P. T. A. STUNT PROGRAM AND CARNIVAL IS GOOD

Folks who did not attend the P. T. A. Stunt Program and Carnival last Saturday night, Nov. 18 at the High School, surely missed some hearty laughs and good things to eat. The best thing about it, the show was free and the eats only cost five cents.

A program made up of a clever song hit, a deep dark mystery play and a "coon" debate on chicken stealing, was sponsored by the high school teachers.

Music was furnished by the Maendon Band.

The "goodies" were donated and sold by the parents. Pie, doughnuts, coffee and hot chocolate were sold at one booth; another sold popcorn, peanuts and popcorn balls; the next, home made candy; last, but not least, was the home made chilli.

In a small room was a "real" Egyptian Princess who told fortunes most skillfully with cards.

The program was good, the eats were good, but best of all was that "Pretty Baby Show" in which our own little "Bobby" Mann, "Johnny" Swinney and "Billy" Noel were all prize winners.

Everyone seemed to have a merry time, and the P. T. A. profited about $18.

Presidential Campaign Closed in Lively Fashion—Recovery in Industry Seems at Hand—Plan for Disposal of Farm Surplus.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

FAST and furious was the gyrations of the candidates and their active supporters during the closing week of the campaign, and every known argument was brought to bear on the 47,000 qualified voters of the United States, of whom the experts believed nearly 40,000,000 would go to the polls. The electors seemed to yield to excitement but were dazed and determined, and probably had made up their minds long before as to how they would cast their ballots.

Herbert Hoover

President Hoover's effort in his campaign carried him to Springfield, Ill.; St. Louis, Mo.; Gary, Ind., and then up to St. Paul, Minn. On the route he made many platform speeches, but his main addresses were in the cities named. The tour constituted his last attempt to capture the electoral votes of Illinois, Indiana, Missouri, Iowa, Minnesota and Wisconsin; and his arguments were also directed to the agricultural vote of Ohio, Nebraska, Kansas, Michigan and the Dakotas. Before leaving Washington for the Middle West the Chief Executive had spoken vigorously in New York city, Philadelphia, and other points in the East, and had made an special appeal by radio to the voters of California, his home state.

Governor Roosevelt's main speech of the week was delivered in Boston. A driving rain storm and his desire to get back quickly to Albany led him to disappoint waiting crowds in Hartford, Bridgeport, and other cities of the New England area. The final days of the campaign were spent by the Democratic candidate close to home, but he did not cease to talk to the electorate. Since his nomination he had visited 37 states, the only ones omitted being seven in the solid Democratic South and Nevada, North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota.

Franklin D. Roosevelt

SPEAKING to his 300 associates on the New York citizens committee of the emergency unemployment relief committee, Myron C. Taylor, chairman of the United States steel corporation, declared that the general industrial situation was more promising than it had been for two years. He said it was quite evident that recovery from the low point of last summer has appeared and that this recovery "is definite and progressive."

His brief address was made at the committee's first meeting preparatory to the launching of the $100,000,000 drive for funds from the public for unemployment relief.

Encouraging, too, was news from Jefferson City, Mo., that the citizen's relief and unemployment committee of St. Louis told Governor Caulfield that mild weather and an upturn in industry made it unnecessary to use any of the $2,000,000 apportioned to St. Louis by the Reconstruction Finance corporation for relief in September. E. C. Stearns, a director of the committee, expected increases in orders, particularly in the garment and shoe industries and in railroad shops, so much highway work in progress, and the available relief funds adequate.

JUST at a time when wheat and corn were selling on the market at the lowest prices on record, there was staged in Kendall county, Illinois, a demonstration of a man that might wipe out in two years the entire surplus of farm products according to the county farm bureau and J. J. Greetken of Aurora. Simply is the mixing of ethyl alcohol distilled from corn and other products with gasoline for motor fuel, the proportion of alcohol being 10 percent. Besides using up the grain surplus, the move would aid materially in conserving the natural supplies of petroleum in the United States, now being consumed at a rate that is "reducing the national supply at an alarming pace."

The demonstration tended to bear out research reports which have been compiled from several European countries and by the American government on the value of ethyl alcohol as a motor fuel.

Two and one-half gallons of alcohol are obtained from a bushel of corn, two and one-fourth gallons from a bushel of wheat, while barley, potatoes, beets, cantaloupes, and other surplus products produce high yields. At present the use of such alcohol when rendered poisonous and in gasoline, is restricted by the prohibition laws as well as by the complications of state and federal gas taxes.

Manufacture of the fuel could be done in rural communities with simple distilling plants, as it is done in Germany, the sponsors of the test declared. By adding one gallon of it at 25 to 30 cents for each nine gallons of gasoline, corn would be worth 40 to 50 cents a bushel and other crops in proportion.

CHARGES that private contractors on federal flood control projects along the lower Mississippi river were mistreating negro laborers, mentioned in this column some weeks ago, led President Hoover to appoint a committee of three negroes and one white man to make immediate inquiry into the situation. The men named were Dr. Robert R. Moton, president of Tuskegee institute; Judge James A. Cobb of Washington, D. C., and Eugene Knicker Jones, executive secretary of the Urban League of New York, representing the negro race, and Lieut. Col. U. S. Grant, representing the United States army.

Dr. R. R. Moton

A White House announcement of the appointment said the Chief Executive had asked this committee "to make a thorough and impartial inquiry as promptly as possible" and report the results of the investigation to him immediately.

LONG and efficient service for the State department was recognized and rewarded when the President selected F. Lamont Bell of Waverly, Pa., to be ambassador to Poland. He succeeds John N. Willys of Toledo, who resigned not long ago to resume his business duties. Mr. Bell is a veteran in the United States diplomatic corps, having served in the embassies at Peking, Istanbul, Paris, and London, and as chief of the State department division of protocols and international treaties. He resigned the latter post in March, 1931.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made in New York of the engagement of Miss Elisabeth Reeve Morrow, daughter of Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow and sister-in-law of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, to Aubrey Niel Morgan, son of Mr. and Mrs. John L. Morgan of Brynderwen, Wales. The date for the wedding has not been set. Miss Morrow and Mr. Morgan met while her father, the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow, was attending the London naval conference in 1930. She and her mother had accompanied Senator Morrow to London. Since that time Miss Morrow has visited in England, having passed three months in the summer of 1931 in Europe.

A. Alessandri

STRICT censorship keeps from the world most of the news concerning the warfare between Bolivia and Paraguay over the Gran Chaco, but it is known that the fighting continues with increasing fury. The minister of war at La Paz has announced that Gen. Hans Kundt, German military expert who organized and trained Bolivia's modern army, has consented to lead that army against the Paraguayans. The latter appear to have competent commanders, also, and have shown no signs of yielding to their opponents. The Argentine war ministry at Buenos Aires stated that many deserters from the Bolivian forces operating in the Gran Chaco were entering Argentine territory.

Gen. Hans Kundt

GENERAL election day in Cuba was marked by many instances of violence, the worst of which was the explosion of a powerful dynamite bomb in a theater in Santa Clara. Five of the 600 persons in the building were killed and many injured. Investigators said the crime was committed by Conservatives in retaliation for what they claimed were government controlled elections.

President Machado's Liberal party candidates were returned overwhelming victors in the voting, in which two senators, 72 representatives, and officials of most Cuban cities were chosen. It was estimated that 90 per cent of the eligible voters did not vote, either through lack of interest or because they heeded the pleas of the opposition to boycott the election.

DEATH claimed two especially well known Americans. They were Horace Kent Tenney, Chicago attorney who was prominent in his profession, and Harold MacGrath, whose novels and short stories had pleased millions of readers.

IF THE disarmament conference, whose bureau resumed work Thursday in Geneva, does not wind up in utter failure, much of the credit will go to Norman Davis, representative of the United States. He has been exceedingly busy in European capitals, trying to reconcile the views and demands of the various powers. Especially was he interested in the new French plan laid before the bureau, which calls for the adoption of an army conscript system and the writing of new security treaties. In a conversation with Premier Herriot and Minister of War Paul-Boncour, Mr. Davis said the United States was unable to commit itself to the use of force in defense of the Kellogg pact outlawing war, though it accepted the idea of consultation in case of violation of the pact.

Norman Davis

M. Herriot told Mr. Davis that his proposal for the substitution of professional armies with short-term conscript forces did not apply to the United States and was confined to continental Europe, excluding even England.

It was believed in Berlin that this proposal might induce Germany to resume participation in the disarmament conference provided the other powers agree that all agreements reached shall apply equally to all the signatories, including Germany.

On the naval side the French are again talking about a Mediterranean Locarno of France, Great Britain and Italy as a prelude to a naval understanding with Italy, which would complete the London treaty and possibly lead to further American, British and Japanese reductions.

JAPAN has its hands full with Manchukuo and the Chinese irregulars that are operating there in an effort to overthrow the puppet state. The situation in the northern half of Manchukuo was reported to be especially dangerous, the Japanese hold on the important city of Tsitsihar being imperiled. Two bloody battles were fought about one hundred miles north of that point and though the Japanese claimed victory in both, they lost a good many men, and were troubled by the discovery that Manchukuo troops were revolting and joining the Chinese. This revolt, the Japanese admitted, was spreading.

In addition to the thrust from the north, the Japanese control was threatened from the northwest by Gen. Su Ping-wen and his Chinese irregulars, who for some weeks have occupied the city of Manchull on the Siberian frontier.

HAVING made only one campaign speech, over the radio, in which he made but one promise, to respect the constitution, Arturo Alessandri was elected President of Chile. Formerly a radical, he had shifted toward the right and was supported by the moderate elements. He obtained a large plurality over Col. Marimaduke Grove, radical candidate and three others. Alessandri's victory was a very happy one for the veteran politician whose six year election in 1920 was cut short by a revolt and dictatorship in 1924 and who lost the next general election in 1931 to Juan Esteban Montero.

Colonel Grove told his admirers that "we intend to continue the revolutionary activities, not only in Chile, but in other Latin American countries. We have sworn to unite our efforts for the formation of a Latin American Federation of Socialist Republics."

Martinez Mera, liberal, was elected President of Ecuador; and Tibercio Carias Andino was successful in the Honduras elections.

SEVENTY-eight prominent Brazilians were sent into exile as penalty for participation in the Sao Paulo revolt that was suppressed only after three months of strenuous effort by the government. Included in the list were generals, political leaders and editors, most of whom probably will never be permitted to return. The men were loaded on a vessel at Rio and taken to another port for transfer to a steamship on which they left for Europe, most of them for Portugal. The deportation was carried out so the government might avoid long investigations and trials, and also to weaken the opposition party in the campaign preceding the assembly election next May.

POLICE forces of London had their expected troubles with the army of unemployed that gathered there to present claim to parliament. There were frequent clashes between the jobless horde and the authorities and on one occasion the "army" tried to storm Buckingham palace. It also attempted to invade the house of commons and was driven back with difficulty after desperate fighting with the police, who are armed only with batons. W. A. L. Hamington, communist leader of the hunger marchers, and several others, were arrested and locked up.

Chicago also had a parade of the unemployed, but the unfortunate men there were orderly and were permitted to submit their needs to Mayor Cermak through a committee.

Five of the 600 persons in the building were killed and many injured. Investigators said the crime was committed by Conservatives in retaliation for what they claimed were government controlled elections.

President Machado's Liberal party candidates were returned overwhelming victors in the voting, in which two senators, 72 representatives, and officials of most Cuban cities were chosen. It was estimated that 80 percent of the eligible voters did not vote, either through lack of interest or because they heeded the pleas of the opposition to boycott the election.

DEATH claimed two especially well known Americans. They were Horace Kent Tenney, Chicago attorney who was prominent in his profession, and Harold MacGrath, whose novels and short stories had pleased millions of readers.

IF THE disarmament conference, whose bureau resumed work Thursday in Geneva, does not wind up in utter failure, much of the credit will go to Norman Davis, representative of the United States. He has been exceedingly busy in European capitals, trying to reconcile the views and demands of the various powers. Especially was he interested in the new French plan laid before the bureau, which calls for the adoption of an army conscription system and the writing of new security treaties. In a conversation with Premier Herriot and Minister of War Paul-Boncour, Mr. Davis said the United States was unable to commit itself to the use of force in defense of the Kellogg pact outlawing war, though it accepted the idea of consultation in case of violation of the pact.

M. Herriot told Mr. Davis that his proposal for the substitution of professional armies with short-term conscript forces did not apply to the United States and was confined to continental Europe, excluding even England.

It was believed in Berlin that this proposal might induce Germany to resume participation in the disarmament conference provided the other powers agree that all agreements reached shall apply equally to all the signatories, including Germany.

On the naval side the French are again talking about a Mediterranean League of France, Great Britain and Italy as a prelude to a naval understanding with Italy, which would complete the London treaty and possibly lead to further American, British and Japanese reductions.

JAPAN has its hands full with Manchukuo and the Chinese irregulars that are operating there in an effort to overthrow the puppet state. The situation in the northern half of Manchukuo was reported to be especially dangerous, the Japanese hold on the important city of Tsitsihar being imperiled. Two bloody battles were fought about one hundred miles north of that point and though the Japanese claimed victory in both, they lost a good many men, and were troubled by the discovery that Manchukuan troops were revolting and joining the Chinese. This revolt, the Japanese admitted, was spreading.

In addition to the thrust from the north, the Japanese control was threatened from the northwest by Gen. Su Ping-wen and his Chinese irregulars, who for some weeks have occupied the city of Manchull on the Siberian frontier.

HAVING made only one campaign speech, over the radio, in which he made but one promise, to respect the constitution, Arturo Alessandri was elected President of Chile. Formerly a radical, he had shifted toward the right and was supported by the moderate elements. He obtained a large plurality over Col. Marmaduke Grove, radical candidate and three others. Alessandri's victory was a very happy one for the veteran politician whose six year election in 1920 was cut short by a revolt and dictatorship in 1924 and who lost the next general election in 1931 to Juan Esteban Montero.

Colonel Grove told his admirers that "we intend to continue the revolutionary activities, not only in Chile, but in other Latin American countries. We have sworn to unite our efforts for the formation of a Latin American Federation of Socialist Republics."

Martinez Mera, liberal, was elected President of Ecuador; and Tiburcio Carias Andino was successful in the Honduras elections.

SEVENTY-eight prominent Brazilians were sent into exile as penalty for participation in the Sao Paulo revolt that was suppressed only after three months of strenuous effort by the government. Included in the list were generals, political leaders and editors, most of whom probably will never be permitted to return. The men were loaded on a vessel at Rio and taken to another port for transfer to a steamship on which they left for Europe, most of them for Portugal. The deportation was carried out so the government might avoid long investigations and trials, and also to weaken the opposition party in the campaign preceding the assembly election next May.

POLICE forces of London had their expected troubles with the army of unemployed that gathered there to present claim to parliament. There were frequent clashes between the jobless horde and the authorities and on one occasion the "army" tried to storm Buckingham palace. It also attempted to invade the house of commons and was driven back with difficulty after desperate fighting with the police, who are armed only with batons. W. A. L. Hannington, communist leader of the hunger marchers, and several others, were arrested and locked up.

Chicago also had a parade of the unemployed, but the unfortunate men there were orderly and were permitted to submit their needs to Mayor Cermak through a committee.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Following the Armistice Day program, the following Codes were adopted by the students of Hedley High School:

Code for Girls

It is our aim—

To serve faithfully our God, our country, and our school.

To be honest in thought, word and deed.

To be clean in body and mind.

To keep things to ourselves that will be of no moral value to anyone else.

To act at all times as if upon our conduct depends the character and reputation of our school.

To be a real sport at all times.

To practice thrift by caring for the property of others, and by making the best use of our time and possessions.

To cooperate in all high school activities.

To shirk no responsibility.

To be considerate, gracious and courteous to others.

Code for Boys

As a true Owl of H. H. S. I will strive to—

Love all my friends more than myself, my school more than my friends, my country more than my school, and God above all else.

Remember that the road to success is never shortened thru dishonest work.

Do right to the best of my ability, and treat myself, as well as others, fairly.

Act at all times in a manner befitting a student of Hedley High School.

Keep to myself all that is not of moral value to my classmates.

Be cooperative in all high school undertakings and support them to the best of my ability.

Remember that honesty, trustworthiness and truth are the three elements necessary to make a successful life.

Be at all times a gentleman.

Be polite and thoughtful and remember the rights of others.

Consider myself no better than others, yet as good as any.

Not take the property of others, return that which I borrow, and help care for and protect all school property.

Remember it is an act of good sportsmanship to pay the penalty willingly if I have broken the rules.

Be a good Owl, glorious in defeat as well as in victory.

Remember it is good sportsmanship to be fair always, no matter what opportunity I have to be unfair.

Realize that courtesy costs nothing, but pays big dividends.

Live a clean life and keep my standards high, so that I will not be a reproach upon myself, my parents, my school, or my community.

To be known as one whose honor is to be trusted and who is capable of accepting responsibility.

To be a real Owl.

THE CHILDREN'S STORY

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

PETER RABBIT LAST DOUBT IS CLEARED AWAY

Though you say you believe that a thing is so, and you do your best to believe, you know, it will happen a doubt in your mind will creep

And quite refuse to believe to sleep. A LITTLE doubt like this will keep right on bothering you and the only way in which it can be got out is by finding for yourself the proof that what you are trying to believe is so. Peter Rabbit said that he believed all Lightfoot's tales, and he told him about his wonderful horns, summer, and how they had grown in a single winter. He did believe it while he was with Lightfoot, for when the hare said that it was true, but when Peter got back to his dear old Briar Patch and thought it all over doubt crept into his mind in spite of him. He told little Mrs. Peter all about it. When he had finished she looked at him queerly. "Peter," said she, "if someone should come along and tell you that he could take his horns and put it back on again, I believe you would believe it. It is my opinion that Lightfoot was stuffing you and Cousin Jumper was hatching him up just to see how big a yarn they could make you swallow."

"But, my dear, I tell you that I saw the rags of the covering that had been on those horns while they were growing," protested Peter. "Perhaps you did not see them, but I saw them," retorted unflinchingly Mrs. Peter Rabbit. "I don't know what you saw rags of some kind or other, but Lightfoot's horns, but it will take more than his word to make me believe that those are new horns grown on the last summer. It doesn't sound reasonable. Now, does it, Peter?" "No, it doesn't," confessed Peter; "but there are so many things happening all the time that do sound reasonable that I don't know when to believe a thing and when not to." Peter had planned to go about among his friends and tell them all about Lightfoot's new horns, for he suspected that few of them knew about them. But after a talk with

"Lightfoot's Story Was True!" Cried Peter Joyfully

Mrs. Peter he changed his mind. You see doubt had crept in, in spite of all he could do to stay there. He tried to make himself believe that he believed that story, but that miserable doubt persisted. Though his tongue fairly itched to tell the story of Lightfoot's new horns, he kept it still.

One night when Misty Moon was shining brightly Peter wandered deep in the Green Forest until presently he found himself on the edge of a swampy place. It was the very place where Lightfoot the Deer had spent the winter when the snow was deep. Peter hopped along aimlessly. He was thinking so hard that he did not watch his steps, and presently he stepped on something that hurt his foot. "Ouch!" he cried, and he looked to see what it was he had stepped on. Sticking out of the soft wet earth was what Peter at first thought was a sharp pointed stick. But when he looked a little more closely he saw that it was different from any stick he had ever seen before. The point was smooth

Grill half a dozen sardines in a hot pan and pour over them melted butter which has been thickened with a little flour, moisten with hot water, add a little vinegar, dash of mustard, salt and pepper. Pour hot over the sardines.

Lentil Salad.

Boil two cupfuls of lentils until tender, season with garlic cut fine or with chives and serve on lettuce leaves with a good seasoned french dressing.

Peaches With Grape Juice.

Stew fresh peaches, remove their skins and cover them with grape juice and allow them to stand two hours. Drain them, place them in a dish in which they are to be served and cover them with sugar flavored with vanilla. Take the grape juice, add sugar to taste, boil up and pour over the peaches.

Salad Beaucaire.

Chop coarsely, celery and endive, season with oil, vinegar, mustard, and let stand for an hour before serving. Just before going to the table add chopped boiled ham, a sour apple dice, moistened with a little tarragon vinegar and mayonnaise.

Mutton With Vegetables.

Trim mutton cutlets and place side by side in a saucepan. Cover with well seasoned stock and simmer for an hour and a half. Take equal quantities of turnips, onions, celery and twice the amount of carrots. Fry in butter until they begin to color, beginning with the carrots, then the celery, onion and then turnips. When all are done simmer in a little stock. Place the cutlets on a hot platter with a heap of the vegetables in the center. Serve with mashed potatoes.

PENNY THINGS

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

THE little steps of little feet go romping here and there; I hear them in the crowded street, I hear them everywhere; And little feet find life a song and youth a time of play. The journey short, however long, with joys along the way. The street an alley, little more, the children are content; They find the windows of a store a land of wonderment. Though stories tell of queens and kings, and silk and lace and ruff, The windows full of penny things are wonderful enough.

I wish that we could go our way as little children, too, And find our pleasure in today, as little children do. They have their dreams as well as ours, their castles gilt and glass, And yet they pause to pick the flowers that blossom where they pass. However bright the rainbow gleams, how great the pot of gold, The children know that dreams are dreams—but here's a hand to hold, And here's a window and a toy, and here's a top that sings; They never overlook the Joy God puts in penny things.

We build our castles in the air, our battlements in Spain, But, if we never journey there, the other joys remain. So let us do as children do, who dream of fairyland, And yet who know the pleasure, too, of pleasure close at hand. I hope we never dream so much, as through the world we go, Whatever heights we ever touch, whatever depths we know, We never feel the thrill of yore, the thrill that childhood brings, Before the windows of a store just full of penny things!

"Why should he? He came off second best, didn't he? He was drunk at the time and my father was intoxicated, otherwise there would have been two funerals. Father was heart-broken when he sobered up, and sent his lawyer to your Uncle Bill to apologize, so your Uncle Bill accepted the apology and sent back one of his own. When I was a very small boy your uncle sold out his ranch to old man Hobart, whose son, Kenneth, is now my general manager. Does Uncle Bill treat you with civility and decency?"

"Of course he does. He's adorable. He's a love."

"Very well, then, I'll not kill him. You must agree, though, that I did you a real service in bumping off old Uncle Tom."

"Uncle Bill says you did," Roberta admitted. "But then he's biased."

"My father always declared that Uncle Bill was all wool and a yard wide. . . . Dinner's ready, thank God. That stout saddle-colored female who appeared in the door just now says we'd better come and get it or she'll throw it out."

"What an extremely old-fashioned young man you are, Don Jaime."

"Please do not call me Don Jaime. The don is really a title of respect, and is used by one's employees or social inferiors—rather like having a pullman porter address you as 'Judge' or 'colonel.' You may call me Mr. Higgins, Mr. Higueneas, James, Jimmy or Jaime."

"Very well, Mr. Higueneas," the girl murmured in a very small voice. Then: "Hold everything, mine host. I must run to my room for a handkerchief. I forgot to fetch one."

Don Jaime gazed after her. There was no doubt but that he approved of her mightily. When his gaze shifted it met Mrs. Ganby's.

"How does she impress you?" she queried.

"Miss Antrim is physically beautiful and mentally alert. Yes, she's as smart a young woman as you and I will ever meet. Well raised, well spoiled, haughty, aware of her power over men and just loves to use it. Sound at heart, though, I think."

"Will she be here long, Don Jaime?"

"I do not know. In all probability she will not be here long enough to please me. In fact if I hadn't run that Bill Dingle sealawag down the road she wouldn't be here now. She's a new note in life to me, but I'm not going to let her know she is."

CHAPTER VII

Robbie, his pale face glowing from his recent ablutions, arrived with Roberta and the four went in to dinner. The table had been set in the gallery. Don Jaime explaining that during the summer they always ate outside.

Roberta appraised the table with the eye of an expert. It was covered with a white linen cloth; short-stemmed red vases peeped from a jade-green bowl in the center; the service was of sterling silver and very old and beautiful. On closer inspection she saw that it carried a coat of arms.

"My great-great-grandmother's silver," Don Jaime explained. "Fellow in New York once heard I had it and sent his secretary down to buy it. He offered me an unbelievably high price for the service and didn't seem to believe me when I told him it was not for sale. He just kept tilting the ante and couldn't seem to see he was annoying me. Some people are like that. They think money is the beginning and the end of everything."

"Perhaps you would, also, Mr. Higueneas, if you had ever been poor," Roberta suggested.

"I've paid 12 per cent for rented money," he retorted. "I've had the ranch mortgaged in bad years and banks carried my father half his lifetime. Only those who are poor in spirit, who lack courage, can be really poor."

"Do you not find life a little lonely here?"

"A busy man is seldom lonely. My father spent his life in bondage to the irrigation system you probably observed en route here, but after his death I completed it and transformed a semiarid valley into alfalfa and cotton fields. I got rid of the scrubby long-horned cattle that were built for speed and substituted Herefords, which are built for beef. All this has been a considerable task and fell to my hands when I was eighteen. That was ten years ago."

"After I was demobilized in the spring of 1919 I really started to put this ranch on a paying basis. I cleaned up on cotton in 1919 and '20. And cattle prices were unbelievably high. I had a feeling, however, that such a wartime prosperity wouldn't last, so I sold all my cattle in the fall of 1920, and in 1921 I didn't plant any cotton. Well, the market smashed on both—and lucky Jim didn't have any!"

"Instead I raised alfalfa and stacked it; then I bought cattle for a song when the banks and the governmental loan agencies foreclosed. Cheap cattle and cheap feed, you know. I had my moments of panic; the road was rough and rocky in spots; although that, of course, made it all the more interesting, the victory all the more delightful. I think that when one has had to fight for his land and his people he learns to love both, no matter how unlovely or uninteresting they may appear to those whose lives have been spent in shelter and without effort."

"My life has been spent that way, I must admit," Roberta confessed. "And I like it," she added.

"Why not? You've never tried any other life, have you?"

Roberta noticed that her host was much more at his ease, now that their conversation had veered into new channels. It occurred to the girl too that Don Jaime Miguel Higueneas had lived more in five minutes of his colorful life than had the last three generations of Hacketts. And the Hacketts were a long-lived race.

"What gainful occupation, if any, does Mr. Latham practice now?" Don Jaime asked Roberta.

"He plays the stock market."

"With success, I hope."

"He has always been very successful until recently, when he lost practically everything he had—or at least he would have lost it without the aid of some people who love him. We anticipate a reverse in the market which will pull him out, if not with a profit at least without terrific loss."

"My father loved your Uncle Bill, even if he did shoot him in the heel and disagree with him politically. . . . I would be glad to give my father's friend a leg up. You live with your Uncle Bill, I take it."

"I've been his ward and a member of his household since my tenth birthday. I have never known a wish he hasn't hastened to gratify, at whatever cost. So, you see, now that he's old and liable to suffer financial reverses, it is my duty to take care of him, and for that reason my Uncle Tom's estate comes to me somewhat in the nature of a godsend."

"One more reason why I should be dealt with charitably in the matter of your deceased avuncular relative," the young man suggested humorously. "Well, we'll pull you out all right on the sheep."

"I understand the estate is boarding on you, Mr. Higueneas."

Don Jaime shrugged. "Es nada," he replied. "That is, the grass they consume doesn't amount to that, and he snapped his fingers. "The knowledge that I am serving a distressed lady is a rich reward."

Two maids removed the empty soup plates and set the roast down in front of Don Jaime. "A wild turkey," he informed Roberta. Then he sharpened his carving knife on the steel and attacked the bird, dissecting it in a very neat and scientific manner.

"Can you cook, Miss Antrim?"

"Heavens, no!"

"I had heard it was a lost art with the rising generation. I'm a rattling good cook, myself, if I do say so. Most Latin males are, you know. I enjoy cooking fish and game."

"How about boxing?"

"Great sport. I have three vaqueros who are paid five dollars a month extra to box with me."

"That, I suppose," said Roberta dryly, "appeals to your Irish blood. Are you of a religious turn of mind?"

"Well, I built a church in my pueblo and I support a padre for my people. I play the organ in my church and I've rehearsed the choir until it's really rather good. You must come to mass with me tomorrow and listen to it."

"Why were you armed today? Do you always carry that arsenal?"

"No," he replied soberly. "I do not. But of late I have felt that discretion might be the better part of valor. You see, I have been unfortunate enough to make some new enemies recently. The last time I went abroad unarmed I was carried home on a stretcher."

"I fear," the girl suggested, "that the Antrim sheep are proving to be a source of embarrassment to you."

"Oh, not at all! My enemies never embarrass me, I assure you," he said so simply, so earnestly, so absolutely without brag or bounce, that Roberta laughed aloud.

"You are a new note in life," she declared. "Mrs. Ganby, do you not find Don Jaime a source of profound amusement?"

"Not at all," her host protested. "I expect to collect from the Antrim estate a reasonable fee for my services, to reimburse me for my outlay or inconvenience."

Roberta had a feeling of helplessness in this man's presence, for he was a new experience with her. She had never met a man who remotely resembled him—so ruthless, forceful and dominating.

Not knowing what to say, she was silent and watched her meal. When presently, her glance met Don Jaime's again he was smiling at her, whereupon she latched with a desire to pull his undoubtedly Celtic nose. "He has all the audacity and assurance of the Irish and all of the ego of the Latin," she thought.

"What an indolent, semi-indolent glance he has! And he isn't bad-looking at all. Still he isn't bad-looking. He's just masculine and knows it. All of his life he has been accustomed to being high and low justice on this ranch; because these peons of his kotow to him he thinks he can get away with murder. He's just a Mexican feudal baron who has established his feudal sway just far enough north of the border to make good with it."

"Is it possible for one to send a telegram from your ranch, Mr. Higueneas?" she asked.

"Certainly. After dinner you can telephone your message to the office at Los Algodones and charge it to my account."

"I suppose I should go to Los Algodones in a day or two to consult with my attorney."

"Well, the longer you delay your visit, Miss Antrim, the more agreeable it will be to Prudencia Alviso. Prudy's almost a full-blooded Spaniard. About one thirty-second Aztec or Yaqui, but that's enough to make him want to take life easy. Be kind. Your visit on a business mission will cause him to bestir himself."

Roberta laughed again—softly, suddenly, for again she had a swift vision of Glenn Hackett and compared the activities of his law office with the somnolent status of Don Prudencia's legal mill.

"I feel like Alice in Wonderland," she declared suddenly.

"Speaking of bees and birds and sealing-wax, and cabbages and kings," said Don Jaime, "I am sincerely delighted to have sold Prudy to you. He's so slow, so deliberate; I know he'll just lengthen out your visit to the sheep."

"I understand the estate is boarding on you, Mr. Higueneas."

Don Jaime shrugged. "Es nada," he replied. "That is, the grass they consume doesn't amount to that, and he snapped his fingers. "The knowledge that I am serving a distressed lady is a rich reward."

Two maids removed the empty soup plates and set the roast down in front of Don Jaime. "A wild turkey," he informed Roberta. Then he sharpened his carving knife on the steel and attacked the bird, dissecting it in a very neat and scientific manner.

"Can you cook, Miss Antrim?"

"Heavens, no!"

"I had heard it was a lost art with the rising generation. I'm a rattling good cook, myself, if I do say so. Most Latin males are, you know. I enjoy cooking fish and game."

"How about boxing?"

"Great sport. I have three vaqueros who are paid five dollars a month extra to box with me."

"That, I suppose," said Roberta dryly, "appeals to your Irish blood. Are you of a religious turn of mind?"

"Well, I built a church in my pueblo and I support a padre for my people. I play the organ in my church and I've rehearsed the choir until it's really rather good. You must come to mass with me tomorrow and listen to it."

"Why were you armed today? Do you always carry that arsenal?"

"No," he replied soberly. "I do not. But of late I have felt that discretion might be the better part of valor. You see, I have been unfortunate enough to make some new enemies recently. The last time I went abroad unarmed I was carried home on a stretcher."

"I fear," the girl suggested, "that the Antrim sheep are proving to be a source of embarrassment to you."

"Oh, not at all! My enemies never embarrass me, I assure you," he said so simply, so earnestly, so absolutely without brag or bounce, that Roberta laughed aloud.

"You are a new note in life," she declared. "Mrs. Ganby, do you not find Don Jaime a source of profound amusement?"

"Not at all," her host protested. "I expect to collect from the Antrim estate a reasonable fee for my services, to reimburse me for my outlay or inconvenience."

She watched a humming bird flitting from flower to flower, saw a quail come forth and bear away a crust tossed him by Don Jaime. Then, as the shadows lengthened, the mocking birds, replete with food and happy, perched in a lime tree and paid for their meal in melody. Roberta had never heard a Spanish mocker before and was delighted with the beauty and variety of their extensive repertoire.

"You are fond of music?" Don Jaime queried.

Roberta nodded and he tossed a quick order in Spanish to one of his dusky maids.

From behind the climbing passion vines on the gallery across the patio a guitar was strummed; Roberta heard the mellow notes of a harp as unseen fingers ran the scale. Then a girl's voice—without much volume, but wondrously sweet and sympathetic—commenced to sing "La Golondrina."

"When I am unhappy," Don Jaime explained, "they sing that sad song to me and make me unhappy."

"Why don't you have them sing something joyful?"

"My dear Miss Antrim, no Higgins ever wants to be made happy when he's unhappy. It's like enjoying poor health. We must feed our racial melancholy."

"You incorrigible Celt! Are these professional entertainers brought out from Los Algodones?"

"No, they're part of the ranch assets. That harp has been in our family since the first Higgins emigrated to Madrid. Hello, bub, you getting sleepy?—Tired after your long ride today, eh?"

Robbie had left his chair and climbed up into Don Jaime's lap; his thin little arm was around the brown, powerful neck, his head cuddled under the big square chin. Don Jaime held him close with his left arm, and Roberta noticed that with his right hand he gently massaged the atrophied muscles of the boy's left leg.

The purple shadows crept over the patio, the music sobbed and mourned behind the passion vines.

Presently Don Jaime shook Robbie gently. "Come, son," he said softly. "Say your prayers—in Spanish, as I have taught you. Nuestro padre—"

The sleepy voice spoke haltingly the unfamiliar words, the man prompting from time to time. When the prayer was finished he rose and, with the boy in his arms, stooped over Mrs. Ganby that she might kiss her son good night. Then he passed around the table to Roberta's chair. "Innocence and helplessness," Roberta heard him murmur. "Who could not love it!"

He stooped over her and lowered the boy until the childish lips brushed her cheek; then he bore the lad off to bed.

The two women exchanged glances, the mother's eyes were moist. "That is the Latin in him, Miss Antrim. He's not ashamed to demonstrate his affection."

Roberta did not answer. She was thinking of a remark that Crooked Bill had once made in her presence. "When children and dogs love a man a woman is usually safe with him." She wondered now if Glenn Hackett loved children and dogs and decided presently that he would love his own children, if and when he had them, but that he would not be interested in dogs or human beings beneath him in the social scale.

"He is a strange man, Mrs. Ganby," she said at last. "I do not never meet his kind before. I do not know what to make of him—whether to like him or dislike him, to fear him or to trust him. He killed my uncle and then, masquerading under the name of Jim Higgins he induced me to accept the hospitality of Jaime Higueneas. Where I come from one doesn't do that sort of thing, you know. How long have you known him, Mrs. Ganby?"

"Since three days after he killed your uncle. I am a trained nurse and I came down here to tend his wounds, although he would have recovered without my aid, for he is as healthy as a horse. Later he asked me to be his housekeeper, but since he does not appear to regard me as a servant, I imagine I am a sort of paid hostess. I think he had a hope that you might visit the ranch some day, and of course you would never have been invited unless he had a duenna here. He is very punctilious in matters of social propriety."

"And Robbie?"

"When he discovered I had a little crippled son he sent his general manager to El Paso to bring the boy here. He knew I'd want him with me, of course."

"I understand. Innocence and helplessness. Of course I'm out to Robbie."

"Children understand I think Don Jaime is a fight—any kind of a tremendously interested phlegm leg of Robbie's. He started massaging it, studying it. He has been medical treatment on it and talks of sending it to be treated at the Robbeller institute."

Further confidences were interrupted by the return of the girl who had called something in Spanish to her maid.

From behind the climbing passion vines on the gallery across the patio a guitar was strummed; Roberta heard the mellow notes of a harp as unseen fingers ran the scale. Then a girl's voice—without much volume, but wondrously sweet and sympathetic—commenced to sing "La Golondrina."

This Mother Had Problem

As a rule, milk is about the best food for children, but there are times when they are much better off without it. It should always be given only when children show by feverish, fretful or cross spells, by bad breath, coated tongue, sallowness, indigestion, biliousness, etc., that their stomach and bowels are out of order.

In cases like this, California Fig Syrup never fails to work wonders, by the quick and gentle way it removes all the souring waste which is causing the trouble, regulates the stomach and bowels, gives these organs tone and strength so they continue to act normally of their own accord. Children love its rich, fruity flavor and it's purely vegetable and harmless, even for babies.

Millions of mothers have proved its merit and reliability in over 50 years of steadily increasing use. A Western mother, Mrs. May Snively, Montrose, California, says: "My little girl, Edna's, tendency to constipation was a problem to me until I began giving her California Fig Syrup. It helped her right away and soon her stomach and bowels were acting perfectly. Since then I've never had to have any advice about her bowels. I have also used California Fig Syrup with my little boy, with equal success."

To be sure of getting the genuine, which physicians endorse, always ask for California Fig Syrup by the full name.

Aha! The comedian smiled roguishly. "When," he said loudly, "is an actor not an actor?"

"Nine times out of ten," retorted some one in the gallery.

Doctors Give Creosote for Dangerous Coughs

For many years our best doctors have prescribed creosote in some form for coughs, colds and bronchitis, knowing how dangerous it is to let them hang on. Creosolium with creosote and six other highly important medicinal elements, quickly and effectively stops all coughs and colds that otherwise might lead to serious trouble.

Fishers' "Pigeon Route"

The use of carrier pigeons to convey messages from boats at sea to the home port is being tried out by Danish fishermen. A number of the fishermen do not have radio-equipped boats and even those that do admit that there are likely to be times when the pigeons might prove an asset. If preliminary trials are successful the carrier pigeon service may be established in the whole of the Danish fishing fleet.

Magnificent Rio

A Street Vendor of Rio.

Prepared by National Geographic Society, Washington, D. C.—N.G.S. Service.

RIO DE JANEIRO, which recently has been disturbed by political strife involving several Brazilian states, basks on the golden sands almost astride the Tropic of Capricorn.

To enter this great world port you walk down the gangplank and straight out into a formal garden with a big bronze fountain. This leads off into a Fifth-avenue-like boulevard, which in turn flows into a wide, world-famous beach drive, past embassies, clubs, and palms and geometric gardens. Dinky docks, pawn shops, pool halls, quick-and-dirty cafes, cheap rooming houses, runners, dirt, smells—all the trash and clatter of many other water fronts are missing here.

Out in the bay, the startling profiles of singular peaks rise in their bulk like elephants sitting in grotesque pose. They include the much-photographed Sugar Loaf, and the oddly-shaped Corcovado, or Hunchback.

Rising fully 1,200 feet and almost straight out of the sea, Sugar Loaf is easily Rio's outstanding landmark. Incoming air pilots, if half lost in fog or rain, hail its familiar outlines with grunts of relief. In a queer aerial trolley—a dizzy trip, which is a supreme triumph for the nervous—you can reach its top in two laps. The first stage carries you to the top of Uca; there, if still conscious, you ride on up to the crest of Sugar Loaf by a balloonlike view of the bay and city.

Look at this spectacular city from Sugar Loaf, Hunchback, or any high angle, and you see how smoothly in mass, form, and color it harmonizes with the shape and shades of its terrestrial environment.

You observe that it is cohesive, one work of art; yet it is not a solid city, with a checkerboard pattern of blocks and squares squeezed into rigid "city limits," like Leipzig or Indianapolis.

Something easy, loose, and fluent in its multicolored distribution makes you feel that Rio is simply flowing down the mountains about it in graceful architectural streams, then coming to rest in quiet valleys and on sandy beaches.

Seen From the Air.

Fly over it and its marvels only multiply; it has so many parts, sections, and suburbs; and in its pattern, from the sky, it looks like a great paint-spotted easel of blue water, yellow sand, green trees, red roofs, pink and blue walls. Think of all these colored parts turning round and round, like the odd-formed bits of colored glass in an old-fashioned kaleidoscope. Then you can imagine exactly how Rio looks from an airplane that banks and turns, a mile above it, on a bright, clear day.

Back to earth, on the famous Avenida Rio Branco, the Unter den Linden or Fifth avenue of Rio de Janeiro, you meet the city at its best; also, familiar big-town sights, sounds, and smells make you feel normal here and much at home.

New York papers, any popular North American magazine, chewing gum from Chicago, your own favorite brand of safety razor, cigarettes, fountain pen, writing or talking machine, sport roaster, ice-box, or outboard motorboat—all are here, with all their familiar show-window placards that greet you on Main street anywhere from Syracuse to Seattle. Likewise, radio sets, crooning to crowds the latest Broadway "hits"; displays of North American cameras; enlarged snaps of local bathing beauties having Brazilian "it"; groups of soccer players; the dark horse that paid 20 to 1 at last Sunday's races and his popular jockey, pletured peeping through a big horse-shoe of flowers.

And Rio, window-shopping here, looks in on Paris perfumes, soaps, chapeaux, gowns and lingerie; German etchings, water colors, oils, and shelves of drugs and surgical instruments and hardware; English rackets, balls, cricket sets, saddles, socks, hats, and pipes; and, most significant of all, the steady march of Brazil's own manufacturing, revealed in huge stocks of textiles, leather, shirts, clothing, dishes, dry-goods, toys, shoes, and packaged food—all "made in Brazil!"

This wide, resplendent avenue, one and an eighth miles long, lined with beautiful trees, and piercing the city from the Beira Mar to the piers, was boldly opened only two decades ago in the ambitious plan for a better city.

To cut it through, nearly 600 buildings were razed.

One of its startling aspects is its sidewalk, made up of small stones of different colors, laid in zigzags, in waves, and in other dizzy patterns.

Interesting Street Crowds.

But it is the people who interest you most, especially the crowds who promenade late in the afternoon. Coffee shops, cafes and tea rooms line the Avenida Rio Branco, many with wide colored awnings that reach out over the pavement. Flocks of tables are set out here in the open air, so that patrons may sip drinks, smoke, and watch the well-dressed, handsome women who stroll by to be admired. This is a custom of the country. It is perfectly correct to cast admiring glances, and the women do not resent it. In fact they expect it. And, on fine evenings, the passing show is not unlike a parade of mannequins displaying the latest styles in feminine garb at a New York fashion show.

Although prohibition is unknown in Brazil, very few seem to dally much with the cup that cheers. Cosmopolitan seaport though it is, Rio is a most orderly and abstemious place. But it drinks coffee to excess.

What we call lunch is breakfast in Rio. After this meal the brokers, bankers, merchants and clerks all flock to their favorite resort to drink coffee. Late in the afternoon they all go again, and perhaps at various other times during the day they drop in for the tiny cup, if they happen to be near a cafe.

Coffee is taken very strong and sweet, as in the Near East. In the cheaper cafes an automatic bowl of granulated sugar is on each table. By means of a trigger, it shoots a man's allowance into his cup at one dash. Often you see men try it first toward the floor, to see if it is working!

By his dress alone you can seldom tell an upper-class Brazilian from a well-groomed European. You seldom see a man without a vest, even on hot days. Derby hats and canes are everywhere; some men carry fans; and bootblacks and barbers could almost claim an "essential occupation" to avoid the draft in wartime!

Here, along the Rio Branco, is the voice of the city. Around these sidewalk cafes you hear town talk, which may be in any one of three or four languages. It is a gossip's free-for-all. And here conversation is an art—as much enjoyed as music. All the lounging coffee drinkers and the groups standing about wave their hands and wobble their heads in Latin-American emphasis, each anxious to make himself heard. Passing by, you hear scraps of talk on every theme, from the coffee crop and the Sao Paulo snake farm to the identity of the prettiest girl who just went by in a roadster.

United States Visitors Welcome. Nowhere, from the Rio Grande to Cape Horn, is the visitor from the United States more welcome than in Rio. Whether he comes as tourist, salesman, scientist, diplomat, artist, student, teacher, resident engineer, merchant, or delegate to an international highway conference, he soon senses that Brazilians hold our country in high esteem.

Between the two capitals, Rio and Washington, friendly diplomatic intercourse has been unbroken for a hundred years. When we entered the World War, President Braz of Brazil said in his message to congress: "With our elder brother, the United States, at war, it is impossible for Brazil to remain neutral."

Rio—rich, leisurely, and at ease—is not "Americanized" in dress, manners, or in methods. Probably she never will be, for here a new race is in the making—a racial amalgamation new to the world possessing unique social, industrial, and cultural possibilities. But Rio is tolerant and wise. From us, as from Europe, she takes what she can use, whether it is ideas or goods. This is fair play among nations. Brazil buys about one-fourth of all her imports from us, and we buy perhaps 45 per cent of all she exports. If she feels that her young men can learn more about engineering, agriculture, or dentistry in the United States than in Europe, she sends them here to school, if she thinks North American capital and managerial talent can improve her public utilities, she invites their aid; and, co-operating vigorously, she sets her public health officials to work side by side with American "rocketeer doctors" in yellow fever control.

TALES OF THE CHIEFS

By Editha L. Watson

OSCEOLA

Sir Walter Scott, in his stories of Scottish life, depicts a people who have many strong resemblances to the Indians. The clan-system, and the custom of loudly lamenting the dead, are typical. But the strongest of all similarities is the character of the people themselves: proud, fierce, brave to desperation, able to endure hardships without flinching, and when treated with treachery, courting death in preference to a dishonored life.

Osceola

Osceola's grandfather was a Scotchman, and something more than a paler skin and European features were transmitted to the grandson; the traits which both peoples possessed in common were doubly strong in him. Like so many prominent chiefs, he was not born to leadership, but became a chief through his efforts in behalf of his people, and, like others, these efforts centered in holding the lands of the Indians against the whites. Sitting Bull tried this; so did Tecumseh and King Phillip. Pope, the Pueblo, was more successful in his plans, but none endured. And Osceola was just another of those devoted men who made the effort and failed.

The second Seminole war, in 1835, precipitated trouble which had been accumulating for some time. Fourteen years previous to this time most of the Seminole lands had been ceded to the United States, although the Indians kept a central reservation. The white people wanted them entirely moved out, and in 1832, they made an agreement to move beyond the Mississippi before the end of three years.

A large number of the tribe who did not favor this removal, began to get ready for resistance, and Osceola became the leader of these people. Emathla, who had been the principal signer of the treaty of removal, was killed. So also was Gen. A. R. Thompson, who opposed the Seminole who wanted to remain. On this account troops were sent to the swamp land, and the second Seminole war began in earnest.

The noncombatants, women and children, were hidden in the Everglades, through which the Indians knew their way, while to the white troops it was an impassable territory. While the soldiers were trying in vain to find the hidden Indians, Osceola and his warriors were upon them like a swarm of mosquitoes, annoying and harassing the already rather bewildered troops.

The first detachment to attack the Indians, under Major Dade, was cut off, and only a few wounded escaped—some say only one. But still the troops continued to attempt the almost impossible. One leader after another was placed in charge, and each office in turn was frustrated. "Caesar never fought Indians, or he would have reversed his celebrated saying, 'Tis easier to foil than find them.'"

This game of hide and seek lasted for eight years. The general public, which did not understand the vast obstacles in the way of the troops, became impatient and a good deal of unearned criticism was bestowed on the succession of officers, who had vainly tried to accomplish what could not be done. Nearly 1,500 United States troops had been killed in the course of the war, and $20,000,000 had been spent, yet the Seminoles were still in Florida, and Osceola was still alive and active.

Finally, General Jesup, who was becoming annoyed to exasperation by the attitude of the public, threw ethics to the winds. A conference was called, which Osceola and his lieutenants attended under the protection of a flag of truce, but instead of holding the council, Jesup seized the Seminole chief as prisoner. This act, while it had a powerful effect on the war, turned the tide of public sentiment, and the fickle people who had urged him on, now condemned Jesup and refused to find an excuse for his act.

Osceola was placed in prison at Saint Augustine. He was no longer free to rove the Everglades, no longer the leader of his eager warriors, no longer the savior of his people. This would not have seemed quite so melancholy to the young chief, had it been accomplished as the fortune of war, but to have been taken by treachery was the final blow. It is said that his broken spirit and sad thoughts, more than the catarrhal fever which he attacked him, caused the death of Osceola at the early age of thirty-five. He died in prison at Fort Moultrie, Fla., in January, 1838.

Modern Profession

Landscape gardening and architecture is a profession of recent growth and recognition. It is applied not only in the development of home grounds and private estates, but more and more in town and city planning, in the development of civic centers, parks, reservations, cemeteries, playgrounds, in the arrangement of residential sections, farm lands, factory lands. The profession combines elements of horticulture, forestry and civil engineering as well as architecture. A landscape architect views nature as his first text book.

SOME ODD NOTIONS OF THE FAIR SEX

Amusing Attitude Taken by Men Long Ago.

There was much discussion at one time as to whether a woman's brain weighed as much as a man's, and this led to another argument in regard to her ability to enter upon a college career. But all such ideas belong to a generation long past. It is a source of amusement, however, to glance at some of the old attitudes toward the female of the species. Addison and Steele used the pages of the Spectator to discourse upon the errors of female education, and the party-vegetarian which has entered into their conversation, as they essayed to discuss the dignity of a woman. For instance, if you believe in the theatrical ostentation of her arms, Mirtilia, with that soft regality in her motion, Chloe with such an indifferent familiarity, Corinna with such a demand of respect, the great gravity of her entrance, you know that these ladies are imitating you. Hector, parting with Andromache, before going into battle, urges her to go to her maids and her spinning. Leaving graver matters to his hands, So the Spectator explains what a delightful entertainment it must be for the fair sex to pass their hours in imitation flowers and fruits, transplanting the beautiful of nature into their own dress, or raising a new creation in their closets and apartments; how pleasing the amusement of walking among the shades and groves planted by the heroes slain in their names, or little Cupids who have brought into the world a better in tapestry than in rhyme, slinking despairing shepherds under silken willows, or a stream of mohair heroes with gold and battle successfully inflaming her with crimson.

CHURCH OF THE NAZARENE

Our new pastor, Rev. Nannie Carter, was in her place in both morning and evening services Sunday. Our hearts were made to rejoice as we listened to her preach on "Heroism for Christ." We believe that God led this dear Sister and her family here. They will not be able to move their household goods here until next week, but will be with us Sunday.

Our Sunday School is growing in attendance. D L Hickey will be our Superintendent another year. He has certainly been faithful. In the six years he has been Superintendent he has only missed three Sundays.

Anyone not attending services or Sunday School elsewhere is invited to meet with us. Let us as Christian people strive to make this the best year of our lives for God.
