COMMUNITY CHRISTMAS TREE DEC. 24th

On December 24th, Hedley will have a Community Christmas Tree to be staged in the new high school auditorium. The churches and various clubs of the town are sponsoring the movement, since it is "community wide," and we trust that every boy and girl in the community will be present for every child will receive something from the tree.

Committees are being appointed by the various churches, and it looks as if we will have one of the best Christmas trees ever staged in Hedley.

The tree that the school usually has on the Friday afternoon before the Christmas holidays will be eliminated, thus all will be centered on the community tree. Since it is not a school or church event, but a community affair, we trust that everyone will cooperate and help make Christmas a bright day for many a poor boy and girl.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH CALLS NEW PASTOR

The church met in conference last Sunday and extended a call as pastor to Rev. Geo. C. Hattie of Santa Fe. N. M. Rev. Hattie preached at the First Baptist Church twice recently, and made a fine impression on those who heard him. We have not learned whether he will accept the call.

Spencer Sibley preached for the First Baptist congregation Sunday evening, Nov. 24. Those who heard him were delighted with the sermon. Spencer is an old Hedley boy, married a Hedley girl, and they have a host of friends here who are interested in their welfare. He is pastor of the church at Washburn.

CITY ELECTION HELD HERE LAST TUESDAY

The special City Election held Tuesday to fill vacancies caused by the resignation of Aldermen Adams, Cooper, Horschler and Lowry, brought out a fair but not a heavy vote. It resulted in the selection of Z. T. Beaty, C. E. Johnson, Zeb Mitchell and T. R. Moreman, and these men, with Mayor Kinsey and Alderman C. L. Johnson, now constitute our City Council. It is a good one.

The job of "City Dad" is not an easy one, and when a man sacrifices his personal interests for the community's welfare—knowing he will take his pay in "cussin's"—well, it's no wonder it takes a lot of persuading to get a man's consent to have his name go on the ticket.

Now let's fool 'em just this once. Let's cooperate and show them that we appreciate their unselfish efforts in behalf of our common interests.

Amarillo Woman Gains Daily by Taking Orgatone

"I've Never Found Anything to Equal It," She Declares. Suffered Five Years.

"If I could speak with everybody personally who has stomach trouble and constipation," said Mrs. J. W. Jones of 202 Florida Ave., Amarillo, Texas. "I would advise them to take Orgatone, for I have tried it myself, and have never found anything to equal it. I have suffered from sick headaches and kidney trouble during the past five years until I thought I would go distracted. The pain would extend from the small of my back and up my spine till it seemed like to me right at the base of my brain. My appetite was very poor and my stomach was so out of order that what little I did eat made me miserable. I suffered terribly from indigestion and would bloat up so badly from the gas on my stomach that I could scarcely breathe and there was also a dull aching pain in the pit of my stomach. My complexion was very bad, sallow and yellow looking, and I just felt badly all the time.

"But Orgatone has been a wonderful blessing to me, and no one could see the change that has taken place in me during the past few weeks and doubt it being great medicine. All my stomach and kidney troubles are gone now, and you may know me like a new person. My complexion is splendid. I am never without indigestion or no matter what I eat, my color is fine. Now I have been relieved of stomach trouble. I gained weight. Besides now I can sleep at night. I have felt about it." Genuine in Hedley.

Reduction of Income Tax by One Per Cent Proposed by the Administration.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

IF CONGRESS is agreeable, and it almost certainly will be, our income taxes for this year will be reduced by about $100,000,000. This is the plan of the administration, the announcement of which was made in advance of the President's budget message to congress in the hope that it would serve to ameliorate the stock market situation.

Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Undersecretary Ogden Mills and Roy Young, governor of the federal reserve board, conferred with Mr. Hoover, and Mr. Mellon then issued a statement which said in part:

"While the final detailed estimates of revenues and expenditures for the fiscal year 1930 and 1931 have not been completed, the secretary of the treasury considers the estimates have reached the point where tax reduction should be recommended to the congress at the coming session.

"The indications are that business profits, dividends, interest, and wage payments in 1929 will considerably exceed those of the year 1928. Our estimates indicate that the government should close both the fiscal years 1930 and 1931 with a surplus. Taking all factors into consideration, the secretary of the treasury, with the approval of the President, will recommend tax reduction to the congress.

"The form of relief to the taxpayers which the treasury's recommendations will probably take will be a 1 per cent reduction of the normal tax on the incomes of individuals and corporations applicable to 1929 incomes and payable in the calendar year 1930.

"The total reduction of taxes to be collected during the calendar year 1930 will amount, it is estimated, to approximately $100,000,000.

"The reduction, it is hoped, will take the form of a joint resolution of congress, thus permitting prompt action by both houses by avoiding a general revision of the revenue law.

"The proposal has been discussed with the Republican and Democratic leaders of both houses of congress, who have tentatively approved the proposed recommendation."

It was believed in Washington that enactment of the necessary legislation will come early in the regular session of congress, which opens on December 2.

COMMENT on the stock market situation seems superfluous, for every one in the country has been reading the financial columns with avidity if not with dismay. Day after day prices continued their downward way and it seemed as if the market had no bottom. Even the bears were surprised, and one of their leaders, Jesse Livermore, was quoted as saying that prices of many of the good stocks had fallen too low. But the amateur speculators were panicky-stricken and refused to listen to reason. Many of the highest-priced industrial fell to new low records for the year, and lots of bargain hunters of the previous week were caught in the jam. The New York Stock Exchange on Wednesday took steps to ferret out the undercover selling that had felled all efforts to stabilize the market. Every member was called on to give at once the following information:

A list of stocks borrowed and from whom and for whose account; a list of stocks loaned and to whom; intra-office borrowings and for whose accounts; a list of all stocks which they have failed to deliver, and for whose account.

This action, together with the tax reduction news, brought on a flood of buying orders, and prices began to move upward.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S Armistice day address at Arlington National cemetery was hailed in America and Europe as one of the most important statements ever made by him, and it was given general approval. Briefly, he challenged the other powers to a radical reduction of naval armaments, declaring that the United States would reduce its naval strength in proportion to any other, that it remained for the others to say how low they would go and that "it cannot be too low for us." He suggested the exemption of merchant ships, carrying food exclusively, from seizure by belligerents as the first step in solving the problem of the freedom of the seas. He proposed amplification of the Kellogg anti-war pact by provision of automatic machinery for investigation of disputes involved in violation of the pact, subjecting the aggressor to the "searchlight of public opinion." And he suggested the need of additional arbitration treaties and of an authoritative system of international law.

Throughout his address Mr. Hoover revealed himself as an ardent advocate of world peace and the reduction of preparations for war, but asserted the latter must be by agreement only. "I have no faith in the reduction of armaments by example alone," said the President. "Until such time as the nations can build the agencies of pacific settlement on stronger foundations; until fear, the most dangerous of all national emotions, has been proved groundless by long proof of international honesty, until the power of world public opinion as a restraint of aggression has had many years of test, there will not have been established that confidence which warrants the abandonment of preparedness for defense among nations. To do so may invite war.

"I am for adequate preparedness as a guaranty that no foreign soldier shall ever step upon the soil of our country."

It should be noted that Mr. Hoover said his suggestion concerning food ships in war times would not be discussed at the London naval reduction conference.

ONE of the many interesting events on Armistice day was the dedication of the Ambassador bridge, the first to be built across the Detroit river to Canada. It is the longest bridge of its type in the world and cost $20,000,000. Its free span is 1,850 feet long and its total length is one and eight-tenths miles. The ceremonies included military parades in both Detroit and Canada and addresses lauding the structure as an aid in perpetuating the 114 years of peace between the United States and the Dominion.

SIR RONALD LINDSAY, British under secretary of state for foreign affairs, has been selected as ambassador to Washington to succeed Sir Esme Howard, who retires from the diplomatic service early next year. Sir Ronald is well known in this country and his wife is an American, a daughter of the late Colgate Hoyt of New York.

Nelson Johnson, assistant secretary of state in charge of far eastern affairs, was appointed by President Hoover to be minister to China to succeed John Van A. MacMurray, resigned. He is a "career" diplomat who has served in China and is remarkably well posted on the entire far eastern situation. William Phillips has resigned the post of American minister to Canada, to the deep regret of President Hoover and the State department. He was offered another diplomatic post, but wished to return to the United States on account of his children.

SENATOR BINGHAM'S theory that the senate lobby committee was packed against the Republican tariff bill received a measure of substantiation when its chairman, Senator Caraway, asserted that its labors would soon be concluded. For of all the lobbies operating in Washington, little or no attention has been paid by the committee to any others than those whose concern is the tariff. Joseph R. Grundy, veteran lobbyist for Pennsylvania interests, was recalled by the committee last week and Mr. Caraway demanded that he name the senators from "backward" states who, he contended, have too much voice in fixing the policies of the nation. Mr. Grundy said that on reflection he decided this would be improper, becoming, and Mr. C.

him a welscher and yellow. But a moment later the senator retracted this, shook Mr. Grundy's hand and said that, after all, he liked him. In a report to the senate, Chairman Caraway dealt with the testimony given by William Burgess of New Jersey, representative of pottery and other interests. The senator flatly accused Burgess of perjury and slander and said he was a paid lobbyist who had "no regard whatever for his reputation."

DELEGATES to the conference to establish the new Bank of International Relations signed the statutes, charter and trust agreements of the institution and departed from Baden Baden. The statutes, as published immediately, fix Basel, Switzerland, as the seat of the bank and describe its purposes as:

"To promote co-operation of the central banks, provide additional facilities for international financial operations and to act as trustee or agent in regard to the international financial settlements entrusted to it."

So long as the Young reparations plan is operative the bank will not only "observe provisions of the plan in administration of operations of the bank," but also will "conduct its affairs with a view to facilitating execution of the plan."

During the Young plan's operation the bank is vested with the functions of receiving and distributing the German reparations and supervising and assisting in commercialization and mobilization of certain parts of the German annuities.

NADIR SHAH, the new king of Afghanistan, has issued a proclamation saying that strict prohibition is to be enforced in that country. The rights of the people are to be equal, with no distinctions as to nationality, caste or birth excepting those prescribed by the Shariat—sacred law. A recognized national army has been established and equipped with the latest implements of war. A military school is to be founded at Kabul, the capital, where officers will be trained in modern scientific warfare. King Nadir also says he hopes to conclude a trade treaty with the United States.

REDUCED to poverty and without desire to live longer, the former Princess Victoria, eldest sister of the ex-king of Germany, died in a hospital in Bonn at the age of sixty-three years. Wilhelm is estranged from her when she married Alexander Soubkoff, a Russian refugee, and gave her no assistance when she was forced to sacrifice all her possessions to pay her husband's debts. She had applied for divorce from the dissolute Soubkoff, who was expelled from Germany and has been working as a waiter in Luxembourg.

Other deaths were those of James A. Robb, finance minister of Canada; Dr. E. A. Allen, chief of the experiment stations of the Department of Agriculture; Dr. Frederick Mosen of California, eminent anthropologist, and James J. Riordan, New York banker and close friend of Al Smith, who committed suicide.

WHAT is believed to be the largest embezzlement in the nation's history was revealed by a statement of the officers of the Union Industrial bank of Flint, Mich. It shows that within the last few months ten or more of the bank's employees have stolen from it money and securities to the amount of $3,502,000. Charles S. Mott, president of the institution, has deposited cash enough for his private fortune to guarantee the depositors against loss.

Acidity

The common cause of digestive difficulties is excess acid. Soda cannot alter this condition, and it burns the stomach. Something that will neutralize the acidity is the sensible thing to take. That is why physicians tell the public to use Phillips Milk of Magnesia.

One spoonful of this delightful preparation can neutralize many times its volume in acid. It acts instantly; relief is quick, and very apparent. All gas is dispelled; all sourness is soon gone; the whole system is sweetened. Do try this perfect anti-acid, and remember it is just as good for children, too, and pleasant for them to take. Fondness for Western Music Shown by Japan
The demand in Japan for all kinds of western classical music is in striking contrast to the condition in China, where native music is still pre-eminent and where foreign melodies, either classic or jazz are not welcomed, declared a representative of an American gramophone company, after completing a tour of the Far East recently.

Up until 30 years ago, he said, the Japanese were almost entirely ignorant of foreign music, but during this time they have rapidly become educated to it and now there is a large demand for music by Beethoven, Mozart, Brahms and Wagner. This appreciation of western music is genuine and not the result merely to be like other countries, it is agreed.

Foreign music, whether rendered by local artists or those from abroad, is received with great enthusiasm. The appearance of stars such as Galli-Curci, Elman and Heifetz always bring packed houses, while many are turned away when visiting opera companies play "Carmen" or "Aida."

Tide and Untied
The young man and young woman occupying the rear seat of the bus were obviously returning from a trip to Indianapolis. Oblivious to the slouching figure in the corner they chatted on. When the driver switched off the inside lights of the bus they were attracted to the appearance of the moon.
"Oh, look, what a perfectly beautiful moon," she lisped.
"Yes, isn't it?" her companion agreed. "And, by the way, they say the moon affects the tide."
The figure in the corner stirred uneasily. "And also the untied," it growled.—Indianapolis News.

Thrilling Record of a Heroic Failure

How quickly the world forgets some of its heroes! It has been only nineteen years since the news of the death of Robert Falcon Scott—and the manner of that intrepid death—stirred with pride and regret every branch and offshoot of the Anglo-Saxon breed; stirred also the hearts of lovers of courage throughout the civilized earth. All the same, in every English-speaking country, excluding perhaps England itself, there already is growing up a generation to whose members mention of this man's name brings, in many instances, only the vaguest of memories.

Yet Robert Scott's reputation was built to stay. For it was built upon the rocks of immortal achievement and it was welded together with the elements of determination, integrity, cheerfulness, patience, valor, humor, and most of all, unselfishness. He infinitely was more deserving of everlasting fame than your conqueror, your military despot, your place-seeking political leader.

Captain Scott was a young officer in the British navy, popular with his comrades, well thought of by his superiors. He was asked to accept leadership in a new and formidable undertaking—the exploration of the unknown Antarctic continent, by land. The expedition was of immense scientific importance. It marked the initiation of sledge travel in polar surveys, and it resulted in the discovery of the great ice cap upon which the South pole rests. It gave to Captain Scott prominence in professional circles and among naval men.

His second and last expedition was practically a failure so far as its main final object was concerned, whereas the first had been an unqualified success. For it ended in his tragic destruction and the destruction of his four chosen mates. But by all the standards of the human virtues it was a glorious triumph.

He had taken with him a staff of trained technicians, and the early stages of the exploration were marked by research and observation of enormous value to geographers and naturalists. Then, with four men picked for their hardihood and powers of bodily endurance, Captain Scott set out to reach the pole itself, hoping to plant there the British flag. He was almost within sight of the spot when he found that by a peculiar irony of fate and by a bare margin of only a few weeks, the Amundsen party had beaten him—the first human beings to set foot at the South pole.

Scott's party turned back. How, a little later and after pitiable uncomplaining suffering, they perished in the pitiless white desert of ice and snow is told in the record which Scott himself kept. He must have been teetering on the very edge of eternity when the last faltering words of that deathless epic of bravery and self-sacrifice were entered down in March of 1912. Dodd Mead & Company published the journal in book form in this country.

"IT IS wonderful to think that two long marches would land us at the Pole!" Thus optimistically Captain Scott began the chronicle of that last fatal journey which was to end some ten weeks later when his fingers, already stiffening in the grip of death, recorded the final words of as hopeless, as splendid, as heroic a quest as the records of the Anglo-Saxon breed can show in any age. He goes on:

"We left our depot today with nine days' provisions, so that it ought to be a certain thing now, and the only appalling possibility the sight of the Norwegian flag forestalling ours. Only 27 miles from the Pole. We ought to do it now."

But a grievous disillusionment awaited the intrepid little band. There is heartbreak in the next entry in the leader's diary:

"Tuesday, January 16. The worst has happened, or nearly the worst. We marched well in the morning and covered seven and one-half miles. We started off in high spirits in the afternoon, feeling that tomorrow would see us at our destination. About the second hour of the march, Bowers' sharp eyes detected what he thought was a cairn; he was uneasy about it. Half an hour later he detected a black speck ahead. Soon we knew that this could not be a natural snow feature. We marched on, found that it was a black flag tied to a sledge nearby the remains of a camp; sledge tracks and ski tracks going and coming and the clear trace of dogs' paws—many dogs. This told us the whole story. The Norwegians have forestalled us and are first at the Pole. It is a terrible disappointment, and I am very sorry for my loyal companions. Tomorrow we must march on to the Pole and then hasten home with all the speed we can compass. All the day-dreams must go; it will be a wearisome return."

Next night, still brooding over the victory of his Norwegian rivals and seething for the first time feeling doubt regarding the outcome of this most desperate and forlorn venture, Scott concerned his daily entry with this:

"God! this is an awful place and terrible enough for us to have labored to it without reward of priority. Well, it is something to have got here, and the wind may be our friend tomorrow. Now for the run home and a desperate struggle! I wonder if we can do it!"

But they didn't turn back yet. They must make sure that the other expedition really had beaten them. It had, sure enough. On the eighteenth, two miles from their latest camping place and, as they reckoned it, about a mile and a half from the Pole itself, they labored across the white wastes to a tent, finding here the names of the five victorious Norwegians, headed by that great explorer, Amundsen. The Englishmen raised their Union Jack—one minute bit of color in the midst of thousands of square miles of black and white desolation. At least, they could celebrate the fact that they, too, had reached the spot. The final paragraph of their leader's journal under this date carried a note of bitter pathos:

"Well, we have turned our backs now on the goal of our ambition and must face our 800 miles of solid drag-ging—and good-by to most of the day-dreams!"

The Beginning of the End.

Day after day they struggled on the return march. And what a setting for such a retreat!—at an altitude of nearly 10,000 feet above sea level, with a temperature averaging 20 degrees below zero, poorly provisioned, down-cast over their failure to win the race, and the dash gone out of their souls—and 800 miles between them and common comforts! But if they were downcast, they were not complaining. Their spirits were low but their resolution was as steadfast as it had been when the prospect of success danced before their weather-beaten, frost-alpined faces.

Day by day the struggle grew over glaciers, over hun-midst of an unutterable desolation. And by night, with his breath freezing on his lips and his fingers numbing inside his mittens, Scott would inscribe the tally of that day's fearsome toll. Disasters began to multiply, ill-luck to dog the footsteps of the losers. Thus on January 30, he said:

"Wilson has strained a tendon in his leg; it has given pain all day and is swollen tonight. Of course, he is full of pluck over it, but I don't like the idea of such an accident here. To add to the trouble, Evans has dislodged two finger nails tonight from freezing; his hands are really bad, and to my surprise he shows signs of losing heart over it. He hasn't been cheerful since the accident."

Their misfortunes multiplied:

"Sunday, February 11. The worst day we have had during the trip and greatly owing to our own fault. We started on a wretched surface—horrible light, which made everything look fantastic. As we went on, light got worse—Then came the fatal decision to steer east. We went on for six hours, hoping to do a good distance, which in fact I suppose we did, but for the last hour or two we pressed on into a regular trap. Half an hour after lunch we got in the worst ice mess I have ever been in. For three hours we plunged on, on skis. There were times when it seemed almost impossible to find a way out of the awful turmoil in which we found ourselves. At length, arguing that there must be a way on our left, we plunged in that direction. It got worse, harder, more icy and crevassed. We could not manage our skis, and pulled ahead on foot, falling into crevasses every minute. At length we saw a smoother slope toward the land, pushed for it, but knew it was a woefully long way from us. The turmoil changed in character, irregular crevasses surface giving way to huge chasms, closely packed and most difficult to cross. It was very heavy work but we had grown desperate. We won through at 10 p. m. and I write after twelve hours on the march. I think we are on or about the right track now, but we are still a good number of miles from the depot, so we reduced rations tonight. Pray God the wind holds tomorrow!"

In a plight which steadily grew more critical and more difficult, they pressed on, constantly contending with, and almost hourly baffled by, the incredible obstacles of Antarctic travel—fissures, contrary gales, terrific blasts, whirling blinding snow storms. And all the while, their small store of provisions shrank.

A Trying Position.

On February 16, the first of that indomitable group to collapse got a page in the records. Of this catastrophe Scott wrote:

"A rather trying position. Evans has nearly broken down in brain, we think. He is absolutely changed from his normal self-reliant self. This morning and this afternoon he stopped the march on some trivial excuse. Perhaps all will be well if we can get to our depot tomorrow fairly early, but it is anxious work with the sick man. But it's no use meeting troubles half way, and our sleep is all too short to write more."

"Saturday, February 17. A very terrible day. Evans looked a little better after a good sleep and as he always did, that he well. He started in his pl. traces, but half an hour his ski shoes adrift on the sledge. . . . We about one hour, and I again very slowly. Hal was dropped out again. . . . We the remainder of r pull very hard. . . . ans still not appe to see him still a we were alarmed ed back. I was fi man and shocked he was on his k arranged, ha bitten, and got him on his three steps showed by lapse. Wilson, Bowers and I went back for the sledge, whilst Oates remained with him. When we returned he was practically unconscious, and when we got him into the tent quite comatose. He died quietly at 12:30 a. m. . . . It is a terrible thing to lose a companion in this way, but calm reflection shows that there could not have been a better ending to the terrible anxieties of the past week."

Captain Oates, a young soldier, was the next of the quartet to go. His feet were frozen; he knew he was doomed, but he lost neither his cheerfulness nor his determination.

The Death of Oates.

"Sunday, March 11. Titus Oates is very near the end, one feels. What we or he will do, God only knows. We discussed the matter after breakfast; he is a brave fine fellow and understands the situation, but he practically asked for advice. Nothing could be said but to urge him to march as long as he could. One satisfactory result of the discussion; I practically ordered Wilson to hand over the means of ending our troubles to us, so that anyone of us may know how to do so. Wilson had no choice between doing so and our ransacking the medicine case. We have 30 opium tablets in apiece and he is left with a tube of morphine."

He was dying on his feet, this Oates, but he took it standing up. He fasted, a shell of a man, sustained only by his soul, through the better part of a week—and kept moving.

"Friday, March 16 or Saturday, 17. Lost track of dates but think the last correct. At lunch the day before yesterday, poor Titus Oates said he couldn't go on; he proposed we should leave him in his sleeping-bag. That we could not do, and induced him to come on, on the afternoon march. "Should this be found, I want these facts recorded. Oates' last thoughts were of his mother, but immediately before, he took pride in thinking that his regiment would be pleased with the bold way in which he met his death. We can testify to his bravery. He has borne intense suffering for weeks without complaint, and to the very last was able and willing to discuss outside subjects. He did not—would not—give up hope to the very end. . . . He slept through the night before last, hoping not to wake; but he woke in the morning—yesterday. It was blowing a blizzard. He said: 'I am just going outside and may be some time.' He went out into the blizzard and we have not seen him since."

It seems to me those words, "I am just going outside, and may be some time," should be engraved on a shaft to this young Britisher's memory, for future generations to read. Perhaps they have been; anyhow, I hope so.

The Last to Perish.

Scott went on:

"I take this opportunity of saying that we have stuck to our sick companions to the last. In case of Edgar Evans, when absolutely out of food and he lay insensible, the safety of the remainder seemed to demand his abandonment, but Providence mercifully removed him at this critical moment. We knew that poor Oates was walking to his death, but though we tried to dissuade him, we knew it was the act of a brave man and an English gentleman. We all hope to meet the end with a similar spirit, and assuredly the end is not far."

Scott's turn to break came within forty-eight hours. Indeed, all three of the survivors were at the limit of their strength. On Sunday, the eighteenth, he made a significant entry. He was as good as dead, but he kept his sense of humor:

"My right foot has gone, nearly all the toes—two days ago I was the proud possessor of the best feet. These are the steps of my downfall! Like an ass, I mixed a small spoonful of curry powder with my melted pemmican—it gave me violent indigestion. I lay awake and in pain all night; woke and felt done on the march; foot went and I didn't know it. A very small measure of neglect and have a foot which is not pleasant to contemplate."

Then next day, this:

"What progress! We have two days' food but barely a day's fuel. All our feet are getting bad—Wilson's best, my right foot worst, left all right. . . . Amputation is the least I can hope for now, but will the trouble spread? That is the serious question."

"Thursday, March 20. Since the twenty-first we have had a continuous gale. We had fuel to make two cups of tea apiece and bare food for two days on the twentieth. Every day we have been ready to start for our depot 11 miles away, but outside the door of the tent it remains a scene of whirling drift. I do not think we can hope for any better things now. We will stick it out to the end, but we are getting weaker, of course, and the cannot be far. . . . I begin a pity, but I do not think I will write more."

Girl Fights Big Handicap

MANY a girl would give up in despair when she found herself snubbed in school and unpopular in college, but not so Mrs. Norma Kussel Jones of 1567 Cramer Street, Milwaukee, Wisconsin.

"When I was seventeen I went away to college," says Mrs. Jones. "Freda, my room-mate, was a very popular girl. Soon she asked to have her room changed. It seems I kept her awake at night, I slept so restlessly. No one knows how I suffered."

"One day one of my teachers found me sobbing. 'Why,' she said, 'sometimes sluggish circulation causes restless sleep. Why don't you try Nujol?'"

"In two weeks Nujol had begun clearing out the poisons in my body, my skin had a clear healthy appearance, and everything looked brighter. 'What have you been doing to yourself?' asked my room-mate. 'You are a different girl.' The days and years that followed were filled with every activity and not long ago Freda was maid of honor at my wedding. That's what Nujol did for me!"

Such a simple way to health and happiness! Your doctor will tell you that Nujol contains no medicines or drugs—it is simply bodily lubrication—harmless, normal, and it works easily so you will be regular as clockwork. You can get a bottle in a sealed package at any drug store for what you would pay for two or three sodas.

Get a bottle today and try it. If you are like most other people Nujol will make you brighter, happier, more able to succeed. Don't put off good health! Start being well this easy way, this very day.

Brave American Girls like this one never say die!

Your friends are not perfect, of course. If they were they might not like you.

It takes infinite patience to rear a child; and there seems to be an abundance of it.

For any BABY

We can never be sure just what makes an infant restless, but the remedy can always be the same. Good old Castoria! There's comfort in every drop of this pure vegetable preparation, and not the slightest harm in its frequent use. As often as Baby has a fretful spell, is feverish, or cries and can't sleep, let Castoria soothe and quiet him. Sometimes it's a touch of colic. Sometimes constipation. Or diarrhea—a condition that should always be checked without delay. Just keep Castoria handy, and give it promptly. Relief will follow very promptly; if it doesn't, you should call a physician. All through babyhood, Castoria should be a mother's standby; and a wise mother does not change to stronger medicines as the child grows older. Castoria is readily obtained at any drugstore, and the genuine easily identified by the Chas. H. Fletcher signature that appears on every wrapper.

People will not tell you your faults; but they will remain silent when you point them out yourself.

Girls no longer amuse themselves by trying on each other's hats; the hats are too much alike.

FORMER HEDLEYANS ATTEND ALLEN LOKEY FUNERAL

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Pierce were greeting their many friends here Tuesday, and renewed for their informant, for which we appreciate them just a little more. They were en route to Canyon from Memphis where they had been to attend the funeral of Mr. Pierce's nephew, Allen Lokey, who died Sunday evening. Mr. Lokey had become famous throughout this section as the inventor of a cotton berr extractor which made practical the ginning of cotton bolls. He had been in bad health three or four years, and had a number of friends here who deeply regret his death.

Imagine your Motor

Constantly immersed in

Oil

That, in effect, is what happens when you fill your crank case with Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil—none of its hundreds of moving parts are ever without lubrication.

A MOTOR OIL, to do a 100% job, must lubricate all the time. That means that it should provide a lubricating film at every stage of motor operation including starting when the engine's cold. In other words, the motor should have a perpetual oil bath.

And that's exactly what happens when you use Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil for the very good reason that this super-lubricant because of the patented germ process by which it is produced, actually combines with the bearing surfaces to form a film which adheres indefinitely. It never leaves the bearings—and that means constant lubrication.

Think of the saving this means to the motoring public! Automotive engineers estimate that from 40% to 60% of the destructive wear and tear on a motor is caused in the starting operation because, with ordinary oil in the crankcase, the moving parts have no lubricating film when the engine is cold—and the oil is not distributed until 5 or 10 minutes after starting. Imagine the abuse to the engine during these periods of running with absolutely no lubrication! No wonder Conoco Germ Processed Oil is hailed as the revolutionizing motor lubricant. Its "carry-over" film has solved the greatest lubrication problem of the day. It assures longer life and smoother operation in any motor where it is used.

And never forget that to produce Conoco Germ Processed Oils the exclusive germ essence principle is applied to only carefully selected paraffin base crudes, resulting in a lubricant with greater film strength, greater adhesiveness, greater tenacity, greater stamina and lower friction than any other oil on the American market.

Draw up to the Conoco Red Triangle and give your motor a perpetual oil bath. Ask for Conoco Germ Processed Motor Oil.
