BEN KEMPSON DIES

Funeral services for Ben Kempson, long time resident of Donley county, were held Sunday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock at the Methodist church, conducted by Rev. B. Helms of Memphis, assisted by Rev. Nannie Carter and Rev. A. V. Hendricks. Burial was in Rowe cemetery.

Ben Kempson was born in Coweta county Ga., April 21, 1881. He departed this life April 21, 1934, being 72 years old at the time of his death. He was married to Miss Miriam Rebecca Gray on Oct. 6, 1881 in Carroll county, Ga. This union covered a period of 36 years, till death overtook her May 16, 1917. To this union were born six sons and five daughters, of which number two sons and two daughters preceded their father in death. His second marriage was to Miss Lizzie May Baker, Jan. 8, 1918 in Hall county. To this union were born one son and one daughter, both of whom are living. He was converted at Jones Chapel, Ala., in 1900, and united with the Methodist church. He came to Texas in 1919, moving to Wilbarger county in 1911. In 1920 he united with the church of the Nazarene.

He leaves to mourn his death his wife, Mrs. Lizzie Kempson; his children, D. B., L. B. and Hazel Kempson of Hedley, G. I. Kempson of Leveland, Edgar Kempson of Dumas, Oscar Kempson of Martin, Mrs. Dolie Shackelford of South Akren Ohio, Mrs. Ida Jones of Alexander, Texas, and Mrs. Ora Nixon of Dublin Texas, twenty six grandchildren, two great grandchildren, one brother, G. T. Kempson of Leoma, Tenn., and one sister, Mrs. Sallie Nixon of Carrollton, Ga.

All the children were present except one daughter, Mrs. Deltie Shackelford.

SUCH IS LIFE—Upholding the Family Honor!

By Charles Sughroe

Mother of Eight Leads Stork Derby

Likely Winner of Odd Race Says She Isn't Trying.

Toronto.—Ontario's celebrated ten-year "stork derby," purse of $500,000, looks like a walkaway for a contender who declares that she isn't even trying.

Mrs. Grace Bagnato, who has given birth to eight children since October, 1924.

The stakes in the "stork derby" were provided by Charles Vance Miller, K. C., prominent Toronto barrister, who died in October, 1925, and who bequeathed the bulk of his fortune to the Toronto woman who gives birth to the largest number of children in the ten years following his death.

With more than seven of the ten years now having passed and with the contenders rounding into the home stretch, Mrs. Grace Bagnato appears to have the inside rail position, a ways barring the possibility of triplets putting some "dark horse" into the lead.

Plans to Have More.

Runner-up to Mrs. Bagnato in the contest is Mrs. Florence Brown, who has had seven children since the race started, but who is today said to be falling behind.

Mrs. Bagnato, now only in her early forties, has given birth to 22 children, all told, and declares that, irrespective of the Miller trophy altogether, she expects to have two or three more before October, 1933. In fact, she insists that the $500,000 isn't even an inducement at all; although admitting that it, or even a slice of it, would come in very handy indeed.

"But we aren't thinking about the award, at all," insists the Italian matron, younger in appearance than her years. "We're just raising the family that we consider is our duty—and finding it mighty difficult sometimes. If we win the $500,000, it will be fine, wonderful; but if we don't it won't be any disappointment to us, for we aren't counting on it."

Several attempts have been made, in the past, to cancel the "stork derby," on the ground that Miller never seriously intended his estate to be so utilized. Several of his close associates declare that he only drew up the will in question as a joke, and that he intended to prepare a later testament, which would revoke it, but that he died suddenly, before having an opportunity to do so.

Upheld by Courts.

Regardless, however, of the spirit in which the testament may have been drafted, the Ontario courts have already ruled that it is a valid legal document.

The Ontario government, two years ago, moved to set the will aside on the ground that it was contrary to public interest, and to appropriate the estate, utilizing it for educational purposes.

A protest arose against such a step, however, with the result that the government abandoned its proposal.

Soon afterward it became known that efforts had been made to "buy off" both Mrs. Bagnato and Mrs. Brown, and that certain unidentified men had offered them from $50,000 to $100,000 in cash to assign their rights to the estate. It was suggested, but not definitely established, that these offers might have been made on behalf of the government. Both Mrs. Bagnato and Mrs. Brown declined them, however, taking the stand that a bird in the hand is not worth two in the bush when the bird in question is the stork.

If Mrs. Bagnato—mother of 11 living children and as many more dead—wins the prize, one of the first things she plans to do is to adopt a child, she declares. Then she and her husband hope to buy a small farm, perhaps about 15 acres, on which to raise their family.

Comic Opera Is Making Strides Among Turks

Istanbul.—Turkish comic opera has made such rapid strides recently that it is getting into trouble with the educational authorities.

Complaints are made that it is interfering with the "serious treatise"—straight drama—and the educationalists have appealed to the new comic opera librettists and composers to cease production.

The governor of Istanbul, however, says that there is not enough money to be made as yet in Turkish straight drama, and so the lighter brand of theatrical entertainment will continue.

"THE PEN AND SWORD"

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

"The pen is mightier than the sword." History attests no truer statement.

Nations which relied for protection upon the sword, perished through the sword. Brute force has never accomplished any results of permanent character. "He that killeth with the sword must be killed with the sword."

The cry is everywhere heard, let us have peace. The price for securing this peace is not to be paid by the use of arms.

Many interpreters of history agree that the creation of firearms on so large a scale and the economic necessity of disposing of them primarily led to the great war. Be that as it may—it goes without saying that no problem is ever settled until it is settled right.

The settlement of a problem depends primarily upon the influence of thought expressed in public opinion when the pen becomes mightier than the sword.

The most powerful influence for moulding public opinion today is the product of the pen, expressed through

Tennis Champion

Now Lester Stofen of Los Angeles is the "biggest man" on the indoor courts in more ways than one. The giant, third-ranking player in the United States, uncovered the best tennis of his career, before 4,000 spectators in New York, to dethrone Gregory S. Mangin of Newark, as national indoor singles champion.

the public press. It is an astounding fact that according to the census of 1930, "the total daily and weekly distribution of newspapers was fifty-six million." It is reported that of the twenty-four million families in America, two-fifths are now reading chain newspapers, and only a small portion of the remaining three-fifths do not have daily access to the metropolitan press. The newspaper is the most vital and important propagandist in the world, and its influence for good or bad is unbelievably great.

Our efforts at moral reform as well as international good will (a matter of spirit and mental attitude) can be realized more through the moulding of public opinion by way of the pen than by the brute force of the sword.

Feeds Six Ducks; Brings Thousands

Winnipeg.—Raids of swarms of wild ducks, estimated to number at least 3,000, are causing great trouble to farmers in the vicinity of Rocky Mountain House, Alberta.

Lacking sufficient natural feed, owing to unusual conditions in the five-mile area of spring-fed marsh at the heads of Raven and Clear creeks, they are ravaging farmers' barnyards and stealing food laid out for cattle and poultry.

This situation is confirmation of the Biblical prophecy that bread cast upon the waters shall come back several-fold. Seven years ago a farmer, one Budden, fed three pairs of wild ducks over winter. Next year a larger flock came back to the vicinity and the number has increased each year, indicating that news has a way of getting around in birdland.

The Household

In This Gay Window Treatment Color Achieves an Effect of Sunshine, and Flowers and Foliage Give the Cheer the View May Lack.

HOW to curtain windows in sunless rooms or those in which the sun lies but a very short time, so that the light filtering through, or falling on, the material gives an "impression" of sunshine, is a subject that every homemaker has to consider at one time or another. It is amazing the difference in the cheerful aspect of the room, when the curtains are well chosen for this purpose, and when they are not. A dreary room can be transformed into a pleasant one through correct curtaining and since the aspect of a room reacts on the spirits and even the health of occupants, the matter assumes importance.

Let us take one of the hardest problems to solve, which is the curtaining of windows opening on an airway, a very narrow street, or close to a wall, which is a common one in city apartments. The impression of sunshine and verdure can be instilled into the treatment by having pane or glass curtains of yellow, and hangings of green. The range of suitable glass curtain materials is from a good quality of cheese cloth or scrim, costing little, to expensive nets and lace. And for draperies the range is from crepe to choice silk damask. It is assumed that the best that the purse can afford without straining its strings will be chosen for the materials, and that the kind will be selected to accord with the room, whether a main one or a minor one. The effect that is sought is not of elegance but is one of color and artistry in bringing about specific results.

In the window treatment of a living room with such problems as described, a yellow bowl of brass or pottery, or one of gay Italian or Spanish ornamental pottery is suggested to stand on the sill. If it holds a fern, a Chinese rubber plant, or a palm, you will have actual verdure to greet the eye. Also a colored glass flower-holder, with growing ivy or wandering Jew trailing from it and silhouetted against the yellow pane curtains is effective.

Curtain Arrangement.

It is important to remember that the curtaining must not be heavy enough to shut out the light. It will, of course, dim it somewhat but by arranging the draperies to fall over the frame of the window rather than the glass, and by having the pane curtains as sheer as possible a minimum of light is dimmed. It is only when the view through the window is to be actually shut off that the pane curtains need to meet.

A secondary color scheme is rose and green, either color may be used for the pane and either for the drapery curtaining. While this scheme does not convey the effect of sunshine but of gaiety the cheerful aspect is stressed. Firelight rather than sunshine is simulated. However, the color scheme of a room is a determining factor. For pane curtains, tones rather than strong colors should be chosen. Hangings may be more intense but pure tone is hard to harmonize with other colors in a room.

Why Liquid Laxatives are Back in Favor

The public is fast returning to the use of liquid laxatives. People have learned that the right dose of a properly prepared liquid laxative will bring a perfect movement without any discomfort at the time, or after.

The dose of a liquid laxative can be varied to suit the needs of the individual. The action can thus be regulated. A child is easily given the right dose. And mild liquid laxatives do not irritate the kidneys.

Doctors are generally agreed that senna is a natural laxative. It does not drain the system like the cathartics that leave you so thirsty. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is a liquid laxative which relies on senna for its laxative action. It gently helps the average person's bowels back to regularity.

You can always get Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin at any drug store, ready for use. Member N. R. A.

The WEDDING MARCH MURDER

by MONTE BARRETT

Copyright, 1922, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co. WNU Service.

SYNOPSIS

Waiting in the minister's study, Jim Franklin, about to be married to Doris Carmody, is stabbed to death. Peter Cardigan, with Sergeant Kilday, begins the investigation. Franklin, while waiting, had visitors, among them his mistress, "Choo Choo" Train; his intended wife's father, Ambrose Carmody, her brother, Rylee; Daniel Bullis, politician, and a woman in a blue frock. Rylee Carmody admits trying to stop the wedding, after being informed by Webster Spears that Franklin was still friendly with Choo Choo, despite his approaching marriage. Kilday secures the dead man's keys. From Callis Shipley, one of the bridesmaids, Rylee's friend, the investigators learn nothing. An interview with Bullis is fruitless. Webster Spears admits informing Rylee Carmody of Franklin's relations with Choo Choo, for Doris Carmody's sake, in the hope of preventing the wedding. Fletcher, Franklin's man-servant, is reticent. An interview with Milo Dunbar, Franklin's law partner, and search of the dead man's office, reveals nothing of importance. Choo Choo admits her relations with Franklin were to continue after her marriage. Six of the seven keys Franklin carried are traced. Kilday decides to arrest Webster Spears and have Rylee Carmody shadowed. Callis Shipley vainly tries to convince Cardigan of the innocence of Rylee Carmody and Spears.

CHAPTER VIII—Continued

"That's why I denied what Web had said at the church. That looked damaging for Rylee, too. Oh, I've been very foolish. I can see that now. But I was only trying to help Rylee."

"Perhaps," suggested Peter, "web better go down to headquarters. Kilday will want to hear your story."

Callis shrugged helplessly. "What would be the use? He won't believe anything I say, now, no matter how true it is."

"And you think I might?"

"I had hoped you would," simply. "Sergeant Kilday terrifies me. He's a man-hunter. To him, this is just another murder. Some one must pay, even," she hesitated, "even if it is Rylee."

"I'm not afraid to tell you the truth, but I might be, if Rylee were guilty, but I'm not. I'm not afraid to ask you to help me. And I need help, now, Mr. Cardigan. Rylee is being followed by the police. They suspect him of the crime, largely because of what I have done. Web has been arrested, and I'm afraid that's my fault, too. You see, I'm alone responsible for the predicament they both are in. If I hadn't tried to twist the facts around, neither of them would be suspected now, I'm sure. It's my fault, and I must help them, some way. That's why I've come to you. You must believe me, Mr. Cardigan. And you must help me."

"I'm afraid you overrate my abilities," Peter replied.

"If it's a question of money," the girl continued eagerly, "I will pay any fee you name. I've read of you, Mr. Cardigan. I know you can help me if you only will. You have solved other mysteries where the police have failed. Money is no object, you understand."

"You aren't asking me to solve the mystery, Miss Shipley," declared Peter soberly. "You're asking me to prove that these two young men are innocent."

"But if I know they are innocent," she pleaded.

Peter braced himself against the awkwardness of the girl's appeal.

Determining that Callis should not feel him again, he realized gradually that he hoped this time he might believe her.

From the first, he had wanted to believe her, yet she had betrayed his instinctive confidence in her, not once, but several times. Now, trapped by these admitted discrepancies in her previous testimony, she courted his assistance. Probably she had sensed his sympathy from the first and relied upon it now. Was that why she was reluctant to submit to Kilday's questioning? He was angry, with himself as much as with the girl.

"What were you doing at Spears' last night?" he challenged.

"I knew it was he who told Rylee about that actress. That was why Rylee was so anxious to stop the wedding and I wanted to be sure Web didn't say anything that would increase the suspicion against him."

"What did Web really say when he left the church?" Peter checked another discrepancy in her story.

She hesitated only for an instant. "He said, 'Where's Rylee? If he were here, there wouldn't be any wedding.' You see I told you the truth the first time, but after Web and I talked it over, we decided that remark was very damaging to Rylee. We both agreed to change it a little, for that reason."

"Rylee had told you that he intended to stop that wedding, hadn't he?" Peter was struggling against the growing conviction that she was telling him the truth now. The manner in which she was able to warp his sympathies to her side made him doubtful of his judgment.

"Yes, but," she hastened eagerly to explain, "he was trying to stop it by informing his father about this actress. If he had planned a murder, would he have gone to the church, when he quarreled with Franklin before two witnesses? Would he have let his father go to hurry home in search of his father? Those aren't the actions of a murderer, Mr. Cardigan. Murderers don't leave a trail as long as that."

"Not usually. Not unless the murderer was a last resort, after everything else had failed."

Callis restrained a gesture of impatience. "You admit that he was trying to stop the wedding by other means. That's why he hurried home in search of his father, Mr. Cardigan. And if he returned to the church in time to commit the crime, he was there in time to see his father and stop the wedding by more peaceable means. Even if he had been ready to commit a crime to stop that wedding, it wasn't necessary. Can't you see that? All he had to do was see his father and his purpose would have been accomplished."

It was a telling argument, as far as Rylee Carmody went. But it did not absolve Webster Spears of complicity in the crime.

Peter reviewed the evidence in his mind. Certainly, if Rylee had been in search of his father, there was still time to see him at the church if he had arrived in time to commit the murder. But how about Webster Spears?

Why had he, as was shown, left the church at the last minute? Was this girl's first interest really in young Carmody? Was that the sole reason for her surreptitious visit to Spears' home the previous evening? Peter hazarded a shot in the dark.

"Where did Webster Spears go when he left the church, Miss Shipley? Why did he leave, just when he did?"

"He told me he went straight home, because he didn't want to stay and see Doris marry Jim Franklin. Web was in love with her—had been, always."

"He was rather late in deciding he didn't want to see the ceremony, wasn't he?"

"I think," the girl spoke very slowly now. "I think he hoped Rylee would find a way to stop the wedding, after what he had told him. But as the time approached and it became evident that Rylee had failed, he decided to leave. That's why he made the remark he did. He couldn't understand what had happened to Rylee. You see, up to the very last, he hoped the wedding would be stopped."

"Then perhaps it was he who took the only method left to stop it," declared the novelist grimly. "It begins to appear that Sergeant Kilday isn't far off the track, after all."

"Would he have made such a remark as he did had he been on the way to murder Franklin?" demanded Callis incredulously.

"Possibly. A man on his way to commit a crime isn't thinking rationally or he'd abandon his errand."

"No," Peter rose with an air of finality. "I'm sorry, Miss Shipley, but I'm afraid I can't be of much service. Your argument concerning Rylee is very convincing. It seems logical to believe that he wouldn't have killed Franklin, but instead, would have gone to his father and halted the wedding in that way."

"But with Spears it was different. He had already gone to every one he could. He had even telephoned Ambrose Carmody, anonymously, telling him about Choo Choo Train. Everything we know about the case clearly demonstrates that Webster Spears was doing everything in his power to stop that wedding. There is no good reason to believe he was not the man who found in Franklin's death the only possible means of preventing his marriage to Doris Carmody."

CHAPTER IX

Rylee Disappears

Callis Shipley's visit to Cardigan had been the result of an earlier interview with Rylee Carmody. Rylee had driven her home. In the entry, they paused to watch a very plain, self-effacing man clamber from his taxicab several doors away. But he did not enter the house in front of which he had stopped. Instead he fumbled with and lit a cigar, until the cab had driven from view. Then, apparently with no destination in view, he sauntered slowly up the street.

Callis, peering from behind the curtains, made no attempt to conceal her annoyance. "Is it the same man who followed you this morning?"

"What difference does it make, dear?" Rylee pulled her away from the window. "If Sergeant Kilday wants to have me shadowed, there's nothing I can do about it. We both know I'm innocent. Innocent people have nothing to fear from the police, Callis. I suppose they have to watch everybody connected with the case until it is solved."

"They aren't following me," the girl reminded him gravely. "They aren't following your father. There are a great many people connected with the case that aren't being followed, Rylee."

"How about Web? He was only trying to help me keep you out of this. I'm sure he isn't a murderer. He can't be! But just the same, they have him in jail. Oh, it worries me, Rylee. I can't help it."

He kissed her on the lips and held her to him. "It's almost worth it to know that you care so much, darling," he muttered.

Callis pressed her sweetheart to her fiercely. Her face was white. "It was really my fault that they suspect you," she said. "I—I was afraid, at first, that you had done it, Rylee. It terrified me. That's why I lied to the police—at first. That's why they suspect you."

She refused to meet his gaze as he relinquished his hold upon her. "After I knew how determined you were to stop the wedding, and then discovered you were not in the church, I didn't know what to think. When Webster Spears told me you weren't there, I made some kind of excuse and ran around to the sacristy in search of you. Nick Royce was there. Jim Franklin was in Doctor Abernathy's study. When Nick saw how troubled I was, he knocked on the door and asked if you were there. I can't tell you how relieved I felt when I learned you weren't."

She made a tremulous effort at a smile and evaded his arms.

"I must tell you the whole thing. When Jim never appeared at the altar, I was terribly frightened. I could think only of you. You see, Rylee, you had been so determined to keep him from marrying Doris. The last thing you said to me was, 'There'll never be a wedding today, honey. I'm going to have a show-down with Jim Franklin.' That kept ringing in my ears, then in the church, when he didn't come. I didn't like him, either, but I was praying for him to come, praying harder than I ever had in my life, because I was afraid if he didn't, it meant that something terrible had happened, and that you were responsible."

"Don't worry, dear. Everything turned out for the best." With awkwardly gentle hands Rylee stroked the gold of her hair.

"For the best? With Jim Franklin murdered. Web arrested for the crime and detectives shadowing you?"

"I only meant that the wedding had been stopped, even if I didn't do it. And they can't pin it on me. I'm innocent." He shrugged. "Oh, Callis, don't look at me like that. You can't expect me to pretend any sorrow for Jim Franklin's death. I hated the man. The world is better off without him. Better off, I tell you." His voice had grown suddenly harsh.

"Do you realize what a lie—Doris' life would have been, married to him? With a chorus-girl mistress that half of New York knew about? Have you seen the newspapers? Doris' picture, yes, and yours, too, flaunted on the front pages of the tabloids, together with photographs of that actress!"

"I'm not sorry for Franklin, I'm glad! Glad that it happened! Glad that my sister was saved from him, no matter how it happened! I'll be glad if the murderer gets away. I hope they never find him." He sank into a chair and clasped his white face in both hands.

The girl was on her knees beside him, her soft arms clasping his knees. "You mustn't, Rylee, you mustn't," she whispered. "No matter how you feel, you must never talk like that again. What if some one else were to hear you? Oh, when I think that it's my fault that they suspect you—"

Tenderly he took the girl in his arms.

"It's no one's fault, and I'm in no danger, really, honey. You must remember that. Keep repeating it to yourself. There isn't any danger. There isn't. There isn't any danger. Rylee didn't do it."

"It's like a terrible shadow, that is slowly coming between us," the girl whispered.

"Nothing can ever come between us, dearest," murmured Rylee.

"Doris probably thought that, too, just before the wedding, and see what has happened to her," Callis shivered.

"I wish we could figure out some way of running away from it all. I never want to see another detective again. Of course, that's foolish. We can't do it, but—"

"We can do it!" Interrupted Rylee eagerly. "Let's. Listen, Bill and Flo are at Martin's Cove. Why couldn't we drive up there this evening? If we leave here at eight, we can get there by midnight."

"And have detectives and reporters hiding behind the hedge every time we go for a swim?" Her voice was ironic.

"It isn't so easy as that, Rylee. And think of Web. I wouldn't feel right about running away with him under arrest. We must stay here and see things through. Whatever he has done, has been done to help you, Rylee. I feel sure of that."

The boy turned away, his eyes grown grave. "I'm not so sure," he said. "I've talked to Dad. He isn't admitting it to the police, but he is sure it was Web who telephoned him about that actress. Web was trying mighty hard to stop that wedding."

"You think—"

Summer Velvets for Day, Evening

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

THERE is big news in the fabric world—summer velvets! And when we say summer velvets, we mean real summer velvets, not to be confused with the light-weight velvets such as are always used for wraps, trimmings and accessories in the summer.

These summer velvets are new, so new they are being shown for the first time. Already the fame of these made-in-America velvets has spread among leading style creators, both in London and Paris, who are fashioning some of their most fetching summer apparel of these fascinating weaves.

It's the new washable velvets which perhaps bring the greatest thrill. No, your eyes have not deceived you, you are reading about velvets which actually wash, and perfectly at that. These exquisite washable velvet weaves make one marvel at the miracles which science and chemistry and artistry combined are working in the fabric realm in this Twentieth century era of progress. A velvet as beautiful as fancy can picture in a variety of designful weaves and delectable colors, which tubs as easily and satisfactorily as your linens and muslins is well worth thinking about. It is a real achievement.

For resort or cruise or country wear we can think of no more practical, at the same time lovely, evening gown than one of shell pink crinkle washable velvet such as a prominent French designer includes in her summer collection. If you prefer other than pink there is a whole range of beguiling tones and tints in these crinkle wash velvets from which to make choice.

One of the latest innovations is a cotton velvet woven on a cotton loom. It also is washable. It comes in several clever patternings, polka-dotted effects on a sheer self-colored background being conspicuously smart at this time when the dotted theme is so voguish. The pale chartreuse green summer velvet which fashions the gracefully ruffled informal dinner frock posed in the foreground of the illustration is a sheer, fine cotton with self-colored dots. The wide velvet ribbon sash in a delicate orange tone completes a breath-taking color scheme of springtime loveliness. Orchids and gardenias form the corsage, for the fashion of wearing natural flowers has been revived.

For sports wear there is nothing smarter in the way of the new summer velvets than a corded weave which is printed in multi-colored Mexican stripes. See the swager coat made of it, as illustrated to the right in the group. The silk scarf repeats the bright green of one of the stripes. In this same category of summer sports velvets another effect registers which is very striking in two-tone stripes, brown with pink beige being especially attractive.

A wonderful new summer velvet done in a tweed herring bone weave has just the right look for travel and town wear. The tremendously good-looking coat to the left in the picture is made of this type of velvet. Its "classy" shirtwaist styling and its huge brown buttons give it distinction.

KNIT FABRICS NOW LOOK LIKE TWEEDS

Fashion does on confusing us by bringing out looks that look like silk, cottons that look like wool, and synthetic fabrics that look like a little bit of both.

Then, just when we think we can write authoritatively about the new fabrics, she raises the question "Who said knits couldn't look like tweeds?"

Anny Blatt, Paris designer of knitwear, answers the question in hand-knit town clothes that feature diagonal stripes of dark, soft green wool yarn and white cotton.

And in New York Emmy Wylie receives fashion recognition as the newest American designer (there are likely to be others before we go to press—they're springing up all around) who handles the tried and true yarns with a light touch.

Her collection is well worth seeing and includes models priced at $22.75 to $30.75. You will like a tweed mixture called "Frostknit." Citron is a grand color that borders on antique gold, smart with navy contrast.

Bathing Suits in Taffeta Like Costumes for Ballet

Taffeta bathing suits that look more like ballet costumes than swimming outfits will doubtless dot our more fashionable beaches next summer—the fad has already started in Paris with folks who have nothing else to do, have gone south to stretch and leave the world to go to pot if it wants to. These taffeta "beach jewels" as one house names them (because of their brilliant coloring) are equipped with taffeta tights and the whole ensemble is waterproof so that when you come out of the wavelets you are as crisp and unwilted as when you went in.

In Full Sail

Warp-print taffetas are being used extensively for evening wear. They lend themselves particularly well to the newest of all silhouettes—the "ship in full sail."

VERY SMART LINEN

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

Linen is playing a stellar role on the stage of fashion. Here is an ensemble done in fine Irish linen which is modish and practical for spectator sports. The beauty of this outfit is that it can be converted into a costume for active participation if occasion requires. The suit, with its smart brown and white checked swager coat of tweedy linen, is appropriate for the clubhouse porch or the street, combined either with brown or beige accessories. Removing the coat a slim sleeveless dress is revealed of uncrushable Irish linen ready for a set of tennis or a round of golf. The beige gloves which this youthful sportswoman wears are crocheted of knitting and crocheted cotton in a mesh design. They are cool and easy to make.

Fifty Famous Frontiersmen

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

The Iroquois Interpreter
IN THE courthouse at Canandaigua, N. Y., hangs the portrait of a man who was once "a leading citizen" of that place. But that characterization tells only the least interesting part of the story of Jasper Parrish, interpreter for the Iroquois.

Born at Windham, Conn., in 1767, as a boy he was taken by his parents to the headwaters of the Delaware river in New York where they were living in the year of the Revolution. In 1778 eleven-year-old Jasper was carried away by a raiding party of Muncie Indians who sold him a few months later for $20 to a Delaware Indian family. For the next two years he lived as an Indian boy and learned to speak the Delaware tongue.

At that time the Delawares were under the domination of the Iroquois, or Six Nations, and after the defeat of the Iroquois by General Sullivan in 1779 some of the Delawares accompanied their masters to Fort Niagara. There Jasper was sold again for $20, this time to a Mohawk called Capt. David Hill. For the next five years he lived among the Mohawks, learning their tongue as he had learned the Muncie and the Delaware and finally being adopted into the tribe.

After the Revolution, under the terms of the treaty of 1784 between the Six Nations and the United States by which the Iroquois agreed to give up their white prisoners, young Parrish was set free and traced his long-lost family to Goshen, N. Y., where he joined them. Then began a slow and painful process for the "White Indian" of learning again his native tongue and of thinking and acting as a white man.

By 1792 the Iroquois were becoming restless under the increasing pressure of white settlement and President Washington appointed Gen. Israel Chapin of Massachusetts as agent to them. Needing an interpreter and learning that young Parrish not only was skilled in all the six dialects of the Iroquois but that he had their confidence and love as well, Chapin appointed him official interpreter.

In 1803 President Jefferson appointed Parrish sub-agent to the Six Nations and so well did he perform the tasks of that office that he was continued in it during the next administrations—those of Madison, Monroe, Adams and Jackson—a record of continuous service by an Indian agent which has few, if any, equals. It was mainly due to Parrish's influence over the Iroquois that they remained loyal to the United States, instead of joining the British, at the outbreak of the War of 1812, and to the day of his death in 1836 Parrish held their esteem and used it to promote better relations between red men and white.

"Envoy Extraordinary"

IN THE spring of 1848 a ragged frontiersman entered the stage station at Wheeling, W. Va., and finding that the coach for Cumberland, Md., had already left, demanded in a lordly tone that another one be provided for him forthwith. "Who are YOU?" demanded the stage agent disdainfully. Drawing himself up to his full height of more than six feet, the travel-stained frontiersman replied: "Sir, I am Joe Meek, envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary from the Republic of Oregon to the Court of the United States." He got the coach!

Envoy or not, there is no question but that Joe Meek was "extraordinary." He was a native of Virginia who had run away from his home as a youth and who had become a famous trapper and trader in the West.

By 1840 the tide of migration to the Pacific Northwest had set in and Meek, realizing that it spelled the doom of the fur business, decided to go to the Oregon country to make a new start in life.

Then came the meeting of the American settlers at Champeog on May 2, 1843, for the purpose of forming a provisional government and Meek's historic words "Who's for a divide?" Those in favor of adopting the report of the committee, follow me." So 52 voted for it and 50 against, and by the narrow margin of two votes and the force of Joe Meek's personality, the first step in saving the Oregon country for the United States was taken.

Joe Meek was elected sheriff, thus giving him the honor of being the first American peace officer west of the Rockies. In the troublous times that followed, when Great Britain threatened to assert her sovereignty over this country and when the hostility of the Indians culminated in the Whitman massacre, the settlers turned again to Joe Meek.

It was he whom they selected to go to Washington and lay before President Polk the plea of the Oregon settlers to be taken into the fold of the United States. So, during the first week in March, 1848, he set out upon his epic journey across the continent which ended the last week in May. The result of his journey was that the federal government decided to accept Oregon as a territory and the appointment of Joseph Lane of Indiana as territorial governor. When Lane started for Oregon to assume office, his guide was Joe Meek now United States marshal for the country which he had helped save for the Stars and Stripes, and from that time to his death in 1875, one of its leading citizens.

Broken Engagements

By FRANCES SMITH

CAMILLE came running into the house where her fragile little aunt sat alone in a sunny window, her fingers busy with some dainty needlework. Agatha Andrews lifted her quiet gray eyes and saw the dark sparkling beauty of the girl, the rich coloring of youth and perfect health—and radiant joy.

"Auntie, I've had a darling time!" cried Camilla breathlessly whirling into a chair. "Guess who was there—and I met him!" she ended ecstatically. Agatha Andrews turned her fair face and looked out into the flower garden which seemed to waver uncertainly before her hurt eyes; all the blossom seemed to nod their heads and say, "I told you so—I told you so—some day—"

"You are not listening!" reproached the girl, for this aunt was mother and father to her and had been for many years since a fatal accident had deprived the child of both parents. "You haven't heard a word—I met such an important person at the garden party—"

"She was famous for her jewels," said Doctor Duncan. "She took huge treasures of precious stones when she went to visit Solomon. But in spite of all her own riches, when she saw him sitting in all his glory, she was almost shocked to death at his magnificence."

Doctor Duncan does not accept without questioning the report of the finding of the lost capital of Sheba. "Only excavation will reveal whether or not it is the legendary city of the queen," he said. "And these excavations must produce inscriptions that will satisfy archeologists."

If the newly discovered city is the Sheban stronghold, excavation may reveal some of the queen's beauty secrets, Doctor Duncan believes, and also provide more knowledge of her personality.

Women of all ages have felt great curiosity concerning the queen, be-

May Learn Queen's Secrets

Results of Excavations in What Is Thought to Have Been Site of Capital of Sheba Eagerly Awaited by Feminine World.

Women throughout the world are eagerly waiting for excavations in what is believed to be the capital of the queen of Sheba. French aerial explorers have reported that they have sighted the towers of the lost city on the edge of the Arabian desert.

When the sands of the centuries have been dug away, it will be possible for women of today to learn how the glamorous queen looked, what beauty aids she used, and—most important of all—what were her secrets for fascinating men? Her charm was extremely potent. In winning King Solomon, she had to combat the allure of 701 wives and 300 concubines.

Dr. George S. Duncan, professor of Egyptology and Assyriology in the graduate school of American university, believes that one of the chief feminine sources of interest in the queen's buried city will be her jewels. "She was famous for her jewels," said Doctor Duncan. "She took huge treasures of precious stones when she went to visit Solomon. But in spite of all her own riches, when she saw him sitting in all his glory, she was almost shocked to death at his magnificence."

Doctor Duncan does not accept without questioning the report of the finding of the lost capital of Sheba. "Only excavation will reveal whether or not it is the legendary city of the queen," he said. "And these excavations must produce inscriptions that will satisfy archeologists."

If the newly discovered city is the Sheban stronghold, excavation may reveal some of the queen's beauty secrets, Doctor Duncan believes, and also provide more knowledge of her personality.

Women of all ages have felt great curiosity concerning the queen, because of her great success as a charmer. She set a precedent for all gold-diggers by coming away from Solomon's court laden with 6,000 wagons of jewels, perfumes, oils and myrrh.

Although Solomon wanted to make her his 702d wife, she was too much of a feminist to relinquish her own kingdom and turned down his proposal. Legend has it that after she returned home, she had a child by Solomon. According to Doctor Duncan, the present royal house of Abyssinia claims descent from the queen of Sheba's son by Solomon.

The Biblical account of the queen's visit to Solomon affords the best insight so far found into her personality, Doctor Duncan believes.

This account shows that the queen was among the first of her sex to realize that the most brilliant feminine conversationalist is a woman of few words; that expert listening is more effective than talking.

The Bible states that she pined Solomon with hard questions, drawing him out and steering his thoughts to that most engrossing of all subjects—himself.

Nor was the queen of Sheba above using a little well-chosen flattery. Her expertness in that line is shown in the following passage from Scripture:

"And she said to the king, It was a true report that I heard in mine own land of thine acts and thy wisdom."

"Howbeit I believed not the words until I came, and mine eyes had seen it; and behold, the half was not told me; thy wisdom and prosperity exceedeth the fame which I heard."

Small wonder then that the Bible reports that: "Solomon gave unto the queen of Sheba all her desire, whatsoever she asked."

Shocks Explode Brain
Evidence that people killed by lightning or by shocks of high voltage electricity die because their brains or blood vessels have exploded has been reported by Dr. McDonald Critchley, London nerve specialist. This is believed to be why shock victims who recover report the shock sensation as like a violent blow. Nerve tissue taken from people who have been shocked has been found to be shredded or ballooned, as though an explosion had occurred inside them. Blood vessels in the brain were found to be burst open so the blood ran out much the same as in apoplexy. Hollow spaces in the brain tissue frequently look as if they had been burst by violent explosions inside them. On the other hand, signs of burns are seldom found in the nerves themselves as they would be if these nerves had acted as conductors of the current.—Frühlander Magazine.

HOME LIFE MAKES STRONGER APPEAL TO MODERN GIRL

Ordinarily the much-used questionnaire regarding personal matters is not worth consideration, but the conclusion reached by a western college from replies sent by its coeds to a general inquiry as to their intentions for the future, is so nearly what one would expect under prevailing conditions that it seems probable the conclusion is correct.

The majority of young women students in all the classes admitted that they were looking forward to marriage and home life. Ten years ago such an expression would hardly have been obtained from the same source. We were still in the good old "cremo days" when the career for young women looked attractive.

Here and there women who had broken into the sphere once held exclusively by men were making more than good, and the prospect of a traditional home life for women looked drab and uninteresting. The girls talked it over in the sororities and the gal-rooms and agreed that maternity was not for them.

It is true that many weakened when the right man chanced to come along; still it was maintained as the new tradition that women must be independent; none of the old clinging vine stuff for them. Nothing should be accepted that carried with it a suggestion of the broom and the dishpan. Naturally the career women of the classes graduated since 1920 are not doing so well now. And reports have been coming back to the campus.

Hence the answers to the questionnaire. Yes, fellows, the coeds facing graduation are open to matrimony proposals, and under the conditions that prevailed as of old. Let us hope for the success of the marriages that result.—Columbus Dispatch.

On the Funny Side

MATCHES

The physician was giving an informal talk on physiology. "Also," he remarked, "it has recently been found that the human body contains sulphur."
"Sulphur!" exclaimed the girl in the blue-and-white blazer. "And how much sulphur is there, then, in a girl's body?"
"Oh, the amount varies," said the doctor, smiling.
"Ah!" returned the girl. "And is that why some of us make better matches than others?"—Vancouver Province.

Pa's Part

The two village gossips were exchanging the latest news.
"And those Richleys," said Mrs. Jones. "He says very bitter things about his two good-for-nothing sons, but his wife is always making excuses for them."
Mrs. Hayes nodded.
"Yes," she smiled, "she may make the excuses, but he has to make the allowances."

Numerically Speaking

A little boy was balancing himself on his head when an old lady who knew him came by:
"Aren't you too young to do that?" she asked. "You're only six."
"It's all right, missis," replied the boy without losing his balance. "I'm nine while I'm upside down."

Whose Fault?

When a Child Won't Study

"Kept after school!" And it isn't the child's fault, or the teacher's. His mother is to blame. How can a boy get his lessons when his senses are dulled day after day by dosing with sickening purgatives? When a child's bowels are stagnant they need help, of course. But not some drastic drug to upset the stomach, perhaps weaken the entire system, or form the laxative habit. On the right, parents will find a happy solution of this problem: California's pure California Syrup of Figs. Be sure bottle says "California".

"Two things I wanted—"

"...and it was all so simple when I found out my trouble. My physician said I had no organic disease, but I did have what is so commonly and truthfully called a low percentage of hemo-glo-bin in the blood.

"The reasonableness of one of the S.S.S. ads caused me to think that S.S.S. Tonic was just what I needed for my let-down feeling, pimply skin and low resistance. I wanted more strength and a clear skin.

"It didn't take S.S.S. very long to get my blood back up to normal level and as my strength and energy returned my skin cleared up."

If your condition suggests a tonic of this kind, try S.S.S. It is not just so-called tonic but a tonic specially designed to stimulate gastric secretions, and also having the mineral elements so very, very necessary in rebuilding the oxygen-carrying hemo-glo-bin of the blood.

S.S.S. value has been proven by generations of use, as well as by modern scientific appraisal. Sold by all drug stores... in two convenient sizes... the larger is more economical.

BAIN FOR SHERIFF

The Informer is authorized to announce J. R. (Dick) Bain as a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Donley county, subject to the action of the Democratic primaries in July. Mr. Bain needs no introduction to the voters of this county, having lived here 24 years. He ran for this office four years ago, and was defeated by a narrow margin in the first primary, and making a creditable showing in the second primary. He continued as a citizen of Clarendon afterward engaging in the service station business. He is now the wholesale agent for the Panhandle Reginery Co., and continues to operate his retail station as well.

We are reprinting below a card of thanks issued by Mr. Bain on August 26 1930

Permit me to take this means of thanking the loyal friends who gave me their support in the primary Saturday. I am also thankful for the many favors and kind consideration shown me during the campaign. I am for the upbuilding of the interests of the good citizens of this county, and hold no hard feelings against any one because of my failure of election. It shall always be my pleasure to serve you in any manner possible, either as an elected official or as a private citizen.

In looking back on this campaign I find much pleasure in the fact that I conducted a clean campaign that in no wise reflected upon the integrity of any one. As you know, I have lived among you as a neighbor for many years in the past, and I expect to continue my residence here where I can be found so that I can make amends if any errors have been committed.

Mr. Bain, in this campaign, is asking the consideration of the voters for the same office, believing that he can still render the same service that he could then. He will try to see the voters personally before the primary, and will appreciate your support and influence.
