BETTER TIMES

From all reports the Hedley trade territory will wind out the year in better condition than for agement of Mr Foible. now showfor cotton together with the plow feed to make another crop

You will notice the statement of our hank in this issue which shows that it is in fine condition. It shows about 300% increase in deposits, with no borrowed mon ey and its loans and discounts have been reduced to reasonable figures and it reports the best business in four years

The merchants report their collections coming in fine, some of them collecting accounts and notes three years old and all report a good volume of business being done

It is estimated our cotten crop is about two thirds sold and mest of our plow-up checks have been the year we believe this commu. following have been chosen. nity will be in fine shape and with sensible planning for next year old man 'Depression' will soon be a back number.

RS. KELLOGG into the outer office and Jones as , steal a fat woman could, She opened the door nough to ermit her to stick h oad face within, looked about oom and made a hissing sound to tract the attention of the young woman at the switchboard who was also acting as reception clerk.

"Is Mr. Blain out?" she whispered. "Yes, he's just gone to luncheon," said the girl. "I'm sorry-"

"I'm not. I'm glad," said rotund Mrs. Kellogg who had now come bravely into the office and seemed to be a little out of breath from her recent maneu-

"I'm his aunt and I want to talk privately-very privately-with his private secretary."

"I guess I'm as much his private secretary as any one is," said the girl. "I'm Nancy Howe and I take all his dictation. Just now the telephone operator has gone to luncheon so I'm sitting out here. Could you talk to me here by the board?" "Why, yes," said Mrs. Kellogg, "If you're quite sure that nephew of mine won't come in. If he's only just gone to luncheon then I'm pretty safe to stay here a little while. I might have telephoned it but I was afraid some one else in the office would overhear and besides I hate to talk with people I can't see. And this is a difficult mat-"If I can do anything for you or Mr. Blain I'm sure I'd like to," said

Nancy Howe. She devoutly wished that the fussily dressed fat woman would come to the point of her story. "Well, it's this way. I'm his aunt Luella Kellogg. You may have heard him speak of me. No? That's funny." "Mr. Blain has never spoken to me except of business matters." "Hasn't," snapped the aunt. "Well, that's funny. I'd an idea young men rather took their private secretaries into their confidences and all that sort of thing.

"But never mind, as I was saying I'm his Aunt Luella and as you may have heard I have quite a little money which I intend to give to him some fine day. He's my only heir and I don't intend to wait until I'm dead to give him his share. But that's a little beside the point.

"What I wanted you to understand is that I take a tremendous interest in the boy. He may be almost thirty but he seems like a boy to me.

"His birthday is the fifteenth of March and tomorrow is the first. I want to give him a really nice present but I haven't an idea of what he'd like. I'm leaving that for you to discover. You'd better tell me by the tenth, so I'll have a few days to pick it out. I'd ask him only I want it to come as a surprise."

Nancy, really troubled.

"I shouldn't think that would be difficult.

"If I was a pretty young stenographer I don't think it would be hard for me to find out what my employer would like for a birthday present.

"Just get to talking some time about hobbies and preferences and get him to tell you about the sort of books he likes, and whether he really wants books.

"Maybe he'd like a new car, or may be there's some club he'd like to join but can't afford the initiation fee or perhaps he'd like a saddle horse. How am I to know?

"If I began to pump him he'd be on his guard because he'd know why I was asking.

"I tell you, my dear, if you'll do this little piece of detective work I'll reward you well. There are surely little things a pretty girl like you would like and I'll give you $15 to spend on some little gee-gaw or other."

"But it will be very difficult," said Nancy Howe, really alarmed at the idea of having to accept the commission and yet somehow not liking to disappoint the genial and outspoken fat woman.

"You see, we're very business-like in this office. I would have no occasion to discuss books or hobbies with Mr. Blain. He thinks of me only as a more or less efficient machine."

"Bosh," said the good-natured aunt with an air of finality. "Pretty girls like you are never looked upon as mere machines by their employers. "Go along, do what I say, find out what the boy wants and let me know the next time I come in, and the $15 will be yours." "I won't accept the money," insisted Nancy Howe.

"But if I possibly can I'll find out what Mr. Blain would like. It does seem a shame for you not to know. It would be so unfortunate to spend a lot of money on something he didn't like." And so the matter was settled.

The more Nancy Howe thought about it the more interested she be-

"I always like pleasant Saturdays and Sundays. I suppose you play golf."
"Golf, goodness no," quoth Mr. Blain

"I'd rather saw wood. Golf would bore me to death." "Most people who don't like golf, like horses and dogs," ventured Nancy Howe, surprised at her own bravery. "Maybe they do," said Mr. Blain. "Then I'm an exception."

"Everyone has to have some sort of hobby," Nancy continued. "But when one has a good fast car suppose that's enough."

"I haven't even a slow one," said Mr. Blain beginning to be amused at the pumping process.

"Then I suppose you'd like one that would go along about sixty miles an hour.' "No motor cars for me, Miss Howe,"

Later she discussed clubs with no better luck.

Every day for a week she continued her pumping process, all carried on, as she thought, with the greatest tact

The most disturbing thing about it was that Mr. Blain seemed to be laughing at her. He seemed to be as eager to keep her from knowing his preferences as she was eager to discover them. It was the ninth of March and the next day Mrs. Kellogg would come

"I don't think I'd object." "Would you mind much being called Mrs. Thomas Blain?"

"Really, this is too much," said Nancy, very much confused. "You promised to answer the truth,"

"You really wouldn't, would you?" "I don't suppose I would," stamnered Nancy. "Very good," said Thomas.

"Now you know what I want for a birthday present. Will you give it

Painters Make Use of Models of Royalties For the picture of the king and queen leaving St. Paul's after its reopening in 1930, which Miss Lindsay Williams, the Welsh artist, painted, she used two models of their majes ties, which are kept at Buckingham palace.

Although few know of their existence, says the London Telegraph, these models have been used frequently for recent royal portraits. Artists are thus enabled to study the details of dress at protracted sittings, which normally would be impossible.

The models have been most carefully built to reproduce exactly their majesties' measurements. According to the nature of the painting, they are draped in clothes new or old, and the queen herself is frequently consulted over the many knotty problems of court attire. Sometimes, too, she superintends the dressing.

IT DOES seem like the trony of fate that there should have been a are in your house that night of all nights," laughed Jane Burke.

"It's not a laughing matter," replied Alice pertly. "Why not? You must have looked like the first lady of Mars or something ten times worse.' "You're about right. Honestly, when mother and father were calling to me frantically to get out, I could think of nothing but what a slight I looked. And to appear that way before half the town and all the firemen!" "What was this marvelous new beauty treatment you were trying out? A new mud pack, or what?" asked Jane, still highly amused.

Alice pretended to shudder. "Oh-I'd rather you wouldn't ask. There I stood on the balcony in front of my room-the very spot I had so often pictured myself in! And in what a predicament! But far from looking lovely and romantic like Juliet addressing Romeo, I was something out of the comic page. My hair was done up in those metal wavers and they stuck out all over my head. I had a heavy cream plastered over most of my face about an inch thick. And I had a couple of pieces of adhesive pasted in various attractive spots just to complete the picture. There was nothing worth anything omitted." "I can imagine. But why all the beauty preparations?" "Well, I want to look as youthful and beautiful as possible at the dance at the country club tomorrow night, and I was following advice from a beauty expert for several nights so that I'd surely be a knockout. You see Brad Conklin is in town visiting his cousin and I haven't seen him to speak of for three years, And you know how I feel about Brad-"

"Well, did Brad turn out to see you in your choice make-up?"

"I'll say he did. His cousin, Jack Langstaff, is a volunteer fireman and dragged Brad along to help the boys out. There the two of them stood with the ladder leaning against my bedroom balcony. Both of them waiting to make sure that I got out safely. It makes me shudder to think about

"I had to climb down the ladder. and there the family and the firemen gathered to grab me when I was in reaching distance. Years ago I had determined never to be caught in such a predicament. And just when I relented once, there had to be a fire.

You're right, it must have been fate." "Well, cheer up, if you're sure Brad is in love with you, he won't even refer to the subject. If he doesn't turn up within six months, you can be sure he saw all and decided the best way out was a prolonged and eternal silence." "Maybe you're right. But after all. I still feel a little mortified. But at least, he might-have sensed humor in the occasion, don't you think?" asked

But, before Alice could reply the sound of an automobile turning in the driveway, attracted Alice's and Jane's attention. It was Brad Conklin.

"Well, cheerlo," he said, smiling, "I hope the excitement last night didn't have any bad effects on anybody. It was a big night for all concerned, and the first fire I've participated in for a good many moons."

Jane regarded her friend Alice and then looked at Brad. She realized that if he had noticed the extensive beauty preparations the night before, he wouldn't divulge the fact. As Alice didn't attempt any reply, Jane said, "It must have been a corker. I'm certainly peeved that I missed it."

"Then Alice has been telling you all about it?" ventured Brad. "I hope she told you all the lives that were at stake and the thrilling bravery of the volunteer fire department.'

Jane laughed, "Well, she told me all about it from her side, as one of those who had to be rescued.'

"And I've been telling her all about my extraordinary appearance on the balcony-as I emerged from a beauty treatment which I thought was going to have wonderful results instead of creating a riot among the natives." "What's this? I may be dumb, but I'm afraid I can't quite follow your trend of conversation. Enlighten me. young lady," Brad demanded.

Then the whole story was told once more with added enthusiasm by Alice and side remarks by Jane. But as she prattled on about the trials of the previous night, Alice could not help feeling relieved, that at least Brad pretended not to have noticed her strange appearance.

After the story was fully told, all three had a good time laughing. The damage the fire had done was little and the insurance inspector had already promised to make proper amends.

"Well, may I ask what was the reason for this extensive beauty treatment?" asked Brad. Alice once again seemed tongue-tied.

To save the situation Jane once again took it upon herself to carry on the conversation, "Brad, you're an intelligent young man. Well, I guess the old adage is true. What would you say? Don't you think 'love is blind?'

Brad was unable to hide his face in a barrel. But he was relieved to see Jane retreating after that remark. It made it much easier to take Alice in his arms and to hold her there until she gasped for breath.

unless we mend our social ways. When we examine the method whereby we are to master applied science we find little tangible. In his presidential address before the British association Sir Frederick Gowland Hopkins renewed the familiar demand for "an organization of the best intellects," bent on gathering knowledge for future practical services and the creation of "a reservoir of synthesized classified knowledge" on which statesmen can draw, But how his house of experts can be hitched to an American congress or a

None of the numerous students of science in its social aspect seems to have recognized that the process of adjustment to science and the machine for which they plead is going on under their very eyes. In Soviet Russia, in Fascist Italy and in the United States attempts are now being made to adapt industrial and economic life to science and the machine. Whatever the outcome may be, it is clear that the laissez-faire policy of yesterday is already giving way to partial control.

We have been told that scientists are destined to become rulers who will study human needs and direct social evolution as objectively as they now prescribe the proper combination of vitamins for caged rabbits or lay down the correct method of splitting the atom. Real BAYER Aspirin "Takes Hold" of Pain in Few Minutes

Now comes amazingly quick relief from headaches, rheumatism, neuri-tis, neuralgia . . . the fastest safe relief, it is said, yet discovered.

Those results are due to a scientific discovery by which a Bayer Aspirin Tablet begins to dissolve, or disintegrate, in the amazing space of two seconds after touching moisture. And hence to start "taking hold" of pain a few minutes after taking.

The illustration of the glass, here, tells the story. A Bayer Tablet starts to disintegrate almost instantly you swallow it. And thus is ready to go to work almost instantly.

When you buy, though, see that you get the Genuine BAYER Aspirin. For Bayer Aspirin's quick relief always say "BAYER Aspirin."

Auction and Pie Supper at Bray

Quite a little time has elapsed since a pie supper was held at Bray, at which time merchandise contributed by the business people of Hedley was sold at auction. But it is rarely too late to say thank you " Q lite a nice crowd attended, and all seemed to have a good time. The merchandiss auction seemed to take especially ing of the appointments well, being a rather pleasant way presiding bishop, which w funds.

The money raised is to be spent for song books, up keep of the light system, and for play equipment for the school number of new Stamps books have already been bought, and the lights are at present amply supplied.

The community life of the Bray people centers around its Sun day evening singings, and those who have contributed to the funds in any way hardly realise how much they have contributed to what people believe to be a most worthwhile endeavor.

The many visiting singers from several of the neighboring communities, who so often come and help with their talents, are appreciated and are invited to continue coming as often as is possible. The Bray people en joy exchanging visits with their neighboring singers.

More than thirty dollars was raised, nearly half of which came from the sale of merchandise contributed Many of the busi ness people are availing themselves of a very valuable means of advertising, besides lending assistance to a worthy cause The most thriving business firms in Heiley are usually the heavi st contributors.

VIOLATORS of the NRA agreement, thousands of whom have been reported, are facing imprisonment and fines, for the President has issued an executive order directing that force and prosecution be resorted to by the recovery administration. He proclaims that those who are false to the blue eagle shall be subjected to fines up to $500 or imprisonment up to six months or both.

Senator Robert Wagner of New York, head of the national labor board. followed this up with a warning to all industrial groups that heavy fines and jail sentences are provided in the licensing provisions of the recovery act for those who flout the decisions of the board and that these penalties will be enforced when necessary. "There will be no escape," he said, "for the misguided minority who arise to interfere with every constructive program." To organized labor, which seems to many to be seeking solely its own advantage, Wagner said: "The strike should be abandoned as an instrument of first resort. Industry and labor cannot co-operate by means of the strike. Such conflict may determine which of the two contestants is stronger at a given moment, but it is merely accidental if it produces a solution which serves the best interests of both parties and of the NRAers."

WHEN Joseph B. Eastman, federal co-ordinator of transportation, announced recently that orders might be placed soon for $30,000,000 in rails the steel operators were greatly cheered up. But since studying the conditions under which the orders would be placed some of them are not so happy. C. V. McKaig, president and vice general manager of sales for the Carnegle Steel company, United States Steel corpora-tion subsidiary, is one J. B. Eastman of these. He quoted Eastman as saying the order would be placed only if an "expected" reduction in the price of steel materializes.

"Such a reduction is the last thing the operators want," said McKaig. "I think the present 'pegged' price of $40 a ton is about right. One of the purposes of the NRA is to assure a reasonable return to the manufacturer. From this observation a lower price now would seem to defeat this purpose."

Eastman said the order would put thousands of workers back in the mills. McKaig said the steel manufacturers already have contributed an estimated $100,000,000 annually to the NRA in the form of increased salaries.

SECRETARY OF AGRICULTURE Wallace and George N. Peek, agricultural adjustment administrator, announced that a plan would soon be put in operation for restriction of production of corn and hogs. It involves the distribution of $350,000,000 to farmers, mainly in the Middle West, and is designed to take 12,500,000 acres of corn land out of production next year. cutting the corn crop 360,000,000 bushels and hog production 25 per cent.

The government will advance the funds necessary for immediate payment of benefits to farmers and will be reimbursed from the proceeds of processing taxes levied on corn and pork.

Secretary Wallace also disclosed that the imposition of a compensating tax on beef cattle is contemplated for the benefit of live stock producers. The cattle benefit will be determined by the extent to which the increased price of pork switches consumption to

The administration arranged for the purchase of approximately 1,000,000 bushels of wheat and completed its cotton loan program in moves calculated to provide resistance to recent falling prices of the two commodities. Henry Morgenthau, Jr., governor of the farm credit administration, announced purchase of the wheat at six markets through the Farmers National Grain corporation for the account of the federal emergency relief administration, which will distribute it to the needy.

The purchase of large quantities of butter for distribution through relief agencies also was announced.

Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who is also oil administrator, undertook the first pegging of prices under the NRA, ordering minimum levels fixed for oil and its products, effective on NDUSTRIAL control rade is now being tried, with cotton textiles as the ground for the experiment, under regulations approved by Administrator Johnson. From now on no man may start a new cotton mill without the approval of Johnson after a committee of cotton men elected to supervise operation of the industry's code has made recommendations. Not only that, but no mill owner may increase his productive machinery without the same approval, recorded in a certificate bearing the industrial administrator's signature.

A N IMMEDIATE embargo on imported medicinal liquors was ordered by President Roosevelt on evidence that such importations had increased sharply in anticipation of prohibition repeal. The President also rejected a proposal to permit importation of beverage liquors in bond pending the date of legal sale.

INVESTIGATION of the federal hospital at Canton, S. D., revealed what Secretary of the Interior Ickes calls "sickening and intolerable" conditions and the confinement of perfectly sane Indians among the in-sane. Mr. Ickes issued a statement severely condemning local political and commercial interests for preventing the removal of the sane patients by obtaining an injunction from a Canton court

Sec'y Ickes and for bringing political pressure to bear on officials of the Indian bureau in Washington. The bureau has sought for several years to close the institution.

"Those responsible for securing this injunction presumably are actuated by a desire to save for Canton the revenue that continued operation of the institution there means," Mr. Ickes declared. "They appear to be willing to make a profit out of the degredation of helpless Indians. They do not object to locking up sane human beings in an insane asylum."

Conditions in the institution were revealed by Dr. Samuel A. Silk, medical director of St. Elizabeth's hospital, He conducted an investigation at the request of Secretary Ickes. His report, made public by Mr. Ickes, described the asylum as "filthy, inhuman, and revolting."

DRESIDENT ROOSEVELT in an address from the White House opened the four weeks' drive of the 1933 mobilization for human needs which is headed by Newton D. Baker. He urged that individuals everywhere give what they can to local organizations carrying on welfare services, instead of leaving it all to the national government. He re-emphasized his position that state and local responsibility come first in the relief program. "It is true," said he, "that I have declared that government must not let any one starve this winter; but at the same time this policy is based on the assumption that the individual American citizen will continue to do his and her part, even more unselfishly than in the past.

"Let me stress that a great many people will still need the help of relief agencies this winter. It is true that because of a partial, but I believe a steadily growing, re-employment of the unemployed, many families and many individuals have been taken off the local relief rolls.

"But, on the other hand, the need of those who are still on the rolls is proportionately greater than it was beore, and, in addition to the work of direct relief, it is necessary for us to continue car support of the permanent hospital and welfare services that exist in every county and in most com-

GOV. ROBERT H. GORE seems to have regained his prestige in Puerto Rico. A coalition majority of union Republicans and Socialists staged a parade and mass meeting in support of the government's program, and the governor, addressing the crowd, pledged himself to work the greater happiness and well being of the Puerto Ricans.

Part of the plan for the future, Gore said, contemplates building to prepare to meet conditions twenty years hence when the island, now overcrowded, would be burdened by a population double present figures.

GOVERNMENT forces in Siam were reported to have suppressed the insurrection that was led by a member of the royal family and a time threatened to upset the existing regime. The rebels who attacked Bangkok were in flight and their leader was among those captured.

STARTED out to be a journalist, I wanted to head my own jazz orchestra, I became a motion picture star.

When I was eight years old, the leader of our town band in Olathe, Kan., organized a boy's orchestra and invited me to join. My father bought me a baritone horn.

By my eleventh birthday I was promoted to the men's orchestra. By my senior year in high school, I had firmly decided to become a theatrical jazz band leader.

The following year, I entered the University of Kansas, majoring in journalism. Outside of class, however, I played in a dance orchestra, and was mastering the trombone, the trumpet and the other brass instruments on down the line.

The summer of my sophomore year, thirty of us from the university went to Europe as deck hands on a steamer carrying mules. A few of us organized an orchestra and practiced after the mules had been bedded down for the night. Upon docking at Barcelona, Spain, we played in that country and then went to Paris, France, where we played in some of the cafes and night clubs. Our orchestra was a success.

By the time we returned to America and the new school year had started, Paramount was organizing its picture school at Long Island and was recruiting promising young men and women from all over the country.

Our theater manager in Olathe inisted that I call at the Paramount exchange in Kansas City. He even sent in some of my pictures. I went back to school, however, and forgot all about our conversation until I received a wire from Kansas City asking me to report for screen tests.

These tests will always linger in my mind as a nightmare. In a public Kansas City park before a number of curious bystanders I was told to register hate, fear and so on to tender love. I had to jump, leap and run. Close-up after close-up was taken of me until I was exhausted. I felt confident that I had failed dismally.

So I went back to my school and jazz band, counting the tests merely as an unpleasant experience and a waste of time. In a few weeks, however, I received word that I had been accepted for the school.

Along with the opportunity to enter the school came an invitation to tour Europe with a college orchestra for the summer. To take one offer meant to give up the other. I wanted to do both things. In the face of two such excellent chances, I did not know what to do. Upon the advice of none other than Jesse L. Lasky, I declined membership in the orchestra and reported at the Paramount school.

In the graduation picture, "Fascinating Youth," I was awarded the male lead. Following the picture, I was sent to the west coast, but before I could be cast in a picture there, I received word from the East to return for a part in, "So's Your Old Man."

After that I received one of those fabulously rare things, a "break." had been cast as the hero in "Wings." (C, By Hal C. Herman.)

Lois Weber Won Fame as "Discoverer" of Stars

Lois Weber, one of the three women who attained success as film directors -the other two being Dorothy Arzner and Dorothy Davenport (Mrs. Wallace Reid)-is known as the "discoverer" of Ella Hall, Mary Maclarin Cleo Ridgeley, Claire Windsor, and Billy Dove.

Miss Weber is the canny person who gave Claire Windsor her professional name when the blond beauty, then a newcomer, tried to crash the gates under the name of Ola Cronk. Once an actress in New York, Miss Weber entered films in 1912 and worked at the old Gaumont studio. One of the films she directed was Pavlowa's "Blind Girl."

She married Capt. Harry Gantz in 1926, when her personal fortune from her movie earnings and Hollywood real estate ventures had ascended near the million mark, and retired from pic tures until her return from a recent world cruise. Universal hopes to profit by her ability to pick out promising tr'ent for new stars.

talk about Russia, her relations with other nations, or her Recognition form of government without taking sides, of Russia yet we are hearing so much about Russia these days that the situation can hardly go unnoticed. Whether it is right or wrong to recog nize the Soviet government and establish diplomatic negotiations is rather likely to continue a long time as a controversial question, but there are numerous facts available that are important to know. It is from that angle that I propose to examine the question. Obviously, economic questions enter into international relationships whatever the problem may be that forms the focal point at the moment. And economic questions are to the fore in the present Russian equation. Outstanding proponents of Russian recognition, and a great many others who merely think they are outstanding, are urging that the United States has suffered immense loss of trade by the long delayed recognition. They argue also that our position of delay has afforded other powerful industrial nations to get there ahead of us, to gain a foothold from which it will be difficult to jar them loose. Because of recognition being withheld so long. they contend, other early birds got the important worm,

And another thing about which recognition exponents proclaim their feelings is that our government has been inconsistent in its foreign policy and has insulted the people of a great nation by withholding diplomatic relations from them. They point to that which is true, that the United States has recognized de facto, or revolutionmade, governments throughout the Central and South American nations with the very minimum of delay. Why, they have asked, has our government accorded recognition to governments in South America where the individuals at their heads have been little, if anything, more than brigands (racketeers, we call them in our own

Much of the propaganda favoring recognition has had its origin among individuals and groups with very definite and discoverable axes to grind. Some of My has come as straight as the crow thes from Communistic sympathizers in not from actual Communistic against They are master propagandists of that being their job, I think it is un ir to criticize them, though I disag the with them and their purposes. ng acquainted with a good deal e Soviet program to bring about gnition of their government by the ed States. I took occasion to the trade records. The figures in ck and white ought to be convincing anyone. They fail to show that any tion which has established diplomat relations with the Soviet under the tator, Stalin, has profited from that recognition.

In the case of our own nation, our commerce with the Soviet was virtually on a level with As to Trade any of the nations Results whose diplomatic representatives were accredited to the Soviet. Our trade has gone up or has gone just about the same as has the volume of those nations that have recognized the Russian experimental regime. seemed to me to establish that recognition had nothing whatever to do with the question. Further, it seemed to prove that the other nations had gained no advantage, no foothold, which our own exporters had not had. To me, the figures definitely confirmed the statement made by the former secre tary of state, Bainbridge Colby, that recognition had no bearing whatsoever on trade results. There are some social and humanitarian objections to recognition, however, that strike me as being worthwhile in view of the history of our nation and the freedom of religious worship which was guaranteed by being written into the Constitution. President Roosevelt got very close to the key in his speech in New York on October 5 when he suggested that no nation denying its citizens the right of religious worship could subsist long. He intimated a belief that eventually such a government would find itself allenated from other peoples, and if that be true, then Mr. Roosevelt predicted the ultimate outcome of the system of which Stalin is now the overlord. So it seems to me that instead of insulting the Soviet by denying, or rather, withholding, recognition, insult our own people when we take a position that makes equals of those who destroy all evidence and rights of religious worship.

Now as to reasons for the lack of development of Russian trade: the best authorities tell me that Russia can export only a given volume of the several commodities figuring in international trade. She cannot increase that because she has had insufficient equipment with which to produce, except by a very slow process. The natural question to follow, of course, why not sell her that equipment? To this the reply is simple: who will pay?

Washington .- Almost no one can ! Russia has not the money and she cannot get the money from outside of her domain because she has no credit.

od of chance. The great issue, sold during t strife and strain of World war day, and on the basis of patriotic appeal, was not due to mature until twenty years after its issue, which made It mature in October, 1938. But when the government sold the bonds, it reserved the right to call them for redemption five years before maturity if it so desired. Money market conditions made it seem likely that bonds bearing a cheaper rate of interest than the 41/2 per cent carried by the fourth Liberty bonds could be sold. If they could, the government, which means the taxpayers, could save money on interest. Hence, the determination to call a part of the issue and, hence, the ceremony. It was felt that only a portion of the big issue could be resold at this time, so only one-third of it was called Knowing of the program, I went in advance to the lobby of the undersecretary's office. A tall, wooden pedestal stood in the middle of the room. Atop it was a glass bowl. At the appointed time, an attache of the treasurer's office deposited ten envelopes in the bowl. Each was neatly rolled and held by a rubber band. Each envelope carried a formal order directing the retirement of certain portions of the issue and stating that interest on those bonds would cease as of April 15, 1934, the future date being necessary because the bonds themselves stated that a notice of six months had to be given in case of redemption in advance of actual maturity.

Presently, the tall, dignified, Dean Acheson, undersecretary of the treasury, entered the room. There was much taking of pictures, stills and movies. Mr. Acheson then reached into the bowl and drew therefrom an envelope. It was opened by Frank Birgfeld, the treasury's chief clerk. Mr. Acheson read its contents aloud. It said that fourth Liberty bonds whose numbers ended in the digits "9" "0" were either "J," "K" or "A" were called for redemption. That meant that anybody holding any of those bonds either would have to turn them into the government or lose interest on them after next April.

The new issue will bear only 31/2 per cent interest, so that the saving will be almost $19,000,000 a year, because the bonds called total $1,875,000,000.

He will be told, of course, that efforts are being made to punish the offenders, but I think it is no longer a secret that the Washington government is not at all satisfied with the way Hitler and his cohorts are treating citizens of other nations. Indeed, I believe I can see signs that the Washington administration is growing a bit "cold" on Hitler, himself. The incident may or may not produce anything. It is possible that the secretary of state may take that step, as bold as it is rare, of issuing a proclamation that the United States cannot guarantee the safety of American citizens in Germany. The best judgment I can obtain is that this stage will not be reached in the controversy. Because, to make such a declaration is an action between nations as bitter as applying the short and ugly word to an individual. On the other hand, attention must be called to the latent dangers in the situation and one must consider as well that Hitler is playing a far-flung game. To Washington observers, the early advices in response to Mr. Hull's order to check up on punishment of storm tro pers who have assaulted Americans have meant nothing but that the Nazi chieftain was dodging the issue. When his foreign office said "efforts were being made" to catch the offenders, the corps of students of the sitnation here immediately ejaculated that slang, but quite effective, expression: "Oh! Yeah." For it is to be remembered that Mr. Hitler has complete domination of German affairs, and that under conditions where the dictatorship is so completely in control, there ought to be little difficulty in putting an end to the condition of

******** SYNOPSIS

A girl finds herself in a taxicab in New York with a strange man who speaks of "an awful shock." Escaping from him, she stops at the Biltmore, wondering who she is. Her memory is gone. She has a wedding ring. At the hotel a young woman vanishes with the girl's $900. An elderly woman, Mrs. Oscar Du Val, greets the nameless girl, addressing her as "Doris," wife of Mrs. Du Val's son, Rocky. Rocky is abroad, and Doris is taken to the home of Mrs. Du Val's and her sculptor husband, Oscar. Doris falls in love with Rocky's photograph, but cannot re-Rocky's photograph, but cannot re-member having married him. Rocky returns. He demands to know who she is and why his wife sent her to his home. She cannot tell him. They agree, for the sake of his parents, to pretend they are husband and wife. Rocky takes Doris to his New York apartment to confront his wife. He finds the flat empty. Doris sees the real wife's photograph and recognizes her as the girl who stole her $900. Doris finally tells Rocky she has lost her memory. In a newspaper they see a headline, "Killer Bride's Gun Found: Diane Merrell's Father Identifies It." When she recovers, her memory has not returned. Rocky informs her he is going to take her to Canada by motor. They set out.

CHAPTER VIII-Continued

-14-This time when Doris opened her eyes, she discovered that two men were watching her. One was the same old man. He had brought a friend in this time, a person of equally respected years. As Doris looked up, he was putting on his gold-rimmed glasses to augment the mechanical stare which he was directing at her. Having finally adjusted them so that they would stay on, he transferred his fumbling fingers to a folded newspaper which he had been holding under his arm. This he opened up part way so tha the other man could see.

"You see?" he said. The other man nodded. 1 furtively now at Doris and s thing which she couldn't hea to the man with the newspaper.

Doris gasped. There was a rrific leer on the old man's face.

"Rocky!" she called. Rocky had followed the mec into the garage office, but now he c running. She noticed with relief he was wearing his coat again an

"Okay once more." He opened t front door of the car, "Now we ca start-" Then he noticed the tw men. He got into the driver's sea quickly without a word to Doris. He started his engine just as the hand of one of the men fell on his arm. "Hey look out," he yelled, swinging free his arm, "If you don't want to get run over." The car started backing out, but the two old men clutched at him excitedly.

"Wait a minute young feller," cried the one with the newspaper, "we want to speak to you!"

But Rocky's car with a blustering commotion had backed out to the road. It sallied a minute, reversed, took another gasping leap forward and was up the road in a long diminishing

Rocky drove like a mechanical demon. His head was pitched slightly forward, his arms and shoulders motionless as he held to the wheel-his senses alert to only one thought, speed. Doris felt frightened.

"You seem to know these roads?" "Yeah. Friend of father's lives near here. I used to visit him every summer. Rockwell St. Gardens."

Their way lay through dark wooded hills. "Are we going to ride all night?"

"Depends." "Depends on what?" she wanted to ask, but she felt too drowsy. There was hardly any use anyway, as he was sure not to answer. He was going so swiftly now. They were racing up the long mountain, taking curves reck-

And something was following. Rocky was right.

She couldn't worry any more. Her head sank down. She was leaning unconsciously against him. She slept.

The car stopped with a jerk. A white light flashed over her face. Men were shouting. She sat up. A man was standing beside the car. In the gush of light that streamed from his hand she saw his uniform. He was a policeman. In the reflected light, the shadowy outline of his fat face looked stern. Another man was shouting. Doris turned her head and saw that a roadster full of men was drawn up directly behind them in the pine-fringed road. She could see another police man getting out of the car. He held a revolver.

Rocky's hand guivered on the whee!. "Don't say anything," he whispered to White lights stabbed the road, threw queer shadows into relief. Again the strong white glare of a flash-light struck her between the eyes.

"Looks like her, Murphy, all right!" "I want to speak to the young lady," said the policeman at Rocky's elbow. Rocky's voice was without a qualm.

The light flicked up and over Rocky's face. "What's your name?"
"Rockwell Du Val."

"See your license?" Rocky produced it. This had all happened before, but this time Doris knew that the looking at the license was a pretense. The man on her right on the motorcycle was so close. And why did he have his gun in his hand? "Who's the young lady?"

Rocky did not falter as he lied: "My

Two more men were coming from the car behind. There was a fearful, quiet tread, a breathless expectancy in their walk. Knowing nothing yet, Doris felt terrified. She tried to control her panic. Rocky was being so bold, and yet she knew that he, too, was frightened.

"Has the lady any identification?" "Yes, Plenty."

"Let's see some of it." Doris could feel Rocky's nervous inward tremor while she listened to his assumed belligerence: "What's this all about?"

"We'll come to that." A small wiry man in plain clothes interpolated briskly: "We've got you. No use trying to pull anything. Better get out of the car, mister."

"Am I under arrest?" "You'll find out what you're under." "You bet I'll find out what I'm under. And I'll find out before I get out of this car, too.' The fat-faced cop elbowed the small wiry man aside. "Just wait. Let's find out about this. Nobody's under arrest yet." "That's better." said Rocky. A dozen flashlights played over Doris' face. Now she heard a murmur among the men. "Looks like her all right." "Sure it's her."

"Have you any other identification besides your license?"

"Can you prove that this lady is your wife?" Again the lights bombarded her.

She covered her face with her hands. What did they mean?

"Don't do that?" said Rocky to Doris out of the corner of his mouth. "Look them straight in the eye!" She obeyed, quivering.

Rocky addressed the officer standing beside him: "I'm a friend of Rockwell St. Gardens. He'll identify us in There was a slight sensation.

The wiry man came and stood beside them. "You say you know Rockwell St.

Gardens?" "Yes. I know him very well."

"Does he know your wife?" "Yes." "Your name is Rockwell Du Val?"

"Yes, I'm named after St. Gardens. The policemen conferred. The man on the motorcycle still balanced close to Doris, the engine of his motorcycle shuddering gently as he guarded the

The officer returned. "I'm sorry to ask you, but you'll have to come to the station with us. We received a tin over the telephone that Diane Merrell was in this car!"

"That's utterly ridiculous." Doris felt Rocky's strong grip on her arm. The bluster in his tone was a thinly concealed artifice.

Nevertheless she could feel a change in the atmosphere. The policemen were uncertain. Rocky knew it too. She could feel a new strength in his voice as he said again, "Look here.

Are we under arrest?" "Nothin' like that. We just got to take you up to the station if you don't mind, mister-"

Rocky cut in crisply. "But I do mind. I've been driving all day and my wife is tired."

"Yeah, but, mister, in a case like this we gotta be mighty careful. And we got this tip-" you want to arrest us, that's your lookout," said Rocky.

The fat-faced cop pushed his face into the car, looking over the wheel at Doris. "We'll go up to St. Gardens' place with you. How's that? If St. Gardens can identify you-" He opened the door of the roadster as he spoke.

"I'll drive," he said to Rocky. "You can come along in the car behind.' Doris protested involuntarily. "No. No. Don't leave me, Rocky.'

"If we're not under arrest I think I'll drive," said Rocky gravely. The cop grunted. He walked around the car and got in beside Doris. "O.

K. Let's go."

The man on the motorcycle sent his machine leaping ahead of them. The cool air came rushing gratefully to Doris' pale cheeks as the car got under way. Her shoulder was tucked under Rocky's like a small chicken nestling under its mother's wing. What was the name of the girl the police wanted? Anne Somebody, Was that her real name? Had her real self been found at last. And was she a criminal?

Doris put these thoughts away. Supposing they accused her of the worst of crimes. How could she deny them? What, oh what could she have been in that other lost life of hers?

They turned at last between stone gate posts,

"This is the place all right," said They rode for three-quarters of a mile before the lights of the house appeared. At last Rocky drew up before the door of the great house. He shut off the engine, opened the door and

"Come on, Doris,"

The motorcy cop drew up beside them. "Not so fast."

Doris knew then that the policemen were still suspicious. Rocky had run ahead up the steps of the house, and was ringing the bell. Doris with a policeman on either side of her followed more slowly.

Her heart was beating wildly. The door opened slowly. A blond impassive face looked out. "Hello, Swenson. Is Mr. St. Gardens in?" The butler swung the door open. "Yes, Mr. Du Val. Come in."

Rocky motioned to Doris. She went into a square hallway. The policemen

On a landing above a short, square set figure appeared. He had on a dressing gown, and held a book in his hand. He stared at the group for a minute in amazed silence. "Rocky! Is it Rocky, for heaven's

"It's Rocky. I've brought my wife," Rocky was bounding up the stairs to the landing. Doris saw him take the short square map by the shoulder and say something. Then St. Gardens turned and came down the stairs with outstretched hands.

"Doris! It's so nice to see you again. I was wondering when you would turn up. You must be tired from your journey. Been traveling Doris was confused. She took St. Gardens' hands gladly, smiled at him without speaking, but it was the vague act of a bewildered and exhausted child.

She sat down in the nearest chair. The room was going round and round. She hardly heard the policemen. She knew that everything was being arranged. Everything was all right.

Rocky had fixed things. The policemen went away. The "Terrible," said Rocky. "They were so suspicious I thought it would save a lot of trouble if you pretended you had already met Doris. May I introduce her now? Doris roused herself. St. Gardens was holding out both his hands.

"This is a great pleasure, my dear. Rocky has always been like my own Doris put her hands hastily across her own eyes. She knew she was acting badly, but it was all so puzzling to her tired mind.

"She's exhausted," said Rocky apolo-

St. Gardens apparently didn't know her. He had pretended to recognize her in order to save her from the police. He thought she was the real Doris. She was to fool him as she had fooled the Du Vals. She rose trembling, a hand pressed against her cheek.

"What's the matter?"

They could not follow her thoughts. She was being stupid. She could not pretend to be the real Doris any more. inal the policemen were seeking. She looked at Rocky with widened eyes.

"I can't stand it. I'm-" St, Gardens took her elbow, His voice, rich and caressing, spoke to her softly: "You are very tired. You have been through a dreadful ordeal. I can see that. And now you want to go to your room.

"Let me take her upstairs," said Rocky. "You are right. She needs to go to bed. She's knocked out."

"It's enough to knock anybody outbeing mistaken for a murderess," said St. Gardens sympathetically.

Doris looked at him. A murderess. That's what she had done. She had committed a murder. The room was still rocking, but she no longer tired. St. Gardens' words had galvanized her. New life, like second wind coming to a tired swimmer, flooded her. She looked at Rocky in agony. What did St. Gardens mean? Rocky read the question in her eyes.

but he deliberately ignored it. "Come, you must go to bed." Doris wanted to speak but her mouth felt dry. Meantime Rocky, as if anticipating her purpose, had begun to talk hectically about their trip. And he was pushing her up the stairway. A maid came. Rocky went out to get her bags, leaving her standing at the top of the stairs beside St. Gardens. She looked at him with twisted brows. "What did you say a minute or two ago about a murder?" St. Gardens smiled. "Oh nothing. I was just referring to the stupid business of the local law enforcers in mistaking you for what's her namethe girl who shot her husband at a wedding."

Doris clutched the stair railing. She was looking into a bottomless gulf. "What's her name-the girl who shot her husband at a wedding?" She was what's-her-name-a girl
