TO THE VOTERS OF DONLEY COUNTY

THIS POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT is bought and paid for by friends of

who is a candidate for the office of County Judge in Donley County

Mr. Lowe has been a citizen of this county for more than fifteen years. His stand on all community interests is above question. His character and reputation are good. His business judgment is sound. In all his dealings he has been on the square. We recommend to each voter in the county a diligent inquiry concerning his ability and his sincerity in seeking this office.

Mr. Lowe is a strict believer in economy. He believes that a candidate offering his services to the county should be willing to work for what his county can afford to pay him, regardless of what the amount might be. He believes the county should live within its income, the same as the individual. He believes all salaries of county officials should be reduced in same ratio as its revenue is reduced.

We ask your careful consideration in his behalf.

(Bought and paid for by friends of S. W. Lowe)

CANDIDATES INVITED HERE NEXT FRIDAY

The Parent Teacher Association of Hedley will sponsor an ice cream supper at the Hedley High School auditorium Friday, June 24, at 7:30 p. m.

All candidates of the county are cordially invited to attend and meet the citizens of the Hedley community, and give a talk of not more than ten minutes in length.

With each dish of cream a ticket will be given, and some one will receive a quilt. This quilt is to be given by the Hedley Rural Club.

Everybody welcome.

Mr and Mrs. Marion Williams of Roswell, N. M., old time Donley county residents, visited the J. B. Masterson family several days the past week.

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENT RESULTS IN INJURIES

Two cars, one occupied by J. B. Reed, Fred Lovelace, Hersey Mobley and Mr. Proctor of this city, the other by two men from Pampa, met in a head on collision about midnight Thursday night of last week on White hill, two miles east of town. All of the men sustained cuts and bruises. Fred Lovelace and one of the Pampa men receiving the most serious injuries.

We did not learn the cause of the wreck, other than that the men from Pampa are said to have admitted being on the wrong side of the road.

Both of the cars were badly smashed.

TEXAS RAILROADS APPEAL TO PEOPLE

The attention of our readers is called to an advertisement in this issue signed "The Texas Railroads," this being the first of several that will appear in The Informer during the summer.

These advertisements are educational, giving the railroads' side of the present day Transportation controversy. It is our intention to make editorial comment on this subject from time to time in early issues.

The welfare of the railroads is of much greater importance to the general public than most people realize. A careful reading of these articles can hardly fail to convince you of the truth of this statement.

Where the Wonders of Electricity Will Be Shown

Working on its way to completion, the electrical group of A Century of Progress, Chicago's World's Fair in 1933, here shown as seen from an airplane. The structure is 1,200 feet long and 300 feet wide. Steel trees—the framework which is visible in the picture—hanging gardens, electrical fountains, cascades flowing down the facade of the semi-circular unit, and brightly colored and landscaped terraces are among the interesting features of this group.

YOUNG FOLKS' STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

HOW can it be so hot in a cool place? Just ask Farmer Brown's Boy. He knows. He had gone to the Green Forest because he had thought it would be cooler there than anywhere else on that dreadfully hot day. And he was right. In the depths of the Green Forest it was fairly cool. You see, the trees made shade, and it was only there and there that the Jolly Little Sunshine could find a way through the millions of little leaves of the trees. So Farmer Brown's Boy was quite comfortable as he walked through the Green Forest looking for the cause of Sammy Jay's excitement.

When at last he reached the big hemlock tree which was Busy Bee's storehouse and which at that very moment Buster Bear was robbing of its honey, Farmer Brown's Boy was still quite comfortable. But no sooner had he discovered what was going on than he broke out into perspiration as if he had suddenly stepped into a very warm place. Of course the air wasn't any warmer

WHEN SOMEONE LEAVES US

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

FRIENDS are not only made together playing. For idle friendships seldom last for long; But friends together working, planning, praying. Know finer friendships that are doubly strong. There's a neighbor's friendship with a neighbor. The sort of friendship heaven has understood. A brotherhood, a sisterhood, of labor. Together working for some common good.

So we have worked, have planned, have prayed together. Have formed new friendships, firmer found the old. Have sung our songs, and even mocked the weather. Each day a link, each link of shining gold. Some joy perhaps may come from hours of pleasure. But hours of labor bring the true reward. A better friendship heaps the fuller measure Of those who work together with the Lord.

HONEY AND CANDY

HONEY, sugars, dried fruits and candy, the purest that can be made, are all quick energy foods. The tired shopper, with a chocolate cream or two or any like amount of candy will take new hope and plod on. Our physicians now are recommending candy as an essential for children; we are advised to remember "to treat candy and other forms of sweets as food." They have a place in every well-balanced diet, just as all other varieties of food have. Pure candy is a safe and requisite food for children as well as for adults.

The fondness for sweets is a natural craving and should be indulged wisely, as it is an expression of a definite bodily need. The wise parent will give the child candy for dessert, or far enough from the meal to not satisfy the appetite and allow the child to refuse the food served at the table. By experiment it has been found that sugar in some form is most quickly absorbed and assimilated, thus giving quick energy. Tuck in a piece or two of candy in the luncheon basket, be it for young son's or father's, they both will appreciate the kind attention. Our candy manufacturers tell us that peppermint flavor is called for in candies more than all other flavors combined. As one has several flavors from which to choose and many varieties of candies, soft or hard, he is indeed hard to please who cannot find kinds to suit. One need never hesitate when debating about an appropriate gift, for a box of candy is always in season and always enjoyed. Therefore, when in doubt, give candy. With bridge such an everyday affair, we find even the cubes of sugar in dainty boxes, formed in diamonds, hearts and clubs, making even the cup of tea or coffee more attractive and appealing.

CASE OF MISS GRAY

By JANE OSBORN

IN SPITE of his twenty-eight years, Doctor Morley looked very young; in spite of his youthful appearance and the fact that he had been practicing medicine only two or three years, he was one of the busiest and best-liked doctors in Tilden. One of the older doctors had suggested in all seriousness that he raise a moustache. That would make him look older and more professional. Not such a bad idea, thought Ted Morley, until he suggested it to Hope Gray, the girl in spotless white linen who acted as general assistant in his office. Hope pursed her lips, looked critically at Ted's smooth face and said she liked him better as he was. That settled the matter.

The only time that Ted really felt the need of an appearance of greater age was when he was acting as chairman of the committee of student nurses at the Tilden hospital. The fact was, he was somewhat in awe of Miss Drury, the middle-aged matron of the hospital, and on leaving the hospital after visiting his patients there, he had a strong impulse to hurry past her private office without giving her an opportunity to confer with him.

One summer's day he was making—or trying to make—one of his hasty exits from the hospital when Miss Drury pounced upon him. "Sorry to detain you," she said, accusingly. "But there's the case of Miss Gray. It was six months ago the matter was first presented and we have done nothing about it. It would be quite out of order for me to go ahead with the matter myself. A new class will be coming in next month—we really ought to let her know."

"To be sure," said Ted Morley, and said something about having intended to get in touch with the girl, and something more about having been extremely busy. "You see she applied for appointment in the training school. She has no high-school diploma—and in such cases candidates have to satisfy the chairman of the committee of their educational fitness. I would suggest that you send for the girl and have her go to your office where you can make whatever inquiries you want. She lives somewhere in the country—a copy of the letter is included in this memo."

A few more remarks and Ted Morley managed to get started. Disagreeable business that. He thrust the letter in his pocket, hurried to his car and back by the shortest way to his office. He was especially anxious to arrive before Hope left for the day. If he had the courage, he wanted to ask Hope to marry him. He was quite equal to the ordeal before Miss Drury nabbed him—now he felt timid.

Somehow his courage came back as he entered his office and saw Hope sitting there at his desk with her pretty fair head bent over one of his medical magazines. They sat opposite each other with the broad flat desk between them and Ted took the telephone receiver from its hook so there might be no interruption in the important business he had before him. Then leaning over his desk and looking eagerly into her fair young face he told her he wanted to marry her. He waited—half expecting Hope would present a final rejection then and there. Instead, looking rather confused, she told him that it was rather rash for him to propose marriage to a girl of whom he knew nothing.

"I'm not even a nurse," she said. "They didn't think I knew enough—they wouldn't have me—"

"But after what I have seen of some nurses," said Ted, "I'm glad you never took hospital training. Then you really did want to go into training?"

"Ever since I was a little girl that had been my ambition," said Hope. "You see my mother was dead—and father had quite a bit of money. I never spoke of that before. I said I lived on a farm—so I do, in a way. Father calls it an estate—but I go and come in the bus. Well, I never went to high school, just somehow managed to get a smatter here and there from governesses and tutors. I got father to consent to my taking the hospital training—but apparently they didn't want me—so I saw your advertisement—and you know the rest. I thought maybe I had better tell you about it—because—"

"Because then I would understand why you didn't want to marry me?"

Hope put her two hands across the desk and clasped one of Ted's. "Of course I want to marry you—how could I help it?"

It was not until late that night that Ted remembered the memorandum from Miss Drury that he had thrust in his pocket. He glanced quickly through the letter written six months ago and at the end he saw the signature, "Hope Gray."

Hope arrived betimes the next morning—had insisted on working until Ted found another helper. Ted showed her the letter. "It was all my fault you didn't get an appointment," he said. "They would be glad to take you—I am sure. Perhaps if you knew that—it would make a difference, Hope—"

But what Hope said made Ted feel sure she would rather marry him than train in any hospital.

A CANDIDATE'S GRIEF

Now that campaigns are warming up, it may be as good a time as any to republish the experience of an Arkansas candidate for sheriff which has been going the rounds for several years.

The story has gathered various and sundry additions in its march down the corridors of time, the latest version being as follows.

Lost four months and 20 days canvassing; lost 1860 hours of sleep thinking about the election; lost 40 acres of corn and a crop of sweet potatoes; lost two front teeth and a lot of hair in personal combat with an opponent; donated one beef, four shoats and five sheep to barbecues; gave away two pairs of suspenders, five calico dresses, five dolls and 18 baby rattles; kissed 126 babies; kindled 14 kitchen fires; put up eight stoves; cut 14 cords wood; carried 24 buckets of water; gathered seven wagon loads of corn; pulled 475 bundles fodder; walked 4000 miles; shook hands 9,090 times; told 10,001 lies and talked enough to make 1000 books; attended 26 revival meetings; was baptized four times by immersion and twice by sprinkling; contributed $50 to foreign missions; made love to nine grass widows; got dog bit 19 times;—and then got defeated.

Our friends will hereafter kindly refrain from referring to the editor as an adult. We make this request after reading the latest definition of the word. A pupil, replying to the teacher's question, says that "an adult is one who has stopped growing except in the middle."

Fire Loss Heavy

The annual fire loss on farms originating from careless handling of petroleum products such as kerosene and gasoline is estimated by the Department of Agriculture to be about $7,500,000. To curtail this loss as much as possible, the department is issuing bulletins to farmers on the dangers of handling the materials carelessly and giving advice on how they should be stored.

THE WAY OUT

With all the agitation regarding tax reduction developing, the Savannah (Mo) Reporter advances the sound argument that

"There never was a time when buying at home meant so much as right now. There is no better way of keeping money in circulation than by supplying all of your needs from local merchants and home enterprises. That is one permanent way to reduce taxes.

One little store in your community pays more taxes in your county than a whole state full of people elsewhere.

Patronage is the only way any community, county or town can make good stores and receive road and school tax therefrom, thus assuring other local opportunities.

We are glad to note that M. J. Smith was able to come to town Saturday after having been sick the past four weeks.

THE PEOPLE OF TEXAS
MUST DECIDE THE FATE OF TEXAS RAILROADS

● THE WELFARE of Texas and Texans has gone and will always go hand in hand with the welfare of Texas railroads. Their dependency upon each other is absolute.

In 1929 Texas railroads gave employment to 82,956 employees, to whom they paid annually $126,674,543 in salaries and wages. In 1930 this number decreased to 70,739 while the payroll declined to $109,892,226. In 1931 the number of employees fell to 57,098 and the payroll to $89,505,918.

This represents a decrease of more than $37,000,000 in purchasing power in Texas communities. There has been a corresponding decrease in purchase of materials and supplies by Texas railroads. The ability to have maintained railroad payrolls and purchases would have been a very important factor in overcoming the present trying economic condition.

The decline in railroad payrolls and purchases is due only in part to economic conditions. The revenues of the railroads have been affected not only by business conditions but to a very large extent by loss of traffic to trucks and buses using the public highways in competition with the railroads.

● The time has come when the people of Texas must decide whether the traffic of this state can best be carried by the railroads, using facilities which they built and maintain at their own expense, or by trucks and buses using the highways built and maintained at the taxpayers' expense.

Mrs. Putnam Great Solo Flight Across the Atlantic—House Rejects Legalized Beer—Hoover Against Democratic Relief Plans.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

EXACTLY five years after Charles A. Lindbergh completed his epoch-making flight from New York to Paris, Amelia Earhart, now Mrs. G. P. Putnam, landed in Ireland after the first solo flight across the Atlantic ever made by a woman. The intrepid young aviator had started for Paris, but had turned out exhausted after 14 hours of flying, and had to descend at Culmone near London. She had made the distance from Har-borace, N. F., in 14 hours and 54 minutes, and landed without injury to herself or her plane. It was her second crossing of the ocean in a plane, but the other time, in 1928, she was merely a passenger with Wilbur Stutz and Lou Gordon.

Mrs. G. P. Putnam

"I made this flight just for fun," said Mrs. Putnam after landing, and she admitted her achievement meant nothing to aviation. Nevertheless, she was the recipient of innumerable congratulatory messages, from President Hoover and Prime Minister MacDonald among others, and when she flew on to London in a borrowed plane she was given a great ovation. She was the guest of Ambassador Mellon who, with members of his embassy staff, met her at the Hansworth manor.

Besides being the first woman to fly the Atlantic alone, the young American girl set a new record for the crossing and also shattered the distance record for women set by Ruth Nichols at 1,977.6 miles. Her distance was 2,026.5 miles.

LEGALIZED beer is another fight, and won't have a chance again until the national conventions meet in June and go into session over the wet and dry plank for their platforms. Following the example set by the senate, the house rejected the O'Connor-Hull resolution legalizing and taxing 2.75 percent beer. The vote was 199 to 223 and technically was on the motion to discharge the ways and means committee from further consideration of the bill, which if carried would have brought the measure before the house. The two parties were nearly evenly split in the vote.

Apparently the vote had lost 18 votes since March 1, when the house rejected a resolution for re-submission of the Eighteenth Amendment, but Representative Raitt explained that the shift meant some anti-prohibitionists had realized that their only logical move is to continue the fight for re-submission.

SOME peculiar things are resulting from the prohibition controversy. The Democrats of Texas, formerly very dry, in their state convention adopted a resolution proposing re-submission of the Eighteenth Amendment to the states. The measure was carried by a vote of 564 after what amounted almost to a riot. President Hoover, it was reported in Washington, abandoned his attitude of aloofness and took an active part in framing a mildly moderate plank for the Republican national platform, so mild that it probably would not seriously offend the drys and probably would not satisfy the wets. Democrats and dry reformers among the Methodists and dry reformers, Franklin Roosevelt's pronouncement would be satisfactory to the dry Democrats because that probably was as far as they would go.

SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH of Idaho says he is going to attend the Republican national convention, and there are indications that he will balk in his determination to stay away from the gathering in Chicago was something of a blow to the drys, who had counted on him to lead their forces in the convention and to introduce their dry plank.

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT voiced his opposition to the Democratic proposals of big government bond issues for construction of federal public works as a measure of relief of unemployment. In the same statement from the White House he further urged his own plan of legislation to permit loans by the reconstruction finance corporation to public and private agencies for home-producing projects. Huge outlays for federal public buildings and similar works he said would be wasteful and destructive of the public confidence essential to economic recovery.

The Democratic members indicated they would fight the president on this issue even at the risk of prolonging the session of congress which already appears likely to run until after the national convention have been held. Senator Barbour of New Jersey, Republican, introduced a bill carrying out Mr. Hoover's idea. It would pre-vide the reconstruction finance corporation with $1,500,000,000 additional capital for loans for self-liquidating projects that would furnish jobs for the unemployed.

Senator Bronson Cutting, the "progressive" Republican from New Mexico, followed with a bill providing for just the kind of relief aid which the President had opposed, and in introducing it Cutting made a caustic attack on Mr. Hoover. The Cutting bill carries three billion dollars for road construction and two billions for rivers and harbors work as well as public buildings and other federal works.

COMMITTEE hearings on Representative Fred Britten's bill to place the Hawaiian islands under an army or navy commission began and attracted a large number of witnesses and spectators. Among the former was Mrs. Granville Fortescue, mother-in-law of Lieut. Thomas Massie and his co-defendant in the recent sensational murder trial in Honolulu. Testimony was heard from Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff; other army and navy officers, and Floyd Gibbons, war correspondent.

ELEVEN men of great national prominence sent to the Republican and Democratic leaders of the senate and house an earnest appeal to "lay aside every form of partisanship" and, with their party followers, to unite to balance the federal budget.

The signers of this letter were: Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, Republican; Alfred E. Smith, Democratic candidate for the Presidency in 1928; Gov. Albert C. Ritchie of Maryland, Democrat; Gov. Wilbur L. Cross of Connecticut, Democrat; Gov. Joseph B. Ely of Massachusetts, Democrat; Alanson B. Houghton of New York, Republican; Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, Republican; William H. Crocker of San Francisco, member of Republican national committee; Charles Nagel of St. Louis, Republican; Roland S. Morris of Philadelphia, Democrat, and John Grier Hibben, retiring president of Princeton university, Republican.

Replies from the party leaders were prompt but scarcely satisfying. Senator Jim Watson, majority leader of the senate, said: "The letter is three months too late. We have done everything they suggest toward a balanced budget, but we are hindered by special interests. There have been no signs of partisanship at any time."

Senator Harrison of Mississippi, Democratic leader on the tax bill, said: "There has been no partisanship in the house or senate on the problem of balancing the budget. This legislation will be achieved without any spirit of partisanship."

Other senators took occasion to praise themselves and their opponents for nonpartisan and wise action, and then all went ahead with their scrapping over the tariff features of the revenue bill.

PRESIDENT P. B. CAREY of the Chicago Board of Trade went down to Washington and conferred with Secretary of Agriculture Hyde, and took occasion to make the fiercest attack on the federal farm board and its doings that has been heard. He called the board's record a "ghastly smear" and said its result had been the almost complete abolishment of the open, competitive market which required 75 years to establish. He declared wheat could and would advance if the board were forced by congress to desist at once from its "senseless efforts," and said he could appoint a committee of six members of the Chicago Board of Trade who "in a short time, and with absolutely no drain on the taxpayer, could and would dispose of all the government wheat for cash at a steadily advancing price with the inevitable favorable reflection on the general condition of the country."

Mr. Carey selected a rather unfavorable time for his attack, inasmuch as just then the wheat market showed a decided tendency toward higher prices. J. C. Stone, chairman of the farm board, seized his advantage and replied sharply to Mr. Carey's assault. He said: "Wheat is the only great major commodity which for the last five months has shown a definite upward tendency. Its influence under the present favorable statistical position may well lead other commodities to higher ground. That opportunity will not be risked in the hands of the people in a group representing those who have grown rich from the profits gained by market manipulation."

Mr. Stone challenged the Chicago "grain gamblers," as he called them, to explain how it is that wheat has been held from 5 to 15 cents a bushel above the world market; this, he averred, is the result of the farm board's policies.

New York in the investigation of metropolitan politics and finances conducted by the Hofstadter legislative committee. There were many things for the mayor to explain, and so he went before the committee and tried to explain them. The most serious of these matters were thus listed:

His acceptance of $26,535.51 worth of Mayor Walker bonds, for which he had not paid, from J. A. Sisto, when the latter's company was seeking stricter municipal control of taxicabs.

How he happened to take with him to Europe in 1927 a $10,000 letter of credit which had been purchased for cash by J. Allan Smith, a promoter of the Equitable Coach company, who later made good a $3,000 overdraft.

Why William J. Scanlan's payments to Dr. William Walker, the mayor's brother, for medical services were usually 50 per cent of the commissions Scanlan received for sales of equipment to the street cleaning department and the department of sanitation.

Why Scanlan's check for $6,000, part of a commission paid on the sale of material to the city, was found in the bank account of Walker's missing fiscal agent, Russell T. Sherwood.

To explain the $15,000 in fees paid him through Sherwood for "legal fees" by a corporation which had its own regular attorneys.

The relationship between himself and Senator John A. Hastings of Brooklyn, who it has been indicated, was interested in the Equitable Coach company and the application of a Queens Bus company that was a more recent applicant for a franchise.

His financial transactions, his bank deposits and expenditures.

Early in the week it became known that the federal authorities had become interested in the revelations and were investigating Mayor Walker's status as an income taxpayer for the years 1928 and 1929.

DR. JOSEPH I. FRANCE of Maryland, aspirant for the Republican Presidential nomination, captured Oregon's thirteen delegates to the convention—and probably that is all he will have, since he lost his own state to Mr. Hoover. The ten Oregon votes in the Democratic convention will be cast for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

THERE is good reason to believe that the Lausanne conference on reparations will do nothing definite before early next year. The French are ready with a proposition, which Great Britain is said to favor, calling for a temporary extension of the Hoover moratorium, and if this is adopted the reparations problems will be turned over to expert commissions which may or may not report in the fall.

Edouard Herriot, who will be the boss of the French government, either as premier or minister of foreign affairs, declared he fully approved a statement by Senator Paul-Boncour that France's program remains national security, arbitration and disarmament, in the order named. His policy as to reparations, he said, was: First, maintain European solidarity; second, permit no rupture in the equilibrium between credits and debts at the expense of the French taxpayer.

Although receptive to the suggestion of armament reductions, the radical-socialist leader strongly approved the plan presented at the Geneva conference by Andre Tardieu. This plan calls for international security through an international police force to be supervised by the League of Nations.

FOLLOWING the advice of Prince Saionji, last of the elder statesmen of Japan, Emperor Hirohito summoned Admiral Viscount Makato Saito, former governor of Corea, to the palace and appointed him premier to succeed the assassinated Inukai. It was expected a week or more would pass before Saito could announce his ministry, which will probably be a strong nationalist emergency government. The admiral is seventy-four years old and, besides having had a distinguished career as a naval commander, is considered one of the empire's ablest administrators, free from political ambition.

Mrs. Putnam's Great Solo Flight Across the Atlantic—House Rejects Legalized Beer—Hoover Against Democratic Relief Plans.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

EXACTLY five years after Charles A. Lindbergh completed his epoch-making flight from New York to Paris, Amelia Earhart, who is now Mrs. G. P. Putnam, landed in Ireland after the first solo flight across the Atlantic ever made by a woman.

Mrs. G. P. Putnam

The intrepid young aviator had started for Paris, but she burned out exhaust manifold and other motor trouble led her to descend at Culmorden near London.

"I made this flight just for fun," said Mrs. Putnam after landing, and she admitted her achievement meant nothing to aviation. Nevertheless, she was the recipient of innumerable congratulatory messages, from President Hoover and Prime Minister MacDonald among others, and when she flew on to London in a borrowed plane she was given a great ovation.

Besides being the first woman to fly the Atlantic alone, this young American girl set a new record for the crossing and also shattered the distance record for women set by Ruth Nichols at 1,977.6 miles. Her distance was 2,026.5 miles.

LEGALIZED beer is just another fight, and won't have a chance again until the national conventions meet in June and go into spasms over the wet and dry plans for their platforms. Following the example set by the senate, the house rejected the O'Connor-Hull resolution legalizing and taxing 2.75 percent beer. The vote was 169 to 220 and technically was on the motion to discharge the ways and means committee from further consideration of the bill, which if carried would have brought the measure before the house. The two parties were nearly evenly split in the vote.

Apparently the drys had lost 18 votes since March when the house rejected a resolution for resubmission of the Eighteenth amendment, but Representative Rains explained that the shift meant so many anti-prohibitionists had realized that their only logical move is to continue the fight for resubmission.

SOME peculiar things are resulting from the prohibition controversy. The Democrats of Texas, formerly very dry, in their state convention adopted a resolution proposing resubmission of the Eighteenth amendment to the states. The measure was carried by a vote of 531 to 564 after what amounted almost to a riot. President Hoover, it was reliably reported in Washington, abandoned his attitude of aloofness and took an active part in framing a mildly wet plank for the Republican national platform, so mild that it probably would not seriously offend the drys and probably would not satisfy the wets. Deets Pickett, Democrat and dry leader among the Methodist reformers, announced that Franklin Roosevelt's moderately wet pronouncement would be satisfactory to the dry Democrats because that probably was as far as he ever would go.

SENATOR WILLIAM E. BORAH of Idaho says he is not going to attend the Republican national convention, and there are indications that he will snub it throughout the campaign. His determination to stay away from the gathering in Chicago was something of a blow to the drys, who had counted on him to lead their forces in the convention and to introduce their dry plank.

PRESIDENT HOOVER voiced his opposition to the Democratic proposal of big government bond issues for construction of federal public works as a means for relief of unemployment. In the same statement from the White House he further urged his own plan of legislation to permit loans by the reconstruction finance corporation in states for relief of destitution and public and private agencies for income-producing projects. Huge plans for federal public buildings and similar works he said would be wasteful and destructive of the public confidence essential to economic recovery.

The Democratic leaders indicated they would fight the President on this issue even at the risk of prolonging the session of congress, which already appears likely to run on until after the national conventions have been held. Senator Barbour of New Jersey, Republican, introduced a bill carrying out Mr. Hoover's plan. It would provide the reconstruction finance corporation with $1,500,000,000 additional capital for loans for self-liquidating projects that would furnish jobs for the unemployed.

Senator Bronson Cutting, the "progressive" Republican from New Mexico, followed with a bill providing for just the kind of relief aid which the President had opposed, and in introducing it Cutting made a caustic attack on Mr. Hoover. The Cutting bill carries three billion dollars for road construction and two billions for rivers and harbors work as well as public buildings and other federal works.

I Don't Know What You Mean

By FANNIE HURST

(C) by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. (WNU Service)

THE courtship of Mary and Niles was one that conformed nicely to the conventionalities of the community.

In the large industrial eastern city where Niles was already making his way, they began their married life on a scale commensurate with his income and at the end of the second year were occupying a small apartment in one of the up-to-date apartment houses on one of the exclusive streets in town.

They were happy, formative years of gathering friends and furnishings. An inveterate shopper, Mary had the faculty of making a dollar seem to stretch twice its usual resiliency.

Mary, and justly so, was proud of her achievement of this home. Busy, constructive years went into its making. Niles took his pride in it too. It was pleasant to be able to invite a client into the really distinguished atmosphere of his surroundings.

From that point on, the advancement of the Niles Gregoriums was consistent and always a little ahead of itself. That is, when Niles was earning twenty thousand a year, they seemed to be living at the rate of thirty; when he was earning thirty, it was as if his income must be at least fifty.

At the conclusion of the tenth year of their marriage, while Niles was steering ahead to greater and greater success in his work, their country place, thirty miles from town, was the most pretentious and luxurious estate thereabouts.

She not only had the gift of taste and selection, but she had the indomitable energy for shopping. It might be said that the first ten years of their married life was one exhaustive shopping tour in Europe and America.

As Mary's friends put it, she worked like a stage designer, bent on accomplishing the proper dramatic setting for their background.

Jackals Described as "Foxes" in Scripture

The ancient Roman writer Ovid let us know that it was not an uncommon thing to fasten firebrands to foxes' tails to do damage in an enemy's country and that at one of the state festivals it was a custom to tie a number of foxes together by their tails, affix firebrands among them and let them run wild.

Now, even in those early days it would have been a tremendous task for even the clever Samson to catch three hundred specimens of the fox, which has always been a solitary hunter.

For a year, with this crack across her being, but with no ostensible let-down, life moved along at Wildmere. Consultations with gardeners, motor troubles, week-end parties, dinners to clients of Niles, tours of inspection with admiring guests thronged the grounds and then gradually even Niles began to notice.

"What's the matter, Mary? Fagged? Look in if you might need a trip or change."

"All right, try a trip or change." Three months in England, browsing about among the shops for ideas for a certain addition of a Tudor suite she had in mind, then a bit of Basque country, and home by way of Naples and the Mediterranean.

It was not easy to tell Niles the matter. That is, it was not even easy to attempt to tell him. There were not the words to convey to him what he could not understand.

"What in heaven's name is over you these days, Mary? You haven't been yourself in months." Well, here she was trying to tell the untellable.

"We're so finished, Niles." "Meaning what?" "You. Me." "How?" "Oh, I don't know. There is nothing we are expectant about. You take me for granted. I suppose I take you that way.

"I don't know what you're talking about." "You wouldn't." "You mean—"

"I mean, I'm dissatisfied Niles. Horribly. Irrevocably. I'm finished here. I'm bored. There isn't enough between us. We're polite boarders under the same roof. Life is swift, life is passing, and we're missing it."

"I know you don't, or I wouldn't be saying what I'm saying." "Take a trip."

"I need to be free, Niles. I cannot regard my life as the snug completed thing it seems to be with you. Emotionally, we are finished; materially we can only be repetitious. I need to be fed, stirred, moved intellectually and inspired to do."

Some day, Mary hopes to find time to furnish their home in a quaint and charming manner. But in the meanwhile the days are too crowded, too busy, too happy.

FACSIMILE SKETCH OF MAJOR ANDRE

Revolutionary Relic Found in Connecticut.

There was published recently an account of the purchase by the New York State Grand Lodge of Masons of the historic De Windt house at Tappan, N. Y., which Gen. George Washington used as his headquarters during the Revolution and where he regretfully signed the death warrant of Major John Andre, British officer, in 1780.

According to the history of the sketch, Tomlinson, a Connecticut man, was on guard at Andre's execution on October 2, 1780, when the officer, twenty-nine years old, paid with his life for having plotted with Benedict Arnold to obtain West Point for the British forces.

According to the notation accompanying the sketch, Andre showed remarkable self-possession and calmness and engaged in his favorite accomplishment of drawing while awaiting execution.

Tomlinson folded the sketch, put it in his pocket and kept it for years. On August 8, 1832, it was presented to Yale. Reproduction of the original was made, according to the notation, by F. C. Beach, a Connecticut man, and was obtained by permission of Timothy Dwight, then president of Yale, on October 16, 1890, in the university library.

before his capture in September, 1780, in the old Townsend house at Oyster Bay, L. I. The facsimile of the sketch was discovered in a house about ten miles from the Townsend home.—New York Times.

Fire Loss Heavy The annual fire loss on farms originating from careless handling of petroleum products such as kerosene and gasoline is estimated by the Department of Agriculture to be about $7,500,000.

One might be reconciled to a shorter life if it were broader. More people have the gift of speech than the gift of silence.

SHERIFF'S SALE

The State of Texas, County of Donley.
Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a certain Order of Sale issued out of the Honorable District Court of Collingsworth county on the 23rd day of May, 1932, by Lenore Sherwood Horn, Clerk of said District Court, for the sum of Seventy Six Hundred Sixty-five and 06/100 ($7665.06) Dollars, with 8 per cent interest thereon from said date, and costs of suit under a judgment in favor of J. C. Doneghy, in a certain cause in said Court, No. 1535, and styled J. C. Doneghy vs W. E. Reeves et al, being a personal judgment against W. E. Reeves for said sum and foreclosure of deed of trust lien on the land below described, placed in my hands for service, I, Guy Pierce, as Sheriff of Donley County, Texas, did, on the 8th day of June, 1932, levy on certain real estate, situated in Donley county, Texas, described as follows, to wit:

All of Section No 121 in Block "E," Certificate No 33, containing 640 acres of land, more or less, located about four miles north from the town of Hedley, in Donley county, Texas, and most generally known as the W. E. Reeves farm, and levied upon as the property of W. E. Reeves and Margaret Reeves;

And that on the first Tuesday in July, 1932, the same being the 5th day of said month, at the court house door of Donley county, in the town of Clarendon, Texas, between the hours of 10 a. m. and 4 p. m., by virtue of said levy and Order of Sale, I will sell said above described real estate at public vendue, for cash to the highest bidder, as the property of said W. E. Reeves and Margaret Reeves.

And in compliance with law, I give this notice by publication, in the English language, once a week for three consecutive weeks immediately preceding said day of sale, in the Hedley Informer, a newspaper published in Donley county.

Witness my hand, this 8th day of June, 1932.
Guy Pierce, Sheriff,
Donley County, Texas.
