A TRIBUTE TO MISS JACK CARTER

Oh Jack, how we miss you dear,
We are sad and long-some down here;
'Tis so hard to give you up,
How can we drink of this bitter cup.

You were so sweet and dear to us all,
But we will submit to the Master's call.
Why you were taken while young and fair
We do not know, but feel you are safe in the Master's care.

Your life was so short while here on earth,
Yet we can feel your great, great worth;
You were a jewel in your parents' home,
But now you've gone and they are alone.

You filled your mission while down here,
Or the Father would not have called you
dear:

You did not know the good you've done,
You did not know the souls you've won.

How beautiful is a life like yours,
That is not lived behind closed doors;
Your life was an open book,
And on its pages all could look.

The world is better because you lived,
And many vacancies you have filled;
In babyhood, your prattle was sweet,
In womanhood you're at Jesus' feet.

Your home looks lonely as we pass by,
But we feel you're with the angels on high.
Your mother's heart is bleeding and sore,
Because you have crossed to the other side

Your daddy too is grieved and sad,
Yet he knows you are happy and glad.
Your friends are grieved because you're gone.

And crossed the river and passed on.

Your feet are treading the streets of gold,
Where you'll always be young and never grow old;

Where the angels will be your companions and friends.

In a world that will never end.

A loving friend, Mrs. O. R. Culwell,

MRS. E. S. NOEL

MacMillan, pastor of the First Presbyterian church with burial in Fairview cemetery. Mrs. Noel was a native Kentuckian, and had lived in Memphis 22 years. She is survived by six children. Her husband preceded her in death several years ago. She was an aunt of J. W. Noel of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Dee Franklin and Mrs. Fay Fulton and son, Edwin, of Amarillo attended the rodeo and the opening of the Palo Duro Canyon State Park July 4th.

MRS. S. S. BRIDGES

Mrs. Sarah Summers Bridges was born at Mt. Vernon Ill., Oct. 2, 1866. The Summers family came to Texas when sister Bridges was just a child. They settled in Navarro Co., where they lived for many years. She was married to A. J. Bridges in 1888. There were seven children born to this union, three boys and four girls, Homer, Clyde, Carl, Mrs. T. E. McKinley, and Mrs. E. P. Curtis. Two children died in infancy. There are 17 grandchildren. One sister, Mrs. A. Melton of Bellevue, Texas.

Sister Bridges joined the Christian church when a young woman and remained in that communion to the end of her life. She was not just a church member, but a real Christian. We know where to find a person who lives as sister Bridges lived. She was a great mother and a friend to all. If I were asked to choose one word that would best sum up the life of Mrs. Bridges, I would say, "Faithful." Faithful to her home, her family and her church; faithful unto death. What a heritage for those of us to lay to have had her for a friend and what a heritage for her five children, to have had her as a mother. In the strength of this heritage, we should find it easier in days to come, to carry on in the noble way marked out by her for us.

Her life has been a benediction and a blessing to her fellow Christians, and we are all richer and stronger for having known her, and for having loved her. And, though we will never cease to miss her, we feel that Heaven has for us an added charm, and that one more friend has been added to the throng that wait to welcome us in our beautiful home beyond the river. Sister Bridges told the children just how she wanted the funeral conducted, and who she wanted to conduct the service, and her wishes were carried out as requested. She departed this life July 5, 1934.

"Servant of God, well done!
Thy glorious warfare's past;
The battle's fought, the race is run,
And thou art crowned at last."

Her friend, A. V. Hendricks.

EVER since the day Adrian Lytton donned his first pair of long trousers he had been bothered by a strong dislike for little men. And with the passing of the years this attitude toward males of petite stature grew and became almost an obsession.

It was annoying, especially because Adrian couldn't tell why little men aroused in him a feeling of animosity. There just wasn't a logical explanation for the thing.

It was there, inside of him, a feeling that stirred to life whenever he came in contact with or for long was forced to gaze upon a little man.

Not that Adrian was mighty. True, at the age of twenty-seven, he stood six feet one and a half inches (without stockings), and his physique was nicely proportioned.

But he wasn't one of those big, strong, brawny brutes, who naturally regard persons of small stature with an expression of superiority.

He wasn't that sort of person. He just didn't like little men, and that's all there was to it.

This peculiar element in Adrian's makeup was asserting itself at the present moment.

He was sitting in a wicker chair placed in a tiny alcove in the auditorium of the Alpine club.

The auditorium itself, serving as a dance floor, was dimly lighted.

A hundred or more couples moved about, shuffling and scraping and jostling one another and attempting, each in their individual and original manner, to keep in time with a sobbing orchestra.

Adrian's features registered dismal gloom; an expression wholly lost upon those who chanced to look in his direction by virtue of a freakish mask, which, in contrast to its wearer's state of mind, created an illusion of silly merriment.

The event was a masquerade ball, the third annual, sponsored by the Alpine club, and the creations in costume and mask worn by participants were something to raise the flag about.

Adrian's glumness, which for the last five minutes had been developing into a burning rage, had been provoked by a youth scarcely more than five feet two or three inches tall, who, during the course of a single dance, had crossed Adrian's path twice, jostled him three times and glared at him once from behind a hideous Chinese mask, because of an unexpected collision.

There was something about the manner of this especially small youth that served to whet Adrian's already established dislike for little men.

Somehow mere sight of the youth, coupled with memory of that ugly glare which seemed to contain a condemning look, provoked a new feeling of resentment and animosity.

He was possessed, wholly without warning, with an impulsive desire to slap the little runt down.

In fact, he actually believed that slapping the little runt down would provide him with no end of satisfaction and probably bring to a conclusion this strange aversion for little men.

But because slapping runts down wasn't being done, especially at the Alpine club's costume ball, and because Adrian couldn't find any explanation for his sudden impulse (a fact which annoyed him considerably), he hid himself to this remote alcove to cool off and think the thing over.

But even as he sat there in sober contemplation, the object of his annoyance came dancing past and tripped over his outstretched foot.

There was a breathless moment while the eyes behind the hideous Chinese mask glared at him in silent threat; while Adrian fought mightily in an effort to restrain himself from leaping at the throat of the little man.

But the moment passed. The Chinese mask danced away, and the space was filled with other dancers en route around the floor.

Adrian sat back, breathing laboriously. And suddenly he knew that he must get out of there.

He knew that if he came in contact once more with that particular little man, something was going to happen.

And so, lest this possibility should actually occur, he shoved and pushed his way to the door, through the stage line, and out on to the clubhouse veranda.

He located an isolated spot and sat down to smoke a cigarette and stare at the moon and curse himself for this affliction that tormented his soul without explanation.

And despite his best efforts he couldn't rid his mind of the idea that to slap down the little runt with the Chinese mask would cure him once and for all of his obsession.

He remembered that the little man had worn a gay Chinese costume, which could easily be distinguished after the masks had been removed during intermission.

And with a curious sense of shock he wondered if the wearer of the mask were some one of his acquaintances. What if he turned out to be Eddie Drake or Paul Forbes, both little men, both sons of close friends of the family?

That would be bad.

No, it would never do to slap down Paul or Eddie.

Inside the clubhouse the music had stopped and the orchestra leader was bawling something through a megaphone. Adrian distinguished the word "intermission," and tore off his mask.

He sat for a long time wondering whether or not he should go back, hardly daring to trust himself for fear of what he might do should he come face to face with the little man who had trod on his toes.

Presently, however, he stood up and threw away his cigarette.

It was all foolishness, this obsession of his.

There wasn't any excuse for a man of his intelligence to let a thing like that get the best of him.

He was going back in there, seek out the Chinese-costumed runt and shake his hand and tell him what a swell guy he was.

Hereafter, he was going to force himself to like little men.

En route back to the clubhouse door Adrian remembered that Tom Harrison, who was six feet one inch tall and whom Adrian liked, was dragging an out of town girl to tonight's ball.

Two days previous Tom had said: "Adrian, I want you to meet Bettina. She's a fine girl. You'll like her. After we unmask, you look us up and I'll give you a break."

Adrian remembered these words now and told himself that as soon as he had located the little runt he'd look up Tom and the girl.

But as the thing turned out he found Tom and the girl first.

They were standing just inside the clubhouse door, and when Adrian looked into the girl's eyes, he suddenly felt weak and peculiar inside.

She was much more than an ordinary girl. In fact, she was exactly the type of girl that Adrian had dreamed of meeting all his life. He was sure of that, even before he spoke to her.

Tom espied him and beckoned and took the girl by the arm and led her toward him.

And in that moment Adrian knew a warm feeling of comradeship toward Tom.

A man in a million. Good old Tom—

Adrian had just opened his mouth to speak when suddenly he was seized from behind.

He whirled around to stare down into a strange face, a dark-complexioned, anger-filled face; a face that fairly writhed with pent up fury.

And before Adrian had time to gather in what it was all about he was struck forcibly on the chin.

He rebounded and—collided with the wall.

Fierce anger welled up inside of Adrian, anger augmented by humiliation.

For the man who had struck him was the little runt of the Chinese costume, and the girl, the girl who was everything that Adrian had ever dreamed about, was standing there laughing because it must have struck her as funny to see the little runt slap big six-foot two Adrian against the wall.

Well, it had come.

This was the supreme moment, the moment when Adrian could punch a little man in the nose and feel justified.

He came away from the wall and struck out blindly; struck empty air.

Something hard smacked against his chin.

He rebounded again, blinked. The little runt was standing close.

"I hate big guys," he was saying. "Hate 'em. They give me a pain. Especially big guys like you who toss us little fellows around and act so superior about it. I've been wanting to do this for a long time."

It can't be said that Adrian didn't try to defend himself. But all his efforts seemed useless.

The little runt in the Chinese costume was lightning. One, two, three. Adrian's face was a punching bag. One-two. Blood spurted from his nose. Men shouted. Women screamed. And then suddenly it was over. Adrian lay on the floor, a bruised and bloody mess.

He was only partly conscious, but conscious enough to realize what had happened, conscious enough to see the girl, the girl he'd dreamed about, laughing as if she'd burst a blood vessel.

Adrian didn't try to get up. He lay there for a long time thinking.

"I hate big guys." He could hear the words again. And suddenly he grinned.

He was glad it had happened, glad the girl was there to laugh.

Glad because he no longer possessed the desire to slap down little men, no longer disliked them.

He was cured of his obsession. He knew that little men bothered him because of their apparent physical inferiority, and that little men had been bothered by him because of this apparent physical superiority—a theory which had just now been proven all cockeyed.

"Eat" and "Et"
In the United States, the past tense of the verb to eat is rarely heard other than ate, pronounced to rhyme with late, gate, mate, says Literary Digest. In England the past tense appears indiscriminately as ate or eat, and in either spelling it is generally pronounced to rhyme with let, get, met. Occasionally, the form ate is pronounced in England as in the United States, and occasionally the form eat appears in the United States with the pronunciation of it.

the afternoon. The laugh of the outing: Ruth McQueen accidently received the mud plaster that someone threw, and they were never found. After using the only towel and trying to dress in a big hurry for "youder comes

Except in the larger cities, electric service was rarely satisfactory before long-distance transmission of electric power was perfected.

Small local plants serving single communities generally lack the variety and volume of demand which enables a larger system, serving a wide area, to operate efficiently.

Nor can small, isolated plants meet sudden demands for more power nearly as readily as the larger system.

The transmission line can deliver larger amounts of power at once without the delay of installing additional equipment. Thus it clears the road for industrial growth.

The present-day industrial progress of small communities is based in a large measure on the ample and economical power supply which resulted when the transmission systems replaced small local plants throughout the nation.

With 2,608 miles of transmission lines, the West Texas Utilities stands ready to render satisfactory service to 159 prosperous cities, towns and communities throughout West Texas—"The Land of Opportunity."

Do you know that your increased use of Electric Service is billed on a surprising low rate schedule . . . and adds only a small amount to your total bill?

DISHES TO HELP BUSY HOUSEWIFE

Some Suggestions on Preparing Quick Meals.

By EDITH M. BARBER

A NUMBER of requests from housewives interested in recipes for quick meals have been coming to me recently. For this reason the column today will be devoted to answering some of them.

One writer asks whether she may safely cook her cereal the night before keep it covered on the stove in an aluminum double boiler and reheat it the next morning. The answer is "yes." The cereal will be improved in flavor by the forehanded preparation.

"Do you peel an alligator pear before serving it with crabmeat? How is it eaten, with a spoon, salad fork, or oyster fork?" asks another reader. The pear is merely cut in half, the pit removed and the center filled with crabmeat, mixed with mayonnaise. It may be eaten with a salad fork, or if you happen to have those small fruit knives and forks, you may use them.

"I wonder if you can give me an old-time recipe for a dressing to serve with lettuce or dandelion greens. It is a hot dressing containing bacon, vinegar, sugar and perhaps an egg. I have hunted through every cook book without success. A friend's mother used to make it years ago." In answering this question, I might say I hunted for a long time for this recipe for myself and I found it finally in Germany last summer. I am very glad to share it with my readers. It is now one of the most precious recipes of my collection.

Boundary Dog Makes Knotty Tax Problem

Stoney Creek, Ont.—A dog lives in Stoney Creek—and thereby hangs a tale.

The home of the dog's master is on the township line, half in and half out of the village. So when the dog is in the front of the house he is a township dog, and when he is in the back he is a village pup.

The owner refuses to pay two taxes on one dog, and the dog refuses to stay in one end of the house. So the township assessor and the village assessor are trying to decide who should collect the tax.

tion of 400,000,000 is accepted it will be seen that gum has a long way to go. Except for Shanghai, the only other places in which chewing gum has been able to get a foothold are Peiping, Tientsin and a few other cities of similar size. Out in the provinces the watermelon seed remains first in the affections of all Chinamen as a tasty pastime.

My Neighbor Says:

PUT a piece of waxed paper over the blade of a knife when cutting butter for the table. It will cut more evenly.

When it is not in use cover your ironing board with a slip cover made of gingham or muslin to keep the board covering clean.

These appeal to youngsters very much: Place ball of ice cream on a plate, dip a toothpick or small brush in melted chocolate and paint on eyes, nose and mouth, then use an inverted cone for a hat and you have a jolly clown.

Do not put uncovered bottles of milk or cream in the refrigerator. Milk and cream readily absorb odors when left uncovered.

New Marking Makes Sun Dial Accurate as Clock

State College, Pa.—A simple system for making the readings of an ordinary sun dial as accurate as those of a synchronized clock has been perfected by Prof. Leland S. Rhodes, department of engineering, Pennsylvania state college.

To eliminate the sun dial error, which may be as much as fifty minutes, Professor Rhodes inscribed several half circles on the dial instead of the customary one, spacing them for the different seasons of the year.

Across the ends of the half circles he marked the months and dates to which several semi-circles apply in computing the shadow reading in terms of standard time on a given day.

Lights of New York By L. L. STEVENSON

Dropped into the Little Church Around the Corner. A wedding ceremony was being performed in the Brides' chapel. Nothing new about that. There are many weddings at the church first made famous by the late Joseph Jefferson. Was told there were 30 or more weddings scheduled for tomorrow, Saturday, which is the most popular day. But the Little Church Around the Corner felt the depression severely indeed. In fact, if I am correctly informed, there was even a Saturday or two when there were no weddings. But now there is a rapid approach to the old average. So the country must once again be facing the sun since so many more young people are convinced that two can live as cheaply as one, or that the seas of matrimony are other than troubled.

Discreet inquiries here and there developed the fact that the increase in the number of weddings at the Little Church is not the only prosperity sign. The number of weddings with music has increased and oftentimes the large as well as the small chapel is used, with couples waiting their turn to face the altar. But that wasn't what I intended to say. Last year, a number of the couples, after the ceremony was performed, had to borrow car fare to get where they were going. So far this year, no money requests have followed ceremonies. And a reliable report has it that the amounts given the officiating clergymen are far larger than usual. So happy days are here again!

Speaking of churches, I am reminded of the clergyman over in New Jersey who at Easter time preached to an extremely large congregation. At the end of his sermon, he wished his parishioners a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. Puzzled, some waited and asked him what he meant by that. "Well," replied the parson, "there are only three times a year that I see so many of you, so I am anticipating our next meeting."

Returning rapidly to the City of the Seven Million, there were those five stalwart young men who rode to the top of the Empire State building. It being a chilly day, the guard on duty at that time on the one hundred and second floor stepped inside a minute to get warm. When he returned, he found to his horror that four of the five young men were taking their view of the surrounding scenery while standing on top of the narrow wall that keeps visitors from falling 1,250 feet, while the fifth was lying down on that same wall. The guard ordered them down in a hurry and when they alighted inquired angrily: "What are you, acrobats?" "No," replied the spokesman of the group. "We're Norwegian sailors and we often walk the bowsprit in a heavy sea 3000 feet

Robert J. Casey, journalist, artillery man in the World war, author and world traveler—he's varnished the labels on his portable typewriter so they'll stay on—has purchased chances on everything from safety razors to strings of pearls. Once upon a time, he took a chance on a piano and won it. He had a piano at home and couldn't use two, so he placed his prize in storage. That was 14 years ago. And ever since then he has been paying storage charges because he doesn't want to sell the only thing he's ever won!

Subway eavesdropping: "He says to her that he's got to meet a man on business, and she smiles to herself because she thinks she's going to get her divorce sure. But all her detectives could dig up on him was that he met the guy he said he was going to and landed a big contract. Ain't that the darnedest luck for her!"

Money that will stretch a long ways is now being sold on Broadway at the rate of 5 cents for $5. It is rubber. One of the salesmen chants: "Here's your chance to pay your alimony."

HOW IT STARTED By JEAN NEWTON

To Be "All Agog"
EVERY one of us, at some time or another, gets all agog. We may get agog over a new ensemble, a new book or a new theory—any one or more of numberless things. It is hardly likely, however, that we are set agog over the common variety of clover—yet that is how it started!

For the term "agog" comes to us from the French phrase "a gogo" meaning "in clover."
And the allusion is to the fact that when a horse is set grazing in clover studded pastures, he becomes all excited with eager expectation as he munches the delicious grasses.

Redhead Club Sees "Red" Over Accusations of Dye

Des Moines. — Thirteen flaming haired members of the Des Moines State House "Redhead Club" saw "red" recently when it was challenged that they were "dyed in the hair" rather than "dyed in the wool" redheads. The accusation came on a post card signed "Katherine Hepburn." But the card was mailed in Des Moines. The author said she had been employed in the state house for several months.

MAN AND GIRL

DEAR Mrs. Post: How far may a girl run after a man?

Answer: Catlike, she may do a little stalking! But "run?" Not a step. The freedom of today allows her to go to meet him halfway, but the girl who runs, runs after a man who runs faster!

To be sure, she can invite him to any sort of party, so long as it is not just a sit-at-home party of two. She can say even to one who has been lately introduced to her: "Come and see me sometime! I'm almost always at home after five." Or, whenever she is likely to be at home.

She may also say to one she knows at all well: "I'll answer, if you write to me." She may also buy tickets, but not often, for an entertainment and telephone him, "I have two tickets for the game (or theater), would you like to go with me?"

It isn't so much what she does, as the way she does it. A girl who is apparently impersonal, who is "catlike" in disguising her intent, may pursue quite actually and with success, where one who bounds in pursuit, like a puppy that has slipped his collar, has lost the prize at the start. All of which is mere common sense.

Dear Mrs. Post: Will you say something about the behavior of the young on the street who seem to live in chattering, giggling groups?

Answer: School girls, factory girls or any other young women who troop into the street together, should avoid walking abreast in interlocked giggling and chattering groups, which prevent other pedestrians from getting by, attract the attention of others, and invite the flirtation of any man who may stroll into view. If you must stand and talk on the sidewalk, at least leave a little room for people to pass, and don't shout or "rough-house" or giggle. The place to "rough-house" is a gymnasium. If you must shout, do it at a baseball game. And if you feel like giggling, say your multiplication table or the course in impulse control! But whatever you do—don't self consciously let your nerves get the best of good sense.

Spontaneous laughter is the most delicious, the most contagious, sound in the world, but forced giggling is as annoying and as inexcusable as the continued flapping of a shutter.

AN EAR FOR PURITY OF SPEECH

DEAR Mrs. Post: Although I graduated from the University of X—with honors—and have excellent letters of personal recommendation from members of the faculty, I am unable to qualify for the position of instructor in an eastern college because of my voice and pronunciation. Both, I am told, are typical of the X section of our country, and seemingly displeasing to eastern prejudices. As a devoted reader of your column may I ask if you can possibly tell me what to do to acquire an attractive voice and pronunciation? I am intelligent, I think, and I am willing to go through any amount of intensive study if I only knew how to go about it.

Answer: The best advice I can give is to try to develop an acute ear for spoken sound. Every one knows what is meant by an ear for music, but very rarely does anyone emphasize the much greater importance of an ear for intonation, or the purity of the spoken vowel sounds. It seems to me that just as such naturalists and entomologists as William Hamilton Gibson and Henri Fabre have proved that not one pair of eyes in a million behold the romance and drama of insect life along every foot of country roadside, it is equally true that not one pair of ears in a million hear with precision the scale of spoken sound. And yet every little child in the world has this exquisite sensitivity, which grows each year less acute. Of course, I don't know whether we are as uncaringly deaf (as we are uncaringly blind to the insect life of the hedgerows) or whether at the end of babyhood our ears fail to hear clearly, just as our eyes at the end of middle age fail to see clearly.

As I have said, I can't think of better advice to give you than to try to HEAR. If you can hear the difference between a thin flat tone and a full round one, between a voice that comes down to rest on the dominant note and one that hangs in the air; if you can hear the entire range of vowel sounds as clearly as a violinist hears musical notes, the chances are that your tongue will produce without effort what your ear exacts.

Paroled Criminals Are Back in Toils

More Than 7,000 Arrested for New Crimes.

More than seven thousand paroled criminals were arrested for new offenses against society during the first quarter of 1934, the department of justice revealed recently.

In the three-month period alone, according to figures compiled by the United States bureau of investigation, 7,274 persons previously released from prison under present liberal parole laws were apprehended by police throughout the country for the commission of new crimes.

The figures were issued without comment by the federal crime detection agency, but they were widely interpreted as a tacit condemnation of the parole system as it operates to free hardened criminals before they have paid the full penalty for earlier offenses.

Analyze 7,274 Arrests. More startling even than the disclosure that upwards of seven thousand paroled convicts were caught at new crimes in the short space of three months, however, was the bureau of investigation's breakdown of the 7,274 arrests.

In 5,202 cases, it was revealed, the criminal was arrested either once or twice during the period of his parole, and in 3,306 cases, before the expiration of the sentence given him for his earlier crime. In only 2,072 cases, the bureau stated, the records did not show an arrest within the parole period.

Arrested once for new crimes during the parole period were 873 convicts, according to the report, while 1,023 criminals were found to have been previously arrested while still on parole. In 2,076 cases the new offenses took place even before the prison terms originally imposed had expired, and in 1,230 cases an earlier crime was committed before expiration of the original prison sentence.

Majority Originally Convicted. "The majority of those who were paroled were originally convicted of serious crimes," said the bureau's report, "and were arrested during the first quarter of 1934 on charges of a similarly serious nature. There were 159 individuals paroled, subsequent to convictions for criminal homicide."

Paroled convicts were by no means the only "repeaters" in the ranks of crime, according to the bureau's figures. Out of 87,917 arrested in the three-month period, 33,161 cases were found in which the arrested person had a previous criminal history.

"Thirty-five per cent of the individuals whose arrest records were examined during the first three months of 1934 had previous fingerprint records on file in the bureau of investigation," the report declared. "The proportion having such previous fingerprint records varies with the offense from 59.1 per cent for those charged with violation of the narcotic drug laws to 19.2 per cent for those charged with criminal homicide."

"The Eyes of Texas," long sung at gatherings of Texans from coast to coast is the official song of the University of Texas.

Revolving Sign Used by Church in Texas

Fort Worth, Texas.—A unique revolving sign, propelled by two electric fans, now announces the location of the church of Dr. J. Frank Norris, Fort Worth's Baptist minister.

The sign is the only moving church sign in Fort Worth, a departure from the staid cornerstone name plates, and is believed the only one in the state.

It is rectangular and is located atop of Doctor Norris' church. It revolves on a shaft. On each end of the sign, facing opposite directions, is an electric fan, providing locomotive power.

One side of the sign reads: "First Baptist Church." The other side reads: "J. Frank Norris."

An Important Question

By LEONARD A. BARRETT

Ask yourself this question: If you should suddenly be deprived of all your material possessions and had no opportunity of earning a living, could you, by the use of a gun and ax, procure sufficient food and shelter for yourself and those dependent upon you? If you were confronted with starvation, your answer would doubtless be "Yes." But, if there was another way out of the dilemma, your answer would doubtless be "No."

This question is asked for the purpose of reminding ourselves that with the use of the ax and gun our forefathers laid the foundations of what we call our modern civilization. With the ax, trees were cut down and homes were built. Many an old-fashioned barn was constructed without the use of either nail or iron bolt. The furniture of the old cabinet maker which is now considered an antique and is held at an extravagant price, was made with neither screw, bolt nor nail.

This question is further asked to remind ourselves that there is sufficient food values in herbs and fruit to maintain physical life at a very high level. The yearly produce of the soil, like grain, even if cultivated by old-fashioned methods, is sufficient for both man and beast. The geologist informs us that the supply of coal and oil and many of the other natural resources which we greatly need are practically inexhaustible.

If the good earth produces sufficient for the maintenance of the life of those who live upon it, by what right does one deliberately destroy that production? Of course, the answer is, to stabilize prices.

There is something wrong not with nature but with our economic system when those in authority feel justified in killing unborn pigs, while masses of men, women and children are hungry. The question arises, is it good economics to regulate the laws of production in order to arrive at an artificial result? Is it common sense? Is there not some other way out of the difficulty? Overproduction in the field of our natural resources may be due to the use of machinery. More may be produced by that method than is necessary; but, what is the matter, with the theory of the ax and gun?

The Household

By Lydia Le Baron Walker

This Lawn Chair Has the New Touch of Upholstery, Supplying Added Comfort in Harmony With the Type of Chair.

STYLES of upholstery vary with the seasons as well as do the upholstery textiles. Just now two or three things are notably in evidence in upholstery styles. One has been seen more or less within very recent years, but is brought again into prominence. This is Barrel or Organ Pipe upholstery. It is a method by which a comfortable resilience is given back and arms of chairs, sofas, love seats, davenport, porch and lawn chairs, etc. The padding is secured from slipping by vertical parallel lines of stitches, between which the padded or stuffed covering curves in barrel or organ-pipe shape.

On the depth of the stitching depends the comfort of this upholstery, for this signifies the thickness of the barrels or organ pipes between the rows. If they puff out well, and have been properly stuffed, they will give luxuriously when pressed down and so provide comfort for the person leaning against them.

While the name is descriptive of the shape, it scarcely implies comfort, for neither barrels nor organ pipes suggest elasticity, springiness or rebound. Yet the name is effective as it enables one to picture the appearance of furniture so upholstered.

Lawn and Porch Pieces.

One of the reasons why attention is directed to organ-pipe and barrel upholstery just now is that it is being used on summer furniture in the very latest style. In fact it is particularly well adapted to some models and kinds of furniture of this variety. For example canvas lawn chairs with barrel upholstery have appeared. To be sure the barrels must be on their sides to make the name apply, and organ-pipe upholstery is no longer descriptive. But the method of padding and stuffing between rows of stitching remains identical. As it is not only possible but easy for women to do over canvas lawn chairs with this barrel type of covering, to know about the style may be valuable. It is but an extension of the head-rest feature.

That is, the entire strip of canvas is padded and at regular measured distances of 10 or 12 inches there are rows of horizontal stitches. The top barrel section is padded more than the others and so puffs up higher to form the head rest.

If a woman makes her own canvas padded covering the following method is recommended. Have the under strip the right length for the chair. Lay cotton batting over it and baste down. Mark off a long strip of the canvas into longer sections for the top. Stuff the endtop section and each following one in turn so that the top strip will round out over the lower one when top and lower marks are matched. Stitch on the machine across the strip-upholstery along marked lines and around all edges, and fasten to the chair frame.

Fringe on Furniture.

The return of fringe in upholstery is one of the striking features of furniture fashions. It has been nearly a generation since it was in style. It marks a return of softer qualities in upholstery. Recently this has been decidedly severe to suit the straight lines and pronounced angles of modernistic styles in the furniture. It will be remembered that some two weeks ago I told about the incoming vogue of curves in what is sometimes termed the new Modern Classic type of furniture. Fringe suits this style well, and it is interesting to follow the trend.

Curves have a softening effect, lines of grace as they are, and certainly fringe has this same element. There is nothing hard or set in the fall of fringe. It sways when in even a slight breeze, or when furniture is moved to change its position, and the motion is graceful.

Furniture fringe comes in several styles, heavy straight fringe, short wavy fringe, tied and fancy fringe, ball fringe, etc. It is distinct from dress fringe; even when fine for furniture it would be coarse for costumes.

DOES A SHERIFF NEED EXPERIENCE?

In asking your support for Sheriff of Donley Co. I have a few facts I would like to present. First, it is impossible for me to see each and everyone personally, to solicit your vote, and I take this means of reaching you and asking each voter for your support. I am very thankful to the people for all past favors extended me. I have tried hard to merit your confidence. In the beginning when I announced, I said that I would run on my past record. Just a few words as to that record. You will admit that crime in the state and nation has been on the increase and still is. Statistics will bear me out in this. Yet crime has decreased in Donley Co., fifty per cent. This I can prove; also expenses for the court and Sheriff's office, have decreased fifty per cent in the last three years. The records are here in the courthouse to show anyone that cares to look at them. By keeping down crime the expense of the court and Sheriff's office reduces itself. We have not lost a single case in Dist. court in two years, and ever fifty per cent of cases tried have been pleas of guilty, where it did not take the expense of petty jury. I was in a neighboring county a few days ago, and that week they had five burglaries more than we have had in Donley Co. the last year. I have had one automobile stolen and taken out of the county in the last three years, and it was recovered the next day. All that I ask is to look around and see what other counties have along this line. When I first ran for Sheriff I said that I would do the job if it took twenty four hours a day to do it, and what success I have had I lay to just two things, the backing of the people and being on the job. I spend all my time in Donley Co., seven days and seven nights a week. I think by keeping down the little things you won't have the big things happening. As to liquor, I think you all know how I stand on that. In talking to prisoners in jail that I have had here for various offenses I have asked them why they did the thing they did, and everyone answers this, that I got to drinking and running with the wrong company. It seems that this is the best place to start getting in bad. As asking for a third term, don't you think that a person that has had a little training and experience, if he can prove where he has done the job, is far more able to make you a Sheriff than a new man, regardless how good a man he is? I do not think a person rates anything a second term or anything else, if he or she cannot do the job. Any profession in the world has to have training and experience before you can practice your profession except a Sheriff, which seems to me of all professions, the Sheriff's office needs trained men. I think I am better qualified now to side step mistakes and make you a Sheriff than ever before. There was an article came out in the Fort Worth Star Telegram about two months ago. This article was worked out by an officers organization as to rating of Sheriffs in Texas, and standing of counties in their districts of 254 Sheriffs in Texas. The Sheriff of Donley County was rated second, and Donley County was rated the cleanest in the

There is just one thing I ask when you go to the polls to vote, and that is, ask yourself who will make you and your county the best Sheriff, and then vote for that man.
