NEXT SUNDAY IS ORPHANS HOME DAY

The Methodist churches throughout Texas established the custom some years ago of setting apart one Sunday each year as Christmas Offering Day for the children in the Orphan Home at Waco.

Next Sunday, Dec. 25th, is the day. Bring or send your offering to the Methodist Church.

The Orphanage at Waco has stood the test forty two years in taking care of, and training, 3000 children. Most of them are fine Christian young men and women who have gone out into the world and are making respectable citizens—some of them in your own community.

Have you had a part in this wonderful work?

Now is your opportunity! At this Christmas time we do hope you will remember the 412 children now being cared for in your Orphanage.

Remember the time and place. And make your offering as liberal as possible. These children are depending on you!

LITTLE STORY FOR BEDTIME

By THORNTON W. BURGESS

JOHNNY CHUCK HAS SOMETHING ON HIS MIND

JOHNNY CHUCK sat on his door step down in the far corner of the Old Orchard trying to make up his mind. Yes, sir, that is just what Johnny Chuck was trying to do and he was making hard work of it. You know how it sometimes is when you are a little undecided. First you think you will, then you think you won't, and finally you begin asking everybody around you for their opinions and wind up by being no better off than you were in the beginning.

The matter on Johnny Chuck's mind was whether he was fat enough to sleep comfortably all winter. That seems like a funny thing to have worrying one, doesn't it? But it wasn't funny to Johnny Chuck. No, indeed, it wasn't funny at all. It really was very serious. He knew that a great deal depended on the amount of fat stored away under his skin before he said good-by to everybody and went to bed deep in the ground to sleep until spring. If he were fat enough it wouldn't make much difference to him how cold the winter might be or how late sweet. Miss Spring might be in coming to wake him up. But if he didn't have enough tucked away under his skin he might not be warm enough, and if Miss Spring should happen to be very late he would be so weak when she awoke that he might not have strength enough even to crawl out of his house. Or it might happen that the winter would awaken him before Miss Spring arrived and then he might freeze to death trying to find something fit to put in a Woodchuck's stomach.

"I wish I could know if the winter is going to be hard and long," said Johnny.

So you see the matter was really

Black and White

This Worth costume is an afternoon gown in black and white printed chiffon. The sleeve has an elbow puff, a long tight cuff and a delicate open work of black tulle set into the armhole.

very important to Johnny Chuck. The fat under his skin was both a blanket and food. The fatter he was the warmer he would keep and the more comfortable he would be. In this way the fat was like a blanket. While he slept through the long, cold months of course he would eat nothing. In the first place he wouldn't be awake to eat, and you know people do not eat while they are asleep. In the second place there would be nothing to eat, anyway. So wise Old Mother Nature has provided that the fat Johnny Chuck lays up shall take the place of food.

You know how it is with food. We take it into our stomachs and from there it is taken into our bodies to build them up and to make the heat which keeps us warm. In Johnny Chuck's case Old Mother Nature has fixed things so that the body can get what it needs from the fat with which it is covered. It needs only a very little at a time during the winter, because you know Johnny is asleep; curled up quite motionless. A great deal of the food we eat is used up in what is called energy, which is the power of moving about and doing things. You know how it is when you are sick and cannot eat. In a little while you have no strength to move. You are very weak. But if you did not have to move at all you could live a long time with very little food, because none of it would be used for energy. It is the same way with Johnny Chuck. Sleeping and lying perfectly still, he needs no food for energy, and so his body gets all it needs by absorbing it from the fat. Absorbing means taking in the way a sponge soaks up water.

So you see it was quite as important to Johnny Chuck that he should be fat enough as it was to the Chipmunk that he should have his storehouse filled before the coming of Rough Brother North Wind and Jack Frost. It was this that Johnny had on his mind as he sat on his door step, that bright, cool autumn afternoon. There was still plenty of food. He could eat more if he really needed it. To be sure he was tired of eating. For a long time he had been eating, not because he was hungry, but to store food away in the form of fat. His neighbors didn't understand this. They watched him eat and grow fatter and they called him piggyish. Of course, this was very unfair.

"I wish I could know if the winter is going to be hard and long," said Johnny as he waddled over to a patch of clover. He was already so fat that he was roly-poly and waddled when he walked. "I'm sleepy enough to go to bed right now, but I want to be sure that I am fat enough."

Greatness

By DOUGLAS MALLOCH

I LOOKED for greatness in a tree. And found one very tall to see. For rich the soil and warm the sun. And much it had of either one. And then, amid the sterile ground. A cleft within a rock I found. That little soil or summer knows. Yet in that cleft there grew a rose.

I looked for greatness in a man. And found one who with gold began. And all the nation knew his name. Paid tribute to his purchased fame. And then, amid the huts and streets. I found a man who met defeats. Yet made a little, millions less. And did not think it was success.

I looked for greatness in a soul. And found a singing oriole. Upon the stage, whom crowds applauded. Yet whisper when she walks abroad. Then, by a little thoroughfare. I found a spotless mother there. Whose songs, remembered by a son. Had brought him to that Other One.

COSMOPOLITAN DISHES

AS AMERICA has been called the melting pot of the world, so are we cosmopolitan in our national fare. It is not strange, as our foods, drinks, condiments and fruits come from all parts of the globe.

By association with foreign people, travel and reading, we are becoming international in our recipes as we have been with our frocks. At our breakfast tables we use tea from China or India, coffee from South America, and fruit from the West Indies.

With the increasing transportation facilities, we will be able to enjoy many of the perishable fruits that have never before been shipped to northern points in America.

BONERS Our Government

—How It Operates

By William Bruckart

THE MONEY STARTS TO YOU

IT USED to be said as representative of the acme of impossibilities that "you can't get blood out of a turnip." I believe the person who first used that expression must have observed the control that is exercised as a protection for the government's stock of money in the bureau of engraving and printing. At least, that is the impression it made upon me.

Let us recount the steps by which currency leaves the bureau of engraving and printing:

First, it is necessary that some Federal Reserve bank or some national bank must have had need for additional currency and that it has applied to the treasury for it. In the case of the Federal Reserve bank, it applies to the official in its own organization who is known as the Federal Reserve agent who, under the law, is the federal government's representative in an otherwise private institution. He sends the order through for currency, if he has insufficient stocks that were stored with him by the treasury in advance. In the case of the national bank, the application goes to the treasury, for national banks operate under different laws, and it can get the new currency only if it puts up a certain type of government bond as security and to protect the treasury for the money it is releasing to that bank.

Second, the proper officials of the treasury approve the applications. They notify the director of the bureau of engraving and printing, or some official designated by him, of the amount of currency to be furnished, the denominations and shipping details. He gets that order in writing and in duplicate, one copy of which is delivered to the men who actually start the money in your direction if the application came from a bank in your community.

Third, after the order for delivery and shipping of the currency has been fully executed, it then takes the joint action of three men to get that currency out of the giant storage vaults where it has been "aged." It has stayed there, perhaps, three months, possibly longer, so that it is "cured" and ready to stand the tests to which it is subjected when you carelessly crumple it up in your pocketbook or fail to fold it properly, or to meet some of the other conditions of modern life.

But to get back to the three men who let that money get out of its hiding place; one of them represents the secretary of the treasury, a second the treasurer of the United States, and the third represents the director of the bureau. Each has a key. None can do anything about releasing that money alone. Each has to turn the key in the great lock.

At last the bundles of bills, described in the order, are counted out. The truck, armored with steel and with armed guards aboard, stands waiting with doors opening into the cavernous interior standing ajar. Each bundle, tied and sealed, is transferred to the truck, whose doors click as do the vault doors. The truck moves toward the great building that is the union terminal of all railroads entering Washington. Adjoining it, is the central post office of the city. To one of those places is the destination of the truck.

In the meantime, something else has been happening in respect of this shipment of currency. The proper officials of the bureau and the three-man team have made out their reports, and they have gone to the treasury and the Federal Reserve board or the treasurer of the United States.

If the shipment was destined for a Federal Reserve bank, a message goes by telegraph to that Federal Reserve bank. It would do you no good to see it, however, for it would be wholly unintelligible. It is in code of the most secret type. It might say something about three thousand hogs, cows and chickens coming home with some word or words that would tell on what railroad the shipment traveled and the time of its departure from Washington. I do not mean that those are the words used; I employ them because they are just as good as anything else as an illustration of how meaningless the message would be even to a trained crook who was laying plans for a train robbery.

The shipment that goes to the national bank—and let me explain here that the national bank is used because there are more of them than state banks who have complied with the laws respecting circulation of their own notes—may carry money that will get into your hands in normal processes of business much sooner than through the Federal Reserve banks. You may cash a check the next day after those new bills get there, and one or more of them may be handed out, and the journey to you has been completed.

Shipments to Federal Reserve banks may lie in their vaults weeks and months before some bank in your town has occasion to obtain currency from the Federal Reserve bank of its district. But that money eventually gets to you, only to find its way back to the treasury for destruction in great machines that grind it to a pulp when it becomes too soiled and broken to be classified as "fit."

The Master of Chaos

By IRVING BACHELLER

Opening his thrilling historical story, "The Master of Chaos," in July, 1775, Mr. Bacheller's narrative is woven around the band of patriots who made our nation, but the love interest is principally concerned with the adventures and misadventures of one Colin Cabot, a young man recently graduated from Harvard, the son of a small merchant, and ardent liberty-loving youngster, of course devoted to the Continental cause. As might be expected, he is in love with a beautiful and charming girl, Patience Fayerweather, whose wealthy and well-born parents are extreme Loyalists. Patience herself is converted to the Continental cause by her love for Colin, and does not protest when he escapes from Boston, then in the hands of the British, and goes to join Washington's army of self-sacrificing citizens at Cambridge. There he soon wins the affectionate regard of both the Commander-in-Chief and Lady Washington. He sees much fighting, attends the Continental congress when independence is declared, takes part in the Battle of Trenton, and in the defeat of Burgoyne. Meanwhile Patience has various troubles of her own, the depiction of which will surely hold the unflinching interest of our feminine readers.

But like her lover, the girl has won the affection and good-will of Lady Washington, who does a great deal toward bringing the romance to its proper conclusion. Benjamin Franklin and Benedict Arnold, both the Lees, Gates, Greene and many others appear in the book, though incidentally, being entirely subordinate to Washington, whose grandeur of character is shown without the somewhat worn trappings of the historian and painter.

"The Master of Chaos" is Irving Bacheller's masterpiece as a specimen of the well told unflinching interesting historical novel.

More Squirming to Avoid Payment of War Debts to America—Repeal and Beer Worry Members of Congress Assembling for Session.

By EDWARD W. PICKARD

GREAT BRITAIN was still hopeful that the United States would not insist that the $95,550,000 war debt principal and interest, due December 15, must be paid. She had the money necessary, and would pay if there was no way out of it, but kept on trying to find a way. The cabinet approved the terms of a new note to Washington and even King George took a hand and helped decide what was best to be done. The king has a long interview with Neville Chamberlain, chancellor of the exchequer, who laid before him the proposal of the Treasury which is dominated by Montagu Norman, head of the Bank of England. This presumably was that Britain should refuse to pay now or, at least, should pay into a blocked account, not transferring any money to America at this time.

Opposed to this view was that of the foreign office, upheld by Prime Minister MacDonald, that payment should be made promptly if the new request for postponement were refused, and that the entire matter of international debts be taken up with the Roosevelt administration when it comes into power. It was indicated that the foreign office had been out in the controversy. France, the most determined of the opponents of payment, was passing the buck to England. Premier Herriot's government seeking to avoid decision and even parliamentary discussion until the British cabinet was announced. Many of the deputies, however, were rebellious and sought to force the government to a showdown.

DIRECTLY connected with the war debt affair was the fall of the pound sterling, long the main international finance, to unprecedentedly low prices. By the middle of the week the European gold standard exchanges also weakened considerably, and at the same time the Japanese yen and Chinese currencies broke badly. From London came reports that there had developed a sudden scarcity of available dollars in the world markets that Britain may purchase to pay the United States. The evidence was that American currency had been bought up in France and elsewhere by exchange brokers as part of a scheme to depress the pound for the benefit of bears on sterling.

BEER would seem to be occupying too prominent a place in the American public mind, were it not for the national income and employment relief features involved in the restoration of the beverage to a legalized status. Early in the week Speaker Garner devised a plan to put the hesitant legislators on the spot. The drys and semi-drys had been asserting that a measure legalizing beer and possibly light wines should not be pressed to passage until a resolution for repeal of the Eighteenth amendment had been put through. Speaker Garner drew up such a resolution and announced that he would insist on its being put to a vote in the house on Monday, the first day of the short session. It was a resolution of flat repeal, with no mention of protection for the dry states.

Many congressmen, both Democrats and Republicans, called on the speaker with protests and pleas for delay and Mr. Garner began to weaken. It is said that if he found there was considerable objection to consideration of his resolution he would just soon back up and say: "We'll wait." Fred Britten of Chicago, another eminent wets tried to keep speaker to his determination. Britten assured him that the Republican members of the house would supply more than 100 votes for the repeal resolution. But there was no certainty of more than 130 Democratic votes, so it was doubtful whether the necessary two-thirds majority could be obtained. Later in the week some of the members from the South were reported to be sliding over to the peal side and the prospects of a resolution were considered brighter.

REPRESENTATIVE CARL VINKS of Georgia, chairman of the house committee on naval affairs, had a talk with President-Elect Roosevelt Warm Springs, and came away with his former "big navy" attitude considerably changed. He did not quote Roosevelt, but announced that he would favor drastic cuts in the naval building program and general economic. He declared at least $100,000,000 could be pared from the naval budget and said he was now willing that the building program should be reduced to a point far below the maximum set by the treaty of London.

From what Mr. Vinson said it was apparent that Mr. Roosevelt hopes to provide the United States with a small but powerfully effective navy. He thinks, too, that economies can be effected by the consolidation of some bureaus and a better control of all purchases.

PRESIDENT-ELECT ROOSEVELT held a series of conferences on farm relief with farm organization leaders and legislators, including Senators Robinson, Wheeler and Bankhead, and Henry Morgenthau, and the net result seemed to be a probability that nothing would be done during the short session except the enactment of some emergency measures such as price fixing and perhaps mortgage refinancing. Mr. Roosevelt declined to announce his own plan in advance, saying "That would be too much like telling congress what to do."

Farm leaders in Washington said they thought Mr. Roosevelt wants to meet the 1933 crop emergency and that they are willing to accept temporary measures such as the price-fixing bill that was proposed in the previous session.

HENRY FORD spent the week in the Detroit hospital that bears his name, recovering from an operation for strangulated hernia. The operation, which included removal of the appendix, was pronounced a success, and within three days the automobile manufacturer's temperature, pulse and respiration were back about normal. By that time the hospital physicians and members of the Ford organization felt assured that the multi-millionaire's recovery was a matter only of rest and quiet. Members of his immediate family, who visited him daily, were no longer anxious about his condition. By the time this is read he may have been permitted to leave the hospital for his home.

DEATH took another congressman, this time the victim being James C. McLaughlin, Republican representative from the Ninth Michigan district and dean of that state's delegation. Stricken with heart disease while on a tour of Virginia, he died at Marion. Mr. McLaughlin, who was a member of the ways and means committee, was defeated in the recent elections by Harry W. Musselwhite, Democrat. His death makes the party lineup in the house at the "lame duck" session 208 Republicans, 229 Democrats, one Farmer-Labor, and six vacancies.

EXPANSION of its regulatory authority over public utility companies is recommended to congress by the power commission in its annual report. The body urges that it be authorized to require concerns with federal licenses, including holding companies to submit any information desired as an aid to their supervision. The two fundamental purposes in view, the commission said are: "First: Regulation of the holding company in relation to the operating company and through the operating company to the consumer of electrical energy; and, second, regulation of the holding company in relation to the investing public, which is principally interested in the securities of such holding company."

JUST as soon as there is a let up in the depression and federal finances permit, the regular army should be increased by 2,000 officers and 40,000 enlisted men. In the opinion of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff. In his annual report the general said the army already has been reduced below the level of national safety. "The regular army should be ready at all times," General MacArthur said, "to furnish any troops required by internal emergencies and initial defense against attack. The national defense act provided 18,000 officers and 280,000 men. This has been progressively reduced to 12,000 officers and 125,000 enlisted men, including Philippine scouts. On June 30, 1932, the actual figures were 12,180 officers and 118,888 enlisted men."

DONALD BUCKLEY, a retired shopkeeper who was a rebel against British rule for years, was appointed by King George to be governor general of the Irish Free State, on the advice of President De Valera, whose close friend he is. London was rather shocked by the appointment, many regarding it as a distinct attempt to belittle the king and bring the office of governor general into disrepute. Buckley succeeds James McNeill, who was forced out of office by De Valera.

THROUGHOUT another week President Paul von Hindenburg sought to find a man who could form a new ministry for Germany. His best bet of the seven days was Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, the minister of defense, who is probably the strongest man in public life in the reich. The general was willing to undertake the task, but needed the support of the Nazis, and this was denied him by Adolf Hitler who continued to hold the ground that there should be no government unless headed by himself. However, there was hope that Hitler would yield in later conferences. If not, there was a chance that the President might instruct Von Schleicher to form a cabinet and dissolve the reichstag. Or else, he might create a "business cabinet" under Von Papen and let it carry on, regardless of public opinion. The Nazis said if the government dissolved the reichstag forcibly, this would be considered by them an illegal act and would evoke an "illegal answer."

Gen. Von Schleicher

PRESIDENT MACHADO of Cuba is not afraid of his political foes, who have so often sought his life; and he is determined to restore internal peace if possible. He ordered Gen. Alberto Herrera, chief of staff, to release 80 political prisoners, and the following day he directed that 66 other oppositionists be let out of the penitentiary on the Isle of Pines. Military rule was discontinued throughout the island except in Havana. Machado's enemies said his magnanimity was due to unofficial pressure from the United States, but he denied this flatly.

FAMON DE VALERA, president of the League of Nations council, passed the Lytton commission report on Manchuria on to the league assembly, calling that body to convene in special session on December 6. The Japanese special representative, Yasuke Matsuoka made the usual reservation to this action in line with the Tokyo contention that the assembly is not competent to handle the Sino-Japanese affair, including the status of Manchuria. The council dismissed the Lytton commission, but stipulated that it should consider itself subject to recall to submit whatever information the assembly may require. To this also Matsuoka objected without avail. "As you know," he said, "we have been taking the view that the commission is no longer in existence."

The committee of nineteen of the assembly met Thursday to prepare the program for the special session. Then some of the great powers will have to make clear their attitudes toward the far eastern situation and if the smooth spoken Matsuoka cannot prevail it may be Japan will withdraw entirely from the league. Certainly she shows no intention of letting go her hold on Manchuria, whatever the rest of the world may do.

PREMIER HERRIOT of France and Ambassador Dovgalevsky of Russia signed in Paris the new Franco-Russian treaty of nonaggression and conciliation. It is the first such pact that the Soviet government has completed with any of the great powers.

AGRICULTURAL depression did not seem to hurt the International Live Stock show in Chicago, for this year the affair was bigger and better than ever. The title of grand champion steer of the world was awarded to a Hereford from Texas, the selection being made as usual by Judge Walter Biggar of Scotland. The animal was raised and exhibited by Will Largent of Merkel, Texas, and after its brief reign it went through the customary process of sale by auction, slaughter and consumption by Chicago gourmets.

Herman Trelle of Wembley, Alberta, Can., won the crown of world wheat king for the third successive year, the judges pronouncing his wheat the finest they had ever seen. The new hay king is M. V. Gillett of Nebraska. Coincident with the stock show was the congress of 4-H clubs, attended by many hundreds of young agriculturists of both sexes who competed for the usual fine prizes.

HEARTILY backing up the demands of President William Green, the American Federation of Labor in convention in Cincinnati adopted a resolution calling for the universal adoption in industry of the five day week and the six hour day. Stirring the delegates to waves of applause Mr. Green said labor's patience with industrial management was at an end. Labor's paramount policy, he said, henceforth would be to resort to "forceful methods" if necessary, to establish the shorter work week. By those methods he meant use of every weapon in the union armory—economic, political and industrial.

It was indicated by Mr. Green that the spearhead in the movement for the thirty hour week would be a demand on the federal government that it set an example by establishing the reform.

COLD WEATHER

TOLE A MARCH ON THE CALENDAR THIS YEAR, appearing much earlier than usual. October started it off with some snappy days. Then in November thermometers did a "nose dive" several times with the result that mean temperature for the month was considerably below normal. With no exception last month was the coldest November in a quarter of a century. Over two thirds of the days were cold enough to require heat. What a satisfaction it was to have gas heat instantly ready to make homes warm and comfortable during this cold weather,— with no more trouble than lighting a match.

Remember, your company is anxious that you secure satisfactory heating service in your home, WITHOUT WASTE. Therefore, if your heaters are not in working order, or out of adjustment, call our office, or ask a service man to help you.

FIRST MOTORIST: "I buy new tires in the Spring."

IF your tires are pretty smooth right now, the slippery roads of fall and winter make the full grip of new Goodyears a sensible precaution. And new treads last about TWICE as long on cool roads as on hot summer roads. So Goodyears put on now still will be practically as good as new for next spring and summer. You'll be protected from skids and free from the expense or worry of tire trouble all winter. Better buy now!

A Merry Christmas to All Our Friends

B. W. M. U. MEMBERS IN SOCIAL MEETING

The members of the B. W. M. U. were made to feel the Christmas spirit Monday afternoon when they met in the home of Mrs. Wells for their monthly social meeting. The subject, The Gifts Christ Brought, was interestingly discussed under the following topics:

A Gift for Him—Mrs. Blankenship.

Sharing the Gifts that Christ Brought—Mrs. Gordon.

Jesua Gifts—Mrs. Wells.

Duet—Mary Hope and Ola Ruth Wells.

Closing Scripture.

Leader—Mrs. P. C. Johnson.

A Christmas tree had been beautifully decorated by the hostess, and during the social hour much merriment was caused in the drawing of names for the exchange of gifts from the tree.

Delicious refreshments, carrying out the holiday colors of red and green, were served by the hostess, assisted by her two daughters.

Next B. W. M. U. meeting will be Monday, Jan. 2, in the home of Mrs. Hobart Moffitt.
