The First Great Fur Trader
 AMERICANS not only have good reason to remember Manuel Lisa as the first great fur trader in the trans-Mississippi West, but they also have good reason to remember him gratefully for his patriotic service to the republic during the War of 1812.

Born in New Orleans about 1770, the son of a Spanish official, at the age of twenty he owned a boat in which he engaged in commerce on the Mississippi. By the beginning of the Nineteenth century he was a large landowner near St. Louis where he opened a store for outfitting Indian traders. This led naturally to his going into that business himself, at first with the Osage Indians on the Missouri under a grant from the Spanish authorities of Louisiana.

Then Lewis and Clark made their historic exploring trip through the newly-acquired Louisiana territory, and Lisa was quick to see the opportunities offered on the Upper Missouri. He formed a partnership with William Morrison and Pierre Menard of Kaskaskia, Ill., under the name of Lisa, Menard & Morrison, and in 1807 set out with a party of traders, guided by George Drouillard, who had been with Lewis and Clark.

That winter they spent on the Yellowstone hunting, trapping and trading with the Crows, and the following summer found Lisa back in St. Louis, proud of the success of his first venture and dreaming of even greater enterprises. The result was the organization of the Missouri Fur company.

During the next five years the Missouri Fur company prospered and Manuel Lisa rose to a commanding position in it and in the fur trade of the West. Meanwhile, during many journeys up and down the Big Muddy, he had won the confidence and esteem of nearly all the Indian tribes along the river. So when the War of 1812 broke out and the British tried to incite the Indians of that region against the United States, it was only natural that Gov. William Clark should appoint Lisa sub-agent to these tribes to counteract the British influence.

The Spaniard did his job well. He not only organized war parties against some of the tribes who were allies of the British but he secured pledges of friendship and peace from nearly all the Missouri tribes which kept them out of the war. If it had not been for Manuel Lisa's efforts, the War of 1812 might have had a far different ending. Lisa died in 1820 but to the end of his days he dominated the Missouri Fur company and, so long as he did, no other fur company was able to secure a foothold on the Upper Missouri.

Seth Bullock, Western Sheriff

WHEN Seth Bullock died at Deadwood, S. D., in 1919, it was recalled that he had not only been a life-long personal friend of Theodore Roosevelt but that he had also been perhaps the most typical old-time sheriff of the West. As such he became a figure of myth and legend which he, more than once, dispelled in laconic fashion. Once an easterner referred to him as a "man killer." When they told Seth Bullock that, his only reply was: "They say I've killed 47 men. Son, I'll tell you what, I never killed but two and I didn't kill them soon enough."

Although he became famous as an American frontier type, Bullock was not a native of the United States. Born in Ontario, Canada, in 1847, he came to Montana at the age of twenty and established himself as a dealer in mining supplies in Helena. By that time the famous Montana Vigilantes had pretty well wiped out crime as an organized force. But there were still lawless men there and young Bullock, allying himself with the forces of law and order, learned many things which were to stand him in good stead in his future career as a peace officer in a new gold camp—Deadwood in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

He was among the first to reach there and he took part in many of the stirring events in the early days of the gold rush of 1876. When a provisional government was established in Deadwood he was made sheriff, and when Lawrence county was organized he was elected its first sheriff.

His biggest problem was the road agents who infested the trails and preyed upon the stage coaches with their shipments of gold dust out of the hills, and it was his relentless pursuit of these which gave him his greatest reputation as a man-hunter. In one case he followed a fleeing road agent clear across South Dakota, down through Nebraska and into Iowa to the town of Missouri Valley before he "got his man."

It was during Bullock's career as sheriff that his friendship with Theodore Roosevelt, then a young ranchman in North Dakota, began. So at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war he was one of the first to organize a company for Roosevelt's regiment of Rough Riders, although he never got any nearer Cuba than Chickamauga park in Tennessee. Bullock was responsible for the erection of a monument to T. R. on a mountain by the same name north of Deadwood, and he lay dying in 1919, he asked to be buried at White Rocks where the monument to his friend would look down upon his grave.

Kidnaping Is Old Stuff to Indians

Savages in Colombia Have Ideas on Subject.

Panama.—Kidnaping is not confined to the United States or other civilized countries. The savage Indians who inhabit the Guajira peninsula in Colombia have some advanced ideas on the subject, according to discoveries made by the Weston-Carr expedition now engaged in exploring this little-known region of Colombia.

Recently a young girl was carried off by an enterprising young Indian of another tribe and as a result the offending tribe demanded a big indemnity in the form of several horses and cattle, the return of the girl being of secondary importance provided their wounded pride was suitably compensated.

This the offending tribe refused, and their refusal being tantamount to a declaration of war, the others lost no time in swooping down upon one of their enemy's outlying villages while the men-folk were away hunting, and carrying off several women and more than a dozen young children whom they threatened to put to death unless a very large ransom were immediately forthcoming. They also made it clear that any attempt at rescue would result in the early death of all the prisoners.

Tribe Lacked Money.

As it turned out, the tribe to which the women and children belonged was not wealthy and was unable to raise the required number of animals demanded as ransom. They therefore made up their mind to fight and try to recover the captives by force.

At this juncture, news of the impending inevitable deaths of the captured women and children reached the handful of Capuchin monks who, not far from the small border town of Riohacha, have established a small orphanage for abandoned Indian children where the children are trained to fend for themselves in farming and so forth.

A couple of the monks were dispatched posthaste to the scene of the impending conflict with instructions to save the lives of the captured children at all costs. This was easier said than done. The chief in whose power they were was quite willing to surrender the children if the ransom, amounting to a large number of cattle, were paid, but on no other terms.

The monks thereupon got busy in true Christian spirit, and returning to their headquarters, they and their fellow-workers mustered all the wealth of the orphanage in terms of cattle and had these delivered to the Indian chief in exchange for the children, who were promptly rushed away to the safety of the orphanage.

Fighting Lasted Three Months.

Unfortunately, the meager resources of the monks made it impossible for them to ransom the women, whose own people, persisting in their endeavors to rescue them, plunged both tribes into a deadly tribal conflict which lasted fully three months, during which many Indians were killed on both sides.

Eventually the Capuchin fathers again intervened and managed to persuade the two tribes to make peace, which was done to the accompaniment of considerable palaver and a vast exchange of cattle, which, although impressive to the eye, really left both tribes no better off than they were before. Peace, however, had been achieved.

The monks, having already paid the ransom for the children, it was agreed by the Indians that the children belonged to the monks by right of purchase, and as the self-sacrificing Capuchins considered the welfare of the children of more importance than their lost cattle which had been used for the ransom, they decided to allow the children to remain in the orphanage, where they are now being educated.

Gambling Costs English Two Billions a Year

London.—The gambling spirit of Old England is indicated by the estimated figure of two billion dollars which is turned over each year in betting on horses, dogs and football.

While indications are that the government will remove its ban on betting on the more respectable dog tracks, Sir J. Leishman, a member of the recent royal commission on lotteries and betting, claims that dog racing fulfills no other purpose than to provide opportunities for organized betting for private commercial profit.

"OUR WORST ENEMY"

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

There is a fable which runs like this—A man was confronted with a veiled figure which haunted him day and night. He acquired wealth but the veiled figure took it away from him. He attained fame only to be deprived of it in like manner. His health was taken from him by the same veiled figure. And on his wedding day, when the ceremony was about to take place, the figure cried aloud, "I forbid the bans."

In his despair the man cried, "Who are you?" Tearing away the veil from the face of the figure, he saw his own face.

In hours of misfortune we are most likely to blame others rather than ourselves. If unsuccessful in any particular adventure we seek an excuse for our failure in conditions over which we have no control. When we meet an accident our first impulse is to blame the other fellow.

Many persons place the blame for the depression upon economic conditions beyond human control. The real explanation, however, is that the depression was a natural reaction from an extravagant and luxurious period of prosperity. The pendulum of a clock swings an equal distance in both directions. So with the law of compensation in the field of economics. When we arrive at normalcy we doubtless will discover that the line of depression was as far below the line of normalcy as the line of prosperity was above it. The responsibility for the depression was not the veiled figure of an economic law but rather the way we forced that economic law to operate contrary to reason and common sense.

Sets World Record

Mrs. Joan Radtkin of Cleveland, Ohio, has a right to smile broadly, for she set a new world's record for women bowlers, making 775 in a three-game series. The former record was 759, made in 1927 by Mrs. Fioretta McCutcheon.

The tendency is to blame some veiled figure for all our mistakes and failures. The truth remains, however, that the fault lies within rather than without. When we correct the error of our own mistaken judgment and perverted moral norms, we shall have taken a long step forward toward the return of a permanent contentment and real prosperity.

"To thine own self be true, and it must follow, as the night the day, thou canst not then be false to any man."

Adopts Stern Measures to End Permanent Waves

Tsinanfu, China.—Gen. Han Fu-chu, dictator of Shantung province, has decided that artificially curled hair and permanent waves are unbecoming to Chinese women, and that he will not tolerate these innovations among the 30,000,000 people who live in his domain.

So he has ordered the police to arrest on sight all Chinese women with curled hair, shave their heads, "and turn them out onto the streets bald-headed and ashamed."

A few years ago bobbed hair became the rage among the girl students and sing-song girls. It is they who have lately become addicted to the use of curling irons and the acquisition of permanent waves.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

THERE is a desire on the part of every woman to be smartly gowned and look stylish. It is possible for everyone to succeed. The following suggestions are important. First she must know what is becoming as well as what is the mode, and wear only those things which make her look her best, whether in the morning, the afternoon, or evening. It is a mistake to feel it is unimportant how one looks about the house, but of supreme importance how one looks when gowned to go to a party.

The matter of knowing one's style and keeping to it cannot be over-emphasized. To be smartly gowned, the dress must be so well suited to the person that it seems in character. There are women who look best dressed in severe costumes. Sport things set them off to advantage, and when afternoon dresses and evening gowns are chosen they should have a certain severity. It is becoming to them.

There are other women who require dainty things to give them the smartness which must accompany style in order to give the desired effect. Such women look incongruous in mannish clothes. They detract from rather than add to their charm. Fortunately for these women, the fashions are turning in their direction. There is a grace of femininity which is creeping into styles which have pushed the mannish costume to the point where a change to bring variety is needed to stimulate styles.

Avoid Over-Elaborateness. The dainty woman must stress her type, and not attempt to wear excessively severe costumes which clash with her personality. The frock should never be "flxy," or over-elaborate, which is always in bad taste, but rather have the grace of soft lines.

It is as important for one group of women to realize what is becoming as for the other, since the greatest hindrance to smartness is the failure to dress in accord with what suits the personality. It is by no means enough that a hat is modish or a frock is in the height of style. It must be right for the woman herself.

Another essential to smartness is carriage. Unless a woman carries herself well nothing she can put on will impart smartness to her. A round shouldered woman misses out. She must straighten up. The way she holds her head is imperative to stylishness. The head must be held erect, erect yet not stiff, but supple. The feet must be kept close together, the elbows be close to the body and the hands, however held, should be mobile.

Air Clothing.

There should either be no odor whatever about one's wearing apparel, or it should have a delicate and faintly pleasant fragrance. In winter time where cold weather prevails and frocks are closely hung in closets, there is little opportunity for fresh air to circulate through, and about them, and keep them sweet. So it is very important to hang them out of doors occasionally. Or if you live in an apartment and have no opportunity to hang garments in the open air, suspend the apparel by an open window often so that they can benefit by sun and air.

Some cleansing agents have very telltale odors. Immediately they are perceived by others, it is known that some of the wearer's apparel or accessories have been cleaned, although the appearance may not denote it. To eliminate odors therefore is desirable. Some of them will go quickest with heat, others with fresh air treatment.

When inflammable agents are used, sunshine and fresh air must be allowed opportunity to act upon the article to remove odors. In time any good cleansing agent will leave no traces of its presence after thorough airing, especially when the sunshine has added its power of evaporation on it. The important matter to remember is that articles cleaned by any agent which has an odor, must have time to become free from it before worn.

Never try to counteract odors by perfume or cologne. It is bad form to be redolent with perfume, etc., and it does not eliminate the other odor, it merely mixes with it, often unpleasantly.

Fashions Go Mexican

As we look forward toward the fashion trends of the coming spring, what do we find? Well, we discover that the dictators of the modes are going south of the Rio Grande for their ideas. Here is a pull-over blouse of giddy Mexican colors in stripes on a soft silk fabric. It is something like this that goes rather well with a natural shantung coat and skirt or a town and country tweed.

LOST, NEAR BROADWAY AND 44TH St., three $100 bills. Will finder please return to Nora Connors, Laverne Hotel, New York.

THE green-visored young man who was about to set up this ad emitted a whoop and addressed the composing room in general. Not since the Prophet Mahomet ordered the mountain to come to him had anything quite so optimistic been heard of. But that was not exactly how the young man expressed himself. What he actually said was: "Say, you guys! Run your lamps over this gem. What a swell chance that Jane's got of ever glimpsing her three hundred smackers again! Huh?" They clustered round and read it. "I'll tell the cock-eyed universe she'll never see that dough again!" "Haw—haw—haw!" "Can you tie that?" "Maybe those hills are still lying just where she dropped 'em!"

"Sure! Nobody on Broadway'd be so mean's to pick up a paltry bit of change that didn't belong to them!" And so the comments flew until an oldish man with horn-rimmed spectacles balanced perilously near the tip of his nose exclaimed: "Well—wadja know about that?"

Now, when some one unleashes "wadja know about that" the last word has been said. Anything further would be anti-climax. So the compositors trickled back to their respective jobs.

Nora's simple faith in mankind probably amused those few curious people who glanced over the Lost and Found column the next morning. It certainly brought a smile to the face of Solly Rosenberg as he crunched his breakfast toast and gulped coffee.

Within half an hour of reading that ad, Solly Rosenberg was interviewing Nora Connors at the modest Laverne hotel. Nora seemed over-awed of this expensively dressed little man with much yellow bullion in his teeth, a massive diamond ring on either hand, and a diamond pin in his necktie.

"So you lost this money about three o'clock yesterday afternoon," Mr. Rosenberg was saying.

"Yes, that was when I missed it from my handbag, sir," Nora answered, her large, frank, blue eyes fixed on his.

"No, sir, I only arrived in New York yesterday from South Bend, Ind." "On a vacation?" "Oh, no. I came to take painting lessons, and that money I lost was to pay for them. My young brother and I saved it up. . . . we're orphans. . . . and it took us over two years to do it."

"Ah!" said Mr. Rosenberg, beaming. He had hardly hoped for anything so good as this.

"And you see, sir," Nora continued, brushing back a strand of her fluffy golden hair with pretty hand, "if that money isn't returned to me I'll have to go back to South Bend, and that will be the end of my life's ambition. . . . to paint." Her lips trembled and she lowered her silken lashes to hold back the tears.

"Now, don't you get all het up, little girl," said Mr. Rosenberg. "I've got some bully news for you. Your money's been found—luckily by an honest party—and you're going to get it back."

"Oh, how wonderful!" Nora clasped her hands. "You know," she said, "after all I'd heard about New York I was just a little worried that the finder might not return it to me."

Mr. Rosenberg extracted three $100 bills from a black pocketbook and handed them towards her.

"There you are, my dear," he said. "But—those are not my notes," Nora protested. "Mine were dirty and crumpled—not clean and new like those."

"I know—I know, my dear. Let me tell you what happened. Your money was picked up by Gladia Gladstone—her new picture, the Gorgeous Sin, opens here next Thursday. And it's a dandy picture, believe me. Well—Gladia gives me the dough and asks me to try and find out who lost it. She's a mighty fine woman, is Gladia. Now those notes didn't look none too sanitary to be carrying about, so I changed them at the bank for clean ones, see?"

"Oh, yes," Nora said, smiling and taking the bills. "At first I was afraid you were just being kind and pretending you found my money. Of course, I couldn't have accepted. . . ." "Certainly not, my dear."

"Thank you again so much," said Nora some minutes later, rising and holding out her hand. "I'll write to Miss Gladstone and thank her right away."

"Yes, do that. She'll appreciate it," Mr. Rosenberg said, running his eyes over her boyish figure and straight legs. "And, by the way, I suppose you haven't got many friends here yet. What'd you say to having dinner with me tonight? Solly Rosenberg's a good man to stand in with. He's pretty close to all the big men in this town."

"Sure! That's all right by me. You know—a pretty girl like you ought to have somebody who knows the ropes to look after her a bit. I'll call you up some time soon."

"You won't forget, will you?" "Forget nothing! And maybe I could work it to take you over to Gladia's apartment one of these days."

"I'd simply love that, Mr. Rosenberg. I'm sure she must be sweet."

"Well—goodbye for the present, little girl."

"Goodbye, Mr. Rosenberg. And thank you again so much."

Solly Rosenberg chuckled as, later that morning he stepped into Gladia Gladstone's apartment, a 12-room affair furnished in the catch-as-catch-can period. These lacquered pieces crowded early English, Dutch, and ornate Louis Seize pieces.

"Hullo, Glad!" Solly called, pausing outside the stairs bedroom door. "Can I come in?"

"Hey! What's the big idea busting in on decent folks in the middle of the night?" came Gladia's response. "Don't you ever go to bed?"

"It's half after eleven, Glad, and I have to see you about something mighty important." Solly flicked cigar ash on the Persian rug, and waited.

"Well—come in," she said at last somewhat petulantly.

Gladia's favorite perfume swirled into Solly's nostrils as he opened the door. In the dim light he could just make out her nose in the gilt bed she'd had made in the shape of an enormous swan, and covering her was a bedspread of crimson ostrich feathers.

"I breezed in to tell you," said Solly, depositing himself in a lingerie-littered chair, "that I just bought ten thousand dollars worth of advertising for you for three hundred."

"How come?" He told her about Nora Connors. Then: "Did you ever hear of a better one than that, Glad? Why, it'll be on the front page of every newspaper in the country! Can't you just see the headlines: GLADIA GLADSTONE RESTORES POOR ORPHAN GIRL'S SAVINGS. And that's the stuff the public likes." He rubbed his hands.

"Sounds good, Solly. But how'd you know this kid wasn't just taking a chance on finding a soft-hearted sucker who'd pass her three hundred berries? Maybe she never lost that dough at all."

"Now, Glad! Solly reproached her, spreading out his fat hands. "We should worry! She was picking up a bit of easy money! That don't stop us using the story just the same, see?"

"Guess you're right, Solly. I didn't think of that."

"Sure I'm right! And if it ain't the swellest stunt that's been pulled this year then I'm not the slickest publicity man in the game."

"Nobody's saying about that, old kid. You're all there!"

"Well—I'll bet it now. Sorry to crash in on your beauty sleep, but I had to put you wise on account some of them editors might call you up after I handed in the story, see?"

News was so rare that day. Things were quiet on the Chicago front, and what murders had been committed in other places were neither sensational nor picturesque. No one was trying to swim the Atlantic; and only three or four more judges and magistrates had been indicted for one thing or another. Wherefore, editors welcomed Solly Rosenberg and his front page story. At any rate, it was something, and they were prepared to make the most of it.

When, however, Louis Hyams, publicity man for another famous film star, Joy Gold, arrived shortly afterwards and stated that Miss Gold had found and returned Miss Connors' money, the editors smiled and held up the story.

Then, hot of Louis Hyams' heels came Jake Samuels, publicity man for Alyx Jasmine and later, Herman Lyons, representing Mamie Rogers, each with the same yarn about his client.

Soon four bright publicity men and a number of chafing editors and reporters were trying to get Nora Connors on the telephone at the Laverne hotel. She had checked out—leaving no address.

Just the same, the editors had a corking front page story.

Finds 1859 Merchandise
Bill of Familiar Goods
Thomas B. Corley, a farmer of Jefferson Davis county, Mississippi, was rooting around among some old papers recently and came across an itemized bill for goods delivered to his grandfather, says the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Corley's grandfather lived about thirty-five miles from Brandon, right down through the pine thickets, considered one of the finest forests in the world, says the writer, and the itemized bill indicates that he bought his supplies in the year 1859.

The old bill is still legible, made out in fock'adin' hand. It shows a wool hat at $1.25; a sack of coffee, at $21, but Mr. Corley did not forget his sugar, a 200-pound sack at $22; his tobacco was 15 pounds at 40 cents, $7.20, and on though the long bill, not forgetting a sausage stuffer at 40 cents.

Pigs in War on Locusts
Every one in Algiers, Algeria, has been called to join in the battle against locusts, which are devouring the surrounding vegetation. Organized bands of natives have killed, collected and buried 1,000 tons of insects and 400 pigs have been consuming nearly two tons of locusts every day.

Like All Women, You Want Your Clothes to Be Right

AND the only way that you can be sure they will be right is to know what the designers and creators of new styles have decreed shall be right.

Cherie Nicholas, nationally known authority, who writes on women's fashions for this paper, tells you just what you want to know and pictures for you the garments and hats that the well-dressed woman will be wearing in the weeks to come. The styles that Miss Nicholas describes are authentic and the garments that she depicts are up-to-the-minute, but they do not represent style extremes. The garments are those that will be worn by the average woman and that you will find for sale in your home stores.

Keep up with the changing styles through Miss Nicholas' illustrated fashion articles, appearing in these columns, and tell your friends about them.

Crisp White Neckwear's the Thing

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

SUCH an exciting season of striking crisp white neckwear as this! Seems as if most of spring and summer costume interest is centering about neckwear treatments. It really is not overstating the matter to say that frilly, frivolous and altogether fascinating details at necklines, sleeves, shoulders and wrists are just about to "steal the show."

That oft-repeated theme of black-and-white comes to us for spring in terms of chic black frocks which are lavishly enlivened with the most beguiling crisp white neckwear fancy can picture. For that matter, whether the dress be one of the new black or dark blue crepes or a swanky thin pastel woolen, or a print done in the new bizarre coloring, the first thing to strike one about it is almost sure to be the feminine frilly white neckwear which adorns it.

As to the materials for these all-important neckwear items they include most everything from tailored plaques, taffetas and washable crepes to sheers of transparent mousselines and organdies. And there's lace! Don't forget lace, for any amount of pretty lace fixings are in promise, ranging from Irish crochet and all-over patternings to daintiest valenciennes.

Possibly it is the frilly little sheer pleatings which are assigned the leading role in this play of neckwear. Anyway "oodles and oodles" of wee pleatings are running riot about necklines and sleeves and up, down and around front fastenings.

The illustration presents a few neckwear highspots. Since these sketches speak so dramatically for themselves, instead of describing them individually we would much rather tell you about the perfectly adorable neckwear fantasies which are designed to simulate flowers. For example, a capelle bib effect is formed of a mass of long spearlike petals suggesting the chrysanthemum motif. Then there is the daisy collar which is made of long petal tabs. A cala lily theme is interpreted via a series of cornucopia rolled tabs of white pique. Tulips, orchids and roses are also copied in various white weaves. Of course mere words do not do them justice; they have to be seen to yield to their magic spell.

We have not attempted to picture by word or sketch the multitudinous tailored fashions which are featured on the vast neckwear program mapped out for the coming months. Pleasant versions appear in starched and stitched linen and pique in plain and embroidered organdie and there is a big showing of printed silk neck togs. Outstanding in this class are the clever scarf and bib effects made of gay Mexican silk stripes.

For afternoon wear there are collar and cuff sets fashioned of metal-barred and embroidered taffetas stressing bright greens and reds and other primary colors, likewise blacks and navies with gold or silver patternings, with gold on white being an outstanding favorite.

Huge bows either of gay silks or fashioned of sheer white weaves are revealing lots of attention. Very elaborate lingerie bows are made of masses of little "val" edgings or work embroidered organdie and lace together.

Many of the bright silk collars and bows have matching hats and even a belt and a bag of the identical silk is sometimes added.

COLORS FOR SPRING COVER WIDE RANGE

Talk of colors for spring includes such phrases as "bright light" colors and "dirty" pastels.

In the pastel range baby pink influenced by gray or grege, and bois de rose inclining toward ashes of roses; blues in pearly tone are leading tones.

In the brighter range are Chinese and geranium reds, similar respectively to manchu and sunred; a tango shade like Indian orange, and a corn yellow with less green in it than the corn gold.

Of basic colors, everyone agrees on another season for navy, both dark and light, and look for the big success of string color, grege and other naturals.

Nipped-In Waist and Wide Shoulders Is Spring Note

Nipped in at the waist and width through the shoulder still is a formula for very chic costumes that are coming from the hands of leading designers. This forerunner of the spring silhouette is especially interesting, since it indicates that a fashion thought that might be regarded as "killed" in one season because of overemphasis in mass fashions may be reinterpreted for another season and through the skillful hands that deal with a trend in the restrained manner of the better designer reincarnated into a fashion for the ultra chic.

It is Schiaparelli and Chanel who are responsible for this revived interest in the padded shoulder.

Form-Fitted Slips

Slips, which are replacing chemises in many smart women's wardrobes, are out in form-fitting lines and fitted so smoothly that not a wrinkle can spoil the line of a frock. Point d'esprit, which looks like a lace net, makes a number of models.

'KERCHIEF BLOUSE

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

If you look close you will note that the waist portion of this dress extends below the belt at the front in a point—which is what is meant when we refer to this handkerchief point theme interpreted repeatedly all through the spring and summer modes. The material for this simple and effective gown is a brown and white crevas silk. Note the very new three-quarter sleeves. The buckle is a red and white novelty.

Modern Hunter "Makes Good" With the Arrow

After waiting years for the opportunity, J. S. Farmer of Texas shot and killed a 7-point buck deer, using a bow and arrow. Indian fashion, he stalked his game expertly and shot from a distance of only 45 yards. That is excellent work for a modern hunter using primitive methods far antedating the discovery of America when redskin natives slew their tribal enemies and obtained food by means of archery.

Archeologists say flint arrows date back 25,000 years and arrows without stone points were used ages earlier. It is generally believed that our Indians were the world's greatest archery adepts, but such is not the fact. The bow of some African tribes has a draw of 80 pounds and the arrow is cast 250 yards. White-Americans frequently have excelled Indians in archery contests and have record kills of grizzly bears in this country and lions in Africa with the arrow. They draw a good bow—as good or better than any barbarian. As Robert Louis Stevenson wrote in "Black Arrow": "Will 't shoot me a good shoot? It's there the eye comes in and the head between the shoulders."—Toledo Blade.

Whose Fault?

When Little Girls Show Temper

A quarrelsome child is a sick child, mother! A bad bowel condition means bad behavior. And it doesn't help matters to give bilious boys and girls some powerful cathartic that upsets them for days. When you see a coated tongue, dull or yellowed eyes, or other signs of sluggishness, there's always a way to cleanse and sweeten that little system without violence; next day you have a happy, contented child. This common-sense treatment is explained on the right:

Good health and good behavior go hand in hand. With inner health, come smiling faces and sunny dispositions. And it's really so simple a matter to keep children's bowels regular. The only "medicine" most youngsters ever need to promote thorough bowel action is pure California Syrup of Figs. The senna in this fine, fruity laxative never weakens them, or takes away their appetite. But get real California Syrup of Figs anywhere; it's not expensive.

Progressive Parties
Why not re-introduce the fad of the progressive party, to eliminate excessive cost to any one family for entertainment everybody desires?
This can be done comfortably if all your friends live nearby.
At the first house hors d'oeuvres may be served, at the next soup, at the third the main course, at the fourth dessert and coffee and at the fifth bridge may be played with lunch refreshments afterward. In this way all have done their part and all have had a party.—Exchange.
