MEMORIAL DAY PROGRAM IS GOOD

Memorial Day, May 30th was fittingly and reverently observed in Hedley. The new flags were very much in evidence at the various places of business and added much to the spirit of the day. They were flown at half-mast until noon, in honor of our soldier dead.

In response to the call of the local Post of the American Legion, a large crowd assembled at Rowe Cemetery in the morning, armed with hoes, shovels and rakes. By noon every grave had been cleaned, and all those that needed it were filled in. The grounds had been mowed recently, so that our cemetery now presents a better appearance than it has in quite a while.

In the afternoon a short program was held at the cemetery under the auspices of Adamson Lane Post Legionnaire E. D. Landreth delivered the address, which was very appropriate and was greatly appreciated. Then followed the decorating of the graves of the veterans of all wars. When this was done, the bugler sounded 'Taps' and the program was ended.

The Legion boys have all expressed themselves as being very grateful for the loyal and whole-hearted co-operation of those who helped to make the Memorial Day plans a decided success.

Just received a beautiful line of Print Dresses, in English Prints, Voiles and Batiste. Also a nice line of Smocks.

TREATED SEED INSURE LARGE CROP OF OATS

County Agent T. R. Brown was a pleasant caller at the Informer office the past week, and gave us the following information about D. B. Leach's oat crop:

Mr. Leach treated the seed that was used in sowing 44 acres of oats, and got the best record that has ever been seen here. There could not be found a single smut head on the 44 acres of the treated seed.

There were four acres that the seed was not treated, and this four acres shows six smut heads to the square yard.

After thirty minutes of searching the hunt was given up, and the 44 acres that was seeded by Formaldehyde-treated seed was considered absolutely free of smut.

This crop has a nice chance to produce 35 or 40 bushels to the acre.

The C. O. Cooper family left Monday for Canyon, where they will reside. No better people than the Coopers ever lived here—or anywhere else—and we are mighty sorry to lose them. Our good wishes are with them, permanently. Miss Faye will remain here, at least for a while, with the Farmers Equity Union.

THE ONE-CROP CREDIT RISK

THE COMMUNITY WITH ONLY ONE major industry runs the risk of sooner or later experiencing a set-back, for if the business of the one industry languishes the business of the community goes down with it.

The farmer who risks his season's work on one crop is gambling, and, over a long period, he may find that the dice are loaded against him.

The directors of this bank do not assume to dictate the business of the customers, but they do take the position that it is their duty to pass on the credit worth and financial strength of every borrower of their funds. And experience has taught that the one-crop farmer is not as desirable a credit risk as the man who diversifies.

Therefore this bank urges all its customers to practice Diversification as much as possible.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Senate Votes for Transfer of Prohibition Bureau to Law Department.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

TRANSFER of the prohibition bureau from the Treasury department to the Department of Justice was voted by the senate. This measure, the first and one of the most important of the law enforcement bills recommended by the Wickersham commission and urged by the administration, was passed without a record vote and having previously been put through the house it went to the President for signature after a few minor changes had been concurred in by the house.

Several of the senators criticized certain features of the bill, especially the dual control of industrial alcohol by the Treasury and Justice departments, but Tydings of Maryland was the only one to offer amendments and his suggestions were speedily voted down. Mr. Tydings argued earnestly in favor of an amendment to permit the use of only nonpoisonous denaturants in industrial alcohol, asserting that present practice was in effect "giving the death penalty to a man who commits no greater crime than violation of the prohibition law." But a large majority of the senators evidently believed the statement of Sheppard of Texas that "poisonous matter put in industrial alcohol is not used in sufficient proportions to kill."

Senator Carter Glass of Virginia said the transfer of the prohibition bureau should have been made years ago, but he attacked the Wickersham commission for "wasting" nearly $250,000 and asking for that much more. He said he would propose a resolution calling for a statement of the commission's expenditures before any additional money is appropriated. He asserted that the commission had been spending its time "inquiring into delinquents, the depth of automobiles, and such things."

Under the terms of the bill Dr. James M. Doran, present commissioner of prohibition, will remain in the Treasury department, with the title of commissioner of industrial alcohol. Attorney General William D. Mitchell will have the appointment of a new commissioner of prohibition in the Department of Justice.

In connection with Tyding's attack on the poisoning of alcohol it should be stated that Commissioner Doran says his chemists have found that the many cases of "jake paralysis" afflicting the drinkers of fake Jamaica ginger are caused by creosote and not by iso-propyl, the industrial alcohol denaturant prescribed by federal regulations.

SCOTT McBRIDE, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, was before the senate lobby committee several days and was an interesting and combative witness. Despite the vigorous attacks of Senator Blaine of Wisconsin and some rather damaging admissions, he upheld his side of the controversy fairly well. At one time he admitted that the league does not interest itself greatly in the economic views of a candidate, that its principal aim is to insure the election of men who will vote right on prohibition, and that it sometimes supports dry voting, wet drinking candidates for office.

Plans to force a showdown vote on pending proposals to authorize a national referendum on repeal of the Eighteenth amendment or legalize the manufacture and sale of 2.75 per cent beer were agreed upon by members of the house wet bloc.

EXAMINATION of the London naval treaty occupied the time of the senate committees on foreign relations and naval affairs and the hearing before the former body attracted capacity audiences. Secretary of State Stimson and Admiral William V. Pratt were the main witnesses heard by that committee, both of them defending the pact vigorously.

Answering objections to the cruiser provisions of the treaty, which limit the United States to eighteen 8-inch gun cruisers and require the construction of 6-inch gun vessels if this country is to build up to the pact tonnage levels, Mr. Stimson said that the American delegation had followed the wisest course when it decided on a larger percentage of the smaller cruisers. By building a larger proportion of 6-inch gun cruisers, Mr. Stimson asserted the United States had a better chance of obtaining actual parity than if all 8-inch gun cruisers were built.

Before the naval affairs committee Secretary of the Navy Adams undertook to reply to the attacks of Chairman Hale on the treaty. Mr. Adams said that Japan had insisted upon this country's coming down from its proposal for twenty-one 8-inch gun cruisers and that the American delegation pushed its demand as far as possible without breaking off negotiations with Great Britain and Japan. The naval secretary added that he considered the delegation made a fair compromise with Japan.

In England and in Japan there are groups opposing the treaty, each insisting, as do the American objectors, that the other nations got the best of the deal.

With Arthur Henderson, British foreign secretary, as mediator, conversations were held at Geneva by Aristide Briand and Dino Grandi looking to a solution of the Franco-Italian deadlock over naval parity. Satisfactory progress was made, and further negotiations will be carried on through diplomatic channels.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S nomination of Owen J. Roberts to fill the vacancy on the Supreme court bench was referred to a subcommittee of the senate committee on judiciary and it was believed a favorable report would be made soon to the full committee. Confirmation by the senate also was anticipated since little opposition was voiced. Certain of the dry senators at first objected because Mr. Roberts was said to have made a speech against the Eighteenth amendment several years ago, but afterwards appeared satisfied with explanations of that occurrence. President Green of the American Federation of Labor indicated that organized labor was content with the appointment.

BY A vote of 34 to 27 the senate passed the third of the bills sponsored by Wagner of New York for the purposing of relieving unemployment through federal aid. This measure provides for an appropriation of $4,000,000 for the creation of a federal bureau of unemployment headed by a director who would co-operate with state and local unemployment agencies. The other two bills provide for the gathering of labor statistics and for a joint commission to expedite federal construction work.

Another important measure passed by the senate places Mexican immigration under the national origins quota system and, if it becomes law, will reduce the number of Mexican immigrants from 58,000 a year to fewer than 2,000.

GOV. WALTER J. KOHLER of Wisconsin was acquitted by a jury in Sheboygan of the charge of having violated the state corrupt practices act during his primary campaign in 1928. The attorneys for the state prepared to carry the case to the State Supreme court, but the governor and his friends consider that he has been fully vindicated.

DWIGHT W. MORROW, in a speech opening his campaign for the Republican senatorial nomination in New Jersey, declared he favored repeal of the Eighteenth amendment and restoration to the states of the power to determine their policy toward the liquor traffic. He thinks national prohibition is a mistake because it is not practicable, but he is against the return of the saloon.

UNCLE SAM wishes to know whether or not the Radio Corporation of America, Westinghouse Electric, General Electric and seven affiliated concerns are violating the Sherman antitrust law in pooling their patents and operations in the field of radio equipment manufacture. Therefore the Department of Justice has filed suit against these companies. Owen D. Young, head of R. C. A., professes to welcome this action, hoping it will clear up a confusing patent situation in the radio industry.

REAR ADMIRAL RICHARD E. BYRD, returning from his epochal exploration of the Antarctic regions, landed in the Canal Zone last week with five members of his expedition. They were given an enthusiastic welcome at Balboa and again at Panama, and planned to remain on the isthmus about two weeks. In another month the admiral will come back to Virginia and his home state will greet him in Richmond with highest honors. Gov. John Garland will present to him a sword purchased by more than ten thousand of his fellow citizens, and there will be banquets and receptions.

The sword, designed in silver and gold, commemorates the famous flights over the North and South poles and the Atlantic crossing.

LAST week saw the passing of another famous Arctic explorer, Dr. Fridtjof Nansen, who died of phlebitis at his home in Oslo, Norway, at the age of sixty-eight years. For many years he had been devoted to scientific explorations in the Far North, the most important of his trips being the expedition of the Fram in 1893. But Doctor Nansen was more than an explorer, having gained distinction as a teacher, author, humanitarian, statesman and diplomat. During the war he was high commissioner for repatriation of prisoners, and later was Norway's representative to the League of Nations and head of a Russian relief commission. These activities won him the Nobel peace prize.

LEADERSHIP of the civil disobedience campaign in India passed last week into the hands of Mrs. Sarojini Naidu, a distinguished Hindu poetess, and she proceeded to lead her forces against the government salt works at Dharsana. The police prevented the raid by blocking the road, and once arrested the poetess but released her.

In the northwestern part of India the revolt was increasing in seriousness and the situation in Lahore and other important cities was said to be growing worse daily. A great mob gained possession of Sholapur after severe fighting with the troops, but later the soldiers ousted the natives and martial law was proclaimed there.

To add to the trials of the British, they are having trouble with the wild border tribes along the Afghan frontier and have subjected them to aerial bombing.

PRESIDENT Chiang Kai-shek of China is proceeding with the utmost vigor to crush the rebellion of the northern provinces and his German-trained troops are reported to have gained a great victory in Anhwei province in a six-day battle, taking 10,000 prisoners and killing many. Pursuing the rebels, the Nationalists captured their new base at Kweitch in Honan province. Capture of that city, the Nationalists asserted, would force the northerners to fall back upon Kailfeng to consolidate their shattered ranks.

All foreigners were asked by their consuls to get out of the city of Chengchow in Honan, which has been repeatedly bombed by Nationalist planes and was expected to be the center of severe fighting.

SUCCESS crowned the efforts of the first of this year's Atlantic ocean flyers. Jean Mermoz of France and two companions, carrying mail from Paris, hopped off from St. Louis, Senegal, Africa, and landed at Natal, Brazil, 20 hours and 16 minutes later, having flown the 1,975 miles across water unerringly despite a terrific electric rainstorm through which they passed.

Col. Pablo Sidar, star aviator of the Mexican army, and Lieut. Carlos Rivisora, who started on a nonstop flight from Mexico to Buenos Aires, were killed when their plane crashed into the sea off Port Limon, Costa Rica. They were attempting to land during a sudden storm.

CHEVROLET'S New Service Policy wins nationwide approval

On January 1st of this year, the Chevrolet Motor Company announced a new service policy—the most liberal ever offered in connection with a low-priced automobile.

Immediately it was greeted with enthusiasm by Chevrolet buyers everywhere—because its many unusual features materially add to the economy and lasting satisfaction of Chevrolet ownership. Briefly, it provides——for free inspection and adjustment at the 500-mile mark, and free inspections every 1000 miles thereafter.

—for free replacement of any material—including both parts and labor—that may prove defective, within the terms of the standard warranty.—that this replacement will be carried out by any Chevrolet dealer in the United States—regardless of where the owner may have traveled during the warranty period.

Backing this policy is one of the largest service organizations in the automotive industry—consisting of over 10,000 authorized Chevrolet dealer service stations in the United States alone. Come in! Learn all the other reasons why it's wise to choose a Chevrolet Six!

SIX-CYLINDER SMOOTHNESS AT LOW COST

John's Mother Praises Doctor

There isn't a mother living who won't agree that no half-sick child should be the subject for an experiment with medicines of uncertain merit. When your child is bilious, headachy, half-sick, feverish, restless, with coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy, you know that nine times out of ten it's a sign his little stomach and bowels need purging. And when you know that for over fifty years leading physicians have endorsed one preparation for this condition, there doesn't seem to be any reason for "trying" things.

Rich, fruity California Fig Syrup clears the little stomach and bowels gently, harmlessly and in a hurry. It regulates the bowels, gives tone and strength to them and to the stomach; and helps to give your child new strength, energy and vitality. Thousands of Western mothers praise it. Mrs. Joseph W. Hill, 4306 Bedford Ave., Omaha, Nebraska, says: "I'll never forget the doctor who got me to give my baby boy, John, California Fig Syrup. Nothing else seemed to help his weak bowels. That was when he was just a baby. He suffered a good deal before I gave him Fig Syrup, but it stopped his trouble quick. I have used it with him for colds and little upset spells ever since. I consider him a Fig Syrup boy."

Insist on the genuine article. See that the carton bears the word "California." Over four million bottles used a year.

Women's Dress
Lieut. Apollo Soucek, who gained the altitude flying record, talked about women's dress at a dinner in Washington.

"There's very little of it," he said, "and yet, good gracious, how it costs!"

"A movie magnate was dining in Hollywood with his lady friend one evening, and he nodded in an approving way towards two pretty girls at a nearby table, and said:

"Two of my stars. Look at their gorgeous Paris frocks. They spend a lot on dress. They're great rivals in the dress line."

"The lady friend looked at the two girls sourly.

"Yes," she said, "it's plain to be seen that each tries to outstrip the other."

Men Primarily Responsible

Uncle Sam's "Health and Citizenship Clinics"

Candidates Arriving in Camp

Ready for Duty

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE more Uncle Sam has issued an invitation to his sons to attend one of the great "health and citizenship clinics" which he has established in various parts of the country. Now, if that word "clinic" has a somewhat forbidding sound to those who should be most interested in this announcement, let it be put this way:

Uncle Sam is going to play "Summertime Santa Claus" to Young America again and is inviting young Americans to enjoy a month of camp life in the great outdoors as his special guests. He will pay all the necessary expenses. Wholesome food, uniforms, army cots and blankets, athletic equipment, laundry service and medical attention—everything that is normally used in camp life—will be furnished free. Before he leaves home the boy will be given a railroad ticket to the camp and his meals en route will be paid for. The same will be done when he returns from the camp to his home.

All of which is by way of saying that for the tenth year these popular free "man-building" centers, known as the citizens' military training camps, are being thrown open to the young manhood of these United States. During June, July and August some 40,000 young Americans between the ages of seventeen and twenty-four years will have there without cost a month of athletic, military, citizenship and leadership training under selected army officers and specialists from civil life who are commissioned in the army reserve. Although they are called "military training camps," the making of soldiers is by no means the purpose nor even the chief aim of the training. No obligation for future military service of any kind is incurred by those who go to camp. The only requirement is that they agree to stay the full 30 days of camp and obey the simple rules of good conduct which prevail there.

While military training is a part of the routine of the camps, their main purpose, as Uncle Sam sees it, is "to develop the manhood of the nation by bringing together young men of high and different types from all sections of the country on a common basis of equality and under the most favorable conditions of outdoor life; to teach them the privileges, duties and responsibilities of American citizenship; to stimulate the interest of the youth of this country in the importance of military training as a benefit to the nation and the individual taking such training; to inculcate self-discipline and obedience and to develop these youngsters, physically, mentally and morally." For that reason former President Coolidge once called the C. M. T. C. "schools in citizenship," and with their emphasis upon making these young men better fitted, both physically and mentally, for their duties as citizens, the aptness of the "health and citizenship clinics" characterization is apparent.

The C. M. T. C. idea goes back to 1913 when the first college training camps for officers were organized by Gen. Leonard Wood. Associated with their history, too, is the name of that exponent of vigorous outdoor life and robust Americanism, Theodore Roosevelt. Although Leonard Wood will always be remembered as the "father of the C. M. T. C.," it was the powerful influence of the ex-President which aided in the inauguration of the now-famous Plattsburg training camp in 1915. The value of the training given in this camp was strikingly demonstrated when the United States was drawn into the World war, and hundreds of trained officers, the product of "the Plattsburg camp," were immediately available for the services which were so badly needed.

As the result of the lessons learned during the World war, the citizens' training camps as they now exist were brought into being. In 1920 the

President Hoover Commends the C. M. T. C. to Fathers and Mothers
THE WHITE HOUSE
Washington, April 19, 1930.

Mr. George F. James, National Executive Secretary, Military Training Camps Ass'n, 6 North Michigan Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

My Dear Mr. James: The Citizens' Military Training camps have fulfilled, through ten years, the purpose for which they were established. They have proved themselves an important means toward physical and moral health in the individual and civic welfare in the nation. The willingness of young men to devote a month to this training program for better citizenship is proof of good-will in the generation on which will presently devolve the maintenance of our social and political institutions.

I commend the Citizens' camps to all fathers and mothers and to young men of suitable age in the hope and belief that the camps will show themselves as useful in the future as they have been in the past.

Sincerely yours,
HERBERT HOOVER.

National Defense act was passed by congress and in that same year the Military Training Camps Association of America, an organization made up of men who had themselves enrolled in preparatory camps in the four years from 1913 to 1917, appealed to the War department for the establishment of camps for the voluntary training of young men, authorized under the National Defense act. The secretary of war, the late John W. Weeks, approved the request and an appropriate item was included in the budget for the next fiscal year. When the proposal was presented to congress by the military affairs committee it was heartily supported by James W. Wadsworth, chairman of the senate committee, and by the late Julius Kahn, chairman of the house committee, both of whom remained ardent friends of the camps during succeeding years.

The first appropriation was sufficient for the training of 10,000 young men at ten different centers throughout the country. The minimum age of admission was fixed at sixteen years and plans were made for a series of three courses—the Red, the White and the Blue, giving one month's training in successive years. Later the minimum age was placed at seventeen and a preliminary course, the Basic, was added. Congress made the graduates of the last, the Blue course, eligible for examination leading to a commission in the organized reserves.

Instruction at the camps is divided into four courses, the Basic, Red, White, and Blue, corresponding to the four summers which a candidate may attend. In the first, or Basic, course, youths with no prior training are guided through elementary drills and given the maximum of all-round development exercises. As the courses advance opportunity is afforded for more technical instruction, though participation in athletics and hikes is required at all times.

According to an announcement in a recent issue of the United States Army Recruiting News, the 40,000 young Americans who will attend the "health and citizenship clinics" this year are distributed as follows:

CHAPTER XII—Continued

"That would be useless," she said more coldly. He knew she was relieved to see Mary coming toward her. He sighed. So there must be a little more sailing under the skull and crossbones.

As the yacht neared its destination Hamner became less certain of his future. His efforts to stir Todd and Bob Unwin into active insubordination had not come to fruition. His aim was to awaken a certain proper pride in the breast of the late Captain Hallett's nephew. Was he, an officer, to allow the vessel he should control by right, to be taken into New York by a murderous villain like Andrew Orme?

"They'll say," said Hamner, with resigned sadness, "that you were afraid of him; that you don't believe it was caution. I'll say he was bigger and stronger and you was wise to wait. What's it matter if they do laugh at you a bit, sir?"

"Shut up," Crosby Todd said angrily. He resented these implications of cowardice. It happened that he was courageous and had long felt his inaction was unmanly. And it seemed that Bob, who had a spell of duty, expected him to betray more leader-like qualities.

"What do you think we ought to do?" Bob asked. Hamner sprang instantly into action. "Seize him," he said; "there's three to one and he don't suspect a thing. Tie him up, the swine, and then wireless for help. That'll put us in good. It's my belief," the tempter went on, "that him and Metzger plan to get away. What's to stop them going overboard just after we get through the Bridge and escaping or lowering a boat in the dark?"

"We mustn't let him get away from the police," Todd said, wavering, "and yet it seems hardly playing the game to get him now?" "If you're afraid, just say so," Hamner's manner was less polite. "But don't expect me to want to give a bloody murderer fair play same as I'd give you." A happy thought struck him. "If the judge says to you, 'Why didn't you do what Albert Hamner said?' what'll you answer? I'll have to tell him everything."

At the wheel Bettington was fighting against the desire to sleep. Never had he gone so long with so little rest. There was a great deal of shipping and he had not much confidence in Todd's seamanship.

The dawn was breaking chill and gray when he passed Fort Hancock. It was there that the three flung themselves upon him. There was little opportunity to struggle. Hamner brought down a belaying pin on his head with enough force to render him unconscious. He was awakened by the harsh spitting of the wireless. He realized that the Albatross was anchored. He was lying on the floor of the wheelhouse. He was bound and gagged as neatly as ever Metzger and Pereira had been. The pain in his side was now very severe. And with it all was a racking headache.

Mrs. Radway came on deck at about eight o'clock. She thought that Crosby Todd and Bob looked at her with a certain degree of embarrassment. And Hamner, the ill-omened, was with them.

"The New York Yacht club is sending out some one to take us in," Todd told her. "They ought to be here any minute now."

"I thought the doctor capable of that," she said, frowning.

"He's capable of anything," Hamner cried. "You don't know what we've done for you, ma'am."

"What does the man mean?" she asked of Todd.

"I had to seize the ship," he said. There was no question of evading what he had done or declining responsibility. "We found that Orme had planned to escape and we are holding him for the police. You remember he wouldn't let me use the wireless? That was because he didn't want to be caught. It's easier for a crook to escape in New York than it would be in Limon."

"Where is the doctor?" Mrs. Radway asked.

"She followed them to the bridge. The attack had been made in the dawn, and Todd had no idea that Hamner's blow had been so severe or that so much blood had flowed from the wound. He tried to prevent Mrs. Radway from seeing the man. She knelt down at his side and removed the gag.

"Are you very much hurt?" she asked. Her heart was beating wildly. After all, they had betrayed him. There were tears in his eyes. She could see that he did not dissociate her from those who had made the assault.

"They carried out your orders most successfully," he said, and turned his aching head away. The shrill sound of a siren stirred Todd to action.

"It's the yacht club launch," he cried.

Mrs. Radway bent over Bettington again. None else was near. "I suppose you can never, never believe it," she whispered, "but I had no hand in this. I shall always feel ashamed when I think of it."

When he made no answer she went out on deck. Perhaps what had happened was fated, that hour to which he had been drawing near for a lifetime.

Mary Unwin had seized her arm excitedly. How like youth, she thought, to forget its recent perils and present a serene front to the world.

"Look," Mary cried. "There's Dad." Evelyn Radway looked down at the launch and saw that there were men in police uniform, too. Then she recognized the senior partner of the great firm which transacted her business. There was nothing she could do now for the injured man than commend him to Mr. Bigelow's care.

It seemed an interminable time before the police questions were answered and she was on the Yacht club launch with the Albatross lying astern. She had been glad to accept the opportunity to leave the yacht on the much faster launch.

CHAPTER XIII

Mr. Unwin Speaks His Mind

The Unwins were speedily to find what wealth and the desire to help them could do. Within twelve hours of meeting Evelyn Radway, their small flat had been abandoned and they were occupying six beautifully appointed rooms in a mansion, whose grounds ran down to the Hudson.

It was Unwin's mission to go to the Albatross and bring back a list of things Mrs. Radway wanted. On the night of his first visit to the yacht, he returned in a mood of horrified excitement.

"Do you remember a man named Hamner?" he asked.

"I shall never be able to forget him," his hostess answered. "Why?"

"A sailor they called Red Mike must have had some grudge against Hamner who, from all accounts, seemed a quiet, civil-spoken man. Mike got at him and jumped overboard with the poor fellow in his arms. The stream was running fast and they couldn't save them."

"Horrible," she exclaimed. "There must have been a curse on the ship. Death upon death."

"And there's another likely," Unwin went on, "the prize crook of them all, Dr. Andrew Orme. There's not much chance for him. Perhaps it's the better way. I should like to have seen him. The police think he was the brains of the whole thing, even the man you called Clements seems to

"I have no doubt," said Unwin distinctly, "that a young man of his resourcefulness and intrepidity will recover from the shock."

Crosby Todd flushed. He had been told that his future father-in-law was of a kindly and affectionate disposition. Assuredly, the smileless, middle-aged gray gentleman on the rug before the fire was not running true to form.

"I'm afraid you have had a tiring day," Mrs. Radway remarked.

"One of the most miserable I have ever spent," he answered. "It is difficult to know just how to tell you about it."

Mary came to his side and slipped her arm through his. Very rarely had she seen her father in such a mood as this. Had he, she wondered, taken some dislike to Crosby? His tone seemed evidence of it. Essentially she was a peacemaker.

"Don't tell us now," she begged. In the morning this black mood would have passed.

Floyd Unwin took no notice of his daughter. He stood there meditating. The girl might not have existed. "Very difficult," he repeated. "I suppose I had better commence by proclaiming my own inefficiencies. I have been an economic failure. Mrs. Radway, I have worked hard and there is nothing to show for it. A month or so ago I went to an old friend and asked financial aid from him. It was for my children's education I needed it. He refused me. I learned then something of the scorn success has for such as I."

"Now, Andy," the inspector begged, "be reasonable. Why go to your Maker with a lie on your conscience?" The suspect held out his hands. The inspector did not know what he meant.

"Finger prints," said Bettington faintly; "you haven't verified them yet."

The inspector did not like to tell him he was rushed to the bedside in order to take his dying depositions. A dead man's hands were just as good evidence as those through which the blood coursed.

"I thought you told me he was all in," the inspector said to the surgeon.

"You said you'd give him half an hour at the most."

"He's one of those obstinate cusses," said the surgeon. There was a certain admiration in his voice; he could not forget that there was a member of his own profession who had attained world-wide fame ere crime overhauled him. "He's got the will to live," the surgeon added. "Why not humor him? He's crazy to be finger printed."

The inspector came to the bedside. It was not often he could grant a last favor so easily.

"All right, Andy," he grinned. "I'll do it."

An hour later the surgeon was wanted on the telephone.

"That bird ain't Andy Orme," said the inspector with a note of grievance in his voice. "His prints are absolutely new ones to us."

The surgeon found the unknown awake and in pain. The surgeon's look was not as friendly as it had been. He had been mistaking a person of probably no importance with the discoverer of the celebrated Orme method of cerebral surgery.

"You're not Andrew Orme," he asserted. There was irritation in his manner; he felt he had been fooled and the sensation was not pleasing.

"I keep on saying so," Bettington remarked, smiling grimly. "Now can I be allowed to sleep in peace?"

Mrs. Radway discovered in Unwin, a man whom she could trust because he was honest and devoted to her interests. A very great deal of business devolved upon him. For the first time in his working life he was happy. The Massachusetts Institute of Technology was to receive B.S. and Mary was to graduate from Smith before she married. Crosby had yet to win his way.

Usually the Unwins took their meals in their own suite, but very often they were invited to dine with Mrs. Radway.

The three of them—Mrs. Unwin was still unable to move—were invited to a dinner party, given by Evelyn Radway, when she learned that Todd was to leave for an appointment in Chicago, exactly one week after landing on the Albatross.

At seven, Mary heard her father's voice on the telephone. He said he should not be able to get to Peekskill until nine.

"Your voice sounds cross, Daddy," she said. "Are you angry with anyone?"

"Angry is too mild a term," he said, and hung up. Usually he called her by some pet name, but he was abrupt, different and incomprehensible.

When he came they were sitting around a wood fire in the large hall around which the house was built. Unwin was one of those kindly men given to effusive greetings when he knew his people. Tonight he bowed to them all coldly. Not even to Mrs. Radway did he unbend.

"Daddy," said Mary, plaintively, "you haven't spoken to poor Crosby yet. He's hurt."

"I have no doubt," said Unwin distinctly, "that a young man of his resourcefulness and intrepidity will recover from the shock."

Crosby Todd flushed. He had been told that his future father-in-law was of a kindly and affectionate disposition. Assuredly, the smileless, middle-aged gray gentleman on the rug before the fire was not running true to form.

"I'm afraid you have had a tiring day," Mrs. Radway remarked.

"One of the most miserable I have ever spent," he answered. "It is difficult to know just how to tell you about it."

"I suppose I had better commence by proclaiming my own inefficiencies. I have been an economic failure. Mrs. Radway, I have worked hard and there is nothing to show for it. A month or so ago I went to an old friend and asked financial aid from him. It was for my children's education I needed it. He refused me. The inspector did not like to tell him he was rushed to the bedside in order to take his dying depositions. A dead man's hands were just as good evidence as those through which the blood coursed.

"I thought you told me he was all in," the inspector said to the surgeon.

"You said you'd give him half an hour at the most."

Unwin fell into another fit of silent musings. When he spoke again it was of another subject. "I have just come from the bedside of a man who is dying." He looked toward Crosby Todd, sourly. "The man you and my son attacked, wounded and left for the police to drag to the Tombs. I commend your caution, Mr. Todd."

Evelyn Radway was glad that the dancing shadows from the open fire concealed her face.

"I don't understand you, Mr. Unwin," Crosby Todd stammered.

"Daddy, they had to do what they did," Mary told him earnestly.

"You waited," Unwin resumed, looking implacably at Todd, "until he was worn out from the sleeplessness he endured for you. You and my son took him at a moment when he was physically exhausted. You attacked him when he was suffering from three ribs broken in the fight with the man he killed. You inflicted such violence that the splintered ends of these fractured ribs penetrated the pleural sacs."

"We didn't know that," Bob cried.

"We hadn't any idea he was hurt; he never let me know."

"You must be fair to them, Daddy," the girl insisted.

"I feel just as bitterly toward you and Mrs. Radway," he said. "You lent yourself to the betrayal. Isn't there anything that looks from the soul of an honest man to tell women, with their finer intuitional senses, that he is to be trusted?"

Evelyn Radway's voice had tears in it.

"How could we know? she wailed.

"Madam," Unwin said coldly, "he told you. Many times he tried to convince you, but you would not listen. After that, I suppose, he was too proud. He told you all his real name. Can you deny that he claimed to be Howard Bettington?"

"But you went to Bettington's funeral just before we sailed," Bob reminded him. "You identified him."

"I do not want to spare myself," his father answered. "I identified the body of a man, whose face was disfigured, as Howard Bettington, because he wore Bettington's clothes, was living in Bettington's studio and had papers of Bettington's in his pockets. But I did not fail him as you did."

"What man was it whom you identified?" Evelyn Radway demanded, with a passionate eagerness.

"A name well known to you," he returned. "One Andrew Orme, forger and double murderer. This has been established by the finger prints."

"How did Mr. Bettington get aboard the Albatross?" Mrs. Radway still spoke from the enveloping shadows.

"I told you that one of my friends offered help. That was Bettington. Although his reputation was wide he had not needed to sell his pictures, as many do, to live. For the sake of my children he determined to fill commissions long ago given him. He went off on his trip eagerly, like a boy seeking adventure. My G—! What an adventure! In that great August storm which did such damage he was nearly drowned and took refuge in the hut of a fisherman who called himself Jonathan Gibbs. In reality he was Orme, who had lived there many years, having no friends and passing a solitary existence. When Bettington, in Orme's clothes, was forcibly taken aboard the yacht, Orme took Bettington's clothes and money and went to New York and met his death there, as you know." Unwin sighed heavily. "A double tragedy."

He related, as well as he could, the manner of Bettington's abduction. When it was clear he had nothing more to tell, Mrs. Radway arose and asked him to follow her into the library.

"You must take me to him," she said. For the first time he saw that she had been crying. Dully, he wondered why.

"I don't think it necessary," he told her. "I sent messages by me to you all. For some reason or another, he persists in thinking you were justified for what you did. I confess I do not understand why. It seems quixotic in the extreme."

"Mr. Unwin," she said, "I am going to see him. If you don't care to come, please give me the address."

"I'll take you," he said wearily. "I must speak with my wife for a few minutes first."

He joined Mrs. Radway in a quarter of an hour. She was waiting for him impatiently, but they were already on the steep hill leading into Croton before she spoke.

"You were right to feel bitterly toward me," she confessed. "I have always held that love should cast out all doubt, and yet, when the trial came, I was found wanting. I loved him and yet allowed all these seemingly inexplicable things which confused us, mixed identities and small jealousies, to blind me and build a wall of distrust which hid him from me. And now it is too late."

Unwin patted her hand with a gesture that was at once clumsy and affectionate. His anger had died down. Her grief moved him. He began to regret his bitterness.

"My dear," he said simply. "God is good and understands—and forgives. We do not yet know that it is too late."

That surgeon met them who had been disappointed in finding his patient was not the celebrated Andrew Orme. He gazed with marked interest at the beautiful woman he knew to be the many-millioned widow of Elgar Radway.

"May I see him?" she begged.

"These are not visiting hours," he reminded the visitors, "but I might stretch a point if it's important."

"It is the most important thing in my whole life," she said simply.

She stood for a few moments framed in the doorway of that bare and pallid room which had been the place of innumerable sorrows. In this sordid setting she seemed to the man on the cot ethereally beautiful, slender as the stem of a lily and filled with a divine compassion. In vain he tried to make some motion of welcome, but his body was immobile in plaster casts and his hands seemed too weak to respond to his will. His voice forsook him. He could only stare at her in wonder.

Then she came to the bedside and knelt down and took the strengthless hands and held them to her lips.

"Why have you come?" he asked, and dreaded to hear the answer. He dared not allow himself to feel the certainty of the happiness which had come to him at sight of her.

It was when she looked at him that he knew there would be no misunderstanding between them while life remained.

"I came to say good-by and ask you to forgive me if you could. But I see now there is going to be no good-by and you have forgiven me."

The bitterness of the waste years had gone from her. Over the man on the cot was stealing a new strength and peace. He experienced a sense of protection; he was assured of the return to health and the reality of happiness.

In the outer room the surgeon was discussing his creed with Floyd Unwin.

"When I told him who was waiting, I could see new life coming back. I claim to be a free-thinking materialist, but every now and then a miracle like this happens. . . . I suppose one might say that love is the supreme miracle. . . . But all the same," said the surgeon, "it upsets my calculations."

Only best oil gives proper lubrication, says expert

If housewives only realized they were buying lubrication instead of "just oil," few of them would use anything but the best. Here is one place you can't "cut corners," for anything less than the best lubrication endangers the life of sewing machines, vacuum cleaners, lawn mowers, electric fans, washers and other household equipment.

3-In-One Oil is made especially for such devices and for 35 years it has been recognized by housekeeping experts as the best. It is a scientific blend of high grade animal, mineral and vegetable oils and contains properties not possessed by ordinary oil. It does more than lubricate. It also cleans and protects.

Don't be satisfied with anything but the best. Ask for the old reliable 3-In-One Oil and get the most efficient service from your mechanical devices. At good stores everywhere, in 15c and 30c sizes. For your protection, look for the trade mark "3-In-One" printed in Red on every package.

Law-Abiding Swedes

If the number of Swedish prisoners decrease at the present rate Sweden will soon have a serious problem of unemployment of prison officials. Today there are only 1,950 persons in prison throughout the whole country. Barberg, a prison built to accommodate 350 inmates, has during the last 15 years seldom had more than two or three prisoners at a time. The Engelholm prison that was built to hold 200 inmates had only one guest during six months of the year, although two wardens have been on duty throughout the year.

What this Doctor did for Humanity

As a young man the late Dr. R. V. Pierce, practicing medicine in Pennsylvania and was known far and near for his great success in alleviating disease. Finally he moved to Buffalo, N. Y., and put up in ready-to-use form, his GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY, the well known tonic for the blood. This strength builder is made from a formula which Dr. Pierce found most effective when in private practice.

It aids digestion, acts as a tonic and enriches the blood—clears away pimples and annoying eruptions and tends to keep the complexion fresh and clear. All druggists, Tablets or liquid.

BLUE STAR OINTMENT

Both From Cocoa Bean

Chocolate and cocoa are both made from the cocoa bean, the main difference being that cocoa has had a certain percentage of fat removed. Consequently it is less rich and nutritious. However, in the making of the beverage it is a little easier to mix. If cocoa is substituted for chocolate in cake or candy recipes, additional butter or fat may be added.

Best thing to do with "flaming youth" is to ignore it—if possible.

World's Oldest Library Discovered in Syria

What is supposed to be the most ancient library in the world, consisting of documents written in the first alphabetic signs known to savants, was discovered in Syria by a French archeological expedition. Eighteen large and small tablets, engraved with letters that are neither hieroglyphics nor Assyrian cuneiform characters, but evidently parts of the first alphabet made of 26 and 27 signs, were found by a young Assirian archeologist on the Syrian coast of the Mediterranean, at a place called Ras-Shamra, near Iatakieh (Ladakhya). The expedition had discovered there a necropolis, the 4,000-year-old ruins of a Phoenician palace and town, and numerous ancient vases, jars and statues of great archeological and historical value. The opinion was put forward by the Academie that these ruins represented traces of an Aegian colony that existed on the Phoenician coast 2,000 years before the present era, and whose civilization was of the Mycenaean period. Salomon Reinach, the famous French historian, who was present when the report was presented, declared that the discovery was a most extraordinary one, and that it would be of the greatest importance for the study of ancient history.

English Game Protection

In English law the term "ground game" applies to hares and rabbits, which are subject to extinction by the occupants of lands to protect their crops from injury and loss. This removes these animals from the protection which, in the interest of the sporting classes, the English law throws about wild animals which are hunted for sport. Ordinarily the possession of land confers no right to kill or snare game found thereon, but it is not uncommon in England to provide in a lease for the keeping down of ground game.

One dollar coins have not been minted for general circulation since 1839. Since that date some have been issued as memorial coins, the last being the Grant memorial coins, in 1922. The smallest current gold coin is the $2.50 gold piece.

ENERGY

Man's command of energy has always had a great deal to do with his well-being.

The energy of his own muscles, the energy of animals—and finally the energy brought to him over the electric power lines—all these he has commanded in increasing the amount of work he may do.

Most flexible and efficient of these is electric power. It is versatile, it is inexpensive, and it is delivered wherever it is needed, whenever it is required, and in great or small quantities as the user may desire.

Serving 113 prosperous cities, towns and communities in West Texas, this company's transmission lines give an ample, economical and flexible supply of electric energy for farm, factory and home.

HISTORY'S MYSTERIES

Unsolved Mysteries That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

The Murder of Grand Duke Peter

SURROUNDED by a cloud of rumor and concealed in a haze of official secrecy, the murder of the Grand Duke Peter, husband of Catherine II of Russia, remains one of the many unsolved mysteries connected with that country, particularly since it is coupled with the personality of one of the most remarkable figures in the annals of royalty—Catherine the Great.

The story of Catherine II, the Siamiramis of the North as her contemporaries delighted in calling her, is revolting not only because it is the story of a profligate woman but its deepest horror is to be found in the extreme corruption of the age and people to which the empress belonged. Peter the Great said of his country: "Russia is rotten before she is ripe" and to realize the true meaning of these words and the fullness of their implication, one must study in detail the reigns of Elizabeth and Catherine II. Never was there such a mixture of squalor and magnificence as in the palace of the former. Filth and splendor alternated throughout the royal apartments and the vilest food was eaten from plates of gold.

The first question concerning Catherine, therefore, is whether she corrupted Russia or Russia corrupted her when, as a girl of eighteen, she came from Germany to marry the Grand Duke Peter, heir to the Russian throne. At the time, the Empress Elizabeth, who ruled Russia as a usurper and kept the rightful czar in prison, was morally as corrupt as Catherine became in later years and added drunkenness, gross superstition, cruelty and insanity to her other vices. Yet, at the mere word of this frenzied empress, torture or an exile that meant worse than death, could at any moment be pronounced as lightly and as easily against the heir to the throne as against the poorest peasant.

An even more revolting figure was that of the grand duke himself. "A half-crazed savage in a wig and lace coat," "a swaggering, cursing, brawling, punch-swilling ruffian," "a royal degenerate, to whom nothing was sacred save his own wishes"—these are some of the descriptions of the man to whom Catherine was given as wife. Left absolutely alone in such surroundings and with such a husband, there is little wonder that Catherine not only became corrupted but outdid the corruptions in which she found herself.

In daily and almost hourly peril from the insane fancies of the empress, Catherine may well have experienced the deadening effects produced by the loss of all security and, with respect to the question as to whether she might justifiably be accused of the murder of her husband, it is only necessary to refer to the notes of Wallisewski, Polish historian who made a deep study of the facts in the case of this strange household. "Peter remains the same gross, extravagant and insupportable being that he has always been," says Wallisewski. "A strange brute streaked with insanity," according to St. Beuve's expression, and he still knows how to make himself thoroughly odious. Frequently he comes to bed drunk and, between hicoughs, speaks to his wife of his favorite topics—his amours with the duchess of Courland, a hunchback, or with Freiline Voronstov, who is marked with smallpox. If Catherine attempts to go to sleep he punnels her with his hands and feet to keep her awake until sleep overcomes him. He is almost always drunk and becomes more and more mad."

The first step in the downfall of this royal brute was his removal from the throne at the undoubted instigation of his wife, a removal which was followed by his virtual banishment to his country home at Ropcha where he died, officially of "apoplexy" but in reality as the result of a direct plot against his life. The fact that the murderers dared to act as openly as they did and that no attempt was made to prosecute them indicates that Catherine had shown that the permanent removal of the grand duke would not be distasteful to her. The truth about the affair has, however, never fully come to light, for Catherine had no need even to defend herself. Her rule was absolute and she doubtless destroyed any records which would tend to implicate her with one of the not infrequent murder mysteries of the royal families of Europe.

Pilgrims Using Buses
Since religious pilgrims of Persia have been prohibited, for political reasons, from going to Kerbela, which is in Iraq, they must, if possible, visit Meshed or Kum, so they have abandoned the picturesque caravan for auto bus travel. Teheranis have found that they can make the journey and return home in ten days instead of two months as in the old way.

Obedience
Kathrine Kestki, Red agitator, said, absent domestic relations: "I asked of a young American soldier: 'Did not you and your husband have the boys over you coming to the beach alone?' I understand that he did not want you to come."
"Oh, no," said the bride, "we don't have any words. I said I was going; he said I wasn't, and here I am."

The Kitchen Cabinet

(©, 1929, Western Newspaper Union.)

The most lovable quality that any human being can possess is tolerance. It is the vision that enables one to see things from another's viewpoint. It is generosity that concedes to others the right to their own opinions and their own peculiarities. It is the bigness that enables us to let people be happy in their own way instead of our way.—Rotary Bulletin.

APPEALING DISHES

Let us not forget the value of fruits and vegetables in our menus.

Banana Supreme.
—Peel, scrape and cut four bananas crosswise into quarters. Put one-half cupful of nuts through a food chopper with four graham crackers. Mix with one-third of a cupful of brown sugar, one-eighth teaspoonful of nutmeg. Roll the bananas in this and lay close together in a buttered pan. Bake 20 minutes. Serve with whipped cream.

Maids of Honor.—Beat two eggs with one-half cupful of sugar until light, then add two cupfuls of cottage cheese, two tablespoonfuls of cream, one-half cupful of seedless raisins, one teaspoonful of lemon peel, one tablespoonful of lemon juice, two tablespoonfuls of chopped almonds. Put a spoonful of the filling into individual tart pans lined with rich pastry and bake in a moderately hot oven.

History has it that these small pies were first made by the maid of honor to Katherine of Aragon.
Apple Fluff.—Peel, core and cut up three large apples, simmer with just enough water to cook without burning. Soften one and one-half tablespoonfuls of gelatin in one cupful of water, then heat until well dissolved. Add the grated rind and two tablespoonfuls of juice of lemon, with one-third of a cupful of maple syrup to the apples which have been previously put through a sieve. Cool, and when beginning to set, beat until light. Add the stiffly beaten whites of two eggs folded gently into the mixture. Turn into a mold which has been rinsed in cold water and chilled. Serve with a custard made of the egg yolks, or cream may be used as a sauce.

Potents With Sausages.—Sprinkle one and one-half cupfuls of corn meal into a quart of boiling salted water, stirring and cooking for 20 minutes. Now add one pound of sausage meat which has been well cooked and broken into small bits. Stir it into the corn meal and pour into a mold to cool. Unmold, cover with tomato sauce and cheese and bake half an hour in a moderate oven.

GOOD THINGS FOR TODAY

Here is something different to serve with a lamb roast instead of the usual mint jelly: Cut grapefruit into halves and remove every other section, in the cavity place a wedge shaped piece of mint jelly. Mold the jelly in one-half grapefruit shell and the wedges will be of the same size. These are delightful substitutes for a fruit cocktail when serving lamb or fowl.

Banana-Lemon Cake Filling.—Take three cupfuls of mashed ripe bananas, add six cupfuls of sugar, the juice of one lemon and one-fourth of a tea spoonful of butter. Mix and bring to a boil, stirring constantly to prevent sticking. Add one bottle of pectin and bring to a rolling boil, stirring constantly. Remove at once, cool and stir occasionally for eight minutes to keep the fruit from floating. Cover with paraffin and it will keep indefinitely. This rule requires eight to nine bananas or one and one-half pounds and makes nine or ten eight-ounce glasses.

Bake small cup cakes, spread with jelly and roll in coconut. These make very nice little cakes to serve with a cup of tea.

Rhubarb Betty.—Mix one quart of dry bread crumbs with one-fourth of a cupful of melted butter. Place a layer of sweetened rhubarb sauce in a baking dish and cover with the buttered crumbs; repeat, adding a dash of cinnamon or nutmeg until one quart of sauce and all the crumbs are used. Bake fifteen minutes. The fresh rhubarb may be used, adding sugar for each layer and baking twenty-five minutes. Serve with a hard sauce.

Peach Dainty.—Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter with one cupful of sugar and add the yolks of two eggs lightly beaten. Now add one pint of whipping cream beaten stiff and one quart of sliced peaches. Serve over sliced angel food or sponge cake.

Jellied Custard With Peaches.—Prepare the following custard and mold: Take one tablespoonful of gelatin, soften in one and one-half pints of milk, beat to boiling and pour over the beaten yolks of three eggs and one-half cupful of sugar, one-fourth teaspoonful of salt, one teaspoonful of almond; cook well, adding the almond after the mixture is taken from the stove. Fold in the beaten whites and turn into a large mold. When chilled serve with sliced peaches and cream.

OF BR. IMPORTANT; SMART ONE-PIECE TWEED DRESS

BRIDE-time it is! Couturier salons and dressmaker establishments, window displays and magazine pages all proclaim that now has the season of weddings arrived.

In steller and humble workroom alike, on tables, on shelves, in every nook, orange blossoms are blooming in pretty confusion while masses of billowy tulle rise like feecy clouds along the horizon. Yards and yards of gleaming white satin, lustrous moire, snowy crepes and other materials of which bridal robes are below. Each have their time and place in the mode.

So, after all, women who do not care for the frilly picturesque styles which came so unexpectedly into our midst need not wear them—for there are plenty of trim, trim and infinitely chic tailleurs from which to make choice. The tailored one-piece dress of featherweight tweed in the lower picture is typical of the trend to practical styles tuned to town or travel wear. This swanky cloth model is quite suited to the youthful figure, that is why Joan arsh, who posed for this photograph, elected it. Miss Marsh, as you may perhaps know, is a sixteen-year-old contract player out Hollywood way, her dress is intricately seamed as out of the smartest tailored frocks of this season. Yet in appearance it is the very essence of simplicity—the inset vestee with its three rows of cuff-link buttons. The skirt, is chic to the last degree, having yoke formed of triple tiers of the sth flaily stitched, to which a wide regular flare is attached.

Many of the little semi-sports frocks in this order have detachable matching capes, some long and some merely oulder length. Covert cloth in every ssible shade is very popular this ason, and it would lend itself admirably to a dress such as pictured.

Engaged in active sports one more tely selects a skirt with a blouse or veater, adding a jacket of the cloth e worn only when really needed. s to the one-piece cloth dress as lustrated, fashion makes the carel distinction of calling it a "spe-important for bridal array as for costumes in general.

As will be seen by the thumb-nail sketches in this group, creators of bridal raiment are designing very beautiful headresses of lace this season. A pretty idea recently advanced is a cap of real lace with a frill at the neckline like that of a baby's bonnet, from underneath which the trail of tulle takes its start. The unique part of this lace effect is that the generously large built-up bou- quiet of white roses is bordered with a ruffle of lace matching that which fashions the cap.

One reason these close-fitting lace caps are so well liked is that they give a definite pleasing line to the head. Not only are the bonnet-like effects inspired by picturesque peasant caps proving popular, but unlike draperies of tulle also hold their own in the scheme of things.

For Spring and Summer.

The program of dress for this spring and summer is that well-balanced, the fashionable wardrobe must include costumes of the most practical and wearable type as well as the prettily feminine sort which revels in lengthened hemlines, high waistlines, and all sorts of frills and fur-

Would you like to try this doctor's laxative free of charge?

Every family has occasional need of a laxative, but it should be a family laxative. One that can't form a habit, but can be taken as often as needed. When breath is bad or tongue coated. Or appetite fails. Only a doctor knows the right ingredients. Dr. Caldwell discovered the correct combination years ago. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin combines harmless herbs and pure senna. It starts muscular action and soon corrects constipation. Gently, but surely, it relieves a bilious or sluggish condition. It is mild. Delicious. Effective. All druggists keep this famous prescription ready, in big bottles. Or write Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, Monticello, Ill., for a free trial bottle postpaid.

A touch of spring fever would be a welcome relief.

"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for run-down condition before my baby was born. Now I eat better, have gained in weight and have more strength to take care of my four children. I can do my housework and not get a bit tired. My mother and my sister, also several of my women friends are taking your medicine now, because I believe that this medicine will help any woman that will take it regularly."—Mrs. Lydia Oroski.

MINNIE E. HICKS
R.R. #2, Rushville, Indiana
"When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I could hardly do my housework. I was so nervous and weak from Change of Life that I had to lie down very often. I heard about the Vegetable Compound through a pamphlet which was left at my door. I am doing all the housework for a family of four and it keeps me on my feet. I have taken six bottles and I have gained strength and flesh."—Minnie E. Hicks.

FIRST BAPTIST CHURCH

GEO. C. HUTTO, Pastor

Last Sunday was a good day with us. There were 175 on the Sunday school, and four joined the church at the eleven o'clock hour. Let's have 200 in Sunday school Sunday morning. Friday afternoon is "Visitation Day," which should result in an increased attendance Sunday. The whole school will meet in the auditorium for the opening exercises at 9:45 for some readjustment of the Sunday school work.
11:00—Preaching service. The pastor will bring a message on the theme, "Going With God's Message." B. Y. P. U. hour at 7:15. The evening preaching service will begin at 8:15. Every one cordially invited to attend our services.

CLUB PICNIC

The Junior 1919 Study Club
enjoyed a picnic on Tuesday, May 27, near Lolla Lake. This was a very delightful affair, as it was the last time all the members will be together for this year.

Sandwiches, ice cream and cake were served to the following members and guests: Mmes.
Lake Dishman, Charles Everett,
John Auflill, Elvin Bickey, H. B.
Hall, J. W. Webb, Roy Kutch
and E. A. Hodges; Misses Melba
Johnson, Allice Noel, Vera Brinson, Pauline Pickett and Frances Kendall.

HEDLEY RURAL CLUB

The Hedley Rural Demonstration Club met Tuesday, May 27, with Mrs. Dallas Milner.

After the regular business session was held, the hostess served dainty refreshments to fourteen members and one visitor.

The next meeting will be with
Mrs. J. B. Masterson Tuesday,
June 19th.

STROUD ANNOUNCES FOR JUSTICE OF THE PEACE

The Informer is authorized to announce L. A. Stroud as a candidate for Justice of the Peace Precinct No. 3, subject to the action of the Democratic primary in July.

Mr. Stroud is too well known to need any introduction to our readers, and no one who knows him doubts his qualifications to acceptably fill any office for which he would offer. The only promise he makes is that, if elected, he will at all times discharge the duties of the office fairly and impartially.

He will appreciate your consideration and support of his candidacy.

COOPER-COLBANK

John Cooper, former Hedley boy now Piggly Wiggly manager at McLean, was married Saturday night to Miss Vida Colbank,
a prominent teacher in the Mc-Lean schools, the Baptist pastor,
Rev. G. G. Goff, officiating.

The many Hedley friends of the groom extend best wishes to the happy pair.
