain Cook landed to receive them. On entering the tent the king placed his own magnificent feather cloak upon Captain Cook's shoulders and a feather helmet on his head, and laid five or six other beautiful cloaks at his feet."

Captain Cook, too, made a graceful gesture. "On this occasion he presented to the king his own sword. And perhaps the linen shirt he gave him at the same time was to the recipient an object that, because of the rarity of the same on the islands, had high value in the eyes of ruler and subjects."

If the English exploring party had left at the height of their popularity all would have been well. But Cook's men stayed on and on, and in time the natives became weary of taking canoe-load after canoe-load of provisions out to the ships. In the end quarrels arose, consciously and unconsciously the sailors offended the natives, the natives the sailors. Then one day Cook's men, short of wood, cut down the palms about the sacred temple close to the shore of the bay, and this greatly angered the people, while from time to time the natives stole coveted objects from the anchored ships, and resented the stern punishments that followed these thefts. Mutterings against the visitors began to be heard on all sides. When one of the sailors died and was buried on shore, the islanders said to one another: "These are but men like ourselves!" Suspicion and bitter feeling increased, at last real fighting took place; in this warfare the natives making use of spear and the hurling of stones, while gun and cannon were employed by the white men.

Then came an hour of fighting when Captain Cook was ashore, and a moment when the captain turned toward the sea to signal to his men to cease firing. A native chief, who had in his possession one of Cook's own iron daggers, crept up and stabbed him in the back. Captain Cook fell, his face in the water, and when the natives raised the body it was lifeless.

Thus died one of the bravest of the brave sons sent out by England to the far corners of the earth. Fellow-countrymen of the great voyager have erected on the shore of Kealahou bay a tall monument marking the spot near which the hero was slain. Hawaii's punishment for the slaying of Captain Cook has followed through the years, because of this tragedy the Hawaiians being accounted a bloodthirsty and insupportable people, while on the whole they were friendly to strangers and welcomed them to their land.

HOT WEATHER DISHES

This is the season when cooling drinks, refreshing and juicy fruits, and vegetables appeal to the appetite.

Cucumber Jelly Salad.—Peel four cucumbers, and cut into thin slices. Cover with one cupful of cold water, bring to the boiling point and cook until soft; then force through a strainer. Add two and one-half tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatin dissolved in three-fourths of a cupful of boiling water, a few drops of onion juice, one tablespoonful of vinegar, a dash of cayenne, salt and pepper to taste. Strain through cheese cloth into a mold and chill. Serve on lettuce with sliced tomato and mayonnaise.

Chicken Casserole.—Dress and clean a young fowl and cut into pieces for serving. Spread with one-third of a cupful of butter, sprinkle with salt and pepper. Pour over one cupful of boiling water, cover and cook until the chicken is tender. Add one cupful of cream, two cupfuls of fresh mushrooms, broken into pieces, and cook ten minutes. Thicken with one tablespoonful of flour and serve.

Coffee Spanish Cream.—Mix one and one-half cupfuls of coffee infusion with one-half cupful of milk, one-third of a cupful of sugar and one tablespoonful of gelatin; heat in a double boiler. Beat the yolks of four eggs slightly, add one-third cupful of sugar and one-fourth teaspoonful of salt. Add to the first mixture and cook until slightly thick. Remove from the heat, add the whites beaten stiff and one-half teaspoonful of vanilla. Mold and chill, serve with cream.

Glazed Sweet Potatoes.—Wash and cook six medium sized sweet potatoes until nearly tender; do not peel. Remove skin and cut into halves lengthwise. Make a sirup by boiling one-half cupful of sugar and four tablespoonfuls of water five minutes. Brush the potatoes with the sirup, bake, basting often with the sirup until the potatoes are tender and well browned.

Seasonable Foods.
A potato salad if well seasoned makes a good dish to serve on a warm day for luncheon or supper with sliced cold meat.
German Potato Salad.—Cut medium sized cold boiled potatoes into thin slices. Put into a baking dish and sprinkle with salt and pepper, one-third of a cupful of chopped celery and one and one-half tablespoonfuls of finely chopped parsley. Mix four tablespoonfuls of vinegar with four tablespoonfuls of olive oil and one slice of lemon. Bring to the boiling point, pour over the potatoes, cover and let stand in the oven until thoroughly heated.

Creamed Mushrooms on Toast.—Clean one pound of mushrooms, remove the caps and cut both stems and caps into thin slices. Add the sliced mushrooms and cook three minutes. Sprinkle with half a teaspoonful of salt and a few grains of pepper, dredge with one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour and pour over one-half cupful of cream. Cook for five minutes, stirring constantly. Serve on oblongs of buttered toast and garnish with toast points and parsley.

Barbecued Ham.—Soak two thin slices of ham in lukewarm water twenty-five minutes. Drain, wipe and cook in a hot iron frying pan until delicately browned on both sides. To the fat in the pan add two tablespoonfuls of vinegar, one teaspoonful of salt and a few grains of pepper, dredge with one-eighth teaspoonful of paprika, and one-half teaspoonful of sugar. When thoroughly heated pour over the ham and serve.

Molded Salmon.—Cook one cupful of bread crumbs and one cupful of milk until smooth. Add four tablespoonfuls of butter, one cupful of cooked flaked salmon, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper, then cut in the whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Fill buttered individual molds, two-thirds full, set in a pan of water and bake until firm. Garnish with slices of hard cooked eggs and parsley.

Beets Piquante.—Wash beets and cook in boiling salted water until soft. Reserve one-half cupful of the liquor. Plunge into cold water and remove the skins, then cut the beets into cubes. Reheat in the following sauce: Melt two tablespoonfuls of butter, add two tablespoonfuls of flour and pour over the half cupful of beet liquor. Add one-fourth cupful of vinegar and cream, one teaspoonful of sugar, one-half teaspoonful of salt and a few grains of pepper.

A plain buttered bread sandwich with a thin slice of cheese placed between, then fried in a little butter until brown on both sides, if served with a salad of green vegetables, such as lettuce with cucumber and onion, will make a most satisfactory luncheon dish.

NEARBY and YONDER

Vilas County

COUNTIES, like cities, states and nations, get a great kick out of possessing something unusual to set them apart from other similar communities. Nature, in her benevolence graciously bestowed a landscape or other outstanding differences to various counties scattered among our states. In many instances where nature failed to especially endow a county, man has ambitiously come forward and produced some offsetting contribution.

When it comes to lakes, Vilas county, in northern Wisconsin, steps up and proclaims itself "It," modestly hinting that their excellencies, Mr. and Mrs. Public and all the little Publics, take off their hats to her rare and unmatchable collection.

Vilas proudly claims that some 1,200 lakes are confined within her wide-flung borders—the smallest, no one knows, the largest perhaps being Trout lake, which is about five miles long by three and one-half miles wide. They run the full gamut of lakedom, in shape and description. Being entirely of glacial origin, they are for the most part limpid sheets of liquid blue or green, basking peacefully in the sun, reflecting quite clearly their timber-lined banks and, needless to say, perhaps, provide refuge for numberless numbers of the finny tribe.

A somewhat unusual feature of these particular lakes is that they are in the main connected by streams navigable for canoes. It being said that one can slip a canoe into the Manitowish river at Boulder Junction, for instance, and by making portages around dams, paddle his way down to the Mississippi river and float out into the Gulf of Mexico.

Ak-sar-ben

AK-SAR-BEN is decidedly a western invention which has developed into a nationally known institution with Omaha as its headquarters.

It had its origin in 1877 and was organized as a knock-out entertainment feature for the Nebraska State fair. Intended to "promote a better spirit of co-operation among the business men of Omaha, the state and the West."

Like most kindred organizations, it has its king and its queen, with their long line of attendants to their royal highnesses, and holds forth during the fourth week in September each year.

The red-letter day in its history came in 1910 when Colonel Theodore Roosevelt was invited. "Here's where you get a touch of Hades," he was told as seven red devils took him in hand and "took him in." "Bully," roared the colonel at the finish, "I have had the best time I have had in many days."

The name Ak-sar-ben—which is simply Nebraska spelled backward—smacks of oriental flavor—"The Syrian Ak meaning head of the family; Sar Arabic, the household, and Ben Hebrew, meaning brothers of the household, combined to give the meaning of the organization the king the body of the knights and the household—in short, all."

Its colors, red, yellow and green, were chosen because they are symbolic of the principal state products and form an appropriate fall festival color combination—red for beet green for alfalfa and yellow for corn.

The organization boasts 160 acres of land adjoining the city and a grandstand seating 10,000 people.

Oyster Culture

The various countries which raise oysters for market besides ours are England, France, Germany, Holland, Spain, Italy, Australia, China, Japan, Canada, Mexico and certain parts of South America and Algeria. In these various countries there are about ten different species of oysters, all of which are similar in structure to our own, though some do not grow quite so large.

Life's Friendships

We have to learn to do our loving in this world over a good many rough places and around a great many sharp edges. If we insist that our friends be made to order we shall never have any friends. We must take people as we find them, and expend our desire for perfection in shaping the friendship we give rather than in expecting it in that which we receive.—Exchange.

Superstition Traced

The superstition that it is unlucky to light three cigarettes with one match has its origin in the fact that in the old Russian funeral service three altar candles were lighted from one taper. It was considered an act of impiety to make any other lights in groups of three, and therefore ill luck would follow such an act.

Process of Briquetting

In briquetting charcoal it was found necessary to use certain binders, such as gums or starches. Briquetting has also been accomplished by using tar or pitch as a binder and then subjecting the briquettes to a low temperature distillation in order to drive off the volatile material from the tar and pitch.

Endorsement?

It must be an unusually good oil to have the unqualified endorsement of the designers and builders of engines used in 207 automotive vehicles.

But no wonder these experts favor Conoco Amalie! Made from Pennsylvania Crude and made a better way, Conoco Amalie does a 100% lubricating job.

It retains its viscosity under practically all operating conditions—thus sealing the pistons and greatly reducing crankcase dilution—the cause of so much costly wear and tear on the motor.

Uses for Western Cedar
The range of the Western cedar in Canada is confined to the province of British Columbia. More shingles are made from the Western cedar than from any other species. Over 2,500,000,000 were cut in Canada from this tree in 1925. In addition over 130,000,000 board feet of lumber, 10,000,000 laths, and an immense number of poles and posts were produced from it in the same year.

Besides its cane and beets, the United States has an important source of sugar in its cornfields, although this product has not yet been produced in any great quantities, due to the intricate processes involved in its manufacture. "Well," replied the inmate, "you seem to be more like one of us."

Repeating my instructions and reminding him that he would be favorably received as a scout for the colonel, the Onondaga and I swung into the path and made for the cabins. Having already been guests in the village, we did not go through the formality of shouting our names.

We went to the cabin set aside for strangers and were promptly served with meat and a course bread. It was evident that Queen Allaquippa did not wish us to delay our departure. We did not propose leaving, however, until Cromit had put in his appearance. News forwarded from Duquesne would be useless unless the McDowell's mill man was waiting to carry it to the army. Before departing for the fort, I had to satisfy myself that Cromit would not be refused shelter in the village; so we ate our meat leisurely and fought the minutes.

Having finished and wiped our fingers on little bundles of dried grass I proceeded to mend my moccasins. After I had made my foot-gear as good as new I advised the Onondaga to take his time.

When I believed an hour had elapsed, I peered through a small hole at the end of the cabin and beheld Cromit striding from the woods. He halted and shouted the guest call and was promptly confronted by several warriors. They talked with him for a few moments and then gladly shouted:

"Ingelishman! Ingelishman!"

They seized his hands and patted his shoulders and in a hospitable pantomime waved their arms and pointed toward the cabins.

He entered the village and the word was rapidly passed that he was "Ingelishman"; and where we had received scowls and frowns he beheld nothing but beaming countenances. He wandered about and passed our cabin and beheld us but gave no sign of recognition. A warrior must have informed him that we were French in our sympathies for he paused and made derisive gestures at us, whereat the savages laughed in great enjoyment. I was afraid the audacious rascal would challenge us to a fight, or play some other trick. Now satisfied his welcome would be permanent I picked up my rifle and, with the Onondaga, stepped outside.

That day we advanced with great caution and made slow progress. It was the back trail that held our attention. More than once we drew to one side of the path and waited to learn if we were pursued.

All timber originally crowding against the fort had been leveled for a considerable depth. Vast cornfields stretched for a fourth of a mile up the Allegheny and the Monongahela. In addition to these, there were many kitchen gardens along the Allegheny. On the Monongahela, there were a number of mills.

We struck the clearing at a point opposite the eastern gate, a rather pretentious portal of ten feet in width, swinging on hinges and having a wicket in the middle. Inside the stockade were two storehouses, or maga-zines, as many barracks, a guardhouse and prison, the commandant's residence and the chapel. All these were very stoutly built of heavy logs and backed up to within three feet of the stockade, the intervening space being packed with earth, and the board roofs at the eaves lying level with the ramparts. There were no pickets, nor pointed palisades, and from our position it looked as if the whole enclosure were roofed over.

We emerged from the woods and made for the eastern gate, and our coming seemed to be unnoticed. One of the Canadian militia was lazily guarding the gate, half asleep because of the hot sun. After scrutinizing us for a few moments he said: "I greet you, m'sieu. You would see Captain de Beaujeu?"

I expressed that desire, and he yawned and called a soldier and told him to take my name to the commandant. Very soon the messenger returned and said I was to follow him. The Onondaga dropped behind to stroll about the enclosure. I was conducted to the commandant's house between the guardhouse and the western gate.

All the way from Allaquippa's town, I had been schooling my nerves for this meeting. There could be no partial success; either I would remain unsuspected, or go into a Huron kettle. I realized that some tongue might have wagged since my former visit, for news travels fast in the forest. All doubts vanished, however, when Captain Beaujeu ran from the house and embraced me warmly. In dress and appearance, I was only a coquette de bois, but on our first meeting I had given the name of an old family whose fortunes were ruined, but whose blood held good.

are registered on the printed page but few in these latter days know the deeds of Beaujeu.

We had some wine and he pressed me for news. I gave him a part of the information Cromit had brought me. It was correct so far as it went but I made no mention of the general sickness among the soldiers, nor of the uneasiness among the regulars and provincials, nor of the jealousies and bitterness among the officers. In so far as I talked, I spoke truthfully for his spies had been and would be keeping him informed, and I had no desire to be proved a liar. When I had finished, I eagerly asked:

"We will fight, eh?"

"We will fight. I find there are some things a Chevalier of St. Louis cannot do—run away without making a fight."

"Good!" I exclaimed. "Then reinforcements have arrived?"

"We are weaker in regulars and militia than we were in the spring," he calmly replied. "But we have in creased our Indian force a little. Monsieur, you are devoted to France. You have cast your lot with us. You are entitled to the truth. The Indians are uneasy. Nay, they are frightened. They may refuse to make a fight, I make myself believe they will lift the ax and dispute Braddock's progress. But I have dreamed of waking and finding their huts empty, of finding my red allies returning to their northern villages. There have been no reinforcements from Canada. I have sent messages to describe our desperate plight, but no men come back.

"And, my friend, I have some news that is later than yours. A runner arrived yesterday, saying the army has reached Jacobs' creek and is waiting there for provisions to be brought up. So the English are having their troubles. I only pray that they come by the easy crossings of the Monongahela. If they do, I propose to lay an ambushade just before they reach the river. By Our Lady's help we may surprise them. But if Braddock chooses to march across Turtle creek, twelve miles from its mouth, there will be no chance for an ambushade; for the country, although rough for travel, has no good cover for a surprise attack. If he comes along that line, then all we can do is to fight."

"Let us hope for the best," I said. I was devoutly sincere in saying it only my "best" was not his.

He laughed softly and replied: "Monsieur Beland, what is there left for us to fight with except hope? Still it is good to show these stolid English how a Frenchman can die. I will attack even if the army comes by the Turtle creek route; and I shall die, as the Indians will not make a fight in that country.

"Walk about the fort, monsieur, and spirit up the men with a few words. I must be busy for a bit of rounding out my plans for a grand coup. But we will dine leisurely tonight. There will be several at the table whom you met on your former visit. They will be Lieutenant de Carnevillie, Sieur de Parisien and Lieutenant de la Parade. The brothers de Normandette are out on a scout and won't come in until the enemy is very close.

"Your Dupuy has served his king and has gone to his reward. I do not think you met him. A brave simple soul who knew no fear. Nor was Lieutenant Beauvais here on your first visit, but he is a most pleasing man, and you will rejoice in forming his acquaintance."

"Lieutenant Beauvais," I repeated, the two words ringing oddly in my ears.

"You have met him in Montreal, perhaps?"

"The name sounds familiar. But I recall no officer acquaintance of that name."

"Somehow you two impress me as being much alike. The pleasure will be mutual, I know. I only regret poor Dupuy could not be here."

"I regret to infer from your words, monsieur, that your friend is dead."

"Killed on a recent scout. It is the reward of the forest brave men."

My mind was whirling. My words seemed to come without any mental volition and I did not realize what I was saying until I had said it. De Beaujeu, as he escorted me to the door, added:

"Like yourself Beauvais is a man of deeds. He loves to go alone into the dangerous places."

"You flatter me, monsieur. And what hour do we dine?"

"We will not wait for Lieutenant Beauvais after seven. He should be here today."

There came a great surge of relief. His speech cleared the situation somewhat, Dupuy, killed by the Onondaga outside the little cabin, had been reported dead by the French Indians. Beauvais had been captured inside the cabin and his three red companions had died. So, there were no witnesses to his fate.

Then I remembered the Frenchman carrying belts to Allaquippa and in parting from the commandant said: "And Monsieur Falest? I trust to see him. Of course he has told you of our meeting in Allaquippa's town. I liked him much."

"Wait, wait, monsieur! If you please, tell me about Monsieur Falest. He should be here before now. He carries belts from the governor of Canada. The belts were refused. A Huron, who carried belts from Pontiac, was found dead just outside the village. I am anxious to hear the details."

Now for a surety was I computed. He was waiting for Falest to come and Falest had started twelve hours ahead of me. But Falest had not arrived, and yet the commandant knew the belts were refused by Allaquippa and that the Huron was dead. I stole a glance at his dark face, wondering if he were playing with me—if his cordial welcome was but a piece of mockery. He detected something in my face, and further inquired:

"You have kept back some bad news, monsieur?"

His tone was hard and brittle, that of a commandant rather than of a courteous host. I told him:

"Your words have surprised me, Monsieur Falest started for this place early last evening, intending to make a night trip of it. He was accompanied by a young Englishman who has a French heart."

"Sacre bleu! Do you rave, or are my ears lying to me?" he fiercely demanded.

"Monsieur de Beaujeu!" I exclaimed. The bewilderment reflected in my thin face must have impressed him as being genuine, for he hastily cried: "A thousand pardons if I seem to be rude, Monsieur Beland. But here is a mystery. Ha! Perhaps a bloody mystery. One that bodes ill for Duquesne."

World's Great Had to Overcome Grave Ills

Not an individual living is absolutely free from handicaps. Some of us are physically disabled, others are mentally harassed, hundreds suffer both, writes Louis E. Bisch in the American Magazine. We struggle with deformity; we fight disease; we wrestle with doubts, feelings of inferiority, oversensitiveness, uncontrollable temper, all sorts of distressing disabilities. Even the greatest among us are handicapped like that. Every human being is prevented somehow from fulfilling his highest destiny.

Many of our greatest men were handicapped by disease, and somehow surmounted it. Milton and Handel were blind. Beethoven was deaf and Keats had tuberculosis. Pope was deformed. Caesar suffered from epilepsy. Lamb and his sister were subject to repeated attacks of insanity. Fielding wrote his rollicking book, "Tom Jones," while melancholy. Florence Nightingale did some of her best executive work while bedridden. The list, indeed, is a long one. These people achieved in spite of a hardship.

SATIN FOR DAY AND EVENING; WIDE DIVERSITY IN MILLINERY

ARE "they going to wear" satin again this fall? "They" most decidedly are. It promises to be very much of a satin season. Not only will satin assert itself in the afternoon mode, but, according to fashion's forecast, satin is to have a very special vogue for evening. Black of course, and lots of it, but the new note is the advent of fascinating dark colors, especially handsome greens, and blues and that which is the last word—dark brown.

There is going to be quite a conflict waged between the new colors and black. Brown especially will prove a competitor, in that it is interpreted in so many beguiling shades such as leaf brown, chocolate, and burnished copper and brick tones.

Particularly lovely shades are exploited for evening wear, in what are to the mode, providing the hat is becoming and bespeaks that charming femininity which is characteristic of fashions throughout.

The five distinct types in the picture are convincing proof that current millinery covers a wide range of ideas. The broad-brimmed milan straw shown at the top is an outstanding favorite. To those who have a fondness for very wide brims fashion is giving every encouragement, at least until summer bids farewell. During torrid days, heat is forgotten in the comfort and charm of sheer flowery frocks topped with huge transparent capelines, usually in pastel colorings.

The little shape in the oval to the right above whose brim assumes a smart irregularity dipping jauntily to the right side, is tremendously smart. It is a ballbunt straw, this being designated as the off whites, and egg-shell tints. Flesh, too, and tea rose and faint apricot are colors expressed in terms of satin.

There is an added attraction given to the new autumn satins, in that they are so ingeniously fashioned. There are such intriguing details observed in advance satin modes as skirt fullness massed to one side, scarf panels drooping from the shoulder, draped necklines, swathed hips, tiered skirts, circular flares, many platings, marvelous seamwork, and many other treatments which express sophisticated styling.

The blouse insets of the satin frock in the picture stress the luster side, while the front and back show the re-one of the most successful straws of the season, sharing honors as it has with similar exotic types including sisol, bakou and other linen-like effects.

One of the most charming entrants into the millinery realm is the little hat of lace. The one in the oval to the left is a cloche and there are hundreds and hundreds of lace types similar to this, some in tinted lace, others of black chantilly. In fact the wee thin black hair shape covered smoothly with black lace has registered as a leading midseason type.

Ingenious handwork is lavished on the cloche centered below, and this represents a certain trend which is heartily indorsed by the mode. The feather turban in the final oval is important, because it is said that its vogue is assured for early autumn.

In Paris the feather toque in lovely pastel shades has been having a very successful run during the summer. This enthusiasm for feathers has also manifested itself in novelty trimmings on felt and straw shapes. This vogue will be emphasized for fall.

SORRY, Jane, but I simply can't go into town today. This is my Kitchen Club day, and I never miss a meeting if I can help it.

"Kitchen Club, Nancy?" came the voice at the town end of the telephone. "What kind of a club is that? I can't imagine an artist being interested in kitchens!"

"Well, for one thing, idiot, it's shown me that it takes a greater artist to keep house than it does to paint pictures. You catch the next train, and come out here, and I'll take you to a meeting."

The Kitchen Club to which Nancy Gordon and her neighbors belonged was quite an unusual development for a suburban group of modern young women, most of whom were artists or writers in addition to being the wives of "rising" young business men.

It had grown out of a visit they made to the rectory, to fix up the kitchen there before the new rector and his wife came. Nancy had suggested a new color scheme; someone else had rearranged the furniture; others had stocked the shelves with good things to eat. And before they were through, all the women were envying the rector's wife her new kitchen.

One of them said: "I wish you girls would come over and help me dress up my kitchen." And that began it. They went, made suggestions for improving the kitchen and received in return some most delicious refreshments with the recipes written out for everybody to take home.

After that it became a regular institution, every meeting bringing out new ideas for kitchen improvement, and new recipes. There were no officers, except that each member acted as secretary, writing up in a "Kitchen Club Notebook" the new ideas she received from the other members.

LEAVES FROM NANCY'S KITCHEN CLUB NOTEBOOK

If Jane will come out here often, she will get ashamed of giving her husband delicatessen stuff, and will cook him some real food. Mrs. Gray served us the most delicious refreshments this afternoon. Here are the recipes:

New Recipe for Chicken Salad

Dice the meat from one chicken boiled tender, and salted before it is removed from the fire. Add three chopped hard-boiled eggs, one cup diced celery, one-half cup chopped sweet pickle and three-fourths of a cup of freshly toasted, salted nuts. Season with salt, celery salt and pepper. Mix with enough olive oil mayonnaise to moisten.

Cheese Tea Biscuits

1 quart flour
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 scant teaspoon soda
1 lump of lard the size of an egg
4 tablespoons grated cheese
Buttermilk to make soft dough
Bake at once in a quick oven. She uses a live heat oven which can be set over one burner of an oil or gas stove, leaving the rest of the stove free for other cooking.

Rearranging an Old-Fashioned Kitchen

Mrs. Gray's kitchen was so large that she wore herself out trying to get around in it. We suggested two things: to group all her furniture in one end, using the other end for a breakfast room; or to put up a wall-board partition, making a separate room to be used for a breakfast room. She decided on the latter. Sketch shows how it will look.

New Covered Broiler

Mrs. Gray has a new kind of covered broiler that cooks meats on both sides at once. It's used on top of the stove. The cover keeps odors from spreading. She says the broiler is fine for baking biscuits as well as for broiling.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Murder of Obregon a Great Misfortune for Mexico—Gossip of Politics.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

PERHAPS the greatest misfortune that could happen to Mexico at this time was the murder of Gen. Alvaro Obregon. Quite aside from the heinousness of the crime, the assassination of the president-elect removed from the scene the strongest and most progressive of the republic's leaders, and not only threatened the country with renewal of the chaotic conditions that have held it back for many years, but also imperiled the recently restored friendly relations with the government of the United States. The excellent work done by our ambassador, Dwight Morrow, in the latter regard was given powerful aid by Obregon and his administration, which was to have been installed on December 1, would have carried it on to the utmost.

Obregon was shot to death at a banquet in the fashionable resort of San Angel, 12 miles south of Mexico City, by a young man who has been identified as Jose de Leon Teral, an art student. The assassin was arrested but refused to name his accomplices or the instigators of the crime. A score of suspects were taken in custody. Alberto Cruz was immediately supplanted as minister of police by General Zertuche, one of Obregon's closest friends, and both he and President Calles promised that the murder would be cleared up and those guilty punished. In a signed statement Calles said the assassin had admitted that the motive of his crime was religious fervor, and the president added that the authorities had obtained much information "implicating directly clerical action." In conclusion, Calles said: "Finally I want to announce that the government will continue as heretofore within constitutional paths and with the requisite calmness and energy." This was taken to mean that he would not attempt to continue in office after November, as the Mexican constitution forbids direct succession of the president in two terms in office. However, that constitution has been altered before to fit circumstances and may be changed again.

Despite the words of Calles, it is scarcely conceivable that the Catholic church in Mexico as an organization or any of its responsible members can have instigated the murder of General Obregon. The relations between the church and the government had been steadily improving, and Obregon, though pledged to carry on the policies of Calles, was looked to as the man to settle the trouble finally. The best guess at this time is that the assassination was prompted by political enemies of the president-elect who utilized a weak-minded religious fanatic.

Telegrams deploring the crime were sent by President Coolidge, Vice President Dawes and Secretary of State Kellogg. In Washington Ambassador Tolte, though terribly shocked, said he was certain the tragedy would bring about the unification of all men in his country, sweeping away the disturbing and reactionary elements. He expected the old congress would be called in session to prepare for a special election. The permanent commission of congress already had been summoned to meet to consider the political situation.

WHILE mourning Mexicans were taking the body of General Obregon to his native state of Sonora for burial, Americans were sending home, with all possible honors, the remains of Capt. Emilio Carranza, the Mexican "good will" flyer who was killed when his plane crashed in New Jersey during a storm. After it had lain in state in New York the body was conveyed to Mexico on a special funeral train that carried also the aviator's father, an American army guard of honor and Mexican officials. The smashed plane also was taken back. All along the route the passing of the train was watched by sorrowing crowds, and at many cities the major general's salute of 13 guns was fired.

WHOLESALE bolting from either the Republican or the Democratic national ticket does not seem to be getting much encouragement in the country. The most ambitious attempts to bring this about are being made in Texas. There the anti-Smith Democrats have organized with the avowed intention of getting all the Democrats they can to vote for Hoover, and they are led by several men who have been rather prominent in the party in that state. They are making no attempt to defeat the state Democratic ticket, which disappoints some of the smaller fry who are disaffected. On the other hand there is also in Texas a group of anti-Hoover Republicans who are throwing what influence they have to the Smith ticket. In Asheville Bishop Cannon of the Methodist church, South, gathered about 181 men and women to plan for the defeat of Smith in the Southern states. Nearly all the delegates were preachers of the Methodist church, South, or paid workers of church or prohibition agencies. Sixty-six were from Buncombe county, North Carolina, of which Asheville is the county seat. No Democratic party leaders were present, and it was noticeable that the Baptists held aloof, except for Dr. Arthur J. Barton, who was made chairman of the meeting. The press was excluded from the real sessions.

Leaders of farmers' organizations in the corn belt still hope they can induce the agriculturists to oppose Hoover, and their meeting in Des Moines adopted a series of resolutions condemning the farm relief plank in the Republican platform and commending the plank inserted in the Democratic platform. Most of those attending this meeting declared their intention of supporting Smith, but there is still little reason to believe that their stand will induce very many farmers to change their political affiliations next November. The Iowa Republicans, large numbers of whom are corn belt farmers, held their state convention last week and unanimously endorsed the Hoover and Curtis ticket and the Kansas City platform, including its farm relief plank. The state platform condemned Al Smith for "his attitude on nullification" of prohibition and alluded to "Tammany's effort to fasten itself upon the nation." Earlier in the day Governor Hammill of Iowa had had a talk with Herbert Hoover on the latter's train, and he told the convention something of what the farmers might expect from Hoover if he were elected President.

Governor McMullen of Nebraska also had a chat with Mr. Hoover and afterward said the candidate had a comprehensive understanding of the farm problem, but the governor did not seem to have been won over to Hoover's support.

President Coolidge was Hoover's host for a couple of days at the summer White House and they fished and talked politics together, after which Hoover resumed his trip to California. It was saddened by the news of the death of Mrs. Hoover's father, Charles D. Henry, in Placer, Calif.

GOVERNOR SMITH was busy as a bee in Albany with political conferences and picture makers. Among his callers was Congressman Byrnes of Tennessee, who assured him he would carry not only the solid South but also the border states. Al could see nothing to worry about in the stories of Democratic revolt in Texas or elsewhere. The report that Smith had selected Owen D. Young, chairman of the General Electric company and colleague of Dawes in the reparations work, to be the Democratic candidate to succeed him as governor was flatly denied on behalf of both the gentlemen.

SECRETARY KELLOGG'S anti-war treaty goes marching on toward complete victory. Last week it was accepted in principle by Great Britain and the dominions of Canada, Australia, New Zealand, Union of South Africa and by the Irish Free State and India. Acceptances also were received at Washington from Belgium, Poland and Czechoslovakia. All the answers, it was believed, would be found satisfactory by the American government. Approval had already been given the pact by Germany, France, Italy and other nations, and that of Japan was considered certain. If the various reservations of some of the governments, which are not radical, can be accepted, the final success of the great plan to outlaw war seems virtually assured. The treaty is to be signed during the coming fall by the principal powers and will go into effect with the deposit of the ratifications. It will remain open for signature by other nations.

PEACE between Poland and Lithuania is still an unaccomplished fact, and it is reported that Premier Waldemaras of Lithuania, relying on the support of Russia, is preparing to defy the League of Nations at the September meeting of the assembly or council of the League. The Poles have notified Sir Austen Chamberlain that they hold the League responsible for the existing state of affairs and demand full support in whatever measures they may deem necessary.

American members of the world court of arbitration at Geneva nominated Charles Evans Hughes for the vacancy created by the resignation of John Bassett Moore. Dr. Walter Simons is second choice for the place. Observers in Geneva were quite sure Mr. Hughes would be elected.

REPRESENTATIVES of France, England, Spain and Italy last week signed a new accord on Tangier which gives Spain full command of the gendarmerie in the international zone of that country. A special commission was created to watch for and suppress intrigues against the Spanish protectorate. Italy was given increased representation on the legislative body of the international zone and was also given representation on the courts and similar tribunals.

ALL doubt concerning the death of Capt. Alfred Loewenstein, Belgian financier, who disappeared from his airplane while crossing the English channel, was dispelled by the finding of his body near Cape Griz-Nez.

THE Jacksonville scale as a basis for wage negotiations in the bituminous fields has been abandoned by the United Mine Workers of America, according to the action of the policy committee of the union, and hereafter each of the districts has the right to effect settlement with operators "upon a basis mutually satisfactory." Action taken by district officers must be submitted to the miners of the district for ratification.

The policy committee also authorized all district organizations to permit any coal company or any mine to employ all the men it may require for maintenance, repairs, development, construction or production of coal providing the existing wage scale is paid temporarily until a district agreement is reached. The new policy is interpreted as a gesture by the union toward bettering the depressed conditions in the bituminous coal industry.

AMONG those claimed by death during the week were Giovanni Giolitti, Italian statesman and foe of Mussolini; D. C. Davies, director of the Field museum in Chicago; Henry R. Rathbone, congressman at large from Illinois, and William E. Harmon of New York, who as "Jedediah Tingle," had given large sums to unrecognized heroes, good children and deserving authors.

RECKLESSNESS in prohibition enforcement has again humiliated the American government. According to announcement by Secretary Kellogg, we have sent a note to the British government expressing regret and apology for the violation of the sovereignty of the Bahama Islands last September when Larry Christensen commanding a coast guard run-chasing boat, seized two boats off the Bahama coast, towed them into a Bahama port and then removed the liquor and prisoners to Miami. Mr. Kellogg promised that the coast guard would not again offend in that way, that the boats and liquor would be restored to their owners and that Christensen would be transferred to another part of the country.

Prohibition administrators held their annual conference with Commissioner Doran and other Treasury department officials in Washington. Among other topics considered was the increased use of airplanes in enforcing dry laws

Skeleton of Extinct Bird Found in Rocks

The prehistoric rocks of Wyoming have yielded up parts of the skeleton of a huge flightless bird that lived on this continent many hundreds of thousands of years ago. The fossils were found last summer, but their discovery was announced for the first time before the recent meeting of the American Philosophical society in Philadelphia by Prof. William J. Sinclair of Princeton university.

The bird was similar to other giant extinct birds found on this continent, but constitutes a new genus, which has been named omorhamphus. It had no wings, and was a ground dweller like the modern ostrich. Instead of the specialized clublike toes of the ostrich, however, it had more primitive feet with short curved claws. In some respects it resembled the moa of New Zealand, which became extinct during the memory of the native tribes of those islands—Kansas City Times.

There's a Difference

A young fellow who never has been known to go out of his way to take an airplane ride was told the other day that he was included in a "get off the earth" party to go up one afternoon with a visiting pilot at the Mars Hill airport.

"Well, I can't say that you seem particularly overwhelmed by the invitation," one of his companions remarked.

"Overwhelmed, yes," answered the young fellow, "but I don't think it is anything to get up in the air about."—Indianapolis News.
