BERT HALL GUILTY; 30 YEARS IN PRISON

The trial of Bert Hall, charged with the murder of City Marshal J. H. Richey of this city on the 31st of last December was called Monday morning in the District court at Memphis, and has been attracting wide attention the first three days of the week.

Wednesday night, after deliberating four hours, the jury announced a verdict of guilty and assessed punishment of thirty years in the penitentiary.

There were a number of witnesses from Hedley, Clarendon, Borger, Amarillo and elsewhere, and evidence was strong against Hall, who is said to have done the actual killing. Of the four men implicated in the burglary and murder, Joe Danwoody got 99 years, Hall 80 years, Webb has never been caught, and Jimmie Brown turned state's evidence.

The Hall verdict is a distinct disappointment to those more or less acquainted with the details of the case.

S. B. Scroggins, 62, who was under bond on a charge of killing John Slaughter, Clarendon night watchman, about two years ago, dropped dead from heart failure Tuesday at Creta, Okla., according to a news dispatch in Wednesday's Wichita Record News.

Hon. Marvin Jones, Member of Congress for this district, was a recent visitor in Hedley, a guest at the home of his uncle, R. H. Jones.

J. W. Bond and Loren Bond of Canyon were visitors in Hedley the past week end.

SINGERS, TAKE NOTICE

There will be a singing at the B. M. A. Church in West Hedley Sunday afternoon, Sept. 22, at 3 o'clock. We have extended an invitation to Lella Lake, McKnight and all other classes. Come one and all.

Will W. Holland, Pres.

CITATION BY PUBLICATION

The State of Texas. To the Sheriff or Any Constable of Donley County, Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summon by publication in such newspaper in Donley county as is required by law, for the length of time and in the manner required by law, Jessie Glover to be and appear before the Honorable District Court of Donley county, Texas, on the 2nd Monday in October, 1929, the same being the 14th day of said month, then and there to answer the petition of Lorena Bethel Glover upon her petition filed in said Court on the 4th day of September, 1929, wherein Lorena Bethel Glover is plaintiff, and Jessie Glover is defendant, being cause No. 1648 on the civil docket of said Court, the nature of plaintiff's demand being for a divorce upon the grounds of cruel treatment, and for the restoration of her maiden name, alleging that she has been lawfully married to defendant, and that such bonds of matrimony still exist.

Herein fail not, but have this writ before said Court on the first day of the next term thereof with your return thereon in writing showing how you have executed the same.

Witness my hand and seal of said Court at office in Clarendon this 19th day of September, 1929.

POULTRY AND CLUB SHOW AT CLARENDON

The Poultry and Club Show at Clarendon Tuesday and Wednesday of this week was a grand success both in point of attendance and quality of exhibits.

It was impossible at the time of going to press for us to obtain a list of the awards. However, the following information of local interest was given us:

The Hedley Rural Club won first prize with their One-Act Play put on Tuesday night.

Roberta Mann was awarded a $5 prize on a pen of White Langshans.

The Hedley Club won second prize with their One-Act Play put on Wednesday night.

J. S. Grooms had a fine display of Barred Rocks in the Poultry exhibit, but we have had no report on these.

Hedley folks had bad luck with their booth. One of the glass shelves broke, destroying some of the choicest specimens.

Martin won the community honors; Howard and Reynolds of Lella Lake carried off individual honors.

MRS. MINNIE KILLIAN

Mrs. Minnie Killian, widow of the late F. A. Killian, and for many years a well loved and respected resident of Hedley, died last Sunday at the home of her son, Johnny Killian, at Memphis. Funeral services were held in Hedley Monday afternoon, conducted by Rev. V. A. Hansard, assisted by Revs. E. M. Grigsby and W. S. Crawford. A large crowd assembled and followed the remains to Rowe Cemetery to pay their last sad tribute to the memory of this good woman, fine neighbor and faithful, consecrated Christian.

Surviving Mrs. Killian are three children, Johnny and Elizabeth of Memphis, and Raymond of Hedley; her mother, Grandma Shelton of Hedley, a sister, Mrs. S. A. Killian of Hedley; and two brothers, T. P. Shelton of Fort Worth and Dayton Shelton of Clarendon.

Our sincere sympathy is extended to the bereaved family.

there a reminder of another friend of the Pilgrims. It is a granite monument with a bronze tablet bearing this inscription: "Samsonet, an Indian Sagamore of Pennaquid who welcomed the English at Plymouth, gave a deed of the land where this stone was quarried, and of that where it stands, to John Brown of New Harbor 15th July, 1625, and acknowledged it before Abraham Shurt, it being the first deed properly executed in New England." One other New England statue which should be mentioned before leaving that part of the country is the famous bronze by Cyrus E. Dallin, "The Appeal to the Great Spirit," which stands before the museum of fine arts in Boston. This was the last of a series of four statues made by the famous sculptor more than twenty years ago which represented the racial tragedy in which our national life began. The first "The Signal of Peace" stands in Lincoln park, Chicago, and represents the friendly meeting of white and red man. "The Medicine Man" in Fairmount park, Philadelphia, depicts the red man's suspicion of the invader while "Protest" shows the warfare of the tribesmen against settlers. "The Appeal to the Great Spirit" illustrates the surrender of the Indian, not to human enemies but to a higher friend. One other of Dallin's symbolical sculptures should be added to the list of his masterpieces. It is "The Scout" which stands in Penn Valley park in Kansas City, Mo., an appropriate locale, for this was the eastern terminus of the Oregon and Santa Fe trails and the mounted Indian is looking over the vast empire where he made his last stand before the onrush of the white settlement of the West.

The recent unveiling of the Chanco monument in Virginia is a reminder that Pocahontas, one of the two great Indian heroines in American history, was not the only one whom Virginians have reason to hold in grateful remembrance. The statue of Pocahontas, which stands on Jamestown Island, is perhaps the best known of all Indian statues. To see the memorial to another Indian heroine you must go clear across the continent to City park in Portland, Ore. There stands Sakakawea, her hand outstretched to the west, pointing the way as she did more than a hundred years ago when she guided Lewis and Clark on their famous expedition into the wilderness. North Dakota also has honored the memory of this Indian girl with a statue which stands on the grounds of the state capitol at Bismarck. Virginia, however, is not the only state which had a Pocahontas. Near the town of Benton, Tenn., stands a cairn of stones bearing a marker with the following inscription: "In Memory of Nancy Ward, Princess and Prophetess of the Cherokee Nation. The Pocahontas of Tennessee. The Constant Friend of the Pioneer, Born 1738—Died 1822."

In the Congressional cemetery in Washington, D. C., stands a monument which is not only unique in that burying ground of notables of our nation. It is also a memorial to an Indian warrior and statesman said by many to be the greatest of all his race known to the white man and honored at the time of his death with a military funeral accorded only those ranking as general officers of the United States army—the only man in history to have been paid such honor.

Engraved on the plain shaft that marks the place are these words: "Pushmataha Chief lies here. This monument was erected by his brother, who were associated with him in the year 1824 to their nation in the year 1824 to the United States. Pushmataha, of great distinction. He was a friend to an extraordinary man under all cir-

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THIS year marks the tenth anniversary of the establishment of a day for honoring the memory of the original inhabitants of this continent—the American Indian. It was in 1919 that the Illinois legislature authorized the observance of Indian day on the fourth Friday in September of each year. Since that time the idea has spread to other states and all over the country the day is marked with various ceremonies.

In connection with this event, it is interesting to note how many permanent memorials have been erected within recent years to perpetuate the fame of some individual red man or of the Indian as a race. The past year has seen the addition of several to an already long list of such memorials. Outstanding among these have been the two Indian equestrian statues of heroic size which were made a part of the main project of the monumental Grant park decorative scheme, the twin bridges across the railroad tracks at the foot of Congress street, on the lake front of Chicago. Characterized as "two of the ugliest but most impressive Indians ever cast in bronze," these statues, modeled by Ivan Mestrovic, the great Yugo-Slav sculptor, idealize the fighting spirit of the American Indian as not done before.

Other memorials to a vanished race (and that term is used purposely, because the primitive Indian is not merely the "vanishing race," but very definitely a "vanished race") include the life-like bust of Chief Orantem, of the Achinkeshack tribe, which was recently presented to the Bergen County Historical society in New Jersey; the monument to Chief Straw of the Delawares, unveiled at Strawtown, near Noblesville, Ind.; and a massive granite boulder erected at Surrey Courthouse, Virginia, which recalls to the people of that state their indebtedness to an Indian named Chanco. A bronze tablet on that boulder tells his story. It reads: "In memory of Chanco, the Indian who lived with Richard Pace at Pace's Paines in this county and who, on the night before the massacre of March 22, 1622, informed Pace of Opechancanough's plot and thus saved the Jamestown colony."

And these are only a few of the many memorials to the American Indian which have been erected in every state in the Union. An entire book could be written about these memorials and the heroic deeds to which they testify. This article, therefore, cannot hope to contain a complete list. In New England alone, for instance, a plan was set on foot several years ago to erect one hundred monuments to all the tribes and to a number of individual Indians who lived in that section of the country. Just the other day it was announced that a memorial of a different sort from the usual was to be established on Mount Hope in Rhode Island as a shrine to perpetuate the memory of King Philip, the great Wampanoag warrior. On that historic ridge will be built a fireproof museum for housing objects of historic Indian value and it will be a shrine, an archeological sanctuary for new England history. Massachusetts long ago honored the memory of King Philip's father, Massasoit, with a huge bronze statue of "the great Sachem of the Wampanoags, protector and preserver of the Pilgrims," which was erected at Plymouth during the Pilgrim tercentenary in 1921.

Few "Small Towns" Not Thoroughly Up to Date

The average small town now offers about everything the city has except the "rush hour" and a few other inconveniences. Convincing proof of the changes taking place in the life of the small centers is found on almost every hand. Particularly is this true in many of the older centers, which a few years back were inclined to be satisfied with conditions as they were.

There is now a new life and renewed interest. In times gone by many towns were prone to stumble on after the arrival and departure of its few daily trains. Now most centers of any consequence either are on or near one of the arteries of the state's road system. This has resulted in an almost constant traffic, such as the operation of bus lines on regular schedules and parades of motor cars, in addition to rail service.

It is a rather slow locality of any size that does not have its chamber of commerce working for the town's welfare and advancement. Country clubs, golf courses and swimming pools are becoming common. Likewise the "talkies" are about as prevalent in the smaller communities as in the cities. And the radio is tuned in on the same offerings furnished elsewhere. The women are playing as much bridge as their sisters in the more populous centers. The girls are just as modern and the boys just as sheikish and up-to-date as those in the city.—Exchange.

Money Wisely Expended on Paint and Varnish

Cleaning up the individual premises of a home owner or occupant is the first essential element in improving the appearance and health conditions of the property. After this is done painting and varnishing may follow. A small amount of money invested each year in paint and varnish keeps the property in good condition with no periods of deterioration or expensive repairs. A good surface of paint on the woodwork, both interior and exterior seals up the pores in the wood, keeping out germs, insects and decay.

The home owner may establish a system of painting his home, so that parts of it may be painted one year, other parts the next, and still more parts the third year. In this manner no heavy expenditure faces the home owner every three years or so. And at the same time, the home always appears to be in first-class condition.

Painting also serves as a health measure. Any surface that is painted regularly cannot harbor germs that menace the health of the family.

Problems of Nature Lovers

In Nature Magazine Charles Sumner Bird, Jr., chairman of the Massachusetts committee on Needs and Uses of Open Spaces, had a most interesting article, in the course of which he says:

"It is recognized today that beauty is not a luxury, but an absolute necessity to the complete life of every normal human being. The man who does not crave the beauties of nature has a twisted soul and should be an object of pity; and if he should be the slave of a blind commercialism which impels him to destroy for others the beauties of nature, he is a bad citizen. Every problem of importance today is common to all countries; and England, the cradle of the Industrial age, faces difficulties corresponding to those which nature lovers in America are mobilizing to solve. It may be said here that the sooner this mobilization on as large a scale as possible is consummated the sooner will the ravages on the face of nature be stayed."

Protecting the Tree

Strong wire cable scientifically installed in the tops of trees will strengthen the forks and hold the branches safe from storms that would otherwise be fatally destructive. To be effective the job must be done correctly and carefully. The weight of the limbs, the strain of the wind, the strength of the wood and the manner of branching must all be considered if proper results are to be secured. It is work for trained men.

Even so, it is comparatively inexpensive work and certainly is more than justified as a means of insuring trees against the ravages of the wind storms of summer and the sleet storms of winter.

Driveways Worth While

An attractive concrete driveway adds much to the appearance of the grounds, because it enhances beauty and makes for neatness. Its utility lies in its providing safe passage to the street or highway the year round. Automatically a good driveway increases the value of property. It matters not how modest the home, a limited space in lawn, the driveway is an important and adjunct to so and garden.

ACTS LIKE IT WAS MADE JUST FOR HER

Amarillo Housewife Hadn't Seen a Well Day for Fourteen Years Until She Took Orgatone.

"This Orgatone acts just like it was made especially to fit my case," said Mrs. J. L. Greene, residing at 1619 3/4 Lincoln St., Amarillo, Texas, in an interview at her home.

"The fact is, I hadn't seen a well day in fourteen years," continued Mrs. Greene, "and almost as soon as I started taking Orgatone it went right to the seat of my trouble and anybody could see I was getting better. My stomach gave me lots of trouble and I had practically no appetite and sometimes it seemed like I hardly ate enough to keep me on my feet. In fact, I could not eat things I liked, as they would sour on my stomach causing gas to form and put me in misery for hours."

"Most everybody here seemed to be taking Orgatone for their troubles and I got some for myself. I have not taken two bottles and it is surprising the results I have obtained. My appetite is good and I now eat a good square meal, and anything I want, and feel all right afterwards. All that gas and tired, worn out feeling that used to bother me so much is a thing of the past. I rest better and get up in the morning refreshed and feeling fine. Orgatone has given me the energy I needed and I'm now strong enough to go about my house work without tiring out like I used to. I am sure glad I found Orgatone when I did, for it has done more good than any thing else I ever tried before, and I mean to stick to it from now on."

Genuine Orgatone may be obtained in Hedley by the Wilcox Drug Co.

News Gathering Both

Simple and Effective

Life in the highly sophisticated South Sea Isles is by no means as newsless as one might hazard by measuring the number of miles separating them from Fleet street (writes a globe-trotting correspondent). The Papete planters have bestowed the pleasing name of coconut wireless on the means by which their wives and daughters keep up with all the news that really matters. Every sun-up the native maids meet at the market-place and pool the previous day's domestic log while they do the forthcoming day's shopping. These reporters bring back their gleanings to the housewife news editors, who publish to their yawning spouses, over the breakfast coffee, "All the News That's Fit to Print" (and a great deal that isn't). In consequence, what every family does not know about every other family can positively be sprawled across the head of a pin.

When Authors Are Rich

Upton Sinclair, the novelist and radical, was complaining about the poor pay accorded to authors.

"When I hear that an author is rich," he said, "I always think of Sinickson."

"I met Sinickson, the famous novelist, in my youth.

"Yes, oh, yes, I am a rich man," he told me.

"How did you acquire your fortune, Mr. Sinickson, if I may ask?"

"At a single stroke," said Sinickson.

"Of your pen?" said I.

"No; of my paralytic aunt," said he."

The fine marksmanship of Francis McClure, a farmer living at Belfry, Pa., saved the life of his son David, eighteen, when the latter was about to be gored by a bull. CHAPTER XIV

Through a Sea of Floating Brimstone to Fiji

We had all along figured that we might have to go to the Fiji Islands, where a constant stream of sailing ships was always taking aboard copra for the munition factories in the United States. But we also were fully aware that sailing in a little open boat from Cook Islands to the Fijis might easily be a perilous venture. Our voyage so far had gone fairly smoothly. There had been no hurricanes, and we thanked God for that. But now the weather turned against us for a whole week, and we began to think we had run across St. Swithin's day. We had forgotten—if we had ever known it—that this was the time when the equinoctial storms broke in those waters. Had we known it, we never would have headed for the Fijis.

For ten days we sailed through a drenching downpour, the rainy season. The sea was choppy. The wind whipped the spray and the crests of waves over us in driving sheets. In our cockleshell, things were afloat, and it was bitter cold at night. We threw our mattresses overboard. In their soaked condition they were far worse to sleep on than the wet planks, and there was no use keeping them any longer. When the sun occasionally shone, our drenched clothes would dry quickly and stiffen like boards of salt. They rubbed and scratched the skin off our bodies. When they got wet again, which they promptly did, the salt would soak into the raw flesh and inflame it. Our bodies felt as though they were on fire. We had no regular sleep. Instead, a man would doze away suddenly at almost any time. Even the helmsman would drowse off like that, and, with a free rudder, the boat would veer around crazily.

One morning, when dawn came, we could hardly believe our eyes. The sea had turned from its normal blue to yellow. On scooping up a pall of it we found a scum that we concluded must be brimstone and ash. We were sailing through a field of brimstone. For three days we saw from horizon to horizon this yellowish expanse of volcanic dust. It no doubt came from some submarine eruption, perhaps the one we could thank for the tidal wave that had wrecked the Seeadler. The waves carried the gritty dust into the boat. It penetrated everything. Every surface became like sandpaper. Our skin grew rough and caked with it. Our blankets were like sandpaper, and so were our clothes.

As the voyage grew longer, we had to be more and more sparing with our drinking water. The supply began to run low. We could no longer collect rain water in our sails. They were coated with salt. We tried to wash them out in the rain, but then the spray and the waves kept washing in and kept the sails salty and added a further salting to any water we collected. Our supply of fruit that we had picked up in the Cook Islands ran out now, and about all we had left was hardtack, not in itself a thirst-quenching kind of food. Our gums dried out and were like rough iron. We sucked our fingers and gnawed at our knuckles to bring a flow of saliva and refresh our burning mouths.

And then came the sailor's worst enemy, scurvy. Our diet of hardtack, lack of exercise, and general hardships brought it on. Our knees swelled up so badly that we had to cut out our trousers. The rocking of the boat knocked them together or against the wooden sides, and then the pain was almost unendurable. Our lips were black and broken. Our tongues were swollen and hard. It was as if you had a stone in your mouth. Our gums became snow white and seemed to recede. Our teeth felt as though they were sticking far out of our jaws. They hurt constantly and were loose and felt as if they were going to drop out. With these shaking teeth we ate our hardtack. I never before knew how hard hardtack was. We had an ending headache, and it seemed as if something were pressing our eyes right out of their sockets. We got water in our legs, and could hardly stand any more. We had to slide around the seats to do what had to be done in navigating the boat. In scurvy, the blood turns to water, first in the legs and then upward. When it reaches the heart you die. Where the blood is water the flesh is white, and the blood is water the flesh is white, and the blood is water the flesh is white.

pect of its arrival became more and more attractive. "Boys," I said, "let us take pieces of ballast iron and tie them around our necks. One plunge and in a few seconds all our pains will be gone." "Yes. All right." There were mutterings of assent.

But Parnen, the youngest, the one who was nearest death, picked up the comic volume, Fritz Reuter's "Trip to Constantinople," and began to read a funny story. We all laughed. That book had eased many a hard hour before, on this ghastly voyage, and now, perhaps, it saved our lives. And so we continued on with but one instinct left in us, the sailor's instinct to navigate his craft. Mechanically, without any particular hope, without any particular thought, we trimmed the sails, guided the helm and calculated our position as best we could. Nautical science was at a low ebb among us now. We were too far gone to reckon exactly where we were, and were only vague in our steering. All we knew was that we should steer to the west where the island groups were.

I won't try to say how we felt when we saw a speck on the horizon and the speck grew bigger and turned into the familiar green of a tropical island. We had been so much like dead men who had thought that nothing could ever make us glad again. By Joe, that sight gladdened our hearts, though we grew even keener, but it was the weakness of happiness. As we drew near, we thought of nothing but land, fresh water, and soft food, a land banana, for our loose, stony teeth never mind ships or capturing ships. Never mind being taken prisoner. We headed straight toward a crude pier that stuck out into the water.

A crowd of a hundred natives, perhaps less, were gathered at the landing place watching our approach. They were ferocious looking black warriors. We had now passed from the region of the brown, indolent Polynesians to those of the black, warlike Melanesians.

"What ugly customers," I said to Leudemann. "They look like cannibals."

The forbidding battle array on shore stirred a new strength in us. It certainly looked like a cannibal island, and miserable as we were, still we could not escape the thought of our skin and bones being fattened up in preparation for an old-time South sea banquet.

"Clear the boat for action!" I ordered. Even in our present straits we could still remember our old naval ways.

The German flag went jerking to our masthead, and rifles and machine guns were displayed.

A shout went up on shore and a babel of talk. Voices yelled in pidgin English.

"You Germans? How you get here from way off? Come on. Germans great warriors."

Still wary, we drew near the landing pier and talked with the natives. They were unmistakably friendly, very cordial. From what they told us they had, in the first place, grievances against their masters, the British. Then quite a number had been recruited and sent to the trenches in France. There some had been killed and some wounded, and most who survived had contracted tuberculosis from the unaccustomed climate and had been returned to the island worn-out shells of men.

They said there were no white men on the island, and we longed to go ashore. With our scurvy-swollen legs we could hardly stand, however. It wouldn't do to be hauled ashore as cripples. It would not increase these warriors' respect for Germans as fighting men: Cripples do not fare well among savage peoples, and we thought it best not to reveal our impotence. So we refused the natives' invitations to partake of their hospitality, told them we must hurry on to fight the British, and asked for fresh water and bananas. They brought great gourds full of water and bunches of bananas. We drew up to the dock and they handed these precious supplies down for us.

We had our fill of bananas and water, and, with shouts resounding from the shore, set sail again. This lucky spot was Niue, an outlying isle of the Fiji group. The sun blazed down upon us, but a fair wind carried us along briskly. The first day after leaving Niue we felt better. The second day we were on the road to high good health. It is amazing the curative effect of fresh fruit, especially bananas, when you are suffering from scurvy. They seem to put new life and blood into you and draw the sickness right out of the body as though some huge and marvelous poultice had been applied.

Our cure was completed at the isle of Katakanga. It is quite a large isle and inhabited by more natives.

We came to the main body of the Fijis, and sailed into a large gulf surrounded by distant islands. It was night, and we decided to wait till morning to see how many ships were passing and what island they were bound for. We reefed our sails and threw out our sea anchor, that sack-like drag of canvas that keeps a boat from turning broadside to the wind and waves and from drifting too fast. We lay down for a decent night's sleep. We would need all our energies for the morrow.

A sudden shout. I awakened. It was just daybreak. Straight ahead was a wild white line of surf. It broke over a long, low coral reef, and just behind it was a high cliff. We had run into a strong current during the night. Krauss had awakened just in time to see that it had carried us perilously near the reef. The wind was sweeping us toward the breakers. "Raise sail," I shouted.

We scrambled frantically and raised the canvas. The wind was inshore. We could not head into it. We were being blown slowly, inexorably onto the reef.

People accustomed to the surfs along ordinary coasts have no idea of what breakers are like off the islands of the South Pacific. The surf all over the Pacific is particularly strong. But when it breaks over a mid-oceanic coral reef nothing can live in it. The strongest swimmer is sure to be dashed to pieces against the jagged coral.

And there wasn't the slightest hope of our moving against the wind and backing away from the reef. Slowly, slowly we were nearing it. The breakers roared like thunder. In a few moments we would be flung into that death trap of water and coral.

Pistol in hand, I shouted something to the effect that I didn't intend to be ground to death by the breakers on that jagged coral.

The others looked for their pistols. One could not find his. Between the pull of the current and the power of our sails, we were drifting along the reef, edging toward it. The wind gave us an extra push. We were in the backwash, only a few yards away from the breakers. And still one man could not find his pistol. Instinctively, we all waited. And that was what saved our lives. Suddenly we saw the reef drop away, slanting back at a sharp angle, and a moment later we were drifting parallel to the coral.

It was then that I discovered there were two kinds of breathing. In times of terrible danger, the breath comes in short, quick puffs. The danger gone, you breathe deeply. By Joe, when we got clear of that reef I breathed such a breath that it seemed to go right down to my heels. I sat looking at my boys' faces. When we got our pistols ready, their faces had set tense, as if cast from bronze. With the danger past, their faces held the same set expression. It was an hour before their old expressions came back again. Two of my fellows found patches of gray in their hair afterward. (Maybe they had been there for years only to be discovered now!) Another's leg was absolutely blue in spots. In those frightful moments he had, without knowing it, grasped his thigh in a clutch like a drowning man. I tell you, by Joe, it was the hand of God that put the curve in that reef! When one of the boys, I don't know which, said in surprise, "We are clear!" I knew it was the hand of God. (TO BE CONTINUED.)

Objected to Shaving by Monkey Apprentice

Sir Harry Lauder is fond of telling the following story:

The sailor son of an Arbroath barber had brought home with him a large, hairy, and particularly ugly monkey, which he presented to his father. The barber trained the monkey to assist him in the lathering of his customers' chins, such to their content.

work diligently on the customer's face. Afterwards he grabbed a razor and started to strop it with equal diligence, but in a grossly careless manner. Then he clambered up on the arm of the chair and made as if to begin shaving the alarmed customer.

"No, no, no, wee mannie!" said the latter, jumping to his feet and pushing the monkey down.

Graf Zeppelin Arrives at Lakehurst, Completing Trip Around World.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

WITH its arrival at Lakehurst, N. J., the Graf Zeppelin completed its epochal trip around the world. In the course of which only three stops were made for refueling—at Friedrichshafen, Tokyo and Los Angeles. The Zeppelin made a smooth landing at 8:07 o'clock Thursday morning, having circled the globe in 21 days and 7 hours, breaking all previous records. It had flown approximately 20,000 miles and was in the air about eleven and one-half days.

While the huge dirigible displayed most excellent qualities in the way of safety, speed and cruising ability, the lion's share of the credit for the feat must be given to Dr. Hugo Eckener, the airship's indomitable commander and chief pilot. His passengers and crew are giving him unstinted praise for the skill he showed throughout the globe-encircling trip.

Every southern Californian who could get there greeted the Zeppelin at Los Angeles, which was reached on Monday after a flight across the Pacific enlivened only by an electric storm encountered soon after the departure from Tokyo. As it passed down the California coast the airship on Sunday had circled over San Francisco. The getaway from Los Angeles was not easy and quantities of ballast and extra equipment had to be dumped to give it enough lifting power. As it was, the dirigible barely avoided running into a network of high power electric wires near Mines field.

An interesting story comes from Japan to the effect that the Zeppelin's safe crossing of the Pacific prevented the "seppuku" or suicidal atonement of the five officers and twelve enlisted men of the Japanese navy who held themselves blameless for the slight accident that the airship suffered in being taken from the hangar at Kasumigaura airport. Such action by the Japanese would have been in accord with their ancient custom, and the wives of the men might have followed them in death.

CLEVELAND was "up in the air" all week, enjoying the airplane races and exhibitions of flying and the big aircraft exposition. Among the star attractions was Mrs. Louise McPhetridge Thaden of Pittsburgh, who won the women's derby that started at Santa Monica. Fifteen of the nineteen ladybirds who started finished the race. Marvel Crossed was killed, as related last week, and three others were forced out by mishaps. Gladys O'Donnell of Long Beach, Calif., won second place and Amelia Earhart, transatlantic flyer, was third. Colonel Lindbergh and his wife, who is now a student flyer, were interested and interesting visitors.

The United States will have no representative in the Schneider cup races in England, for Lieut. Alford Williams was unable to complete the tests of his plane in time and withdrew. Italy's best racing flyer, Captain Motta, was killed while testing one of his planes, and the British were asked on that account to postpone the races, but refused because the financial sacrifices would be too great.

FROM Dan to Beersheba," and a great deal farther in all directions. Palestine and the neighboring countries were aflame with revolt. Arabs were massacring Jews in a score of cities, towns and villages, the native police and military forces were impotent, and Great Britain was rushing warships, troops, marines and airplanes to the Holy Land to restore peace if possible.

The trouble, which has been simmering for months, broke out with clamor between Arabs and Jews in Jerusalem. A riot broke out in the city, and the British government sent a large force of troops to quell the disturbance. The situation is still tense, and the British are working hard to restore order.

tion to many other places in Palestine. Latest reports, made indefinite by strict press censorship, said the Arabs of Transjordan and Syria were rising in revolt, demanding their "complete rights" and the abrogation of European control in those lands. Upon Great Britain fell the burden of meeting the situation, and she responded swiftly. Her troop-carrying planes carried hundreds of soldiers from the Palestine ports inland, and her bombing planes went into operation against the Arabs at Jerusalem and elsewhere. At Haifa, where Arabs were attacking the Jewish quarter, the British marines were said to have fired on both Arabs and Jews, killing and wounding many.

Leaders of American Jewish organizations called on President Hoover and Secretary Stimson and asked that they take every necessary step to protect the lives and property of American nationals. They were assured of the deep sympathy of both Mr. Hoover and Mr. Stimson for the Palestine sufferers and were told that Great Britain was doing everything possible to restore tranquil conditions. Then they called on Sir Esme Howard, British ambassador, and were given the same assurance by him.

WEEKS of wrangling at The Hague came to an end with an arrangement for the putting into operation of the Young plan for German reparations and for getting the allied troops out of the Rhineland. The British claims for more German money than the Young commission allotted them are to be satisfied to the extent of about 83 per cent of the demands, the amount being made up by various devices of the other creditor nations.

The German government is to pay first $11,662,000 toward the maintenance of French, British and Belgian garrisons totaling 56,000 men now holding the Coblenz and Mayence bridgeheads and adjacent areas. The British force on the Rhine numbers only 6,250. This places a premium on the allies liberating the Rhine by Christmas, as thereafter, or whenever Germany's donation of $11,662,000 is expended, the French, British and Belgians must pay for their own troop maintenance pro rata.

"We bought back our Rhineland provinces for $11,662,000," one German delegate remarked dryly. The Young plan, though scheduled to start on September 1, really becomes effective from November 1, according to the plans of the delegates of the great powers. The beginning of the plan is truly timed by the eight months given the French to evacuate all Rhine zones—thatis, from November 1, 1929, to June 30, 1930.

The powers propose holding a resumption of the conference in Switzerland—Montreux or Lucerne—during the first days of October after the League of Nations assembly ends, to wind up the final agreements.

THE "LINCOLN Debater," a bronze statue of heroic size, was unveiled at Freeport, Ill., the scene of the most famous of the Lincoln-Douglas debates in August, 1858. Ten thousand persons attended the ceremonies and listened to Senator George W. Norris, who delivered the chief address. The Nebraska took the opportunity to make a hot attack on the electric power trust, the system of Presidential elections, the abuse of power by federal judges and the building of big armies and navies. During the 1928 Presidential campaign, Senator Norris was mentioned as a possible third party candidate. Referring to the present system of electing Presidents, he charged that election of an independent candidate for President is possible in theory but absolutely impossible in practice. He argued that the electoral college should be abolished.

LAWRENCE D. TYSON, United States senator from Tennessee, died in a sanitarium near Philadelphia where he had been under treatment for several weeks. He was just completing his first term in the senate. Tyson was born in Greenville, S. C., sixty-seven years ago and was graduated from West Point in 1885. While commander of cadets at the University of Tennessee he studied law and later practiced in Knoxville. He served as a colonel of volunteers in the Spanish-American war and then went into the Tennessee legislature. During the World war he distinguished himself as a brigadier general commanding a brigade of Tennessee and Carolina troops attached to the "Old Hickory" division, which saw service in France.

One of the outstanding German figures in the World war, Field Marshal Limon von Sanders, passed away in Munich. He was the cavalry officer to whom Mohammed Reshid V, sultan of Turkey, by arrangement with Kaiser William II, entrusted in 1918 the reorganization of the Turkish army. He gained in the Turkish defenses at Gallipoli in 1915 and after the British retirement organized the Turkish fighting forces in Asia Minor and conducted operations in 1918 in Palestine. The Turkish debacle, however, nullified his efforts.

CHINA and Russia seemed to be marking time last week in their Manchurian quarrel, though the propaganda agencies of both nations were active. The Soviet radio station broadcasting from Khabarovsk, Siberia, kept telling the Chinese that America and France were plotting to set up an international commission to control the Chinese Eastern railway, and considerable anti-American feeling was created in Harbin until the newspapers there printed a true statement concerning President Hoover's efforts under the Kellogg pact to prevent a Sino-Russian war.

There was another bloody outbreak of the Mongolian Nomads in western Manchuria, scores of Chinese being slain, and naturally the Chinese authorities blamed the Russians for investigating it.

Extreme heat of defective shells caused an explosion that destroyed the Chinese government's largest arsenal in Nanking and the conflagration spread to other buildings. The property damage was estimated at $1,500,000.

GOVERNORS of the public lands states held a conference in Salt Lake City and received a message from President Hoover in which he suggested that the surface rights of remaining unappropriated public lands should be transferred to the states. Western senators in Washington heard this proposition with surprise and disfavor, looking on it as somewhat of a gold brick, inasmuch as the mineral rights which the President would retain in the hands of the federal government furnish the revenues which the public land states long have wished to get hold of. They contended that the revenues from the surface rights would be insignificant. As Senator Borah said, those lands are "chickens in a desert and mountain territory and a jack rabbit could hardly live on them."

SOVIET peoples commissars have adopted a three shift day and seven-day week for Russian industry, according to the Moscow laborer. According to the plan each worker gets every fifth day free, but various shifts in the factories will keep producing day and night. The factories will only be closed five times a year for the observance of the greatest revolutionary holidays. Besides abolishing Sunday completely and destroying the influence of the religious sects on the working class, the Ivestia finds the new plan will also assist communism and destroy the old forms of life. Even the family will be abolished and the workers will live in socialized houses with perhaps a segregation of the sexes.

IF THE prohibition law is to be enforced in New York city, the federal authorities must do all the enforcing, according to Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen. After a conference with county prosecutors, magistrates and police officers, the commissioner notified Federal Prohibition Administrator Campbell of that district that he flatly refused to take the responsibility for local dry enforcement. He also refused to order the police to proceed against speakeasies under the state nuisance law.

"If you are unwilling to discharge your sworn obligations to the federal government," Mr. Whalen said, "we wish to make a confession of your inability to effectively direct the activities of your department, for which a large proportion of a $28,000,000 appropriation is allotted, the administration should be primarily to your superior in Washington instead of your back to the state law enforcement officers."

CITATION BY PUBLICATION

The State of Texas.
To the Sheriff or Any Constable of Donley County, Greeting:

You are hereby commanded to summon W. Y. (Jack) Twyman by making publication of this citation once in each week for four successive weeks previous to the return day hereof, in some newspaper published in your county, if there be a newspaper published therein, but if not then in any newspaper published in the 100th Judicial District; but if there be no newspaper published in said Judicial District, then in a newspaper published in the nearest district to said 100th Judicial District, to appear at the next regular term of the District Court of Donley county, to be holden at the court house thereof in Clarendon, on the second Monday in October, A. D. 1929, the same being the fourteenth day of October, A. D. 1929, then and there to answer a petition filed in said court on the 31st day of December, A. D. 1928, in a suit, and amended petition filed March 6th, 1929, numbered on the docket of said Court No 1617, wherein G. W. Antrobus is plaintiff and W. Y. (Jack) Twyman is defendant, said petition alleging the execution of one note for $986.21 by W. Y. Twyman payable to G. W. Antrobus at Clarendon, Texas, bearing interest at ten per cent per annum from date until paid, and for attorney's fees of ten per cent, for foreclosure of the lien given in a deed of trust executed upon Feb. 5th, 1924, to secure said note, such lien being upon all that certain tract or parcel of real estate situate in the town of Clarendon, Donley county, Texas, and being all of lots 9 and 10 in block 40 of said town of Clarendon, Donley county, Texas, according to the duly recorded map and plat of said town, said deed of trust being of record in book No 18 on page No 145, deed of trust records of Donley county Texas, to which reference is made and prayed.

Plaintiff alleges trustee's deed to him in the sale of said real estate, by one O. C. Watson, substitute trustee under the deed of trust referred to said trustee's deed being of record in Vol 51 on page No 695, deed records of Donley county, Texas, conveying the above described property to plaintiff; that plaintiff has held notoriously and adversely to the claim of any other person for a period of more than three years prior to filing his original petition in this cause, paying taxes upon same, making repairs and asserting an adverse ownership and claim to said property; that said trustee's deed has been of record more than three years prior to filing this suit.

Plaintiff prays alternately for removal of cloud from title or for foreclosure under original deed of trust.

Herein fall not, but have before said court at its aforesaid next regular term this writ with your return thereon, showing how you have executed the same.

Witness, A. H. Baker, Clerk of the District Court of Donley county, Texas.

Given under my hand and the seal of said court, at office in Clarendon, this 10th day of September, 1929.

ORDER OF SALE

To All to Whom These Presents Shall Come, Know Ye:

That Whereas, on the 3rd day of September, 1929, the Clerk of the District Court of Donley county, Texas, issued an Order of Sale directed to me as Sheriff of said county, to seize and sell all of Lot No 19, in Block No 7, in the original town of Clarendon, in Donley county, Texas, in satisfaction of a judgment rendered in the District Court of said county, on the 26th day of March, 1929, in favor of Mollie E. Gray, and against W. T. Johnson, for the sum of four thousand two hundred five and 85/100 dollars ($4205.85) with interest thereon from last said date at six per cent per annum, and together with $16.00 costs, said suit being numbered on the docket of said Court, 1650; and

Whereas, I did on last said date levy upon said property and premises, pursuant to said order of sale; and

Whereas, I shall, between the hours of 10 o'clock a. m. and 4 o'clock p. m. on Tuesday, the 1st day of October, 1929 at the court house in Clarendon, Texas, at public vendue, sell said land and premises to the highest bidder, for cash, as under execution.

Now, Therefore, these are to require each and every person interested in the sale of said premises to be then and there present and bid, if he should so desire, upon the sale of said premises for cash.

Witness my hand at Clarendon, Texas, this 3rd day of September, 1929.

The Verdict of 276,003 Cows

"AMAZING," say feeders when shown the results of the eight months' dairy profits survey conducted by the Purina Mills. Figures were obtained on 276,003 cows fed hand mixtures, Purina, and 55 other commercial rations. Here's what they showed:

Yearly Profit per Cow:
Average on hand mixed rations..... $124.10
Average on 55 commercial rations..... 138.79
Average on Purina Cow Chow..... 164.25

The average Purina profit was $19.80 per ton of feed more than on other commercial rations and $27.04 more than on hand mixed rations.

Frankly, Purina results are the one big reason why we decided to handle Purina Chow—because we know they'll make you more money. Come in and let us help you with your feeding problems—or phone us.

ARTIE

His Adventures in Love, Life and the Pursuit of Happiness
By GEORGE ADE

Artie Does Say Something

A FULL moon was hanging over the lake. The whole surface of small, uneasy waves was lighted. There was one path of shiny splendor leading straight out toward the moon and where this path lost itself no one could tell.

"There's sure some moon out tonight," observed Artie. He had been flipping pebbles down the paved beach and into the water. Mamie sat with him on the stone uplift dividing the park driveway from the slope toward the water—with him, to be sure, but three or four feet away, with her hat in his lap.

"It's perfectly lovely tonight," she said. The two bicycles were leaned over against the stone uplift and the lamps threw oblong splotches of light on the gravel.

Behind Artie and Mamie was the gloomy range made by the heavy foliage of the park. In and out amid the dark banks of trees and along the level driveway moved glow specks like so many busy fireflies. Artie saw none of these, for he was intent on the spectacle of water and moonshine.

"The guy that could put all that into a picture 'd be a bird, eh, Mamie?" "It's perfectly lovely."

"That's what it is, all right. They don't grow many like this one."

"Sing something, Artie."

"What do you want me to do—drive the moon in? How did you ever come the other day. He said I was slow." "Slow—how?" "About doin' the lerry thing—comin' out and sayin' to you, 'Here, let's fix it up.'"

"Fix what up?" "Oh, you don't know, do you? You ain't got no notion at all of what I'm gettin' at, have you? That's too bad about you."

Mamie began to laugh and then she checked herself, for she observed that Artie was frowning.

"Of course," said she, "I suppose you mean—that we—"

"All I mean is, what's the matter of gettin' it settled that it's goin' to be a case of marry?"

"There! When he said this it seemed to him that his voice went farther and further away from him, as if some one else were speaking the words.

Mamie was smiling quietly and turning her hat over and over.

"I guess that didn't scare you so much after all," said Artie, who at that moment felt that his whole existence had stepped out from under a burden.

"No," she replied, as she continued to fuss with the hat. "Scare me?"

"How about it bein' up to you?"

"Oh, it's all right, I guess." She spoke with a frightened attempt to be careless.

"This is one of them cases where all guessin's barred."

"Well, you might know it's all right."

"It's a go then."

He said this rather solemnly. There was a pause, and then he continued with some embarrassment: "I'll tell you, Mamie, it seemed to me we ought to have it through with. I didn't want to keep you guessin' whether I wanted to stick. Don't you think it was the wise move—huh?"

"It's all right—yes."

"I was goin' to spring it on you sooner, but I ain't never got the nerve

FAMILY DOCTOR LEARNED THIS ABOUT CONSTIPATION

Dr. Caldwell loved people. His years of practice convinced him many were ruining their health by careless selection of laxatives. He determined to write a harmless prescription which would get at the cause of constipation, and correct it.

Today, the prescription he wrote in 1885 is the world's most popular laxative! He prescribed a mixture of herbs and other pure ingredients now known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, in thousands of cases where bad breath, coated tongue, gas, headaches, biliousness and lack of appetite or energy showed the bowels of men, women and children were sluggish. It proved successful in even the most obstinate cases: old folks liked it for it never gripes; children liked its pleasant taste. All druggists today have Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin in bottles.

School Observatory Is New Idea in Education

The city of Oakland, Calif., maintains a unique institution as a part of its public school system. It is Chabot observatory, a modern astronomical and meteorological observatory situated on Leona heights in the suburbs of that city. It is maintained for popular instruction in the sciences relating to weather, climate, and the stars. It is also affiliated with the United States Weather bureau and with the college. It has a large telescope through which visitors are permitted to view the wonders of the heavens, and it is free and open to the public day and night. In addition to the school children of Oakland, many thousands of tourists call at the observatory every year. It is, perhaps, the only institution of its kind in the United States maintained as part of the municipal public school system.

Wedding Note Long on Way

A letter congratulating him on his marriage and mailed 21 years ago has just been received by Mark Hamboz, a well-known pianist of London. It was dispatched from the Snyage club of that city on March 19, 1908, and was recently readdressed to him at the same club from which it had been sent.

Hope's Trial

A psychic gentleman in New York is trying the experiment of broadcasting thought waves, using ordinary radio station equipment. He may be disappointed in the results, because, much as we hate to admit it, many of the people he is sending thought waves to haven't anything to tune in with.—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Rocket Plane to Be Tried

Friz von Opel, the German sportsman who invented the rocket automobile and rocket motorcycle, expects that his new rocket airplane will be as successful as the others. He has constructed a special ship for the tests at Griesheim, Germany, and predicts greater speed from the new development than from the present planes.

to think I was a singer? That's two or three times you've sprung that on me. Somebody must 'a' been stringin' you."

"Why, the night we walked home from Turner hall you sang something awfully pretty. What was it?"

"It must 'a' been somebody else you had on your staff that night."

"Why Artie Blanchard, you mean thing?"

"Hello! Did I land on you that time?"

"I think it was awfully mean of you to say that. I don't ever ask you if you've been running around with some other girl."

"Why don't you? I'd tell you there's three or four others that kind o' like my style."

"They must be hard up."

"Is that so? Maybe I ain't so many but I'm a purty good thing, at that. I'm fresh every hour. No family ought to be without me. When you lose me you lose a capital prize, and don't you overlook it."

In answer, Mamie picked up some of the small pebbles and threw them at him. He held his cap over his face and laughingly begged of her to stop.

"Will you be good?" she asked.

"Sure thing. But don't be so rough with your man."

"My man!" Mamie tilted her head back, looked up at the moon and shrieked with laughter.

Artie was always vastly pleased to have Mamie understand his bantering way. He had often wondered if they would ever come to the habit of talking each other seriously. Could married people keep up the joke?

At this moment Artie had an inspiration. The conversation was headed right. Why not steer it straight ahead?

"Of course," he continued. "I was kind o' hard when I said that, but when I thought it down to cases it was all right after all."

to talk much about things like that. It ain't like askin' a girl to go to a show, is it?"

"Not exactly," and then both of them laughed, in a relieved way.

"Don't you think you'd better put your mother on to it?" asked Artie.

"I don't know. Would you?"

"Sure. I guess she won't make no holler."

Mamie laughed again. "That's a good one on you," she said.

"What is?"

"She wanted to know the other day if you'd asked me yet."

"Who, the old girl? Well, what do you know about that? Everybody's on to us, Mamie."

"I don't care."

"Care? They can bill the town with it if they want to. Come on; let's take another slow whirl through the park."

They quickly mounted the wheels and moved northward. The darting specks of fire were still abroad, but there was no sound except the soft rasp of the turning wheels. Artie, pumping leisurely and watching the lighted patch of roadway fleeing before his wheel, suddenly began to sing about "Marguerite." He was singing absent-mindedly and merely to keep time with his thoughts, but Mamie heard him and swung her wheel so as to ride up close beside him.

"I thought you didn't sing," said she, laughing.

"Oh, well," said Artie, grinning. "You know there are times—there are times."

Remarkable Old Maps Preserved at London

Maps are always very interesting things, and when one traces them back to their origin in the early days of the Egyptian and Greeks, it is wonderful to realize how long this form of skill has been in existence, for even as long ago as about 200 B. C., the first ideas of mapping were beginning to form, and the art went slowly on down the ages, until in 1592, the first globe was discovered just after the discovery

Pains Relieved

"I WAS going to school, trying to keep up with my classes, when my health got bad. I was very irregular. I suffered severe pains and cramping, and just awful headaches. My hands would draw and get right cold.

"My mother had used Cardui, and she gave it to me. After taking one bottle, I was much better. I kept on taking Cardui, and after my third bottle I did not have to take any more, for I did not have the cramping spells. My health is still good."—Mrs. W. G. Watts, 70 Gale St., West Asheville, N. C.

"WHILE in school, I found myself in a weak, run-down condition, and suffered a great deal with a pain in my side. This pain made me so nervous and unstrung I had to go to bed a few days at a time, causing me anxiety for fear I would fall behind in my classes.

"My mother had taken Cardui and knew that it was a good tonic. I began taking it and found it helped me so much. I was soon rid of the pain in my side. I feel that Cardui did me a world of good."—Mrs. B. E. Lindsey, E. Nassau St., Lake City, Fla.

GIRLS ATHLETIC SOCIETY

On Tuesday, Sept 17 the girls who were interested in basket ball met in Miss Holland's room to organize the Girls Athletic Society. After much discussion the officers were elected as follows: Bobbie Smith, president;
Loyd Richerson, vice president;
Allene Bridges, secretary; Inza
Jean Blankenship, treasurer. It was not necessary to vote on who was to be captain, for every one was heartily in favor of having the same captain we had last year, as she made an excellent
one. All the girls seem well pleased with the outlook for the coming year.

The Girls Athletic Society is planning to do great things, but without the support of the town a failure. So everyone back our
