Southern Cross Makes Westward Flight Across the Atlantic Ocean.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD ONCE again the Atlantic has been conquered by aviators, and this time it was the westward passage, made successfully but once before, that was negotiated. Maj. Charles Kingsford-Smith of Australia and three companions flew the famous plane Southern Cross from Port Marnock, Ireland, near Dublin, and made a safe landing at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland. Their intended destination was New York, but when they neared the Newfoundland coast they ran into dense fogs and for six hours flew blind, losing their course and wandering almlessly. Meanwhile their fuel was running low and their predicament seemed serious. However, their radio was efficient and the operator, John W. Stannage, kept in constant communication with ships and shore stations. A relief plane was about to take off from Harbor Grace when the Southern Cross came in out of the fog and dropped gracefully to earth.

While Kingsford-Smith, Stannage and their companions, Evert Van Dyk and Capt. J. Patrick Saul, rested after the two thousand mile flight the plane was refueled, and next morning at daylight the trip to New York was resumed. Major Kingsford-Smith said they would fly later to San Francisco, completing a round the world flight for him and the plane.

CHESTER H. GRAY, Washington representative of the Farm Bureau federation, has given out an analysis purporting to show that agriculture benefits much more from the new tariff law than does industry.

Duties on raw agricultural products have been increased on an average by 51.6 per cent over the rates of the 1922 law, tabulations made by Mr. Gray indicate. The industrial rate increases have averaged 14.6 per cent. the agricultural increases being more than three times as much as industrial increases.

HOUSE and senate conferees agreed on the rivers and harbors hill exactly as it was passed by the senate. and it was sent to the President for his approval. It is estimated that the bill authorizes the expenditure of more than $135,000,000 on projects which if completed will cost in excess of $300,-000,000. Actual expenditures must be made from the lump sum annual appropriation of $55,000,000 at the disposal of the army engineers.

VET another most auspicious event in aviation circles, so to speak was the birth of a fine son to Colonel and Mrs. Lindhergh at Englewood, N. J. The glad news was given all the world immediately by newspaper bulletins and radio broadcasts, and congratula tory messares poured in on the happy parents. The colonel was characterstically retirent, but Ambassador Morrow proclaimed tenself the happlest grandfather in the world. That the treaty involves no permanent surrender of the previously claimed right of the United States to build as it pleases.

That under the so-called "escape clause" America can build whatever type of ship it desires in the event of England or Japan building beyond the treaty limits because of the construction programs of nations not signatory to the pact.

That under the replacement clauses Great Britain can replace her 6-inch gun cruisers with ships of that category.

PRESIDENT HOOVER'S vacation tour, plans for which already include visits to some of the national parks in the West, may also take him down to Mexico in August. Both the Mexican government and Ambassador Morrow have invited him, and after a conference in the White House Mr. Morrow said:

"I strongly urged President Hoover to visit Mexico while I am there and I believe that he will do so. He plans to make a trip during August which will bring him to the Mexican border. and I believe that it would go a long way to cement our good relations if he would visit that country. of the report of the Simon commission on India served only to accentuate the rage of the Indian Nationalists. The commission recommends primarily that there be a federal organization of all the Indian states; that the new constitution should, so far as possible, contain within itself provision for its own development, allowing for natural growth and diversity; and that during the period in which India is progressing on the road to complete self-government, there must be full provision made for the efficiency of the fundamentals of government, which means that for many years the presence of British troops, and British officers serving in Indian regiments, will be essential.

Hindus, Moslems and Parsees are united in condemning the Simon report and the Nationalists have renewed their demand that the London round table conference in October be boycotted unless the British government promises to discuss ways and means for dominion status for India.

FORD MOTOR COMPANY

YOU are buying proved performance when you buy a Ford. You know it has been built for many thousands of miles of satisfactory, economical service.

Letters from users in every part of the world show the value of the sound design of the car, good materials and accuracy in manufacturing. You sense a feeling of sincere pride in the oft-repeated phrase - "Let me tell you what my new Ford did."

Further tribute to the sturdiness, reliability and general all-round performance of the new Ford is shown in the repeated and growing purchases by government bureaus, by police departments, and by large industrial companies which keep careful day-by-day cost records. In most cases, the new Ford has been chosen only after exhaustive tests covering speed and power, safety, comfort, ease of control, oil and gas consumption, low yearly depreciation, and low cost of up-keep.

SOME AMERICAN WOMEN WARRIORS

LEYN

"Michigan Bridget" Carrying the Flag

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ALED echo of a Civil war mysters was heard recently when Gen. M. R. McLean, adjutant general of the Kansas National Guard, received an inquiry from a Nebraska woman who was seeking to learn the name of a woman who served two years in the First Kansas regiment, and whose secret was not discovered until her death in a hospital. Accompanying the inquiry was a copy of a letter written home by a soldier of the First Minnesota battery at Camp Neal lake, Providence, lowa, on April 6, 1863, which said in part:

"One of the members of the First Kansas regiment died in the hospital yesterday. After death the somewhat startling discovery was made by those who were preparing the body for burial. that their companion beside whom they had marched and fought for nearly two years, was a woman. You can imagine their astonishment.

"The regiment is camped near us, and I went to the hospital and saw her. She was large for a woman, with rather masculine features. She must have been very shrewd to have kept her secret so long when she was surrounded by several bundred men.

"The First Kansas was one of the first regiments that entered the service two years ago. This girl enlisted after it went to Missouri, so nothing was known of her early history. She doubtless served under an assumed name. She had always sustained an excellent reputation in the regiment. She was brave as a tion in battle and never flinched from the severest fatigues or hardest duties. She had been in more than a dozen battles and skirmishes. She was a sergeant when she died. The men in the company all speak of her in the terms of respect and affection. She would have been promoted to a lieutenant in a dew days had she lived." Although such cases are comparatively rare, the Kansas woman was not unique in donaing men's ciothes and marching away to the wars. A Massachusetts girl set the style for that away back in the days of the American Revolution. If you visit beautiful Rock Ridge cemetery near Lake Massapoag you will find a quaint old gravestone upon the front of which is this inscription. "Debo grah, wife of Benjamin Gannett, died April 29, 1827. aged 68 years." But it is not until you look upon the back of the monument that you get a hint of the story of this "First Tomboy in American History," for there you will read. "Deborah Sampson Gannett, Robert Shurlett, The Female Sol dier, Service 1781-1783." Deborah Sampson was born at Plympton, Mass. as 1760. A great-granddaughter of Isaac Sampson, one of the first settlers of Plympton, and, on her mother's side, a direct descendant of William Bradford, she was of more than average intellect and was tall for her sex. As a girl she taught school a short time at Middleboro Four Corners. but was filled with the desire to actively engage in the cause of the colonies. Arraying herself in male attire, she set forth to enlist. At Uxbridge she agreed to take the place of an Uxbridge man and was enlisted at Worcester by Muster Master Eliphalet Torp of Dedham, was marched to West Point with other recruits, where she became a member of Capt. George Webb's company in the regiment commanded by Colonel Shepard of Westfield, and fater by Col. Henry Jackson of Boston-the Fourth Massachusetts.

enlistment as May, 1782. She was honorably discharged in November, 1783; was granted a pension of $48 a year from January 1, 1803; of $76.80 from April, 1816; and of $96 from September, 1818. She married in April, 1784, Beniamin Ganpett, a farmer of Sharon, and lived to become the mother of a son, Capt. Earl B. Gannett, and two daughters. Many widows have applied for pensions from the government because of the war. service of their husbands, but the only case on cord of a widower applying for su because of the way service of his wife is the case of Benjamin Gannett. Several years after the first general pension law was passed by congress in 1831 for the benefit of veterans of the Revolution, he applied for a pension on the basis of Deborah Sampson's service in the Continental army. He did not live to collect it but her children did. Almost as interesting as the women soldiers who served in our wars in men's garb are those amazons who fought shoulder to shoulder with their husbands or brothers, not as men but as women. Some of them have become part of our national tradition. Certainly such is the case with the celebrated "Molly Pitcher" of the battle of Monmouth fame. During the years since her heroic deed there, so much legend has gathered about Molly that it is difficult to be sure of all the facts about her life. Part of this is due to the fact that she is often confused with another Molly of Revolutionary war fame. But from the best evidence available it seems that "Molly Pitcher's" real name was Mary Ludwig, and that she was born in Mercer county, New Jersey, near Trenton, October 13, 1754. When she was about fourteen years old, Mrs. William Irvine, wife of a physician in Carlisle, Pa., happened to visit the vicinity and took Mary back with her as a "hired There she met John Copper Hays, a barber, and they were married in 1769. At the outbreak of the Revolution Hays enlisted in Capt. Francis Proctor's Independent Artillery company, and his wife marched away to war with him. His enlistment expired December 1, 1776, and it is said that Mary Hays urged him to re-enlist, which he did-this time in the Seventh Pennsylvania Regiment of the Line, commanded by her former employer. Poctor Irvine. Again his wife seems to have been a welcome addition to the troops, for she not only cared for her husband's clothes and cooked for him, but she also performed similar services for his comrades. On a blazing July day in 1778 the battle of Monmouth was fought. It was so hot that many of the soldiers on both sides dropped dead from the heat. All during the battle Mary Hays was busy carrying water to the soldiers in her husband's regiment. The well where she filled her pitcher may still be seen near Tennant, N. J., and her services that day won for her from the thirsty soldiers the sobriquet of "Molly Pitcher." But she proved to be more than just a water-carrier. Her busbaud, although an infantryman, because of his previous service in the artillery, was called upon to serve one of the guns during the battle. When he fell wounded she directed the soldiers to carry him away. Then she sprang to the gun and began to fire and load with almost as much skill as that. shown by her husband. It is this incident for which she is famous and which is preserved in stone in two monuments-one over her grave at Cartisle, Pa., and the other on the Moni tiefield at Freehold, N

The other famous Molly of the Revolution was Margaret Corbin who followed her husband, John Corbin, to the war and stood at his side when he was killed while serving his cannon at the battle of Fort Washington on November 16, 1776. She immediately leaned over, took the ramrod from his dead hand and continued to serve the gun until she was severely wounded when a charge of grapeshot tore away part of her breast and almost severed her arm. She was taken prisoner by the British when Fort Washington fell, then paroled to General Greene at Fort Lee and later was sent on to Philadelphia with the wounded.

Undaunted by this experience, "Captain Mollie," as she was now known by the soldiers in the Continental army, enlisted in an Invalid regiment, was sent to West Point and remained with her unit there until mustered out of service in April. 1783. If you visit the cemetery of the United States Military academy at West Point today, you will find there a monument which bears the following inscription: "In Memory of Margaret Corbin, a Heroine of the Revolution known as 'Captain Mollie.' 1751-1800. Who at the Battle of Fort Washington, New York City, when her husband, John Corbin, was killed, kept his field plece in action until severely wounded and thereafter by act of congress received half the pay and allowance of 'A Soldier in the Service.' She lived, died and was buried on the Hudson river bank near the village now called Highland Falls. In appreciation of her deeds for the cause of liberty and that her heroism may not be forgotten, her dust was moved to this spot and the memorial erected by the National Society of the Daughters of the American Revolution in New York State, 1926."

No less a person than Mary A. I cannot vench for the correctness of this estimate, but I am convinced that a larger number of women disguined themselves and enlisted in the service, for one cause or another, than was dreamed of.

One of the most famenas of these was Bridget Devens known as "Mich'gan Bridget." She went with the first Michigan cavalry, in which her husband was a private. "Sometimes when a soldier fell she took his place, fighting in his stead with unqualling courage," says Miss Livermore. "Sometimes she railled retreating troops sometimes she brought off wounded from the field-always fearless and daring, always doing good service as a soldier. Sports Shirts Made of Cotton Mesh Material

The new sports shirts made either of silk or of cotton mesh material with short polo sleeves, are meeting with approval for sports and country wear. They are made to slip on over the bead and have trim button and buttonhole closing part way down the front. This season the sports shirt is almost always worn tucked into the belt of the skirt.

A popular and smart sort of tennis costume consists of one of these silk or cotton shirts and a pair of tennis shorts. The shirts are white while the shorts are usually chosen in cold blue or green being two of the mo popular colors.

THE STORY

Mervyn Holt is engaged by a man calling himself Mazaroff as a traveling companion. After a a travering companion. After a short tour they put up at the Woodcock inn on Marrasdale moor. They meet, casually, Mrs, Elphinstone and Sheila Merchi-son. Mazaroff tells Holt they are his wife and daughter and that his real name is Merchison. That night Mazaroff fails to return to the inn and his disappearance is unexplained. Holt meets Sheila and tells her of Mazaroff's disap-(Verner Courthope) shooting box hoping to find some word of Mazaroff. There they meet Mr. Armintrade and Doctor Eccle-share. Holt is questioned by Po-lice Sergeant Manners and a reporter, Bownas. Mazaroff's murporter, Bownas. Mazaroff's mur-dered body is found. Crole, Ma-zaroff's lawyer, and Maythorne, private detective, arrive. Valu-able diamonds that Mazaroff usu-ally carried are missing. Mrs. Elphinstone scoffs at the idea that Mazaroff is Merchison and produces apparent proofs of his death. A gun stolen from Musdeath. A gun, stolen from Mus-grave, is found at the scene of the murder.

The scrap of paper was a receipt for registered letter, dispatched from Cape Town, and addressed to the Imperial Banking Corporation of South Africa, 695 Lombard street, London, Maythorne pointed to the date-January 17-on the postmark.

"Nine months since," he remarked. "How long had Mazaroff been in Eng-(and when you met him at the Cecil?" "A few weeks," I replied. "As far as I know."

"I know," said Crole, "He came to England in July-about the end of the month."

"Then the letter, or packet, or whatever it was, to which this receipt refers, was sent off from Cape Town to the London branch of this bank some months before Mazaroff came here,' observed Maythorne. He turned the receipt over. "There's an indorsement on the back-letters and a figure," he continued. "See? BL. D. 1. What's that mean, I wonder?'

He carefully put away the receipt. "We'll just keep the knowledge of that to ourselves, for the present," he said. "If the police come here this afternoon, as they're pretty sure to, after that gun business, and want to examine his effects, let 'em. But I'll keep this scrap of paper to myself-

I want to work things up from it."

He gave us a candid, confidential smile

"If you really want to know," he re plied, "I neither doubt it nor agree with it. At present I don't know where we are. I'd like to know a lot of things yet. In particular-who-was the man that Mazaroff said he wanted to see, hereabouts? Did he see him? If so, when-and where? If he hadn't seen him, was he on his way to see him at the time of the murder? Again -does this man, whoever he is, know Mazaroff as Mazaroff or as Merchison? Was Mazaroff murdered as Mazaroff, an unknown man here, or as Merchison, a man who had been known here?

"Ah!" muttered Crole. "My question !"

CHAPTER IV

The York Solicitor

The inquest was duly opened next morning. Crole, as a solicitor whom he had employed in London, and I. as his traveling companion, identified the dead man as Salim Mazaroff, and told what we knew about him: Eccleshare and the local doctor testified as to the cause of his death : the men who had found the body at Reiver's den gave evidence as to the circumstances under which they came across it. At this stage an interruption came through the entrance of Mr. and Mrs. Elphinstone and Sheila, with whom appeared an elderly man of professional bearing; Manners, by whom I was sitting, whispered to me that this was Mr. Wetherby, Mrs. Elphinstone's lawyer.

Wetherby lost no time in letting the authorities know why he and his party were there.

He said, addressing the coroner, "I wish to make an application to you on behalf of my client, Mrs. Elphinstone, of Marrasdale tower. To support it, I shall have-very briefly-to refer to some past history. Mrs. Elphinstone, as Miss Jean Linton, was married, some twenty-three or four years ago, to a Mr. Andrew Merchison who formerly had some connection with this neighborhood. The marriage was not a success, and to put matters plainly, Merchison, within a comparatively short time and after making due provision for his wife, deserted her, and, it was believed, went off to Old Mr. Hassendeane, whom I had noticed when Crole and I entered the room, had risen from his seat, and was smiling informingly at the coroner. "Where did you see this man, Mr. Hassendeane?" interrupted the coroner.

"I saw him the night on which he evidently met his death," replied the old gentleman. "It was in Birnside village street, near my house." "And you are quite positive on this matter of identity?" "I am absolutely positive! The

Then Andrew Merchison will be found, and in a rather jocular fashion he remarked that up to then, as he had no children, and no relations, he had never made a will, but he now desired to do so. He produced a sheet of paper on which he had written out his wishes, handed it to me, and asked if I could put it into shipshape form. I told him I would have the will prepared for him, and he was to call and execute it at any time after three o'clock that afternoon. He returned to my office at half past three, when the will was ready for his signature. He duly appended that and carried the will off with him. It was not until some days later that I found that I had omitted to give him his own original draft, which I found lying amongst some papers on my desk. I went round to the North Eastern hotel with it, myself, but learned then that Mr. Mazaroff and his friend Mr. Holt had left for Durham and the north, leaving no address. I therefore locked up the draft. Yesterday I read in the newspapers the various accounts of what had happened here, and as I particularly noticed that Mr. Mazaroff had been robbed of his papers as well as his money and valuables, I thought it my duty to come here at once and tell what I knew."

"Much obliged to you, I'm sure, Mr. Postlethwaite," the coroner said. "Now, according to you the deceased man carried off this will in his pocket. It appears from the evidence that everything he had on him-money, valuables, papers-was stolen, most likely by the murderer or murderers: presumably the will has gone with the rest. However, it's something to know that such a document was in existence. You say he told you he was a wealthy man. Did he say how wealthy?"

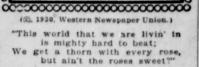

"Yes. He told me he was worth about eight hundred thousand pounds." The coroner leaned back in his chair, put the tips of his fingers together, and looked round the court, Then he turned again to the witness. "I think we'll trouble you to read that draft, Mr. Postlethwaite," be said, quietly. Postlethwaite read-amidst a dead silence: "This is the last will of me, Salim Mazaroff, of the Hotel Cecil, London, in the county of Middlesex and of 941 Darling street, Cape Town, South Africa. I devise and bequeath all my estate and effects, real and personal, which I may die possessed of or entitled to unto Mervyn Holt, of 559a Jermyn street, London, absolutely, and I hereby appoint the said Mervyn Holt sole executor of this my will and I revoke all former wills and codicils." This was all. But I was suddenly conscious that all eyes had turned from the witness to me. The first thing that I was accurately conscious of after the crushing shock of the York solicitor's announce-

You are quite capable of watching keenly for your own interests, a though much inclined to conform to the conventions, and to consider what people will think.

Possibly you have already learned what a curious and different effect you can produce upon people by simply arranging your hair in different ways. With your hair straight, or nearly so, everybody is impressed with your primness and even your spirituality; but when you curl or permanent wave your hair, Virginia, you are devastating in some quarters.

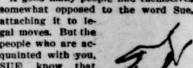

The middle syllable of your name GIN, may have something to do with this intoxication on the part of others, when you curl your hair. But the indications of such a syllable bring in a trace of soberness, that causes you to weigh and consider.

If this careful thought is applied too much to the discernment of others' opinions of you, it tends to make you sycophantical.

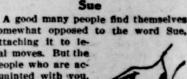

The IA on the end of your name is really a sort of aspiration, a look toward God. Now if I can inspire you to use VIR for virility, and virginity; to use the GLN for balance and judgment; and then cause you to look toward God, in the IA, I shall have done considerable.

You are so original and unique in some of the things you do, that you are a fitting namesake for the first white child born in America, Virginia Dare.

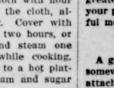

Your genius is best applied along the lines of humanitarian works, gatherings, organization, or people in some reformative cause. That is, this may be a good application for you until you marry, but your best and greatest vocation, Virginia, is to take your place in the world as the wonderful mother you are so well able to be.

Sue not only rhymes with "you," but in both the ancient Greek and the Latin, has a direct meaning of "you" and "your." Your soft but capable hand is pe-culiarly fitted to either carve out a career, or to mother a baby. This mothering ability applies, even if the baby happens to be a grown-up man. Taking the separate letters of your name, S brings in the subtle side of your nature, as well as the smooth and soothing side. It indicates those currents within you, also, which in your physical body may change to stoutness. Watch the diet a little there. Among the ancients the II moont "and," and was used as a conjunction, something as we use it to join the phrases in speech. To the mystic. the U signifies that which descends, hesitates, and returns upward from whence it came. It also signifies the large part of you. The last letter of your name, E, was represented in the ancient He-brew by their letter HE, which meant "the window," or source of the light. This would bring out your writing ability, in which, if you persist, you can become well-known. So go right on, Sue, be encouraged and know that you have background enough, both ancient and modern to be indomitable, if you will just keep on keeping on.

The police came to the Woodcock a little later. They asked a lot of questions of Musgrave about his gun, and of me and of Webster about our move ments on the night of the murder, of Crole about the dead man's identity and position; of me again about the money and valuables he was likely to have on him. And in the course of their investigations a fact came out of which I, until then, had been unaware It turned out that after dinner on the night of the murder, while I was busied in writing some private letters, Mazaroff, who was naturally a sociable man, had strolled into the bar-parlor of the Woodcock, where a highly dlversified assemblage had gatheredfarmers, cattle dealers, drovers, idlers, all homeward bound from Cloughthwaite fair. There he had made himself very agreeable, and had treated the entire company to drinks and cigars, which he paid for with a fivepound note, taken, said the barmaid, from a notecase that seemed to be pretty full, and in open view of anybody and everybody.

This bit of news appeared to give considerable satisfaction and even rellef to the police officials, and Manvers, who lingered behind when his superiors went away, found it imposelble to refrain from communicating to me his belief that they were on the Fight line of pursuit.

I communicated the police sergeant's r stions to Crole and Maythorne. Maytoorne seemed to understand Man pers' standpoint.

"Following the most probable line." be remarked. "A sensible one, too. Here's an evidently wealthy man, traveling in a luxurious car of his own, guts up at a roadside inn, goes into a public bar-parlor, lets it be seen that he's lots of money on him, and strolls out on a lonely moor after night has fallen. What more likely than that one of the men before whom he's fust pulled out his purse should slip ofter him, murder him, and rob him?'

"With Musgrave's gun?" I asked. "Nothing out of the way about that Sttle detail !" said Maythorne. "What was easier than for the murderer to to down the gun from those hooks, ad slip out after Mazaroff?"

"That would presuppose a knowl ge that the gun was there," rerked Crole.

The newcomer pulled out a cardcase and, advancing to the head of the table, whispered a few words in the coroner's ear. I saw a look of some thing between surprise and perplexity cross the coroner's face.

"We seem to be dealing with a strangely mysterious matter, quite apart from the death," he remarked. "This gentleman"-he glanced at the card-"Mr. Stephen Postlethwaite, solicitor, from York-tells me that he saw accounts of this case in the papers vesterday, and has hurried here to give some information. I suppose we'd better have it now?"

Township Play Centers

New Recreational Idea That part of the Michigan Thumb tributary to Port Huron has developed a new recreational idea. The people re organizing what they call "Townhip Playdays." Maybe the rest of lichigan will be interested to see. that comes of it.

The township is the oldest, the simlest and most democratic political nit, but it seldom has served the purses of a social group. The school district with its centrally located schoolhouse was more convenient.

But good roads and transportation are contracting big areas and little ones, and people more widely separated are coming to regard themselves as belonging to one neighborhood. Obviously if the Thumb folks succeed in getting together by townships for their "playdays." the very size of the gatherings will lend an atmosphere of success to the undertakings.

It is purposed to provide games and sports for all the people, young and old, big and little, men and women. And there are to be professional sport directors to teach the backward how to play and to inspire all with that spirit of co-operation which will enable them to pluy together.

There may be more to this thing than appears at a glance. It is a capital idea to play with .- Detroit News.

Disadvantage to Have

Trees Too Near House The proper placement of trees in regard to the house is a problem all by itself. No doubt there is something extremely cozy-looking in a house tucked immediately against a tree, but the overhanging branches tend to cut down the chimney draft, offer more fire hazard, in case of lightning, and in other ways prove a detriment.

Trees placed at least 20 feet from a house offer better background values. and throw even better shade. Their picturesque or "homey" effect is the one thing desired above all; to secure this, trees in front of a house ought to be to one side, rather than directly in front. in order to frame the house. Thus two trees, one to either side, offer the maximum effect, in the frontal approach.

Large trees to the rear give back ground effect to be secured in no other way. Even here the center of lawns are best left clear, and the trees kept to the sides, unless they are at the extreme back limits of the lot, where they preferably may be in the center.

Making House a Home

The house is the center of the little portion of the earth's surface we call home. To it lead the drives and paths; around it lie the lawns and gardens that mean so much to the hours of our recreation and delight. To make the surroundings a picture of harmony is to make the house

BIGGEST MOMENT HAD COME

MAI

(C) by D. J. Walsh.)

ARK MASON felt that his "big moment" had arrived the very instant he met Sallie West. Such a little doll of a girl she was with her great questioning eyes and her fluffy hair that needed no artificial wave to make it curl on a wet day !

The consensus concerning Sallie was, to his sorrow, that she was a useless, helpless little thing that would be of little help in any man's life except for ornamental purposes,

Because he knew that Sallie would be at the Mannering house-warming and because he felt that it would be only wisdom to avoid being with her too much, Mark Mason took his small nephew with him in his low-swung sport roadster. He was accepted with shouts of joy from the others in the party when he turned up the natural roadway to the lodge, as they called it. "What are you going to do with the boy?" they all called merrily. Mark West packed the six-year-old out of the seat serenely. "Give him a good time in the woods," he replied "We'll bring you folks a calmly. string of fish for your supper tomorrow night, eh. Bobsie?"

"Betcha," Bobble answered gravely. It wasn't much of a lodge yet. A small square of ground had been cleared, with a log cabin at one side and a garage much larger than the cabin at the other end. Only the central living rooms and a half dozen sleeping rooms had been finished thus far, but the Mannerings were so in love with their woods home that they had decided to have the house-warming now and then another one later when the house was completed. on

"Isn't this just like the forest where Goldilocks found the home of the three bears?" Sallie asked Bob.

Mark clenched his teeth. This was more than he had bargained for. He had never seen sallie before with children and the fact that Bob followed her about doggishly made it difficult for Mark to keep away from her. And, after all, that was the reason that he had brought Bob alongso that he wouldn't see to much of Sallie.

When evening came Bob suddenly recalled the fact that he had a mother. "I want my mother !" he kept moaning over and over again. "I thought you wanted to come with Uncle Mark and fish and swim and be a big boy !" reproved his uncle crossly. They were playing bridge before the great fireplace and Bob had been sitting on the floor playing contentedly until he wanted to be tucked into bed night. For a m r the

Small-Town Park With a Big-City Air

N PRESENT size, attendance, and administrational activity, our second youngest national park Bryce canyon, Utah, is a small affair-so small, in fact, that its doings are suggestive of the adventures of a smalltown police or fire department. If parks were inclined to be jealous of each other, its bigger brothers could laugh off the mention of Bryce as easily as a physician of forty years ago could have passed by the name of Rochester, Minn. But forty years from now-well, you'd better plap to visit this "Art Gallery of the Ages" much earlier than that, because some of these days there's going to be an awful traffic jam, even out there in Utah!

Bryce canyon, which became a national monument in 1923 and graduated into full-fledged parkdom in 1928, is one of the smallest of the entire list of twenty-one, having only twenty-two square miles' area in comparison to Yellowstone's 3.426 or Mount McKinley's 2,645. It is not even big enough to have its own superintendent-in fact having only a minority interest in its superintendent. its supervisor, its chief ranger, and its chief clerk They are borrowed from Zion national bark, 54 miles away by air and 158 by road (although a new and shorter highway is now practically completed). Bryce has no animal life, with the possible exception of a few deer; there were no animals to start with, and so far, apparently, not even the Union Pacific hotel manager has happened to think of borrowing some. The park hasn't even a ranger, except the two temporarily employed in the summer-one to give hikes and lectures, and the other to be policeman for visiting automobile traffic (and to shoo the neighboring ranchers' live stock home occasionally)! But in spite of these small beginnings, this toddling tot of the park system is dreaming hig dreams Why? Because the place has not only beauty but a fascinating individuality, too; also a touch of drama There's something about that awesome two-by three-mile-horseshoe-shaped chasm of erosion's most fautastic forms, that grips and holds you; they stand like a petrified march of wooden soldiers on-dress-parade, and there's a mysterious appeal about them that makes you want to stand guard with them through all eternity! There is no more restless creature in the world, probably, than the American motorist;

but of some 17,000 who visited the

Gold Production Not Equal to the Demand

gold shortage is threatening the world. The peak of gold produ was reached in 1915, totaling $450, 000,000. Since then it has gradually dropped until last year only $415,-000,000 worth was produced. No important fresh discoveries have been made in recent years and old fields are gradually being worked out. There is plenty of gold in the world for all normal purposes but so much of it is hoarded away in the form of money in banks and as jewelry by wealthy families. India has absorbed vast quantities of the world's gold, being hearded by its petty princes and used for dowries, bridal gifts, etc. Twice the amount of gold is being used in jewelry today as compared with 20 years ago .- Capper's Weekly.

America's Gold Producer

Ontario can still boast America's richest gold producer in its rightly famous Hollinger mine inasmuch as that mine has yielded, up to the end of 1928, gold to the value of $145, 000,000. The production of so much gold has entailed the mining and the milling of 17,000,000 tons of ore. The Hollinger's present subsurface workings, if placed end to end, would reach from New York to Albany and a little beyond, a distance of nearly 150 miles, and its underground railroad system has a length of more than 91 miles.

Where He Drew the Line

A fine example of self-denial was that exhibited by a rotund Detroiter. Although he had had only a light snack, consisting of two English mutton chops, weighing about a pound each, seven broiled kidneys, eight or nine broiled mushrooms, five ears corn on the cob, a sheaf of aspara gus, six rolls, a bowl of soup, ten crackers, a quarter-pound of cheese and four cups of coffee, he stead fastly refused potatoes. "Potatoes be explained, "are fattening."

Only 25 Minutes Married

It is easy to get divorces in Rue sla. The magazine Time gives the following example: "This week a Russian couple set a new record in the brevity of a married life. Twenty-five minutes after they had been made man and wife they came back to the registry and got a divorce. They said they could not agree of where to live."

The Mimic World

The stage is referred to as the legitimate stage in the sense of its being normal, regular, conformable to a recognized standard type. Originally the legitimate drama was that body of plays, Shakespearean or other, that have a recognized theatrical and literary merit.

Negotiated Famous Treaty J. Q. Adams, Henry Clay and Albert Gallatin were the American commissioners who concluded the Treaty of Ghent, which ended the War of 1812, in 1815.

Road Runner Unchanged

From Pleistocene Time? The long-legged road runner, a bird whose habitat is in the southwestern part of the United States, has resisted evolutionary tendencies and remained practically unchanged since Pleistocene time, perhaps 100,000 years ago, according to a University of California graduate after a careful comparison of the long-legged road runner with those of similar birds found in the Pleistocene tar beds of Rancho La Brea, Los Angeles.

The study was made by Leigh Marian Larson from specimens furnished by the University of California museum of vertebrate zoology and by Dr. Loye Miller, professor of biology at the University of California, at Los Angeles,

In explanation of the problem presented by the road runner, Mr. Larson says:

"It may be assumed that the modern road runner is the result of a marked change from the remote common cuckoo ancestry by gradually increasing leg development with a corresponding reduction of the wigg elements. Although Pleistocene is relatively close to us geologically, there have been faunal changes since then, and in some instances, it is judged by some students, evolutionary changes. The bird branch of the theoretical evolutionary tree was the latest group to separate from the reptilian stock, and so the evolutionary history of birds is comparatively late. A degree of change since Pleistocene might therefore be a logical presumption, and it has been truly a home. Does your front en trance, a most prominent picture, have that air of both welcome and dignity so much desired? Are those paths and drives bordered with ever green hedges as well as jour mee and perennial gardens? If so, you are fortunate indeed, but remember, no place should be considered complete until the patriarch of the evergreen tribe, the specimen box, is planted -Exchange.

Little Town's Advantage

Contrasted with the clamor and commotion of the big cities, life along any "Main street" is better for anyone than living in the city The changes in social life make amusement avail able to the "small town" resident No one wants a stendy diet of one thing, and the small community offers a variety that the "big city" cannot give.

Homes and Credit

There are two kinds of credit. One is constructive, the purchase that outlives the debt ; the other is destructive. the purchase that is used before the debt is paid Credit is becoming more and more a question of character rather than collateral. Permanency of the family, the fact that they own their own home, is one of the principal standards by which credit is measured.

Improvement Always Possible

Rational planning is good, even for the city or town that is not in process of marked development. Much can ne done with existing conditions by way of Improving traffic facilities, establishing order, eliminating unsightifness, providing heauty and adopting desirable regulation of signs, bill boards, building and remodeling.

Marble for Outdoor Use

The desirability of marble for the garden does not end with its distinctive beauty ... for its unusual weathering qualities, its ability to withstand extreme changes of temperature and its imperviousness to moistture make marble the most practical materials for outdoor ornamen tation.

Money Well Invested Money spent in home modernization has a definite social value. This appect must never be overlooked when onsidering this most important sub was sorry that he had brought the child. His sister hadn't wanted Bob to come. In fact, she had questioned him closely about his reason for this sudden affection toward Bob.

"Now, I'll take good care of him and bring him back Monday morning." Mark had told him. "It'll give the child a dandy week end where there are real woods for miles and miles in every direction."

"Mind you, don't let anything happen to him," she had said the last moment before they had left.

"Here, Mark, take my hand, and I'll put him to bed," Sallie said suddenly. Mark took her cards and dropped into her chair, trying not to notice the broad smiles on the faces of the other three at the table. In the room off the gallery, where she had taken Bobbie. Mark could hear her singing a little song about three little kittens who had lost their mittens and Bobbie's contented murmurs came now and again. Then a scream startled them all galvanically.

"Oh!" screamed Sallie. It's a forest fire! Look! Look!"

There was an instant of silence and then a mad rush toward the door. "Get the cars out of the garage." said Mannering, "and we'll make it all right!" But the opposite end of the clear ing was already in flames that leaped thirty and forty feet into the air. Sparks showered down. Roaring almost like that of surf filled the air and acrid smoke filled their nostrils and mouths so that speech was almost impossible.

No one waited for any one else Primeval days had returned and each one flung himself or himself into the darkness, with self-preservation as the only thought of the moment.

Sallie alone remained behind, her great eyes seeming to question wonderingly what should be done. Even in that moment of tense fear Mark could not help but admire her as she stood with her arm thrown across the child's shoulders protectively.

"Run, Sallie, run !" Mark urged her. "I'll carry Bob !"

"But where will you carry him?" she asked quietly. "In all of this forest there is no place of shelter from forest fire. Everything will burn-" "Alice didn't want me to bring Bob," said Mark, "and now-now-

"Down near the garage are the carpenters' ladders," she interrupted. "You stay right here, Bob, and don't you move! De you understand? We'll

"With reference to the road runner then, certain questions come to mind. First, whether the Pleistocene road runner had more powerful and therefore more useful wings, and less developed legs, than the road runner of the present time? Second, has the road runner carried on further development since Pleistocene, or has it been a perfectly stable form for some 100,000 years?"-Boston Herald.

proffered in some instances.

The Failure

Mayor Thompson, welcoming the Australian boys' band to Chicago, said in the course of his address:

"America is so rich in opportunities that the man who fails today is likely to resemble Judson Slosson.

"Judson Slosson ran the general store in Croydon Four Corners. He was dozing on the sidewalk in front of the store one balmy afternoon, his chair tilted back against the wall, when a boy wakened him. "'Kin ye let me have half a pound of dried beef, Mr. Slosson?' the boy said.

Judson got up. He stretched himself and yawned. Then he slouched into the store grumbling: "'Consarn the luck! Nobody but me sells dried beef in this old burg, I suppose.'"

Like Breaking a Bill

Franklin P. Adams says that the best child story that he ever heard is this one. He was dining with a few members of the Cornell university faculty at the home of Dr. Louis Agassiz Feurtes. During the meat course the shrill voice of the 7-yearold Feartes daughter was heard from the upper regions, "Mamma," Mrs. Feurtes elected to ignore the appeal. "Mamma !"

"Yes?" called Mrs. Feurtes from the table, while conversation suspended. "There's nothing but clean towers in the bathroom. Should I start one?"-Montreal Star.

Differences in Welding

An electric weld is one in which the parts to be joined are heated to fusion by an electric arc or by the passage of a large current through the unction. Oxyacetylene welding is the process of welding metal by means of an acetylene flame, raised to a high emperature by oxygen, conveyed to a ourner or torch with a suitable combining nozzle. The acetylene is com-monly supplied in steel cylinders.

park last year, at least a third stayed over long enough to be counted at the ranger's evening lecture. And more than one-fourth of the total summer registration actually followed the guide around, and into, the canyon on his daily nature hikes!

The nation is fortunate in that its two newest parks, Bryce canyon and the Teton playground, are of such superiative individuality and therefore of national appeal. There are three or four parks in the system already. unfortunately, which seem to have only a nominal and therefore regrettable claim to that distinction; and congress is constantly besieged with a iditional demands for park creation which would flatter local prides but which reflect little if any reason for national attention or expenditure. Make state parks out of them, a thou sand times yes; and some, like thris bad or Mammoth caves or the Great Smoky mountain region. might presymably sit unabashed in the sa distinguished family circle with Yel towstone or Bryce or Yosemitte of the Grand canyon; but as for the purely local proteges, here's hoping for statesmen with the courage to forget them! But back to Bryce. "Beg. borrow or steal." summarized one visitor, "If you must ride on a pullman, a day couch, or the humpers ; go in an auto a bus. or a huggy, or just plain hoof it, but do not fall to visit Zion park Kalbah forest. Bryce canyon, and Cedar breaks Words are inadequate See them yourself.". (© 1910 Western Newspaper Union.)

Flavored Meat Favored Efforts to give the and especial fia tors to meat by artificial means are reported to have been successful in Europe recently. The food has found such favor that it is predicted that cutlets having the taste of fruits of berries are an early possibility.

"Passing the Buck"

Things got so noisy in the flat up-stairs last night that I finally, went up and knocked on the door.

"Boggs," I said, "here's something I want you to read." And I handed him a sarcastic article I had clipped out of a humorous paper about the family upstairs. "He, beh, heh!" he said when be had finished it. "That's pretty good. Lemme have it, willya? I wanta show it to the family upstairs."-Life.
