Luck?

At times we point out friends as being lucky. But, after all, is not their luck the result of a well-planned scheme for the future; the consequence of having money laid aside with which to seize opportunities as they come

SHERIFF MOSLEY TELLS OF HOME-BREW LAW

I find that many good, law-abiding citizens are laboring under a misunderstanding about the "Home Brew" law.

Eminent law enforcement officers advise me that not only is the selling of home brew a violation of the law, but that it is unlawful for one to make it even for his own use, and that anyone who sells malt in bottles and caps, or other ingredients used in the making of such product, is also guilty of violating the liquor law.

Our merchants can be of inestimable help to the officers in suppressing this vicious crime and I earnestly request their cooperation. I am appealing to every citizen who believes in the extermination of the liquor business to lend us his assistance and moral support in our efforts toward that end.

Respectfully submitted,
M. W. Mosley.

METHODIST REVIVAL PLANS GO FORWARD

Everything is set for the beginning of the Methodist Revival on April 7, at 11 a. m. Rev Lloyd Jones and his wife, who are to assist the pastor in the meeting, indicate that they expect to be on hand for the very first service on Sunday morning.

Everything points to success.
The attendance at the Sunday school and at all the preaching services is splendid, and still on the increase.

Let every one make plans to give as much time as possible to the meeting.

APPRECIATION OF SUPT. R. L. SNIDER

Hedley, Texas, March 25, 1929
We, the Faculty of Hedley Public Schools, desire to take this means of expressing our appreciation of R. L. Snider, Supt.
of Schools for the past six years,
for the following outstanding reasons:

First, we appreciate Mr. Snider because he is a Christian gentle man in every way. His daily life and inspiring talks in chapel have not only aided the students but the faculty in general. When Mr.
Snider took over our school it was not affiliated. Today we have 18½ affiliated credits, and in addition to the work of supervision our Superintendent has taught five or six classes each year, and succeeded in affiliating our mathematics department in full. Mr. Snider is not only a school builder, for he has taken an active part in all community enterprises. For the past five years he has served as Director General of the Donley County Interscholastic League, doing much to build up the League, which will meet in our city this week. Above all do we as teachers appreciate Mr. Snider because of the support and backing he always gives his teachers in their undertakings to uplift and aid the youth of our land.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Hoover is Inaugurated and Sets His Program Before the American People.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

HERBERT HOOVER is now President of the United States of America and Calvin Coolidge is again a private citizen. Despite the wishes of Mr. Hoover that the inauguration be as simple as possible, the committee in charge made the event the gayest of its kind in more than a score of years and the national capital was thronged with visitors who participated in the three days' entertainment. The feature included a reception for the governors of a large number of states with their staffs, an air circus that enlisted army, navy and civilian aircraft, the great inaugural parade and a charity ball.

Being notified about 11:30 Monday morning by a committee from the senate and house that the time for his inauguration was at hand, Mr. Hoover, with President Coolidge, escorted by cavalry, rode down Pennsylvania avenue to the capitol and, in the senate chamber, saw Vice President Dawes swear in Senator Charles Curtis as Vice President. Mr. Curtis made a short address and the Presidential party went to the inaugural stand. There Mr. Hoover took the oath of office, administered by Chief Justice Taft of the Supreme court, and made his inaugural address. Thereafter the Presidential party betook themselves to the White House, ate luncheon and, from the reviewing stand in front of the executive mansion, watched the long inaugural parade which took about four hours in passing and over which hovered a hundred airplanes.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge, following the precedent set by Theodore Roosevelt, left Washington in the afternoon for their home in Northampton, Mass.

President Hoover's address was listened to with enthusiasm not only by the vast crowd present but also by a radio audience that embraced a considerable part of the country's population. It set forth his view of the state of the nation and of its relations with other nations and his conception of the policies best designed to promote peace and improve living conditions. But, more important, it disclosed an eminent engineer's vision of a huge program of public works in the next four years, involving the expenditure of billions of dollars, and of a farm relief program that, while costly, will, he believes, return tremendously increased profits for capital and labor. Offsetting the great expenditures suggested, the new President pointed the way to governmental economies beyond even those of the Coolidge administration. He proposed the elimination of waste in the processes of government to an extent that would save the taxpayers more than would be expended on waterways, farm relief and other projects combined. This would be accomplished by a radical reorganization of the federal government on scientific lines of reclassification of functions, elimination of overlapping, and eventual reduction of personnel.

CONGRESS in its final days cleared up some legislation and left some unfinished, killed or postponed. Filibusters were frequent and in some cases effective. They caused the senate to abandon the congressional re-appointment bill passed by the house and to consent to the continuation by a committee of affairs of the Indian bureau. The second deficiency supply bill, minus the $24,000,000 prohibition enforcement item, was passed by the senate after Senator Dill had conducted a filibuster on behalf of his demand that the appropriation for a survey of the Nicaragua canal route be cut in half. The senate also adopted the conference report on the naval appropriation bill after the radical group had made a hard fight, so $12,770,000 will be made available for starting work at once on the cruiser building program.

Despite the stubborn opposition of a group in the house, that body should have passed a measure, known as the Jones bill, which increases the maximum penalties for first offenders against the Volstead act. The proposed legislation for the deportation of alien gunmen failed because the senate conferees refused to accept certain provisions in the house bill, holding that they created unjustifiable inequities.

Efforts to postpone the national origins immigration restriction plan, which goes into effect July 1, also failed. The President transmitted to congress a revision of the national origins quotas which decreases the British quota from 65,894 to 65,721, and increases the German quota from 24,908 to 25,557, and the Irish from 17,427 to 17,853. Norway is reduced from 2,403 to 2,377, Sweden from 3,369 to 3,314, and Denmark from 1,284 to 1,181.

President Hoover may obtain the repeal of the revision plan at the extraordinary session of congress. He opposes it on technical grounds, holding the national origins figures cannot be accurate and that it is best to leave the quotas to the present census basis.

CONTRACTS for the sale and operation of the United States and American Merchant lines and the construction of two palatial liners by Paul W. Chapman & Co., Inc. of New York, were signed. The documents provide the necessary legal guarantees that the ships will remain under the American flag for a period of one year and maintain a regular schedule. Chapman takes over the operation of the eleven ships of the two lines, including the Leviathan, and will let contracts for the construction of two liners nearly as large as the Leviathan, but faster and more luxuriously appointed. They are to be speedier than any ships now built or building.

Chapman agreed to pay the shipping board $16,300,000 for the fleet and some shore property. Approximately half of this sum is to be paid at once. The shipping board agreed to loan the purchaser approximately $20,000,000 as three-fourths of the construction cost of the proposed new liners.

AIRMANSHIP of the highest order and cool nerve saved Colonel Lindbergh and his fiancée, Miss Anne Morrow, from serious injury or death down in Mexico City. The colonel and Anne had been on a little airplane ride in the course of which a landing wheel was lost. Lindy told the young lady they would upset on landing but not to be frightened, surrounded her with cushions, and flew about until the gasoline was exhausted, to avoid the possibility of explosion. He then came down to ground with the utmost care and skill. The plane upset, as he expected, and he sustained a dislocation of the shoulder, but Anne was unharmed. The colonel's injury was attended to at a hospital and he took Anne home in an automobile which he drove with his left hand. He declined to talk about the upset, insisting it was "not an accident, merely a mishap."

Showing that the "mishap" hadn't haunted them, Lindy and Anne made three short flights next day, the colonel handling the plane with one hand. George Haldeman, who was Ruth Elder's pilot on her attempted transatlantic flight, made a fine nonstop flight from Windsor, Ont., to Havana, Cuba, in 12 hours and 56 minutes. Joseph Lebriz, the French aviator, and two companions on an experimental mail plane flight from Paris to Saigon, Indo-China, crashed in the Gulf of Mataban, Lower Burma, when more than eight days out from Manila. The plane was destroyed but the aviators escaped serious injury. Walter Scherz, who was helmsman of the dirigible Los Angeles when it was brought over from Germany, and of the Graf Zeppelin on its round trip between Germany and the United States, died in Berlin from balloon gas poisoning.

BANKER members of the reparations commission last week discussed the possible issue of German war debt bonds. The prevailing view seemed to be that the issue should be for not more than a billion dollars and the term for amortization should be thirty to thirty-five years. It was thought one-quarter of the amount should be allotted to the United States and three-quarters to Europe, since Europe has the deepest interest in the settlement. The settlement plan devised by Sir Josiah Stamp's sub-committee provides for the division of the annuities that Germany is to pay annually into two parts. The first and the larger portion Germany must pay unconditionally, but the balance she may delay discharging if the payment would endanger the exchange rate and threaten again to depreciate the mark.

This provision was necessary because when the plan to revise the Dawes plan was agreed on, the original transfer committee which safeguarded the German finances was automatically dissolved, and the Berlin representatives insisted that they need this protective organ if they are expected to pay anything like what the allies demand.

HOLLAND, and in lesser degree the rest of Europe, was interested in the publication in a Utrecht newspaper of documents disclosing an alleged secret military agreement between France and Belgium. Dr. J. Londen, Dutch minister to France, demanded an explanation, and the French foreign office asserted the treaty and its interpretation as printed in the paper were falsehoods. Belgium's foreign minister made a similar denial. The Belgian chamber of deputies decided that if any Belgian minister had signed the alleged treaty, he should be prosecuted in the courts. The editor of the Utrecht paper declared the source from which he secured the documents was "absolutely above suspicion"; that they are the minutes of a meeting of military experts, signed and officially sealed and include the text of the Franco-Belgian treaty.

LEON TROTSKY, the exiled Bolshevik, is said to be in an advanced stage of tuberculosis, and his friends have been trying to arrange for his removal from Turkey to some more beneficial climate. Those in Germany have prepared for him a cottage in the outskirts of Berlin where he and his wife can live in simple comfort if the German government consents.

HURRICANES swept across several sections of the Middle South last week, killing nearly two score persons, injuring many others and doing considerable property damage. The regions hardest hit were in Mississippi, Arkansas and northeast Texas. In Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa there were blizzards that interrupted transportation; in Ohio, Missouri and southern Illinois there were threatening floods; and the region about Los Angeles was hit by a destructive gale.

JACK SHARKEY of Boston outpointed young W. L. Stribling of Georgia in the much ballyhooed heavyweight fight in Miami Beach and was given the decision by Referee Magnolia after ten rounds of rather unexciting battling. The Southerner, younger, lighter and less experienced than his opponent, had rather the best of the earlier rounds, but Sharkey, generally avoiding Stribling's really formidable right, wore him down with body blows and fairly won the decision. Both fighters were brave enough and showed considerable skill, but the sports writers present agreed that neither gave promise of being championship material. Thirty-five thousand men and women paid $400,000 to see the fight. Sharkey's guaranteed share was $100,000, and Stribling received $60,000.

POLICE officials of Havana uncovered a plot to assassinate President Machado of Cuba, overthrow the government and force military intervention by the United States. Seventy-three persons were charged with complicity and some of them were arrested. Among those still at large was Gustavo Machado y Morales, a cousin of the President. American secret service operatives were said to have been in Havana helping investigate the plot.

REV. DR. NEWELL DWIGHT HILLIS, pastor of Plymouth church, Brooklyn, one of the most noted pulpit orators of the times, died in his home in Bronxville, N. Y. He was born in Iowa 70 years ago and first won fame as a preacher in Chicago and Bramton, Ill.

FINE WOOLENS FOR FINE FROCKS; PIPINGS ENLIVEN STRAW HATS

A Fetching Two-Piece Frock.

"ALL wool and a yard wide" is still the slogan for the superfine wooleens of which many of milady's choicest frocks are now styled, but, technically speaking, it is no longer correct. Perhaps all wool and weighing five ounces or less to the yard more accurately describes many of the very modern woollen weaves, for some of the newer wooleens are quite that exquisitely sheer and lightsome.

As a matter of fact, wooleens as now are vary from twenty-seven to fifty-four inches in width. Challis and flannels, for instance, are frequently but twenty-seven inches wide, while navolaine, a material very much like challis, measures fifty-four inches in width.

Now that Paris is sponsoring wool frocks so enthusiastically and American woollen weavers are putting a style value on their products to the extent that they are planning to stage in the very near future a competitive display of their products in an exhibit which very appropriately is referred to as "Pageant of the Golden Fleece," we are waking up to the virtues of the woollen frock as well as to its prestige among fashion connoisseurs.

Verily little Bo-Peep's sheep would never recognize their lost coats in the wondrous fabrics man, the miracle worker, has fashioned from them. Prints are as beguiling and as popular as they are in silks and cottons. The new wooleens with borders in a deep shade of the same color or in sharp contrast are also very beautiful. Metallic effects with the metal motifs woven into the cloth, the backs presenting a surface of gold or silver are something at which to marvel. Then there are canny stripes, two-tone stripes, and stripes almost invisible, also tweeds, jerseys, and still the list goes on and on ad infinitum.

The fetching two-piece frock of featherweight flannel in a sports model, shown in the picture, emphasizes the vogue for contrast of print and plain. The jumper is of beige flannel printed ness that the new wooleens are created from the standpoint of ensemble effects, making it easy to match plain with prints so far as basic color is concerned.

Welcome to the straw hat! It has arrived according to promise. This time there is no uncertainty, which cannot be said of seasons past when felts succeeded in holding the fort against the incoming of straws.

The new straw hats are everything they should be for early spring wear. Just tailored enough to please the most discriminating, just enough of the daintily feminine to appeal to those who seek the most flattering. Straws have taken their cue from felts and are glorifying color all along the line. In fact they have borrowed the very selfsame smart shades which contribute so notably to the success of the felt hat. A smooth linenlike straw in charcoal green is indeed winsome. No more so than a bright red bangkok or ballbunt, however. Straws are irresistible in the bright blues. The three leaders are easily distinguished in black, navy and natural.

Concerning straws in natural color they promise to be the rage. With frequent pipings they are at their best. The softness of such straws as slat, bakou, ballbunt, bangkok, and other exotic types makes it possible to treat them like fabric or felt. Wherefore the new straws are very much seamed and lined in sections and similar treatments, and for this reason they invite neat finishings such as pipings in contrast colorings afford.

In the brilliant program mapped out for straws this season the first num-

Straw Hats for Spring

in a design repeating the bright navy of the skirt. Diagonal bands of the navy pose across the front of the blouse, also belting, cuffing and collaring it.

Early showings include fetching cape assembles which interwork sheer printed wooleens and solid-tone woollen georgette. Those appearing for early spring favor tiny repeat patterns which remind one of the popular cravat silks.

In the developing of these arresting costumes, much attention is paid to color harmony. While the print may involve any number of colors its background accurately matches the solid tone with which it is bers are smartly tailored after the manner of those pictured in this group. A contrasting piping of navy group soft straw alone to the natural colored at the side is lined with the navy.

More and more brims show a tendency to turn off the face. The model to the left is typical of the new trend adaptable to manipulation are the new soft straws.

Several leading French modistes are trimming straw with velvet. The picture shows a delicate straw hat with a velvet and a

John's Mother Praises Doctor

There isn't a mother living who won't agree that no half-sick child should be the subject for an experiment with medicines of uncertain merit. When your child is bilious, head-achy, half-sick, feverish, restless, with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy, you know that nine times out of ten it's a sign his little stomach and bowels need purging. And when you know that for over fifty years leading physicians have endorsed one preparation for this condition, there doesn't seem to be any reason for "trying" things.

Rich, fruity California Fig Syrup clears the little stomach and bowels gently, harmlessly and in a hurry. It regulates the bowels, gives tone and strength to them and to the stomach; and helps to give your child new strength, energy and vitality. Thousands of Western mothers praise it. Mrs. Joseph W. Hill, 4306 Bedford Ave., Omaha, Nebraska, says: "I'll never forget the doctor who got me to give my baby boy, John, California Fig Syrup. Nothing else seemed to help his weak bowels. That was when he was just a baby. He suffered a good deal before I gave him Fig Syrup, but it stopped his trouble quick. I have used it with him for colds and little upset spells ever since. I consider him a Fig Syrup boy."

Insist on the genuine article. See that the carton bears the word "California." Over four million bottles used a year.

INSTEAD of exercise

Too busy for exercises or games? Don't worry! Learn the simple secret, millions know—of the exerciser in the vest-pocket box for a dime!

Cascarets give your bowels as much exercise as they get from an hour with the punching bag. Oils, salts and ordinary laxatives don't act like Cascarets. These things only produce mechanical or chemical action. You have to keep taking them because they weaken your bowels.

Cascarets strengthen the bowels. They are made from Cascara Sagrada, which stimulates the peristaltic action and exercises the bowel muscles. Nothing else does this. That's why Cascarets give lasting relief from those symptoms of sluggish bowels, such as headaches, biliousness, bloating, sallow skin, indigestion, no appetite, etc. Sales of over 20 million boxes yearly prove their merit!

Mental pictures every car buyer should have

SOME DAY you will consider buying a new car.

Keep in mind these pictures made from photographs of scenes at General Motors' 1268-acre Proving Ground. A car wallowing in a sunken road with water over the hubs... a car bucking a long stretch of cruel bumps and potholes... a car straining to reach the top of a heart-breaking hill... a car doing twists and turns and other acrobatics that few cars are ever called upon to do.

Such are the tests given advance models of a General Motors car at the Proving Ground. The tests involve speed, power, endurance, braking, riding comfort, handling ease; fuel, oil and tire economy, body strength—every phase of car construction and performance. When every test has been met, the factory goes ahead and builds your car like these proved models.

Keep these pictures in your mind. They will come in handy next time you are buying a car.

Rough going on a Proving Ground road, made had to test various parts of General Motors cars under hardest possible conditions.

A scientific "bath tub"—not to wash cars, but to show the Proving Ground engineers exactly what happens when a car is driven through water.

Very seldom are hills as steep as this. The average grade of highway hills is seven per cent. This hill is 25 per cent and a car must be good to make it.

On this four-mile test track the engineers can run a car night and day, at any speed, to learn just how it stands the pace.

Mrs. John Durum Says
Could Write All Day and Not Say Enough Good About Milks Emulsion

"Have been thinking for some time of writing you in regard to Milks Emulsion.

"When I wrote you last fall I was very much discouraged. Doctors had told me for five years that I had T. B. Five doctors told me last fall that I was in advanced stages of T. B.

"I have taken your wonderful medicine all winter. Sometimes I would neglect taking it every hour, but would take several doses a day, and this is the first winter for seven years that I haven't spent most of the winter in bed. I haven't been in bed since this winter, and for two years I had been so sore across my abdomen I couldn't bear to press on it. That is all gone. I do all of my housework now except washing; weight 117 pounds, and feel fine.

"I can't praise your Emulsion enough. I tell every one I talk to what it has done for me and feel ashamed if I neglect it sometimes when I know what it has done for me and what it means for me.

"I could write all day and could never write enough good words about Milks Emulsion." Yours truly, Mrs. John Durum, 451 W. Green St., Frankfort, Ind.

Drink Water If Back or Kidneys Hurt

Begin Taking Salts if You Feel Backache or Have Bladder Weakness

Too much rich food forms acids which excite and overwork the kidneys in their efforts to filter it from the system. Flush the kidneys occasionally to relieve them like you relieve the bowels, removing acids, waste and poison, else you may feel a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, the stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get irritated, obliging one to get up two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids and flush off the body's urinous waste, begin drinking water. Also get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine and bladder disorders disappear.

This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys and stop bladder irritation. Jad Salts is inexpensive and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to help prevent serious kidney and bladder disorders. By all means, drink lots of good water every day.

First Aid—Home Remedy Week

The Good Samaritan figures in the 1929 "First Aid—Home Remedy Week" and is designated as the "First First Aid." This annual merchandising festival arrives with St. Patrick's Day, continues March 17-23 and marks the eighth anniversary of the plan dedicated to Druggom by Sterling Products, Incorporated, in 1922 and immediately sponsored by the National Association of Retail Druggists. Seeing the great advertising and sales possibilities in the plan and its helpfulness to humanity, the National Wholesale Druggists' Association has swung behind it with the enthusiastic suggestion that druggists use local newspapers, and providing them with suggestive advertising copy tied to the National slogan, "Fill That Medicine Chest Now!"

Coming at a time when housewives are thinking of house cleaning, the command has added psychological sales value. Secretary S. C. Henry of the N. A. R. D., out of long experience says: "No one knows better than the average retail druggist how much needless suffering there is because most people are neglectful in the matter of making provision for the hour of need which is sure to come when sudden illness or unforeseen accident calls for immediate attention."

"Quick Relief Insurance" is the new definition of First Aid—Home Remedy Week's objective, and is thus bringing the nation's "Health Service Stations" into closer every day life.

A romance in a novel amounts to a scandal in real life.

Are You Ready

When your Children Cry for It

Baby has little upsets at times. All your care cannot prevent them. But you can be prepared. Then you can do what any experienced nurse would do—what most physicians would tell you to do—give a few drops of plain Castoria. No sooner done than Baby is soothed; relief is just a matter of moments. Yet you have eased your child without use of a single doubtful drug; Castoria is vegetable. So it's safe to use as often as an infant has any little pain you cannot put away. And it's always ready for the crueler pangs of colic, or constipation or diarrhea; effective, too, for older children. Twenty-five million bottles were bought last year.

When Tombstone, Ariz. was "Helldorado"

BY ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ON JANUARY 13, press dispatches from Los Angeles carried the news that "Wyatt Earp, seventy-eight, gun-toting peace officer of Dodge City, Kan., and Tombstone, Ariz., in frontier days, whose colorful career led him through a dozen fatal conflicts with 'bad men' of the Old West, died here today." That brief announcement recalled for a moment a real "Wild West" period in American history, when there took place events in which the bare chronicles of fact reads like the fervent and exaggerated fiction of the dime novelist. And the story of those times seems all the more remarkable when one realizes that they were less than fifty years ago and that there are many men still living who had a part in the stirring events of what now seems like a far-off and dimly-remembered era.

Of course, the number of such men is being rapidly reduced and the galaxy of real "frontier notables" is now so small that they can almost be counted on the fingers of one hand. But to the counting there is one name which stands out prominently. That is the name of Col. William Breakenridge, a contemporary of Wyatt Earp in the Tombstone (Ariz.) episode of the real Wild West period, and the passing of Wyatt Earp only serves to emphasize the importance of "Colonel Billy" as the sole remaining figure of outstanding prominence in that episode. Not only was he important as an actor in the drama of those stirring days in Arizona, but he is even more important as a chronicler of those days. Fortunately for the future historian the story of Tombstone has been set down by one who was there in the heyday of that lively place. If the old Nevada mining town was famous as "b-a-d, b-a-d Bodie" and the old Kansas cow town was known far and wide as "wicked Dodge," what would be the most appropriate nickname for this Arizona cow-and-mining town of Tombstone whose record was in some respects even more sensational than either of the others? Perhaps the name of "Colonel Billy's" book, which was recently published by the Houghton Mifflin company, is the best answer. It is "Helldorado" with the subtitle of "Bringing the Law to the Mesquite."

If "Helldorado" were the chronicle of Breakenridge's career as a deputy sheriff in Tombstone only, it would be interesting and exciting enough. But it is the record of his life for more than half a century in the West and to read "Helldorado" is to call the roll of a long list of famous frontier names. For the saga of "Colonel Billy" began during the second year of the Civil war when he ran away from his home in Wisconsin (he was then twelve years old) to work in the quartermaster's department of the Union army and soon afterwards found himself engaged in freighting supplies for the army in Missouri. After a few months of that we next find him crossing the plains to Denver with a freighting outfit and on this trip he made acquaintance with the first of the "frontier notables" he was to know.

"When we reached Jack Morrow's ranch at the mouth of the North Platte river," writes Breakenridge, "I saw Bill Cody, or 'Buffalo Bill' for the first time. I thought he was the handsomest man I had ever seen." After several trips across the plains Breakenridge enlisted in the Third Colorado cavalry which was called to service by Gov. John Evans of Colorado to take the field against the Indians who had been committing depredations on the isolated ranches and among the immigrants coming into the country. As a member of this outfit young Billy met some more "frontier notables," chief of whom were Old Jim Beckworth, the famous mulatto who became a chief among the Crow Indians, and Antoine Dennis, who served as guide for the regiment which was commanded by Colonel Chivington. "They taught me a lot about scouting and the ways and habits of Indians," says Breakenridge.

Considering the controversy which has raged for years over the battle of Sand Creek when Colonel Chivington surprised and decimated the camp of Chief Black Kettle of the Cheyennes, it is rather remarkable that Breakenridge dismisses his part in this famous engagement with a few brief paragraphs. Perhaps the fact that he has other and more stirring events to write about accounts for that. For the next few years he was busy as a government freighter between army posts in Wyoming, Colorado and Nebraska and having many narrow escapes from death at the hands of the Indians. Next he became a builder of railroads, working for his brother who had the contract for building the roadbed of the Union Pacific which was then pushing west through Wyoming and he was present on the historic occasion when the Central Pacific and the Union Pacific lines met at Promontory, Utah, on May 10, 1869 and the golden spike was driven to signalize the completion of the first transcontinental railroad.

being built from Denver to Colorado Springs. It is also interesting to note that at one time he was a "tourist driver" in Colorado Springs. And one of the passengers whom he drove from Colorado Springs to Manitou was a "good looking young stranger who began to tell me what a wonderful man his father was, how many railroads he owned, what fine horses he had. 'By the way, I said, 'who is your father?' He spoke up with a good deal of emphasis, 'Cornelius Vanderbilt.' I told him I had never heard of him, and the more the young fellow tried to tell me who he was, the denser I got, till at last he realized that I was kidding him."

Eventually he got a job with a freighting outfit which took him down into Arizona and there in 1873 the career which was to make him famous began. After working for a time as a freighter and surveyor he finally landed in Phoenix, then a small village, and soon afterward was appointed a deputy sheriff. His first job was to arrest a murderer, which he did without any trouble, and the sheriff and his deputy were out of town "a number of citizens met at the mill and formed a vigilance committee. About ten o'clock that morning the committee went to the cotton-wood tree in front of the mill and took two lumber wagons, placed a board across the wagon box at the rear end and had the murderers stand on the board with the nooses around their necks and the other end of the rope fastened to the limb of the cottonwood tree. The first man to be hanged either fainted or the noose was too tight. He sank down on the rope and as there was very little slack, his neck was not broken; he just strangled. The other man, just as the team started to drive from under him, jumped as high as he could and his neck was broken. Everything was very quiet when some one in the crowd spoke up, 'Why the son-of-a-gun must be hanged before; he knew just how to do it!'

In 1879 Breakenridge arrived in Tombstone and spent an unsuccessful season as a prospector. Of Tombstone at that time he writes:

The interesting period in Tombstone was during the fall of 1878 and the early eighties. In those few years Tombstone was born a mining town, lived a mining town and died a mining town. Like all mining towns in their beginning, money came easy and went easy, all kinds of men and women flocked there and it was soon a lively camp.

It is claimed by many that Alfred Henry Lewis, who was in Tombstone in later days getting material for his story "Wolfville," placed Wolfville at Tombstone and Red Dog at Charleston.

The rich Tombstone mines brought bad men from all parts of the West into the valleys of the San Simon, Sulphur Spring, and San Pedro rivers, where stage robbers, outlaws and cattle thieves found refuge, but for all of that, Tombstone was an orderly, law-abiding town. What little killing was done there was done among the lawless element themselves. This element was very much in the minority and during the five years I lived there I never heard of a house being robbed or anyone being held up in the city, and it was perfectly safe for any lady or gentleman to pass along the streets day or night without being molested.

Despite this picture of a peaceful village, as painted by Colonel Billy, which contrasts so favorably with the conditions in some of the larger cities of the present day, the fact still remains that when the lawless element did do a bit of killing among themselves Tombstone was far from a quiet place. For when "Colonel Billy" went to that town he could stroll down the main street in it and pass no less than forty men who had the right to cut one or more notches on the following. Conspicuous among them were the following: Bat Masterson, Doc Holliday, the Earp history; Bat Masterson, Doc Holliday, and Warren—had won their spurs as "bad men to fool with" in the roaring days of Dodge City), John Ringo, Dave Nagle, Billy Clayburn, Charlie Storms, Frank Leslie and Dick Lloyd.

In addition to the gunmen, most of whom were gamblers, the country was full of rustlers and stage robbers, and when young Billy Breakenridge was appointed a deputy sheriff by Sheriff John Behan he found that the business of "bringing the law to the mesquite" was one which offered innumerable chances for sudden death for those who attempted the job. But if ever there was a man fitted for that job, it was young Billy Breakenridge, and the record which he made as a peace officer is one of the most remarkable in frontier history. He did not make it with a blasting six-shooter, for that was not his way. He "got his man" invariably, but he did it by peaceable means. Take the case of the man who stabbed and killed Johnny LeBar, after Johnny had refused to sell him another drink and ordered him out of his saloon. Deputy Breakenridge was sent to bring in the murderer. "Better take a posse," they told him. "Shucks, no!" replied Billy, for as he explains in his book, "I never liked to take a posse with me—most always I can handle things better myself." So he set out alone, found the murderer and told him he'd better come along. When the man failed to see it that way, Billy argued with him that it wasn't much good to wait and be chased all over the country and maybe die of starvation out on the desert. So the murderer walked peacefully to jail and Deputy Billy "got another man" with no gunplay.

Then there was the time when he was sent to collect the taxes on the personal property in the valleys and mountains east of Tombstone. This was in the very heart of the outlaws' country and it was easy to guess that the rustlers, stage-robbers and others "outside the law" would not care particularly for paying taxes to support the law which they consistently defied. But "Billy Breakenridge's way" was to go straightway to Curly Hill, the most notorious outlaw in that section of the country.

I told him I wanted to hire him to go with me as a deputy assessor and help me collect the taxes, as I was afraid I might be held up and my tax money taken from me if I went alone. The idea of my asking the chief of all the cattle rustlers in that part of the country to help me collect taxes from them struck him as a good joke. He thought it over for a few moments and then, laughing, said: "Yes, and we will make every one of these blank blank cow thieves pay his taxes."

Next day we started and he led me into a lot of blind canyons and hiding places where the rustlers had a lot of stolen Mexican cattle, and introduced me something like this:

"Boys, this is the county assessor, and I am his deputy. We are all good, law-abiding citizens here and we cannot run the country without we pay taxes."

He knew about how many cattle they each had, and if they demurred, or claimed they had no money, he made them give me an order on their banker Turner. Curly had many a hearty laugh about it. He told them that if any of them should get arrested, it would be a good thing for them to show that they were taxpayers in the county.

The result was that Breakenridge and his "deputy" collected nearly a thousand dollars in tax money with which Breakenridge arrived safely in Tombstone and he confessed that he was "much relieved when I did so."

OLD FOLKS SAY DR. CALDWELL WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

He treated constipation, biliousness, headaches, mental depression, indigestion, sour stomach and other indispositions entirely by means of simple vegetable laxatives, herbs and roots. These are still the basis of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, a combination ofenna and other mild herbs, with pepsin.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

HARDLY A WELL DAY IN TEN YEARS

Amarillo Man Says Wife Feels Fine After Taking Two Bottles of Orgatone

"My wife has been ill for about ten years with stomach and liver trouble," said G. H. Griffin of 2301 B W Sixth, Amarillo, Texas while talking with the Orgatone representative.

"Doctors told us that she had a dead liver. She always felt tired, sluggish and worn out and didn't have any energy or feel like doing anything. She would have bloating spells which would affect her heart. What little food she ate soured on her stomach and made her miserable for hours afterward. She had a bad case of constipation and suffered with headaches. She was always tired and felt like she had done a big day's work when she didn't do much of anything.

"We saw Orgatone advertised so highly and heard so many people talking about it we decided that it was the medicine for her, and it has proven so in her case. Her stomach and liver trouble is a thing of the past now and she isn't bothered with those awful bloating spells. She has more strength and energy than she has had in several years.
She feels better during the day and now is able to do part of her work and is getting stronger every day. We both think that Orgatone is wonderful, as it has proven so in my wife's case, and I am glad to recommend it."

Genuine Orgatone may be obtained in Hedley by the Wilson

FORD MOTOR COMPANY
Dallas, Texas.

Attention: Mr. W. C. Proctor.

Gentlemen:

We are mailing you today, under separate cover, photographs of the Montgomery Ward car which they are using for testing Riverside tires. At the time this picture was taken, the car had been 105,000 miles and is still in the best of running condition and appears to be good for more than another 100,000 miles. The morning the picture was made, we washed the car for the first time since delivery; to look at it, drive it and hear the motor run, you would think it had been no more than 15,000 miles.

It was purchased in Mansfield, Ohio, during May, 1928. The driver states that he is using on an average of about two quarts of oil each 500 miles each day. It is driven 250 miles during the day by one driver and the same distance at night by another. They are using the second battery however. The manager of these test cars states the switch was left on over night, which he thinks is possibly the reason for having to purchase a new battery. They are changing oil every 1000 miles; the same fan belt is being used and doesn't look worn. They have given the car a general greasing every 1750 miles and up to the first 100,000 miles had spent a little less than $150 on repairs, etc. The rear axle has never been down; they have used two sets of brake linings, one set of pistons and rings, replaced clutch once, and have only used one extra hose connection.

The original speedometer was replaced by us yesterday, as it had registered 109,450 miles. It was reset correctly at the end of 100,000 miles but later began to skip or lose from twenty to twenty-five miles each day. The car has been driven at an average of forty miles an hour. The wheels are still tight and running true, and bearings have never been replaced. We have been unable to secure information as to how many miles the tires have been averaging.

We have permission from the Riverside Tire Company to use the picture and also the above information as an advertising feature if so desired.

Yours very truly,
HUBB DIGGS COMPANY,
By D. V. Brooks, Manager.

"We're not hurt bad," Harris said. "The boys held them bunched in good shape."

A hatred of Slade was growing with in her. Here, too, was a case where no other would benefit by the senseless stampede. If the beef herd could be broken up it would cause a delay to round it up in a strange range with the certainty of many cows being missed—a case of weakening the Three Bar.

She had been so absorbed in learning the details of the new work as related at its progress, that she had come to believe in its ultimate success. And they had been unmoored for so long a time. Then had come the wanton slaughter of Three Bar bulls and now the stampede of the trail herd. It was conclusive proof that Slade had abandoned his former wearing-out process as too slow and was out to crush the Three Bar in the speediest possible way through any available means.

Harris, too, was pondering over Slade's change of tactics. He felt assured that Slade's own men had not participated in starting the run. Slade would not let any considerable number of his boys know that such a thing. Some of Lang's men had undoubtedly been hired to stampede the Three Bar herd.

"The very fact that Slade is so bold with it is proof that he sees the necessity of crowding us fast," Harris said. "If we get too big a start he's bound up—and he must find anything to work on but plowed ground. He's now to worry us at odd ends. We can expect a steady run. I misjudge now, for he'll work fast—but we'll win out in the end."

She needed a little wearily for she knew that with Slade throwing all his forces against her the Three Bar would be hard pressed. In addition to this worry her mind was concerned with the fireless horse she had seen as she rode away from the wagon, the hundred acres awarded in the last Every Three Bar rider was a friend and she hesitated to hear which one of her men had gone down in the raid.

"Who was it?" she asked at last and Harris divined that she was, hark back to the fallen night guard who had tried to head the raiders alone.

"I've been trying not to think about that," he said. "Lanky was a good pal of mine. I saw him go down, but I couldn't stop right then."

This backfire rumor had established a definite line with fifteen men out side, conspicuous and alone, and those who had once followed the hazy middle ground of semi-lawlessness with perfect security now hastened to become solid citizens whose every act would stand the light; for the whippers seemed all embracing and it was intimated that new names would be added to the original list to include those who fraternized with the ones outside the pale.

Those not branded by this alleged bounty system were quick to grasp the beautiful simplicity of it all. Some recalled that a similar rumor, supposed to have originated with old Con Hittine, had wiped out the wild bunch that preyed on the Nations' cow trail—that the Gallatin clean-up had resulted from a like report which Al Moody was reported to have launched.

It had the effect of causing the men so branded to clew all others with suspicion, as possible aspirants out to collect the bounty on their heads. The reference to the fast saddle horse was guaranteed that no questions would be asked before the price was paid and no questions answered after the recipient had ridden away from the Three Bar with his spoils.

Yet, if the thing were true, it was the most flagrant violation of the law ever launched, even in the Cripple Creek where transgression was the rule. For the branded men were not wanted on any charge. It was merely the wholesale passing of rewards for the lives of some fifteen citizens whose standing in the community was equal to the same as the rest—prize money offered by an individual concern for its enemies without reference to the law. On every possible occasion Harris

"He was the head of the gang," she said. "The worst of the lot."

"And for that reason he was able to hold them down," Harris explained. "It was some of the outfit from over in the Breaks that stampeded us. Slade wouldn't let his own boys know that much about him, so he'd hire Lang. Harper had brains. He wouldn't have gone in for that. Lang was thrown in against us. He's all bulk and no brains and as savage as an Apache buck. He'll hang himself in the end but in the interim he may land us considerable grief."

CHAPTER X

All through the range and as far south as the railroad it was current gossip that the Three Bar would pay a thousand dollars reward for each of fifteen men, a fast saddle horse thrown in and no questions asked. The men were named, and if the rumor was based on truth it was virtually placing a bounty on the scalps of certain men the same as the state paid bounty on the scalps of wolves—except that it was without the sanction of the law.

This backfire rumor had established a definite line with fifteen men out side, conspicuous and alone, and those who had once followed the hazy middle ground of semi-lawlessness with perfect security now hastened to become solid citizens whose every act would stand the light; for the whippers seemed all embracing and it was intimated that new names would be added to the original list to include those who fraternized with the ones outside the pale.

City People Neglect Places of Interest

"Ninety per cent of New York's residents have never seen the sights which most interest visitors from other places," declares the editor of Farm and Fireside.

"Figures show that out-of-town visitors who go to the top of the Woolworth tower are hugely in the majority, less than 10 per cent being New Yorkers," the article continues. A test was made by the editor while entertaining a group of farm boys and girls from Maine and Illinois. They all voted preponderantly that the panorama as seen from the top of the tallest building in the world was the most impressive sight they had seen in a tour of many cities awarded them as champion grain growers or stock raisers by various farm clubs. Caretakers of other historic points in New York flatly denied that there was a shred of truth in the report. But these very natural denials had served only to strengthen men's belief in the truth of the report; and inevitably they had established a hard line that cut off the men so named from the rest of the countryside.

Harris knew that his own life was forfeit any time he chanced to ride alone. He had not a doubt but that Slade had put a price on his head and that perhaps a dozen men were patiently waiting for a chance at him. Any man whose name appeared on the black list which he was supposed to have sponsored would overlook no opportunity to retaliate in kind. In addition to this there was always the chance of a swift raid on the men who had filed their homestead rights in the valley.

As a consequence Harris had taken every possible precaution. The full force of Three Bar hands had been kept on the pay roll instead of being let off immediately after the beef was shipped. These riders were stationed in the camps out on the range, their ostensible purpose being to hold all Three Bar cows close to the home ranch but in reality they served two ends acting as a cordon of guards as well.

Three times in as many weeks strangers drifting in from other localities stopped in Coldriver and profanely reported the fact that for no reason whatever, while passing through the Three Bar range, they had been held up and forced to state their business in that neighborhood.

Hostilities had ceased. The Three Bar girl had anticipated a series of raids against the cows wearing her brand, swift forays in isolated points of her range, but no stock losses were reported. On the surface it appeared that Slade had given up all thought of harassing the Three Bar, but the girl had come to know Slade. He would never recede from his former stand. She noted that Harris' vigilance was never for an instant relaxed and it was gradually impressed upon her that the cessation of petty annoyances held more of menace than of assurance. Slade had seen that the Three Bar was not to be discouraged in its course and he now waited for an opportunity to launch a blow that would cripple, striking simultaneously at every exposed point and delaying only for a propitious time. In the face of continued immunity she was filled with a growing conviction of his pending trouble.

Christmas had found the range covered with a fresh tracking snow which precluded possibility of a raid and all hands had been summoned to the home ranch for a two-day rest. The frolic was over and the hands back on the range. Harris sat with Billie before her fire.

"They'll be satisfied for another two months," he said. "Then we'll have to call them in for another spree."

This evening conference before the fire had come to be a nightly occurrence. Together they went over the details of the work accomplished during the day and mapped out those for the next.

"Another two months and the cabins will be roofed and finished," Harris said. "Then we'll be through till the frost is out of the ground. We'll start building fence as soon as you can sink a post hole; and we'll have time to break out another two hundred acres of ground before time to seed it down."

The girl nodded without comment, content to leave him to his thoughts, her mind pleasantly occupied with her own. For long her evenings had been lonely but now she had come to look forward to the conferences before the blazing logs. She had made no attempt to analyze the reasons for the new contentment which had transformed her evenings, formerly periods of drab reflections, into the most pleasant portion of each day.

The weekly letters still came from Deane. The girl valued Harris as a friend and partner without apparent trace of more intimate regard. He wondered which would prevail, the ties which bound her to the life she had always known or the lure of the new life which beckoned.

Setback for Convicts

Convicts in Louisiana state prison institutions once more will don the telltale striped uniform after having gone without the characteristic prison garment for more than ten years. The restoration of the striped suit was ordered by Gov. Huey P. Long, who was influenced by the recent killing of Herman Baker in a robbery in New Orleans. Baker, shot to death while robbing an aged storekeeper, was a "furloughed" convict and had been at liberty several weeks. The governor also ordered all "furloughs" discontinued unless ordered by his office.

Both Sexes Succumb to Lure of Mirrors

New Yorkers are noted for collecting and watching anything unusual, and particularly anything used. Excavations for buildings, subways or sewers are favorite attractions.
It was quite inconceivable, though, why such a mob clustered about the window of a little shop in a side street that otherwise was almost depopulated.
The window, it was discovered, contained nothing but mirrors—big mirrors, little mirrors, artistic mirrors, funny mirrors.
The spectators were coeds, and the women did not outnumber the men, either. Girls were flourishing lipsticks and rouge, men were adjusting ties and studying different expressions of their faces. One man was very plainly flirting—through a pretty mirror in the center of the window—with a pretty girl at the other end of the window.—New York Sun.

COUNTY SCHOOL MEET POSTPONED ONE WEEK

The Donley County Interscholastic League meet which was to have been held in Hedley Friday and Saturday of this week, has, on account of bad weather, been postponed until Friday and Saturday, April 5 and 6.

METHODISTS PLAN BIG EASTER SUNDAY PROGRAM

We expect to go over the 150 goal in actual attendance. We hope that every member of the church and Sunday school, together with every one who prefers the Methodist Sunday school but are not regular attendants, will make an honest effort to be present, on time, at 9:45, for the beginning of the program.

SIDNEY BEACH

Sidney K. Beach was born at Hereford, Texas, Jan. 6, 1902; died March 20, 1929, in an Amarillo hospital following an operation for appendicitis.

Funeral services were held at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Beach, Friday at 2:30 p. m., conducted by Rev. C. B. Brooks of Hedley and Rev. S. R. McClung of Clarendon. Burial in Rowe Cemetery.

Sidney Beach had lived in Hedley since 1913. In the summer of 1925 he was married to Miss Elizabeth Bowlin. To them were born two children: a daughter who died in infancy, and a son now about seven months old.

We doubt if Sidney ever had an enemy. He was intelligent and capable, quiet and unassuming, courteous, pleasant always, and well nigh perfect in deportment. In fact, he was as fine a specimen of ideal young manhood as this writer ever met. He was of the type of young citizenship that any community can ill afford to lose. We shall sadly miss him in Hedley.

Surviving him are his widow and little son, Sidney Rhea, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. S. Beach, two sisters, Mrs. G. C. Brinson and Mrs. L. Spalding, and two brothers, Edgar and Perry Beach, all of Hedley community. To them the sincere sympathy of many friends is lovingly extended.

Mr. and Mrs. Chas. M. Lowry and little daughter, Sara Beth, were visitors in Clarendon one day the past week.
