HEDLEY JUNIOR PLAY SATURDAY NIGHT, 12th

The Junior Class will present the play "Two Days to Marry" Saturday night, March 12th at 8:15, in High School auditorium.

The plot of the play follows:

The father of James J Dare, who died a number of years ago,
left to his son James $1,000,000 to be given to him on his 28th birthday, provided he is married by that time. At the time the play opens it lacks only two days until Dare will be 28 years old—and he hasn't a wife. What will he do? Can he marry in so short a time?

He is successful in marrying a very attractive young girl, but discovers after the ceremony has been performed that his wife must be considerably older than he is, or he'll lose the $1,000,000.
What can he do? Will he get the money?

He does get the $1,000,000—
but how? Come and see!

Admission 10c and 15c.

OTHER SCHOOL NEWS

The Musical Program given by pupils of Miss Wells, assisted by others, Monday night was one of the outstanding events of recent days. The program, splendidly arranged and rendered, was very much enjoyed by the good crowd that was present in spite of the disagreeable weather.

The Owls wound up the last game of the season with Goodnight, and have hung up a record to punch at. The boys report an enjoyable season, and are still back of their Coach.

The Owl track squad reported last week and stiff workouts have started. Landon Duggins was elected captain of the team, and the tracksters have great hopes of this season being helped along considerably by their new captain. They have reported regularly until cold weather checked them, and Coach says "They'll be in shape o. k." Those reporting include C. F. Simmons, Zack
Hunsucker, Don Pickett, Buster
Stafford, Fred Tidwell, George
Gordon, Ross Hunsucker, Carl Pool, Kenneth Bain, Earl Tollett, and several Juniors.

Bad weather conditions prevented the Sophomores from entertaining the Seniors Saturday with a picnic at Troublesome Canyon. Both Classes were very much disappointed, as they had been looking forward to a most enjoyable day.

Earl Hill visited in Clarendon
last week.

Opal Hammitt was in Clarendon on business last Friday.

Three of our High School students were slightly injured in an auto accident Sunday evening on Highway No. 5 west of Hedley.
We are glad to report that they are able to be in school.

Landon Duggins was in Mc-Lean the past week end.

The latest report is that our
"Chief" will soon be in school again. Fin!

Evalyn Alexander visited relatives and friends in Amarillo one day last week.

We are glad to see Sybil Meeks back in school after an illness of several weeks duration.

Garsa Sheeting, bleached and unbleached, also L.L. Domestic for your quilt materials.

SCHOOL TAX NOTICE

This is to notify all tax payers
of Hedley Independent School District that All Delinquent School Taxes will be accepted from now until June 1st, 1932, without penalty or interest.

You are urged to pay them now if possible, thereby saving money for yourself, and also helping the school.

By order of the Board,
J. B. Masterson, Sec.

REVIVAL ANNOUNCEMENT

Revival meeting will begin at the Methodist Church the first Sunday in April. Rev. J. P.
Magee will do the preaching.

We want this meeting to be a blessing to all the people of Hedley and community.

Will be glad to have all the people work with us in the meeting.
A. V. Hendrix, Pastor.

Mrs Rainey Westberry and C.
F. Simmons accompanied Mrs.
G. L. Johnson to the Ivie home at Snyder, Okla., last week end.
Miss Lillie Belle Ivie, who has been visiting in Hedley for some time, returned home with them.

TRUSTEE SUGGESTIONS

Hedley citizens have banded in the following list of names, suggesting that it would make a good ticket from which to select the three School Trustees to be elected Saturday, April 2:

L. E. Thompson
S. G. Adamson
G. E. Johnson
W. E. Grimsley
W. I. Rains
Frank Kendall.
B. E. Watson.

Japan Rebuked by League Council, but Still Persistent — President Hoover Asks Congress for Reorganization of Government.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

JAPAN during the week seemed to be getting deeper and deeper into the morass of international trouble, but gave no outward sign of weakening in her determination to subdue the Chinese.

Secretary Stimson

Having received a report from its investigators at Shanghai, placing the onus of the hostilities on Japan, the council of the League of Nations got its dander up and sent to Tokyo a sharp note calling to Japan's attention again her obligations under various treaties and the league covenant, reminding her of her high position among the powers and appealing to her to cease the warfare against China.

Mr. Stimson formulated another stern protest against the use of the international settlement in Shanghai by the Japanese as a base for military operations, and declined to be impressed by Japan's argument that the other powers also had landed troops there.

In preparation for a grand offensive the Japanese heavily shelled the Chinese lines, and many shells fell in the international settlement. Two English sailors were killed. This caused great excitement in London.

AUTHORIZED by his government, the Japanese minister to China served an ultimatum on Gen. Tsi Ting-kai, commander of the Nineteenth Chinese route army, demanding that the Chinese retire twenty kilometers from Shanghai and threatening to drive them away by force should they not comply.

Chiang Kai-shek

For the third time American Consul General Cunningham had to protest against a raid by Japanese plain clothes men on the middle school of the American Methodist Church, South. The furniture was smashed, books and papers scattered about, and an American flag nailed on the outer wall was torn down.

PRESIDENT HOOVER on Wednesday sent to congress a special message asking support for a reorganization of the government and recommending the creation of four new federal offices.

Specifically, the President suggested: 1. Consolidation of the millions of dollars' worth of construction work undertaken annually by the various federal departments into a new office to be known as public works administrator.

2. Incorporation of the vast amount of personnel administration into one office headed by a "personnel administrator," with the civil service commission remaining in an advisory capacity to that agent.

3. Transfer of the administrative functions of running the American merchant marine to the Department of Commerce under direction of a new assistant secretary.

4. Creation of a new assistant secretaryship of interior in charge of "conservation," under whom would come reclamation work and the broad supervision of water power development.

5. Placement of all public health activities of the government under a new assistant secretary of the treasury.

6. Promotion of the commissioner of education to an assistant secretary of interior, with transfer of all educational undertakings to his care.

7. Promotion of the director of agricultural economics to an assistant secretary, and the designation of an existing aid to the secretary of agriculture as assistant secretary for agricultural research.

The immediate changes, Mr. Hoover asserted, would cost about $40,000 per annum in additional salaries, but "the saving in cost of administration would be many times this sum."

DEMOCRATIC leaders of the house prepared to place their own taxation and economy proposals before the nation as a means of balancing the national budget.

Following the declaration of Speaker Garner that President Hoover had failed to promote real economy, Representative Rainey of Illinois, Democratic leader, characterized the treasury tax proposals as "woefully insufficient."

The first step in the economy program was the creation of a special committee to study means of abolishing and restricting government bureaus to cut expenses.

The house ways and means committee met to consider the treasury's additional tax program, which included a 1-cent-a-gallon gasoline tax and a 7 per cent tax on domestic electric light and gas bills, Rainey said.

"The treasury originally recommended taxes totaling $920,000,000 and then admitted a mistake of over $400,000,000, and came back with a request to raise the total.

"The treasury, even in its new estimates, does not take into consideration expenses incident to the $500,000,000 reconstruction corporation, $125,000,000 land bank bill, possible direct relief funds of veterans' bills, and will not even estimate the increased interest on the national debt."

BY A vote of 35 to 48 the senate defeated the La Follette-Costigan bill to provide $750,000,000 from the federal treasury to the states for the relief of the jobless and needy, of which sum $375,000,000 was to be handed the states for highway building.

This being out of the way, the senate took up the Glass-Steagall bill to liberalize the federal reserve structure and release a fresh flood of credit throughout the national banking system.

IN SELECTING a successor to Oliver Wendell Holmes on the bench of the Supreme Court of the United States, President Hoover set aside geographical considerations and chose Benjamin Nathan Cardozo, chief justice of the New York state court of appeals.

B. N. Cardozo

The nomination was sent to the senate and early confirmation was expected, though several protests were received by Senator Norris, chairman of the judiciary committee. This appointment gives the Supreme court five Republicans and four Democrats, and nine of the justices are from the eastern states.

PIERRE LAVAL, losing a vote of confidence in parliament, resigned as premier of France together with his cabinet. Paul Painleve, former premier, consented to try to form a new government.

SPEAKER JOHN N. GARNER'S big western hat is still on his head, but his friends have started his boom for the Presidential nomination by the Democratic national convention.

J. N. Garner

Democratic national convention. The two senators from Texas, Morris Sheppard and Tom Connally, issued a formal statement in which Mr. Garner was presented not only as his state's favorite son, but as a statesman fully qualified to be the chief of the nation.

"He has been speaker of the house for only a few weeks," said the Texas senators. "During that period the house under his leadership has attracted the attention of the whole country by reason of its prompt, thorough and statesmanlike conduct of its affairs. His record as speaker and leader is among the highest proofs of his splendid qualities of leadership and courage."

They recalled his twenty-nine years in the house as a representative from Texas as service "distinguished for its breadth of vision, its political courage and its rugged and aggressive democracy."

Mr. Garner said he had known nothing of the statement beforehand and had no authorized spokesman. He refused to talk of his Presidential chances.

JOBS for a million unemployed within thirty days is the highly laudable objective of a nation-wide campaign which the American Legion has started, in co-operation with the American Federation of Labor, the National Association of Advertisers and other organizations represented on the national employment commission.

H. L. Stevens Jr.

The entire movement is under the general direction of Henry L. Stevens, Jr., national commander of the American Legion. It has the support of President Hoover and countless other national leaders, and the drive is being aided by magazines and other publications commanding a total circulation of 35,000,000.

Nearly sixty national radio advertisers agreed to contribute thirty seconds of their time on the air daily. Committees in more than 7,000 towns and cities, supported by more than 10,000 posts of the American Legion and 30,000 unions affiliated with the A. F. of L. are co-operating in the campaign.

OVER in Germany they are getting ready for an election, and Paul von Hindenburg, their grand old man, has yielded to the petitions of thousands of his countrymen and consented to be a candidate for re-election to the Presidency.

Press reports said Premier Klagges of Brunswick had appointed Hitler a professor of practical pedagogics at the University of Brunswick so that "the politician without a country" received German citizenship automatically.

TEWFIK RUSHDI BEY, foreign minister of Turkey, seems to be one of the most optimistic of the delegates to the disarmament conference in Geneva. After the apparently irreconcilable views of the great powers had been presented the Turk arose and told the conference that the political importance of frontiers will soon be negated by fraternization among nations, which, he said, is the surest means of arriving at disarmament.

He supported the French proposal for internationalizing civil aviation and urged prohibiting the manufacture of offensive weapons.

Germany's proposals were submitted Thursday. They included abolition of all air armaments, destruction of air reserves of stocks, abolition of conscription, prohibition of heavy artillery and tanks, limitation of the size of warships and prohibition of aircraft carriers and submarines.

MRS. MINNIE MADDEN FISKE, for many years the foremost actress in America, died in Hollis, L. I., after three months' illness at the age of sixty-seven years.

Sir Edgar Speyer, who had been called "the man without a country," passed away in Berlin. At the beginning of the World war he was an eminent British financier and a privy councillor.

SWINBURN ANNOUNCES FOR COUNTY ATTORNEY

The Informer is authorized to announce J. C. Swinburn as a candidate for County Attorney of Donley county, subject to the action of the voters in the Democratic primaries.

Mr. Swinburn is a resident of Ashtola, and has lived in Donley county seven years. He received his high school education in Wilbarger county; spent two years in Clarendon College, and three years in the University of Texas. Was licensed to practice law in October, 1930.

He is fully equipped to discharge the duties of the office he seeks, and promises, if elected, to look after the interests of the people in a fair and impartial manner and give his best efforts to the enforcement of all our laws.

Mr. Swinburn will make an effort to see all the voters before the July primary, and the Informer commends his candidacy to their thoughtful consideration.

Electric Refrigeration Will Protect His Health

ONLY mothers know how constant are the demands for between-meal snacks... how often that growing son of yours demands something to eat! A glass of milk, a sandwich, some cheese and crackers — something from the refrigerator.

Those foods he so confidently accepts... Are they safe? Are they health-building, or dangerous to health?

Scientists have found that any food is exposed to bacterial action when the temperature rises above fifty degrees. Thus it becomes unfit for use long before its taint is recognized by the normal senses.

But there's one certain and dependable way of eliminating this danger from your home—Electric Refrigeration. The modern Electric Refrigerator guarantees a constant cold, always below the fifty degree mark... And Electric Refrigeration is just as economical and just as convenient as it is healthful! You owe it to yourself and to your family to investigate without delay. Call in at the Merchandise Showroom or see your Electrical Dealer.

Convenient Terms

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprisingly low rate schedule... and adds only a small amount to your total bill?

When TEETHING makes HIM FUSSY

One of the most important things you can do to make a teething baby comfortable is to see that little bowels do their work of carrying off waste matter promptly and regularly. For this nothing is better than Castoria, a pure vegetable preparation specially made for babies and children. Castoria acts so gently you can give it to young infants to relieve colic. Yet it is always effective, for older children, too. Remember, Castoria contains no harsh drugs, no narcotics—is absolutely harmless. When your baby is fretful with teething or a food upset, give a cleansing dose of Castoria. Be sure you get genuine Castoria with the name:

A little man can attract as much attention as a big one when it comes to punching and punishing an automobile horn.

NIP CHEST COLDS, QUICK WITH HEAT OF RED PEPPERS

Relieves Almost Instantly

To break up congestion, to restore free circulation and stop chest colds... to alleviate the circulatory pains and aches of rheumatism, neuralgia, lumbago... Nature has stored up in red peppers a marvelous therapeutic heat that penetrates deeply into the skin without blistering or burning and swiftly brings relief. Now this genuine red peppers' heat is contained in an ointment, Rowles Red Pepper Rub. As you rub it on, you'll feel better. And in 3 minutes relief comes. Drug stores sell Rowles Red Pepper Rub. Try it.

"I WAS VERY THIN"

"My eyes were hollow, I looked awfully bad. I tried lots of things but nothing helped me. Then a friend told me about St. Joseph's G.F.P. I took three bottles and I am at normal weight and feel like a new woman. St. Joseph's G.F.P. has my enthusiastic recommendation."

If your child Won't Eat

When children are finicky about food, pale, irritable or cross, careful mothers treat promptly with Dr. Jayne's Vermifuge. It has been used successfully for over 100 years and is the most effective remedy known to expel round worms and their eggs. No other preparation is quite so efficient. It is pleasant to the taste, gentle and sure in action, absolutely harmless. If worms are present your little one will be a different child after taking the first bottle. Ask your druggist, DR. D. ### First Cosmic Ray Telescope

THIS is the cosmic-ray telescope, first of its kind, which will be used to measure the intensity of this mysterious radiation from one part of the heavens for comparison with the strength of the rays from another portion of the skies. The telescope has been designed and built in the laboratory of the Bartol research foundation of the Franklin Institute at Swarthmore, Pa. It is for the use of Dr. W. F. G. Swann, prominent physicist and director of the laboratory. Next summer he will take it to a place of higher altitude, such as the top of Mt. Washington or Pike's peak, where cosmic radiation is more intense.

TESTED RECIPES

OCCASIONALLY for luncheon or for a supper dish one likes a change, something which appeals to the taste and intrigues the imagination. The dish may be an ordinary one, but the serving makes it different.

Herring in Paper.

Soak smoked herring overnight in cold water after removing the heads and tails. Wipe dry and place in a paper bag, those prepared for cookery or in a greased paper. Place on a hot griddle and cook until the paper is well browned. Serve in the paper with:

Maitre d' Hotel Sauce.

Put a tablespoonful of butter into a small saucepan over a moderate fire and add to it chopped parsley and chives. Season with salt and a little lemon juice and while sizzling hot pour over the fish.

Another sauce to be used for this dish or for any fish is:

Sauce d' Anchois.

Take three or four anchovies, mash them and mix with two tablespoonfuls of butter. Prepare a brown sauce with browned flour, butter and milk. Stir in the anchovy butter and just before taking from the fire add the juice of half a lemon or more.

Dutch Sauce for Fish.

Take two tablespoonfuls of butter, one and one-half tablespoonfuls of flour, one cupful of liquid in which the fish was cooked, one cupful of milk, salt and paprika to taste. Cook the sauce, adding two egg yolks, one teaspoonful of lemon juice and beat well with an egg beater just before taking from the heat. Add a tablespoonful of minced parsley and serve.

Marzipan.

Take one-half cupful of heavy sugar syrup, warm it and mix with one-fourth pound of almond paste, add one-half pound of confectioner's sugar and work into a paste. Add a few drops of coloring and mold into any desired form, using color and leaves of angelica; small fruits are easily copied.

MY MEMORY

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

WHY is it I remember Things upstairs when I am down; Recall some thing I meant to bring When I'm half way to town? Why is it in the attic I think about the fire, Or, far below, remember so What attic may require?

Why is it I remember Things downstairs when I'm up? When up I went I fully meant To bring along a cup, Why is it, when I'm outdoors I think of things within, And, in again, remember then, The things where I have been?

Why is it I remember Things inside when I'm out, My kitchen cares when I'm upstairs, Am I always turned about? Since at the proper minute A thing I can't recall, I wonder why it is that I Remember things at all.

A STORY FOR BEDTIME

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER SEES A CHANCE

Never give up, but be willing to try. He always wins out who will never say die.

WAS ever anybody in a worse fix than Peter Rabbit? There he sat panting for breath under a pile of brush in the Green Forest with Hooty the Owl perched on his watch-tower just above, and hiding in a hollow log not far away, Shadow the Weasel. Of the two Peter feared Shadow most. He knew that Shadow knew just where he was. In fact, if it had not been that Hooty had happened along just in time to swoop at Shadow and chase him into that hollow log, it is probable that Peter would have been caught before this.

"It's a lucky thing for me," thought Peter, "that Hooty did not come along until after I had got under this pile of brush. He doesn't know I'm here, and so he won't be watching for me at all. Shadow won't dare come out until Hooty has gone away, and until then I am perfectly safe. Perhaps I can steal away while Hooty is watching for Shadow. Of course, if I make the least sound Hooty will hear me. I don't see what Old Mother Nature was thinking of to give him such wonderful ears. It isn't fair to the rest of us."

Of course Peter quite overlooked the fact that Hooty's eyes are of very little use to him in daylight, and so he must do all his hunting at night and must have keen ears to help out his eyes in order to get enough to eat. Mother Nature is never unfair, though it may sometimes seem so.

"I'm glad," continued Peter to himself, "that there is snow on the ground, because that means that there will be no rustling of dry leaves when I move. It is dreadfully hard work to walk over dry leaves without making them rustle. That is one thing I do not have to worry about. I hope Hooty will be as patient as he usually is. If he sits there long enough, I will get quite rested. Of course Shadow will follow my tracks as soon as the way is clear. He is the most persistent fellow of whom I know. He never gives up until he has to. Now I'll look about and see what chance I have to get away. The sooner I can do it the better. Shadow thinks I won't dare move while Hooty is on guard. I'm going to fool him if there is the least chance in the world, and the sooner I do it the better."

Very, very slowly and carefully Peter crawled to the edge of the brush pile farthest from where Hooty sat on his watch-tower with his eyes fixed on the hole in which Shadow had disappeared. He took care not to make a sound. Where the brush was very thick he crawled on his stomach through the snow under it. And so at last he reached the edge where he could peep out. Just a little way off was a big stump.

"If I could reach that," thought Peter, "without being seen, I think perhaps I could steal away. There is a little hemlock tree just beyond, and if I can once get that between Hooty and me he never will see me in the world. It is my one chance to get away from here, and after I've done that I will have to trust to luck to fool Shadow. He'll follow my tracks as sure as winter is here, once Hooty lets him out, and Hooty isn't going to sit there all night."

Just a Little Way Off Was a Big Stump. "If I Could Reach That," Thought Peter.

Peter looked back over his shoulder up at the top of the tall dead tree which was Hooty's watch-tower. Right on the very tip-top sat Hooty. If Peter had not known he was there he certainly would have thought Hooty a part of the tree itself. Peter shivered, and it wasn't the cold that made him shiver. Did he dare to cross that open place to the big stump right in plain sight of Hooty? He should turn his head?

THE STORY

Six bandits hold up the steamer, Midnight Sun, on the Mackenzie, kill Jimmy Montgomery, and escape with gold dust and furs.

"Snakes!" Bill breathed to himself, as he thanked Haskell and went out the door.

When Whipple came in, Haskell ordered him to close the door and pull down the window, to guard against possible eavesdropping.

"Hardsock will probably steal some more gasoline and oil tonight. What he's already stolen isn't enough for a plane to do much maneuvering on.

"You go down to the river bank now to those two tepees and get that Indian called Ogi-Tomax. You remember Hardsock thrashed him one time last winter for carrying a squaw-club and beating his wife.

"You go down to the river bank now to those two tepees and get that Indian called Ogi-Tomax. You remember Hardsock thrashed him one time last winter for carrying a squaw-club and beating his wife.

"You and the Indian are to shadow Hardsock tonight and tomorrow. Find out where he's taking that stuff and where he's going to meet Baker.

"It was late the next evening before Whipple returned. He came back tired, bedraggled, but with electric news.

He and the Indian had watched Bill steal more gas and oil from the stores. They had shadowed him to the temporary cache two miles up the Mackenzie. There he had loaded his canoe to the gunwales with the drums and cans and had taken them all to a big lake twenty miles on up the river.

He had cached the fuel on a headland called Goose point; and was waiting there without the faintest suspicion that he had been trailed and was being watched.

As Haskell listened to the report, he forgot the haggard day and night just passed. He had scarcely dared hope for such news as this.

After careful thought, guarding against any slip-up, he ordered Whipple: "Go get your rifle and belt-gun. I'll take mine, too. We'll go up there in the launch. You can drive it. We'll capture Hardsock and those supplies. That'll be that. Then we'll wait there. The plane'll be alone in a couple days. We'll keep the launch in cover close by. When the machine lights down and they go ashore to get the supplies, we'll ram it and put it out of commission. Then we'll have Baker and this Featherof—and we'll put them where the dogs won't bite 'em!"

After his despair of their last week, after his helpless festering anger at Baker, it was a new lease on hope to know he was going to smash Baker's venture and throw him into prison and make his marriage to Elizabeth impossible! Baker was walking all unknowingly into a deadly trap.

Buckling on his belt-gun, Haskell snuffed the candles and went out of his cabin—on the easiest, most exultant, most deadly certain trip he had ever made.

CHAPTER IX

Wings Over the Wilderness

On that first day of flight, as dawn broke full and the sun chased away a layer of crossamer clouds beneath the White Speedair, Alan looked down with marveling eyes at a strange panorama. Evergreen forestry, silvery lakes and silvery network of rivers far below, swam past at a speed to amaze him.

Knowing that if he and Buzzard showed up at a police post or larger trading center, it would mean a quick and sorry end of their flight, Alan planned to avoid such places religiously. He had a conviction that he and Buzzard were "wanted." They had left too many tracks in Edmonton—clews that would speedily be followed up. The police there, a wise live outfit, had certainly connected them with the theft of all that government property and had radioed instructions for their arrest.

Eventually he and Buzzard were going to be caught. It was as inevitable as sunset. Soon or late they would have to return to civilization and face the music. To Alan the worst of it was that Buzzard was going to pay a heavy price for helping him on this thankless job. For himself he did not greatly care; he hardly thought of it. . . . He was headed north again, on his last patrol, his greatest patrol.

As they worked on north, they made moderately good time, but only by incessant care and worry. Engine trouble caused them delay. Again and again they sat down on some unknown river or lake and sweated for hours over the old motor. Fuel was a constant problem.

And again they sat down on some unknown river or lake and sweated for hours over the old motor. Fuel was a constant problem. Avoiding Mounted detachments and Royal Signal corps stations like the plague, they dared stop only at wilderness-buried posts where radios were unlikely and no police handy. They could never be certain of getting fuel, and what they did get was usually half kerosene.

Alan was looking forward to his rendezvous with Bill as the end of all this worry about gas and oil. Besides the fuel there at Goose point, Bill had promised to cache some supplies up the Alooska near Joyce's home.

Alan was fervently looking ahead to meeting Bill at En Traverse lake, to getting those precious supplies, to seeing Joyce again there on the Big Alooska. All of his loyalty to the sister of his dead partner could not keep him from comparing Joyce's vital spirited personality with Elizabeth's leisure-bored ennui, and Joyce's two years of heroic sacrifice with Elizabeth's idle deliberate dependence.

On their last evening, worn out by a day of engine trouble and head winds and blinding rains, they alighted in a little spruce-barked lake on Silver-tip river, a short hundred miles south of Fort Endurance. Anchoring the plane, they paddled ashore, cooked a warm meal, and rolled up in their

Religious and Secular Stories That Parallel

All the great religions have stories that parallel each other in some degree. For instance, Jephthah, one of the judges of Israel, made a remarkable vow before he marched against the Ammonites, that if he proved victorious he would offer to the Lord the first living thing which should come to meet him on his return. This happened to be his only daughter, whom he sacrificed to fulfill his rash vow. The history of Jephthah is contained in the second book of Judges. Idomeneus, in Homeric legend, king of Crete, succeeded his father Deucalion on the throne, and accompanied the Greeks to the Trojan war with a fleet of 90 ships. During this war he rendered himself famous by his valor. While returning, he made a vow to Neptune in a dangerous blankets for a few hours of desperately needed rest.

"Tomorrow's the day of days," Buzzard remarked, thinking of the supplies and a base to maneuver from.

"It's the day of days," Alan agreed, but he was thinking of Joyce running down the path, bareheaded in the sun, to greet them. Tomorrow he would know if she was safe. Tomorrow, after the rendezvous with Bill, the White Speedair would be dropping down upon the Big Alooska.

Buzzard was asleep almost instantly, but Alan, tossing in a useless attempt to sleep, finally got up, built a tiny fire, and sat beside it, thinking, a dead pipe in his teeth.

As he sat there under the solemn spruces, he tried to look steadily at his looming marriage to Elizabeth, and decide his course. No longer blinded by idealization of her as a girl, he saw now, with pitiless insight, that all along she had not wanted him unless he had a good income and was out of the North. She might love him as well as she had ever loved anybody; but to her he was not greatly more than a means of getting what she wanted out of life.

The prospect of marrying her, when his respect was gone, made Alan wince. And his respect was gone with a vengeance. Those moments in the cabin, when she offered herself to him, had been a shock and revelation. She had acted not out of excusable passion, not out of love, but as a guarantee that he would take that Victoria job. He thought of the incident with something of revulsion.

Now he was groping to see the honest and righteous thing for him to do. He wondered whether it would be courage, or a weak yielding to desire, for him to break with Elizabeth and sweep aside the obligations binding him. There was right on both sides. Elizabeth was waiting for him; he had promised to marry her and take her out; he had burned his bridges and committed himself to that Victoria job. Yet it was wrong to enter a loveless marriage that would bring tragic unhappiness. It was wrong to marry Elizabeth when his whole-hearted respect and love went out to Joyce MacMillan.

In the lonely anguish of his thoughts he laid his decision more or less in the hands of time. He felt he must see Joyce again before he could take a decisive step. If he did capture those six criminals and so cleared her father, she would be grateful with all her heart. He meant to tell her about the tragic happening which had bound him to Elizabeth. If he could win back that old intimate comradeship with her and they could begin anew, then the righteous thing was to put Joyce's happiness above Elizabeth's.

A little after gray dawn Alan re-built the fire, cooked breakfast, and reluctantly awakened his partner.

Later, when they skirled out to the plane, Buzzard glanced at the tanks and remarked tersely:

"I hope your buddy, this Hardsock, has got some gas and oil out to that lake. It'll be our finish if he hasn't."

"Bill will have it there," Alan assured. "He may not be there himself, he's probably on duty; but we agreed exactly where to cache it. It'll be waiting for us."

They climbed in, taxied twice around the lake to warm the spluttering motor, took off and headed north toward Goose point at Lake En Traverse.

With the heavy rains stopped and the insect scourges abating, Alan knew the bandits were on the move again or shortly would be. When they did stir, he wanted to be there on the Big Alooska to look out for Joyce.

Ever since he came to believe that Dave MacMillan knew nothing of the crime, he had been puzzling about that pack of stolen furs. Something dark and sinister lay behind that pack. There was some connection between the trader and those criminals. But what?

Alan reasoned: "Those furs didn't get in that shed by accident. Those men might have had a grudge against Dave MacMillan and planted them there. They might have figured he'd show them to us and get in hot water. That guess is at least possible. If it's true, then their grudge might lead them to strike at Joyce."

If they intended anything against Joyce, they doubtless would attempt it just before they started eastward on their trek through the Great Barrecks and Strong-Woods. Alan had dreamed of that, dreamed of her being captured and taken along, as the bandits had captured Margaret Fournier.

With Haskell refusing to extend her any protection whatsoever, Alan felt that he and he alone stood between her and a terrible danger. If anything happened to the plane, or to him and Buzzard, . . .

Virgin Islands

Columbus discovered the Virgin Islands on his second voyage in 1493. It is said, amazed at the number, he feared there would not be enough saints names to go around, so he put them under the sacred patronage of the 11,000 martyred virgins of St. Ursula

GENOVA, Old and New

Street Laundry in Genoa.

(Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—WNU Service.)

A MOUNTAIN recently was blown into bits near Genoa to make way for a seaside highway between the city and Sampierdarena, one of its suburbs. Before excited Genoese who crowded every vantage point, tons of dynamite, which had been poured into 700 foot drilled holes, leveled the rocky barrier, thrusting a large part of it into the Genoa harbor.

Genoa may be considered the Alma Mater of the Americas. She nurtured Christopher Columbus in his boyhood years, when he dreamed the dreams that were to shape his life; communicated to him a love of the sea that had made her great; imbued him with a dominating thirst for the adventure that was hinted at by every strange galley and caravel that crowded her harbor, and all the motley throng of bronzed seamen from distant lands who jogged elbows with him on her quays.

And, having reared the boy Columbus in this atmosphere, the city sent him forth to battle with true Genoese spirit for his dreams until that October day in 1492 when, fulfilling them, he wrung a hemisphere from oblivion to add it to the map of the world.

The Genoa of today is a great modern city, if you center your attention on its industries, on its steel ships, on the dwellings of its upper tiers, on the business of the Via Venti Settembre (20th of September street), and the crowds of prosperous-appearing, well dressed people who throng that thoroughfare morning and evening to holiday proportions.

But Genoa is not only a modern city. The links that tie the present to the times of Columbus, and to days long before his, still hold strongly. One may step on the very stones on which young Christopher walked; the walls that rose beside the narrow ways that his restless young feet trod still stand, block after block of them; and only a few steps from the present business heart of the city, where beautiful modern buildings rise about the Piazza De Ferrari and the Via Venti Settembre starts upon its broad, straight way, is the most important link of all, the House of Columbus.

This dwelling of Domenico Colombo, father of the future admiral, and of Susanna, his mother, was the place in which Christopher spent his early boyhood. Tourists must view this historic old house from the outside, unless they have a special permit.

Records All in Palaces.

Official records of the family of Columbus are kept in municipal offices. These offices are in one of the beautiful old palaces of the Genoese nobles. Whatever activity you search for in Genoa, it seems, you find in a palace. The city offices are in one, the port officials transact their business in another, the prefect looks after matters of state in a third; and others are museums, art galleries, schools, and telegraph offices. You begin to wonder, as you make your way from palace to palace, whether the butchers and bakers and candlestick makers of Genoa conduct their businesses in these sumptuous structures, and to doubt that in Genoa's palmiest days there were any commoners at all to live in mere houses.

In the municipal palace Genoa keeps mementos of her illustrious sons, whether by birth or forced adoption. There are portraits of the great statesman, Mazzini; the incomparable explorer, Marco Polo and Columbus; and sundry heroes of the Crusades. In a glass case rest the violin and bow of the world's master violinist, Paganini.

At an end of the council chamber, carved from one piece of marble, stands a tall pedestal surmounted by a bust of Columbus. A recess has been cut into the pedestal and fitted with an ornamental bronze door. This a custodian unlocks and takes from their marble resting place Genoa's most precious documents; three letters written by the hand of Christopher Columbus and signed with his curious signature, and a parchment book containing copies of the documents through which various privileges and titles were conferred upon him by Ferdinand and Isabella.

All the letters were written from Seville to Genoa, two in 1502, as the great navigator was preparing for his fourth and last voyage, and one in 1504, after his return from the New World. Two are to Nicolo Oderigo, an important citizen of Genoa, who served as ambassador from the republic to the Spanish court. That of March 21, 1502, tells of sending his book of privileges for safe keeping.

Treasures Carefully Guarded Now.

The letters are framed now and protected by glass. This was not always so, as the missing lower corner of one of the documents shows. This fragment, the custodian tells you, was torn off years ago by a tourist who had been courteously permitted to examine the letter—one of that inexplicable breed of vandals, the soulless souvenir hunter, to whom ethics apparently are beside the point.

As soon as a privileged visitor has examined the treasures, the watchful curator takes his treasures and locks them again in their queer place of safe keeping. The Columbus house is some distance away but every step adds interest to the traveler's stay in the city. The narrow, winding streets teem with an intimate mixture of wheeled traffic and pedestrians. Some of these ways have narrow sidewalks, from which the pedestrians spill over at intervals. Others have no curbs, and one must needs compete for space with taxis, open "cabs," and laden carts. Still other ways are mere crevasses between old five and six storied tenement houses, far too narrow for wheeled vehicles.

Suddenly you leave these congested streets and come out into the Piazza De Ferrari, the largest of the open spaces within Genoa's business sections. One side of the square is lined with the buildings of Old Genoa, the walls of palaces for the most part; but on the opposite side a newer Genoa stands forth—the Teatro Carlo Felice, the Academy of Belle Arts, the new Bourse, the post office. These fine structures are relatively new and form the portal to the Via Venti Settembre.

When this era of new construction was under way many ancient buildings were demolished. Part of the ground so obtained was used as sites for the new structures and part was left vacant and added to the piazza. One of the blocks of closely packed buildings marked for destruction contained the house of Columbus. The identity of this edifice had long been lost, but became known in 1885, after which the property was purchased by the municipality and set aside as a monument.

In the House of Columbus.

The house originally had five stories, but was only one room in width. It was hemmed in between taller buildings and was in part supported by these neighboring edifices. When this group was torn down the entire house of Columbus could not be left unsupported, so the upper three stories were removed. The two lower stories, roofed over, now stand isolated, an approximate cube of rough masonry—a sort of Genoese Kaaba and, like that sacred Meccan shrine, a center of world interest if not of pilgrimage.

Inside the large wooden door the traveler finds himself in a gloomy, unlighted, boxlike room, wholly bare. It is some minutes before one's eye can make out the details of the interior. The floor is of stone, and the brick walls have a queer, jagged surface. Overhead the beams and thick floor boards have the same rough, nicked appearance. Your guide explains that for a long time before it had been identified the house had been used as a tenement by poor families of the city, and that when it came into possession of the municipality its walls and ceilings were encrusted with the grime of centuries. Scrubbing would do no good; so stone cutters were put to work with chisels and mallets to cut away the incrustations of half a millennium and to bring to light a surface at once clean and nearer to that of the Columbian era.

Toward the rear of the portion of the building still standing is a narrow, winding stair of wood. The front room on the second floor has two windows in the front wall, is more airy and is better lighted than that below and was probably one of the chief apartments of the Columbus family. Its walls, too, have been chipped to form a fresh surface, and the floor, reasonably clean, has probably been scraped. Into one of the side walls has been set a marble slab, carved into a charming base-relief of the Santa Maria, the ship which bore Columbus on his great adventure. In a corner stands a little statue of Columbus, the boy. These are the only mementos of the great man who as a child lived here; for the rest the house is bare

We had to cut down expenses, so my husband did his share by switching to Target and rolling his own cigarettes. I felt kind of sorry for him at first, but I notice he's more cheerful than ever.

"He tells me that Target rolls up into cigarettes that look and taste like ready-mades. Target is the same mixture of foreign and domestic tobacco that the ready-mades use. You get 40 special gummed papers free. No wonder my husband tells me he's glad he's changed. He's getting more cigarette pleasure than ever, and we're saving about enough to pay for the family's bread and butter each month."

HUSBANDS, PLEASE NOTE!

You pay less than one-sixth the government tax on ready-mades when you roll your own from TARGET. Buy a pack of TARGET. Roll yourself fifteen or twenty smokes. If you don't say they are the best cigarettes you have ever smoked, return the half empty package to your dealer's and you'll get your dime back.

Said Lydia to Roy

By FANNIE HURST

(By McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)
(WNU Service)

THE sun lay blanching the hills to the splendor of perfect spring and as far as the eye could reach, from the little swelling of the land where Helen stood, stanting orchards, with young trees eager to bear, reached to the horizon. Presently, very presently, they would burst into incredible blossom and a world crammed already to its perfection with beauties of one sort or another, would accomplish the impossible, and become more beautiful.

At least, that was the way Helen, eighteen, and with the love of a youth in her heart, felt as she viewed it from the rear of her father's fruit farm, that was known as Farnham's.

With that kind of youth in her heart, and added to it love, and a one-hour-old betrothal, it was natural that to Helen, at eighteen, the quieter, more adult world which contained her father, Adam Farnham, and her mother, Cora, should seem, by comparison, lusterless.

You wondered, when you were eighteen and so in love with life that the ground under your feet seemed to quiver, when it was only you yourself quivering from love of it, just what there was left for forty and forty-five; Cora and Adam.

It mattered only to have been kissed, as she, Helen, had just been kissed by the youth named Blair Beck, who had just ridden over in his brand new car from his father's farm, not twenty miles distant, and with a ring in his pocket which now sparkled on her left hand. They were to be married and live in a white house with green shutters on the Beck farm, the promised gift of the senior Beck to his son, and the blessings of all four parents had descended on the youngsters as the apple blossoms would presently descend and whiten the scene for miles around.

The only deterrent, it seemed to Helen, was to have reached the peak of life so soon. From now on, what could there be but anticlimax to the ecstasy of this; the ecstasy of the betrothal kisses that still lay slinging against her lips; the strange sweet tingling of the flesh; the dream of tomorrow that could not be quick enough in coming.

"You are young and too eager for life, my lamb," her mother told her, trying to calm her excitements. "Let everything come in its turn. There are compensations for every age."

How old the mother of Helen seemed to her when she said this, seated beside her lamp in her perpetually gray gown, with her gray hair drawn in low portieres over her ears, and her hands so tranquil at their tasks of mending or sewing frocks. How sapless. What was there left for Cora? Father, of course, but they had had everything together. Adam was as relaxed now as Cora was, and there were deep braces ground in perpendicular lines on the sides of his mouth, and they seldom kissed, he and Cora, and it was nothing for him to come in dog tired of an evening, kick out of his boots and just lounge with his head sometimes on Cora's lap, if she sat at the head of the sofa. And little to say. Scarcely ever any of the tender, lovely things to say, except if Cora happened to be ailing, and then he could be tender.

But who wanted tenderness only when one was ailing? Who wanted tenderness from a tired gray man in his stocking feet; who, in turn, and the private question to herself shocked Helen, who wanted to bestow tenderness upon a pale old lady with hair of a gray pallor? Helen did, of course. Helen wanted to bestow tenderness upon both Cora and Adam, because of the passionate love she felt for them. The love of daughter for parents. But that was different. The question still remained high in her heart. How dared one face the down side of life, after the ecstasy of a present like hers? Cora and Adam must have had that youth, too, and now look. Oh, one must live, one must live in youth—to store up against the bankruptcy of age!

They were married, Helen and Blair, when the ground was white with the apple blossoms, and the day they returned from a four months' honeymoon the last slap of green and white paint was on the cottage on the Beck place and four new, friendly, amiable and retrospective neighbors were there to wish them endless blessings.

There were blessings. Health, children and a farm that widened and prospered. Blair succeeded well and the children of Helen were the fine, ripe children of health, and the sorrows that came were the inevitable ones of passing life and death.

With the years, the four parents sickened and died; there were frightful illnesses among the children, drought came and pestilence among the cattle, but in the main, the good overbalanced the ill. Drought passed, pestilence lifted, the children thrived and the beauty that was Helen's ripened, bore its fruit, and oh, so gently declined.

The same with Blair. His heftiest years reached their peak, his broad shoulders carried their heaviest burdens, and slowly, almost imperceptibly, the years marched down. So imperceptibly that Helen, who had not felt her body wither, awoke one day to the shock of a realization that was almost more than she could bear.

Lydia, her lovely child, her little child, her little girl, only yesterday with plaits down her back, was betrothed. There was nothing one could say, because it was right that she should be. The youth was a fine, understanding one of her position and kind. They were cleanly, rightly, in love. They were of age. Helen and Blair, gazing with amazement upon this phenomenon which had befallen them, were the older generation, looking down the years at the love of their young ones. A rather quiet Helen, with gray in her hair and eyes that smiled more often than her lips; a quiet, undemonstrative Blair, who came and went without much ado, and upon whom the years had climbed, whitening his hair and bending his back a little.

Remote, a little gray, a little lusterless, they seemed to Lydia and the boy, Roy, who came asking blessing. So old, so finished, as it were, so dear, too, but pale silhouettes against the pale, unexciting, uninteresting background of age. Across this chasm, the youth of Lydia and Roy looked at Helen and Blair and back across this chasm Blair and Helen found themselves looking at their daughter.

"Blair, were we at their age ever as callow, as adorably foolish and outside the meaning of life as Lydia and Roy seem? How can two such shallow little pans contain happiness? How can they know the rich, sweet things of life that we know? How long they must wait, dear! In a way it seems sad to be so young. . . ."

Across the chasm, Helen and Roy, starting at age, held one another tightly by the hands.

"How terrible it must be to be old," said Lydia to Roy, and Roy to Lydia.

Whole World Joined in Mad Desire for Change

In the reign of Charles I, when disturbance was brewing in England, Falkland imparted to parliament the maxim: "When it is not necessary to change, it is necessary not to change!"

He was for no violent change but for medication of public affairs without it. Would he were alive to set the fashion now when change runs loose in the world! Change for no good reason, merely for the sake of change. One's first morning coffee comes in a can with a new label, a new double lid. The old label was all right, nothing the matter with it; the top of the can fitted perfectly; nothing ailed it. The new label is a shock, the double lid an impediment. One's shaving soap has a new holder, new cover, or comes in a new size every year. The same with tooth powder; new cans, no better, just new.

Do not our good friends the merchants—does not everybody now—undervalue the familiar? For the familiar does have a value. One likes to get what he got before in the same kind of a wrapper, whether it is gospel truth or English marmalade. There is a rush to translate the Bible into contemporary vernacular. Little is gained by it. It just makes unfamiliar words and sounds of what was part of the mental texture of millions of people.—Life.

First Modern English Poet

Reuben Post Halleck says: "Before Chaucer's works English was, as we have seen, a language of dialects. He wrote in the Midland dialect, and aided in making that the language of England. Lounsbury says of Chaucer's influence: 'No really national language could exist until a literature had been created which would be admired and studied by all who could read and taken as a model by all who could write. It was only a man of genius who could lift up one of these dialects into a pre-eminence over the rest, or could ever give to the scattered forces existing in any of them the unity and vigor of life. This was the work that Chaucer did.' For this reason he deserves to be called our first modern English poet. At first sight, his works look far harder to read than they really are, because the spelling has changed so much since Chaucer's day."

Inventor of Post Cards

It was on the suggestion of an Austrian, Doctor Herrmann, that the post card was born. He had advocated the introduction of cards about the size of an envelope, to be carried at a reduced rate, the sender to be limited to a maximum of 20 words, including signature and address. This was in 1869. The idea was quickly adopted by the Austrian post office, and other postal authorities followed suit, including Great Britain, where the post card was introduced in October, 1870. But, unknown to Doctor Herrmann, the post card was suggested, years before 1869, by Heinrich von Stephan, the founder of the Universal Postal Union. It was turned down, but Von Stephan was the man who thought of it first.

All-Time Holiday Time

Some experts of France are trying the experiment of spreading vacation time over the entire year. It has been suggested by some employees, who would rather have their vacation when the weather was not so hot as to prevent the full enjoyment of the time. There is much to be said for and against this scheme, but some employers argue that it is much more convenient to have a few away at one time rather than several, as has been the case heretofore. Others claim that there is not much business in the heated term, and therefore the assistants can be spared best at that time.

Who Was Who?

By Louise M. Comstock

CA. EY JONES

"Come, all you rounders, if you want hear. The story told about a brave engineer; Casey Jones was the rounder's name; On a six-eight wheeler he won his fame."

AS CASEY JONES, whose heroic death in a railroad collision near Vaughan, Miss., in 1900, has been celebrated in a long ballad boasting some six or eight different and variously quotable versions, John Luther Jones, hailing from Cayce (pronounced Casey), Tenn., has gained a unique sort of immortality. He is a popular hero of the day when railroading knew a glamor lost in the modern transportation system, a giant of a man, swarthy, black headed, notable as a teetotaler and a habitual and melodious whistler.

In 1900 Jones was engineer on the old Illinois Central "Cannonball" running south from Jackson, Miss. One night Jo Lewis, one of Casey's buddies, was too ill to answer the call from the roundhouse to take out his train, and Casey, just in from a long run, offered to "double out" for him. The train was an "expedite" freight, run as fast as a passenger train. What went wrong nobody knows. But the crash was sudden and complete, and Casey, though he saved the life of his fireman Slim, was himself killed. A negro wiper named Wallace Saunders poured out his grief for the accident in the original version of the song. A professional song writer, playing the showhouse in Jackson, picked it up in the railroad yards, polished it off and gave it to the world in its present form.

CALIFORNIA JOE

HERO of more than one dime novel thriller, nevertheless there once was a real "California Joe." Gen. George A. Custer, for whom he once served as chief of scouts, writes of him in "My Life on the Plains" as follows: "He was known by the euphonious title of 'California Joe'; no other name seemed ever to have been given him and no other name ever seemed necessary." But Custer was wrong, for Joe's other—and real—name was Moses E. Milner.

He was born in Kentucky in 1820, ran away from home at the age of fourteen to seek adventure in the West and during the next twenty-five years found plenty of it as a prospector and miner in California, Montana and in the Black Hills of South Dakota; as an Indian fighter and as a scout and guide for army officers during the Indian wars in the sixties and seventies.

Milner got his name of California Joe thus: One day in 1862 when he was riding into Virginia City, Mont., some inquisitive strangers asked him where he was from. Milner, who was an inveterate joker, replied "From California, where most of the gold is." Next they asked him his name and Milner, resenting their curiosity, told them it was Joe. "All right" they replied, "We'll just call you California Joe, if you are from that state." And that was the name he bore to the day of his death in 1876 when he was assassinated by an enemy near Fort Robinson, Neb.

THE BLOOMER

WITH the prevailing tendency toward stender figures and closely fitted garments, the bloomer has today lost much of its former standing as a woman's undergarment. But its influence, and certainly its original spirit, amply carried out today in many feminine costumes, from lounging pajamas to riding breeches and one-piece bathing suits, all bespeaking the emancipation of woman, to further which Mrs. Amelia Bloomer some eighty years ago bestowed upon this piece of wearing apparel her good name.

In the day when legs were still limbs, Mrs. Bloomer started the community at Lowell, Mass., by appearing one day in full trousers gathered in at the ankles, worn under a skirt shockingly abbreviated to a point midway between ankles and knee. In vain did the valiant crusader point out that the costume was more decent than the customary layers of petticoats, and certainly more sanitary than skirts which dragged in the street. In vain did she argue woman's right to dress comfortably in her little publication, The Lily. The New York Tribune made editorial comment on Bloomerism, Bloomerites and Bloomers, the entire country took up the controversy, eager feminists here and there adopted Bloomerism and dropped it under a deluge of criticism, and Mrs. Bloomer's name became irrevocably attached to the garment she fostered.

In 1865 Mrs. Bloomer herself abandoned the costume, because, she explained, of the embarrassing havoc a high wind played with the short skirt! (© 1923, Western Newspaper Union.)

"Hair of the Dog"

The origin of the expression "the hair of the dog that bit you" is that when a man has had a debauch he is advised to take next morning "a hair of the same dog," i. e., a glass or two of the tipple that caused the trouble, in allusion to an ancient notion that the burnt hair of a dog is an antidote to its bite.—Washington Star.

A Scare for the Wolf

"Do you think I could keep the wolf from the door by my singing?" asked the musical young man.

"You could," replied Miss Cayenne, "if the wolf had any sort of an ear for music."

Blue Star Kills The Itch Germs

To get rid of Itch, tetter, rash, ringworm, foot itch, eczema or other skin troubles, cover the affected parts with Blue Star Ointment. It melts at body heat, turning to liquid that goes into the skin pores carrying tested medicines that kill the most stubborn types of Itch. It then soothes and heals raw inflamed skin. Clean and pleasant in odor. Money back if it fails. Sold by all drug stores. (Adv.)

Which Is It, Ump?!

She was addressing a group of eager wide-eyed children at the regular library story hour. "Today, boys and girls, I am going to tell you a real scary story about a vampire. You know what a vampire is, don't you?"

"Oh, sure," answered one sophisticated youngster scornfully. "You mean the one who decides in a baseball game."

"Ho, ho," laughed another in derision. "Listen to him. He's talking about an umpire."

Girl at the Top in Health Tests

Millions of boys and girls all over the world, thousands of them right here in the West, are being restored to health and strength by the purely vegetable tonic and laxative known as California Fig Syrup and endorsed by physicians for over 50 years.

Children need no urging to take it. They love its rich, fruity flavor. Nothing can compete with it as a gentle, but certain laxative, and it goes further than this. It gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels so these organs continue to act normally, of their own accord. It stimulates the appetite, helps digestion.

A Kansas mother, Mrs. Dana Alligre, 610 Monroe St., Topeka, says: "Bonnie B. is absolutely the picture of health, now, with her ruddy cheeks, bright eyes and plump but graceful little body and she stands at the top in every health test."

Much of the credit for her perfect condition is due to California Fig Syrup. We have used it since babyhood to keep her bowels active during colds or any children's ailments and she has always had an easy time with them. She always responds to its gentle urging and is quickly back to normal."

Ask your druggist for California Fig Syrup and look for the word "California" on the carton so you'll always get the genuine.

Orthography
Frederick spelled badly and received very poor grades. One day he returned with a paper well sprinkled with the usual crosses. His mother looked it over.

"Here is one word marked wrong that is right," she said.

"No, she knows," replied the lad hopelessly.

"You must show it to your teacher, anyway," said his mother.

Frederick did as he was told and returning to his mother, reported: "She was right," he said, "she says that k-n-e-w does not spell canoe."

To keep clean and healthy take Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets. They regulate liver, bowels and stomach.—Adv.

History From Trees

For a quarter of a century Dr. Douglass of the University of Arizona has studied the rings which mark the annual growth of trees. He demonstrated that the rings formed each year vary in width in direct proportion to the amount of rainfall—a wet year produces a thick ring and vice versa. Tree growths in the giant sequoias of California were traced back three thousand years. Doctor Douglass made an unbroken annual calendar back to 700 A. D. By the study of timbers taken from pueblos he gave exact dates of events in the history of those Indian peoples back as far as the Eighth century.

Fifty and Fit

A MAN is as old—or as young—as his organs. At fifty, you can be in your prime. Why go along with "fairly good health" when you might be enjoying vigor you haven't felt for years? There's a simple little thing anyone can do to keep the vital organs stimulated, and feel fit all the time. People don't realize how sluggish they've grown until they've tried it. The stimulant that will stir your system to new life is Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin. It will make a most amazing difference in many ways. This famous doctor's prescription is a delicious syrup made with fresh herbs, active senna, and pure pepsin. It starts its good work with the first spoonful. That's all you need to drive away the dullness and headache of a bilious spell, and rid the system of that slow poison that saps your strength. It's better than a tonic for tired bowels, and unlike habit-forming laxatives you can take it freely or give it to any child. And it isn't expensive. Get some syrup pepsin today, and take a little tonight. Don't wait until you're sick to give your system this wonderful help. You can avoid those spells of biliousness or constipation. A spoonful every now and then is better than constant worry about the condition of your bowels, or fear of auto-intoxication as you grow older. Dr. Caldwell's syrup pepsin protects the system. All druggists keep this preparation.

It may be your teeth, after all, that make so much trouble. You chew too much food with them. Man is the only creature with a conscience; and that is chiefly what makes him unhappy.

Can you RESIST COLDS?

A cold in the head is a nuisance, and it undermines your fitness too. Doctors have found that a good store of Vitamin A helps your body resist the common cold. This vitamin is found in abundance in Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil. . . a pleasing, palatable way of taking this valuable oil. Men and women—as well as the youngsters—find that the emulsion builds up their resistance, and that it's easy to take. Scott & Bowne, Bloomfield, N. J., Sales Representative, Harold F. ### Migratory Waistlines

The waistline of the members of the "fair sex" has now returned to almost the normal level after having slipped down almost to the knees. These vagaries, however, like the rest of fashion's fancies, are no new thing, and in an old French book published in 1820, when George IV was king, we find this sentence: "The waist is a part of the body, whose length, breadth, shortness, or smallness is entirely regulated by fashions, which sometimes does not appear to allow of any."

MRS. S. L. DODSON

The many friends of the family in this community were shocked and grieved to learn of the sudden death of Mrs. S. L. Dodson Sunday afternoon at the family home four miles east of town.

Funeral services were held at the Hedley Methodist Church at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, the pastor, Rev. A. V. Hendrix, officiating. The remains were laid to rest in Rowe Cemetery.

Mrs. Dodson was born near Spencer, Okla., April 24th, 1891. In early life she was converted and joined the Methodist church. The family moved to Hedley six years ago. She was a faithful wife and mother, a good friend and neighbor, and her death is deeply deplored.

Mrs. Dodson is survived by her husband, S. L. Dodson, eight children, and three stepchildren. To them we extend our sincerest sympathy.

INFORMATION REGARDING GOVERNMENT FARM LOANS

County Farm Agent Brown was in Hedley Tuesday, and gave the Informer man some information regarding 1932 Government farm loans.

The Government intends to loan only to those who are unable to finance their 1932 crop production, and who cannot get the necessary aid elsewhere.

G. L. Boykin of Clarendon has been appointed loan agent for Donley county, and application blanks will be sent to him. As soon as the blanks arrive, applicants may see Mr. Boykin at the City Hall in Clarendon from 1:30 to 3:00 p. m. on any day except Sunday.

One paragraph of the loan regulations of particular interest is as follows:

If the applicant for a loan is a tenant, or is farming land under contract for deed or so-called crop contract, or has given a prior mortgage on his 1932 crop, he must secure the waivers of the actual owners of the land, his landlord, and all prior mortgage holders in the space provided on the mortgage form for the purpose. If the applicant is the owner of the land, and farms it with tenants or share croppers, waivers of such tenants or share croppers must be secured in the space provided on the mortgage form for the purpose. If the applicant leases the land from another, and in turn operates it with tenants or share croppers, waivers of both the actual owner of the leased land (unless the rental of said land has been paid) and of said tenants or share croppers must be secured in the space provided on the mortgage form. In all cases where waivers are required the person waiving must certify that at the time of signing such waiver he is in actual possession and owner of any rent note, mortgage, land sales contract, or other paper, and must enter into an agreement on this form that he will not assign, transfer, hypothecate, or sell such security without first having secured the written consent of the duly authorized representative of the Secretary of Agriculture; and further, that in the event advances are made in compliance with pertinent regulations of the Secretary of Agriculture, for the purpose of harvesting and marketing the said crops, it is agreed that the money so advanced may be repaid from the proceeds derived from the sale thereof prior to the satisfaction of any lien, claim or interest of the signor.

HOW TO KILL YOUR CHURCH

Don't come.

If you do come, come late

When you come, come with a frown.

At every service ask yourself,

"What do I get out of this?"

Never accept office. It's better to stay outside and criticize.

Visit other churches about half of the time to show your pastor that you are not tied down to him. There is nothing like independence.

Let the pastor earn his money; let him do all the work.

Sit pretty well back and never sing. If you have to sing, sing out of tune and behind everybody else.

Never pay in advance, especially for religion. Wait until you get your money's worth, and then wait a bit longer.

Never encourage the preacher. If you like a sermon, keep mum about it.

It is good to tell your pastor's failings to any strangers that may happen in; they might be a long time finding them out.

Of course you can't be expected to get any new members for the church with such a pastor as he is.

If your church unfortunately happens to be harmonious, call it apathy or indifference or lack of zeal, or anything under the sun except what it is.

If there happens to be a few zealous workers in the church, be sure to make a tremendous protest against the church being run by a clique.
