Farm Board's Experiment in Stabilizing the Price of Wheat May Succeed.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

U NCLE SAM, through the medium of the farm board's stabilization corporation, is engaged in another noble experiment, namely, the support of the domestic wheat market to keep prices from experiencing unwarranted declines. Thus far the experiment seems to be successful, for purchases by the corporation maintained the price on the Chicago Board of Trade around the 73-cent level, while wheat in foreign markets was slumping far below that point.

Before the week closed, it was estimated, the stabilization corporation was holding about 100,000,000 bushels, and it was said in Washington that the federal farm board would ask congress in the next session for another appropriation of $100,000,000 to continue the purchasing policy. The coarse grains committee of the board at a session in the Capital strongly endorsed the policy adopted by the corporation. It pointed out that prices of coarse grains had failed to reflect the shortage caused by last summer's drought, owing to the weakness in the wheat market. A check to this decline has been essential if coarse grain prices are to show the strength warranted by the feed shortage this year, the committee declared.

It recommittee declared.

It recommended that the Trensury safeguard the interests of domestic producers of coarse grain "by levying the maximum duty on all mixtures of feedstuffs."

The government's stabilization efforts were at first severely condemned by many grain men, but their success in the admitted crisis brought about a decided change in opinion and won general support for the plan. However, there remains the question of the disposal of the great surplus accumulated by the corporation, Whether any considerable part of it can be sold abroad is problematical, for other countries are getting ready to prevent this by anti-dumping legislation and decrees.

PREMIERS and bankers of the western provinces of Canada are doing what they can to restore wheat prices and prevent a recurrence of the slump, and with a measure of success. On the Winnipeg grain exchange prices were rising and greater confidence was manifest. The leaders up there declared the Canadian wheat pool would not be broken by the crisis.

The premiers of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan were in conference in Montreal and suggested that the government set a temporary mimimum of about 70 cents a bushel. A dollar mimimum, however, is the goal of Saskatchewan farmers, and wheat growers of Alberta urged a mimimum of $1.15. Any plan for stabilization by the Dominion government must await the return of Premier Bennett from London.

THE immediate reason for the farm board's action is thus set forth by an expert:

The western wheat co-operatives, both in the United States and Canada, have borrowed heavily from banks. As wheat prices declined, and the margin of collateral got thinner and thinner, the co-operatives were faced with just one thing—the forced selling of millions of bushels of wheat. A drop of a few cents more a bushel might bring on a crisis of major pro-

American millers have been contending with plenty of cancelled orders upon the theory that wheat can be bought much cheaper at a later date.

Possibly 100,000.000 bushels of wheat were affected in these two situations. So, Mr. Legge and his associates of the farm board again entered the market to stabilize prices.

WITH a stirring and optimistic speech President Hoover opened Wednesday night the White House conference on child health and rector.

tion which undertakes to develop into a national welfare program the suggestions he made a year ago. Twelve hundred experts have been working on the problems he set forth at that time and it was for this conference to co-ordinate their solutions.

When the big gathering had been called to order by Secretary Wilbur, its chairmain, Mr. Hoover delivered his address in which he asked for safeguards and services to childhood beyond the reach of the individual parent and which can be provided only by the community, the state or the nation. "If we could have but one generation of properly born, trained, educated and healthy children" he said, "a thousand other problems of government would vanish." His solution for the questions concerning childhood which he said should stir a nation was "much learning and much action."

FOLLOWING the collapse of the investment banking house of Caldwell & Co. of Nashville, Tenn., more than fifty banks have closed or suspended payment. Most of them are i Tennessee, but some are in Arkansas. Kentucky and Missouri. The affairs of Rogers Caldwell, head of the investment concern and formerly regarded as a financial wizard, had been in parlous state since September, when a state bank examination of a subsidiary of his company, the Bank of Tennessee, caused the authorities to require a deposit of $3,840,000 in securities to cover liabilities. Incidentally, the attorney general of Tennessee now announces these securities are missing.

Thursday morning the Central Bank and Trust company, largest financial institution in Asheville, N. C., failed to open for business. A notice was posted stating the bank was closed by order of the board of directors "for the conservation of its assets." The bank's latest statement of condition showed deposits of more than $18,000,000.

William Virgil Bell, president of the First National bank of Horse Cave, Ky., which closed early in the week, committed suicide by hanging.

TRUSTEES and faculty of the University of Chicago have sanctioned a radical experiment in education. The traditionally required four-year course will be abandoned and a system substituted whereby a student may be graduated whenever able to pass examination requirements. The undergraduate school and the graduate college, as such, will be abolished. The institution hereafter will consist of the professional schools and five divisions in arts—the bumanities, the biological sciences, the social sciences, the physical sciences and the college.

President Robert 'faynard Hutchins says of the reorganization:

"It means that we shall be able to co-ordinate our teaching and to co-ordinate our scholarship. The student who hitherto has been prevented by departmental limitations from working in fields related to his special interest will get such an opportunity from the divisional program. Co-ordination achieved by divisional program means a saving to the university in that duplication of courses will be eliminated.

"Our research program will be aided because the divisional organization puts in one group all the faculty members who have a common interest and relation in their work.

"Those students who wish to obtain only a general education may get it as fast as they are able, and if that is all they want, they may depart from the university with honor. By enabling a student to acquire a general education as quickly as his ability permits, a considerable saving in time should result for those who wish to go into professions such as law or

ENGLAND is hearing some unpleasant statements concerning her rule of India from the native delegates to the roundtable conference in London. And those delegates, representing the princes, the Hindus, the Moslems, the Brahmins and the untouchables, are united in the demand that India be granted at least dominion status with federal rule.

Among the distinguished Indians who voiced their country's wishes last week were the maharajah of Bikaner, noted fighting prince; Sir Tej Bahandur Sapru, leader of the Nationalists;

Mr. Jayakar, a brilliant young lawyer, Dr. B. S. Moonje, a Hindu teader; Muhammed Ali, prominent Mosiem, and the beautiful Begum Shah Nawaz.

The attitude of the Tories of England was set forth by Lord Peel, former secretary of state for India, who surprisingly asserted that no promise of dominion status, now or in the near future, had been given by Great Brit-After defending the British rule in India he suggested that a beginning be made by giving the provinces a certain amount of autonomy, while maintaining a strong central government unchanged from the present one. There would be time enough to change the central government after the provinces had proved their capacity to rule, he said.

STRIKES and riots prevailed in many cities of Spain for a week and strenuous efforts were made by the Republicans and Communists to convert them into a political demonstration that would overthrow the monarchy. But the government adopted stern measures and succeeded in quelling the disorders. The biggest of the strikes was in Barcelona, always a center of disturbance, but after several days its abandonment was ordered by the labor federation that started it. In Madrid and Salamanca there were strikes by students, who demanded a republic. The wiser antimonarchists in Spain believe they will succeed before very long in their aims but that the time is not yet ripe.

STENIO VINCENT, editor of the Haiti Journal, a lawyer and former diplomat, was elected President of Haiti by the national assembly to succeed Eugene Roy. Vincent is one of the most strenuous opponents of American occupation and his victory was rather a surprise. He is the first regularly elected President of the republic since American intervention in Following the recommendation of the Hoover commission that went of American commissioner general be terminated, Brig. GEN. CHARLES P. SUMMERALL on Thursday concluded his four-year term as chief of staff of the army, and was succeeded by Maj. Gen. Douglas MacArthur. In his farewell statement General Summerall spoke enthusiastically of the reorganizations that have given the country its best organized army since the armistice, and gave high praise for the officers' and enlisted men's intelligence, loyalty and devotion to duty.

RESULTS of the prohibition referendum held by the American Bar association show that 13,779 of the members voting are in favor of repeal of the Eighteenth amendment, while 6.340 are against repeal. Judge Orrie L. Phillips, chairman of a subcommittee that handled the matter, says that whether the association, in view of the referendum result, will take steps toward repeal of the Eighteenth amendment probably will not be known until the next annual meeting in Atlantic City next September. He also said it was possible that no definite action would be taken then.

SMUGGLING of liquor and allens by airplanes from Canada by two powerful combines has been exposed with the indictment of fourteen men by a federal grand jury at Detroit. Although the operations of the flying rum runners were confined for the most part to the Detroit area, plane loads of whisky and fancy liquors occasionally were flown across the border direct to fields in the vicinity of the larger cities in Ohio, Indiana, and Illinois. It is charged that allens sometimes were carried as extra cargo on the liquor trips, and that special trips were occasionally made for allens.

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

WAS just 40 years ago that Sitting Bull came to the end of his trail of implacable hostility to the white man and the fortieth anniversary of his death finds a white man engaged in writing the biography of this famous red man. From the Houghton Mifflin company comes the announcement that the recent award of one of the Guggenheim fellowships to Stanley Vestal, already well known as a biographer of Kit Carson, will enable him to devote himself exclusively to work on his forthcoming volume on the life of Tatanka Yotanka (Sitting Bull) of the Hunkpapa Teton Sloux.

Sitting Bull was killed near his home on the Grand river in North Dakota, December 15, 1890. By the same ironical fate which overtook two other outstanding irreconcilables-or "Indian patriots," as many people choose to regard them-King Philip of the Wampanoags and Pontiac of the Ottawas, Sitting Bull met his death at the hands of men of his own race.

Today out on the Standing Rock reservation lives an eighty-year-old Indian who was visited by Marshal Foch and Queen Marie of Rumania during their tours of this country in recent years and who, a few months back, was received at the White House by President Hoover. Red Tomahawk is his name and, although he is worthy enough of honor as a brave warrior in the old days of intertribal warfare and as an Indian policeman who was often called upon for duty filled with hardship and danger, he has been widely advertised and is best known to the white man of today for the doubtful distinction of being "the slayer of Sitting Bull."

When Sitting Bull died there were those who halled the event as the end of an era. For popular imagination had fastened upon this tribal leader of the Sloux as a symbol of the threat which had hung over the American pioneer for generations and in a larger sense as the symbol of an ever-present danger to white supremacy on this continent. So his death was looked upon as removing the last obstacle to satisfying the land hunger which had driven the white man westward ever since the earliest days of settlement on the Atlantic seaboard. As a matter of fact it was nothing of the sort. The issue of white vs. red supremacy had been settled long before. In its larger implications, Sitting Bull's death was an echo of a fight that had already been won. Historically it was an anti-climactical ending to the career of an individualist fighting a lost cause. Ethically it was the murder of a caged eagle.

Estimates of Sitting Bull's character and importance vary. He has been called a physical coward and a brave warrior. He has been designated as a great leader and a far-seeing native statesman; and he has been denounced as an impractical schemer, a faker and a fraud. But there is one thing about him upon which both friend and enemy can agree—he never deviated from his distrust of and his dislike for the white man.

There was ample evidence of that hostility dur-ing the wars with the Sioux in the fiftles and six-ties, culminating in the defeat of Gen. George A. Custer and the annihilation of a part of his con mand, the Seventh cavalry, at the battle of the Little Big Horn in Montana on June 25, 1876. Sitting Bull's part in that tragic affair has been a subject for much dispute, but popular opinion made him the arch-enemy, even though the actual leaders of the Indian fighting men that day were Gall of the Hunkpapas, Crazy Horse of the Oglalas and Two Moons of the Chevennes, According to the "popular idea" he ran away at the first attack, was "making medicine" in the hills during the battle and returned later to claim credit for it. But there is evidence from the Sioux that he helped repel the Reno attack, even though he was not present when Custer's immediate command was overwhelmed. Whatever had been Sitting Bull's role at the Little Big Horn, his prestige among the Sloux seems to have been enhanced by the outcome of the Custer battle, but it was rapidly diminished by the vigorous campaigning of Gen. Nelson A. Miles, who defeated various detachments of the hostiles and finally drove Sitting Bull and his followers across the border into Canada. There he remained until 1881 when he surrendered at Fort Buford under promise of amnesty, a promise which was immediately violated when he was confined as a prisoner of war at Fort Randall. Finally with his band of Hunkpapas he was settled near the Grand river on the Standing Rock reservation.

At this time there was great unrest and dissatisfaction among the Sloux. Penned up on small reservations these people who had once roamed over a veritable empire suffered from short ra tions, doled out to them by their conquerors, and a growing sense of the indignities to which they had been subjected. At this crisis there appeared a half-breed Indian in Nevada proclaiming a new order of things for the red man. A Messiah was coming to overthrow the white man and return to the red man all that had once been his. In preparation for this coming of their savior, the Indians were instructed to inaugurate certain ceremonials, chief among them the Ghost dance.

Whether Sitting Bull was a genuine believer in the Ghost Dance religion or saw in espousing it a chance to regain some of his lost prestige among his people and an opportunity for rallying the Sloux in another effort to resist the whites is difficult to say. But it was probably the latter. The result, so far as he was concerned, was to focus the growing suspicion and alarm of the government upon him, especially after Sitting Bull at a Ghost dance in his camp broke the peace pipe which he had kept sacredly since his surrender at Fort Buford saying that he was ready to die for this new religion if need be. Upon hearing of this Maj. James McLaughlin, agent on the Standing Rock reservation, recom mended to the Indian department that Sitting Bull arrested and removed from the reservation. He renewed the recommendation after a personal visit to Sitting Bull's camp convinced him that the latter was determined to stir up trouble and perhaps precipitate an outbreak. But the agent's nendations were disregarded by the acting Indian commissioner and on December 12 the War department instructed Col. R. C. Drum, comi ing officer at Fort Yates, to make the arrest, calling upon McLaughlin for such co-operation and assistance as would be needed.

McLaughlin conferred with Drum and found him fully in agreement as to the course of procedure. It was to make the arrest on the next ration day, December 20, and the Indian police were to do it with the soldiers from Fort Yates at a convenient distance to aid in case Sitting Bull's followers attempted a rescue. However, on December 14 it was discovered that Sitting Bull was preparing to leave the reservation and join a large group of Indians who had stampeded from the Pine Ridge reservation into the Bad Lands upon the approach of troops at Pine Ridge. So McLaughlin and Drum decided to act immediately.

Thirty-nine regular policemen and four specials, commanded by Lieutenant Bull Head and Sergeant Shave Head and Red Tomahawk were ordered to make the arrest early the next morning.

Just after dawn the police reached Sitting Bull's camp and halted before the two houses in which lived the Hunkpapa leader, his two wives and his sons and daughters. Ten policemen by Bull Head and Shave Head entered one of the houses and found there Sitting Bull, his wives and his seventeen-year-old son, Crow Foot. Bull Head told Sitting Bull that he was under arrest and must go to the agency, to which the chief made no objection.

Stories of what happened next there do not agree in all respects. According to the account of Dr. Charles A. Eastman, an educated Sloux and an authoritative writer on the history of his people, Sitting Bull, finding himself "surrounded by armed men and himself led away to he knew not what fate, cried out loudly: "They have taken me: what say you to it? . . . The police harangued the vd in vain; Sitting Bull's blood was up and he again appealed to his men. His adopted brother, the Assinibolne captive whose life he had saved so many years before, was the first to fire. His shot killed Lieutenant Bull Head, who held Sitting Bull by the arm. Then there was a short but sharp conflict, in which Sitting Bull and six of his defenders and six of the Indian police were slain, with many more wounded. The chief's young son, Crow Foot, and his devoted 'brother' died with

Major McLaughlin, in his book "My Friend, the Indian," published several years ago by the Houghton Mifflin company, tells the story thus: "As Sitting Bull stepped out with his captors he walked directly toward the horse, with the evident intention of mounting and accompanying the police. He was some distance from the door when his son, Crow Foot, seeing that the old man intended to make no resistance, began to revile him: 'You call yourself a brave man and you have declared that you would never surrender to a bluecoat, and now you give yourself up to Indians in blue uniforms."

The taunt hit Sitting Bull hard. He looked into the mass of dark excited faces and commenced to talk volubly and shrilly, and there was a menacing movement in the crowd.

"He looked about him and saw his faithful adherents-about one hundred and sixty crazed Ghost Dancers-who would have gone through fire at his bidding. . . . He made up his mind to take his chance and screamed out an order to his people to attack the police. Instantly Catchthe Bear and Strikes the Kettle, who were in the front rank of the crowd, fired at point-blank range, Catch-the-Bear mortally wounding First Lieuten ant Bull Head, and Strikes-the-Kettle shooting First Sergeant Shave Head in the abdomen Bull Head was a few yards to the left and front of Sitting Bull when hit, and immediately wheeling, he shot Sitting Bull through the body, and at the same instant Second Sergeant Red Tomahawk, who with revolver in hand was rear guard. shot him in the right cheek, killing him instantly; the lieutenant, the first sergeant and Sitting Bull falling together." Won't "Play" Typewriter When I was in London in 1928 John Galsworthy showed me the manuscripts of nearly all his books. He cannot dictate and cannot play the typewriter; thus they are all in pen and ink, and their commercial value must be prodigious.

Prof. Carlton Wells of the University of Michigan calls my attention to an article in a review, quoting the Manchester Guardian, as follows:

"They are worth a small fortune and they are certain to appreciate greatly in years () come. No other English writer, with the possible exon of Shaw, has such abroad, and almost every month sees an advance in the prices of his first editions.

"Galsworthy is one of the few modern authors who write everything in their own hand. He once told me that he found it impossible to think with a typewriter in front of him, and he raised his eyes in mock horror when I mentioned the dicta-

Commissar Vilinsky's Soviet squad invades the home of Krassquad invades the home of Krassin, aristocrat at Kazan. Vilinsky insults the daughter, Musia. Commissar Loris is urged to confiscate the home. The family consists of Judge Krassin, Mrs. Krassin, Ilya, former officer, and Musia. Vladimir, former officer, is Musia's fiance. Mrs. Krassin expresses fear for her son's safety. Ilya recognizes in Vilinsky a former dishonest steward. Mrs. Krassin conducts Vilinsky in an inspection of the home and contrives that he shall not see Ilya. trives that he shall not see Ilya The commissar brutally insults Musia. Mrs. Krassin's thoughts are all of Ilya. Musia feels her-self defenseless.

What was to become of her? For the first time in her life she faced peril. or the first time in her life she pondered deeply her place in the world, and her family and its place. In a way, she knew about her father and her mother. She knew that on her mother's side they were a great family-the Vaturlins; and that her mother had married the man who was known is all the conversations of her great relatives merely as "this Mr. Krassin," who was only a member of the small nobility.

It was difficult to think of the solid plain lady who was her mother, as a little mirl; but yet she had the aid of a pastel thich bung on the walls of this very room: a picture of Mrs. Krassin as a child in a low-necked, sleeveless dress, with light brown hair hanging down her back, and a narrow blue ribbon across her forehead, and with a small dog in her hands and a slightly frightened look in her eyes-Mrs. Krassin at thirteen. Now, with the 'rightened look occasionally returning, she had always been an inevitable sort of person, who married "this Mr. Krassin" because other suitors did not sue, and she wished to be emancipated. She had controlled her marriage, her worldly affairs, all her life, with a virile grasp, enormously proud of her wealth, her power, her rank, her family. A hard woman but with one absorbing passion, her love for Ilya her son-a passion which Ilya seldom. suspected; for her every soft impulse was in the list of Mrs. Krassin's secrets. The only strong person in the family-and she had not re-sented it when Vilinsky had done that. What, then was to become of her, Musia, in this earthquake of society? As the night wore on, these reflections and the passage of time left he calmer. He was not coming tonight. Her mother, searching for her, finally came and found her daughter alseep by her father's door. She gently stroked Musia's hair, remembering her as a pretty toddling babe, when she prattled her first words-and what those words were. And then she remembered Low as she grew taller. they had grown apart as the barriers of character and custom separated the older woman from the budding one.

A sudden access o. affection rolled over Mrs. Krassin's soul as she looked down at the pretty tend and face, so innocent in sleep, at the graceful form and the slim hands as if in anxiety in her lap-and she thought of Vilinsky. She stooped and gently kissed Musia's forehead. The girl started up screaming. "Do not awaken your father, Maroosia," sald Mrs. Krassin, standing erect.

"I-I was frightened," whispered Musia. "I thought some one kissed "I am the only one here," said her mother.

"I must have been dreaming," said

Mrs. Krassin walked quietly into her husband's room and looked down upon him sleeping. Much gentler was she than usual, as she led the girl to her room and told her it was time for

"I .m afraid to be alone," said Musia.

Mrs. Krassin lay on a chaise-longue by the bed and held the young girl's Musia slept with long quivering sighs. The sun at last shone in at the window. Quietly she arose, looked down at the girl for a moment, and tiptoed from the room.

CHAPTER VI

Love and Conspiracy One evening in 1920, in Vladivostok, an American talked with a Russian noblewoman. She had fled from her Russian home on foot, had walked for weeks, a vagrant, shelterless, ofter ss; had caught rides on Siberian rallway trains, stowed away in freight cars, or perching on their roofs—from a Sybarite to a tramp!

She had become a nurse for Kolt-of lack of ization and skilled per mortality which was that gone ragged and dirty weeks had not had even a cot underclothing. Her clothes fell away bit by bit. As her stockings were off at the toes, she cut them off and sewed them up until they were goneand a fellow refugee asked her, after a glimpse below her skirts, where she had obtained her nice, white stockings; and was thrown a bit of American slang derived from Red Cross workers in the information that they were her birthday hose.

She had worked for the American Red Cross as interpreter, typist, clerk and translator; for she knew Russian, Polish, French and Italian as well as English, and she could coax wonderful music from the tuneless plane in the Red Cross barracks in Vladivostok. She had lost father, mother, brothers, sister and fiancee, and was now, in what was left of an old ball dress, dancing absorbedly to the jazz music of an American warship's band in the long hall in the barracks.

"I constantly marvel," said he, "at the way you refugees manage to enjoy yourselves." "Well," said she, smiling up at him,

"one can't be always weeping!" So it was with the Krassins: they had already acquired the resiliency of those who walk daily in peril; and after "the terror by night" had passed them, and their little group had gathered as usual under Mrs. Krassin, their general, they were in rather better spirits than usual. A peril had passed them by. They had not been notified to quit their house. Another

Mrs. Krassin especially was in a cheerful frame of mind; for Vladimir had asked for Musia, and tad gone to her where she sat surrounded by her peculiar house bold gods, in a room which was half a study, half a sitting room, the central feature of which was a great plane, with barp and guitar at hand. celains scattered about. Mrs. Krassin had never talked to Musia about this, thinking it better to endeavor by indirect and invisible means to bring the event about, so that it would seem to happen in the natural course of things. For a year or so past, she had begun to feel a sense of disappointment and irritation because these plans were so slow in coming to fruition; but she looked upon a talk with Musia as a last re sort. She had a feeling that she might encounter in her daughter something tending toward rebellion; and saying to herself, "You never can tell beforehand how things will turn out with Musia," she declined to put the affair to the test of an issue, like the cautious diplomat which she prided (TO BE CONTINUED.)

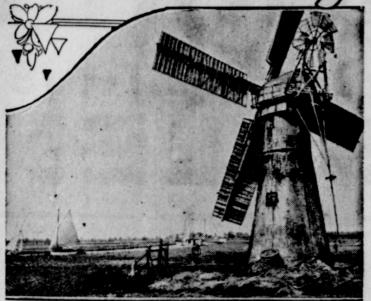

Mexican Code of Honor

Strange to Americans In many business places of the City of Mexico, cuspidors are chained to the desk or wall to prevent some intruder from carrying them off. On the streets office boys carry thousands of dollars in canvas bags on their shoulders from banks to offices. Business men convey the day's receipts to the banks shortly before the closing hour. Their habits in this respect are known to every crook in Mexico, yet it isn't once a year they meet with a holdup. One's cook is trusted with from $10 to $20 to go to the market, and she returns and accounts for the money, yet while her employer's back is turned, she will shove five cents worth of tea, coffee or sugar into her pocket. To take money intrusted to her to do the marketing would be thieving, but in taking little things from the kitchen supplies, she is following the custom of the ages.

Your life is a structure which you are building, and for which you select the materials. As you choose be tween sincerity and pretense, activity and inertia, enthusiasm and indiffer ence, hope and despair, so you boild to failure or success.—Grit.

England's Fen Country

THE HEDIEY INFORMER

Windmills Help Drain England's Fenlands.

(Prepared by the National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.) 1) THE seasoned traveler a large part of England is as an open door. Agencies and steamship companies have so familiarized him with the places of interest in the north and west that it seems somewhat of an anomaly to discover a region which has been almost entirely neglected; yet the country of East Anglia is by no means devoid of importance and contains many features which will appeal particularly to students of history.

Indeed, the fen country has been described as the cradle of the English race.

Hither marched Roman legions to the conquest of British tribes; hither retreated Boadicea before the advance of Suetonius; hither came the Danes to plunder and destroy. At the summit of the hill leading out of Cambridge arose the Norman castle which was seized later by rebellious barons. Along the still-existing Roman highway marched in 1381 the mob of peasants under Wat Tyler, and in 1643 the disciplined troops of Cromwell-a truly memorable pageant of events.

Originally the whole land was a forest of oak, ash, fir, and nut trees. Then, in the second century, there was an earthquake, and the sea submerged

When the Romans discovered how fertile the land was, they started to reclaim the districts drowned by river floods. They built dikes and embankments and even checked the inroads of the sea.

After the disastrous Saxon, Danish, and Norman raids, much of the reclamation work perished, until the monks took up the task. Then, wherever a monastery rose, the slow steady labor proceeded. As their outfalls bechoked up, however, the natur drains decayed, and the Fenlanders did everything possible to prevent their repair; for they believed that drainage would seriously interfere with their fishing and fowling.

Vermuyden Built Canals.

Finally Cromwell put down all opposition by force, and enlisted the services of Cornellus Vermuyden, a Dutch engineer. Vermuyden cut a few main watercourses through the district, with Lynn as their chief outfall, and at right angles to these a number of short canals. Water from the marshes was pumped into these canals by windmills, to be carried in turn to the rivers and finally to the sea. So wherever one goes in fenland, one will see vast acres of reclaimed marsh Intersected by drains and with a windmill or steam pump every few miles.

But it is not only the land drained by rivers that has been reclaimed. Ever since Roman days, attempts have been made to win back the salt marshes. At the present time there is a scheme on foot for draining the whole of the Wash and adding thereby to England thousands of acres of some the finest agricultural soil in the world.

To explore the highways and by ways of the fenland, one will find it convenient to traverse first the Via Devana, that Roman road which runs through Cambridge and on to Godmanchester. Just below Huntingdon, where the Via Devana connects with Ermine street, the great Roman highway from London to the north, one should turn into a narrow track that leads through many small villages to

Here two of Vermuyden's channels the Old Bedford and New Bedford rivers, flow side by side for 30 miles across the plain. And the original River Ouse, from which the water for the new channels was drawn and which became in consequence so choked with weeds as to be useless for navigation, meanders round by way of Stretham, Ely, and Littleport, picking up numerous tributaries en route. Finally, at Salter's Lode, it unites with Vermuyden's streams to flow in one tidal watercourse to the sea.

A short distance beyond the bridge is a rough-hewn cart track covered with bunches of weeds, nettles and rank grass. High gates lead to private farmyards, whence dogs seek to chase the intruder without further inquiry. At length appears a cluster of cottages, and save for these, one vation. Far as the eye can reach stretches a multicolored panorama of wheat and barley fields interspersed with dikes, while on the horizon appears a silver line, betokening the Great Ouse.

Hamlet Named California.

Yet this deserted hamlet rejoices in the name of California! Standing by the post box, one can gaze over this fertile country and picture the difference which drainage has made. Formerly the whole area was a vast swamp, whose inhabitants were continually tortured by ague and rheumatold arthritis. To alleviate the pain, they resorted to opium and other violent narcotics. Even today one occasionally finds an old fenlander who is addicted to the opium habit; but such cases are exceedingly rare.

From California the explorer passes over a wide area of reclaimed marsh to Wisbech. In this district every village has its feast day, which is held on the date of the dedication of the church. A procession marches around the boundaries, a religious service is held, and there is a collection for charity. Some years ago singlestick, a kind of dueling with wooden staves, was a great attraction, but nowadays the villagers are content with wrestling exhibitions and "all the fun of the fair."

Notwithstanding, one can still see at the fair such a contest as that provided by the men of Tanvats and those of Stixwould. Competitors stand opposite each other in lines, with eyes fixed on their opponents' At a given signal each man feet. seizes his rival near the chest with both hands, trying at the same time to kick him on the shins. The art consists in bringing one's opponent to his knees in the shortest possible time.

The prize is a copper kettle. A little farther on lies Parson survival of the past in the shape of a woad mill. Woad grows to a height of six feet and has a blue-green leaf with a yellow flower. It is gathered in the fields and crushed by machinery to produce a splendid dye which was used by ancient Britons for staining their bodies blue.

Soon the towers of Crowland appear in the distance. Here, at the end of the Seventh century, came St. Guthlac. At that period the island was the most remote of the whole archipelago and possessed by devils. A legend narrates how Guthlac, after being mercilessly tortured, conquered the devils and compelled Satan to bring the stone for the foundation of his oratory.

In olden days the Welland used to flow through the main street of Crowland, and in the market place is a curious triangular bridge over dry ground. It consists of three segments of a circle which meet at a point in the center.

Strange Duck Decoy. A mile or two farther is one of the few duck decoys left in the fen country. It stands some five miles from any habitation and is approached by a long avenue of lime trees. A path leads to the entrance gate, which admits to what at first looks like a wood. In the center is a pond full of weeds and waterlilles, with numerous promontories and rocks. Out of it lead eight large pipes, one for each direction of the wind. They are inclosed by nets fastened to continuous fences of stakes on the banks. When a drive takes place the ducks, which have flown from the Netherlands and settled on the pond, are enticed up one of these pipes. A trained dog runs about and drives tame ducks to the trap entrance, while the keepers hide in the bushes at the far end.

At length scores of wild fowl follow the decoys into the net and swim toward the far end. Instantly a net is dropped over the opening, and the keepers take out the birds one by one and wring their necks. As many as 200 are sometimes disposed of in a day, the season lasting from August to March.

From here, one can see, far ove the marshes, the noble proportions of Peterborough cathedral.

Near Peterborough are the fenland bulb plantations, which constitute a most important industry. Practically every farm devotes acres to the culti-

She Liked That Mule!

During the great German retreat of 1918 a detachment from the Twenty-seventh division, New York National Guard troops, was detailed to evacu-ate civilians from the recaptured villages still under German gunfire.

Since only the aged, the children, and the infirm were left, this was a difficult and a dangerous job. It was necessary to use force on many of the old peasants to make them leave their homes, the New York troopers learned. Often, evacuations were made under

One day an ambulance drove up to a receiving station established for these evacuated civilians. The officer in charge noted a commotion and saw that the chauffeur was experiencing difficulty in discharging his load. The sound of puffing, wheezing and swearing came from the ambulance in gusty outbursts. Soon, a final heave, and the driver emerged from the back of his car, clutching a donkey.

"Hey," shouted the officer. "What's the idea of making this ambulance a truck for live stock? There isn't enough transport for humans.

The disgusted driver pointed a shaking finger to an aged crone who was leading her donkey away.

"Listen," said the disgusted driver with a fine disregard for military eltquette, "you try some time to evac-uate the old madam yonder without taking the donkey. Say," he added confidentially, "I battled with her an hour while Fritz was knocking h-l out of the town. She never would leave without that mule, so I brought him along."

Valiant Trenchermen All

The dense blackness of a night in northern France and a rapidly changing front line are credited with supplying a detachment of the Twentyeighth infantry with a delightful and unexpected meal in the fall of 1918.

From out of the darkness that night a German field kitchen, bearing food, coffee, cigars and cigarettes for 100 men, drove innocently to a battalion p. c. of the Twenty-eighth. It began to unload.

A roly-poly German cook was deeply chagrined when he learned the American front lines had been mistaken for his own. His only consolation was the knowledge that not even an enemy can hate you thoroughly if you bring him food.

The 25 Americans of the detachment prepared to set upon the food when a lieutenant popped from his nearby hole. He warned that this probably was a plot and that the German rations must be filled with poison for the Americans.

Among those disappointed at this alarm were the Germans. They were prepared to make the best of a bad situation by assisting in eating the As soon as the lieutenant popped into his hole again the fat German cook volunteered to taste the slum, coffee and other edibles he had brought along, as evidence of good

This solved the difficulty. The Germans were permitted a taste only. Then the rations intended for 100 of the enemy disappeared before the determined onslaught of 25 Yanks.

Happy to Salute You, Sir!

The hand salute, and its many regalations, caused more trouble to the American army, it is estimated than cooties or any other species of pest spawned by the World war. But here is the story of one salute that was given-oh, so gladly-on a main street of Le Havre. The man who figures in it is now a well-known member of the Chicago Board of Trade but at that time he had just been discharged from the French army, in which he had served almost two years before our troops arrived, had sewed a discharge chevron on his sleeve and, having a few hours before sailing time, spent them in a stroll through the streets of Le Havre. Here's what happened, as he tells it:

"The English are quite meticulous about saluting: quite! For one thing, their officers must never acknowledge the saluting hand or in the mouth.

"So imagine my joy to see an English captain approaching. I wore a discharge chevron and didn't have to salute. But the captain had a swagger stick under one arm, a pipe was his mouth, both hands were piled with packages. Oh, boy!

"The captain eased over to the other side of the rue when he saw me. I crossed over, too. Then he knew that a meeting was inevitable. "Well, I'll hand it to the captain

By the time he reached me, where I was frozen to a salute, be'd managed to pile all his bundles, the swagger stick and pipe into one hand. With rourtey with a handsome salute. . . . But I'd hate to tell the words his lips were plainly forming as he passed by I'm (@. 1936, Western Newspaper Union.)

Little Elinor had heard many discussions at the dinner table about miniature golf, but being a very little girl and not accustomed to leaving her own back yard, she had never seen one of the baby courses until one Sunday when the family went out for a drive. "Oh, look, mamma, there's one of those ministers' golf courses."

1. Jesus Passing Through Jericho (v. 1).

Jericho is noted as the stronghold of the Canaanites, which was miraculously delivered into the hands of Israel in response to their faith. (Josh, 6), and also for the faith of Rahab which saved her from destruction with the city (Heb. 11:30, 31). It was thus noted as a city where faith and unbelief played against each other. It was fitting that Jesus should pass through Jericho. Faith and unbelief again were manifested. Two notorious sinners, Rahab and Zacchaeus, were saved at Jericho.

II. Zacchaeus Seeking Jesus (vv. 2-4).

1. His object (v. 3). He sought to see who Jesus was. Though perhaps prompted by curiosity, he eagerly sought Jesus.

2. His difficulties (vv. 2, 3). (1) His infamous business (v. 2). He was a tax collector for the Roman government. The very fact that a Jew held such an office under the hated Romans would make him extremely unpopular. Then, since he was rich, it was evident that he had practiced extortion in collecting the taxes. Many men and women have a hard time in coming to Christ because of their questionable business rela-(2) His shortness of stature (v. 3). He was too small to crowd his way through to Jesus, and being hated by the people they had thrust him aside. 3. His persistence (v. 4). He ran before the multitude and climbed up into a tree. What he lacked in stature he was determined should be made up by the height of the tree. Though Zacchaeus' legs were too short to enable him to see Jesus they were long enough to run past the crowd and enable him to climb the tree

III. Jesus Finding Zacchaeus (vv. While Zacchaeus was trying to see Jesus, Jesus was looking for him. This is always the case. When desire is stirred up in a heart to see Jesus, Jesus is seeking that one. When Jesus saw him he commanded him to come down from the tree and declared his cheus got more than he expected. Jesus called him by name. He did not utter a word which would humiliate Zacchaeus. Jesus knew his heart's desire and dealt accordingly with him. All souls who earnestly seek/ Jesus shall be found of him. How wonderful his grace, that regardless of one's past life, Jesus will receive him as a friend and enter into fellowship with him! Zacchaeus quickly responded. He came down and with joy received Jesus. IV. Zacchaeus' Conversion (vv. 7-10). His conversion was sudden and thorough. He was converted before he had reached the ground.

1. What the crowd said (v. 7). They said just what they say today when staners come to Christ. They call to mind the man's former sins. They also reproached Christ, saying that he had gone to be a guest of this notorious extortioner, the tax collector. That for which they reproached Jesus was his glory. His supreme mission was to save sinners (v. 10).

2. What Zacchaeus said (v. 8). His conversion was thorough. ook held upon his heart. His new tife began with resolution and restitution. He dedicated half of his goods to the poor. The man who a little while ago was a grafter was now a generous giver. His conversion got hold of his pocketbook. His determination to make restitution wherein he had wrongly exacted taxes shows the genuineness of his conversion. While God forgets the past of a sinner when he comes to Christ, the sinner who is converted will seek to right all wrongs, be they unkind words or unrighteous deeds. Sorrow for sin is not enough when restitution is possible.

3. What Jesus said (vv. 9, 10). "Today is salvation come to thy ouse." The publican was now a child of God, a son of Abraham, Salvation is a present reality when one re-ceives Christ.

which falls picturesquely to the shoulder is the message of the softly brimmed cloche to the left.

Special attention is called to the tricorne-like brims shown in the circle to the right above and to the left below, for these declare the very last word in "lines." The cocarde of tiny white ostrich tips, which gives so distinctive a touch to the model pictured in the upper circle, is one among many evidences of a revival of plumage. A wee veil is worn with the chic little velvet tricorne to the left—lat-bow of the same. Seen from the back, the view is as charming as the front for the large black velvet hat which is shown last, for peeking from the underbrim is a cluster of small white ostrich tips.

About Fur Coats. As to styling this season's coats, fur-riers are in a mood "to do and to tion, reflects this style influence with flattering results. The luxurious collar is designed with the thought in mind that back views must be as arresting to the eye as front. The animal head placed at the nape of the neck suggests interesting and novel trimming treatments for the future.

The uneven hemline of this coat occasions comment, because it is a feature of the more exclusive models Novel bemlines are being made much of more especially among designers who cater to an elite clientele.

The disposition to combine one fur with another is widely expressed this season in seal coats which are enliv ened with light beige or white collars and cuffs. Russian fitch effectively contrasts the brown-black seal model posed to the left. The youthful model in the center is enlivened with exquisite ermine.

Engineers' Costly Error There were two instances recently of bridges which had to be torn down and rebuilt before they were completed owing to defective wire in the cables. They were the Detroit-Windsor International bridge and the Mount Hope bridge connecting the island on which stands Newport, R. I., with the mainland. In the construction a new processed steel wire, heat-treated, was used and found defective. In both cases it had to be removed and replaced by the colddrawn wire. The defects were not
