A. R. GULL DIES

A. R. Gull, father of J. G. Gull of our community passed away at Memphis Wednesday night May 23 at 11:20 o'clock following a short illness.

Funeral services were held at 3:00 o'clock Thursday at the First Christian Church at Memphis, conducted by Rev. N. D. Dyer, pastor. Interment was in Rowe Cemetery, Hedley, with the King Mortuary in charge.

Pallbearers at the funeral were W. C. Chapman, M. O. Good pasture, E. E. Roberts, Clyde Milam, Seth Paimeyer and Bill Maddox, all of Memphis.

Mr. Gull is survived by four sons, three daughters, 21 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren. The surviving children are Miss Lillian Gull, Memphis; J. G. Gull, Hedley; Byrd and Chas. Gull, McLean; J. H. Gull, Alan reed; Mrs. J. B. Hodges, White Deer and Mrs. G. W. Estes, Byers, Texas.

Mr. Gull was 88 years of age at the time of his death. He was a pioneer of Donley County, having lived here before the foundation of Hedley. He and his family were among the popular families of the Rowe community. His wife preceded him some three or four years ago, and was buried here. They reared a large family, who have lived in adjoining counties for these years.

The loved ones who mourn his passing have our sympathy. I too know what it means to give up a precious father.

Your father's gone, to never return,
Although your hearts for him do yearn,
But be submissive to the Father's will,
And you will find comfort still.

Mrs. O. R. Culwell.

A TRIBUTE TO C. B. BATTLE

A good man has quit the walks of men,
He knows no more this world of sin.
He lived his allotted time on earth,
Lived a life of usefulness and worth.

He became a Christian years ago,
And his church, he loved it so.
I knew him as a Christian man,
And now he has wandered into an unknown land.

He was mild and gentle, true and brave,
But the end came, and his life he gave.
The touch of his hands are felt no more,
As they once were in the days of yore.

To his loved ones, we can not say
That he is dead; he is just away.
Singing, perhaps, around the throne;
Waiting, waiting for his own.

Bravely he stood the tests of life,
Suffered the sorrow of losing his wife,
Lost a daughter young and fair;
Of trouble he has had his share.

His loved ones, of course, feel lonely and sad,
While the angels rejoice and are glad,
To welcome him to Heaven on high,
Where he will never sorrow or sigh.

To his church he was faithful and true;
The times he attended were not a few;
He enjoyed the gospel in song,
And tried to live right, instead of wrong.

A friend, Mrs. O. R. Culwell.

THEATRE PARTY

Members of the Senior class of '33 and '34 together with Mrs. E. O. Boliver, class mother, were delightfully entertained Monday evening when upon invitation of Mr. H. Mulkey, owner of the Pastime Theatre, they motored to Clarendon and enjoyed an excellent picture show.

The Seniors felt quite honored as they were met at the door and escorted by Mr. Mulkey to seats reserved for the class. After the show the group was invited to the Pastime Confectionery where they were served drinks by Mr. Skelton.

The Seniors wish to extend their most sincere thanks and appreciation to Messrs. Mulkey and Skelton for such a pleasant evening. It will ever be a fond memory connected with high school days.

Seniors attending the gala affair were: Jewel Grimsley, Opal Cooper, Pauline Boliver, Mrs. Virgil Hagler, Verma Hagler, Joyce Tinsley, Nina Mae Bailey, Jessie Mildred Gaiwell, Anne Ruth Mitchell, Marguerite Hansard, Emma Lowell Plunk, Jessie Evans, H. B. Settle, Maxie Shaw, Henry Johnston and Clayton Evans.

Those furnishing cars and also enjoying the hospitality of Clarendon hosts were: Della Hansard, Inez Reeves, John Mitchell and Edward Boliver.

That Body of Yours

By JAMES W. BARTON, M. D.

Hernia Is Very Common
THE fact that more men than women are afflicted with hernia, or rupture as it is commonly called, is sometimes blamed on sport or the more active life of men.

However, reliable figures show that while about four times as many men as women undergo operation for hernia, nevertheless hernia is found about six times as often in infant boys as in infant girls.

This then proves that while the condition may be brought about by sport or heavy lifting, in a great majority of cases it is a weakness in the abdominal wall itself that predisposes or gives the tendency to hernia.

And it is this point that should be remembered when operation is being considered. There is no question but that operation is the ideal method of correcting the condition; that is the radical operation which is now often done under a local anesthetic.

Another operation coming into some favor now is what is called the injection method whereby scar tissue is formed which seems sufficient in some cases to strengthen the abdominal wall; enough to prevent the hernia. However, this method has not yet met the general approval of surgeons.

If the operation is performed does this guarantee that the hernia will not occur again?

Unfortunately the hernia does occur after operation, not because the operation was not done properly, but because of the natural weakness or tendency of the abdominal wall to sag or rupture.

There is no question but that a properly fitting truss is a great boon to the wearer and affords a good measure of safety, but in those cases where an operation has a reasonable chance of success (and most cases have a reasonable chance) it would seem only like good sense to be free of the truss and be able to do the things other individuals can do.

Even in those cases born with weak abdominal walls, about 50 per cent of the cases who undergo operation have no return of the hernia.

Your best plan if you have a hernia is to undergo an examination by your family doctor and a surgeon as your age, your occupation, the condition of your abdominal walls must all be taken into consideration.

If operation is not considered advisable a well fitted truss and the avoidance of heavy work should prevent further trouble.

Curing Cases of Mental Conflict

WHEN statistics show that at the present rate of increase in mental ailments 50 years from now half the civilized world will be confined to mental institutions with the other half taking care of them, we must all give this some thought.

The world has gone through a lot of trouble in the past 20 years and mental illness must be expected, but the very large number afflicted has brought so much attention to the matter that new methods of treatment are being developed, and will continue to have a most helpful influence in curing many cases.

In the first place children that are a little "different" are being treated and will become men and women able and willing to take their normal or natural place in the world. This means prevention of mental ailments.

And even in adults many cases now confined to mental institutions are being cured by painstaking treatment. After all physical defects—teeth, tonsils, eyes, ears and other parts—are corrected, careful questioning of the patient is undertaken.

Dr. W. H. Casses, of Provincial Mental Hospital, Ponoka, Alberta, states that many cases are due to some "conflict" in the patient's mind. He puts these conflicts into three classes: (1) the actual condition existing when the patient has done something wrong, or which conflicts with what he thinks is right; (2) where the patient desires something different from his present condition although the condition might seem normal or satisfactory to most people; (3) where the patient's standards of living are so strict that he is in conflict with them because it is almost impossible to live up to them. This is called the "rigid" type of personality.

What are the methods by which many of these cases are cured?

In the first case the patient is shown that he is only human, and that to err is human; that mistakes are forgivable.

In the second case where desire for a different condition exists his unsatisfied desire is directed into other channels. For instance a bereaved mother may give vent to her feelings by charitable work.

In the third case the patient is shown that his standards are too strict for the world in general and that he'll have to give and take to a greater extent in order to get along with his fellow men.

Cedars of Lebanon Are Planted in U. S.

Good Will Offering to People of United States.

Washington.—Sent by the American University of Beyrouth, Syria, as a good will offering to the people of the United States, 13 living cedars of Lebanon from the Phoenician coast at the eastern end of the Mediterranean were recently unloaded in America. At the direction of the President they were planted in the grounds of Arlington National cemetery, overlooking the Potomac river.

In the Bible these majestic trees are called "the trees of Jehovah, the cedars of Lebanon, which He hath planted." Their most famous appearance in history was when King Hiram of Tyre transported Lebanon cedars to Jerusalem for the building of Solomon's temple.

Famous Trees Never Numerous.
Scholars differ as to how many cedars of Lebanon there were in antiquity, according to the National Geographic society.

It is probable that at no time were the limestone ridges of the Lebanon completely clothed in these majestic trees. In ancient times the wood was already valued, not only for its great strength and resistance to rot, but also for its resin.

Some decades ago, with the encouragement of Queen Victoria, the small remaining clump of giant trees was inclosed by a stone wall. The trees had long been considered sacred to man, and Hadad issued an imperial order that the groves should not be harmed. Later the Maronites, who have a small chapel amid this tiny forest, threatened excommunication for anyone who harmed the trees. But herds of goats have showed less respect than man, and by nibbling at the saplings have prevented new growth.

A count of tree trunks, made on small branches, indicates that the Lebanon cedar has a slow growth and a long life. The cedars are not nearly so tall as sequoias but they have thick trunks, as large as 47 feet in circumference. A notable feature is that the horizontal branches are so thickly carpeted with needles that the heavy, firm cones appear as though up-ended on a well-kept lawn.

On Republic's Flag.
The site of the chief cedar grove is one of rare beauty, the stage of a massive amphitheater miles across and 4,000 feet high. Immediately behind them the long line of the Lebanon rises to its culminating ridge, more than 10,000 feet above the Mediterranean.

The famous cedars are in the Lebanese republic, at the eastern end of the Mediterranean, just north of the Holy Land. Although the Lebanon is included in the French mandate with Syria, it has its own government under a Syrian president. The flag of the republic is the flag of France with a green cedar of Lebanon in the center.

The cedar of Lebanon also appears on the seal of the American University of Beyrouth, done by the group of cedars to America and lapel buttons bearing the university's insignia are worn by graduates throughout the Near East. The cedars have been studied by specialists of the university. Dr. George E. Post of the faculty, authority on Syrian botany, made the statement, "There is not and never has been a rotten Lebanon cedar. The wood is incorruptible. The imperishable cedar remains untouched by rot or insect." The wood, like that of the cypress and the sequoia, is close grained and aromatic.

Christianity and Civilization

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

In a recent issue of a metropolitan newspaper appeared a cartoon in which our Capitol building at Washington was securely embedded in a huge rock which rose from an angry sea. The waves dashed against the rock were variously named: Marxism, Red Revolt, and Leninism. But the rock was named Christianity. That picture was more than a cartoon. It was a preachment of the highest order. In it rushes for expression, history, nationalism, patriotism and experience. The Gibraltar rock upon which all civilization safely rests is Christianity. This is the final verdict of history.

By Christianity, however, is not meant a traditional creed or an ecclesiastical tenet. It has no reference whatever to the "isms" which for so many centuries have given rise to the

Record Shot Put

John Lyman of Stanford university photographed as he was breaking the world's record for the shot put by throwing the shot 54 feet 1 inch.

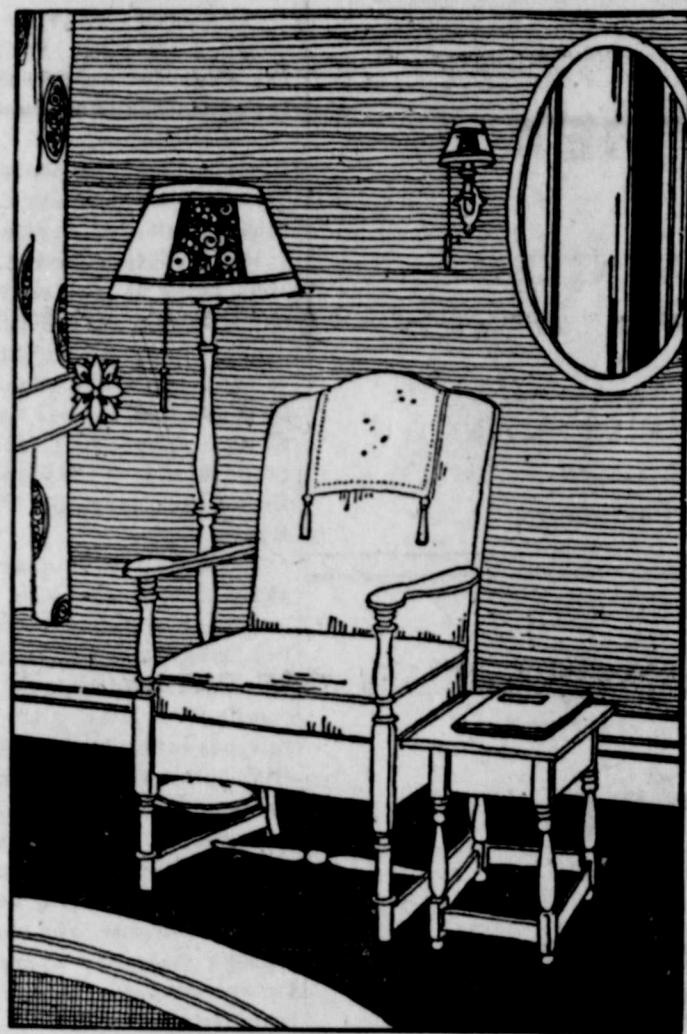

"splits" in denominational organizations. It has no reference to the divisions which even now seem to make an organically united Protestant world impossible. Christianity as pictured in the cartoon, harks back to those fundamental virtues and beliefs to which every person can give assent, and upon which the entire Christian world can build a permanent civilization. Principal among these virtues is brotherhood—a condition of society in which the spirit of mutual helpfulness dominates and not the Epicurean philosophy "every man for himself and the devil take the hindmost." The principle of liberty is important, but it is in danger of being misunderstood. Liberty is not license. Liberty is always limited by the sanctions of the moral law. Christianity also eliminates the ultimate domination of that spirit of selfishness which always destroys. It emphasizes the importance of "service" without which neither nationalism nor business can succeed. Christianity has always emphasized the importance of education. Very near the church has always been located a school.

Life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness will never perish from the earth if fortified by Christianity. Let us have more of such cartoons! © by Western Newspapers Union.

Sun Dogs and Halos
A sun dog, or parhelion, to use its technical name, is a bright spot which appears near the sun when sunlight shines through a thin cloud composed of ice crystals floating in the atmosphere. Halos are the result of the refraction of the solar rays by these crystals. Sun dogs are sometimes tinged with color, and may appear at all times of the year, because even in the warmest weather the temperature of the upper atmosphere is below freezing.

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

An Arrangement of Furniture and Furnishings to Accent Good Outline Decoration.

IF YOU wish to have your rooms attractive you must consider outline decoration. This is not confined to shapes of furniture and articles in the room, although these play a part. It chiefly consists in the imaginary lines which are subtly registered on the vision by the linear contours of articles against or close to the walls. For example some articles are high, some low. The eye takes in these differences almost as clearly as if a line were drawn on the wall up and down and across the tops of the things. If there is a continuity of high or low pieces the outline decoration is monotonous. It is inartistic.

It is essential, therefore, to introduce variety in heights of articles and also in sizes lest any length mar a beauty of decorative outline. Fortunately there is in most persons an inherent, if unconscious appreciation of this essential detail of interior decoration.

Breaking Up Wall Spaces.
There is the expression, breaking up the wall spaces, which in effect, brings about much the same desirable result. However, the decorative outline has nothing to do with depth of articles but of their flat silhouettes, while the bulkiness or lack of it comes into the equation when breaking up wall spaces.

In the consideration of outline decoration there immediately springs to mind built in bookcases, with their long even line across the tops. Good decoration not only sanctions these shelved walls, but recommends them, notwithstanding the unbroken wall outline. There are two ways of breaking the monotony until it actually dissolves from the picture. One is when bookcases are from floor to ceiling, and the other when they end part way up.

Variety in Effect.
In the first instance the varying heights of shelves are restful to the eyes, and couple this with the infinite variety in kinds and colors of bindings, and no monotony exists. In the instances of low bookcases, the shelves have the variability of heights just mentioned, and the tops provide excellent opportunities for decorative ornaments. The difference in height of these things and the open spaces left between them relieves the evenness of the outlines. Care must be used in positioning the ornaments so that good outline decoration, the result desired, will be achieved.

It is well to study the treatment of rooms already decorated and furnished, and see whether the outline decorations are good or whether changes should be made for improvement. Do not sacrifice comfort to decoration, but so manipulate the things to produce good outlines without diminishing other necessary and desirable qualities and characteristics. It is the combination of comfort with artistry that distinguishes good decoration.

SHOWER

A shower was given last Friday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Hagler honoring Mrs. Virgil Hagler who is leaving soon for Ranger to join her husband who is employed there.

Friends of the couple were surprised to learn that Mr. and Mrs. Hagler were married March 5 at McKnight, Rev. DeBord officiating. The bride was formerly Miss Juanita Spier, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. C. Spier of this city, and was a member of the 1934 graduating class of Hedley High School. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Hagler, also of Hedley. Both are well known and popular among their associates, and have a host of friends here who wish them much success and happiness.

The guests began arriving at the Hagler home about 8:00 o'clock, bringing pretty and useful gifts for the honoree. After some enjoyable violin and guitar music by D. C. Spier, Ralph Davis, Donovan Pickett and Edward Boliver, dainty refreshments were served to the following: Opal Cooper, Jessie Mildred Cullwell, Pauline Boliver, Emma Lowell Plank, Verlin McPherson, Haseltine Bradley, Pauline, Lois and Martin Stone, Lois Leggett, Jewel Grimsie, Donovan and Robert Pickett, Edward Boliver, J. ## NOTICE FROM THE TAX COLLECTOR'S OFFICE

A copy of a letter received from the Comptroller's office To the Tax Payer:

You will recall that from time to time since 1930, the Legislature has been suspending interest and penalties on Delinquent Taxes. Last May, the last measure of this kind was enacted, which provided a 2% penalty on all arrearages taxes delinquent on February 1, 1933, (later they included the split tax payments which became delinquent on July 1, 1934) and 4% penalty, if paid by March 31, 1934; and 6% if paid by June 30, 1934. After this June 30, 1934, expiration date, the old law prescribing 16% penalties and 6% interest per year, will again be in force.

This means that on and after July 1, 1934, this year, the penalty and interest will be required to charge will not be 6%, but will include 6% interest per annum from the date it was first delinquent, plus 10% penalty. For example:

3% will be added to 1930 Delinquent Taxes
34% will be added to 1931 Delinquent Taxes
18% will be added to 1932 Delinquent Taxes
(A delinquent cost will also accrue in addition to the above) Yours very truly

Ford's Drama of Transportation at New Fair

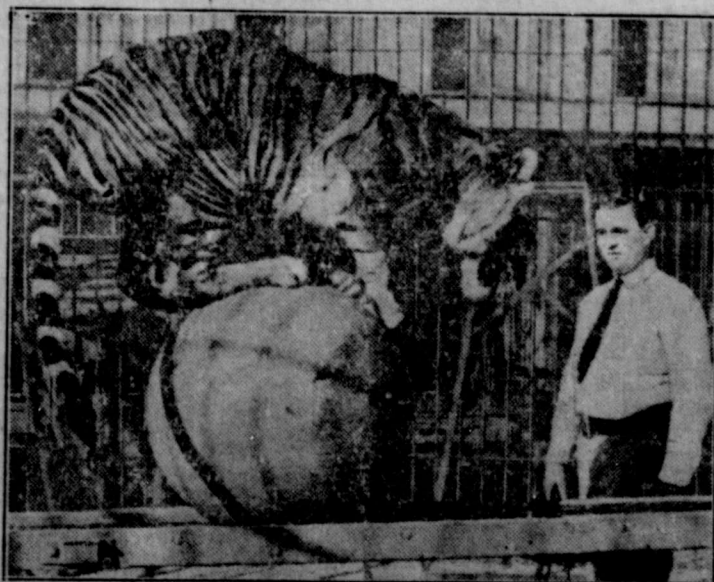

In the largest exhibit ever built for an exposition, the Ford Motor Company will tell the complete story of transportation from the beginning of time, in the new World's Fair which opens in Chicago May 28. A special part of the exhibit will demonstrate Henry Ford's own solution to the farmer's problem. With 84 miles of free exhibits, the new Fair will again be a spectacular international attraction. Special attention will be paid to the comfort and convenience of visitors. Low railroad and bus rates, and low rates in Chicago hotels will cut the cost of a World's Fair vacation even as compared with the low costs of last year.

Jungle Cats New Fair Thrill

Greatest animal act in history free to visitors to Chicago's new World's Fair which opens May 28. The great cat balances on the huge ball under the watchful eye of trainer Allen King, as part of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana exhibit this summer, featuring thirty-three lions, tigers and pumas in a single act. This is only one of 84 miles of free exhibits. Other features will be fifteen reproductions of actual foreign villages giving Exposition-goers a world tour right on the Fair grounds. New low rail and bus rates to the Fair have been announced. There is ample parking space for auto tourists just outside the Fair grounds.

WHEN THOUGHTS TURN TO TONICS

Fruits and Vegetables Are Better Than Drugs.

By EDITH L. BARBER

ARE you taking your spring tonic regularly? Perhaps I ought to say tonics, because the modern spring tonic does not come out of one bottle and we eat as well as drink it. The reason why people found it necessary to resort to spring tonics was because in a time when fresh fruits and vegetables were seldom obtainable during the winter months, they naturally suffered with that feeling of enervation, which is known as spring fever.

Rhubarb and soda and dandelion greens were other popular and more pleasant spring dosages. We prefer to take our rhubarb fresh, and we welcome its appearance on the market in such liberal quantities. Dandelion greens, served as a salad, or cooked, make a pleasant change from the usual lettuce or spinach. Here are some dishes which are real spring tonics.

Dandelion Greens.

Wash thoroughly, remove roots, drain and cook with a little water until tender, about fifteen to twenty minutes. Season with butter, pepper and salt. Serve with vinegar.

Rhubarb Roll.

2 cups flour
1/2 teaspoon salt
3/4 cup brown sugar
2 tablespoons baking powder
2 tablespoons shortening
1/2 cup cold water
1 1/2 cups brown sugar
4 tablespoons flour
1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
1/2 cup chopped nuts
1 cup seeded raisins
1 pound rhubarb, peeled and cut in thin slices

Sift flour, salt, sugar and baking powder into a bowl. Rub in the shortening and add enough water to form a paste. Roll one-half inch thick and spread with a mixture of the brown sugar, flour, nutmeg, nuts, raisins and rhubarb. Roll like jelly roll, fastening ends securely. Place on a greased baking sheet and brush top with water. Bake about forty-five minutes in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit). Serve hot.

Rhubarb and Orange Salad.

2 cups steamed rhubarb (cooked with a little sugar)
2 oranges
French dressing
Fresh mint
Lettuce or romaine
Chill the rhubarb and pare and slice the oranges. Arrange the fruit in alternate layers on the lettuce and cover with french dressing. Sprinkle with finely minced mint leaves and garnish with mint sprigs.

Tomato Juice Cocktail.

1 pint tomato juice
2 teaspoons tarragon
2 teaspoons basil
1/2 teaspoon salt
Few grains cayenne
1 teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
Few drops onion juice
Heat the tomato juice with the herbs; add salt, cayenne and sugar, and allow the mixture to stand for an

HOW IT STARTED

By JEAN NEWTON

That Word "Bimbo"

WHO would have thought that we should find a history for the term "bimbo"? Probably the reader who asked for it regarded himself as an optimist.

"Bimbo" has always been slang, but we have a record of it as early as 1837 when the Boston Transcript described it as "a rascally compound of brandy and sugar flavored with lemon peel," and the Baltimore Commercial Transcript called it "an invention of the devil."

"Bimbo" is Italian for "baby" and the connection between this and strong drink is not very plain unless we assume that one who loved his drink might call it his baby! The theory has been advanced that the connection is really with Barbados rum, "bim" being a nickname for a Barbadian!

Today, as closely as this column can determine, "bimbo" is college slang specifically for a "girl with a telephone number!"

Turkey Counts Children of Polygamous Unions

Istanbul.—Polygamy has been forbidden by law in Turkey since 1926. But numbers of clandestine polygamous unions have taken place since then.

Parents of the unregistered offspring of these illegal unions now are being asked to declare their "hidden children" so that they may be made rightful citizens of the republic.

Tens of thousands of these "illegitimate" children are being registered in every province, the parents being pardoned under the amnesty law of last year.

It is expected the census of the country will rise from 14,000,000 to 18,000,000 as a result of the addition of these and other unregistered persons.

It is noteworthy, however, that only the children of the illegal unions are being recognized. The post-1926 polygamous parents are not allowed to have their unions registered as marriages.

Lights of New York

By L. L. STEVENSON

What tunes, hand organs? The question came up in Magistrate Louis B. Brodsky's court in Yorkville recently. Dominick Cassello was the cause. Cassello has spent 30 of his 52 years grinding out music on the sidewalks of New York. But he turned the crank too close to a hospital and the police got him. It seems, however, that the charge was merely technical. It wasn't the hand organ but the choice of music that aroused the ire of patients to such an extent that they complained and Cassello was pinched. He preferred the old tunes, the ones he had listened to when first he exposed his teeth in a flashing smile in exchange for coins. The judge held with the prosecution. "After the Ball," "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" and other similarly dated airs were not for moderns. "Get hot," he said in effect to Cassello and Cassello promised somewhat sadly, however, since a change meant altering the entire "in-nards" of the organ.

While hesitating to criticize an opinion of a magistrate, especially one delivered from the bench, there are those who hold that Magistrate Brodsky may have erred just a trifle. "Smoke Gets Into Your Eyes" or "I Saw a Dream Walking" or any of the airs of today that are played to death over the radio, they believe, have no place in a hand organ. The hand organ as a musical instrument belongs to another generation. Hence, "Little Annie Rooney," "Bicycle Built for Two," "Ta-ra-ra Boom de Ay" and possibly "Sweet Marie," are the proper repertoire since they bring back memories of the little old New York of hansom cabs, gas lights and bicycle cops. In fact, while discussing the verdict of the magistrate, a number of addicts of old-time music for old-time hand organs became quite sentimental.

The matter is of some importance. Not the pussy willow, the sweet smelling green bud of the lilacs or even the red-breasted robin is the real official spring harbinger here. The hurdy gurdy or hand organ is. Personally, I don't care what is being played so long as I see tenement kids dancing on the sidewalks.

Speaking of tenements, and it was done deliberately in the preceding paragraph, the old rookeries of the lower East Side have been much in the public eye lately because of the determined campaign of Langdon W. Post, tenement house commissioner, to do away with fire traps. Conditions that have shocked the public have been known to social workers and many others for years. In fact, it was a long time ago that the late Jacob Riis brought them to the consciousness of the public with his, "How the Other Half Live." There are about 3,000,000 tenement dwellers in New York and about 167,000 families live in "old law" tenements which have no fire escapes other than ropes. Hence New York's smoke eaters can tell a lot about tenement conditions. If it wasn't for their bravery and efficiency the death toll, heavy now, would be much heavier.

There are sections where there are tenements in the rear of other tenements, the houses in the back being reached by long, often dark, hallways through the houses in front. Once upon a time, the houses in the rear were the homes of the wealthy. They were built far back so that the owners might have green gardens between them and the street. When the great immigration wave came, the tenements were built and the poor swept over once aristocratic sections.

Some of the lower East side sections are still 100 per cent foreign born. The percentage of illiteracy is higher there than anywhere else in the city. Foreign language letter writers make regular visits to the tenements to read letters received and write others.

THE EXPENSES OF A WEDDING

DEAR Mrs. Post: Does the groom pay for anything besides the marriage license, the wedding ring, and of course, the clergyman's fee? (2) When the double ring ceremony is used does he pay for both rings? (3) I live in New York, but my fiancée does not, and insists that in her town the men always buy the flowers. Must I follow custom in her community or can I simply tell her frankly that my father bought the bridal flowers for each of my three sisters. If I have to buy all these flowers it is going to make an awful hole in the money I've saved for our wedding trip.

Answer: (1) His own, the best man's and the ushers' boutonnières, ties, and if they wear them, gloves and spats. (2) No, he buys the ring for the bride, and she buys the one for him. (3) I'm afraid that what your father did in New York has nothing whatever to do with what you will have to do in another town. I agree that it can be an appalling handicap—especially at a December wedding! But the only advice I can give is that you talk it over with your fiancée, tell her about your wedding trip budget, and suggest that the bridesmaids carry muffs (very smart at the moment) of velvet or whatever goes best with their dresses. Then the only flowers would be those for the bride. To the modern fashion of including all flowers (except boutonnières) as part of the wedding expenses of the bride's family, who can at least control the type of bouquets to be ordered, is more fair than expecting the groom to assume a blind obligation, which he cannot control, and is usually embarrassed to meet.

A reader wrote me lately of an all-white wedding at which there were six bridesmaids, a maid of honor, and two flower girls, all carrying gardenias. The bride's bouquet was a huge one of white orchids. All the flowers were, as always, chosen by the bride. The groom who had never heard of this custom, returned from his wedding trip to find a bill for nearly three hundred dollars. The only way he could pay it was to arrange with the florist to pay it, plus interest, in installments. Meaning that he began his married life with this utterly unreasonable indebtedness.

BEFORE AND AFTER THE WEDDING—

DEAR Mrs. Post: Is it improper for an engaged couple to pool their money and buy one worthwhile gift for a bride, to whose wedding and reception they both have been invited?

Answer: One present sent by two engaged people is entirely proper.

DEAR Mrs. Post: Is it permissible for me to buy my husband a wedding ring now, after we've been married more than three years? The double ring ceremony was not used and he would like a ring, too. Is this ever done?

Answer: I don't know that it is ever done, but there is no reason in the world why it should not be. If your husband would like to have a ring and you want to give him one, by all means buy the ring you would have bought, have it marked as it would have been marked, and put it on his finger—with perhaps a pledge of even deeper tenderness than you could have made three years ago.

DEAR Mrs. Post: Is a flower girl out of place in a very simple wedding, which is to take place on the lawn of an old country house? The bride is wearing a simple white dress and hat, and her only attendant will wear the same type of clothes in pink and brown. They will wear corsages. What should the flower girl wear if she may be included?

Answer: It would be quite all right to have a flower girl. If she is very little, she might wear one of her own white dresses. If she is older, she would wear pink and brown to match the maid of honor.

My dear Mrs. Post: My fiancée has two sisters my age, whom I know, but we are entirely separate groups. I am having a party at the country club this month at which the news of our engagement is being given out. Because of the nature of the party, ought I invite these sisters to it? If so, should I ask their mother, too?

Answer: If you are having a general party, I think you will have to invite them all. But if it is to be a very small party, and including only a few of your intimate friends, it will not be necessary—unless you are going to make a great deal of the announcement.

Invention of Compass
The origin of the compass has been attributed consecutively to the Chinese, Arabs, Greeks and Romans, but it is not absolutely certain how far these accounts are correct. The invention of the compass was partly due to the discovery that a lodestone or a piece of iron which has been touched by a lodestone will direct itself to a point in a northerly or southerly position, depending on the position north or south of the equator.

CHAPTER XIII—Continued

"There's one thing I never thought to ask," Peter continued. "Did you discover how Franklin's apartment was entered? Did the person who searched those rooms have a key or were you able to find where he forced his entrance?"

"He must have had a key. None of the windows had been forced and the locks showed no signs of having been tampered with."

"Well, who had keys to Franklin's apartment? We had Franklin's, on his key-ring. Fletcher had one with him. We'd better talk to Choo Choo Train again. She had a key to that apartment. Our burglar either used her key, or else—"

"Or else our woman in blue had a key, too."

"I'll soon find out," promised the detective. He used the telephone to call Choo Choo Train, who promised to come to the hospital immediately, bringing her key to the murdered man's apartment with her.

"Good hunch, Peter. Either the murderer borrowed Choo Choo's key, or else there was a fourth one. There were no marks anywhere to indicate that the prowler broke into the place."

"While we're waiting," Peter suggested, "tell me about Franklin's office. Were you able to determine how my assailant got in there?"

The detective admitted he was puzzled. "The reception room was a wreck," he said. "You must have staged quite a battle there. That's about all we were able to find out, however. There was no fire-escape from which any of the windows could have been entered. The main entrance was the only means of access to the suite. If that door was forced, we couldn't tell it."

"Dunbar helped us, too. Aside from his key, and Franklin's, which you had, there were three other keys to that door. Two of them belonged to clerks in the office and have been accounted for. The third was the janitor's. He, too, tells a straight story."

"So it looks as though our visitor walked in through a locked door, eh?" Cardigan mused.

He reclined against his pillow and stared fixedly at the ceiling through the smoke of a constant procession of cigarettes.

"But how about the outside of the building? Was there any ledge by which the intruder could have reached those windows? Every sensible question has an equally logical answer, if it can only be found."

Before they could explore the question further, the actress arrived. Choo Choo's black-lashed eyes turned first to Peter.

"I'm sorry," she said. "The papers said you were seriously hurt."

The novelist smiled briefly. "The doctor says I'm to have a short leg that will make me limp a bit," he said. "But I'm getting used to the idea. After all, I'm fortunate to be alive, even if I must carry a permanent souvenir of the experience with me. How about it, Miss Train? Do you care for men who limp?"

"I adore them," declared the actress swiftly. "I detest men who either walk, act or talk just like every one else." But she was obviously at a loss as to how to continue the conversation and turned abruptly to Kilday with the question. "Why did you send for me?"

"You have a key to Franklin's apartment. I want to see it."

The actress searched in her purse and produced the key.

Without saying a word, Kilday carefully compared it with the other key in his possession, the one on Franklin's key-ring. It was identical.

"This is the only key he gave you, isn't it?" he asked.

"Yes."

"Miss Train, has this key been in your possession all the time since Franklin's death?"

"Why, yes, of course."

"How can you be so sure?" inquired Peter. "Where did you keep the key, Miss Train?"

Choo Choo looked at him in bewilderment. "Of course I'm sure," she replied. "I always kept it in my purse. This morning, when Sergeant Kilday telephoned, I looked immediately. It was there where I had always kept it."

Unless the murderer had taken the key and then returned it again, without her knowledge, it seemed obvious that it had never been out of her possession. Apparently this was another of the many false trails they had encountered since the beginning of this investigation.

"So there was a fourth key," Peter mused aloud, after the actress had departed. "The woman in blue had it, Sergeant, and passed it on to the murderer. Evidently he was just awaiting his chance to search the apartment, and when he saw Fletcher leave, admitted himself and turned the place upside down."

"Then it must have been Rylie Carmody instead of Spears," growled Kilday. "He fits into all our clues, Peter."

"If," declared Cardigan, "Callis Shipley is the woman in blue, then Rylie is our man. Somehow, I can't picture her in an illicit relationship with Franklin, and having a key to his apartment. Yet, if Rylie is guilty, he obtained the fourth key from some one. And what other woman is he interested in? Of course, that's taking it for granted that the other key belonged to a woman. Who else would have had such a key?" He subsided into another reverie.

"There's one thing you're overlooking, Peter," said Kilday. "Why won't you young Carmody talk? He says he had an appointment in Westport at nine o'clock. But he won't say who he was supposed to meet there, and he won't tell us why he gave our detective the slip. Obviously, he never met anyone at Westport. He claims it was on account of the accident. Of course, I think otherwise. But if he were as innocent as he pretends, wouldn't he at least tell us these things? I believe he would."

"Why not have him over here?" suggested Peter. "You said before that you wished I could have questioned him. Give me a chance."

The sergeant reached for the telephone. "Now you're talking," he said. "Talk to him for five minutes and you'll be as sure of his guilt as I am."

"I'm Sorry," She Said. "The Papers Said You Were Seriously Hurt."

He telephoned instructions to bring Rylie Carmody to the hospital immediately.

But if Peter hoped to glean more information from the young man than had the detective, he was doomed to disappointment.

"I don't see that it matters who I was going to meet," declared the young man impatiently. "My accident prevented me from keeping the appointment."

"Still sticking to the accident story, eh?" Kilday commented derisively. "If you haven't anything to hide, why don't you tell us who it was?"

Rylie maintained a stubborn silence. "Perhaps," suggested the detective doubtfully, "you can explain why you were so anxious to give my man the slip. Was there anything about this mysterious meeting at Westport that you were afraid for the police to see?"

"Of course not," indignantly.

"Why were you going all the way out to Westport for the meeting? Why didn't you meet this person in New York?"

"You can save yourself a lot of trouble," declared Rylie slowly, "if you'll understand, once and for all, that I'm not going to tell you anything about that appointment at Westport."

"Was it a woman you planned to meet there?" This question from Peter.

The young man laughed shortly. "I just said I wasn't going to answer any more of these questions."

Kilday leaped at the suggestion. "A woman, eh? What if he did meet her, Peter? Had you thought of that? Perhaps he doesn't want to answer our questions because he did meet a woman at Westport. What about it, Carmody? And she gave you a key, didn't she—a key to Franklin's apartment?"

"You went to Westport, all right, but you went there earlier in the afternoon. You gave my man the slip, kept your appointment with that woman and got the key. Then you returned to Franklin's apartment, searched it and, not finding what you were after, went on to his office. That's where Cardigan surprised you and where the struggle took place. After that you returned to Westport and returned the key to the woman who was still waiting there. Then you drove out your car over, in order to account for your battered-up appearance. How's that, Peter?" He turned to his friend, smiling grimly. "That accounts for the only flaw in our case against him. That's how he got possession of that fourth key."

"From whom?" asked Peter.

"I don't know yet. But I'll find out. Maybe it is this woman in blue, and maybe she is Callis Shipley. I'll soon know. I told them to bring her here. At last I've got a few facts to go on. It won't take long to shake her story now."

The timely arrival of the girl they were discussing seemed to bear out the officer's promise. Dismissing the detective who escorted her, he admitted the girl.

"Rylie!" Callis hurried across the room, her arms outstretched, oblivious to the other men in the room. "Darling, I told you to be careful, that they—"

Rylie silenced her with a hand across her lips. "Don't say anything about Westport," he cautioned her in a whisper.

The byplay had not escaped Cardigan's attention. "I'm glad you came, Miss Shipley," he said. "I was just trying to get Rylie to tell me about his appointment to meet you at Westport the other afternoon."

He hesitated, waiting for an answer, but the girl only faced him silently, her hand clutching Rylie's desperately.

"You did have an appointment with him, didn't you?" prompted the novelist gently.

"Leave her out of this," cried the boy. "She had nothing to do with it. Leave her out, I tell you."

Peter ignored the command. "Rylie seems to think it would involve you in this unpleasant affair if he told us about it, Miss Shipley," he continued. "He is making a mistake. If there is a way for him to explain his movements that afternoon, he should do it, by all means."

"Don't listen to him, Callis." The young man clutched her arm and shook it fiercely. "Don't tell him anything."

"Be quiet, you," growled Kilday. "What is it you want to know?" Callis asked Peter.

"The same day that I was attacked in Franklin's office," Peter explained, "Rylie Carmody gave the detective that was following him the slip. Late that evening he had a wreck about ten miles from Westport. It is important that we know where he went and what he did, between the time the detective last saw him and the hour of that wreck. The only explanation he has offered for his presence in that neighborhood is that he had an engagement at Westport. But he persistently refuses to tell us whom he expected to meet there. Was it you?"

The girl glanced first at the novelist, then at Rylie Carmody.

"Don't say anything, Callis," the latter pleaded. "They'll just try to drag you into it."

She hesitated a moment longer. "There's nothing for us to conceal, is there, Rylie? I think I'd better tell them."

Peter wondered if the girl were preparing to deceive him again.

"He was coming to meet me," she said.

"What time did he get there?" Peter asked sharply.

"He had an accident," declared the girl. "He never got there."

"Don't tell me that," Kilday exclaimed truculently. "He met you there, all right. And you gave my key to Franklin's apartment."

Rylie Carmody made a lunge at the detective. "What do you mean?" he snarled. His face was white and drawn with impotent fury as the officer grasped his wrist.

The young man struggled ineffectually. "You had no right to ask her that. It's absurd. Callis scarcely knew Franklin."

"Rylie is right," declared the girl gravely. "I scarcely knew Mr. Franklin. I met him for the first time only a few weeks ago, at a party given in honor of Doris."

"And you didn't have such a key?"

"Never. I've never been to the apartment. I don't even know where it is."

"Miss Shipley," Peter took up the questioning, "suppose you tell us why you planned to meet this young man at Westport the other evening?"

"There is very little to tell. I was going to meet him there at nine o'clock. But on account of the accident, of course he couldn't get there."

"Why didn't he meet you at your home? Why Westport?"

Callis frowned. "He had another appointment," she replied hesitantly. "He knew it was going to take him some time, and we thought we'd save time by meeting there."

"He didn't tell you what this other appointment was, did he?" Peter pursued the point, and when she did not answer promptly he repeated the question.

Still she hesitated.

"Perhaps," the novelist suggested, "you would feel more free in telling us why you planned to go to Martin's Cove?"

This time the girl answered promptly. "We wanted to get away for a few days, where we'd have a chance to forget about the murder."

"Perhaps the fact that Rylie was being followed by a detective had something to do with your decision," Kilday put in.

"Did you know that he was being followed?" Peter asked in a kindlier tone.

"We couldn't help knowing it," replied the girl. "The man followed him everywhere he went."

"That was his job," the novelist explained. "But of course you both found that rather irksome, didn't you?"

"I wasn't used to being treated like a common criminal," the boy interrupted harshly.

"And so"—this time Peter addressed the boy—"you decided to give the detective the slip and meet Miss Shipley at Westport, so you wouldn't be followed to Martin's Cove. Is that it?"

Fabric Gloves Add Zest to the Mode

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

the ends and edges with white gauntlet gloves or crinkled cotton crepe with deep pointed cuffs of matching basket weave, such as the figure seated in the picture wearing.

WHEN it comes to exciting events in the fashion realm the scene centers around fabric gloves and the matching accessories which go with them. The new gloves reveal style potentialities such as the rank and file of us never dreamed could exist in connection with what once upon a time we were wont to regard as mere hand coverings, with perhaps a little variation in design and stitching and color now and then.

However, here on the stage of fashion this very moment speaking for themselves is an endless array of gloves made of every material known to the ingenuity of man and revealing a wealth of ideas which are simply breathtaking in point of originality and audacious styling.

The importance of cotton for frocks and gowns, for smart ensembles and for suits started the furor by creating a need for gloves to co-ordinate in fabric and feeling with the new costume for daytime wear. This movement toward unique fabric gloves received additional impetus from the great French couturiers. With utmost enthusiasm Chanel and Talbot, those two foremost originators of sportswear vogues, sponsor fabric gloves with matched accessories for spring and summer. So sound and altogether intriguing is the idea, it is spreading like wildfire throughout fashion's domain.

The interpretations of this new mode for matching accessories are legion. Just a glimpse of the new gloves of linen with gingham printed linen cuffs together with a tailored flower of the printed linen to wear on coat lapel or at the shoulder of a sports frock (illustrated to the right) and your peace of mind will be destroyed until you become the happy possessor of just such or its equivalent.

Perhaps you will covet even more a white scarf collar of open basket-weave cotton, crossbarred in blue at Chamoisette, that practical standby is glorified anew this season in glove that feature pin-checked gingham cuff lined with plain gingham, with matching reversible collar-scarf in the monotone and checked fabric. It appears also in gloves with cuffs and matching tailored bow for shoulder or neckline made of gayly printed cotton. A most attractive accessory set of crocheted string features gloves and scarf of white, with the flared ends of the scarf and the flare cuffs of the gloves in three graduated shades of blue.

But do not think that your new fabric gloves simply must have matched accessories to be smart. There are so many materials and so many styles in glove fashions in general, it is impossible to do more than enumerate the important trends. Watch for the very sheer milanese chiffons when the hot shades as well as white and are the coolest ever as well as wonderfully good looking.

Many of the new gloves in a variety of fabrics reflect the tailored vogue. Note the group pictured in the inset. Below to the left is a glove of dull luster diagonal oatmeal-type fabric in a slip-on style; above it, a washable chamoisette open cuff gauntlet with smart wood button at the wrist; next (top to the left) a sunshen slip-on with two tiny pearl buttons at the wrist and with scalloped edge; in the center, another chamoisette glove with novelty stitching trim in leaf design around the cutout edge of the open cuff (very smart in navy). Above to the right short slip-ons in fine honeycomb knit with rib-knit frill edging; below, gloves featuring a pleated self-fabric frill and diagonal stitching; and concluding the group a most outstanding type—crochet string slip-ons with lace cuffs which look as if hand crocheted.

GREEK AND ROMAN TREND IN SANDALS

The shoe designers, who are taking themselves as seriously these days as the old masters immortalized in the Metropolitan museum, have delved into the ancient history of many nations to produce the array of sandals and ghillies, bejeweled dance slippers and tailored pumps that confront the modern woman whose grandmother used to be contented with one good serviceable pair of shoes a year.

The up-and-coming deb this season will wear sandals modeled after those worn by Helen of Troy, or beach slippers such as once adorned the pink-tipped toes of Cleopatra.

Authentically Greek and Roman in their inspiration are the new sandals worn not only for beach wear, but to complement any kind of summer sports costume. They're simple affairs made only of a couple of straps and a sole, leaving the toes altogether untrammelled.

The footwear of a monk in Capri provided the inspiration for the monk sandal which promises to be the rage of the summer resorts.

"In the Money" Silks for Spring Latest in Paris

The newest things in printed silks for spring are called "In the Money" prints. They represent the gold-silver imitation and non-imitation arguments, but without taking sides.

They are made in a series of eight patterns of five colors each—40 different colors in all. Those of us who have had glimpses of them agreed that they were the last word in the New Deal for dining out, tea dances, country clubs, and even the "Tag End" dresses for those occasions when anybody might wear anything and yet nobody seems exactly sure of what will be the right thing.

QUILTED VELVET

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

The call of the evening mode is for unique and fanciful capes. The lovely model pictured here is of quilted translucent velvet in a delectable leaf green. The Elizabethan collar is stiffened to flare away from the throat so as to be perfectly comfortable at the same time that it is extremely flattering.

Colored Tweeds

Those soft camel-hair tweeds are being woven now in such combinations as a dull rose-purple with a tan check.

Sea Shell Slippers

Abalone sea shell is the inspiration for some new evening slippers in opaline, satin luster.

DRESSY DESIGN IN
FROCK FOR HOUSE
OR STREET WEAR
PATTERN 9937

Looking lovely around the house is an art worth cultivating. It isn't a luxury to have good-looking morning frocks. It's just a matter of choosing the right designs. The frock in the illustration is so comfortably trim that it is nice to do your housework in, and yet, it has so many delightful fashion details that you can actually use the same pattern to make an afternoon or street dress. For mornings make it of one of the checked, striped or figured new cottons. For afternoons, use sheer cotton or silk.

Pattern 9937 may be ordered only in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32 and 34. Size 16 requires 3 1/2 yards 36-inch fabric.

Complete, diagrammed sew chart included.

Send FIFTEEN CENTS in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for this pattern. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, the STYLE NUMBER and SIZE.

Send your order to The Sewing Circle Pattern Department, 27 West Eighteenth St., New York.

NEW POINTS IN CAR OF FUTURE

Writer Doubts Plans Will Displace the Auto.

Every year the automobile shows turn our thoughts to the year's cars. But motor manufacturers are not heart more concerned with the car of two, three or even four years hence. If makers did not habitually look far ahead, the time would come when "next year's models" showed no changes at all except in body work.

Builders are experimenting with single-pedal control, with small engines producing even greater horsepower, and similar developments of the near future. Let us look at the car of ten, twenty and even fifty years hence.

The first objection that will be raised is: "Cars will not be used in 1984; every one will travel by airplane." I do not anticipate that flying will make such a success, Prof. A. M. Low, British scientist and author, writes in the Philadelphia Public Ledger. We have failed to establish the plane which can ascend and descend vertically, to overcome entirely certain weather conditions such as fog, and to find a way of getting more power from its fuel.

For many years flying will call for lengthy training, and it will not know how to land his plane on his own roof or in a gale at more than fifty years' ahead.

Until this time motor cars will be necessary. In my opinion they will remain universally popular for journeys of less than 100 miles, especially as the average speed rises. But their character will change completely.

The first thing we shall notice about this car of the future is its shape. It will be as fully streamlined as an ocean liner. There is no great inducement to streamline cars at the moment, for their resistance does not begin to count appreciably at low speeds, and the number of persons who wish to travel 90 miles per hour on our roads is small compared with those who drive comfortably at 28 miles per hour.

In the future higher speeds will be possible because of improved traffic conditions. Safe roads of reasonable width will be available. Slow-moving vehicles will be barred from motor roads, and pedestrians will either be called off or carried on overhead footways.

Sixty miles an hour will be a safe average speed, while the absence of unbanked corners on these special roads will make much higher speed possible. Cars may even be signaled automatically like trains, so that two cars are ever within 200 yards of each other.

Air resistance increases as the square of the speed, and after 60 miles per hour much of the energy is devoted to overcoming air pressure.

Streamlining will, therefore, be of tremendous importance and the car of the future will have smooth lines from end to end. No spare wheel, headlight, windshield or mascot will jut out. The result will be that, with engines developing lower horsepower, higher speeds will be accomplished.

Manufacturers will aim at getting more out of their fuel. At present about 50 per cent of the potential energy in fuel is wasted. Experiments are now being made which may teach us more about combustion.

This year many cars are having radio sets installed. The cars of the future might have not only a radio receiver but also a cocktail bar, wash basin and many similar luxuries.

I expect the long-distance touring car of the future, as distant from the runabout, to have a bed, a bath and similar fittings, so that the busy man can actually "get up" while being driven to work. He will think nothing of living 100 miles away from his office, shaving in comfort in his perfectly sprung limousine.

One of the most striking changes will be the elimination of noise. The car of the future will be acoustically designed and cleverly sprung so that the passenger in the back cabin will not know that he is moving until he looks out the window.

Brotherly Love

Our idealists speak soulfully of the days when all nations will be guided by the principles of "brotherly love," but an amusing incident that took place in a city park makes one feel that the theory is all wrong.

A mother with twin sons, about five years old, was strolling along a path when one of her boys aroused her ire by refusing to stop throwing gravel. As she was administering several sound slaps in the approved manner little brother got busy. He ran up to the arena of action with a branch in his hand and cried: "Here's a stick, mother."

Mother laughed and halted the punishment, but the chastened twin gave his brother such a malevolent look that the helpful one hurriedly put his parent between them.—New York Sun.

BLACKLEG is the first blackleg vaccine ever produced which can be recommended definitely for cow suckling calves. Immunity with Blackleg is equivalent to that of smallpox vaccine against smallpox... the highest immunity produced by means of a vaccine. It has been amply proved by thousands of laboratory and field tests to be far superior to any other vaccines on the market. BAR NONE!

Without the final step in its production it is a better product, and when that final step is taken comparisons within the same standards cease to exist. That step is the addition of a chemical which precipitates its immunity-producing substances (antigens), slowing up their absorption after injection. By thus retarding release of the antigens the animal's system is enabled to build immunity against the entire injection, whereas much of the ordinary vaccine is excreted before the call's mechanism has been able to build immunity against it. To state it in other words, it would require several injections of the ordinary type of vaccine to build an immunity equivalent to that produced by one shot of Blackleg.

SEAGO-MANESS

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Lola Maness of this city to Mr. Perry Seago of Lefors. The impressive ceremony was read May 26, in Memphis by Rev. E. D. Landreth at the Methodist parsonage. Miss Nell Maness, sister of the bride accompanied them.

The bride is the attractive daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Maness, and has taught school for several years near McLean. She has spent her vacations here with her parents and has been active in church and social affairs.

Mr. Seago formerly lived at Goldston but is now in business at Lefors, where the young couple will be at home after June 1.

The best wishes of their many friends go with them to their new home.

Lavena Watkins of Canyon is visiting relatives and friends here.

SLUMBER PARTY

The Senior girls were entertained with a slumber party at the home of their class mother, Mrs. Boliver, last Friday night.

Or rather, it should be called a slumberless party, as singing, laughter and prank playing went on far into the wee small hours.

At midnight the girls enjoyed delicious ground beef sandwiches and tea.

About seven o'clock bacon, eggs, toast and coffee were served to the following: Anne Ruth Mitchell, Nina Mae Bailey, Joyce Ansley, Haseltine Bradley, Mrs. Virgil Hagler, Verma Hagler, Emma Lewell Plunk, Jessie Mildred Cuiwell, Opal Cooper, Pauline Boliver and Mrs. Boliver.

REEVES-NOEL

Sunday afternoon, May 27th Mrs. Alice Noel and Mr. Leon Reeves motored over to Wellington where they were married at the home of the brides sister, Mrs. Frank Anderson, Rev. Tom Johnston, the Methodist pastor officiating.

These young people are among the most popular in this community. Miss Noel, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Noel is a graduate of Memphis High school and for seven years has been a successful assistant in the Security State Bank.

Mr. Reeves, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Reeves, is a graduate of Hedley High school, a Junior in W. T. S. T. O. Canyon, where he won athletic honors.

There are a host of friends who wish for them a long happy life. For the present they will reside on the Reeves farm, south of Hedley.

Mrs. A. G. Nipper returned last week from Tulsa where she has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Franklin.

WEST BAPTIST B. Y. P. U.

May we again remind you of the B. Y. P. U. Rally beginning Friday evening, June 1st, at the West Baptist Church. The program will continue through Saturday. There will be preaching Sunday at the 11:00 o'clock hour, as we expect to have several of our visitors remain for Sunday services.

We extend a special invitation to the young people of the town. Everyone invited.

WATKINS-EVANS

The surprising news was received here last week of the marriage of Mr. Robert Watkins of this city and Miss Gertrude Evans of Center, which took place May 18th at Meadow, Texas, the Methodist minister there officiating.

Mrs. Watkins taught school at Center the past year and is a very talented young woman.

The groom has lived here for years and is one of Hedley's most popular and worthy young men. He has spent a great deal of his time in conducting song services for revivals, thus endearing himself to a great many people else where as well as Hedley.

The many Hedley friends join in wishing them a long and happy married life.

They will make their home at Lubbock for the present.

World's Largest Fountain New Fair Feature

The largest fountain ever built will be the outstanding single feature of the new World's Fair which opens in Chicago May 28. Its flow of water will be enough to supply a city of 1,000,000. And its spectacular lighting, in five tiers, will use an electrical load sufficient for a city of 150,000. Fifteen foreign villages, music, fireworks and free entertainment will be among the major attractions of the Fair. There are 84 miles of free exhibits. Cost to visitors will be low. Reduced rail and hotel rates are in effect. Chicago is easily accessible by automobile through fourteen major highways. A program of special interest with music, parades, fireworks and special features has been arranged for opening day. That will be an interesting time for a first visit.
