FIRST BAPTIST REVIVAL WILL BEGIN SUNDAY PRESIDENT F. E. U. COMING TO HEDLEY

Due to the fact that the pastor was unable to secure a singer for the meeting which was scheduled to begin April 6th, the time has been changed, and the meeting will begin next Sunday morning.

L. C. Gayle, Educational and Music Director of First Baptist Church of Cameron, Texas, has been secured to conduct the song service. Mr. Gayle is said to be one of the best singers in the country. Pastor Geo. C. Hutto has been asked to do the preaching for the meeting. Two services each day will be conducted at 10 and 7:30 o'clock. Only one hour will be consumed in the morning service. Every one is cordially invited and urged to attend the day services. A special invitation is extended to the business firms of the little city of Hedley to attend these morning meetings. All the churches in the city are cordially invited to join in with the Baptist church in this effort for Christ and the lost. With Mr. Gayle as song director and Mrs. L. E. Thompson at the piano, it is expected that there will be a large choir of both juniors and seniors.

Remember the revival meeting begins Sunday morning. Start the day right by coming for Sunday School at 10 o'clock. "Don't Forget to Pray."

METHODIST CHURCH

The Presiding Elder, Rev. W. M. Murrell, will preach at the Methodist Church Sunday night and hold the second Quarterly Conference for the year. Rev. Murrell is an outstanding preacher and always brings a great message to the delight and edification of the congregation, so we expect a large congregation to hear him Sunday night.

The pastor will preach Sunday morning. Sunday School at 10 o'clock. The Epworth League meets at 6:30 p. m.

There were no preaching services last Sunday at the Methodist Church due to the fact that the pastor was called to Trent, Texas, to conduct a funeral and was not able to get back in time to preach Sunday.

Please let every member be in his place Sunday.

E. D. Landreth, Pastor.

Think This Over

IF THE SAME ACREAGE is planted to cotton in 1930 as in 1929 the South may produce 17,000,000 bales. If the acre yield is the same as in 1914, 22,000,000 bales can be produced.

Exports so far are 800,000 bales less than last year; domestic mills have used 600,000 bales less so far this year, and we have five more months of this cotton year. At this rate it will show us with 2,500,000 bales less cotton used in the past year than was used in the year previous.

Donley County has purchased, or will purchase, around $200,000 worth of feed this year to make this crop. This should have all been raised in Donley County, as well as a surplus to feed more livestock.

More feed planted, more good cows, more hogs, more chickens, more living at home, and less cotton planted, we believe will help conditions.

HAS THE LAXATIVE IN YOUR HOME A DOCTOR'S APPROVAL?

Some things people do to help the bowels whenever any bad breath, feverishness, biliousness, or a lack of appetite warn of constipation, really weaken these organs. Only a doctor knows what will cleanse the system without harm. That is why the laxative in your home should have the approval of a family doctor.

The wonderful product, known to millions as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a family doctor's prescription for sluggish bowels. It never varies from the original prescription which Dr. Caldwell wrote thousands of times in many years of practice, and proved safe and reliable for men, women and children. It is made from herbs and other pure ingredients, so it is pleasant-tasting, and can form no habit. You can buy this popular laxative from all drugstores.

'Rundown, Lost Appetite, Took Cold Easily'

Wichita Falls, Texas — "I was rundown, lost my appetite and was nervous and irritable. I took cold easily and always suffered with headache. Finally I started taking Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and found it to be the very thing I required to keep me from being so susceptible to colds. I feel my blood circulating better when I take this tonic. I certainly think it is a wonderful medicine. I recommend it willingly and gladly."—Mrs. J. A. Tuberculosis Claim Probed

Because of the great demand for the medicine which he claims to have discovered and to have used in the cure of scores of cases of tuberculosis, Rev. Edward Ward, vicar of a suburban church in Auckland, New Zealand, has promised Minister of Health Stallworthy to discuss with an expert the formula for his treatment. He declares the many requests for the medicine include a large order from England. The compound is reported to contain mineral salts extensively used by a certain European medical school, together with a herb which grows extensively in many parts of New Zealand.

A miracle play of long ago, which had a great vogue at the time, represented Adam as rushing across the stage to get created.

Spring with her golden suns and

THIS AND THAT IN COOKERY

Apples are so commonly found in all markets, so wholesome as a fruit and so popular as a food we find new ways of serving them most welcome.

Pierrot Apples.—Pare and core six large cooking apples, cut into eighths. Make a sirup with one cupful of water and cook gently until they are nearly done. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter and finish cooking. Now add one cupful of rich cream, stir to mix and pour into a glass dish, grate nutmeg over the top and serve just warm.

Fried Apple Pudding.—Line a buttered pudding dish with strips of sponge cake (cut one-half inch thick) which have been dipped into milk and sautéed lightly in melted butter. Cut cored, pared apples into rings and cook them in the butter. Place half of the apple rings in the lined dish and spread over them one-half cupful of strawberry preserve or jam with plenty of the sirup. Repeat and top with more cake. Bake one-half hour, turn out, sprinkle with sugar and serve with cream.

Apples With Cheese.—Cut circles of white bread one-fourth inch thick, dip into melted butter then roll in grated cheese. Place half on a buttered baking dish. Cover with rings of cored apple. Bake in a hot oven and serve sizzling hot.

Chicken Custard.—Chop cooked chicken, stir in a thick white sauce, add one beaten egg, and cook stirring constantly; pour into custard cups, sprinkle with buttered crumbs and brown delicately.

Prepare some biscuit sandwiches by rolling out the biscuit dough thinner than usual, spread one with chopped, seasoned ham and cover with another. Bake until well browned. Cheese or any other filling may be used. Grated maple sugar, peanut butter are some other fillings which are worth trying.

Windmills.—Roll out a rich pastry cut into four-inch squares, slit each an inch deep in the corner of each square. Brush with egg yolk and milk beaten together, and press the corners toward the center. Place half of a peach cooked in a rich sirup on each and bake until the pastry is well browned. Serve with cream as dessert.

Various Good Things.

Honey, because of the water it contains, should when using sugar, reduce the liquid one-fourth, in recipes for honey.

Being slightly acid, honey dishes should have a very little bit of soda used with any quantity over a cupful. Honey in the comb, if kept dry and in a fairly warm place, will not spoil. Extracted honey will crystallize when allowed to stand for some time, but it will quickly melt if the can is set in hot water.

Honey Sauce.—Take one tablespoonful each of flour and butter, one cupful of currant jelly, one cupful of boiling water, two ounces of honey, and two ounces of lemon juice. Cook until thick before adding the honey and lemon.

Apple Meringue.—Grate one apple, add two tablespoonfuls of sugar and one egg white and beat until light. Serve as cake filling or sauce for various puddings.

Soup From Roast Beef Bones.—Remove all the fat and cover with one quart of water, add salt and a lump of sugar, one teaspoonful of beef extract. Simmer three hours with a sliced carrot, add one cupful of chopped cabbage and simmer for one-half hour longer. Serve hot.

Oxtail Soup.—Take one oxtail, jointed, three pints of water, one tablespoonful of mushroom catsup, a teaspoonful of sugar. Simmer several hours, then add one slice of carrot and one onion. Simmer another half hour. Serve with the meat in it.

Combination Salad.—Take two tart apples cut into slices, one-half cupful of english walnuts, one orange cut into bits. Dress with french dressing and heap on water cress.

Greens in Ramekins.—Take fresh cooked greens, season well with buttered crumbs, pack into buttered ramekins, cover with a slice of hard-boiled egg, add a bit of seasoning and butter and set in the oven to become well heated. Serve hot. Any greens—dandelion, spinach or chard—may be used for this dish.

May nettle, burdock, milkweed, marsh marigold are all most delectable greens, if eaten early in the spring. Ragweed, mustard, cow cabbage all have a different flavor and should be used freely when tender and young.

Water cress as soon as the snow is off is ready to serve. It is delightful as a garnish to lamb chops; served with a bit of french dressing it is an especially well liked and piquant salad.

STYLE FAVORS WASHABLE SILK SPRING CLOTHES FOR CHILDREN

AS TO "what's what" in smart washable silks for spring and summer 1930, fashion places emphasis on spun silk fabrics—especially shantung and kindred types in a range of enchanting colors among which are such dainty feminine shades as haze pink, "baby blue," delicate green and violet tones, also the new "pie crust" tint, not forgetting navy blue.

For the assurance of those not versed in silk lore be it said that spun ingeniously stitched. The low-placed fullness of the skirt accents an outstanding silhouette. White kid shoes and a white felt hat complete this attractive costume.

Clothes for the Children.

Juvenile fashions are not exempt from the influences of a new style "complex" such as besets the adult world. Even "simple" little dresses for youngsters abound in such "dress-maker" intricacies as scarf necklines, silk is not an artificial fiber. Like raw silk it is 100 per cent pure product of the silk worm. Its difference from raw silk lies in the manner with which it is drawn from the cocoon. Briefly told its fibers are short, and unlike raw silk which emerges in a continuous strand, spun silk as its name implies is spun into the lengthened threads.

TWO MODELS BID FOR POPULARITY

Paris is all enthusiasm when it comes to washable spun silks as media for frocks, ensembles and blouses for sports, travel, country club and town wear. Oh, yes, indeed, the new spun silks are pre-eminently fashion-correct for most any daytime event.

The jacket costume to the left in the picture is a "last word" in chic. It is made of an interesting spun silk and wool novelty. Note the peplum effect of this jacket. Its godet fullness, which repeats in the skirt is unmistakably smart. The felt hat is matched to the suit in color. As to the shoes worn with this costume, they are "nifty" kid oxfords in that newly highlighted shade, known as beige clair. This color is destined to play a stellar role as the season advances. Which reminds, the new style program boleros, capes, cap sleeves or short puffs, flares, plaits, godets, circular cuts, pintucks, insets, and the list might be continued indefinitely.

There is, however, one instance where styles for children do not follow in the trend of their elders. When it comes to hemlines, here their pathways diverge, for as one goes down, the other goes up. Short, shorter to most abbreviated describes skirt lengths for wee tots.

Referring to the cunning frock in the picture, it carries several significant style details. Attention is called to the unique arrangement of the scarf, which seems to take its start from within the depths of the tiny pocket at the left. From thence it travels in an upward direction about the neck, descending into a decorative single streamer at the right side.

There is also a lesson to be learned as to that which makes for chic, in the tiny cap sleeves which stylize this diminutive dress as here shown. Frocks for both adults and the very young are sleeved this season with short puffs and caps. Elbow sleeves are also in fashion once more. As to plaited skirts they have taken a new lease calls for colorful kid shoes even to the point of matching them to the pastel hues of the frocks and suits with which they are worn.

Speaking of color, the vogue for blues in the lighter range is reflected in the youthful suit posed front-face in the illustration. In that it is fashioned of pastel blue seersucker jersey, a material of spun silk and wool construction. A unique fastening of the jacket confirms the prevalence of bow effects, the bows in this instance being on life, both for tots and for grown-ups. The plaits are of every sort, ranging from very finely plaited to box plaits.

As to fabric, shantung would work up beautifully, copying the model in the illustration. Colorful silk shantung is an outstanding material for spring. It launders satisfactorily, it tallors perfectly and it comes in every known fashionable shade.

Children Cry for it

Children hate to take medicine as a rule, but every child loves the taste of Castoria. And this pure vegetable preparation is just as good as it tastes; just as bland and harmless as the recipe reads. (The wrapper tells you just what Castoria contains.)

When Baby's cry warns of colic, a few drops of Castoria has him soothed, asleep again in a jiffy. Nothing is more valuable in diarrhea. When coated tongue or bad breath tell of constipation, invoke its gentle aid to cleanse and regulate a child's bowels. In colds or children's diseases, use it to keep the system from clogging. Your doctor will tell you Castoria deserves a place in the family medicine cabinet until your child is grown. He knows it is safe for the tiniest baby; effective for a boy in his teens. With this special children's remedy handy, you need never risk giving a boy or girl medicine meant for grown-ups.

Castoria is sold in every drug store; the genuine always bears Chas. H. Fletcher's signature.

For COLDS

We all catch colds and they can make us miserable; but yours needn't last long if you will do this: Take two or three tablets of Bayer Aspirin just as soon as possible after a cold starts. Stay in the house if you can—keep warm. Repeat with another tablet or two of Bayer Aspirin every three or four hours, if those symptoms of cold persist. Take a good laxative when you retire, and keep bowels open. If throat is sore, dissolve three tablets in a quarter-glassful of water and gargle. This soothes inflammation and reduces infection. There is nothing like Bayer Aspirin for a cold, or sore throat. And it relieves aches and pains almost instantly. The genuine tablets, marked Bayer, are absolutely harmless to the heart.

Fliers Say Courage Varies with the Way they Feel

AEROPLANE pilots tell us that their courage, their whole attitude toward flying, varies from day to day, with the way they feel. If they feel full of pep, healthy, they can try anything—nothing frightens them. Their nerve is unshakable; their skill keen; their flying is machine-like in its perfection.

It is an entirely different story, however, if they wake up in the morning feeling sick, down in the mouth. Then flying becomes a real danger.

What is the matter with these brave people when they are not up to par? The natural poisons in their bodies have not been swept away. They are allowing their brains to be clouded and dulled by poisons which should not be permitted to remain in the body.

Member of the "Caterpillar Club" earns his right to membership by 6000 foot Emergency Jump.

This is the lesson we can learn from airmen. It is the lesson that points to Nujol—the simple, natural, normal way—without the use of drugs or medicines to keep the body internally clean of the poisons that slow it up. Nujol is pure, tasteless, colorless as clear water. It forms no habit; it cannot hurt even a baby.

See how the sunshine floods into your life when you are really well. Get a bottle of Nujol in its sealed package at any drug store. It costs only a few cents and it makes you feel like a million dollars. Find out for yourself what Nujol will do for you this very night. You can be at top-notch efficiency and happy all the time. BIRTHDAY PARTY

Little Bettye Margaret Hooker celebrated her fourth birthday March 17th with a "St Patrick's Day" Party. The house was tastefully decorated with green crepe paper, and during the party the guests wore green paper caps. 41 little guests enjoyed the many games, such as "Ring Around Rosy," "Drop the Handkerchief," etc. Then the green birthday cake with four pretty candles was brought out, and the little hostess cut the first piece of cake; then the cake was cut and each guest was given a piece. Refreshments were served, and each little guest declared they had "had a nice time at your party," and the hostess thanked them for the nice little gifts they had brought her.

Those present were Keith Bain, Letha Marie Bain, Lola Ayers, Anna Bell Covey, Jeff Pirtle Jr., Ben Tom Everett, Gene Marl-Beone, Onieta Hickey, Lavena Watkins, Nettie Blankenship, Travis Bailey, Paul Lake Dist-ama, Billy Clifford Johnson, Joan Shaw, Gloria Jane Webb, Joyce Jean Webb, Rainey Westberry Jr., Dorothy Jean Riebersen, Harold Clifton Jun- Kirkpatrick, Bobby Lamberson, Jane Ruth Hall, Dorothy Ho'ges, Walter Hammon Jr., Edna Earle, Lor-raine and J. MRS. McNAPP DIES IN LOS ANGELES

Mr. and Mrs. Marshall Long and son, Jehnnie, have returned from Los Angeles, Calif., where they attended the funeral of their daughter and sister, Mrs. C. H. McNapp, who died following an operation at a hospital in that city. She leaves a husband and six children.

The Longs left Hedley March 8th, immediately after hearing of Mrs. McNapp's serious condition, and arrived in Los Angeles in the evening of the following day, after 84 hours of continuous driving, 16 hours of it through snow. Mrs. McNapp had passed away before their arrival. She was fully conscious until a few moments before her death, knew she was going, and was ready to go.

Mr. and Mrs. Long brought back with them a number of flowers and shrubs from their daughter's garden, in which she had been working just before illness overtook her. They will undertake the growing of these plants at their home here.

Hedley friends of the family deeply sympathize with them in their bereavement.

Electrical Servants for Your Home

"The application of Electricity to household appliances has done more to raise the standard of home-life than any other single factor," is the opinion of a well known home economics authority.

Just contrast the difference between the Modern, Electrically-equipped home of today, and homes of similar means a few years ago.

No longer does the housewife grow old before her time... no longer does she slave and toil about her kitchen and household tasks... no longer is she shut off from the rest of the world because of lack of time to enjoy and appreciate the better things of life.

Does your home reflect the spirit of this New Day? Are you receiving all the economical benefits possible through the intelligent application of electricity to your home?

One of our Household Engineers will be glad to show you how cheaply you can secure the enormous advantages of "Complete Electrical Service."

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Hoover Asks More Economy in Expenditures—Revolt in Santo Domingo.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD
PRESIDENT HOOVER started off the week with a plea to the people of the nation to be moderate in their requests to congress for appropriations for projects in various parts of the country. His aim is to keep governmental expenditures down to a figure so reasonable that an increase in taxes will be obviated. Though this should seem a worthy aim, and in stating it the President carefully made it plain that he was not reflecting on the wisdom of congress, he brought upon himself the wrath of some of the senators, notably Mr. Glass of Virginia.

The appropriations situation was the subject of a White House breakfast conference attended by Republican leaders of both houses of congress, Secretary of the Treasury Mellon, Undersecretary of the Treasury Ogden Mills, Col. J. C. Roop, director of the budget, and Walter H. Newton, one of the President's secretaries.

Mr. Newton issued a statement in which he enumerated proposals for increased expenditures totaling $1,735,000,000, which he said if approved would imply an increase in taxes of 40 per cent. The list, however, included many projects that the congressional leaders had either never heard of or knew would not be given serious consideration. Consequently the imposing list did not appear to frighten them.

Senator Glass, reading Newton's statement in the senate, declared that "nothing more shameless has ever emanated from the White House within my thirty years of service in congress." The President, he said, was setting up a straw man merely for the purpose of knocking him down, since, as every one knew, many bills were introduced at every session of congress only for home consumption and with no idea that they would be enacted into law.

Mr. Hoover, meanwhile, had given out a statement obviously intended to pacify congress. In it he said: "It should be understood that the unprecedented drive now in progress for new legislation and for expansion of established services which increase expenditure beyond the budget, only in a small per cent originates with members of congress or heads of government departments. It originates from different sections of the country itself and from various groups and organizations, each vigorously supporting their own projects. Many of these projects are worthy and no doubt can and should be undertaken some time over future years, especially when funds are free by completion of legislation already adopted." And he urged "the people at home" to realize that the government cannot undertake immediately every worthy project.

IMMEDIATELY after the issuance of the President's economy plea the house adopted a senate resolution appropriating $7,000,000 for loans to farmers in the flood stricken areas of fifteen Southern and Western states, though opponents declared the measure was "pork" and "political pie."

Under the resolution, as adopted, the secretary of agriculture may make advances for the purchase of seed, feed and fertilizer, which banks refuse. Loans in only six states, Alabama, Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia were authorized under the original senate resolution. The house agriculture committee, however, added Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Minnesota, North Dakota, Montana, and New Mexico and the house itself tacked on Missouri and Oklahoma.

Representative O'Connor of Oklahoma said: "Everybody knows the purpose of this bill is to get congressional votes, but so long as you are cutting the pie, Oklahoma wants its piece."

THE Dominican republic was in the throes of a revolution last week. Insurgent forces, determined to keep President Vasquez from running for re-election and to assure the free choice of his successor in May, assembled in various parts of the island and marched on the capital city, Santo Domingo. They entered the city firing volleys in the air and were enthusiastically greeted by the populace. There was no bloodshed as the rebels took possession of all the public buildings. President Vasquez took refuge in the American legation and other administration leaders sought the protection of various foreign consulates. Vice President Alfonseca resigned. Charles B. Curtis, the American minister, was acting as intermediary between the insurgents and the government and was trying to bring about an agreement whereby the situation could be solved without bloodshed or damage to property. The insurgent leaders had promised to respect all lives and property and made no changes except in the police force of the city.

John M. Cabot of Massachusetts, a young member of the American embassy staff, was most active as the emissary of Minister Curtis and after a swift trip to Santiago to confer with Rafael Urena, chief of the insurgents, he was hopeful that a peaceable settlement of the whole controversy could be arranged.

In Washington it was said by officials that it probably would not be necessary to send marines to the Dominican republic to protect American lives and property. If they are needed, however, there are plenty within easy reach, and the scouting fleet is now in Caribbean waters.

CAMILLE CHAUTEUPS, Radical Socialist, and his government of France lasted only five days. Then they were denied a vote of confidence by the chamber of deputies and were forced to resign. Chateups told parliament he had no intention of following the radical policies of the left wing, except that taxes would be reduced, but would maintain the lines of action which Andre Tardieu, his predecessor, had outlined, including his policy in the naval conference at London. The center refused to believe him, and the left wing was displeased. The vote, which was 292 to 277 against Chateups, showed there is no real majority in the chamber of deputies and that any government can survive only through a coalition of center and left groups.

Raymond Poincare was called by President Doumergue but declined to undertake the formation of a ministry on the ground of ill health. So Tardieu was given the job again and Poincare said he would help him, though he could not accept a place in the cabinet. The expectation was that Tardieu would be able to make up his government in time to resume work in the naval conference by March 5.

IN THE absence of the French delegation the chief delegates of the other nations in the London naval conference resumed their negotiations, and it was reported the Americans, English and Japanese were making notable progress in adjusting their differences. The British official spokesman gave out a communique laying stress on the fact that "the five-power pact is still holding the center of the picture" and adding that "any sort of an agreement reached will be purely tentative, will be dependent on French and Italian acceptance and will also depend upon its inclusion in a five-power treaty."

WHEAT raisers and wheat speculators had a lively time last week. Europe had the idea that the United States and Canada were going to boost the price of wheat, so it obtained its supplies in other markets and cut down its consumption. Then Chairman Legge of the federal farm board made the statement that the board would not support the wheat market so as to stabilize the price somewhere near the price its purchasing agency was paying and that it would buy only from co-operatives. This was somewhat distorted and misunderstood in parts of the country and the result was that non-co-operative wheat was dumped on the market and prices fell alarmingly. The farm board's funds were then used to purchase large amounts of May and March wheat, this led other buyers into the market and prices rallied considerably.

Mr. Legge, after conferring with President Hoover, issued a statement designed to co-ordinate the farm board's program with the government's efforts to stabilize business generally, and asking the co-operation of the grain trade in restoration of the grain markets. Mr. Legge added significantly that the board will stand firmly on its wheat loan policy and that he is confident its co-operative agencies "will get the loan figure out of their wheat," namely, $1.18 a bushel at Chicago.

PIERRE S. DUPONT, chairman of the board of the E. I. Dupont de Nemours company of Wilmington, N. J., was the star witness of the wets before the house judiciary committee and he and others almost as well known argued strongly for modification of the dry laws. The day before the committee heard W. W. Atterbury, president of the Pennsylvania railroad, who urged that the Volstead act be repealed and authority be delegated to the states to determine for themselves what is intoxicating liquor and whether they should enact legislation to enforce the Eighteenth amendment. He expressed the opinion that "a great advance in the real cause of temperance" would be made by properly regulated manufacture and sale of liquor under state and national supervision, similar to the Canadian and Swedish systems, with these modified to suit conditions peculiar to America.

POLITICS in Wisconsin have reached the pot and kettle stage. Members of the La Follette faction of the Republican party are trying to oust Gov. Walter J. Kohler from office because of alleged violations of the election law, and now the Kohler faction has retaliated. A petition asking for the naming of special counsel to start removal proceedings against Lieut. Gov. Henry A. Huber, Attorney General John W. Reynolds and Secretary of State Theodore Dammann was filed with the governor just before he left for a two weeks' vacation in Florida. These three men, who are La Folletteites, are accused of pooling their funds in the late campaign and thus conspiring to bring their filings under the limit of $1,500 each, and of otherwise circumventing the election law. The only constitutional state officer not now under charges is State Treasurer Solomon Levitan.

ROMAN Catholicism lost one of its most eminent churchmen in the death of Raphael Cardinal Merry del Val, arch-priest of the basilica of St. Peter's and secretary of the congregation of the holy office, and former papal secretary of state under Pope Pius X. The cardinal, who was a member of a noble Spanish family, passed away after an emergency operation for appendicitis. He was sixty-four years of age. In 1903 and again in 1914 he was urged as a candidate for the papal throne but failed to get the necessary two-thirds vote of the college of cardinals. He was prominently identified with the intransigent party that upheld the church's right for temporal power, and was an opponent of modernism.

Only a few days before the death of Cardinal Merry del Val came that of Carlo Cardinal Perosi. The college of cardinals is thus reduced to 28 Italian and 30 foreigners, there being twelve vacancies.

Other deaths of the week included those of Mabel Normand, screen star; Ahmed Mirza, former shah of Persia; Maj. George H. Putnam, New York publisher, and Eugene Byfield, Chicago hotel man and sportsman.

CHARLES EVANS HUGHES was sworn in as chief justice of the Supreme court on Monday, the oath being administered by Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes, the Nestor of the bench.

Among the decisions handed down by the Supreme court was one declaring constitutional the provisions of the packers and stock yards act authorizing the secretary of agriculture to prescribe maximum rates for the services of commission dealers at public stock yards.

Says Cats Cure
According to Dr. E. Paillet of the French Academy of Medicine, cats prevent pneumonia. He says every family should keep at least one cat. He thinks the day is not very far distant when the practicing physician will have to keep a cat farm, thus enabling him to answer emergency calls with a cat or two under his arm.

Drink Water to Help Wash Out Kidney Poison
If Your Back Hurts or Bladder Bothers You, Begin Taking Salts

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which helps to remove the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of good water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they are no longer a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink, which everyone should take now and then to help keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this; also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

HOW TO LIVE LONGER

By JOHN CLARENCE FUNK
A. M., Sc. D.

Director of Public Health Education,
State of Pennsylvania.

Anger!

THERE are many other ways of exhausting one's nervous and physical energy than through hard work or a habitual disregard for the fundamental living habits. And anger is very prominently one of them.

For example, the other day a petty argument arose on a golf course. One of the participants in the controversy permitted his feelings to get the better of him. He consequently fussed and fumed—and then dropped dead.

An extreme instance, of course. However, one has but to look among his own acquaintances to realize that the man or woman who is constantly fretting or easily angered is burning up precious nervous energy. Moreover, many of them cannot afford to burn it up this way.

Temperaments differ, certainly. And it must be admitted that some people are more naturally given to emotional upsets than are others. For them the problem is doubly hard. But as a general proposition, the person who is enjoying a maximum of physical health is less likely to become the victim of habitually unrestrained emotions of any kind than is the person who through excesses or improper habits of living is the possessor of a sick or half-sick body.

It is a well-established fact that the mind and the body are so closely related that their effects act reciprocally. And if the body is in first-class condition, is maintained there and is not subjected to any unnatural stimulants, stress or strains, the likelihood of serious habitual emotional outbursts can be very much reduced, barring actual mental crises.

It follows that if you are constantly giving way to anger you are unfortunate and may even make yourself ill. It can kill you eventually.

Fortified with healthy recreations, proper amounts and kinds of food, sufficient sleep and plenty of fresh air, one cannot but help live more rationally. And in this manner, explosive anger, which is enemy to health and happiness, may lose its power to hurt you and others. Kill habitual anger by being one hundred per cent alive.

The Hot Weather Complex

ONLY a limited number of people are in a position to evade the summer's excessive heat. But that fact presents no excuse to become all worked up about it. Blustering complainingly about hot weather does not make it or the blusterer one bit cooler. It may have the opposite effect.

A hot weather complex which involves an actively antagonistic attitude toward the heated spell, frequent trips to the thermometer, vigorous fanning and vain desires for cooler climates, is the poorest possible way to fight heat.

It will surprise those who sincerely make the effort to discover that a proper mental attitude toward the super-heated season will go a long way in reducing actual or imagined misery. A daily bath, spare eating of red meats, starchy foods and sweets, the use of cooling drinks, a main diet of vegetables and fruits, and limiting physical activity to the minimum necessity, will also decidedly help the situation. But after all, the most important point is to develop a more tolerant attitude regarding the inevitable.

Torridity is not pleasant. But why make it worse by burning up mentally in the bargain? Kill the heat complex, and see the temperature drop! (© 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

Wild Creatures Thrive, Protected From Hunter

Sweden has the largest stock of bison, or European buffaloes, in the world, and it is expected that this rare animal will continue to increase in number, although it was previously threatened with extinction. The bison were originally imported to Sweden and have since been carefully kept and tended in a special preserve at Engelberg, in the province of Westmanland.

Similar work is being carried on with the beavers, which, owing to indiscriminate shooting had practically disappeared in Sweden not so long ago. For years attempts have been made to increase the beaver stock, and there are now about twenty prosperous beaver colonies. The number of these animals is constantly growing, thanks to strict protection and care. German hares and pheasants have also been imported and are thriving excellently in Sweden.

Similar protection is being given through rigid game laws and supervision to other big game of Swedish origin, especially to the moose and the bear. The first mentioned is protected from hunters throughout the entire year with the exception of a couple of weeks in the early autumn, and is therefore multiplying rapidly. The bear, "the king of the northern forests," is also safe from killers, and reports from the government domains in the North show that there is a fair number of bears roaming the "Swedish Alps." This animal is quite popular, as it is ordinarily not dangerous but has the reputation for being rather harmless and good humored, unless it is attacked or wounded.

The Mother Had Problem

As a rule, milk is about the best food for children, but there are times when they are much better off without it. It should always be left off when children show by feverish, fretful or cross spells, by bad breath, coated tongue, sallow skin, indigestion, biliousness, etc., that their stomach and bowels are out of order.

In cases like this, California Fig Syrup never fails to work wonders, by the quick and gentle way it removes all the souring waste which is causing the trouble, regulates the stomach and bowels and gives these organs tone and strength so they continue to act normally of their own accord. Children love its rich, fruity flavor and it's purely vegetable and harmless, even for babies.

Millions of mothers have proved its merit and reliability in over 50 years of steadily increasing use. A Western mother, Mrs. May Snavey, Montrose, California, says: "My little girl, Edna's, tendency to constipation was a problem to me until I began giving her California Fig Syrup. It helped her right away and soon her stomach and bowels were acting perfectly. Since then I've never had to have any advice about her bowels. I have also used California Fig Syrup with my little boy, with equal success."

To be sure of getting the genuine, which physicians endorse, always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name.

Not at Dignified Banquets

At a dinner in Hollywood for the visiting British journalists, J. T. Collins, editor of an Australian paper, found himself sitting beside Charley Chaplin but did not recognize him. The Australian introduced himself and asked his neighbor's name. Charley looked a bit startled, but finally confessed that he was Charley Chaplin. "But!" exclaimed the astounded Collins, "I thought you wore a mustache!"—Capper's Weekly.

Nickname for Stone

The word holystone denotes a piece of soft stone used in scrubbing decks. The term is supposed to be derived from the fact that decks were usually scrubbed on Saturday as a preparation for Sunday inspection, church, etc.; hence, the phrase, holystone and holystoning.

ORGATONE HAS PUT ME IN FRONT RANK AGAIN

Had Suffered Nearly All His Life Without Relief, But Master Medicine Restores
Wichita Falls Man.

When I tell you that Orgatone has relieved me of years and years of suffering, you can readily understand why I am so strong for this new medicine."— was the remarkable statement made by A. F. Elliott, 417 Wichita street, Wichita Falls, Texas.

"I had a number of troubles and it's the first time in several years I have been rid of them.
Before I began taking Orgatone
I had gas forming on my stomach, I had bloating spells after eating. Several years ago my liver began to enlarge and the doctors couldn't do anything for me. I took every kind of medicine I heard of, but nothing ever did me any good. I was very badly constipated and was nervous and restless and wasn't able to get any rest at night.

"Some of my friends told me to take Orgatone and I had been keeping up with the papers and so I purchased a bottle. I want to say right here and now that Orgatone has proven several times its worth to me, and I eat anything I want now. Food does not sour on my stomach, and my kidneys and liver seem to be functioning properly, and in fact I just feel fine all around. Orgatone has done a lot for me, and I am glad to say what I can for in order that other people may profit by it. I shall continue to take Orgatone as long as it helps me."

Genuine Orgatone may be had

The MUTINY OF THE ALBATROSS

BY WYNDHAM MARTYN

COPYRIGHT IN THE U.S.

W.N.U. SERVICE

THE STORY

Floyd Unwin and Howard Bettington take dinner with an old college chum, Alfred Gibbons, financial magnate. Unwin produces a written pledge taken by the three at college to help each other in adversity, explaining that he needs financial assistance to educate his son Bob and daughter Mary. Gibbons scoffs at the "legality" of the pledge, but agrees to make a place for the daughter in his organization. Mary Unwin is stenographer to a wealthy deaconess, Elgar Radway. Calling at Gibbons' office, as arranged, Mary is asked to betray her employer's secrets and refuses. Radway plans an ocean voyage to recover from the effects of dissipation. Mary is to go as secretary, her brother to accompany her.

"Prove it," he commanded. "Draw something."

Bettington hesitated for a moment. He was not a man who went the better for being driven. But it occurred to him that there was a solitary who was mentally unbalanced. He sketched in a few skillful strokes a portrait of the man standing there, his gun balanced in the crook of his arm.

Jonathan Gibbs looked at it in silence.

"It is good," he said deliberately. "Whatever else you may be you are a draftsman."

"Why should I be anything but I pretend?"

"You've never seen me before?" Gibbs demanded.

"Never," Bettington said a little irritably, "and I shall pass a contented existence if I never see you again. What sort of a Maine fisherman are you to behave like this?"

Gibbs put down his gun and assumed a more friendly air.

"I've been threatened," he said rather vaguely. "I've made enemies hereabout. I have to be careful. I was startled."

"You certainly startled me," said the other. "I hoped to be able to pass the night here and dry my clothes."

"You surely can," said Jonathan Gibbs. "I'll boil the water and make you some coffee. I guess you're hungry."

It was after the meal that Bettington asked him, "Why should anyone threaten you here?"

"Jealousy," said Gibbs, after a pause. "I'm not a state of Maine man and I don't mix with anyone around. They don't understand that."

Plainly the man had something to conceal. After all, Bettington told himself, it was none of his business. He had often met queer, ingrown characters. He could not go out into the black night, now made doubly impassable by the deluge of rain. Gibbs made up the fire by packing a huge armful of wood into it.

Bettington was awakened by the aroma of coffee. Gibbs was holding Bettington's shoes up.

"Dried stiff as boards," he announced. "They'll need to be greased before you can get into 'em, and your pants are torn pretty bad. I'll lend you an outfit, and you can get what you want down to Blackport. The sea's calm now and you can row across the bay in half an hour."

The summer sun had tanned Bettington to a rich brown. In his sea-boots—the only ones Gibbs had to lend—his faded blue sweater and khaki shirt, he looked the sort of fishing type he had often painted.

At the dock he took a ten-foot rowboat and set out to the village. He had gone, perhaps, half the distance, when a fast motor boat overhauled him, slackened speed as it passed and then swung round and waited in the path he was taking.

There were two men in it. One was a vastly broad-chested man with a trim sweater and white canvas trousers. He had the look of a yacht sailor. The other, who was steering the boat, had no physical peculiarities other than that general air of following the sea.

"We've had an accident," said the broad-chested man and pointed to something at the bottom of the launch. Bettington clung to the side of the drifting motor boat and stood up. There, on the bottom of the other craft, was a man lying immobile. And as the artist stooped over him, the recumbent sailor gave a tremendous half-arm jab which caught Bettington on the point of the jaw. The other two grabbed him as his head fell forward and hauled him on board where, unconscious, he took the place of his assailant, who rose grinning.

The broad-chested man, who was called Sam, clapped him on the back in approval.

"Dandy," he cried. "And that rock prevents anyone seeing us from the village." Sam bent over the unconscious form and neatly trussed it up with rope. "The Boss will be tickled to death over this. Stove in that rowboat, one of you."

A man with a boat hook smashed in some bottom boards and Jonathan Gibbs' dinghy slowly filled with water. Then the launch put out of the bay, past the buoys, and headed north for Bar Harbor.

Bettington had recovered from the knock-out within five minutes. He could see from the brightly polished brasswork and mahogany that he was in a yacht's launch. He knew that the hum of the motor would make any call for help useless. He had been neatly knocked out and was now to be expeditiously shanghaied. It was incredible. Then the real meaning of the thing flashed on him. He was mistaken for Jonathan Gibbs. He was rowing Gibbs' boat and wearing Gibbs' clothes. With a two days' growth of beard and a face burned with the sun, he might easily pass for the fisherman.

"This is all a mistake," he said, addressing himself to Sam. "You think I'm Jonathan Gibbs?"

"I know d-d well you're not," said Sam, without animus.

The thing was inexplicable. They knew him for himself, and knowing it, they were carrying him off, bound with ropes, to the open sea.

There was seemingly no sort of personal grudge in this high-handed matter. The three men were carrying out orders.

"Listen, bo," said Sam, "we've got orders not to say a thing to you till the Boss sees you. It won't do you no good asking why we did it, or who we are. We had to get you alive and unharmed and we did the best we knew how."

It was dark when the lights of Bar Harbor came in sight. Bettington was carried up the gangway, across a deck and then placed in a small cabin lighted with a single porthole.

Sam untied the knots and watched the victim stretch his stiff and cramped limbs.

"Just a word of warning," Sam remarked. "You can't get out of that porthole and you can't get out of this cabin. If you did, it wouldn't help you. If you're wise you'll wait till the Boss sends for you."

Sam turned the keys in the door and left him prisoner. As he examined his dancin' he heard the throbbing of machinery. From the porthole he could see the boat was moving. He pulled off the heavy sea boots of Jonathan Gibbs and flung himself on the berth. In many adventures Bettington had learned that fretting and fuming were handicaps that men in danger should not take upon themselves.

Presently he fell asleep and was awakened by Sam.

"You ain't worrying," said Sam, grinning. "They tell me you always had your nerve with you. You won't be able to see the Boss tonight. He's hitting the pipe and it's as much as a man's life is worth to let you out till he gives the word, so I'll bring you a bite to eat here."

Sam waddled out. Bettington was still puzzled by his apparent friendliness. As a physical specimen of humanity Sam did not awaken confidence. On his broad, flat face were lurking lust and brute courage. He would be a bad man to cross. But why should he regard Howard Bettington, painter of seascapes and man of integrity, with such an air of comradeship?

"Where are we bound for?" he asked of Sam, when a tray of food was brought in.

"Noo York," said Sam.

"Can't I go on deck?" Bettington asked. "I can't escape."

Sam shook his head.

"Not till the Boss gives the word."

"Who is the Boss? The captain?"

"The captain?" There was scorn in Sam's tone. "Him! H—I, no."

"You mean the owner?"

Sam's scorn of the owner was just as emphatic.

"He may think he's the boss and Capt'n Hallett may think he is, but they don't know—yet." Sam rose to go. "Just one bit of advice, bo, don't make a noise. If you do you'll go to Noo York gagged."

Bettington had not been gone on his errand to Blackport a half hour, when Jonathan Gibbs in his motor dory went out to his lobster pots. He was returning when he saw a smaller boat, its gunwales awash, almost across his bow. He knew it instantly for his own. Investigation showed that some of the planking had done it. He supposed that one of the needle rocks must have done it. He blamed himself for allowing the stranger to cross the bay. Almost certain death would await any man ed a on had been, in current case. Gibbs went to his shack with an uneasy mind. The whole episode spelled publicity to him, but he cheered himself with the hope that his guest might have been rescued. In that case he would soon be back at the shack.

But by midnight Bettington did not return and Gibbs went carefully through the things which were in the torn coat. There was a gold watch with the initials H. B. on it. A wallet contained almost four hundred dollars. There were no letters. But there was a reference on a memorandum of repairs to the skylight of a studio at a given address and a receipt for the rental of it to the end of the current year. And there was a bunch of keys.

For almost an hour Gibbs sat motionless. Then he rose to his feet, put a kettle on the oil stove and presently shaved himself carefully and trimmed his hair. He rubbed the grease which Bettington had applied to his shoes so carefully into the leather, that it became at length flexible and he was able to put them on. Hasty repairs to the torn trousers and coat enabled him to wear them. With an iron which had been little used of late, he pressed them into something of their former shape.

Dawn was breaking when Jonathan Gibbs, now a new man, bade farewell to the shack he had inhabited for six years. None saw him as he made his haunts and had not called at the village store to exchange his eggs for groceries, a search was made. His home was found unoccupied, his chickens famished. Plainly, Jonathan Gibbs had been drowned and his body swirled out to sea in the undertow.

At first the New York Gibbs ventured out only at night within a short radius of his sanctuary. There had been no mail. There had been no prying janitor. He had almost four hundred dollars and almost four months' rent paid. He felt assured that Bettington was dead.

It was on the third evening of his occupancy that this calm and pleasurable optimism was swept away. He had gone to the subway entrance to buy an evening paper. As he stood on the steps before the front door feeling for his latchkey, he was conscious that a policeman across the street by the armory was looking at him. Although it was dark he felt stricken with the certainty that the officer looked at him alone.

From the front windows of his unlighted rooms he had an unobstructed view. The officer was now speaking to a smaller man, who seemed to be pointing directly at the windows through which Jonathan Gibbs gazed. The coincidence was food for somber thought. As though concerting some plot aimed at Gibbs, the two slowly crossed the street. Then his bell rang three times. Gibbs opened the door to the landing silently and listened. He heard the front door open and steps advance along the flagged passage. Then he heard the footsteps begin the ascent.

Softly he locked the door and stood a few feet back from it. To the knock he returned no answer. He looked about him wildly. "Trapped!" he groaned. "After all these years to be caught!"

Fear roused him from inaction. Before long they would burst in the door. The fire escape at the rear was his sole hope. It was pitch dark, but he dared risk no light or make the descent slowly. He had gone but half a flight when he trod upon a flower pot placed there in violation of all the city's fire ordinances. He clutched about him wildly and found only a piece of rotting rope. For a moment it promised to stay his fall; then he felt the old strands giving.

The paved yard to which he crashed was fifty feet below. They had not been wrong in Blackport who assumed that the man they called Jonathan Gibbs was dead.

CHAPTER IV

An Amazing Adventure

During the long hours Bettington spent a prisoner, he thought over, and rejected as impractical, several schemes for escape. When all was said and done, escape from his cabin to the larger prison of the ship at sea offered little betterment of his condition. He pondered over Sam's command that he should be quiet. This presupposed that there was some person, or group of persons, unaware of his detention. But whether a declaration of his presence would bring liberty was another matter.

The hours passed slowly. It was dusk when they dropped anchor at the foot of East Twenty-fourth street.

When Sam came in with his evening meal there was a safety razor outfit on the tray.

"Got to spruce up," said Sam. "Owner's coming aboard tomorrow morning. The boss says for you to look like ready money."

Bettington looked at Sam and wondered what made him so serene and happy. It was a face on which had been graven the marks of violent emotions. He was no more than five feet eight inches in height, but his chest was fully forty-five inches in girth. A life of ease had turned some of his once steel muscles to fat, but he was still enormously strong. A flat and bulbous nose, driven into his face by some tremendous impact, conspired to make him repulsive. Essentially he was of the sea. There was the sailor's roll in his walk. A dangerous man in a physical combat, Bettington decided. Intellectually he was below the normal. He was cleanly shaved and the shirt he wore was new.

"Wondering what I'm all dolled up for?" he demanded. "I'll tell you. We're going to have skirts aboard this trip. Metzger told me. There's a lady's maid, a secretary and the owner's wife. Metzger's seen her pictures in the paper. He's crazy over her."

"Who's Metzger?"

"The chief engineer. Lucky for him he don't like 'em as young as I do. Me," said Sam airily, rolling his red eyes. "I'm all for the chickens. This secretary is some skirt from what I hear."

Bettington was incensed at the bestial glee of the recumbent man.

"Do you suppose," he said, looking at Sam with a disfavor that could be felt even by the sailor, "that any lady, secretary to the owner of this boat, would have anything to do with you? How will you have the chance to speak to the owner's guests? Don't be foolish, Sam."

Sam looked at him a long time in silence.

"I can see what you're driving at," said the sailor. "You want to find out what sort of a trip this is going to be. Well, you don't get nothin' out of me." He laughed long and loud at what seemed to him his masterly discovery of the other's motives. Then he described his way of life and love. There was something nauseating in it. And there was something frightening, too. How did Sam, who berthed and messed with the crew, come to imagine, without good grounds, that he would have the opportunity to come intimately into contact with the owner's guests?

There was another disquieting thought. Suppose that he was kept a prisoner here until the boat put out to sea again and so forced to be a party to indescribable scenes! Escape was impossible. It was a steel-built boat; the porthole was a small one and his only weapon a safety razor blade.

He was thinking bitterly at noon on Monday, when, from his porthole, he saw a launch approaching the ship. He recognized it as the one which had taken him from Blackport to Bar Harbor. Beside the crew there were two men and two women. He had no time to take in their features because he was amazed to see that one of the men was none other than Tubby Unwin. The launch had passed his field of vision before he could recover from his surprise. With the aid of the mirror that Sam had brought with the shaving outfit Bettington could see that the launch was brought alongside. And from it, Unwin and the three strangers climbed aboard.

In vain Bettington shouted and kicked at the door. Steam was up, and the various noises and activities on deck made his outcry inaudible. Looking through his mirror he saw, presently, that Unwin descended the steps into the boat. Apparently he was not going. He was waving to some one on deck.

Unwin even threw kisses at the unknown. It seemed to Bettington that Unwin must hear his shouts before he drew away from the vessel. The launch was only a few yards distant at one time, before she put about and made for the shore. On the landing stage of the yacht club Unwin stood still waving. And so he stood until the ocean-going steam houseboat had turned her bow to the south.

Unwin went back to his wife very happy.

"It will be wonderful for both of them," he said. "Mr. Radway was very pleasant, for a man in his position to one in mine. But she is a rarer and finer type. I am sure she is unhappy. She seemed to cling to our Mary. Bob doesn't know yet how he will like the men. He has to eat and sleep with them. He has the impression that his presence is resented, but, of course, that's all nonsense."

But Bob made no mistake in estimating the warmth of his reception. The forecastle resented him. "He's a sp," said Hammer.

"He's the girl's brother," volunteered a man from the engine room. "I heard Metzger tell Leary so."

"My gal's brother, is he?" Sam commented. "If she's nice to me, I'll be good to him." He beckoned Bob to him. Bob, anxious to do his best and make a good impression, came running up.

"Boy," said Sam, "what's your sister's name?"

Bob looked into Sam's eyes and his tongue withheld the answer that had been ready. Dimly he understood that the lecherous look and the question itself from such a source was an insult. He would show this broad, beamy, impudent sailor where he stood.

"My sister's name is Miss Unwin."

Hammer tittered; he hated women and dimly foresaw in Sam's weakness some future trouble. But he did not titter when Sam slowly turned his head and looked at him. None better than Hammer knew for what reasons Sam never went ashore when he could avoid it.

It was this creeping fear on the evil face of Hammer that warned the boy; and he saw that none of the other men dared take his part. Bob saw that Sam's face became empurpled. He was in the grip of fear. He realized that never, until now, had he known the sensation of physical terror.

"I'll talk to you later, 'Mr. Unwin,'" Sam mocked. "Me and you'll have a little conversation off Cape May, where the big light is."

Ever-Changing Time

Nature, however, provides a real gas plant, specimens of which are to be found blooming in London's Kew gardens. It is otherwise known as the Dictamnery or "Burning Bush." When a lighted match is applied to a shoot of it there comes a brilliant scarlet flame. Like a flash of lightning it travels up the length of the flowering shoot, without injuring it. The best time to make the experiment is when the flowers are fading. The inflammability of the plant is due to this: that on its stalks are minute reddish-brown glands, and these secrete an etheric oil. The glands develop fully soon after the blossom begins to fade, but they shrivel up when the fruit begins to form. Luminous plants not unlike this have been a source of strange legends in India and Afghanistan. There is a

Interesting Church

The Worst church at Canterbury, New Hampshire, was completed in 1839 by the Free Will Baptists and Congregationalists. It suffered much financial distress and Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth (Harper) Monmouth, undertook to raise funds for the benefit of the church. She acted as associate pastor and officiated for nearly eight years. She personally made the worst decorations which consist principally of religious mottoes. There was an extraordinarily large number of such decorations completed in 1878, when Mrs. Monmouth ceased her labors. An interesting fact is that Mrs. Monmouth suffered severe financial reverses and published and sold a booklet for 25 cents in the town, entitled "Living on Half a Dime a Day," which she claimed was an actual experience of her own.

way inland to Westfield. A sleepy ticket agent gave him a ticket to Portland and forgot the occurrence instantly.

In Portland he spent only a few hours. New York received him with a thousand others at the Grand Central and he walked eight blocks down to a brown stone house opposite an armory. Bettington's name was on a plate over a letter box. A key on the bunch fitted it and he drew out some mail and walked, having met not a soul, to the top of the house. Then, after a moment's pause, he opened the studio door and found himself in a haven so secure that he could hardly believe it had been attained so easily. His eyes brightened when he saw that the former occupant had cans of milk, soup and fish in abundance. There were at least two pounds of tea. Further search revealed sugar and coffee. He could live for a week on what he found and never venture outside the door. During the day he must be careful not to be seen. But at night New York was his own. Those who had known the dour, suspicious, fisherman would not have recognized in the alert housebreaker the same man.

Jonathan Gibbs was gone, dead and buried. And this, too, in a sense he did not know. Other fishermen had found his waterlogged rowboat. And when he was not seen in his familiar

"No repairs in 22 years," says home owner

"Visitors are delighted with the noiseless operation of my doors," says a home owner of Monongah, West Virginia. "The locks and hinges have been in active service 22 years, and during this time I haven't spent a cent for repairs. I've never used anything but 3-In-One Oil."

Many housewives who pride themselves on the spotless appearance of their homes are careless about the lubrication of hinges and locks. Try a few drops of 3-In-One Oil today and see how quickly it brings out rust, dirt and squeaks. For 3-In-One, a blend of animal, mineral and vegetable oils, is distinctly different from ordinary oil: it cleans and protects as well as lubricates.

For 35 years 3-In-One has been recognized as the best oil for sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, lawn mowers, hinges and general household lubrication. Insist on 3-In-One Oil. At good stores everywhere, in 15c and 30c sizes. For your protection look for the trade mark "3-In-One" printed in Red on every package.

Great Water Project

Texasans contemplate spending $100,000,000 to make the mighty Brazos river work for them. It is a big task they have in mind for the river and its tributaries. They would irrigate thousands of acres of land, turn the wheels of many industries, develop electric power, supply drinking water and even use it for recreation. The Brazos river conservation and reclamation district created to direct the project will seek the financial aid of state and federal governments.—Indianapolis News.

Don't neglect a COLD

DISTRESSING cold in chest or throat—that so often leads to something serious—generally responds to good old Musterole with the first application. Should be more effective if used once every hour for five hours.

Working like the trained hands of a masseur, this famous blend of oil of mustard, camphor, menthol and other helpful ingredients brings relief naturally. It penetrates and stimulates blood circulation, helps to draw out infection and pain. Used by millions for 20 years. Recommended by doctors and nurses.

Keep Musterole handy—jars and tubes.

To Mothers—Musterole is also made in milder form for babies and small children. Ask for Children's Musterole.

Way to Get At a Cold Is Through the Bowels

As soon as you catch cold, the pores close; perspiration is checked. Gases and waste can't escape through the skin. That's why your doctor's first advice in case of colds is a mild laxative like Cascarets. Medical authorities agree it actually strengthens bowel muscles. You get Cascarets in its most pleasant form in candy Cascarets.

Remember this when you catch cold: whenever breath is bad; tongue coated; or you're headachy, bilious, constipated.

Why resort to harsher things when Cascarets activate the bowels so quickly, so harmlessly and pleasantly—and cost only a dime?

SENIOR CLASS PRESENTS "CLIMBING ROSES"

The Senior Class of Hedley High School presented the play "Climbing Roses" in the school auditorium last Friday evening.

In spite of rain and stormy weather, a fair sized audience greeted the players and greatly enjoyed the play, declaring the performance to have been unusually meritorious.

BAPTIST LADIES HAVE INTERESTING PROGRAM

The Baptist Missionary ladies met in the basement of the church Monday afternoon at 2:30. The feature of the meeting was the "Fish Pond." Every one seemed pleased with the "fish" they caught. The following interesting program was rendered:

Song, "Faith of Our Fathers."
Poem, Mrs. Alewine.
Duet, Meses. Thompson and Moffitt.

Contest.
Song "Blest Be the Tie."
Prayer, Mrs. McDougal.
Delightful refreshments were served to the members and several guests.

CLEAN-UP CAMPAIGN COMMITTEE'S REPORT

Our time and space being too limited to permit it last week, we publish below in full the report of the judges in the recent Clean Up Campaign:

"To the Hedley Commercial Club: We, the committee to judge the cleanest blocks in town, wish to offer the following report:

"We made a close inspection of every block in the corporate limits of Hedley, and declare the following awards: First place, block occupied by First Baptist church, Methodist church, and Church of Christ. Second place, block owned by W. H. Stroud, and occupied by Rainey Westberry, Parr Merriman and W. H. Stroud. Third place, block owned by Mrs. Teddie Ayers and J. H. Koeninger, occupied by Mrs. Ayers, H. B. Hall and H. A. Hodges.

"Honorable mention: Mrs. Priestly, Bill Luttrell and Henry Posey for their block, and P. C. Johnson, E. E. Bailey, Mrs. W. H. Moffitt, Mrs. A. T. Simmons, Cooper Hotel, First Christian church, B. M. A. church, Nazarene church, and J. W. Noel for their efforts in cleaning their individual lots.

"The school deserves credit for making an effort to clean up the two blocks occupied by buildings and playground, but they could have made further improvement by picking up all pieces of brick, concrete, pipe, sticks and brush.

"We further recommend that a special effort be made to haul off all the trash that has been piled up before it gets scattered again."

THE DORCAS CLASS

The Dorcas Class of the First Baptist Sunday School met last Friday, March 14, at the home of Mrs. P. V. Dishman, with Mrs. Dishman and Mrs. Alva Simmons as hostesses.

A delicious place lunch consisting of sandwiches, salad and coffee was served to the ten members present.

The next meeting will be on Friday, April 18, at Mrs. Lake Dishman's, with Mrs. Dishman and Mrs. Hodges hostesses.

We welcome all the young married ladies of the town and community, who do not attend Sunday School elsewhere, to join our class. We have an interesting class, with Mrs. Alewine as our capable teacher.
