HEDLEY WILL HAVE ROAD TO LAKEVIEW

Last Monday at a meeting of the Commissioners Court a number of the Hedley citizens met with the Court and discussed the advisability of opening up a road from Hedley south to Lakeview.

The Court readily entered into an agreement to open this much needed road and we understand that actual work will begin on same just as soon as the right of way can be secured. This road will run on the same line as the road is now opened up until it reaches the southwest corner of the Hartman place, where it turns south through the Alexander, Greer and Finch places, entering the Hall county line about two miles north of the main road from Memphis to Lakeview.

This is a much needed road for the community south of us and one that Hedley has tried for some time to get through. The people to the south of Hedley can now get to market over a good road.

This will also open up a new route to Lakeview, Turkey and the South Plains country, and will eventually be a much traveled road, not only by the people of this community but by people who wish a short cut to the South Plains country.

Hedley people wish to thank the Commissioners Court for the way they have handled this proposition, and we feel that they have opened up a road that will benefit the entire county.

BAPTIST REVIVAL TO START SUNDAY

who will do the preaching in the Baptist revival, is a prince among preachers. He has been one of Texas' most effective and successful preachers, having filed some of the largest city pastorates in the state, and being now engaged in exclusive evangelist work.

Dr. McCall was in Hedley for two weeks in February during the worst weather of the winter. Those who heard him were so deeply impressed with his personality, preaching and piety that he was unanimously requested to return for the present revival.

Services will be held morning and evening for two weeks.

The music will be in charge of the Pastor and Brother Ham Earhman.

Everyone is invited to attend and pray for the meetings.

BRO. LANDRETH TO PREACH IN MEETING AT MULESHOE

Rev. E. D. Landreth returned Sunday night from Dexter where he held a short meeting. He left Thursday morning for Muleshoe, Texas, where he will hold a ten day meeting with Rev. Lloyd B. Jones, who sang in the Methodist revival here last April.

Rev. Landreth will be away two Sundays, but he urges that the people of the Methodist church will attend and co-operate in the revival at the Baptist church. He says that Dr. McCall is certainly worth hearing.

The Norths and Their Pawnee Scouts

TALKING OVER OLD TIMES—GEORGE BIRD GRINNELL AND CAPT. LUTHER NORTH

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

HE IS today the greatest, as he is almost the last, of the old-time scouts of America.

Such is the tribute paid by George Bird Grinnell to Capt. Luther H. North of Columbus, Neb., and if you are one of those whose ideas about the Old West have been formed by reading dime novels or some of the sensational biographies of Wild West heroes (which are but little removed from the dime novel class), read what Doctor Grinnell, who is one of the very few real authorities on the history of the American frontier, has to say about Maj. Frank North and Capt. Luther H. North in his book "Two Great Scouts and Their Pawnee Battalion," published recently by the Arthur H. Clark company of Cleveland.

In the introduction to that volume you will find these words:

"Major Frank North died in 1885, in his early middle life. He was a great leader of men and his character won for him the absolute devotion and trust of those he commanded. Whether it was by his good fortune or his skill, he never lost a man in battle. This no doubt was in part an explanation of the faith his men had in him—in his success. Himself always in the forefront of the battle, he never said to his men 'Go on, but always 'Come along' and his men always strove to keep up with him.

"Needless to say, he was brave and he expected in his men the courage and steadfastness that he himself possessed. In one fight when he and his scouts were in the open, exposed to the fire of concealed enemies and some of his men showed a disposition to retreat, Frank North said to them, 'I shall kill the first man that runs.' No one ran.

"The experiences of Capt. L. H. North cover more years than those of his brother and so are wider. His journeyings have extended from the international boundary, south through Oklahoma (the old Indian Territory) and he has spent much time in the Rocky mountains. He is today the greatest, as he is almost the last, of the old-time scouts of America.

"His knowledge of the Indian and of the Indian's ways of thought is profound. As a hunter of wild game he was most expert and successful and the most certain and best rifle shot that I have seen.

"At this late day few men survive who were scouts in the Indian wars. Of these, Captain North is probably the oldest and the most able. Captain North and his brother, Frank North, were in the class with Bridger and Carson. They and such as they, did the tremendous work of making available what is called our western empire."

High praise that—to class the Norths with such great pioneers as Old Jim Bridger and Kit Carson—and coming from such a source it is all the more impressive. But an inspection of the record, as it is set forth in Doctor Grinnell's book, will show how worthy the Norths were of the title of "empire-builders." Although their careers on the frontier were filled with enough thrilling experiences to delight the soul of any dime novelist, fortunately for their enduring fame these purveyors of sensation passed them by in favor of lesser men. And there can be no doubt that both Frank North and Luther North were the best pleased of any one that they did pass them by. For, like most men who have accomplished great deeds of daring and danger, they were least inclined to talk about them. If they were to receive any recognition for the work they did, they, no doubt, would have preferred it to come as it has—from the hands of an appreciative and understanding friend (for the friendship of Doctor Grinnell and Captain North dates from the old Indian-fighting days or more than half a century ago)—in the form of a straightforward, matter-of-fact narrative, such as Doctor Grinnell has written, with the ring of truth and accuracy in every line.

Thomas J. North, father of the two great scouts, was a native of New York who removed to Ohio soon after his marriage. His oldest son, James E. North, was born in Ohio in 1838; Frank North was born in New York in 1840 and Luther North in Ohio in 1846. In 1855 the elder North emigrated to the newly organized territory of Nebraska and a year later brought his family to the tract of eighty acres of timberland on the borders of Omaha which he was clearing for the owner of the land. North was also a surveyor and that winter while laying out a town-site on the California emigrant trail he was frozen to death.

Upon the three brothers fell the responsibility of caring for their mother and their two younger sisters. Eventually the family settled near Columbus, Neb., where the boys obtained work of various sorts. Luther North, then thirteen years of age, became a mail carrier between the towns of Columbus and Monroe and Frank North joined forces with three men who were making a living by trapping and poisoning wolves for their hides. It was during this time that the North brothers made their first acquaintance with the tribe of Indians with whom they were to become famous—the Pawnees. The reservation for the Pawnees had been established in the section of Nebraska in which the Norths lived and in 1860 Frank and Luther North secured employment with the agent on the reservation. The next year a new agent was appointed and a son-in-law of the commissioner of Indian affairs was made trader for the Pawnees. Finding that Frank North could speak the Pawnee language, this trader employed him as clerk and interpreter.

The Sioux and the Pawnees were traditional enemies and during the year 1861 the Sioux made a number of raids on the Pawnees. During one of these Luther North had what he declares to have been his narrowest escape from death during his whole career on the plains. He was then engaged in hauling logs to the sawmill on the reservation and at night was accustomed to turn the horses and mules of the logging outfit out to graze. One morning the animals were gone and young North set out on a saddle mule to find them. A mile from the agency he was "jumped" by a war party of Sioux who were between him and the agency. A mile in the opposite direction was another trader's store and toward that young North urged his mule as fast as it could run. But it was not fast enough to outrun a splendidly mounted Sioux warrior, armed with bow and arrow and a spear, who quickly overtook the fleeing boy. But just as the savage was ready to thrust his lance through the boy, his horse stepped in a prairie dog hole and before he could get to his feet and use his bow and arrows, young North had reached the trading post.

The next year young North enlisted in the Second Nebraska cavalry which, in the spring of 1863, was ordered to join the expedition which Gen. Alfred Sully was to lead up the Missouri river to punish the hostile Sioux who had been committing depredations along the emigrant trails and against the scattered settlements.

At the outbreak of the Great Sioux War of 1864, Luther North did his first scouting for the government, as did his brother Frank North. It was during this war, also, that the first group of Pawnee scouts were organized at the suggestion of General Curtis, the commanding officer in that area. Seventy-seven young Pawnees were enrolled and were placed under command of an interpreter named McFadden with Frank North as second in command. General Curtis soon discovered that McFadden had little real authority over the Pawnees but that they obeyed promptly when North ordered them out on a scouting expedition. As a result Curtis gave North authority to enlist a company of 100 scouts when he returned to Fort Kearney from that particular expedition. Upon arriving at the fort North called a council of the tribe and made known his wishes. Within an hour he had 100 of the best Pawnee warriors enrolled, all of them anxious for North to lead them against the Sioux.

Then army red tape got in its work. North was ordered to come to Omaha with a list of the Indian names. There being no railroad, he was forced to make the journey on horseback and reached Omaha in three days. There he was kept waiting for two weeks before being furnished with muster rolls and enlistment papers and when he returned to the reservation, he found that all of his scouts had gone off on the Pawnees' winter buffalo hunt. Frank North was obliged to return to Omaha but he sent his brother, Luther, to follow the Pawnees and persuade the men he had recruited to return. Accompanied by a young Pawnee, Luther North set out but was caught in a blizzard which raged for three days. Being out of provisions, they started back for the reservation and for four days, during which time they had nothing to eat, they battled their way through the snow. Finally they reached the North home in Columbus.

Eventually Frank North found the Pawnees and after a long journey, filled with suffering from the intense cold, they all returned to Columbus. Here he found a telegram from the commanding officer at Omaha, telling him that unless the company was promptly filled, the order authorizing it would be rescinded. That called for another trip to Omaha and this time he made it in a day and a half. Finally, after many difficulties (including that of the desertion of 35 Pawnees who had been told that they were to be sent south to fight the negroes) Company A, Pawnee Scouts were mustered into the United States service.

For the next five years North's Pawnee scouts proved of inestimable value. Ready to move at a moment's notice they repeatedly pursued and punished Sioux raiding parties which would have found it easy to escape from regular army troops. They acted as scouts for General Connor's ill-fated expedition against the hostiles in the Powder river and Yellowstone country in 1865 and most of the honors of that campaign, in the different skirmishes which were fought, were won by the scouts. It was Capt. Frank North and his Pawnees who found the lost and starving command of Colonel Cole who was to co-operate with General Connor's column and guided them to safety and it was during this campaign that the Pawnees conferred upon their white leader the highest honor in their power. Before one of the fights during that campaign, in which the Pawnees, led brilliantly by North, had taken the scalps of 27 hostile Cheyennes, North had been known as "Ski ri taka" or White Wolf. During the victory celebration held after the battle the Pawnees changed his name to "Pani teshar" or the Pawnee Chief. It was a name which only one other white man had ever before been given and that was General Fremont, for whom the Pawnees held a high regard.

The year 1867 was the most brilliant in the history of the Norths and their Pawnees. General Angur, commanding the department of the Platte, authorized the organization of a battalion of four companies of Pawnee scouts with Frank North in command with the title of major. One of the companies was commanded by Luther North who was given the rank of captain. The principal job of the scouts was to protect the builders of the Union Pacific from hostile Indians and so important and so efficient was their work in this that it is not too much to say that had it not been for this little force of loyal red men and their white leaders the dream of a trans-continental railway might have been delayed for several years.

The work of the scouts during that year and the following year, until the treaty of 1868 put an end to the Indian troubles, for a time at least, furnishes material for dozens of thrilling yarns. One incident, because it shows the metal of the enemy which the Norths had to fight, is noteworthy. One of their scouts was a half-breed Pawnee whose father was a Spaniard. His name was Baptiste Behale and he was one of the most proficient of all the tribe in the use of the bow and arrows. During one of the fights a Sioux Indian was unhorsed and Behale shot him with an arrow. The shaft struck the Sioux under the right shoulder, went clear through his body and came out on the left side. The warrior stopped running, pulled the arrow on through, fitted it to his bow, wheeled around and shot it at Behale who was riding close behind him on his horse. Behale threw himself low on his horse's neck and the arrow passed over his body about two inches too high! As he straightened up, he looked down to see that the Sioux had dropped dead the moment after he had discharged the arrow.

In 1869 the Sioux and Cheyennes were again on the warpath and again the Pawnee scouts were called into service. In view of the recent revival of interest in the exploits of Col. W. F. Cody, "Buffalo Bill," and the controversy which had been raging in a number of newspapers over certain of his deeds it is interesting to read in Doctor Grinnell's book the story of the Battle of Summit Springs, Colo., where, it has been asserted, Cody killed the celebrated chief Tall Bull. That chief's camp was attacked by General Carr and the Fifth cavalry and after the first dash into the Indian camp, the soldiers were engaged in hunting out the Indians who had taken refuge into a number of ravines. One of these refugees was the chief himself, who fired at Frank and Luther North as they rode past his hiding place. Frank North dismounted, waited for the Indian to show himself again and then shot him through the forehead. Later in the day Tall Bull's widow pointed Frank North out as the slayer of her husband. As for Cody's part in that battle Grinnell says, "A terrific storm of hail and rain came up and while all hands were trying to get under shelter in the lodges, Cody was seen to be had been with the Pawnees. He was given the fight. Later, by he was given but he was"

What to Do With Old Love Letters

DIRECTIONS for treating old love letters in the home: Take epistles between the thumb and forefinger and deposit one by one, or altogether, according to taste, in the fireplace, the oven, the good old furnace, according to accommodation furnished by the home.

This recipe is not going to be a riot with my young readers. In fact, I can hear shrieks of protest from every direction: "What? Throw away all those beautiful protestations of love which will mean so much to me when I'm an old lady, toothless, and unadorned?"

And I can see bundles of letters being tied with blue ribbon and tucked away tenderly in the lowest drawer of the old desk.

What's the harm, you ask? What possible danger can lurk in evidences of a love long since dead and buried? Well, you never can tell, little girls, just how harmless these packets of romance may turn out to be.

There are on record at least fifty thousand cases of old love letters which have sowed seeds of distrust and unhappiness in peaceful little homes. Dozens of young husbands have come on tender effusions, packed away out of sight and confronted their wives with angry accusations.

Just as many more have resented knowing that their wives still cared enough for old forgotten b. l.'s to keep their letters around the house, cluttering up valuable drawer space.

Peggy's little romance busted up four years ago—and Peggy saved all the evidence, and one fine day when her young husband came home too preoccupied to remember to kiss her, she had a good cry and read a few of Bob's effusions—Bob being the ex-sweetie—and felt better.

After that she always read the old love letters when domestic crises arose and her sentimental soul began to crave a sight of the wonder-man who'd gone away and left her.

He had written beautiful letters, and John was so take-it-for-granted, and she wondered whether Bob's eyes were still brown, etc., etc.

Sounds incredible but it's an actual fact that Peggy evolved out of her own imagination a sort of dream-man who made John's personality seem dull and tiresome. In fact, she compared him so much to the plain homely husband of everyday life that she grew pretty bored with the whole thing.

No, she didn't run away from home or do anything dramatic. She just lived on with the dissatisfaction and discontent she herself had created and nobody was the wiser and nobody was the better.

The Sensitive Soul

FOR some reason or other the sensitive soul is enjoying a certain amount of favorable attention these days.

Fiction writers are giving her a big blow—songs are written around her—the stage portrays her being sensitive all over the place—and altogether it's considered rather smart to be sensitive.

But let me urge all you shrinking young things who flaunt your sensitiveness about—not to go in too heavily for the new pose.

However lovely the sensitive heroine sounds in books, she doesn't last long in real life. She's killed either by ridicule or by her companions' neglect.

Although she may enjoy being rather delicate and overfastidious, she doesn't enjoy being overlooked and delicately snubbed.

Let her become the victim of her own sensitiveness, and she will never know one minute's ease.

There's nothing beautiful about the sensitive soul who goes about the world, looking for trouble, terrified and hurt when she finds it, watchful and resentful at not finding more.

Have you ever had a sensitive friend? Did you find her particularly soothing as a companion? You did not. You were on tender hooks while with her, because you knew the slightest slip on your part—the slightest discourtesy, however unintentional, would be fatal.

In an instant her smiling good humor would change into a sullen resentful rage, her offended soul would shrink into its shell—and there would be bitter words, heart-broken sobs, and what not.

Oh, believe me, one finds soon enough that it's better to have no friends at all than to have them all sensitive, lovely souls, who find themselves just a bit too thin-skinned for this coarse, brutal world.

The considerate people of this world—the tender, thoughtful kind—will shield the sensitive plant from the cold winds of criticism and ridicule, as best they can.

Don't flatter yourself that you're a sensitive soul—and make a practice of behaving as one. It is supposed to be heavy.

Blessing Bestowed on Product of Vineyards

In nearly all the vineyards of France the annual celebrations have just taken place. In the course of which the year's vintage receives priestly benediction.

One of the most curious of these festivities is that held at Boulbon, a village near Tarascon in Provence. All the inhabitants of the countryside around Tarascon, on the day of the celebration, march first upon Boulbon, and then from the village to a chapel on a neighboring hilltop.

Every prosessor carries in the crook of his arm an unopened bottle of local wine, which, when the chapel is reached, is blessed by the priest, who sprinkles holy water upon it. Whereupon every one draws his cork and drinks; and then, carefully guarding the bottle, which he keeps until the following year, he returns to Boulbon with song and dance.

FORD MOTOR COMPANY GIVES SAFETY RULES

Here are twelve simple rules which mean greater safety and more pleasant driving conditions on the highways. They are the recommendations of the Ford Motor Co. offered to give greater peace of mind to those who travel by automobile.

It is estimated that 20,000,000 people will tour on American highways this summer. Recognition of the rights of others will be essential. Many unpleasant-ries and accidents will be avoided if motorists, at times of close situations, will recall these rules and act accordingly. The twelve rules are:

Courtesy comes first. Consider the rights and the privileges of others.

Keep your mind on your driving, and anticipate sudden emergencies.

Learn the "feel" of having your car under control.

Obey all traffic and parking regulations.

Keep to the right, and comply with road markings and signs.

Signal for stops and turns—Watch the car ahead.

Slow down at crossings, schools and dangerous places.

Never pass cars on hills, curves or crossings.

Adapt your driving to road conditions—rain, ice, soft spots and ruts.

It doesn't pay to take the "right of way" too seriously.

When you drive, remember the times when you were a pedestrian.

Know the law. It was passed for your protection.

If you haven't tried our Pentax brand of Silk Hose, try them. Adams Dry Goods & Notions

Fascism is a form of nationalism, resulting from the determination of the Fascists to extricate Italy from the chaos resulting from the World war, to give her moral unity, and in fact to make her a new state. When Food Sours

Lots of folks who think they have "indigestion" have only an acid condition which could be corrected in five or ten minutes. An effective anti-acid like Phillips Milk of Magnesia soon restores digestion to normal. Phillips does away with all that sourness and gas right after meals. It prevents the distress so apt to occur two hours after eating. What a pleasant preparation to take! And how good it is for the system! Why in the world do you want to carry things that annoy and harass and hurry? Stop them and drop them, a new day is here. Squeeze a laugh from it instead of a tear. —Kaufman.

PREPARE FOR WINTER

There are so many delicious fruits that make most alluring preserves, preserves and relishes, that it is necessary, if we have a supply for the fruit closet, to be ready for each fruit as it comes. Look up the old reliable and well-liked recipes and nothing will be missed.

Each year we like to try some recommended concoction, so a card index helps to keep them where we can find them quickly.

Andover Conserve.—Put in a large preserve kettle eight pounds of hard pears, two lemons, one orange and one-fourth pound of preserved ginger, all put through the meat grinder. Add eight pounds of sugar, set over moderate heat until the sugar is melted and the juices flow, then cook, stirring occasionally until thick and clear. Now, with the addition of pectin from the bottle, the long cooking is eliminated and the amount of fruit to can greatly increased.

Fruit Conserve.—Take three pounds each of pears, plums, and apples. Stone the plums and boil the stones in two cupsful of water forty minutes. Peel core and chop the fruit; add one lemon and one orange (both chopped), six pounds of sugar and the strained juice from the stones. Cook, stirring until thick. Here, too, the pectin may be added and save long cooking.

Hartquin Pickle.—Take ten large green and ten red peppers and twelve onions. Chop the peppers coarsely, pour boiling water over them and let stand ten minutes; drain, cover again with boiling water and drain after standing five minutes. Drain and add the onions chopped, two cupsful of salt and one quart of vinegar. Bring to a boil and cook fifteen minutes, then can in jars.

Meriton Pickle.—Slice five dozen unpeeled green cucumbers about four inches long. Sprinkle with salt in layers and let stand over night. Drain off the brine, add one and one-half dozen small onions sliced thinly. To five cupsful of vinegar add one large cupful of the best olive oil, three teaspoonfuls of celery salt, one-half teaspoonful of white mustard seed and beat vigorously; pour over the cucumbers and onions and put into jars and seal. Keep in a cool place.

Thirst Quenchers.
How to make lemonade is something on which most people think they need no instruction. However, if one will use a sugar sirup to sweeten the drink it will seem richer and most tasty. If one has not the sirup ready, dissolve the sugar in water before adding to the lemonade. Try this and see if it doesn't make an improvement over the ordinary way. Take the juice of half a dozen lemons, a cupful of sugar and six cupsful of water. Put the sugar and water together and when the sugar is well dissolved add the lemon juice. Serve at once well chilled.

Give the young children fruit drinks during vacation time when they are hot and tired from their play. The fruit used in the drink furnishes much that is beneficial in time, and other minerals and salts. The drink takes the place of the water lost by perspiration. The sugar used as sweetening gives zest to the fruits and it, of itself, is a highly concentrated form of human energy. It helps provide vim, vigor and vitality to make rosy, bright-eyed children the happy little beings they are.

The bottled drinks of pop and such kinds are not wholesome for children, and should be given them very sparingly or not at all. Iced drinks of any kind should not be served, but the drink may be cool and just as refreshing. A straw or two added to the glass will make even a cold drink of milk taste better.

Orangesade.—Boil together one-half cupful of sugar and two and one-half cupsful of water with the rind of an orange, for five minutes. Chill, add two cupsful of orange juice, three table-spoonfuls of lemon juice and serve.

Ginger Ale Punch.—Pour one cupful of hot tea infusion over one cupful of sugar, add three-fourths of a cupful of orange juice, one-third cupful of lemon juice. One pint each of ginger ale and mineral or ice water. Serve with a few slices of orange and tea cookies.

Fried Cheese Toast.—Arrange sandwiches with a thin slice of cheese as filling between buttered slices of bread. Beat two eggs, add three-fourths of a cupful of milk, one-half cupful of flour, dip the sandwiches in the egg mixture, and fry in a pan of hot oil.

Brazil Nuts
The only three-angled nuts known as Brazil nuts grow on the "lecythidaceous" tree. The nuts themselves grow inside a large fruit. Each globular fruit contains from 18 to 24 closely packed nuts. These are the nuts which are often known as "nigger toes."

Pleasant Surprise for Houston Lady

"My complexion used to show how bad I felt. Now it shows that I am free from those depressing headaches and nervous spells," says Mrs. Ollie Walker, who lives at 2424 Morse St., in Houston. "I suffered from constipation, I might say all my life. I couldn't throw off the wastes and they gave me headaches, and a very sallow complexion. Ever since I started taking Nature's Remedy, all that is gone. I reckon the real reason is that NR Tablets are so pleasant to take that I continued taking them long enough to get results."

NR Tablets are so effective because they soothe, sweeten and stimulate the stomach and bowels. Then the starch and sugar from the food you eat main in your system and acids which sour the blood and give you a sallow complexion. Dip the suppositories in the sugar solution and give them to your child.

COUNT LUCKNER THE SEA DEVIL

By Lowell Thomas

Copyright by Doubleday, Doran & Co. Realizing that their presence in the South Atlantic would be known as soon as their former prisoners made port, the raiders of the Seeadler started with all speed for the South Pacific, hoping to get around Cape Horn before the British cruisers could intercept them. Off the Horn they ran into storms that were extraordinary even for that stormy region and were forced so far to the south that they narrowly escaped disaster among the icebergs. In the midst of a hurricane they sighted a big auxiliary cruiser but evaded it by running before the wind until a rainstorm blotted them from its view. Turning north into the Pacific, they threw overboard their extra lifeboats and life preservers, hoping some would be picked up and lead to the belief that the Seeadler had gone down off the Horn. This was just what happened.

This left the way clear for us, and now we sailed out to continue our adventure on the greatest of all the seven seas.

Fourteen days after rounding the Horn, we picked an interesting and rather puzzling wireless out of the air:

Seeadler gone down with flags flying. Commander and part of crew taken prisoners and on their way to Montevideo.

"What's that?" I thought. "By Joe, Johnny Bull is telling a whopper."

Now, when old John Bull tells a fib you can bet, by Joe, that he has good reason for it. We tried to figure it out, and came to the conclusion that it had something to do with the scare we had created. The news that our prisoners had given out at Rio had sent Lloyd's rates skyward and caused many ships to lie in harbor until the danger from the German raider had blown over. The British, in order to bring Lloyd's rates down and to liberate all the shipping that had been tied up, took pains to spread a highly colored report of our disaster dressed up with suitable imaginative trimmings to make it more convincing.

"Well, Johnny Bull," I thought, "we'll fix you."

Our wireless operator, a very capable fellow, worked out a scheme with me. "Sparks" sent out the following message purporting to come from a British ship:

SOS—SOS—German sub . . . He cut the message short, as if interrupted, to make it seem as if at that moment the ship had been torpedoed.

After a suitable interval he sent out another call, this one merely reporting German submarines off the coast of Chile.

Did Lloyd's rates go up again? And did those ships that were getting ready to put to sea put back to their berths? Well, you can bet your boots they did. And we sent out other submarine warnings every so often just to keep our little joke alive.

These were all small injuries, but we had been sent out to harass the enemy, and this was one way of doing it. What more could you expect of a lone windjammer? And then, it's these injuries all added together that more often than not win the day. It was good sport for us, anyhow.

Our course was northward, with the Chilean coast and the Andes almost in sight. We steered almost to the Galapagos islands, and at Robinson Crusoe's island, San Juan Fernandez, we trimmed our sails and turned our bow west. We sailed for weeks on the broad expanse of the Pacific without sighting a ship. Except for the occasional crackle of the wireless, we were alone in the world.

Our wireless antennae kept us in touch with the latest phase of the international situation. Nor was it particularly pleasant on those long idle days at sea to sit and meditate on the fact that the United States was going into the war against us. We sailors knew better than some of our people at home the tremendous power of the great republic of the West. There were closeted statesmen and generals who might talk as they pleased about the American lack of military preparedness and the impossibility of American troops being mustered and sufficiently trained in time to be of any service in the critical hour of the war. We sailors had traveled. Many of us had been in the United States and had served on American ships. All fine technical points aside, we had had opportunity to sense the might of the North American giant with its numerous and virile population and its incalculable wealth. With such strength behind it, even an awkward, poorly aimed thrust was enough to push almost anyone over.

We caught one radio dispatch that caused us to sit and gaze hopelessly into the sky. It told of the famous Zimmermann note. What madness had dictated that extraordinary state paper which proposed to Mexico that Germany in the war and return a slice of American territory including Texas? I had a soldier in the Mexican army who had something of its probability. A few American soldiers in Rio Grande had an army as well as a navy.

ating was new enemies and fewer friends.

The American declaration of war came as a blow expected, but hard nevertheless. Some of the more pessimistic of us could spell the doom of Germany in it. It altered the position of our buccaneering expedition somewhat, too. It reduced the number of neutral ports into which we might sail. It also increased the number of cruisers we had to look out for.

However, neutral ports did not enter into our calculations much. All ports really were hostile, anyhow. Neutrals would limit us to a short, inhospitable stay, the wireless stations nearby would broadcast our presence, and the cruisers would come flocking. The American naval ships didn't mean much, either. They would doubtless be kept, nearly all of them, to guard the Atlantic shipping lanes for the passage of American troop transports and leave what patrol of the Pacific was necessary to the British and Japanese. The principal change of circumstance for us was that now we could take American prizes.

We steered across the Pacific past the Marquesas, far to the south of Hawaii. We made the waters near Christmas Island our cruising ground. There, near the equator, the east-bound and west-bound routes for sailing ships crossed. We sailed backward and forward, crossing the equator two and three times each day.

We captured three American ships in these waters, the A. B. Johnson, the R. C. Slade, and the Manila. Our prisoners numbered forty-five men, one woman, and a pet opossum.

The captains were not half so astonished and bewildered as the former captains when we unmasked ourselves as a buccaneer. They knew that the sailing ship raider was abroad. So we were deprived of some of our former amusement of astounding and befuddling officers and crews by suddenly hoisting the German flag, unmasking our cannon, firing a machine gun into their rigging, and similar pleasantries. Everything went off according to routine.

On one occasion we ran into a most intricate complication. We had expected the complications of war and practical strategy. That was part of the game. But at the time to which I refer we were faced with a new and tender complication, a romantic complication.

"He's got his wife along," Boarding Officer Preiss informed me.

He referred to an officer of one of the ships. Indeed, we had noticed a woman aboard the captured ship.

The officer in question presently introduced me to his helpmate, and a knockout she was, pretty, petite, and—well, just a bit roguish.

"By Joe," I thought, "the sailors of these days are marvelous fellows. Where do they get these swell-looking wives? When I was in the forecastle, it was different."

In those days an officer's wife was something to run away from—usually fat, usually savage, and always sloppily dressed. I thought of all the windjammer captains under whom I had sailed, and I couldn't think of one who had a wife that looked like a chorus girl. Well, times do change! There was the captain we had captured in the Atlantic who had such a pleasant little bride, and now here was this officer and his sprightly beauty.

I guess I can also add myself to the list. Here I am, skipper of a peaceful windjammer now, taking my three-master the Vaterland around the world, and I have my wife along. I have already described Irma, the fairy princess of my green island in the Canaries. Yes, sailors' wives have improved in looks these days.

Aboard the Seeadler we greeted the pretty little lady with great cordiality. Our former fair company had been so pleasant that we anticipated another similar brightening of the dull monotony aboard. The monotony was indeed broken somewhat! But in a decidedly different way than we had expected. The officer had not been long aboard before he took me aside and made an awkward and somewhat embarrassed confession. He had been thinking things over.

"Count," he said, "in your reports you may say something about my having my wife along."

"Yes," I replied.

East River Now Heated by Big Power Plants

Back in 1776 the East river at New York city froze sufficiently to allow an army to cross over the ice in safety. But nowadays the stream obstinately refuses to freeze, even when the temperature reaches its lowest extreme.

One reason for the warmth of New York's adjacent waters may be the action of the nine power plants along its shores. For every ton of coal consumed in making steam for the turbines, about 400 tons of water—which is drawn from the river—must be condensed the steam back into water, after it has served its purpose. The water is then pumped back into the river.

"Well, by Joe," he continued, "I wish you wouldn't say anything about it. Don't say anything about my having a wife along. My real wife might find it out, and then there would be hell to pay."

"Oho," I exclaimed, "so that's the way the wind blows, eh?" "I said she was my wife," he continued lamely, "because I thought it might help to save her from your sailors. But I don't want my wife to find it out."

"All right, sir," I said, "I won't report it, and I won't let my officers or crew know anything about it. That will be best. Treat the girl as your wife. I will keep my mouth shut, and you keep your mouth shut."

It was a difficult point of morals aboard ship. If the sailors found out that the girl was not the officer's wife, but only a kind of stowaway, they would lose all respect for her, and there was no telling what they might try to do. Sailors are not angels, but usually, in fact, a lot of rogues, but they are highly respectable. They have a very fine code of honor, and a woman who is off the line is simply off the line to them. Certainly, I did not want them to know that the officer's wife was not the officer's wife.

One of my prisoners turned out to be an acquaintance of the officer of the . . . I told him that the officer of the . . . had his wife along, and introduced him to the girl. He laughed so hard he nearly fell over. He wanted to tell the joke all around. It was awkward for a moment, but I got the two men aside and talked earnestly to them.

"We must be gentlemen in this matter," I said. "She is a girl. We are men. We must protect her. The sailors must not know about it. You must both give me your word of honor that you will keep mum and tell nobody."

They both promised they would obey. Everything went all right until the other prisoner took a shine to the girl, too. It was funny business. She kind of liked him. I kept an eye on the whole affair and saw what was happening. Here was more worry and trouble. I took the two men aside and said to them:

"I don't care what arrangements you two fellows make with your fair playmate, but it has got to be kept quiet. The sailors must think that she is the wife of the officer of the . . . and that . . . is only a friend."

They made some kind of change, I believe. I never could figure just how it was. I never was much good at mathematics or at figuring out anything, for that matter. At any rate, they kept it quiet. The other prisoner was married, too, and he didn't want anything of the complicated romance to get around either.

I had come to expect my prisoners to be good company. Our former captains' club had been one of the most delightful social organizations ever formed. These two sentimental swains, however, were not much good for comradeship. It was difficult to get together with them for a pleasant chat or game of cards. They were always thinking about the girl, and, although they were acquaintances in captivity, their feelings toward each other had become slightly strained. There is something about the air down there in the South Seas, I guess.

One of the captains made up for the companionship that had been lacking. He was a fine fellow. He was jovial and intelligent, and a thorough seaman if there ever was one. We became fast friends and had many a long and sympathetic talk about the war.

Weeks passed, and we did not see another ship. The idle days became very boring. We were broiling hot, and we had little exercise. Our water turned stale, and we had no fresh provisions. Our prisoners did not find their stay with us so pleasant now, but we could not find a vessel on which to ship them. One decided that he could not stand it any longer. He wanted to put his feet on land at any price. He came to me with a strange idea. Would I not land him on a desert island and leave him there a castaway? Anything was better than shipboard. But the principal part of his plan was more subtle. He would be reckoned dead at home, and his people would collect his insurance money. Perhaps I would be so kind as to make it seem certain that he was lost. Yes, no? On the island he could live as a Robinson Crusoe, a kind of existence which he fancied would be quite agreeable. Unfortunately for him, I felt obliged to decline. I was not interested in swindling insurance companies.

ARTIE

His Adventures in Love, Life and the Pursuit of Happiness
By GEORGE ADE

Artie Goes Calling on Her

"LET'S walk out a little while and let the breeze blow on us," said Artie, when the conversation had begun to droop.

He had found Mammie on the front stoop with her father and mother. It was the first warm night of early spring, and tired people all along the street had come into the open, the older ones to sit around the doorways and the children to romp on the sidewalks.

There was a carnation in Artie's buttonhole and he clicked a walking-stick on the uneven sidewalk. The smell of pipe smoke, the balm of the cooler evening air and the awakened cheerfulness of the street, which he had never before found so lively, harmonized with his own feelings. There was a spring song going in his heart, and when he came to the Carroll stoop it strove to find utterance in words.

"Ain't this a made-to-order party?" he asked, removing his hat. "I see all you good people are takin' it in."

Mammie arose to greet him, and said something in a low tone to her father. Artie knew what it was.

"Stay where you are, Mr. Carroll," said he. "I'll grab off a place here at the end."

"Father was so warm he just took off his coat and came out here to enjoy his pipe," said Mammie, by way of explanation.

"I don't blame him. Wouldn't you rather have a cigar, Mr. Carroll?"

"Well, I don't mind. Have 'y' another?"

"Sure thing. You needn't be afraid of that one. It's got real tobacco in it. How are you tonight, Mrs. Carroll?"

"I'm all right now, but this afternoon I thought I'd keel over. Wasn't it warm?"

"It was all of that."

Then there followed some more commonplace remarks about the weather.

"Be a Good Fellow When It Comes to Droppin' in the Ice Cream."

and at the first opportunity Artie suggested taking a walk.

While Mammie was in the house putting on her hat, Artie said: "You've got lots of kids up this way."

"The German family in the next house has nine," replied Mrs. Carroll. "Do you want to get by me, Mammie? Look at the new hat on her."

Artie laughed and Mammie gave her father a playful slap on the arm.

"It's a hun," remarked Artie.

As he followed Mammie down the steps and away toward the corner he somehow felt, because of the silence behind, that Mr. and Mrs. Carroll were watching him and asking themselves whether he was what he pretended to be. On more than one occasion they had shown a liking for him. Certainly they had trusted him. He realized keenly, and for the first time, that they had been kind to him beyond anything he deserved, and with this realization came the resolve that he would never do anything to cause them to change their opinions.

"I'm afraid the old folks 'll think we're givin' 'em the shaka," said he, as Mammie slipped her arm within his.

"No, no. They don't mind."

"I guess they're wise enough to tumble to it that I don't come rubberin' around this neighborhood every two or three nights just to see 'em."

Mammie laughed and put an added pressure on his arm. The street-lights leaped into balls of flame and Artie felt himself rising into the air. What he passed the corner, he was beaming foolishly and had lost his voice.

He said something to tell Mammie—something which would be significant; something to warn her of the supreme question and prepare her for it.

They had come into the business street, where the trolley cars ran and the light was plentiful.

"A little more weather like this and we'll be hittin' the park," he observed.

"I'll be glad," she replied.

They walked in silence for a few moments and then he said, "Mammie, it's some good news."

"Well, I s'pose—you may be glad to hear it."

"What is it?"

"I got a boost in my pay."

"Oh, that's lovely."

"I'm gettin' thirty-five a week now."

"Now I'm jealous. All I get is eighteen."

"Say, Mammie, I'm sore to see you workin' at all."

"I had to do something when I got out of school, and they didn't need me around the house. I wouldn't mind it if I had a nicer man to work for."

"Who is the main guy up at your office—the bad news I spoke to the day I come up to see you?"

"Yes, that's him."

"I got it in good and hard for them fellows. Do you know, Mammie, this town's full of a lot o' two-by-four dubs that's got into purty fair jobs and it's made 'em so swelled up that you want to take a crack at one of 'em the minute you see him. I'll bet that guy up in your place don't know nothin' on earth except how to hold down his measly job, and he got that doin' all the mean work around the place. It does me lots o' good to call one o' them lads down. If I ever go up there again and he makes any play at me I'll come back at him so strong that he won't know what landed on him. Then fellows is counterfeits. They have to put on a horrible front so as to cover up what they don't know."

Mammie laughed, and said: "You've got him sized up just right."

"I'm workin' for a square guy," continued Artie. "He's all right. I used to give him all kinds o' hot and cold roasts, but since he went to the front for me and got my salary whooped I've got to be with him. I'll tell you, Mammie, he's this kind. If you'd go up to Morton tomorrow and say: 'How about it; can you take hold and run the earth for a year?' he'd put on one o' them dead-easy smiles and say he could do it without turnin' a hair. He's got the nerve to tackle anything. He don't know nothin', but he don't need to as long as he can make suckers think he's all right. There's Miller I've told you so much about. He knows more about the business than Morton ever wanted to know, but Morton draws more kake just because Miller ain't got the face. So I've got wise to this fact: No matter what you've got in your hand, play it as if you had a royal flush for a bosom

Not Much Good

Oswald Garrison Villard, the brilliant radical, during an address in Brooklyn, said of an aspect of the oil situation:

"Their explanations don't do us much good. It's like the waitress in the boarding house.

"Mammie," a boarder protested to her, 'this roast beef is overdone.'

"No, it ain't," Mammie answered. 'It's done over. It's the same what you had yesterday.'"

Water lily seeds were an important food in Egypt 4,000 years ago, and even today they are eaten by natives on the west coast of Africa.

Let's have some of the cold stuff. Mammie," said he, and he fed her over to the place.

"Give the lady some strawberry because it's red," said he to the clerk.

"No, you'll not," said she. "I want chocolate ice cream."

"Well, professor, you can make mine the same. Be a good fellow, too, when it comes to droppin' in the ice cream."

Memory Data
A recent study made by the psychology classes of the University of California has yielded some interesting data on childhood memory. "While the average age at which the students could call upon their memories for impressions is 3.57 years for girls and 3.39 for boys, some of the subjects were able to recall incidents that befell them as early as 6 months, 1 year and 6 months and 2 years. The majority of the early memories were of unpleasant events. The women recorded 42.6 per cent unpleasant and 35.2 per cent pleasant. The figures for the men were 53.2 per cent and 25 per cent, respectively. The remainder was of various degrees described as doubtful or mixed.

Advancement in Fiji

The Fiji Islanders are forsaking their spears and war clubs for automobiles, of which they have nearly 1,100, according to the Commerce department. Automobile registrations in this far-off island have increased from 100 in 1918 to 1,074 at the end of 1928.

This Man Says Improvement Has Been Wonderful

"Money Couldn't Buy the Good Orgatone Did Me," Says Lubbock Farmer.

"I have not only gained in health and strength since taking Orgatone, but my recovery has been remarkable," said J. W. Claunck, of Rural Route 3, Lubbock, Texas, while talking with the Orgatone representative.

"For eight long years I have suffered with my stomach and digestive troubles. My stomach was always full of gas and I was badly bloated and it was hard for me to breathe at times on account of the gas pressure and I thought I had heart trouble. I was also bothered with kidney trouble and had severe pains in my back and sides, and at times I would have hard lumps in my stomach until I would nearly die.

"Sometimes I would have severe spells of indigestion and would be in misery for hours and would cramp until I could hardly stand it. I got to where I could only eat the light foods and even then at times it hurt me. I tried all kinds of medicine but nothing seemed to do me any good.

"Orgatone was recommended to me and I decided to give it a trial. My improvement has been wonderful. I feel fine every day, and eat anything I want without slightest trouble in the least afterward. The gas and bloating spells have left me, and the hard lumps have quit forming in my stomach, and I haven't had the cramps since taking Orgatone. I sleep fine every night and get up in the morning feeling fine. Money couldn't buy the good Orgatone did me, and I know anyone who is suffering as I was, if they will give it a trial, will be benefitted by it."

Genuine Orgatone may be obtained in Hedley by the Wilson Drug Co.

A new INNER TUBE?

Let the extra miles in CONOCO gasoline buy it for you....

If you keep an accurate record of gasoline costs, you know that every extra mile you get from a gallon is so much velvet. In the aggregate these extra miles represent a handsome saving—enough to pay for those greatly desired accessories you've had in mind; perhaps a pair of new inner tubes or an extra set of spark plugs. That's why it will pay you well to fill only at the Conoco sign—the red triangle—the symbol of extra miles. Conoco gasoline is refined to produce maximum mileage without in any way sacrificing those other essentials of a good motor fuel—quick starting and rapid acceleration. It functions efficiently at every step in the driving operation with special emphasis on power and mileage.

Look for the new Conoco Red Triangle. Fill 'er up. Then speed away for extra miles.

Goddess of Peace Is Busy in Many Lands—Kellogg Pact Is Proclaimed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

IRENE, that goddess of peace, who has become familiar to all crossword puzzlers, was the star performer of the week. Her gracious presence was manifest in Washington, London, Paris, Rome, and Mexico; and over in Manchuria she could be seen peering through the fast thinning war clouds.

Our own National Capital was the stage for the more formal peace proceedings, for there President Hoover in an impressive ceremony declared effective the Kellogg-Briand treaty for the renunciation of war as a national policy of the 46 nations that have declared their acceptance of the pact. In the East room of the White House were gathered the representatives of 42 of those countries, together with former President Coolidge, former Secretary of State Kellogg, Senator Borah, and a few other invited guests. At the central seat of a long U-shaped table was the President, with Mr. Coolidge at his right. When the diplomats had entered while the Marine band was playing and had been introduced and seated, Mr. Hoover arose, and in a rather cautiously worded address, congratulated the assembly and the nations represented on the coming into force of "this additional instrument of humane endeavor to do away with war and to obtain by pacific means alone the settlement of international disputes." He expressed the thanks of the nation to Mr. Coolidge, Mr. Kellogg, Senator Borah and Representative Swanson for their diplomatic skill, devotion and high service. The President then read his proclamation making the pact effective.

There were no other speeches, and the assemblage adjourned to the state dining room where luncheon was served.

COINCIDENTAL with the ceremony in Washington were announcements from London and from the White House of action looking toward real curtailment of naval building programs by Great Britain and the United States. Declaring that his government is determined to secure a reduction of naval armaments through agreements with America, Prime Minister MacDonald told the house of commons that work had been suspended on two cruisers now under construction and contracts for a submarine depot ship and two submarines had been canceled. This, he indicated, was but the first step in an extensive program which would include not only canceling of contracts for ships contemplated and actually under construction, but also scrapping ships already built.

Of his conversations with Ambassador Davies, Mr. MacDonald said: "We have agreed on a principle of parity, and that, without departing in any way from that principle, a measure of elasticity can be allowed so as to meet the peace requirements of each nation. We have arranged that we shall not allow technical points to override the great public issues involved in our being able to come to an agreement."

The prime minister said that October seemed to be the most likely month when his contemplated visit to President Hoover would take place. The house of commons rose on Friday and was told by the prime minister it would not be summoned to sit again until October 26.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S response to Mr. MacDonald's announcement was immediate. He gave out word of action of three cruisers, the cancellation of which was to be laid down in the Kellogg-Briand pact. He also said that he would be laying down his own peace proposals in a special message to congress.

and he will find a universal welcome.

"Mr. MacDonald's statement marks a new departure in discussion of naval disarmament. The prime minister introduces the principle of parity, which we have now adopted, and its consummation means that Great Britain and the United States henceforth are not to compete in armament as potential opponents but to co-operate as friends in the reduction of it.

"We have three cruisers in this year's construction program which have been undertaken in the government navy yards, the detailed drawings for which are now in course of preparation. The actual keels would, in the ordinary course, be laid down some time this fall. Generally speaking, the British cruiser strength considerably exceeds American strength at the present time and the actual construction of these three cruisers would not be likely in themselves to produce inequality in the final result.

"We do not wish, however, to have any misunderstanding of our actions, and therefore we shall not lay these keels until there has been an opportunity for full consideration of their effect upon the final agreement for parity which we expect to reach, although our hopes of relief from construction lie more largely in the latter years of the program under the law of 1923."

WAR between China and Russia probably has been averted at least for the present. Reminded by the United States, Great Britain and France of their obligations as signers of the Kellogg treaty, both governments declared their intention to abide by the terms of that pact; and then at the suggestion of China representatives of Nanking and Moscow began a conference at Chang Chun. This, it was believed, would lead to direct negotiations for a peaceful settlement of the controversy over the Chinese Eastern railway. There were unconfirmed reports of several clashes along the Manchurian border, and Russian diplomats declared there could be no mediation between the two nations until China had restored the status quo. But the atmosphere was more peaceful, nevertheless. Japan, which has vast interests in Manchuria, was striving hard to prevent warfare, and both China and Russia insisted they had no desire to resort to arms. Secretary of State Stimson in Washington was especially active in the cause of peace in the Far East.

PREMIER POINCARÉ of France triumphed in his endeavor to obtain from the French parliament a ratification of the debt agreements with the United States and Great Britain. The chamber of deputies authorized the action by a vote of 300 to 292 after a long and stormy debate which sent the premier to a sick bed. The senate discussed the question more quietly and then concurred. Ratification by France was so long deferred that congress will have to take action on the agreement all over again next fall. The house ratified it two years ago but the senate refused to consider it until France had acted. Meanwhile a new house has been elected and the representatives must pass on the agreement again.

CONSEQUENT on the signing of the Lateran treaties that ended the long quarrel between Italy and the Vatican, the pope, for the first time since the destruction of the papal state in 1870, emerged from the Vatican, and entered the portico of St. Peter's, ending the self-imposed imprisonment of the head of the Catholic church. However, Pius XI did not leave the boundaries of the sovereign Vatican state established by the treaties, for St. Peter's is included in its territory. The occasion was a great one not only for Rome but for the whole Catholic world. Thousands of Italian soldiers, Fascist and city police guarded the plaza of the church while perhaps three hundred thousand devout Catholics knelt as the procession moved from the Vatican in close resemblance to the Corpus Christi processions. Pontifical gendarmes, with the papal colors, the Palatine guard and heralds with trumpets led large bodies of various clerical dignitaries, and after the church doors had been opened, the tion of the Blessed Sacrament was performed.

With the assistance of the Italian officials the whole affair was given a holy and solemn aspect that kept it from being merely an immense spectacle. The crowds were asked to refrain from cheering, and the making of photographs, moving or still, was forbidden.

MEXICO'S part in the general peace concert was the ending of the Catholic rebellion by the surrender of the "Cristeros" and their leaders in several states, and the announcement by the prosecuting attorney general that all legal suits instituted against persons accused of rebellious activities in the name of the church, sedition and furnishing aid to rebels, have been suspended throughout the twenty-eight states and three territories of Mexico on orders of President Portes Gil.

THREE banking institutions in Pas-saic, N. J., owned by the Bankers' Securities company, whose president is former Senator Edward L. Edwards, were closed by the state commissioner of banking because, he said, their capital has been impaired by assets of doubtful value. The affair is mysteriously tied up with the recent kidnaping of the executive vice president of one of the concerns and his resignation after he was released.

Three more Florida banks have closed. They are the First National of St. Augustine, the Phifer State bank of Gainesville, and the Bank of Ormond, winter home of J. D. Rockefeller. They shut their doors because of excessive withdrawals and for the protection of depositors.

Announcement was made of another huge bank merger in Chicago. The institutions to be consolidated are the Foreman National bank and the State Bank of Chicago, with the Foreman National corporation as an investment subsidiary. The institutions will have total resources of nearly $229,000,000.

GERMANY captured the speed championship of the Atlantic ocean when the new liner Bremen arrived at New York 4 days, 17 hours and 42 minutes out from Cherbourg. This clipped 8 hours and 52 minutes from the record held for some years by the Cunarder Mauretania. The huge North German Lloyd liner also broke all records for a single day's run, having made 713 miles on the last day. It maintained an average speed per hour of 27.83 knots, or almost 33 miles, for the entire trip.

MEMBERS of the federal farm board held a conference in Chicago with 30 invited officials of grain growers' co-operatives, the purpose being to acquaint the board with the problems now existing in the marketing of wheat and coarse grains and to obtain opinions of the grain growers as to the methods to be adopted by the board under the terms of the farm relief act. From Chicago the board went to Baton Rouge, La., to attend the annual meeting of the American Institute of Co-Operation.

WILLIAM HOHENZOLLERN is now free to return to Germany from his exile in Doorn, Holland, for the bill for protection of the republic, a clause of which excluded him from the country, has expired and the reichstag refused to renew it. It is reliably stated, however, that the former kaiser has no intention of re-entering Germany.

LONDON experienced a "political sensation" when it was announced that Lord Lloyd, British high commissioner of Egypt, had resigned by request because of his difference of opinion with the Labor government over Egyptian policy. Lord Lloyd has been the actual dictator in Egypt and he is held responsible by the Egyptian Nationalists for the coup d'etat by which the last parliament was dissolved and the present Egyptian government constituted by the fiat of King Fuad.

CHOICE OF MILLIONS because it's such a pleasant way to avoid constipation

THERE'S no real reason why a breakfast food that keeps you regular shouldn't be appetizing too. Food should be appetizing if the digestive juices are to do their work.

That is probably why Post's Bran Flakes appears every morning on millions of breakfast tables. People know the effectiveness of its bran content in encouraging regular habits. And they genuinely like its crisp, nutty flavor. It's such a pleasant way of keeping fit.

Try it with fruit, in muffins or bread—the crisp flavor always adds. And for effectiveness eat it regularly. Call up your grocer and begin tomorrow.
