HIGH SCHOOL BUILDING HAS BEEN ACCEPTED

Friday, Nov. 1, 1929, the School Board accepted the High School building that has been under construction for the past three months. Hedley can now boast of having one of the most complete school plants of any town in the Panhandle according to the size of town. The Board has planned a building—not for the present needs only, but for years to come. The building is 165 feet long and 150 feet wide. The building is constructed of model brick with trimmings of white stone. The inscription "Hedley High School" is engraved over the three front entrances. The building faces west, while the Junior High School building faces south, thus creating a square which the women of the town, with the assistance of the Parent Teachers Association, intend to beautify by the addition of grass and flowers.

The Auditorium
The auditorium of the new building is 85 feet by 74 feet and has a seating capacity of 1200. One of the head carpenters of the building made the statement that the assembly hall would easily hold 1500 people. The stage measures 40 feet in length and is equipped with modern stage scenery. Floodlights of red, blue and white are installed in addition to sixteen lights in the auditorium proper. The wood work of the auditorium is golden oak; the walls are painted ivory buff with a gray base.

The Study Hall
The study hall of the building has a seating capacity of 125 and 25 more seats could easily be added. A larger study hall has been one of the recommendations from the State Department for several years. Each pupil has his individual desk in the study hall, with a typewriter copy of his name and grade attached to the desk. The Library is also located in the study hall, and magazine racks are to be made by the manual training students.

Home Economics
The Home Economics room is located in the north corner of the building. Combination cooking and sewing tables are being installed. Four Singer sewing machines are being added to the clothing department, and three of the latest gas stoves will be installed. A large kitchen cabinet has been built in the south end of the room that is a credit to any home economics department.

Commercial Room
The Commercial room is one of the smallest rooms in the building. It is equipped with modern bookkeeping and typewriting tables. In addition to the typewriting machines, the school has a Dalton adding machine that was given the school by the ex-Seniors of the High School in 1928.

Science Hall
The Science Hall contains a built-in cabinet for the Physics and Biology equipment. The room is equipped with modern science tables and is one of the most beautiful of all the rooms. The other rooms of the building are provided with the school supplies for the students. The entire work is being done with

PATRIOTIC SERVICES ON ARMISTICE DAY

Monday, Nov. 11, Dedication Services will be held in the auditorium of the new High School building at 10:30 a. m.

Since Nov. 11 is a National holiday, and a day that should be observed by all, the School Board and Faculty will secure an out of town speaker for the occasion and the services will be of a patriotic nature.

Monday night at 7:30 the boys and girls of the entire school will do their part to dedicate the new building by giving a general free program. The public is invited and we trust that the new auditorium will be filled. Many pupils will make their first appearance upon the stage and in addition to the general program the Dramatic Club will give a one act play.

Please tell everyone that there will be no admission fee. All programs and games will be free Nov. 11th.

JUNIOR PLAY NOVEMBER 12 "MAMMY'S IRISH ROSE"

The Juniors of Hedley High School will present "Mammy's Irish Rose" at the New High School Auditorium on Tuesday, Nov. 12. This will be the first play to be given by the Juniors and we trust that it will come up to the standard set by the Seniors. Many stated that the Senior play, "Step On It, Stan," was one of the best plays they had seen in Hedley.

Miss Inez Jarmon and Miss Fay Maxwell are sponsoring the Junior play.

We have a nice line of men's and ladies' House Shoes - Adams Dry Goods & Notions.

SCHOOL BOARD OF THE HEDLEY PUBLIC SCHOOL

The School Board of Hedley Public School is composed of the following: W. I. Rains, President of the Board; J. B. Masterson, Secretary; O. R. Culwell, S. A. Burdine, G. E. Armstrong, W. T. Youree, and Frank Simmons.

The question that the Board has constantly kept before them is "What will be best for the school?" During the summer months, when every farmer was needed in his field, several members of the board left their own business and spent days at a time working on the building program of the school. A spirit of cooperation has prevailed among the members that could not be surpassed.

Mr. Froman, contractor of the building, stated that he had never worked for a school board that cooperated so well on all occasions.

The teachers of the school are following the example of the board, and we feel that our school is improving daily.

SCHOOL CARNIVAL IS A GREAT SUCCESS

A group of children yesterday afternoon made plans for the Carnival of the P. T. A. which is being held in the school building on Monday, Nov. 11.

THE HARTFORD

BY ELMO SCOTT WATSON

OCTOBER 27 is observed throughout the United States as Navy day, a time when the navy holds "open house," invites the public to visit the ships and stations and, through a general educational campaign, endeavors to inform the people as to its peace-time activities. This particular date was chosen for Navy day because it is the anniversary of the birth of Theodore Roosevelt, who, as assistant secretary of war, had much to do with the establishment of the modern American navy and who, throughout his lifetime, was devoted to establishing a sound naval policy for the United States. Navy day not only honors a great American and affords an opportunity for giving thought to our "first line of defense," but it also is an occasion for recalling some of the inspiring history of our navy. So—"let us now praise famous ships!"

We have had many of them, ships whose names were once on the lips of every American because of some brilliant feat of arms in defense of our country. In the case of some, their fame outlived their period of usefulness and all that we have to remember them by is the story of what they did. Fortunately, however, others have been preserved and today they ride the waters of our coasts as memorials of stirring events in our national history.

Greatest of all these "floating museums," perhaps, is the old frigate Constellation, affectionately known for more than a century as "Old Ironsides." Launched in 1797, as one of the first three naval vessels built by the United States, she set out upon a remarkable career during which her sides were to be scarred by the wounds of 42 battles but never once was she to lower her flag in defeat. In 1798 the Constellation helped clear the West Indies and our coast line of French privateers. From 1803 to 1805 she was engaged in the war with the Barbary states. But the War of 1812 witnessed the Constellation's most brilliant victories and brought her the name of "Old Ironsides." Beginning with her remarkable escape from the British squadron off the coast of New Jersey in July, 1812, she swept on to a series of feats which thrilled the nation. Among them were the destruction of the Guerriere and the successive captures of the Java, the Cyane and the Levant.

Despite "Old Ironsides'" great achievements, however, the frigate was allowed to fall into disrepair and in 1830 a board of naval commissioners ordered her broken up and sold. Then Oliver Wendell Holmes wrote his protest in a poem which so stirred public sentiment that sufficient money was appropriated to practically rebuild her in 1833.

In 1905 it was recommended that the Constellation be used as a target to be sunk by gunfire of the modern battleships of the Atlantic fleet and once more a nation-wide protest against this sacrifice saved her. Congress appropriated a nominal sum to repair the ship and the upper works were reconditioned. By 1925 it was found that the ravages of time were again threatening the Constellation and in March of that year Congress authorized the restoration of the vessel.

Work of restoring "Old Ironsides" at the navy yard has been going on for some time. Since Congress has authorized the work of restoring "Old Ironsides" at the navy yard has been going on for some time. for contributions. The response was instantaneous and although more than $600,000 has been raised by this method approximately $200,000 is still needed, according to Rear Admiral Philip Andrews.

At the Newport (R. I.) naval training station there rides at anchor a ship which has the distinction of being the oldest vessel on the United States navy list. It is the frigate Constellation, launched September 7, 1797, a short time previous to the launching of the Constellation and second only to "Old Ironsides" in her fame as one of the great ships of the early American navy. Just as the name of Isaac Hull will always be associated with that of the Constellation so will the name of Thomas Truxtun be linked with the fame of the Constellation during our "war" with France in 1798-1800.

On February 9, 1799, the Constellation had a battle with the French frigate Insurgent which resulted in a victory for Truxtun's ship and the capture of the French vessel. Even more noteworthy was the Constellation's fight with the French ship Vengeance on February 2, 1800. Although the French ship was in every way superior to the American, Truxtun compelled the enemy to fight and after a bitter engagement the Frenchman was forced to strike his flag. However, the Constellation, having lost her mainmast, was so badly crippled that she was unable to pursue the Vengeance and the Frenchman slipped away in the night and escaped. Even though Truxtun was denied the honor of bringing the enemy ship into port as a prize of war, his courage and daring won for him the thanks of congress and a gold medal.

Visitors to Erie, Pa., can visit two historic vessels if they choose. One is the Wolverine, the first iron vessel built for the navy and the forerunner of the modern dreadnaughts. But more interesting still is another ship preserved there the brig Niagara, sole survivor of Commodore Oliver Hazard Perry's victory over the British at the battle of Put-In-Bay during the War of 1812. The Niagara was one of the first ships built of green lumber by the navy and was ordered to construct a ship to help the navy regain mastery of the western lakes and save the Old Northwest. It was the Niagara that carried the flag, bearing the name of the ship, to the Lawrence "Do-ship."

After the War of 1812 the Niagara, after being sold and resold a number of times, was sunk by the order of the government in Misery bay near Erie harbor. There she lay for nearly three-quarters of a century until the centennial anniversary of the Lake Erie victory in 1913 when the state of Pennsylvania appropriated money to have her raised and reconditioned. After the celebration the old brig was again the victim of neglect. For several years she was kept afloat with difficulty and finally sank in the bay with her pumps still working. Last spring the Erie County Historical society set about restoring the Niagara and that work is now being carried on.

If present plans are carried out still another old warship, a relic of Civil War days, is to be saved from the scrap heap. It is the Hartford, flagship of Commander David G. Farragut, first admiral of the United States navy. The Connecticut legislature some time ago adopted a resolution to petition the President to transfer the Hartford from the Charleston (S. C.) navy yard to the submarine base at New London, Conn. There she will be reconditioned and made as seaworthy as she was on January 19, 1862, when she was put into commission at Philadelphia and placed under command of Flag Officer Farragut. On her decks Farragut stood three months later as she rode safely through the storm of shot and shell, hurled at her by Confederate fortifications, Ft. Jackson and Ft. St. Philips and proceeded to the capture of New Orleans, the first step in the vitally important plan of opening up the Mississippi from St. Louis to the gulf. It was to the rigging of this same ship that Farragut lashed himself as he sailed into Mobile bay the following year and gave his historic orders "Damn the torpedoes, go ahead." There he remained under fire to the end of the battle and until the victory was won.

Out in Portland, Ore., there rides at anchor, a battleship which in 1898 performed a feat which sent her fame ringing around the world. It is the battleship Oregon which, in 1898 under the command of Rear Admiral Charles Edgar Clark, made her dash from the Pacific coast around Cape Horn into the Atlantic and arrived in time to take part in the battle of Santiago bay on July 3. It had taken her just 67 days to cover 14,000 miles of water, the longest and quickest trip of any battleship then afloat and still a world's record. After the war the Oregon was relegated to the reserve fleet of the Pacific squadron but in memory of her famous trip she was given the distinction of being the first battleship to pass through the Panama canal when it was opened in 1915. She was visited by thousands of Americans on a Pacific expedition as she lay at anchor in San Francisco bay, was used for a training ship and in 1918 came back to the United States to be used in the Victory memorial.

Afterwards she was presented to the city of Portland as a memorial. The ship will be presented to the city of Portland as a memorial. The ship will be presented to the city of Portland as a memorial. The ship will be presented to the city of Portland as a memorial.

The Mark of Genuine Aspirin..

BAYER ASPIRIN is like an old friend, tried and true. There can never be a satisfactory substitute for either one. Bayer Aspirin is genuine. It is the accepted antidote for pain. Its relief may always be relied on, whether used for the occasional headache, to head-off a cold, or for the more serious aches and pains from neuralgia, neuritis, rheumatism or other ailments. It's easy to identify Bayer Aspirin by the Bayer Cross on every tablet, by the name Bayer on the box and the word "genuine" always printed in red.

Aspirin is the trade mark of Bayer Manufacture of Mono-aceticacidester of Salicylicacid

Richard, age three, is the proud possessor of a six-months-old brindle bull dog. The pup is quite mischievous and so is Richard.
The other day mother found her freshly-baked cake in a deplorable condition. Richard was hurrying out the door when mother halted him with: "Sonny, have you been in this cake?" He looked up innocently and sweetly said: "Mother, it's that dog again."

Expatriates Still Pensioned
If a settler is receiving a pension, removal to a foreign country would not deprive him of it. During the World War the pensions of many Civil War veterans living in Germany were cut off, but this was owing to lack of communication between the two countries. After the war all these veterans received their back pension money.—Pathfinder Magazine.

It is only necessary to feel some of the people some of the time to make a living at it.

When BABIES are upset

Baby ills and ailments seem twice as serious at night. A sudden cry may mean colic. Or a sudden attack of diarrhea—a condition it is always important to check quickly. How would you meet this emergency—tonight? Have you a bottle of Castoria ready? There is nothing that can take the place of this harmless but effective remedy for children; nothing that acts quite the same, or has quite the same comforting effect on them.

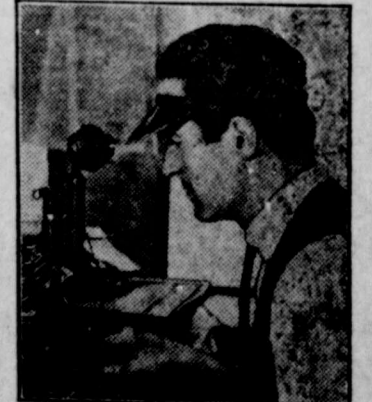

For the protection of your wee one—for your own peace of mind—keep this old, reliable preparation always on hand. But don't keep it just for emergencies; let it be an everyday aid. Its gentle influence will ease and soothe the infant who cannot sleep. Its mild regulation will help an older child whose tongue is coated because of sluggish bowels. All druggists have Castoria; the genuine bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the wrapper.

When a White Collar Man "Goes Army"

Perhaps he doesn't learn a few things!

DON'T envy a man who "only has to work a typewriter." So we were told by Mr. Solon S. Bloom of 3503 Woodbrook Avenue, Baltimore, Md., whose health began to give way because his work gave him no bodily exercise.

"I decided to get away to a military training camp," says Mr. Bloom, "thinking the rough and tumble with the army would do me good for a month. I asked the doctor what to do about my condition. 'I've seen men, I've known men,' he said. 'I know what they eat, drink, and how they live. I know cathartics, physics, and all the ways men try to keep themselves regular—and the only two that together well are men and Nujol. Nujol soothes and heals the membranes and expels bodily poisons normally, naturally, easily, so that you are regular as clock-work.'"

That was what Mr. Bloom learned when he left his typewriter and went into the army. If you are like most other people, you too will find that Nujol will make all the difference in the world in the way you feel.

Remember Nujol is not a medicine, for it contains no drugs of any kind. It is simply bodily lubrication that everybody needs.

You can get a bottle of Nujol at any good drug store, in a sealed package, for the price of a couple of good cigars. If you will start today and try it for two weeks you will agree that Nujol is the easy normal way to keep well and make a success of your life. Nujol is the result of the research of the world's greatest scientists.

Important Announcement
from

DR. JOHN W. FITZJARRALD
of Memphis, Texas

RADIONICS

Dr. Fitzjarrald takes pleasure in announcing to his clientele in this territory the installation of a Radionics machine as an aid in diagnosing your ills.

Last year in Paris, Dr. Mirahorian, president of the Roumanian Society of Physiological Research, made the following statement:

"The human body is a reservoir of radio activity, and all the ills the human body is heir to can be ascertained and measured mechanically. . . . That progress in this sphere eventually will result in the perfecting of an apparatus by which a diagnosis of the condition of each organ of the human body can be made."

Little did Dr. Mirahorian realize that in the United States there was being perfected just such an instrument, and it is a pleasure for me to announce that I now have one in my office. It is one of the marvels of the age.

Beginning Monday, Nov. 11, and continuing for one week, Dr. H. G. Oredson of Omaha, a specialist in this line, will be here to aid me in analyzing patients.

There will be no charge for an analysis during the first week, nor will you be obligated in any manner, but it can only be done by an appointment.

This instrument is not a substitute for Chiropractic, but very materially raises its efficiency. This, of course, you will readily understand when you are analyzed.

If you are interested in knowing the condition of your body, phone me and I will be glad to make an appointment for you.

Mrs. S. C. Carr

Dallas Lady's Child Gained Weight Fast

Mrs. S. C. Carr's experience with her little girl is just one of the many cases which we hear about. Mrs. Carr says "My little Nettie Virginia had something like the flu. When it left, she was puny, had no appetite, and was very cross and feverish. I had known for years that Nature's Remedy is such a dependable medicine and I decided to give her a course of the Juniors. Nobody knows how happy I am to see her eat heartily again, and laughing and playing like she used to."

Very often these simple little chocolate coated Nature's Remedy Juniors (NR Jr's) are all the system of a child needs to straighten it out. Then the wastes can't remain in it to form the acids which sour the stomach, bind the bowels and rob the blood of the red corpuscles it must have plenty of to keep children from becoming puny, feverish, and pale. Any druggist will recommend NR Juniors to you for your child. Only 25 cents.

HAD TO WORK TOO HARD

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Gave Her Strength

Mt. Carmel, Pa.—"After my second baby was born I had to work too hard and be on my feet too soon because my husband was ill. After his death I was in such a weakened and run-down condition that nothing seemed to help me. I am starting the fourth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and feel a great deal better. I am much stronger and don't get so tired out when I wash or work hard. I do housekeeping and dressmaking and I highly recommend the Compound as a tonic. I answer any letters I receive. Greeks First to Divide

Day Into Equal Parts

It is not definitely known just how the day happened to be divided into 24 hours. At the time of the Homeric poems the day was divided into three parts—the first beginning with sunrise and comprising that part during which the light increased; the second, mid-day, during which the sun was thought to stand still, and the third period during which the atmosphere's warmth increased. These divisions were later subdivided either by Anaximander or Anaximenes, who is said to have made the Greeks acquainted with the use of the Babylonian chronometer or sundial, by means of which the natural day was divided into 12 equal spaces. The earliest sundial of which we have knowledge was that of the Chaldean astronomer Berossus, who lived about 300 B. C. Its arc was divided into 12 equal parts of time. At Babylon the period from sunrise to sunset and also the period of darkness were each divided into 12 hours. According to this arrangement, the day hour was in the summer longer than the night hour and in the winter shorter. The Greeks improved upon this system by dividing the whole period into 12 equal hours.

Norway Celebrates in 1930

In 1930 Norway will celebrate the ninth centenary of the coming of Christianity, together with the anniversary of the death of King Olav II, who died in the struggle against the opponents of the new faith. Celebrations will take place in all parts of the country but the principal ceremony will be held at Trondhem, an old royal residence and the seat of an archbishopric before the Lutheran reformation. The work of restoring the cathedral has been proceeding for a long time. It was built on Olav's tomb. The completion of the work will coincide with the celebration of nine centuries of Christianity in Norway.—Translated for the Kansas City Star from the Journal de Geneve.

Hen Paid for Trip

A story of a hen that laid an egg while flying a mile in the air sounds like nature faking, but one at Mays Landing, N. J., did it, although it can not be said that it flew on its own wings. Instead of that the hen was sitting in a basket carried in an airplane. The hen belongs to young Jack Brogan, to whom was given the opportunity to make a flight. He wanted to take his hen along and it went in a basket and soon a fresh-laid white egg was found in the improvised nest. The boy was more pleased with the record egg-laying than he was with his first ride in an airplane.

Some Fine Forest Land

The outstanding forest in New England is the White Mountain National forest. During 17 years, since 1911, the federal government has purchased forest land in the White mountains. It has acquired now 514,000 acres, or 805 square miles. Much of it is in virgin forest, says Nature Magazine. There are 61,000 acres in which an ax was never used.

About 22,000 observations of variable stars were sent to the Harvard observatory in a single year by 100 observers. One of the monumental pieces of work there, says Nature Magazine, has been Miss Annie J. This work requires expert ability of the highest order and Miss Cannon has been the recipient of many honors.

"I've Suffered 11 Years and Orgatone Has Given Me a
New Lease on Life," Says
Amarillo Man

"Orgatone has simply given me a new lease on life," said D. C. Trimmer, of 3511 W. Seventh St., Amarillo, Texas, while in the City Drug Store, in Amarillo.

"Before I commenced taking it," he continued, "I was so run down and miserable that just any little thing would tire me, as much as a day's work does now. I had a very bad case of stomach trouble, and everything I ate disagreed with me all the time. My food soured on my stomach and caused gas to form, and my heart would palpitate like it would jump out of my body. I was nervous and restless and couldn't sleep at night, and many a night I wondered about my condition, for it was really becoming alarming. I had dizzy, bilious spells, and had severe headaches, and just kept going down hill every day.

"Orgatone was recommended so highly by so many of our local Amarillo people, I began taking it, and it has certainly made the future look much brighter for me. I noticed a decided improvement soon after I had finished my first bottle. My stomach trouble has been relieved and I'm not bothered with those dizzy, bloating bilious spells, and my heart is back to normal, and the gas doesn't form on my stomach as it did. My nerves are quiet and my sleep is delightfully refreshing. I am so much better and stronger and don't feel tired out as I did. I'm going to take another bottle, and when I'll be in tiptop shape, that it is my duty body about Orgatone. My friends to know the way that

H. Allmond, of the Allmond family, was here Monday from Clarendon and paid this office a pleasant visit. He says a rumor is going forth that they are going out of business here. This he declares is a big mistake; they are, on the other hand, just now making preparations to go into business in Hedley bigger than ever.

There have been some changes in the Hedley house. L. W. Davis is the new manager, Tom Corder is salesman, with Jack Whiteside in charge of parts and service. These men are well and favorably known here. New and used cars will be at hand, as well as a large stock of parts and the equipment and service essential to satisfactory auto operations.

Mr. Allmond says his company has great faith in the Hedley territory. They have enjoyed an excellent business since opening here, and appreciate it highly. Now they are putting forth a greater effort to satisfactorily serve car owners, present and prospective, of Hedley and the Hedley territory.

O. O. Thaxton returned first of the week from Gordon, Nebraska, where he spent the past several months. Things are prosperous in that section. It is winter time there now, they having already had considerable snow.

*"What!
A weather bureau?"*

Testing a car's performance in heavy rain. From actual photograph.

The Weather Bureau at General Motors Proving Ground, at Milford, Mich.

Drawn from a photograph of a car being tested on snowy roads.

VISITORS to General Motors' 1268-acre Proving Ground marvel at the sight of a complete weather bureau and ask what it is for.

The answer is that in the testing of cars every possible factor that might affect a car's performance is considered by General Motors' engineers.

So precise are some of the tests that even the difference between a sunny day and a partly cloudy day—or between a north breeze and a south breeze—is considered.

With each day's record of the mechanical tests applied to a car on the roads and hills of the Proving Ground is included a report of the exact weather conditions prevailing. The engineers then can know how weather affects performance, and can have a comparable record so that every car tested is given an equal opportunity to prove itself under exactly the same conditions.

Advance models of all the cars listed below were proved at the Proving Ground before they were introduced to the public. Read about them; then clip and send the coupon.

The Desert Moon Mystery

CHAPTER I

The Cannezianos

I knew that evening in April, when Sam got home from Itattall and came stamping snow into my kitchen, his good old red, white and blue face stretched long and wide in its usual grin, that he had brought some bad news with him.

"I had a letter today," he said, "from the Cannezianos twins."

"I am like a lot of folks who say that they are not superstitious, who just happen to think that it is bad luck to walk under a ladder. More than likely the shivery, creepy sensation I felt, when Sam said that, was due to the cold he brought in with him, and was not due to the fact that those words of his were the forerunners for all of the grim mysteries and the tragedies that made the Desert Moon ranch, before the end of July, a place of horror.

"How much do they want?" I questioned.

"No, Mary; they want to come here to live. Danielle wrote the letter. She says they want to come here and rest, indefinitely. She says she longs for it with all her soul, or something like that."

"Danielle," I said, "always was the best of the two. You going to let them come, Sam?"

"Anything else for me to do?"

"Not a thing—for you. There'd be plenty of others. Those girls are no kin of yours. Let me see—eight years old when they were here in 1909, makes them twenty-four years old now, according to my figures. Why a couple of women twins, age ranging forty-eight years, should decide to come here and rest their souls at your expense, is beyond me."

"I have plenty."

"So has Henry Ford. Why don't they get rest their souls, with him? They've got as much claim on him as they have on you. None. Leave those girls rest their souls right there where they are, Sam."

"No—I don't know, Mary. I guess I'll write them a letter and tell them to come along. Lots of room."

I didn't argue any more about it. For twenty-five years I had been housekeeper of the Desert Moon ranch, and I had learned, during that time, that there was only one subject, concerning Sam, or the place on which I could never hope to have any say so. Trying to argue with Sam about anything that had to do in any way with Margarita Ditsie Stanley, or when she was Margarita Ditsie Canneziano, was about as sensible as hosting a child in a parrot for protection in the midst of one of our Nevada mountain cloudbursts.

Margarita Ditsie was of French Canadian parentage; a dark-haired, big-eyed beauty. Her father kept a gambling hole in Esmeralda county in the early days. Her mother had run away from a convent, after she had become a nun, to marry him. The girl had some of the nun, some of the runaway, and some of the gambling house proprietor in her. It made a queer combination.

When she was eighteen years old she came from Carson to visit Lily Trooper over on the Three Bars ranch, about sixty miles from here. Sam met her there. She and Sam were married two weeks later. She was a lot younger than Sam; but, even then, he was the richest man in the valley, with every unworked woman for a hundred miles around setting her cap for him.

Whether Margarita married him for his wealth, or whether it was to spite the other girls who would have liked to marry him, I don't know. All I know is that Margarita, never had a mile of love for him. She stayed with him, though, and acted decently enough for two years, until Sam Canneziano came to the ranch and got a job on it as a cowpuncher.

It was during those two years that Sam built this ranchhouse for her. Sam's tend and silver mine had just come in, and there was not anything from Italian marble fireplaces to oak wood floors, that was too good for what Margarita called the Stanley mansion. She left it, all the elegance and the luxury, and she broke her marriage vows, for love of this cowpuncher. That, I guess, is fair and full enough description of Margarita Canneziano.

I don't blame her. I quit blaming folks for things a good many years ago when, after firing three Chinese cooks in six weeks, I decided that, if we were to live healthily and whole some, I'd have to take over the job of cooking as well as housekeeping for the Desert Moon ranch, and set about it, and learned to cook.

In other words, when I became a creator myself, I got to know creations and so quit blaming all of them.

If I forget to put the soda in the sour milk pancakes, it isn't their fault if they don't rise. They are as good as dead when Margarita was the cook. He, I suppose, either forgot to turn the stove on or was tired.

one day, and had Sam invite him up to the house to play. She accompanied him on the grand piano that Sam had bought for her.

Before long, Dan Canneziano was spending a good part of his time at the ranchhouse. Sam, being nobody's fool, soon saw how the land lay; but he, according to his custom then and now, kept his mouth shut and his eyes open. Sure enough, one evening they tried to elope together. Sam went after them and brought them back. The three of them had about half an hour's talk together. Then Sam herded Canneziano down to the outfit's quarters and, I suppose, told the men to keep him there, for there he stayed until Sam was ready for him again.

The next morning Sam started to the county seat. He reached there that evening. The following morning he got his divorce. He came back to the Desert Moon on the third morning, with his divorce and with a preacher. He sent for Canneziano, and stood by while the preacher married Margarita Stanley to Daniel Canneziano, devout and regular, according to the laws of Nevada.

There it should have ended. It didn't, because Sam never got over loving Margarita. So when, nine years later, she came back to the Desert Moon, with twin girls, Danielle and Gabrielle, and said that Canneziano had deserted her and the children Sam took them all right in. I don't know, yet, whether or not they took him in.

Certainly he did not show much surprise when, in about ten days, Canneziano put in an appearance. Sam allowed him to get a good start with his threats, and then he took him across his knees and gave him a sound spanking, and passed him over to Margarita to dry his tears, and washed his own hands and went fishing.

That evening he had one of the men hitch up, and take the whole kit and caboodle of Cannezianos to Itattall in time to catch the east-bound train. I am ashamed to say that Sam gave them money. I don't know how much. A tidy sum, I'll be bound, for shortly after we heard that Canneziano had opened the finest gambling house south of the Mason and Dixon line, in New Orleans.

Sam wanted to keep the children. He offered to adopt them. Margarita would not consider it.

When Margarita died, in France, seven years after she had paid us her blackmailing visit, Sam, the almy, wrote to Canneziano and again offered to adopt the girls and give them a good home on the Desert Moon. He got a few insulting, insinuating lines for an answer. Canneziano had his own plans for his daughters, who had developed into rare beauties.

But, if Sam was soft with the women, he was not soft with Canneziano. He had showed up here, beaming and broke, about three years ago. He had left, suddenly, after having seen Sam and no one else, less beaming but quite as broke as he had been when he had come. I thought many times, Sam was forgetting that side of the family, and that this might be a good time to re-visit him.

"Is Canneziano planning to come on later, too, and rest?" I asked.

"Just at present he is in San Juan tin, serving a three years' term. Danielle didn't say for what devilry this term's up this summer. Poor little girls," Sam went on, "I reckon we haven't any idea of what they've been through, all those years."

"I reckon not," I agreed. "But they aren't little girls any more. Seems queer to me, with all the beauty that father was bragging about, that neither of them has married. Twenty-four is getting along."

"I'll bet," Sam answered. "It is because they have never had any decent opportunities. Considering the life that they've had to lead, and all, I think it speaks pretty well for them that they have come through straight and clean."

Instead of asking him how he knew that, I said, "You'd be willing, then, to have John marry one of them?"

John, Sam's adopted son, was the apple of Sam's eye. He would have the ranch, and Sam's fortune, other dependents provided for, when Sam died. Whether or not the girl he married would be contented to live on the ranch, and help John carry it on and keep up its traditions, making it one of the proudest spots in Nevada, was a mighty important thing to Sam.

He waited so long before answering my question that I was sure I had hit the nail on the head.

"John," he finally said, "is old enough to take care of himself."

With that he turned and went out of my kitchen, not giving me a chance to say that, though I had lived through fifty-six years, I had never yet seen a man at the age he had just mentioned. I knew that if these Canneziano girls came to the Desert Moon, they would bring trouble with them. I was right. A merciful Providence be thanked that, for a time at least, the knowledge of how terribly right I was, was spared me.

I am not an admirer of men. Look at most any man, I'll be myself asking what a pity it is that they are not up, since I know what would be the result.

woman—a little seasoning of simplicity, really, is all it amounts to—but there is a quality about Sam that makes a person feel that he set out, early in life, to follow the recipe for being a man, and that he has made a thorough job of it.

Why he, as a young man, with a pretty fair education and a tidy sum of money left him by his father, who had been a well-thought-of lawyer in Massachusetts, should come out here to Nevada, take up his homestead land, and settle content for the rest of his life, has always been more or less of a mystery to me, unless you take Sam's explanation of it.

He says that, when his father died, it left him without a relative, whom he knew of, in the world. He was twenty years old, and he owned a set of roving toes and an imagination. So he went to California, seeking romance and gold. Finding neither, he came down here to Nevada.

He staked out his hundred and sixty acres with Boulder creek tumbling and roaring through them. He built his cabin. He hired help, and built fences, and dug ditches, and planted crops, and bought stock. He bought more land. He hired more help, dug more ditches, planted bigger crops, bought more stock. He has been doing that regularly ever since. And, of course, he located the lead and silver mine, on his property, that made him millions if it made him a cent, before it played out. But, in spite of the money that "Old Lady Luck," as he called his mine, made for him, Sam never gave his heart to it. It was the Desert Moon ranch that he loved; and the money he made from it that he was proud of. That was why, when the honor of the ranch went under, during those terrible weeks last summer, Sam all but went under with it.

After Margarita left the place from her visit of 1909, taking the twins with her, Sam went around for a week or two, with his head cocked on one side as if he was listening for something. I knew what he was missing, and I was not surprised when, one day, he told me he had decided to send to San Francisco and get a couple of children and adopt them.

He wrote to a big hospital in San Francisco and got in touch with a trained nurse who would be willing to come up and live on the ranch and take care of the two children. He had her go to an orphan's home and select the children and bring them with her when she came.

The nurse came early in September with two brown-eyed children named Vera and Alvia. Sam at once renamed them. John, he said, was the only name for a boy, and Mary the only name for a girl. But since the little girl have Martha, which meant, according to Sam, "Boss of the Ranch."

The nurse's name was Mrs. Ollie Ricker. I don't know how old she was then. I don't know how old she is now. She never talked. I do not mean that she never chatted, or gossiped. I mean that she never said one word if she could possibly avoid it. At the end of sixteen years of daily association with Mrs. Ricker, that is, up to the time of the second murder on the Desert Moon, I knew exactly as much about her past life as you know at this minute.

John, at that time, was nine years old. He was as bright, and as up standing, and as handsome, as any little fellow to be found anywhere. I may as well say, now, that this description of John, at nine years old, is as good a description as if you will draw his height up to six feet, and put on weight accordingly.

The papers for the orphanage gave Martha's age as five years; but even I, who knew less about children than it was decent for any woman to know, soon saw that something was wrong. She walked well enough, but she could scarcely talk at all. Her ways and her habits were those of a two-year-old infant, yet she was far too large for that age. Before she had been with us a week I knew that Martha was not quite right in her mind.

Mrs. Ricker knew it, too. Her excuse was, that she had chosen Martha because she was so pretty; that she had had no opportunity to judge her other characteristics. She insisted that she thought, with proper care, Martha would develop normally.

I knew better. Sam knew it, too. But, when I begged and besought him not to adopt her, he brought out an argument good and conclusive for him.

"If I don't adopt her, and take care of her," said Sam, "who the heck would?"

So adopt her he did. And he spent a small fortune on doctors, specialists for her. None of them could do anything. It was, he said, a hopeless case of retarded development. So, at twenty-one years of age, Martha, though the care and doctoring had given her a fine healthy body, had the mind of a child of five or six years—not too bright a child, either. That was at best. At worst—Well, no matter. Entirely harmless, the doctors said; but I always had my doubts.

CHAPTER II

Arrivals at the Ranch

It was three years after Mrs. Ricker came to the ranch, bringing John and Martha, that Hubert Hand put in his appearance. He had got Mr. Indian Chat Chiu, as everybody called him, to bring him up from Itattall in his old surrey.

Mr. Indian Chat Chiu stopped his old nag at the entrance to the driveway, and Hubert Hand climbed carefully down and came up the road, swinging a walking cane like he was leading a parade.

Sam and I, as was our custom, went walking down to meet him.

Hubert Hand beat him the first game in about half an hour. They set up their men again. It took Hubert Hand over an hour that time to beat Sam, but he did it.

"Heck!" Sam said, at the end of that game. "You're tired."

"Hired for what?"

"For whatever you want to call it, except the shopping of milk around. Send for your trunk and name your pay. Why didn't you say, in the first place, that you were a blankety blank crack chess player?"

Hubert Hand accepted Sam's offer, then and there. The next day he titled himself assistant ranch manager, and named his salary at two hundred and fifty dollars a month. Sam paid it without blinking, and kept right on managing the ranch, and everything on it, except, perhaps, myself, without any assistance, the same as he had always done.

Chadwick Caufield, the other member of our household, who was present on the Desert Moon ranch at the time of the first murder, came only two years ago last October.

He was wearing white corduroy trousers, a long yellow rubber rain-coat, and a straw hat tethered to its buttonhole with a string. He was carrying a ukulele under his arm and a camera in his hand. He took off his hat, displaying a head full of pretty yellow curls. He smiled, displaying a sweet, gentle disposition. (If there is any better index to character than the way a person smiles, I have never found it.)

"How do you do?" he said. "I have come to visit you."

By the time Sam got his pipe picked up, John had got down the forty-foot length of living room and had Chad by both hands, and was introducing him as the friend he had told us about, the friend he had made at Father's field, during the war.

The way of that was, John had saved his life for him down there, and had never since been able to get out from under the responsibility of it. John had found a job for him, after the armistice, and when Chad lost it, John had loaned him money to start out in a vaudeville act. He did fine with that for three years, and was making good money, when he got into an automobile accident at Kansas City and was laid up for months in the hospital there. John had wired money to him, and had asked him to come for a visit to the Desert Moon. But, since Chad had had a standing invitation for years, and since he had sent no word that he was coming, John was as much surprised as any of us that evening.

Chad was a little, pindling fellow, and Sam and John and Hubert had looked about as jumpy and nervous as the garish around the plant, the giving turkey. He looked at that, too; like the other boys.

He took off his hat to me, and said to Sam, "I wish to see the owner of this ranch."

"Nobody ever mistook me for a fairy before," Sam said. "But go ahead. Your first wish is granted. What are the other two?"

Hubert Hand got out his card then. Besides his name it had "Clover-blossom Creamery," and the San Francisco address printed on it.

Hubert Hand explained that he had an up-and-coming creamery business in San Francisco, but that his physicians had told him that he had to live in a high, dry climate with plenty of sunshine and no fog. He had, after inquiries and investigations, decided that the Desert Moon ranch, altitude seven thousand feet, sunshine three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, to say nothing of the marvelous view of the Garnet mountains, the hunting, the fishing, and the pure snow water, would fill all his requirements.

His proposition was that he start a creamery, on the Desert Moon ranch, and supply the valley with ice cream, butter, and other dairy products. Sam had the ranch, the cows, the big ice plant. Mr. Hubert Hand had the knowledge and the equipment. They could divide the profits.

Next to sleep men, I guess there is nothing that cow men hold in lower contempt than their hold dairy farms. Sam was too much disgusted to swear very long.

"Listen, stranger," he said. "I wouldn't turn the Desert Moon into a place to ship milk around in if the entire valley had to depend on Hong-kong, China, for its ice cream cones. Forget it, and come in now and have some supper."

To my knowledge, Hubert Hand, from that day to this, has never again mentioned on the Desert Moon, anything that had to do with creameries. Neither, from that day to this, has he been off the ranch for more than a couple of weeks at a time.

"By the way," he began, trying to make it sound unimportant, when we had finished supper, "I heard in Toledo, that you were something of a chess player."

"I am, when I can get a game," Sam said. "But chess players, in these parts, are as scarce as hen's teeth."

"I play a little," Hubert Hand produced, right modestly.

Sam jumped up and got out his chess table.

Hubert Hand beat him the first game in about half an hour. They set up their men again. It took Hubert Hand over an hour that time to beat Sam, but he did it.

"Heck!" Sam said, at the end of that game. "You're tired."

"Hired for what?"

"For whatever you want to call it, except the shopping of milk around. Send for your trunk and name your pay. Why didn't you say, in the first place, that you were a blankety blank crack chess player?"

Famous Song Not Burns

Although the words of the song "Auld Lang Syne" appear in Burns' works, he himself, admits that he wrote only the second and third stanzas. The same title can be written after part of 1900. In large Thomson, September, says "One song more of Auld Lang Syne." The "Auld Lang Syne" is the old time, but the "Auld Lang Syne" is the new time. It is not the old time, but it is the new time.

Phrase "Stone Age" Not Literal in Application

The Stone age is a term commonly used to denote the earliest recognized stage in the development of human culture as defined by the materials used by man for weapons, utensils, etc. The phrase is somewhat misleading, since it is probable that primitive man made use of wood and other perishable materials to a far greater extent than of stone, and consequently the stage is defined by the prevailing material of the relics, not by that of actual implements in common use. The term "Stone age" represents in no sense a chronological division of human progress, but is a loose equivalent for a stage of cultural development varying widely in duration in different parts of the world. There are, e. g., tribes still in the Stone age, while, on the other hand, some groups had outgrown it before the dawn of history.

It is also worth noting that some tribes commonly classed as belonging to the Stone age produced objects of a superior artistic and industrial merit to those who had advanced to the use of metals. The evidence for the existence of such an age in most parts of the world is conclusive, but it is from the prevalence and character of the relics in certain parts of Europe rather than in America that the idea and term have come into general use.

Denver Boy is a Winner

Every mother realizes how important it is to teach children good habits of conduct but many of them fail to realize the importance of teaching their children good bowel habits until the poisons from decaying waste held too long in the system have begun to affect the child's health.

Watch your child and at the first sign of constipation, give him a little California Fig Syrup. Children love its rich, fruity taste and it quickly drives away those distressing ailments, such as headaches, bad breath, coated tongue, biliousness, feverishness, fretfulness, etc. It gives them a hearty appetite, regulates the stomach and bowels and gives tone and strength to these organs so they continue to act normally, of their own accord. For over fifty years, leading physicians have prescribed it for half-sick, bilious, constipated children. More than 4 million bottles used a year shows how mothers depend on it.

Mrs. C. G. Wilcox, 3355 1/2 Wolf St., Denver, Colorado, says: "My son, Jackie, is a prize winner for health, now, but we had a lot of trouble with him before we found his trouble was constipation and began giving him California Fig Syrup. It fixed him up quick, gave him a good appetite, made him sleep fine and he's been gaining in weight right along since the first few days, taking it."

To avoid inferior imitations of California Fig Syrup, always look for the word "California" on the carton.

The Correct Way to Remove Wrinkles

There is one way—a simple, pleasant, sure method that thousands use to drive wrinkles away. That way is to get two ounces of epitel from the drug store, mix with half pint of water, adding a tablespoon of glycerine. This makes a delightful, rich cream, which you spread thinly over forehead, temples, cheeks, around eyes and rub in until absorbed. Instantly the pores tighten, dead outer skin sloughs off and new, smooth, plump, youthful skin appears. With this action, away go wrinkles, lines and crow's-feet.

Mr. R. E. Saunders' children, Mr. and Mrs. Martin Banister, Mr. and Mrs. Lee Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Short Saunders, and Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Harris, also Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Mills, surprised him in his home with a birthday dinner and many nice presents Sunday, Nov. 3rd.

When his bride of 27 years met him at the door, at 11:45, and marched to the dining room, where he was greeted by all his children and a host of friends, and found the table decorated with many delicious things, his eyes were dimmed by tears, as it brought back memories of just 27 years ago—when he led this same little bride to the altar.

Joy and laughter held forth until late in the evening, when all had to depart for their homes. It was a very happy occasion, long to be remembered.
