CLARENDON FOLKS PAY US A VISIT

The High School auditorium in Hedley was the scene Tuesday evening of a very enjoyable "Get Together" affair. Quite a large number of Clarendon people—probably 350—met with the people of Hedley for an hour of entertainment and sociability. The entertainment consisted of a program prepared and presented by the visitors. The Clarendon Band rendered several excellent numbers. Rev. Robt S McKee acted as master of ceremonies, and proved himself ably fitted for the job. The entire program was good and was well received. One of the most interesting numbers was the work of Count LaBroke, Magician, presented by Rev. W. E. Ferrell.

The purpose of the meeting was to encourage the work of the Home Demonstration Clubs of the county. The Clarendon people are holding these meetings in every community in the county, in cooperation with Miss Smith and Mr. Brown, our County Agents, the meeting here being the fifth of its kind.

The ladies of the Hedley Home Demonstration Club sold popcorn before the program began, and in each sack was a ticket representing a chance at a nice quilt the ladies had made. Mrs. Trostie of Clarendon held the lucky ticket, and requested that the quilt be sold to the highest bidder and the money given to the Club ladies. Rev. McKee qualified as an expert auctioneer, and the quilt was sold to Dick Bain for $7.50.

At the close of the program the ladies of the Club sold ice cream and cake, and were kept very busy for about thirty minutes. They report that they realized something over fifty dollars net, and wish to thank everyone who helped them in any way, and especially Mrs. Trostie for her very generous spirit.

OUTLOOK GOOD FOR THE LAKEVIEW ROAD

Wednesday afternoon J. W. Noel, L. Spalding, D. B. Leach, J. G. McDougal and Chas. M. Lowry made a trip to Lakeview in the interest of the Hedley to Lakeview road. They report that the people of that city are very much interested in seeing the road opened and finished, and are anxious to have some thing done in the near future.

A petition for the road is being circulated in the Lakeview precinct at the present time, and already there are about 300 who have signed. It is expected the number will reach 500 before it is presented to the Hall county Commissioners Court.

In the first flight Robt Weatherly of Clarendon won first place, a McGregor putter, and G. R. Tucker won second place, three golf balls.

In the second flight O. E. Bailey won first place, a putter, and U. J. Boston of Clarendon second place, a pair of golf socks.

NEWS REVIEW OF CURRENT EVENTS

Carol's Romantic Coup Wins for Him the Throne of Rumania.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

CAROL CARAIMAN, once crown prince of Rumania, then an exile from his country, is now King Carol II after one of the most romantic and spectacular coups d'etat of modern times. Everything being arranged by his friends, he flew to Bucharest in an airplane and was immediately welcomed by the parliament, which voted to give him the crown and to make the little king, Michael, Carol's son, the heir apparent.

Practically the entire population of Rumania seemed to be glad to have Carol back, though the Liberal party voted his return was a "dangerous adventure" and refused to accept the new order of things. Carol signed a law legalizing all acts of the regency in the name of King Michael and also approved a general amnesty act; but he then proceeded to punish certain prominent politicians who spoke against him after his return. He told correspondents he would work constitutionally through parliament and that he had no idea of establishing a dictatorship. At latest reports he was having some difficulty in forming a government, since the National Peasants' party decided not to participate and therefore Juliu Maniu could not accept his former position of premier.

Carol's future family concerns were somewhat doubtful. His mother, Queen Dowager Marie, hastened to Bucharest from Oberammergau to welcome him, and there were confident predictions that he would be reconciled to Princess Helene, his former wife, their divorce having been his annulled. Magda Lupescu, the red-haired woman for love of whom Carol four years ago gave up his wife and claim to the throne, has returned to Rumania, but declared her associations with Carol were ended.

CHICAGO has been assailed by a tremendous anti-crime spasm by the cold-blooded murder of Alfred J. Lingie, veteran police reporter of the Chicago Tribune. Rewards totaling $55,100 have been offered for information leading to the conviction of the slayer; the city authorities have been subjected to the severest criticism for not suppressing the gangsters, and the police department is apparently devoting most of its attention to rounding up the known criminals or frightening them out of the city.

Lingie was a remarkably well posted crime investigator and was intimately acquainted with the affairs of both the underworld and the police. Presumably because he knew too much, he was shot down in broad daylight by one of two men, who made their escape in the crowds on Michigan avenue. The press of Chicago and of the entire country looked on the murder as a bold challenge of the gangsters to the press and there was a universal demand for the arrest and punishment of the slayer.

HALF a hundred lives were lost by fire and drowning when the steamer Fairfax of the Merchants' and Miners' line rammed and sank the tanker Pinthis, laden with 500,000 gallons of high-test gasoline, in Massachusetts bay off Scituate, in the midst of a dense fog. Two minutes after the collision the tanker exploded and flames swept over the liner. The sea around the two vessels was immediately covered with blazing oil and many panic-stricken passengers and members of the crews who jumped overboard were burned to death. The tanker speedily went to the bottom and her entire crew was lost. About eighteen persons on the Fairfax died in the accident and others were so badly burned that recovery was doubtful.

Federal authorities started an investigation of the disaster in Boston and had for consideration serious charges including the allegation that Fairfax was traveling at almost top speed despite the fog, and that the liner's officers failed to give an adequate idea of the extent of the accident in early radio messages. Capt. S. J. Brooks of the Fairfax asserted, according to a federal steamboat inspector, that D. C. McNeil, vice president of the Merchants' and Miners' line, instructed him to send the message to the company's offices in code instead of broadcasting an S O S call.

CONGRESS has finally disposed of the tariff bill after months of hearings, debates and discussions. The measure passed the senate by a mighty slim majority, Senators Reed and Grundy having decided to vote for it despite their belief that it was unfair to eastern industrial interests. The bill's passage through the house was of course much easier.

BISHOP CANNON of the Methodist Church, South, and of various dry organizations, probably will not be punished for contempt of the senate committee on lobbying, but his conduct has been reported formally to the senate. He appeared again voluntarily last week and repeated his refusal to answer questions relating to his political activities in the 1928 campaign. He already had explained that he did not intend to express contempt by walking out of the hearing without being excused. The committee in private conference decided it would be fruitless to attempt to punish the bishop for an alleged contempt committed before less than a quorum of the committee or to seek additional authority from the senate to pursue the inquiry and perhaps force Cannon to testify.

DISCUSSION of the naval treaty was complicated by the President's refusal to let the senate foreign relations committee have all the documents concerning the pact and the London conference on the ground that this would be incompatible with the public interest. Senator Johnson of California was especially insistent that the committee should have these papers since the senate has equal power with the President in the making of treaties. After much talk Senator Reed of Pennsylvania, one of the delegates to the conference, offered to turn over the secret correspondence on the treaty to Johnson on condition that the documents should not be made public. The Californian rejected this offer, and the committee adopted a resolution setting forth the contention that it is entitled to examine all documents relating to the London treaty. Chairman Borah said the dispute would have little effect on the outcome of the treaty debate.

THOUGH the house appropriations committee reported favorably the second deficiency bill carrying an initial appropriation of $10,000,000 for the Boulder dam project, the action was taken only after changes in power contracts had been made which would give greater protection to the government.

Members of the committee obtained admissions from Secretary of the Interior Ray Lyman Wilbur and other witnesses that while the contracts with the city of Los Angeles and the metropolitan water district required the government to furnish specified amounts of water and power, there was no specific requirements on the part of the municipalities to buy a minimum amount of water or power. Amendments were made in the contracts to meet these objections.

PRESIDENT HOOVER nominated W. Cameron Forbes of Boston to be ambassador to Japan, and reappointed Chairman Legge and C. C. Teague members of the federal farm board.

REGULAR Republicans of Wisconsin held their state convention in Oshkosh and endorsed Gov. Walter J. Kohler for re-nomination. The delegates adopted a platform embodying what is called the "new progressivism," the aim of which is to provide a common meeting place for folks in the middle of the road between reactionaries and radicals. It reiterates the petition of the Wisconsin legislature asking congress to authorize a nation-wide referendum on prohibition.

Another plank calls for restrictions on the operations of chain stores.

The Democrats of Indiana also met, put out a state ticket and assailed the Republican party for all kinds of alleged misdeeds, charging that the people no longer govern themselves.

NOBLES of the Mystic Shrine in great numbers gathered in Toronto, Ont., for their annual convention, staged a wonderful electric parade that was almost wrecked by the immense throng of eager spectators, and enjoyed themselves generally in a city where they were not hampered by prohibition laws. Thursday they dedicated a peace memorial, the principal speaker being Senator Joseph T. Robinson of Arkansas. The Imperial council elected Esten A. Fletcher of Rochester, N. Y., Imperial potentate and selected Cleveland, Ohio, as the scene of next year's convention.

PRESIDENT HOOVER awarded the Charles R. Walgreen prize of $500 for the winning essay in the second annual Gorgas memorial essay contest to Pauline Lodge of Lakewood, Ohio, a high school senior. She captured the prize in a field of 5,000 high school students all over the country. In addition to the five $100 bills handed her by the President, she received $250 for travel expenses to the National Capital.

JULIO PRESTES, president-elect of Brazil, returning Mr. Hoover's visit to Brazil last year, was the guest of the President and the government in Washington last week. Secretary of State Stimson and other high officials met Doctor Prestes at the railway station and he was escorted by marines, cavalry and artillery to a private residence placed at his disposal by the government. The chief feature of his visit was a state banquet Thursday evening.

WHAT may prove to be one of the greatest discoveries of medical science is announced by Dr. J. A. Pfeiffer of Baltimore. He says he has isolated the microscopic organism that is the cause of the common cold which is estimated to cause the American worker a loss in wages alone of two billions a year. With this micrococcus a vaccine has been worked out that has proved successful in a long period of tests and that Doctor Pfeiffer and his associates say will immunize people against catching colds for one to three years.

THE first volume of the long awaited report of the Simon commission on India was published simultaneously in London and India. The first paragraphs declare that Great Britain stands by its promise to grant India self-government within the empire at the earliest moment compatible with the safety and prosperity of the country.

In England the report was most favorably received, but the Nationalists of India and the native press there berated it as an insult to their country. The princes of the Indian states of course endorsed it for they are the warm supporters of the British rule.

SOUTH FLORIDA'S oldest financial institution, the Bank of Bay Biscayne, and three of its subsidiaries in the Miami district failed to open their doors last Thursday. Notices posted on the doors said the action was taken for protection of depositors and because of recent substantial withdrawals. Heavy withdrawals were reported by other Miami banks, but the fears of depositors were allayed by the arrival of $8,000,000 sent by airplane from the Federal Reserve bank at Atlanta. The Bank of Bay Biscayne listed total resources of $17,182,292 and deposits of $15,037,198 as of March 27, 1930, in its last quarterly report.

The Ohio state banking department closed the Cosmopolitan Bank and Trust company of Cincinnati and its seven branches because its $637,577 capital was impaired by the unsuccessful stock market gambling of A. W. Shafer, discharged district manager of the Henry L. Doherty company, New York, one of its largest depositors. After an initial survey, examiners said Shafer was short $623,000 in his accounts with the bank.

SHEER HATS WITH SHEER FROCK FOR FORMAL AFTERNOON WEAR

IT is the fashion for ever so sheer frocks to company with hats as sheer as their own sheerness. Thus the summer mode is presenting a picture with an illusive and intangible beauty about it—a sort of will-o'-the-wisp effect which is most beguiling.

Many of the new hats are that transparent one is impelled to look a second time to see whether a brim is really a brim or merely a halo of summer picture wherever youth dines and dances and attends garden parties.

Formal Afternoon Wear. Anything that can be made of lace is made of lace these days. The separate skirt to wear with a contrasting blouse is a new item on the list—one which offers infinite possibilities. In the lower picture, handsome black chantilly fashions the skirt, the same posed over a slip of rose-tinted something or other that is lovely framing the face to a point of joyous enchantment.

Competition is keen between just such flattering openwork straw hats as the one topping the pretty chiffon frock in the picture, and the huge transparent hair capelines which are so entrancing, both because of their exquisite colors and their picturesque "lines."

The charming lacy straw here shown is yellow au naturel, tuning in as it does with the yellow and brown which combines in the chiffon print of the frock. A happy combination, indeed.

Brown is a color featured throughout the summer mode. The fashion-minded are wearing hats brown in tone—hair or malines transparencies with dressy frocks or brown linenlike straws with informal and sports costumes. Accent is also placed on white kid shoes which are trimmed with brown.

Speaking of the sheerness of things for fabrics especially, sheer is the word. One of the outcomes of this flair for thin, transparent weaves is shot-with-silver moire, the sleeveless blouse being of matching moire—a most unusual and decidedly lovely costume for evening or formal afternoon wear. A glittering rhinestone buckle fastens the narrow belt.

One of the outcomes of this new use for lace is the pleated skirt of allover neat-patterned lace in pastel color or white. The hemline is usually plicated, thus adding to its daintiness. Little frilly net or chiffon blouses or those of lace in contrasting colors are worn with these smart lace skirts. The effect is charming and summery. With a bolero or jacket added the ensemble idea finds happy expression.

Another unique employment of lace is for the costume slip, over which fashionists are posing frocks of sheerest nets, chiffons or organdies. The entire slip is of the allover lace, the patterning of which shows through.

The vogue for lace has reached the point that with her lace frock, milady is wearing both hat and gloves, in the form of quaint mitts, and even her slippers are fashioned of lace.

The lace dress which has a yoke of contrasting lace adds its prettiness

A FORMAL AFTERNOON COSTUME

the revival of dotted swiss. Of the quaint swisses now in vogue, the most flattering compliment that can be paid them is to declare that they are as pretty as ever, and prettier. Organdie also is staging a successful "come-back"; likewise the all-together lovely batiste makes its reappearance in exquisite embroidered effects; cotton nets, too, and chiffons, of course. Frocks made very simply of monotone pastel chiffon is the latest "love" of the ingenue. These befringed dresses (no trimming whatever except their ruffle fluffles) are fitting about in the

to the summer scene. Perhaps the favorite in this collection is the black lace gown with its yoke either in flesh, white or cream. However, very effective are lace schemes, yoke brown, navy, gray or beige frocks with a sheerest of flesh tint, or white laces.

Now that fans are again making their appearance, the fan, all of lace, is counted among those most fashionable. And the new lace shawls—simply squares of lace with double hem of chiffon all around—they are lovely.

MYSTERIES

Unsolved Riddles That Still Puzzle Authorities Here and Abroad

The Tichborne Heir

WHEN a legal trial lasts more than six months and costs in excess of $1,000,000 in total expenses to the state and the defendants, it is to be supposed that some definite decision will be reached. But not in the famous case of the missing heir to the Tichborne fortune, for here the decision of the court was only partially satisfactory and the adherents of the claimant to the Tichborne millions maintained to the last that the presiding judge had been tricked by a shrewd ruse on the part of the opposing counsel.

Though the final chapter in the case was written as late as 1898, the affair had its start nearly a century ago with Sir Edward Tichborne, an English baronet of considerable wealth. Sir Edward having no sons, the heir to the title was his nephew James; who, in turn, had two sons, Roger and Alfred. Roger, the elder, is described as being of a headstrong, excitable disposition and, on this account, was sent abroad for two years as a sort of probationary period to prepare him for his announced marriage with his cousin, Katherine.

It was in 1852 that Roger Tichborne resigned his commission in the British army and sailed for South America, to take part in commercial pursuits in that section of the world. After knocking about Latin-America for a little over a year, word reached him of the death of his grand-uncle and the succession of his father to the title—thus making him the next in line for the Tichborne millions. Accordingly, Roger set sail from Rio de Janeiro on board the Bella, a ship which mysteriously disappeared at sea. When the news of the loss of the ship reached England, Lady Henrietta Tichborne, mother of Roger and Alfred, refused to credit the account of the wreck and stoutly maintained that her son must have been saved—adding that Roger had appeared to her in a dream and had informed her that he was safe and that she would have no cause to worry about him, though she might not hear from him for some time.

In spite of the fact that the passage of the years brought no trace whatever of the missing man and that the death of the elder Tichborne caused his younger son, Alfred, to succeed to the title and the estate, Lady Tichborne continued her apparently useless search for Roger and, fourteen years after the loss of the Bella, detectives in her employ discovered what appeared to be a clew, in a man named Thomas Castro, a wanderer in Australia. Castro, who bore a striking resemblance to Roger Tichborne, was brought to Paris and there "identified" by Lady Tichborne as the man who had supposedly gone down on the Bella nearly fifteen years before.

Here enters the second mystery connected with the case—the first being the strange loss of the ship at sea. Why, when her younger son already held the baronetcy and enjoyed the Tichborne fortunes, was Lady Tichborne so insistent upon locating her elder son, a ne'er-do-well, and why did she fight his claim against his "brother" up to the very moment of her death not long afterwards?

At the trial which ensued a number of Roger Tichborne's friends positively identified Castro as the missing man, while several of the sailors of the Osprey, an American vessel, testified they had rescued a number of men from a ship's boat bearing the name Bella, among them a delirious man who declared that his name was "Roger" and who was none other than this same Castro. When additional witnesses described a birthmark which Roger Tichborne had had and similar marks were found upon Castro, the case appeared to have been won by the plaintiff.

But the counsel for Alfred Tichborne demolished the whole framework of evidence by producing a sealed envelope which Roger Tichborne had given to his fiancée just before he had sailed for South America and challenged the claimant to the Tichborne title to describe its contents. Manifestly at a loss for an answer, Castro made a wild statement about having broken off his engagement to his cousin and having left instructions in the envelope to this effect. The counsel for the defense then broke open the seal and read as follows:

"If God spares me to return and marry my beloved Kate within three years, I promise to build a church and dedicate it to the Blessed Mother."

This disclosure had the effect of a bombshell and the case was immediately thrown out of court, Castro being later tried for perjury and sentenced to ten years imprisonment, after which he came to America, going back to England only shortly before his death in 1898. But there are many who claimed that the document upon which the entire case had hinged was not authentic and that the court had acted hastily in accepting it as such—pointing to the fact that Lady Tichborne had accepted Castro as her elder son and emphasizing the preponderance of evidence in his favor. For this reason it cannot be stated that the many mysteries connected with the celebrated "Tichborne case" have ever been solved—nor is it likely that they ever will be.

THE VALUE OF SOUND DESIGN

New Ford engine gives outstanding acceleration, speed and power without sacrificing reliability or economy

THE good performance of the Ford car, so apparent on every highway, is due largely to the sound mechanical design of the engine.

It has outstanding acceleration, speed and power, yet that is only part of its value to you. Greater still is the fact that it brings you all these features without sacrificing either reliability or economy.

That is the reason the Ford car has given such satisfactory service to millions of motorists all over the world and has been chosen by so many large companies that keep accurate cost figures. In every detail of construction it has been carefully planned and made for the work it has to do.

The design of the compression chamber is an important factor in the efficiency of the Ford engine. It is built to allow free passage of gases through the valves and to thoroughly mix the fuel by producing turbulence within the cylinders during compression. The spark thus flashes quickly through the whole fuel charge, resulting in quieter and more effective engine performance. Other factors are the direct gravity gasoline feed, the specially designed carburetor, the new hot-spot manifold, aluminum pistons, chrome silicon alloy valves of larger diameter, statically and dynamically balanced crankshaft and flywheel, the simplicity of the electrical, cooling, lubrication, and fuel systems and accuracy in manufacturing.

Eight "Foreigners" Who Helped Win American Independence

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

THE Declaration of Independence is the charter of American freedom and the men who affixed their signatures to it in Philadelphia one hundred and fifty-four years ago are known as "America's 56 Immortals." Strictly speaking none of these 56 was an "American," for all of them, as citizens of the British Colonies in North America, were subjects of His Majesty, King George III of England. But what is even more interesting is the fact that eight of them were not even born on American soil and because of that fact it may be accurately stated that eight "foreigners" helped win American Independence by their part in the event we celebrate on July 4.

Of these eight "foreigners" three were born in Ireland, two in England, two in Scotland and one in Wales, so every part of the British Empire thus contributed to the founding of a new nation which should be deeply rooted in the British tradition. A few of them rendered other services to the new republic which guaranteed their being remembered by the nation which they helped to found, but the most of them are all but forgotten now. So it can be fairly said that their fame rests upon that one stroke of their pens. Curiously enough it is the penmanship of one which has perpetuated his name and made it familiar to thousands of Americans.

That man is Button Gwinnett, who was born in England in 1732, the same year that George Washington was born in this country. After being engaged in business in Bristol for several years he emigrated to Charleston, S. C., and then removed to Savannah, Ga., in 1765, where he became a general trader. In 1770 he purchased a plantation on St. Catherine's island and became known as the leading agriculturist of the colony of Georgia. On January 20, 1775, Gwinnett was appointed a delegate to the Continental congress and as a representative from Georgia signed the Declaration of Independence.

Gwinnett was re-elected in October, 1776, appointed a member of the state government of Georgia in February, 1777, and is said to have furnished the basis for the state constitution that was afterwards adopted. In March of that year he was appointed president of the provincial council but was an unsuccessful candidate for governor in May. He was also an unsuccessful candidate for the position of brigadier general of the continental brigade to be levied in Georgia. Embittered by this and irritated by other incidents in which his successful opponent, Gen. Lachlan McIntosh, figured, Gwinnett challenged McIntosh to a duel. It was fought with pistols at a distance of 12 feet on May 15, 1777, and both were wounded. Gwinnett so seriously that he died 12 days later.

Years later when autograph collectors began seeking complete sets of the autographs of the Signers, it was discovered that signatures by this Georgia statesman were practically nonexistent. His untimely death had occurred before he had occasion to sign many public documents and he does not seem to have been a prolific letter writer. As far back as 1886 a Gwinnett autograph sold for $185. Forty years later one brought the unheard of price of $22,500. But this was only the beginning. A short time later another sold for $28,500 and in March, 1927, a letter signed by Button Gwinnett and five other Signers, was sold for $51,000.

The other English born Signer was Robert Morris, whose fame rests not so much upon his signature, either to that document or any other, as upon his services to the patriot cause which gave him the title of "Financier of the Revolution." He was born in Liverpool, England, January 20, 1734, and upon emigrating to this country at the age of thirteen, entered the counting house of Charles Willing, a wealthy Philadelphia merchant, where he obtained the training that was to be of such value to his country later. Becoming the partner of Willing's son, Thomas, Morris soon rose to a position of prominence in the Quaker city and because of his opposition to the stamp act and other measures involving colonial rights, he was elected a delegate to the Continental congress which issued the Declaration of Independence. He was re-elected in 1777 and again in 1778.

As a member of the ways and means committee he more than once saved the Revolution from financial collapse. Back of the brilliant campaign of Gen. Nathaniel Greene in 1780 was the sturdy figure of Morris, who had supplied Greene with the munitions of war and in the same year he raised $1,400,000 which enabled Washington to make his dash against Cornwallis at Yorktown and bring an end to the war. Elected superintendent of finance in 1781 he found the financial situation desperate. The government of the new nation was $2,500,000 in debt and it seemed that it must fall even after it had won its independence. Morris saved it by organizing the Bank of North America, with a capital stock of $400,000, of which Morris himself subscribed $10,000.

In 1786 Morris was elected to the Pennsylvania legislature and in 1787 sat in the convention which framed the United States Constitution. In 1788 Pennsylvania honored him by electing him to the first United States senate, a post which he held until 1795. He had been offered the post of secretary of the treasury in Washington's cabinet but declined it and recommended Alexander Hamilton for the position. He went into the East Indian and China trade with Gouverneur Morris but his speculations ended disastrously. And it is to the eternal discredit of the nation which he helped found and more than once saved that for several years Robert Morris was allowed to languish in a debtor's cell. He died in Philadelphia, May 8, 1806.

Only a little less important historically than the two English-born were the two Scotch-born Signers—James Wilson and John Witherspoon. Both were distinguished educators as well as statesmen, Witherspoon as president of Princeton college and Wilson as a professor in the City college of Philadelphia which later merged into the University of Pennsylvania. Wilson was born at St. Andrews, Scotland, September 14, 1727, and emigrated to this country in 1763.

From the first he espoused the patriot cause and after several terms

as provincial representative was chosen to the Continental congress to which he was twice re-elected. He served on several important committees of congress and was appointed superintendent of Indian affairs for the middle district. At the outbreak of hostilities he became colonel of a Pennsylvania regiment of militia and served in the New Jersey campaign of 1776 but soon was forced to retire from the field to attend to his many civil duties. After independence was won he was elected to congress in 1782 and proposed the general plan of taxation which was adopted the following year. In the Constitutional convention he supported direct popular suffrage and a single executive and exercised much influence in determining the character of the Constitution which was adopted. After the new government went into operation under the Constitution, Wilson became a leader in the Federalist party and in October, 1789, Washington appointed him an associate justice of the Supreme court a position which he held until his death in Edenton, N. C., August 28, 1798.

John Witherspoon was born in Gifford, Haddingtonshire, Scotland, February 5, 1722. The son of a minister, Witherspoon was graduated from Edinburgh university in 1742. He studied theology and was ordained minister of the parish of Belth in 1745, and installed pastor at Paisley, in 1757. In 1758 he was moderator of the synod of Glasgow and Ayr. He declined the presidency of Princeton college in 1763, but accepted the second invitation and came to the United States, and was inaugurated president of Princeton in 1768.

Witherspoon was the leader of the Presbyterians in this country and was influential in attaching the Scotch and Scotch-Irish population of the colonies to the patriot cause. Because of his efforts in behalf of colonial rights which caused it to be said of him that he was "as high a son of liberty as any man in America," he was chosen a member of the convention that framed New Jersey's first constitution, a member of the provincial congress of New Jersey in 1776, and delegate in the Continental congress from 1776 to 1783. During the Revolution he was a member of the secret committee of the congress on the conduct of the war, and a member of the board of war in 1778. He was also a member of New Jersey council in 1780, of the assembly, 1783, 1789-1790, and of the New Jersey convention in 1787 to ratify the federal Constitution. He became blind in 1792, and died near Princeton, September 15, 1794.

Although Ireland contributed more of these eight "foreigners" who were Signers, none of them subsequently rose to such positions of importance in the new nation as did the Englishmen and Scotchmen previously mentioned. James Smith was born in Ireland about 1720, coming to this country in 1729 when his father emigrated to the Susquehanna country in Pennsylvania, where he became a farmer. Young Smith was educated at the College of Philadelphia, studied law and settled first in Shippensburg as a lawyer and surveyor and later in York.

As evidence of his versatility Smith next engaged in the iron manufacturing business and was a man of considerable property at the outbreak of the Revolution. In 1774 he raised the first company in Pennsylvania for the purpose of resisting Great Britain and was chosen as a member of the convention which met to consider a policy of nonimportation from England.

In 1776 he was elected to the provincial conference which met to form a new government for Pennsylvania. There he distinguished himself by seconding the motion of Dr. Benjamin Rush in favor of a declaration of independence. This was unanimously adopted and presented to the Continental congress a few days before the Declaration of Independence was offered. He was a member of the convention that assembled in Philadelphia July 15, 1776, to form a new constitution for the state, and on July 20 until 1778. Having lost his fortune in the war, Smith returned to the practice of his profession in which he continued until 1801. He died in York, Pa., July 11, 1806.

George Taylor's career closely parallels that of Smith in many respects. He was born in Ireland in 1716. He is said to have been the son of a clergyman and to have received a good education, preliminary to his study of medicine which he abandoned in order to emigrate to America in 1736. Leaving home penniless and without the knowledge of his parents, he took passage as a "redeemtioner," and on his arrival in Philadelphia bound himself to an iron manufacturer in Durham, Pa.

Taylor was elected to the provincial assembly that met in Philadelphia in 1764, was appointed to the committee on grievances and had a leading part in the debate on the revision of the charter. He was re-elected successively until 1770 when he returned to his business, which had turned out to be unprofitable in its new location, so he went back to Durham. Again he was sent to the provincial assembly and was also placed on the committee of safety as the first rumblings of the Revolution were heard. He was a member of the committee appointed to draw up instructions for delegates to the Continental congress. These instructions, forbidding them to vote for separation from England, were revoked in June, 1776. Because five of the Pennsylvania delegates hesitated to agree to the Declaration of Independence, others were chosen in their place on July 20. Taylor was one of these and, taking his seat the day of his election, he had his chance to become one of the Immortals when the engrossed copy of the Declaration was presented for the signature of the delegates on August 2. He retired from the congress in 1777 and died in Easton, Pa., February 23, 1781.

The third Irish-born Signer was Matthew Thornton, who was born somewhere on the Emerald Isle about 1714, and who emigrated with his father to America two or three years later. The Thorntons first settled in Maine, then removed to Massachusetts, where Matthew was educated. He studied medicine in Leicester and built up a profitable practice in Londonderry, N. H. During the French and Indian war he went as a surgeon with the New Hampshire troops in the expedition against Louisburg. Later he was appointed a justice of the peace and also served as a colonel of the militia.

Because of his active part in the overthrow of the royal government of New Hampshire at the outbreak of the Revolution, Doctor Thornton was chosen president of the provisional convention in 1775. He also served as chief justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and from 1776 to 1782 as judge of the Superior court of New Hampshire. He was chosen speaker of the assembly in January 5, 1776, and in September of that year was elected delegate to the Continental congress. As in the case of the Pennsylvania delegates he was allowed to sign his name to the engrossed copy of the Declaration, although he was elected after its passage and did not take his seat in the congress until November of 1776. He was re-elected for another year in December but retired from public office in 1779. Eventually he settled in Newburyport, Mass., where he died June 24, 1803.

The sole Welsh member of the band of Immortals, Francis Lewis, had a stirring career. Born in Llandaff, Wales, in March, 1713, he was left an orphan at an early age, but was given a good education in Westminster school by his distinguished uncle, the dean of St. Paul's. After a thorough training in the commercial life of London he decided to strike out for himself upon becoming of age. So he sold his patrimony, invested in merchandise and embarked for this country, where he established mercantile houses in New York and Philadelphia.

He was at Oswego in 1752, serving as a volunteer aide to Gen. Hugh Mercer, when that post was captured by the French and Indians. He was given up as a prisoner of war to the Indians. He was taken to Montreal and then sent to France but finally was exchanged and returned to his home where the British government gave him 5,000 acres of land for his services. He was one of the first to join the Sons of Liberty and at the outbreak of the Revolution his position as a wealthy merchant brought him into political prominence. He was a member of the first Continental congress, was one of the New York committee of 100 and on several army and finance committees. He served in the congress which adopted the Declaration, and in 1777 was re-elected to that body. He was appointed commissioner of the board of admiralty in 1779 and became a vestryman in the historic Trinity church, a position which he held until his death in New York city December 19, 1803.

Analyzing YOU...

With the New Science of Syllabics
By C. J. COFFMAN
Dean of All the Enumerators

Olive
"Olive skin, all soft and brown. Olive eyes roam through the town. Lashes dropped demurely down, Concealing Olive."

Olive, will you take your Greek lesson now? Very well. It won't be long nor hard.
The first letter of your name, O, is a saucy little grandchild of the last letter of the Greek alphabet, Omega. To the ancients it gave a comprehension of the universe. In more modern phraseology this letter might be said to be "the last word."
People are often deceived by the apparent softness in you. They may even conclude that you could not be a real burden-bearer. But the first two letters of your name, OL, indicate yoke, and this does not mean the yoke on the pretty little dress you might have worn a few years ago.
It means real ability to get under the burden and lift, which you can do so well, even though your soft and dimpled arms belie this.
The olive branch has long been known as a symbol of peace. That's what you are, Olive, there is so much about you that is soothing and peaceful. Perfectly wonderful in a sick-room.
There might be something more to nursing if you did it. It is easy to picture you up near the head of a great institution, honored and beloved by all with whom you come in contact.
Or, you might devise a new system altogether, for something very important, in the development of these things.
Taking the letters in your name separately, O, as we said, indicates the unlimited universe. This leaves the word LIVE, and we are told that olives are the most life-giving of foods.
L is the next letter, and it stands for life and love, of which you may have your full share in both. I, in the middle of your name, gives you a peep into the infinite, by way of your own inner nature. V, for vigor and vitality, puts a little note of strength in your name, at rather an unexpected point.
E might mean eternity, or it might mean eating, and you are so adaptable that you have good ideas on both.

Pauline
Since you are the feminine idea of the great Paul, father-teacher to the Corinthians, we must expect great things of you.
Probably your greatest power is found in the general meaning of the first three letters of your name, PAU, which is to cause to cease, to make a stop.
The strength of your fine, aquiline nose, indicating the second trio of letters in your name, LIN, will cause you to be obeyed when you set your mind on that obedience.
For it is seen that you do have the power to stand steadily in one place, to lodge firmly upon a determination. This is shown by the second trio of letters in your name, LIN.

Now, taking the syllable of the last four letters of your name, LINE, as a whole, it indicates your ability to lay out something for others to follow. You are able to lay down the "line" when you demand that some one shall "toe the mark."
Learn to combine tactfulness and resourcefulness with a commanding personality. The best way to do this is to find out first just what the other person wants to do, and then study out exactly how some part of their desires conforms to what you want done.
Whenever you start with the other person's desire, seeing it both from their standpoint and yours, you have started toward your own success.
Most Paulines seem able to do this, but any of us may miss the mark once in a while. Hence my special injunction to you at this time.

The origin of the glove dates back to antiquity, since they were known in prehistoric times to the cave dwellers, says Pathfinder Magazine. The ancient Persians wore them and the Greeks appropriated the custom from them. HOT AND COLD BEVERAGES

The making of a good cup of tea which is such a simple and easy thing to do, is often spoiled by standing. The best pot for tea is of earthen ware. It should be scalded and hot and when the tea is (a teaspoonful for each person) put into the hot pot, pour freshly boiled water over it and allow it to stand three to five minutes to draw, then serve at once. For those who do not care for the tea so strong the freshly boiled water should be provided.

All sorts of trimmings are used these days for the tea. Jams, citrus fruits, marmalades and preserves such as pineapple, a teaspoonful dropped into the cup to suit the taste of those who like something different than lemon, cream and sugar.

One may add a bit of grated lemon peel or orange peel to the tea in the pot, giving a very distinctive flavor.

When making tea for a large company it is a good plan to put it into a cheese cloth bag, then it may be removed easily when the tea is sufficiently strong.

Cambric Tea.—What memories it brings of childhood. Put a loaf of sugar in the bottom of the cup, fill one-third full of hot cream, let stand one minute and add water directly from the tea kettle. Children enjoy this when their elders have their coffee. It is also good for those who like a hot drink and cannot take tea or coffee.

Ginger Ale Julep.—Put one and one-half cupfuls of sugar into a pitcher, add the strained juice of six large lemons, stir until the sugar is dissolved. Chill and turn into a fancy pitcher one-fourth filled with ice, shake vigorously, add one-half dozen sprigs of fresh bruised mint, now add two pint bottles of ginger ale and pour into glasses that have two tablespoonfuls of cracked ice. Garnish with fresh mint, frosted by dipping into powdered sugar. Serve at once.

Chocolate as well as cocoa should be cooked five minutes in water before the milk or cream is added, otherwise it is not palatable.

SPECIAL BANANA DISHES

Novel recipes are always welcomed by the housewife who is constantly looking for appetizing dishes to please the tastes of her family.

Banana Marmalade.—Peel and slice bananas, using two pounds of bananas and the same amount of sugar and the juice of a lemon. Put into an earthen dish and let stand one hour. Turn into a preserving pan and cook gently, stirring constantly as soon as it thickens. Test by dropping a little on a plate; if it sets it is ready to pour into jars. Serve with toast at tea.

Bananas Cooked in Cranberry Juice.—Wash a pint of cranberries and cover with a cupful of cold water. Cook quickly ten minutes and press through a sieve. Halve six large bananas lengthwise and cover with the juice of half a lemon. Add one and one-half cupfuls of sugar to the hot berry juice, stir well and pour over the bananas. Place in a hot oven and bake until the fruit is tender. Remove to a glass dish and cool. The cranberry jelly will make a thick, rich sauce for the bananas.

Fresh Fruit Cup.—Take half a pineapple, dice, one cupful of strawberries, three bananas, three oranges, one tablespoonful of lemon juice and sugar sirup to sweeten. Mix all together, chill and serve topped with a bright perfect strawberry.

Fried Bananas With Bacon or Sausage.—Cut each banana into halves crosswise, then lengthwise, roll in flour, cook in hot bacon or sausage fat and serve around the bacon or sausage.

Bananas Baked in Fruit Juice.—Put four large bananas cut into sections in a baking dish, cover with the juice of two large oranges and one-half cupful of lemon juice, one-half cupful of sugar, all well mixed and poured over the bananas. Bake for 20 minutes. Serve hot or cold.

Banana Muffins.—Cream two tablespoonfuls of butter, add one-half cupful of brown sugar, one beaten egg, two mashed bananas, two cupfuls of flour, one and one-fourth teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one-half teaspoonful of salt and one-half cupful of milk. Cream the butter and sugar together, add egg well beaten and the mashed pulp of the bananas. Add the dry ingredients, alternating with the milk. Mix well; drop into greased tins and bake in a medium oven twelve minutes.

Banana Pie.—Bake a shell and fill with thinly sliced bananas which have been lightly sweetened, and a teaspoonful of lemon juice added to them. Cover with a rich, thick custard, cooked and cooled, and top with a few spoonfuls of whipped cream. Serve well chilled.

Chinese Hunt Ideal Girl

The Chinese are hunting for the ideal girl. A youth of Shanghai recently wrote in a periodical: "The modern Chinese girl must embody all the ancient virtues and all the modern ideals. She must be smart, but not extravagant. She must be sociable, but not bolsterous. She must understand politics, but not practice them. She must recognize a man's rights, but must not insist on her own. She must be at once a mate and a maid." He admits that he has been unable to find her.

Perils of Fame

"Some day a statue will be made in your honor."

"Maybe my family will feel better without it," answered Senator Sorghum. "They have been sufficiently agitated by political fault-finding without being worried by the art critics."

Pretty Cool, Anyway

A California paper reports: "After the ceremony, Smith declared, he visited his father-in-law, Daniel Roney's house, whereupon his mother-in-law bit him over the nose, drawing blood, and his father-in-law fired at him twice with a shotgun. The police believe the Roneys objected to the match."

METHODIST REVIVAL CLOSED SUNDAY

Last Sunday night the Rev John M Neal closed his engagement at the Methodist Church and left immediately for his home. He was among us for only a few days, yet the town is deeply indebted to him for his great services among us. His sermons were forceful, plain and sincere. Quite a number were converted and the whole Christian community was blessed thru his ministry.

We hope Bro Neal can come our way again some day.
