WORK ON NEW HIGH SCHOOL BEGINS SOON

The bonds recently voted for the erection of a new high school building in Hedley have been approved and disposed of, and the school trustees are now considering bids looking toward the awarding of the contract.

The style of the new building is known by the people hereabout as the blueprint has been on exhibit for some time. It will be located on the property already owned by the school, just a short distance east of the present building. Upon completion of this new building, Hedley schools will rank with the very best. As a matter of fact, they have for some years been second to none in this section, in spite of crowded quarters and other drawbacks that have been overcome only by hard work and lots of grit.

For the new order of things as they are, to be, thanks are due to an excellent school board, an unbeatable faculty, the best P. T. A. in the country, and the co-operation of the good people of this community. You can't lick that sort of combination.

We are informed that the new building will be ready for the opening of the next school year in September.

HEDLEY'S GROWTH IS CONTINUING STEADILY

Work on the construction of the compress is progressing satisfactorily, and the plant will be ready for operation before the cotton crop begins to move this fall. The addition of this industry will be a decided benefit to Hedley, in the matter of dollars and cents, and it will add prestige to our town.

A number of new residences have been constructed in Hedley since our last article on building activities a few weeks ago. We will give details in an early issue of the Informer.

According to information that we consider reliable, plans are in the making for the construction of five or six brick business houses here within the next few weeks. Official information concerning these may be looked for right away.

Considering the past year's performance, and the plans under way at the present time, it looks as if Hedley is at last coming into her own.

TO THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE SECURITY STATE BANK OF HEDLEY, TEXAS

You are hereby notified that a special meeting of the stockholders of the Security State Bank of Hedley, Texas, will be held in the office of the Bank in the town of Hedley, Texas, at 8 o'clock p. m., on the 14th day of August, A. Motorists Slow Down in German Small Towns

The typical German highway is full of curves and sharp turns. It proceeds from one country village to the next, going through the main streets of every town and hamlet where traffic is frequently blocked by all sorts of hindrances. As villages are usually only a short distance apart, the time for getting through them often nearly equals the time spent traveling at high speed between them.

Outside the village proper, however, the road may be an excellent one kept up by the provincial government. Inside the village boundary the road becomes the main street, paved with the roughest kind of cobbles but quite satisfactory to the inhabitants, who possess no automobiles of their own.

The villagers wish to keep their streets rough and crooked in order to slow down fast automobiles and so prevent injuries to geese, pigs and chickens, and possibly to induce motorists to stop in the village.—New York Times.

Half City at Auction

Half of Braggs, Okla., is to be sold at auction because five women could not agree on the division of an estate. Forty town lots were left by J. J. Patrick when he died two years ago. His will provided that his estate be divided equally among five daughters, after a farm had been bequeathed to his only son. The daughters disagreed on an "equal division." In that case, Patrick's will provided, his estate should be sold at auction. More than half the town's business buildings are involved.

The Only Way

Two golfing rivals were contesting the final of their local championship. They were all square at the eleventh hole.

One made a perfect drive from the next tee, but his opponent was unlucky, and the ball, curving high in the air, landed in jungle country.

When he went to investigate, he discovered that his ball had gone down a rabbit hole.

"Your niblick, sir?" inquired the caddy, reaching for the club.

"No," returned the other in a resigned voice. "Hurry back to the clubhouse and get me a ferret."

Force of Habit

A telephone operator inherited a fortune and lost it at Monte Carlo. That's what the habit of wrong numbers will do for a person.—Kalamazoo Gazette.

Maintains School Work

Having reared a family, taught school and helped others to educate themselves, Mrs. Lucy E. Woodhead, at seventy-five years of age, is attending Oklahoma A. and M. college, pursuing work leading to a master's degree. When her daughter Madge was eleven years old, Mrs. Woodhead started renewing her school days with her. Up through high school and college they were in the same class. They were graduated from the Emporia (Kan.) State Teachers' college recently.

One Unsolved Question

Driving Instructor—Well, do you understand the car now?
Beginner—Perfectly. There's only one thing I should like to ask: Do you put the water and the gasoline in the same hole?

Grow Among Other Trees

Mahogany trees are generally scattered among other trees, not growing in a forest of their own kind.

OLD FOLKS SAY
WAS RIGHT

The basis of treating sickness has not changed since Dr. Caldwell left Medical College in 1875, nor since he placed on the market the laxative prescription he had used in his practice.

The simpler the remedy for constipation, the safer for the child and for you. And as you can get results in a mild and safe way by using Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, why take chances with strong drugs?

A bottle will last several months, and all can use it. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle in action, and free from narcotics. Elderly people find it ideal. All drug stores have the generous bottles, or write "Syrup Pepsin," Dept. BB, Monticello, Illinois, for free trial bottle.

The weather bureau misread the signs. They prognosticate all wrong. They're like the poor tailor.

A poor tailor rang Scattergood Goad's bell and asked if Mr. Goad was in.

"Yes, sir; step this way, sir," the young footman said. "He's in the library."

"Thank goodness," said the tailor, "I'm going to see my money at last."

"Oh, don't make that mistake, sir," said the footman. "If Mr. Goad had any money he wouldn't be in."

Those who have had taste in art can find out easily enough what good taste is.

PREFERRED by millions

It's so downright good—Post's Bran Flakes with other parts of wheat. With foamy milk or cream, berries or fruit, the crumbly, flavory flakes are delicious. And there's the double satisfaction of knowing that each appetizing mouthful is giving you the bulk to help combat constipation.

Probably this appetite-tempting goodness is one reason why millions prefer Post's Bran Flakes. You can enjoy it every day—and forget it's so good for you! Try it tomorrow morning and right along for the next two weeks. Find out for yourself how good it is to eat—how good it makes you feel. Crisp and ready to serve from the package—and marvelous in muffins and bread.

Cases of recurrent constipation, associated with too little bulk in the diet, should yield to Post's Bran Flakes. If your case is abnormal, consult a competent physician at once and follow his advice.

Industries Are Trekking Toward the Smaller Towns

CONGESTED quarters, high rents, exorbitant taxes and unsatisfactory labor conditions are slowly but surely driving industries from the larger cities to the country.

THOUSANDS of manufacturers, mill owners and big business men yearly are realizing the advantages of quiet, uncrowded, inexpensive living and excellent labor conditions offered by the small town and are seeking in that direction.

THE majority of the small towns in West Texas can have their share of industrial development because they have the necessary facilities, of which none is more important than ample, uninterrupted, economical electric power.

THE WEST TEXAS UTILITIES COMPANY, with its more than 2,000 miles of transmission lines and 70,000 available horsepower of electrical energy, guarantees the industries the same efficient service they have enjoyed in the great cities of the country.

BOY SCOUTS WILL GO TO CAMP WARNER

The Southeast Panhandle Area of the Boy Scouts of America plan to assemble at Camp Warner, ten miles south of Claude, Sunday, June 30, for four days camp. A. M. Duval, vice president of the council and a civil engineer, will have charge of construction. It is planned to have the scouts do the work, earning merit badges. Parents of scouts are invited up to the camp to spend the day and to come after the boys. The committee after exhausting every effort to find a suitable location, decided on Camp Warner. Camp Warner is dedicated to the Boy Scouts of America by Dr. and Mrs. Warner, and is situated at Dripping Springs, ten miles south of Claude. There are about 800 acres in the gift, which gives plenty of room for expansion and hikes. There is plenty of Indian lore. The camp already has some permanent buildings, a dining room, a kitchen, two or three cabins and a workshop. The committee feels fortunate in having secured such an ideal location for a camp site.

The camp proposes to open August 11 for two or three day periods and is directed by Scout Executive I. E. Jolly. There will be a full program of activities, such as archery, knife carving, leathercraft, bead work, model airplane building, signaling, first aid, cooking, swimming, wood work, merit badge work, and other scout activities.

The cost will be $7.50 for a ten day period. The scout troop should plan to go as a group with their scoutmaster as leader, but boys can and may register for the entire twenty days.

THE BANG OF BURNED OUT BEARINGS YOUR MOTOR CAN ESCAPE IT

If you've ever listened to the anvil chorus under the hood when a bearing burns out, you realize the damage that poor oil can do to a motor. Replaced bearings cost real money—a great deal more, in fact, than the cost of a year's supply of good oil.

Isn't that reason enough why you should always insist upon a brand of oil which has stood the test—a brand backed up by an organization which has spent years specializing in the lubrication needs of every type of motor?

Such are the brands offered you by the Continental Oil Company. You may be sure that an oil sponsored and sold by this organization is the right oil for your car.

You protect the bearings—and your pocketbook, too—when you ask for these brands at service stations and garages.

Conoco Amalite is 100% Pennsylvania Oil—refined from premium crudes by a special process. Universally recommended by automotive engineers and lubrication experts.

Through exhaustive laboratory and road tests it has demonstrated its ability to lubricate properly under the most trying conditions of motor operation.

Conoco Motor Oil insures protection. It seals compression—saves gasoline—fights friction. Stands up under most intense cylinder heat. In short, it does a complete lubricating job in all kinds of weather.

Ask for the grade made especially for your car.

G.O.P. Celebrates Its 75th Birthday

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE Republican party, familiarly known as the G. O. P. (because its adherents, pointing with pride to its achievements, among them the fact that in eighteen Presidential elections since it was founded it has been victorious thirteen times, call it the "Grand Old Party"), celebrated its seventy-fifth birthday this month. And thereby hangs "a tale of two cities" or rather the tale of the rivalry of two cities for the honor of being known as the "birthplace of the Republican party." The two cities are Ripon, Wis., and Jackson, Mich.

In support of its claim residents of Ripon will take you to a little white schoolhouse and show you the tablet beside the door on which you may read, "In this schoolhouse March 20, 1854, was held the first mass meeting in this country that definitely and positively cut loose from old parties and advocated a new party under the name Republican." In celebration of that event there was held on the campus of Ripon college, centering about that historic schoolhouse, recently, a pageant depicting the growth of the Republican party and a celebration of the diamond jubilee of the party. The principal speakers at this event were James W. Good, secretary of war in President Hoover's cabinet, and Walter J. Kohler, Republican governor of Wisconsin.

Residents of Jackson, Mich., in support of their claim to the honor, will take you to a group of oaks standing at Second and Franklin streets and tell you that here the Republican party was born on July 6, 1854, when the name Republican was adopted by a convention of state delegates. Whether the Republican party was born on March 20, or July 6, 1854, and whether its birthplace was Ripon, Wis., or Jackson, Mich., is relatively unimportant, compared to the event itself, the critical era in our history during which it took place and the significant aftermath of that event.

The Republican party was born at a time when the dispute over slavery was at its height. It grew out of the growing opposition to slavery as an institution especially in the states which had been formed from the old Northwest territory. In accordance with the famous ordinance of 1787 the Northwest territory was to have no slavery within its boundaries after the year 1800. The ordinance gave to the owners of fugitive slaves the right to recover them even after the runaways had escaped beyond the Ohio, but as a matter of fact the "underground railroads" which aided escaping slaves to their freedom were active throughout this territory. The northern part of the territory was once known as Michigan and included the present states of Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota and a part of Dakota. Wisconsin became a state in 1848 and from its beginning as a commonwealth was dominated by ardent foes of slavery.

Two years after Wisconsin became a state there came to the town of Ripon from New York a man who was to give Ripon its claim to the title of "birthplace of the Republican party." He was Alvan Earle Boyay, born in Jefferson county, New York, July 12, 1818, and a lawyer by profession. Boyay soon became a leading citizen in the little hamlet of Ripon and his best friend was Jedediah Bowen, the principal merchant of the place. There were only about a hundred voters in Ripon at the time but they had a wide choice of parties for it was at a time in American history when the lines which separated the traditional Whigs and Democrats were breaking down and new parties were constantly being formed.

Boyay himself was a Whig and an eloquent and ardent one. He was not so partisan however but he recognized his party was likely to crumble any time from the discordant factors within it. The dispute over slavery was becoming more acute all the time. The great leaders who had sought some way of reconciling the differences between the North and the South over the slavery question were in their graves and the threat of disunion and possible civil war was already looming over the horizon. It seems that in 1852 Boyay suggested at a strong antislavery party be formed to be called the Republican party. He broached the subject while on a visit to New York city to Horace Greeley, the famous editor of the New York Tribune. But nothing came of the suggestion at that two years later matters reached a crisis when in July 23, the famous Kansas-Nebraska bill introduced into congress. Kansas and Nebraska were to be admitted as territories with no restriction as to whether they should be free or slave states, despite the Missouri Compromise of 1820 which had prohibited slavery in any states or territories north of the line 36 degrees 30 minutes. In its final form the bill declared the Missouri Compromise, "inoperative and void" because it was "inconsistent with the principle of nonintervention by congress with slavery in the states and territories as recognized by the legislation of 1850."

When the Kansas-Nebraska bill was introduced, Boyay wrote to Greeley as follows: "Your paper is now a power in the land. Advocate calling together in every schoolhouse and church in the free states all the opponents of the Kansas-Nebraska bills, no matter what their party affiliations. Urge them to forget previous organizations and to be bound together under the name suggested to you at Lovejoy's hotel in 1852. I mean the name of Republican. It is the only one which will serve all purposes, past and future—the only one that will live and last."

During February of that year Boyay called again and again to foes of slavery to rally under the banner of a new party. Late in the month he gathered together in the Congregational church at Ripon a group of those who believed as he did. On March 20, a mass meeting was called in district schoolhouse 2, a small white frame building. Of the hundred or so voters in Ripon, Boyay was able to get fifty-three to his meeting. They were a varied lot so far as political affiliation was concerned—Whigs, Democrats and Free-Sollers. To them Boyay offered his resolution that a new party to be called Republican be organized at once, based on the opposition to slavery. As a result, his suggestion was adopted and the town committee appointed by the Free-Soll and Whig parties were dissolved. A committee on organization was appointed, consisting of three Whigs, one Free-Soller and one Democrat. They were Boyay, his friend Jedediah Bowen, Amos Loper, A. Thomas, and J. Woodruff.

Considering the slow process which usually represents the evolution of a political party, the growth of the Republican party was swift. Under the leadership of Stephen A. Douglas, who was ambitious to be the Democratic Presidential nominee in 1856, the Kansas-Nebraska bill was passed in May, 1854. Immediately fierce opposition flamed up in the North and during the summer it continued to burn. It is at this point that the claim of Jackson, Mich., to being the Republican cradle comes to the front. On July 6, 1854, there was held in an oak grove on the outskirts of Jackson a state-wide representative mass meeting, acting as a state convention, assembled in response to a call signed by several thousand citizens of Michigan inviting the co-operation of all who were opposed to the extension of slavery.

The chairman of the committee of resolution, Jacob M. Howard, wrote and supported a platform of considerable length which was unanimously adopted. It denounced slavery as a "relic of barbarism, a great moral, social and political evil" and declared that it was the purpose of the fathers of the Republic to prevent the spread of slavery. It also asserted that it was now the duty of congress to carry out this purpose by restoring the restriction on slavery laid down in the Missouri Compromise. The delegates also resolved "that postponing and suspending all differences in regard to political economy or administrative policy, we will co-operate and be known as Republicans until after the contest be determined." They also earnestly recommended that there be called a "general convention of the free states and such of the slave-holding states as may desire to be represented, with a view to the adoption of other more extended and effectual measures in resistance to the encroachments of slavery." The name Republican was also used later in a Wisconsin convention as well as at state gatherings in the East, held in New York, Massachusetts, Vermont and Maine.

The new party gained strength during the next two years as it drew to its standard various elements from other parties. The Whigs had suffered a defeat in 1852 which had demoralized them and had practically shattered that party. Then, also, there had risen the American party or the All American party, commonly known as the Know Nothings because of the reply they made when asked about details of their organization and supposedly secret ritual. This strange body, founded on racial and religious prejudices, had succeeded in electing governors in several states and had sent nearly a hundred representatives to the house of representatives.

The Know Nothings were a conglomeration. Some of them favored the extension of slavery, while others opposed. There were also the Free Soller committed to the abolition of slavery by political means. The Free Soil party had been formed with the Liberty party, which had the same view, and also it had taken over a faction of the New York Democrats, called the Barnburners, because their extreme views were compared to the policy of a man who burned down his barn to get rid of the rats. The Free Soller's flung wide their motto, "Free Soil, Free Speech, Free Labor and Freemen."

To the growing new party of the Republicans came many kinds of political faiths who had the common bond of opposition to slavery—all "Anti-Nebraska or Kansas" men. Some had been Whigs, some Democrats, others had turned from such short-lived organizations as the Free Soller and the Know Nothings. An informal convention, which might better be called an organizing committee, was held in Pittsburgh early in 1856, at which the name Republican as the title of a national party was firmly fixed. Among those present at this convention were Horace Greeley and Abraham Lincoln.

The campaign of 1856, the first one in which the Republican party officially participated and, incidentally, suffered its first defeat, is described in the volume "Builders of the Republic" in the Yale University Press "Pageant of America" as follows:

Meeting in convention in Philadelphia, in February, 1856, the Know Nothings or the American party found sectionalism intruding even into their organization. Indeed, after angry debate, most of the antislavery delegates withdrew, leaving the southern wing in control. With a platform that attempted to divert attention from the slavery question by crying up the foreign peril, the party went into the campaign with Fillmore and Donelson as its candidates.

The Democrats tried hard to present an appearance of harmony. Since the doctrine of popular sovereignty was to be their major plank, it was expected that either the "Little Giant," or Pierce would be the nominee. But the North so opposed the proceeding in Kansas that the leaders were passed over by a man less closely connected with recent domestic events. As minister to England, James Buchanan had been abroad during the most trying times. His availability was enhanced because his name was linked with that aggressive foreign policy which had been employed to distract the country from internal troubles. Acceptable to the South, he could be supported also by the conservative elements of the North.

The Whig party, practically defunct, contented itself with endorsing the candidates of the American party. There was thus need for a party which would stand four-square against the Democrats and the extension of slavery. This need was filled by the Republican party which had grown with surprising rapidity since 1854. To it had thronged a miscellany of malcontents, a fact of which its rivals made the most. In spite of its heterogeneity, the party showed remarkable solidarity. Assembling in Philadelphia on the anniversary of Bunker Hill, the delegates, passing over the more prominent leaders—such as Chase of Ohio, and Seward of New York—selected John C. Fremont of California, a young man little known in politics but with a well-advertised record as an explorer of the Far West. The platform vigorously denounced the proslavery and jingoistic activity of recent years.

The Republicans launched a campaign that in vigor and spectacle resembled that of 1840. With "Bleeding Kansas" as their cry, they appealed, through the agency of newspaper editors, such as Horace Greeley, of the New York Tribune, James Gordon Bennett, of the New York Herald, Henry J. Raymond, of the New York Times, and Gen. J. Watson Webb, of the Courier and Enquirer of New York, to the Northerners' dread lest the "Buchaners" expand their domain of slavery. The opposition played upon the widespread dislike for the Abolitionists as a means of discrediting the Republicans. The eccentric personalities of the reformers, their extravagant acts and still more extravagant words were a heavy burden for the new party to carry.

As the campaign developed it appeared that the Republicans were too sectional in their appeal and not sufficiently organized to carry the country. Buchanan gained many adherents who had become alarmed by the apparent radicalism of the Fremont followers. Fillmore took occasion to announce that Fremont's election would endanger the Union. In the South, it need hardly be said "Black Republicanism" was identified by many with all the "isms" in the dictionary.

The contest was rather close. Buchanan received 174 electoral votes to 114 for Fremont, while Fillmore received 8 from Maryland. The Democrats had had a close call; and the size of the Republican vote gave the old line leaders cause to worry for the future.

These leaders had even more cause to worry four years later. For in 1860 the Republican candidate was Abraham Lincoln and the new party was swept into power—a power which it was destined to hold uninterruptedly for a quarter of a century until Grover Cleveland, a Democrat, was elected in 1885. Cleveland was again elected in 1893, but at the end of his term of office in 1897 marked the beginning of another period of Republican domination until interrupted by Woodrow Wilson's election in 1912 and the seventy-fifth anniversary of the party's birth in 1929. It still

Slam at Dead Brother

Ralph W. Smith of the bureau of standards is conducting for the government a nation-wide investigation of taximeters, and he said in Washington the other day:

"This investigation doesn't mean that taxicabs, like taridermists, skin you, and the men who take offense at us fail to understand. In fact, they're like Smith.

"A man came back to the home town after thirty years in New York and, of course, he inquired affectionately about this old friend and that.

"And Bill Smith? he said. 'How is dear old Bill Smith getting along?'"

"'Bill,' said John Smith, a brother—'Bill is dead.'"

"'What? Bill dead?' sighed the visitor. 'Ah, me, peace to his ashes.'"

"'How dare you?' said John Smith hotly. 'Bill was as good a chap as ever breathed.'"

Farm Clubs Grow

The 4-H club movement, which has grown with leaps and bounds since its inception a few years ago, took another great step forward during 1928, according to the tabulation of county agents' reports, made at the Department of Agriculture. An increase of 47,000 members over 1927 indicated in the total figure of 666,000. The estimated total of those who will complete their work during the coming year is also about 47,000 over last year's figure.

Opportunity for All

Well, God gave them wisdom that have it; and those that are fools, let them use their talents.—Shakespeare.

Opportunity knocks more than once at everyone's door

No age limit on success if you keep fit

PEOPLE used to think that if you hadn't made your mark by the time you were 40, you never would. "That's all bunk," people say today. There's many a man who'll tell you he was past 50 when he made his first big success. Their experience runs something like this.

"I'd been going through life, always just missing out on everything. Worked like a dog, too. But never seemed to get anywhere.

"It was a doctor who put me wise to myself. Told me not to blame it on luck. That the trouble was with me—right inside myself. He recommended Nujol. I took it for three months. Never missed a day. And, say, I began to feel like a younger brother myself. Decided there was life in the old dog yet. When my big chance came, I was all ready, waiting to grab it. And I did."

Nujol keeps your body functioning just as Nature meant it to, under all conditions. Contains no drugs or medicines. Just a pure substance that works normally and naturally. It not only keeps an excess of body poisons from forming (we all have them) but aids in their removal. These poisons slow you up mentally and physically, dull your whole outlook on life, make you half-hearted. Buy a bottle of Nujol today. Perfected by the Nujol Laboratories, 2 Park Ave., New York. In sealed packages only. Your druggist carries it.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

President's Law Enforcement Commission Begins Its Great Investigation.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
PRESIDENT HOOVER'S commission on law enforcement has been appointed and is about to begin its momentous task of investigating the evils and failures of federal judicial procedure. The President's selection for membership on this important body have met with warm approval. Its chairman is George W. Wickersham, attorney general of the United States during the Taft administration. The others are Frank J. Loesch, assistant state's attorney of Chicago; William S. Kenyon of Iowa, United States circuit judge; Newton D. Baker of Cleveland, secretary of war under Wilson; Roscoe Pound, dean of the Harvard law school; William A. Grubb of Alabama, United States district judge; Paul J. McCormick of California, United States district judge; Kenneth R. Mackintosh of Seattle, former chief justice of the Washington state supreme court; Monte M. Lemann, president of the Louisiana bar association; Henry W. Anderson of Richmond Va., United States member of Mexican claims commission, and Miss Ada L. Comstock, president of Radcliffe college, Boston.

With the exception of Miss Comstock, every one of these is an eminent lawyer, and three of them, Loesch, Baker and Pound, have had special experience in crime investigation. The one woman on the commission is also the sole representative of the lady, and some regret has been expressed that there is no one to share with her this great responsibility. Not one of the members has been actively identified with either the wets or the dries, although Judge Kenyon is generally regarded as the champion of the prohibitionists. Three of the commissioners, Baker, Grubb and Lemann, are Democrats.

Though the scope of the commission's activities is by no means limited to inquiry into enforcement of the prohibition laws, this phase of the investigation is looked upon as the most important and it is certain to be the most interesting to the people of America. Already the dry and wet organizations are marshaling their forces and preparing to present before the commission all the facts and arguments at their command. Mr. Hoover invited the members of the commission to eat luncheon at the White House and listen to his outline of the scope and purposes of their inquiry.

RAILROADS of the country won a great victory when the Supreme court of the United States handed down its decision in the famous St. Louis & O'Fallon railroad case which on behalf of that obscure little coal road had been fought through all the courts. The immediate object was to have set aside an order issued by the Interstate commerce commission calling for a refund of a part of its earnings, coming under what is known as the recapture clause of the transportation act, permitting railroads to retain one-half of their earnings in excess of 6 per cent, and requiring them to pay over to the government the balance.

Following a lower court decision annulling the order, the Supreme court ruled that the Interstate commission must revise its method of valuing railroads to basis for rate making. Years ago by the commission must be over again in full or in part. The cost of the new rates must be considered by the commission on the basis of the value of the property.

Prices of rail stock soared with a rush of buying orders, but the advances were cut in half by liquidation in industrial stocks.

FORMER SENATOR IRVINE L. FLENROOT'S appointment to a federal judgeship was finally confirmed by the senate despite the determined opposition of a number of radicals. Soon thereafter a newspaper published what purported to be the roll call by which this action was taken in executive session, and this stirred up a row that has resulted in the barring of news service reporters from the floor of the senate. This step was taken by the rules committee and reported to the senate with a resolution censuring the unnamed senator or senator employee who had disclosed the roll call. After considerable discussion, Vice President Curtis announced that while news service reporters have been accorded the privilege of the floor "by courtesy for half a century or more," the rule specifying the persons entitled to admission will be rigidly enforced in the future.

FOLLOWING Colonel Lindbergh's flight in his amphibian plane to North Haven, Maine, carrying his fiancée, Anne Morrow; her mother and two sisters, the news developed that the youngest of the girls, Constance, had received extortion letters threatening her life if $50,000 were not paid to the writer. Constance got two of these notes at Milton academy, Westwood, Mass., where she is a sophomore. Attempts to catch the extortioner by a decoy package failed, and at this writing his or her identity has not been discovered. For several days the Morrow family, heavily guarded by special officers, remained on their North Haven estate, and then Colonel Lindbergh took them all to New York in his plane.

GOVERNOR'S ISLAND and part of the financial district of New York were theoretically devastated by bombs dropped by the army's huge Keystone bomber which made a non-stop flight of 600 miles from the headquarters of the army air maneuvers at Fairfield, Ohio. Next day the bomber returned to the metropolis accompanied by a smaller biplane from which it was successfully refueled while in flight.

ONE HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-SIX clergymen, educators and leaders of religious thought in Great Britain and America have issued what is entitled "A British-American Message to the Churches and to All People of Good Will." It is an appeal for better understanding between the American and British peoples, and expresses the hope that all war may soon be abolished. The signers pledge themselves to accept in spirit and in fact the words of the Kellogg treaty; to discountenance any and all expressions or acts which contemplate as possible the use of any but pacific means for the settlement of disputes or conflicts; and to do our utmost to rally all men and women of good will to unite with us in this same determination.

WHILE the senate and house conferees continued in deadlock over the export debenture scheme in the senate's farm relief measure, the Republican members of the house tried to fix up their tariff bill so it would be assured of passage. There was a lot of log rolling and various trades were engineered. It was said duties would be placed on hides, leather and shoes and those on a number of farm products increased. Every effort was being made by the leaders to prevent a vote on the floor of the house on amendments for a reduction in the proposed duty on sugar or for the restoration of cement, brick, shingles and lumber to the free list. The Michigan automobile industry together with other industries using alcohol, such as manufacturers of drugs and paints, were reported to have triumphed over Illinois and Iowa corn growers who have been seeking a duty on blackstrap molasses high enough to stimulate the use of corn in the manufacture of alcohol.

The matter of the farm relief measure was discussed at a conference in Washington, D. C., on Monday, and the conferees were expected to reach an agreement by Tuesday.

task in persuading the senate to accept the bill with that feature omitted.

RECENT disclosures of the activities of the International Paper and Power company in financing newspapers, made during the investigation by the federal trade commission, inspired Senator George Norris of Nebraska to deliver in the senate a long address in which he urged legislation to prevent the acquisition of newspapers by public utilities concerns and to curb the expansion of such corporations. The Nebraskan scored President Hoover for putting Lenroot on the federal customs appeals bench, and bitterly denounced Samuel Insull, the Chicago public utility magnate.

Mr. Norris said he believed every newspaper in the country has had the opportunity to sell out to the "power trust," the existence of which he has been declaring for years, and passionately pleaded with publishers to reject the offers of the power magnates so that the country might have a free press.

CHILE and Peru are immensely relieved by the settlement of the old Tacna-Arica dispute, which was formally announced in Washington. The agreement reached was that proposed by President Hoover. Under its terms Tacna is awarded to Peru and Arica to Chile. The city of Arica, the only port of call for steamers on the Tacna-Arica coastline, is awarded to Chile, but Peru is to have the rights of a free port there. Chile has agreed to erect a railroad station, a custom house, and a wharf at Arica for the use of Peru. Chile also agrees to pay Peru $6,000,000.

Bolivia which had hoped for an outlet to the sea through the port of Arica, alone is dissatisfied with the settlement.

POOOR old China seems to be on the verge of another great civil war. Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, head of the Nationalist government, and Gen. Feng Yu-shiang, the "Christian general," have reached the parting of the ways and at last reports were about ready for armed operations against each other. At present the trouble is centered about Canton. Just what it is all about is difficult to understand at this distance, but Feng accuses Chiang of a desire to dominate the country, asserts his government is "illegal" and warns foreign consuls against lending him assistance.

DR. ALBERT VOEGLER, secretary of the German Federation of Industries, has resigned from the German committee of the conference of reparations experts and departed from Paris, which led to fears that the conference would be a complete failure. In any event it seemed certain the negotiations, if not broken off, would be greatly prolonged. Germany had accepted the American compromise plan with certain conditions, and the allied nations had practically accepted these conditions, but with reservations. The Germans indicated four of the reservations of the allies were almost totally unacceptable and that they would yield no further, and the allies stated that their limit had been reached.

FOREIGN ministers of the little entente held a conference in Belgrade in which, according to official announcement, a complete accord was reached on all questions. A treaty of arbitration was signed and the other treaties among the nations were prolonged. The nations all entered protest against any reduction of reparations amounts.

DEATHS of the week included those of Earl Roseberry, veteran statesman and former prime minister of Great Britain; Eliza Hensler, ninety-three, the American-born morganatic wife of Ferdinand of Saxe-Coburg, king consort of Portugal half a century ago; and Rebecca Ewing Watterston, widow of Henry Watterston, the famous Kentucky journalist.

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is dispelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take.

Any drug store has the genuine, prescriptive product.

COUNT LUCKNER, THE SEA DEVIL

Copyright by Doubleday, Doran & Co. by Lowell Thomas

Up the Danish coast to the Skagerrak the disguised Seeadler sailed; then westward across the British mine fields and up along the coasts of England and Scotland. A terrific hurricane sprang up, and under almost full sail Count Luckner and his companions started to run the British blockade. They passed through its several lines without seeing a ship, for all the blockading vessels had sought shelter in the lee of the islands. Taking the northerly course to the Atlantic, the Seeadler was blown by the gale far toward the pole zone and could not be handled because of the frozen rigging. But the wind shifted and on Christmas day they turned to the south. Then they were stopped by a British cruiser and two officers boarded the supposed Norwegian ship and began a searching examination of the crew and papers. Luckner and his men passed the test with great success.

"There were rumors at home in Norway that two cruisers and sixteen German submarines had put out of port." The search officer's comrade, who had been looking around the cabin, came over to us when he heard all this. "I think we had better be going," he spoke up suddenly. "Yes," replied the other, and they went on deck. They made no attempt at questioning the sailors or investigating the sailors' belongings. "Your papers are all right, captain," said the search officer, "but you will have to wait here for an hour until you get a signal to proceed."

"All right, Mister Officer." One of my boys, who was of a pessimistic turn of mind, heard this. As he walked away from my cabin he said out loud to himself: "Everything is lost." Down below were the members of my other crew, waiting in the dark. They were right beneath the floor of the deck, straining their ears to catch any word that might give them an idea how things were going on deck. They heard the exclamation, "Everything is lost," and took it for the official word that we were discovered and for the command to do what was to be done in that case. They lit the fuses of the three bombs that were to blow up the ship, and waited for the hatches to be opened to let them on deck to the boats. The fuses would burn for fifteen minutes.

The British were in their boat now, trying to push off. But you can't hold a sailing ship in one place like a steamer. She keeps drifting. And the suction of the Seeadler as she drifted held their boat so it couldn't get away. What was still worse, it kept slipping aft, and if it got under our stern, they would have been sure to see our propeller. A sailing ship with a propeller? Yes, sometimes, but we would have been done for, as there was nothing to that effect in our papers. Seizing a rope, I tossed it overboard toward them.

"Take the rope, Mister Officer, take the rope," I shouted as though clumsily trying to help them. That made them look up, so that the rope might not fall on their heads. I heaved the rope just as they were sliding around our stern and away. The officers thanked me, and one of them, angry with his men for not being able to push the boat off, exclaimed: "I have only fools on my boat."

"Yes, maybe you have," I thought, "and maybe you are the worst-fooled one of all!" My stomach was quite normal now I was so happy that I even felt as though I could digest that bit of tobacco. The men on deck felt like cheering and singing, but they had orders to go on about their jobs as though nothing unusual had been going on, until the cruiser was far and away. They just grinned, but so broad were the grins that I thought they would split their faces.

My first thought was to bring the happy news to the boys in the darkness down below. I went to one of the secret hatches, which they had fastened from within.

"Open," I shouted. There were vague sounds below. "Open up," I called again. Then I heard a muffled voice say: "Open the flood valves."

"What's that?" I yelled. "What's the matter? Open the hatch?" The hatch opened. I saw troubled faces. I could hear water rushing into the ship. "By Joe," I shouted, "are you trying to sink my boat?"

I could hear men running below to all parts of the ship. I climbed down roaring. One of the men spoke up. "They are cutting the fuses and closing the flood valves."

"Fuses, flood valves, by Joe. How's the engine, by Joe?"

By Joe, I looked for the fellow who said "All is lost." He came forward at once and confessed. "I wasn't calling to the men below. I merely said it to myself." "Why do you say 'all is lost,' by Joe, just when everything is fine?" "Well, captain, when the Englishman said that we would have to wait for an hour, I thought to myself that the game was up. It means that he is keeping us waiting while he sends a wireless to Copenhagen asking about the Irma, when there is no Irma." "By Joe," I said. "That's right."

In our excitement, neither I nor my officers had thought about the wireless. It had not occurred to us to ask ourselves why we had been ordered to stand by for a whole hour. We didn't even think of Lloyd's Register. The search officer might have gone back to his ship to look up the Irma in the Register, where there was no Irma. For days I had been on deck in the storm and in the ice regions. For the past half hour I had gone through worse turmoil even than that. And now, when everything seemed clear the sky looked black again and that quid of tobacco started getting into its dirty work. I went to the rail and hung there on my elbows, staring through my binoculars at the Avenger and watching for the flag signal. My hand shook, and instead of only one I could see three cruisers in my glass. I handed it to Leudemann and while he took a look I leaned there with the code book in my hand, ready to decode the signal when it came.

I don't know how long it was, fifteen minutes or an hour, but finally three little flags went up the signal rope.

The Seeadler.

Old Imperturbable Leudemann steadied his glass. At last he made out the signal: "T-M-B."

I thumbed the book clumsily. It seemed as though I would never find T-M-B. But there it was. It meant "Planet." Nonsense. Read the signal again.

I was getting weaker and weaker, whether from the anxiety or from that quid, I don't know. This time he read: "T-X-B."

Pages, columns, and then the right place. Continue voyage.

I felt as though my heart had two valves instead of one and was pumping madly through both. I sat down and breathed heavily. Instead of going about their ordinary tasks, my men wanted to yell like Indians.

Hello, what's this? The Avenger, with her 15,000 tons driven by 100,000 horse-power engines, was racing straight at us. Huge streams of smoke and great flames like torches poured out of her three funnels as her safety valves blew out from the over-pressure of her boilers. Just as she got on top of us she swerved off. At her stern flew a signal. I did not need a code book. I knew that signal by heart—Happy Voyage. We raised the signal—thanks—and dipped our Norwegian flag three times.

The British had behaved like gentlemen toward us. I think the way they pointed their guns at us when they came up to us was a bit of a joke. The hour they made us wait was, I think, to enable them to make wireless inquiries about the story we told of German cruisers and submarines. The search officer did his work conscientiously and well. No seaman should try to make another seaman ride-olous. We were disguised so well that he could have suspected nothing. In his place, I should have been fooled exactly as he was, and so would any other officer.

"And now, boys, let's celebrate Christmas!"

We dumped our deck load of lumber into the sea, and cleared the deck for a big time. I had a Christmas tree that I had brought from home. We set it up. Before the Seeadler left port, Fraulein Bertha Krupp had sent us a huge box full of Christmas presents, something for every man. We opened it and found clothing, cigars, pipes, cigarettes, cigar holders, knives, liquor, soft drinks, and musical instruments.

It was the merriest Christmas of our lives. Singing "Yo-ho" and cheered up with many good bottles of rum, we headed south to play our role as buc cancers.

CHAPTER IV

We Capture the Gladys Royal and the Lundy Island

"All hands on deck!" Aloft my boys flew, into the rigging and up the ratlines like monkeys. "Loose the fore-tops'l!" boomed up from the quarter deck.

"All gone, the fore-tops'l," they sang out. "Loose the g'a'n't's'ls and stays'l's!" The sails were sheeted home and were filling out. We didn't lose much time in getting her away. Lying over on her beam ends and running before the wind, we set our course for Madeira.

We knew that just off Gibraltar would be one of our best hunting grounds, so we cleared away the remains of our Norwegian camouflage, and after a few days we were as spick and clean and orderly as a German auxiliary cruiser should be. We were the Irma no longer, but the Seeadler now, although I felt a pang of regret at letting go the name that had served us so well and brought us luck.

There was constant labor on the motor. The lubricating oil we had was of poor quality. Oil, like many other things, had become scarce in Germany. Our enterprise had the enthusiastic support of only a few of the officials at the admiralty. The others thought it certainly foredoomed to failure, and did not want to risk too much on it. Among these were the heads of the department that supplied us with oil. A sailing vessel under the pressure of sail nearly always lists to one side. The work of the motor was hampered by a leaning position. We sailed most of the time throughout our cruise with the motor dismantled and under repair.

We had only two guns, and only one at a time could be brought into action against an enemy. Our orders were to attack sailing ships only. Wind-jammer against steamship was considered a ridiculous idea. We would not need great broadsides of cannon in capturing sailing vessels. We tried to make up for our lack of gun power by skill and precision in handling the guns we had. Our gun crew worked incessantly at drill and target practice, and schooled themselves to such quickness and accuracy of fire that the power of our armament, in effect, was doubled.

Our lookout posts were excellent. We had a crow's nest with a comfortable seat high up on the mast. Only a man at ease watches well. A second lookout was on the foremast, where a petty officer was perched. I offered ten pounds sterling and a bottle of champagne to whoever should report a ship first. A jealous rivalry grew up between the lookouts. In each raged a tremendous thirst for that bottle of champagne. All day long eager eyes swept the horizon.

On January 9, off Gibraltar, the shout rang out: "Ship ahoy." "On our starboard side was a large steamer heading toward us. Flying our Norwegian colors, we turned to meet her. She flew no flag and carried no name. The British were the only people who sent their boats out without names. She looked of British build, too. Our orders were not to tackle steamers. Well, you can promise a lot. We raised the signal: "Chronometer time, please."

A sailing ship long away from port rarely has the correct time. Our request was reasonable enough. The steamer signaled that she understood us, and came to the windward so that we could heave to. I wore my great coat to conceal my uniform. Those of the crew that had rifles hid themselves behind the railings.

The steamer came near, ready to give the sleepy old Norwegian the time. "Shall we tackle him?" I asked one of my sailors who was crunched next to me peering through a loophole. "Sure, let's take him. He's an Englishman!"

Firefly's Tail Light Diffuses Little Heat

The fireflies, or "lightning bugs," which dance in the twilight, carry torches that burn on the same principle as a lighted candle. That is to say, they combine a combustible substance with oxygen and produce light. A great advantage enjoyed by the firefly is that his tail light does not make him conspicuous.

The light given off by a piece of rubbed phosphorus in the dark. But it is not caused by phosphorus. Luciferin really means "light-bearer." By itself it does not glow, but a second substance known as luciferase, present in all luminous organisms, causes it to combine with oxygen, and makes it shine.

Daddy's Evening Fairy Tale

BY MARY GRAHAM BONNER

GALLANT WOODPECKER

"Well," said the Woodpecker, "they called me very gallant."

All the little Woodpeckers listened and held their beaks open in amazement.

"Mr. Woodpecker," they said, very politely, "we have not been here so long and we do not know many words."

"That word is new to us." "Ah," said Mr. Woodpecker, "I only heard it lately. We birds heard it from a very wise friend of ours who sits out on the back steps of her house and reads and thinks and makes bright speeches."

"You see she gives us snet throughout the winter. She is not only very wise but she is very kind. She lives where it is cold and where there is lots of snow all winter long."

"She sees that the lilac bush right near her backsteps always has a piece of snet upon it."

"And then she has a big box with one side wide open—but with a wooden box top to it so we can get in there in bad weather and where the wind won't get at us and the snow and rain won't fall on our heads."

"In there she has bread crumbs and a little water to drink."

"But on the lilac tree she always has snet."

"Well, you know in the winter it snows a lot."

"You will know that next winter when you are around."

"You will see lots of snow next year."

"Fresh snow keeps coming and coming. And when that fresh snow comes it covers the snet."

"She used to come out and brush off the snow, but I thought I could help her."

"So I used to brush off the snow. I'm a big strong bird and I felt that was the least I could do for so kind a lady."

"It was helpful not only for the members of my family and for myself but it was nice for the chickadees and nuthatches that used to come too."

"Also for the members of the Junco family and for the wrens."

"They aren't strong enough or big enough to brush off the snow."

"So I kept it cleaned off for them—and some of the other big woodpeckers did the same."

"Well, the lady said this about me—she said I was a very gallant bird."

"And I discovered afterward what she meant. She meant that I was very polite, very, very polite, to brush the snow off the snet."

"When you are gallant you are very courteous, very polite, very much a gentleman of the old school—which means most extremely polite, I believe."

"She speaks of my gallantry and she means my most kindly, lovely manners."

"Please don't think that I am conceited about this. I only did the nice woodpecker gentlemanly thing to do."

"But I am so pleased at having such a nice word used about me."

"It really is lovely to be called a gallant woodpecker."

All the other birds agreed that it was so.

Mrs. Steele Says of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Pratt, W. Va.—"I was so weak and nervous that I was in bed most all the time and couldn't sit up and I am only 36 years old. I saw your advertisement in a magazine and after I had read some of the testimonials of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could not get it out of my mind so I ordered a trial package and it has done me so much good that I am writing you to say to my friends and neighbors that you can cure a woman's troubles by sending her this medicine. All women should have it in their homes."
