Brain Working Upside Down Amazes Even Owner.

New York .- Prerate William W. Lord, who has just finished an eight months' course in the quartermaster school at Philadelphia, has been assigned to the quartermaster corps at Mitchel Field, L. I., and his associates there now are discovering why Cornell university wrote to Private Lord two summers ago when he was stationed at Madison Barracks, N. Y., and asked him to bequeath his brain to the Burt G. Wilder brain collection when he died. Having a scientific nature, Private Lord readily complied; he drew up a will leaving his brain to the university, cerebellum, medulla and all.

In civilian clothes, Private Lord dropped into the office of the New York Herald Tribune to demonstrate just why his brain was worthy of inclusion in the Burt G. Wilder collection. Plump, pink, perspiring, he sat down at a desk and asked for a pencil and paper.

"Now give me the name of a city," he said; "any one at all." Heads were scratched and finally some one thought of a city. Seizing a pencil in chubby fingers, Private Lord wrote: Sacramento

As he inscribed the word, upside down and backward, beginning with the letter "o," simultaneously be spelled it out orally from the orthodex angle, beginning with the "S."

ordered. "And also give me the name of some 'movie. Next. a President.

Suggestions were offered and, without hesitation, spelling from one direction and writing from the other, the visitor set down:

Van Buren "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" "This improves the penmanship," said Private Lord. "Will some one please give me a number in seven digits? A spectator suggested 5,732,846, and as Private Lord set the figures on paper upside down he commanded: "Now pick a beadline out of today's newspaper.

"Nation Weighs Recovery Plea of Roosevelt," some one suggested. "Fourscore and seven years ago," intened Private Lord.

As he recited Private Lord's pencil flew over the paper rapidly, setting down figures and words alternately on separate pieces of paper, all upside

Long before he came to the end of the Gettysburg Address, Private Lord reversed his pieces of paper and disclosed what he had written. On one appeared "Nation Recovery Plea Weighs of Roosevelt."

"You see I deliberately changed the order of the words," he explained. On the ether paper appeared the following column of figures.

523,656 111,737 521,111 764,145 121,311 3,476,343

Amazed at Himself.

"New add those figures up," said Private Lord, "and you'll find they come to the figure you gave me. There's something uncanny about this. I don't know myself how I do it."

For the next few moments Private Lord relaxed by writing such words as "Mediterranean," "chrysanthemum," "typewriter" and "hippopotamus" upside down-sometimes from right to left, sometimes vice versa. He did not bother, however, to recite, merely chatting pleasantly with his admirers.

"I had my brain examined by army specialists a little while ago and they told me I did this with my subconscious mind. I guess I must because ! don't bother to add up the figures I put down in that column a minute ago. They just come to me and they always add up to whatever number you select.

"I didn't find out I had this ability till 12 years ago. I was a clerk in a Rochester hotel then and sort of dreaming I looked across the street and saw a sign which said 'Homeopathic hospital.' I had a piece of paper in front of me and all unconscious I wrote out 'Homeopathic Hospital' and then before I knew it I had written it backward and upside down-all the while thinking of something else, And ever since then I could write out anything at all from any angle without even thinking about it."

"Life Interesting but Never Easy"

LEONARD A. BARRETT C by Western Newspaper Union.

The words of Robert Browning oc cur to one as he reads of the retirement of Mr. Bernard Baruch from Wall Street, "Grow old along with me The best of life is yet to be, The last of life, for which the first was made: -Youth shows but half: trust God: see all, nor be afraid!" Mr. Baruch at the age of sixtyfour leaves the haunts of the greatest financial center in the world intent upon giving his entire time to writing. Having selected a quiet site for an office away from the noise and tumult of the frenzied financial district, he plans to write three books, "An Autobiography of an American Boy," "The Future of America," and "A Treatise on the Conquest of Nature." While this seems to be a very pretentious undertaking. he states that he will do all the writing himself and not employ expert writers to do the work. These books promise to be a guide as well as a stimulant to American youth. In a press dispatch, which quotes a personal interview with the distinguished financier, he says: "Life has been always interesting, but never easy." Just so. Where life is easy and there are no hard problems to solve or serious risks to run, it scarcely can be called interesting. What gives zest to life and makes us feel that it is worth while are the seemingly insurmountable obstacles that meet us in the path of daily toil.

Retirement from an active life without very definite objects of service to which one may retire is seldom a wise course of action. Many a person loses all interest in life itself after the usual activities of a lifetime have been abandoned. Nothing is more interesting than to see a man or woman, past the three-score years and ten, busily engaged upon a piece of work which challenges all their strength. They truly know the joy of living. Many persons dream of the day when they shall have nothing to do. They imagine it to be a state of paradise, when actual experience has proven the contrary. People with nothing to do are always miserable. We do not envy Mr. Baruch his retirement but we do envy his creative ability in having some thing very definite and interesting upon which he may devote his energy the remainder of his days,

Mild Winter in Oregon May Be Costly to State

Salem, Ore.-Oregon is paying the penalty for too mild a winter. Complete absence of frost in many sections of the state, which permitted owers to bloom and vegetation to remain green all winter, also left allve millions of embryo insects which otherwise would have been killed.

In parts of eastern Oregon the grass-hopper plague was reported to be the worst in many seasons. West of the Cascade mountains the Hessian fly, never serious before, was cutting great inroads into the grain yield.

EVERY woman can be a writer of at least one book. It has the same title whoever writes it, and that is "The Worry Book." Despite the one title, each volume will be entirely different from any other. It will prove interesting reading to the author and to any of her friends whom she permits to read it. I heard of it just today, and how such a book proved invaluable to the person who wrote

> Don't be mis led by the title and believe that the volume will be depressing although it is all about worries. It is one of the most cheering and heartening of volumes, the sort you will delight in reading when things seem to be going wrong, and you are plunged in a gulf of gloom through anticipation of possible bad results. It is a book which will make you realize the futility of worrying.

Since the book is such an antidote to depression and you can have it by spending just a few moments a day writing, why not start it immediately? The only equipment is a blank book, pen, and ink or a pencil. It seems a pity not to start the volume if you have a worry, that is the subject matter. Here is the best way to begin With pen in hand and the blank book open before you, think what you are worrying about, and jot it down. Put the book away after dating what you have written. The next time you have something to worry about, write it in the book and date it. Keep on setting down what you are worrying about. Write just an briefly as you can. And don't bother to read over what you have written previously.

Read and See What Happened.

Some weeks later when you have the opportunity and feel especially inclined to believe something will go wrong, open the book and read what you wrote first. Probably you will have forgotten all about the subject of the first worry. Refresh your memory Keep on reading, for you will be in terested to note how few of the things came to pass. You probably laid awake nights worrying over them. You may have been about sick worrying-and then nothing happened.! The effect of worrying is disastrous to nerves and health and to hanpiness most of all. By keeping the worry book and reading it occasionally we discover how foolish it is to make ourselves miserable apprehending troubles which never happen. The worry book is suggested as an efficient remedy for this misery.

Piece Patchwork

Piece patchwork has all the fascination of a picture puzzle developed in textiles instead of cardboard bits. It is just the thing to work on during the summer weather since it is light to handle, easy to sew, and can be made in squares, stripes, or sections of small proportions. Many small articles can be fashioned for summer time use such as chair seats for quaint porches, and garden chairs, benches, gliders, hammocks, etc., and large and small bags for all sorts of uses. Attractive utility bags are made of patchwork with frames covered with a piece of one of the textiles, and handles formed of braided strips of the disferent textiles in the patches.

Polo for Cowboys

Replaces the Rodeo Dodge City, Kan.—The polo-playing cowboy is replacing the he-man. straight-shooting cowhand of the fiction cowland.

Ip the prairie country, where cowboys formerly were chosen because they could nail a coyote at 100 yards, with a .45, marksmanship doesn't count unless it is with a polo mallet. The disappearance of the hero in chaps for the wearer of the open-necked shirt and spiffy pants who packs a Lou Gehring eye for the polo ball is due to the rivalry that has come between ranches over polo cups,

The ranchers have just discovered their cow ponies may be trained for first-rate polo performance and polo matches between ranches have replaced the rodeo.

Good Taste Today BY EMILY POST

hor of "ETIQUETTE," "THE BLUE BOOK OF SOCIAL USAGE," ETC.

IMMUTABLE PRINCIPLES OF COURTESY

DEAR Mrs. Post: I would not think of disagreeing with your more than positive disapproval of the hostess who serves herself first, but I would very much like you to answer in your column whether you would not reconsider the strictness of your ruling under the following circumstances: Last evening at a dinner party in the house of a very distin-guished iady of best social position, the dinner progressed precisely according to your approved conventions. Every dish was presented first to the guest of bonor-a somewhat elderly lady, who of course sat on the right of the host. All went beautifully until after the ice cream when a layer cake was proffered to this guest of honor, who not seeing clearly without her glasses, helped herself to a slice. No one else took any because the cake swarmed with tiny red ants! But the guest of honor ste a mouthful before her neighbor at dinner warned her to eat no more. Now, dear Mrs. Post, what have you to say against the wisdom of having the hostess help herself first, after that? Do you think a rule that can permit such an unfortunate result still worth defending? Do you take dares? Will you accept mine and answer me in print?

Answer: Of course I will! I am willing to admit that the situation could hardly have been more unpleasant, but I cannot see that it presents an argument for a change in the convention of hospitality. If a hostess have untrained and unresponsible servants, who cannot be trusted to serve food decently, then she should have every dish presented to her for her careful inspection, or perhaps, better yet, have it placed in front of her on the table so that she herself may serve it. But that this accident happened on perhaps one occasion in a hundred millions would be no excuse for the rudeness of all the millions of other hostesses in helping themselves first to dishes, which they have every reason to believe have not the slightest chance of being the playground of an ant colony. Of course, if we were all to live again in the crude days of frontier towns, then it would be proper to go back to the customs of those days. But if we take it for granted that our food is eatable, then the fundamental principle of courtesy demands that we offer to our guest of honor 3rst choice of whatever we may

MISCELLANEOUS

DEAR Mrs. Post: My daughter is going away to college and it is necessary to mark all her clothes. I hate to write on all her pretty new things with indelible ink but an instruction leaflet sent me says that everything must be marked with the student's name in full and also the number of her dormitory. Do you know of any new way to avoid intimarking?

Answer: I don't know of any new way, but I do know of the woven embroldery tapes that can be bought in every dry goods store in the United You can have anything put on them that you choose, in any type of lettering and in almost any color, and I am sure they are not expensive.

Dear Mrs. Post: I have just become engaged to a girl who has never met my family. She knows that I am American born but of foreign parents who speak practically no English and have done nothing in all their lives but work and raise children I am the only one of the children who has so far managed to get a college education. I am not ashamed of my parents, but I would like to bring about this meeting with the least amount of embarrassment to all concerned because I am sure that the situation is going to be awkward now and at the wedding:

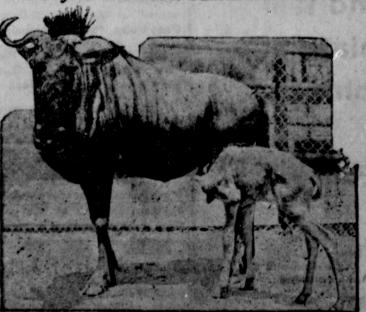

Answer: Although there is a rule that your parents should go to see your fiancee and her family, there are few rules which cannot be altered to fit unusual circumstances. Therefore, if you think your family would be more at ease at home, then ask your flancee to go with you to see them. After she has met them you and she can decide on the best way to bring about a meeting between her parents and yours. Say to her exactly what you have said to me; that you are not ashamed and that you love and respect them. She will help you, I am sure, to make the meeting smooth. The engagement is always announced by the wirl's family and usually the man's family has no part. Your parents will of course have to make the effort to go to the wedding, but their not being able to speak English should not matter since little more than "how de you do" and "thank you" is necessary, I wish I could answer more usefully, but I think it is something that you and your bride-to-be will have to talk over together.

THE immediate and enthusiastic acceptance of the new Firestone Century Progress Tire started a tremendous wave of buying that is keeping the Firestone factories running twenty-four hours a day to meet this huge demand.

We knew that car owners would replace their thin-worn, dangerous tires if they could get what they wanted in a tire at the price they wanted to pay. We found the answer through ten million visitors to the Firestone Factory at the World's Fair last year. We asked them—"What do you value most is a tire?"-and their answer was - "Give us Blowout Protection, Non-Skid Safety, and Long Wear, at a moderate price."

Drive in to the Firestone Service Dealer or Service Store today! Equip your car with these new Firestone Century Progress Tires, with the massive flat tread, deep - cut, non - skid, broad husky shoulders, and Gum - Dipped cords. Tire prices probably never again will be as low as they are today. At these unusually low prices for first grade tires, we make it easy for you to buy not only one tire, but a complete set.

CHERRY PIE IS THE NICEST OF ALL

How to Prepare America's Favorite Pastry.

By EDITH M. BARBER

THE market news informs us that coce in a while you hear of a voting contest in regard to the most popular American foods.

I think if they were conducted on a seasonal basis, that cherry pie would be well at the bend of the list of favorite dishes. It might be a two-crust ple or a deep dish pie. Either is a erfection if it is properly made. Nothing disappoints me so much, however, as to order cherry pie and get a floury sauce around the fruit instead of the sirup giving sauce which it should have.

So much juice cooks out of the cher ries that it is a problem to prevent its soaking into the bottom crust. To prevent this, I mix one tablespoonful of sugar with one tablespoonful of four and sprinkle it over the bottom crust before adding the cherries and the rest of the sugar. This absorbs enough of the juice but does not change the texture and flavor of the sirup. Sometimes an egg yolk or two is mixed with the sugar before it is sprinkled over the fruit. Cherry ple. by the way, needs plenty of sugaraimost as much as rhubarb.

When you line your pan with pastry, leave plenty of extra pastry at the edge and dampen it all the way. around. I'ut on the top crust and fold the lower crust over the edge before pressing it down. Another way is to cut the two crusts evenly and to bind the edge with another strip of pastry.

Cherry pie, like all ples, must have a very bot oven at first; after fifteen soinutes lower the temperature so that the fruit will be done by the time the pastry is brown. I forgot to mention that the top crust must be slit in several places to allow the steam to escape. My aunt used to make a paper funnel to put in the center to draw the juice to this point.

Individual, or large deep dish pies are easy to prepare. The stoned fruit As put into the dishes in alternate layers with the sugar and the pastry out on the top of the dish. Sometimes s few caisins are added with the cher

Raisins are also used with cherries as a filling for a one-crust pie. A meringue is spread over the top after the pie is baked and then it is returned to the oven-a slow oven this time to set and brown the meringue. A lattice of strips of pastry may be used instead of the meringue.

Cherry cobbler, snowballs which are really steamed dumplings, baked dumplings and cottage pudding with cherry sauce are other good desserts made with this fruit. Preserves or

The Macom. once a mere police tug, was fitted out more or less elegantly 15 years ago at a cost of $30,000 in order that distinguished visitors and native sons returning to this country in triumph might be given a fitting welcome. Those honored-they ranged from men world known as diplomats to a swimmer of the English channel-were tak en from liners at quarantine. Then began a colorful procession up the bay with harbor craft saluting and the Macom replying with a siren so loud that those abourd were all but deafened. Usually the distinguished visitor didn't see or hear money with reporters. or hear much because he was busy

Pier A, down at the foot of Manhattan island, was the place where the visitor was taken ashore, while police lines held back throngs, and then was driven in triumph up Broadway as ticker tape and torn up telephone books whitened the air. These paper showers, as nearly as I can learn, date back to November 9, 1918. With the city practically driven insane because of the "false armistice," some one thought of throwing torn paper from the windows of an office building. The inspiration proved popular, so popular, indeed, that during the welcome given Charles A. Lindbergh on his return from his solo flight over the Atlantic, about a hundred tons of waste were swept up by such street cleaners as were not busy playing in the band.

In connection with the Macom, there was a mayor's committee for the re ception of distinguished visitors. Of that committee. Grover A. Whalen was chairman for so long that he has ridden more times on the Macom than anyone else in New York. In a silk hat, cutaway coat, striped gray trous ers and white spats, and with a gardenia in his buttonhole, Mr. Whalen seemed to typify New York as he shook the hand of queens, princes, great soldiers, great statesmen and great athletes. But for some reason or other, Mayor Walker deposed him and the late Major Deegan got his place. The present administration restored him and he was the city's representative at the welcoming of the fleet. And then Mayor LaGuardia took the Macom away from bim.

The aldermen were not included in the fleet welcomers. That caused some hard feelings. But they were soothed by a special trip around the island which gave them an excellent view of

How It Started

"All Things to All Men"

THE origin of this phrase has a long record of use in our literature and is found even in the most modern contexts with a wide variety of infer ences "All things to all men" comes to us from the Bible, where its reference is entirely spiritual, the "all things" being the salvation of the scul.

We find its original use in the first epistle of Paul the apostle to the Corinthians. In chapter nine we find: "To the weak became I as weak. that I might gain the weak; I am made all things to all men that I might by all means save some."

Find of Ancient Coins Coins that shed new light on an obscure period of Jewish history have been discovered in a private coffection in Jerusalem.

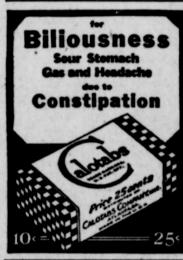

The coins are of the Fifth century, B. C., which is 300 years older than any Jewish coins heretofore known. The money known to have been regularly used in ancient Palestine was foreign money, chiefly coins of na-tions which in turn dominated the Hebrew country. It has been supposed that the Jews were not al-lowed to issue their own coinage until a Syrian king granted that Ilberty about 139 B. C.

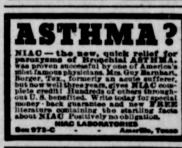

The discovery shows that after the Persians swept the Babylonians from power and allowed the exiled Jews to return to Jerusalem, the Persian king granted autonomy.

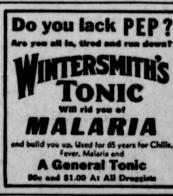

The Jerusalem coins are said to match a small silver coin which for the last 150 years has been in the British museum. It bears an inscription of three Aramic letters, which it is said always have been wrongly interpreted by scholars and therefore the significance of the coin was not completely understood. He reads the letters as "Yehud," which was at one time the official name of the province of Judea. The coins bear the engraving of an owl, under which appear the three letters in the old Phoenician Hebrew script.

SYNOPSIS

Seeking death by throwing herself Seeking death by throwing herself from Lone Mesa, to escape dishonor at the hands of a drunken desperado, Sonya Savarin allows herself to be rescued by her suddenly repentant attacker. The girl is a self-appointed physician to the Navajo Indians, living on an Arizona sheep ranch with her brother Serge, his wife, Lila, and their small daughter. small daughter, Babs. She is engaged to Rodney Blake, wealthy New Yorker, but her heart is with the friendless Navajos and she evades a wedding. Bonya pulls Little Moon, wife of Two Fingers, a Navajo, through the crisis of an illness. Two Fingers is deeply grateful. Sonya again means the grateful. Sonya again meets the man whose advances she had repulsed on Lone Mesa. He tells her he bitterly regrets his action. Sonya is affected, but unforgivity. but unforgiving. She hears rumors of a Border bandit "El Capitan Diablo," and vaguely connects him with her attacker. On Lone Mesa she again comes upon the strange young man, but she no longer fears him. When he reiterates his sorrow over his miscon-duct, she indicates forgiveness and arges him to abandon his life of lawlessness. From concealment, Sonya wit-nesses the transference of objects from an airship to the "man of mystery."

After a long while Sonya climbed back on Darkness and went soberly home. She had much to think about and was doing it with a vengeance.

For one thing, why had the feel of this man's arm across her breast, the nearness of his face, shot through her with so strange a fire? Once before his arm had been about her, dragging her from Darkness' back, his face had been close to hers, and she had been filled with such unbearable rage and hate that she could have killed him on the spot.

What was the matter with her? Where was her character, her principle, her condemnation of wrong? For that be was wrong-all wrong entirely—she had not the slightest doubt. Why did he meet a sky-ship here on this lonely desert? Why was he afraid for her to be seen by its occupants? What strange freight had he taken from it and put so carefully in his saddlebags?

There was something deep here, ter ribly deep, and it had to do, she felt sure, with the hinted things of the Servant's guarded speech-with that mysterious Presence across the Border which ruled so bloodily.

And why, she asked herself again, Why should she, busy and happy in her daily life, betrothed to another man, care what this drunken wastrel No, she corrected herself, not drunken now. He had said he could not drink, and she believed him. And why should she believe him?

Gravely, in a sort of cold fear, she searched her inner depths, and what she dimly saw appalled her.

It was his eyes, she told herself, the look of his eyes when he spoke of these things. They were deep eyes, strange eyes, filled with a wild spirit, and under this wildness, this old devilmay-care which had characterized them, was something so desperate, so anxious, that Sonya would have staked her life on its truth.

Frightened to her foundations, the girl straightened to her saddle and lifted Darkness Into his stride. She would get home to the sane and ordered things of every day, to Lila with her calm assurance of all good, to Serge and little Babs. And she would forget this man, forget his eyes and his hands and the heady intoxication of the scent of him. She would write to Rod tonight, a long, good letter. She had neglected him a bit of late.

The next day Sonya went to town to mail her letter. She felt very virtuous and calm. All the strife and unease of the day before had gone from her. She had written dutifully to Rod and told him all the trivial happenings of every day-that is, all but those pertaining to the rider on the golden horse. These were of too small import, she told herself, wouldn't interest him. And besides, he wouldn't understand. At the store Mr. Parks was urbanity itself, bustling about to wait on her, smiling unctuously, rubbing his fat hands together.

"Good morning," she told him po-

"No," said Sonya, "I've been pretty

"Um. It sure does beat me how weman can be a doctor. An' a doctor in these parts has got to ride hard an far, take little pay, an' never be sure of that. You goin' to the dance over to th' Neidlingers next Sat'day night? ers is goin' to furnish th' music, ordion an' two fiddles. Ought to be good."
"Sounds good, surely."

Think you folks'll git over?"
"Why, yes," said Sonya, "I shouldn't conder if we did. The Neidlingers always have such nice times at their ranch. Nice people."

"Sure are. An'th' more th' merrier, always say." In the room behind the store a man stood where the first sound of Sonya's voice had stopped him. The cigarette he had just rolled hung unsealed in his fingers. Until the girl had gone out, until the last sound of her feet on the boards had died away, until the sputter and roar of the old flivver lessened in the distance, he remained so. Then he flung the cigarette into a refuse barrel and went on out the back-.

Sonya Savarin loved the dances of the region. Although liquid contraband flowed freely, and the cowboys from the upper country sometimes raised the rafters with their noise, there was some thing elemental and very young about these gatherings of the folk of the lonely land. The sheep men brought their wives and daughters, the whole family, in fact, down to the littlest ones, who slept in ranks on the wall benches as the night wore on, and everybody danced.

Serge Savario and his womenfolk came a little late, having to drive 28 miles over roads that left a lot to be desired, and entered in the midst of a number.

Sonya, in a new dress, her dark face sparkling already, laid her wrap on Lila's shoulder and swung out on the floor in the arms of a perspiring cowboy. She met these people only at the dances, but she remembered everyone and danced with all who asked her. providing they were not too far gone in the common bilarity. If so, she would merely laugh and shake her aderable black head with its shining curls and say gently, "No, Billy, I'm too tired to hold you up. Come around earlier next time"; or, "You're silly, Bob, just plumb silly. I think you're

And young Bob, weaving on his booted feet, would tell her anxiously that he washn't near drunk, but he knew how she felt about it and didn't blame her a bit, not a shingle bit. Neither did he, nor anyone whom she refused a dance. It was enough that she was there to look at, the most beautiful woman in all the country, the highest-up, yet the sweetest to everyone that a man could ask for. Everyone knew of her and her work among the lowly. Her little fame was sweet in the land So Sonya danced and laughed and listened to the music of the violins, the gay accordion, with her arm on this lean shoulder and that, and was extremely happy. She forgot the sorrows of the world and lived her youth to its full extent. Forgot Rod Blake and New York city and the man of Lone Mesa, all of which had troubled

Lila was dancing, and so was Serge, and Babs was already dead to the world on a bench in the corner, covered with Lila's cape. The music was waxing more "hot" and furious. And by the door a man came suddenly into her range of vision, a tall man, slimhipped and graceful. He was in store clothes, and the eternal cigarette hung in his fingers, its spiral of smoke asending in a tiny stream, but she knew him instantly. As instantly the almost terrible thrill shot through her from head to toe, blurring her eyes a bit, catching her throat with a little Suddenly the music changed, some one yelled "Paul Jones!" and the circling couples broke like the colors in a kaleidoscope. They strung out in a huge oval, all holding hands, and began going to the right in time to the lively tune. A whistle blew, and they broke apart, each man taking the voman immediately facing him at the whistle's blast, and dancing on with her Whirled from this pair of arms to that, breaking step, catching it again, suiting her step to each new of portent was bearing down upon her. Something was going to happensomething terrible and wonderfulshe was afraid and exhilarated as she had never been in her life before-and here he was coming toward her in the line. He danced as she might have known he would, like the wind blowing in long grass-she could see him sway as he weaved in and out in "alaman-left"-and the whistle blew, and he was here, before her. Her hand was in his, his arm had gone about her, they were drifting away together -and all the lights on the walls were running together in a long blur.

Sonya held her breath and let it out in a long sigh, and felt suddenly the

Then the whistle blew again, and ome one else had caught her hand, and she was circling right once more in the long oval.

When the number was over she went dizzily to where Lila sat fanning her flushed cheeks and sat down beside her. She wanted to rest, to gather herself together, to still the shameful tumult of her heart

Some one claimed her, and Sonya vent back into the maze of moving figures, but everywhere she went she was conscious of the brilliant eyes of this man. He stood against the wall little beyond the main door, and be eemed to be alone. He did not dance gain, even though there was another Paul Jones, but watched her in a grave stillness, and Sonya could not gather her faculties for her usual light ban-

What was the matter with her? Why did her heart hammer in her breast with long slow heats, her blood flow through her veins like molten gold drenched in perfume?

She thought wildly of Rod, tried to bring his face before her, to force herself to feel his presence. She tried to cling to his memory as one clings to a sturdy rock in rising waters, and could not, She could only see the face of the man beside the door, the young face that she had seen in so many lights, drunken and wild and relentless, sober and contrite, washed with

What was happening to her? To her life itself? To her destiny and her hopes?

Tears came in her eyes, and she did not hear what her chance partner was saying. Fear was in her heart, and a certain terrible fire that mounted and grew. Time passed, and she was not conscious of it.

Finally, late in the night, the fiddles struck up the sweet old strains of "Home, Sweet Home," and the dance was over. This was the last number. A cowboy from the K Bar Z with whom she always liked to dance was asking her for it. She had just held out her hand when some one reached forward from the side and took it. Next moment she was gone out along the floor in the dreamy rhythm of the sweet old tune, and this time she was held so close that she could feel the beating of his heart, a thundering reverberation like tides on the shore. Desperately she raised her eyes and looked at him.

"Tell me," she whispered thickly, what are you? Who are you?"

"Nothing," he said bitterly, "to you Nothing-ever-and I'd give half my life to kiss one curl on your headwith a decent man's right."

The words came through his set teeth, and even in the tensity of the moment she noticed that he did not slur his words at the ends, "Then be decent!" she cried passionately, "Be decent!" "Too late. I'm only looking in windows-from the outside-and I built the wall between, myself"

"Tell me your name," she said, "tell "No "

"Yes. Tell me now."

"I can't. I haven't a name-any more.

"You have. Your own name. Not what you-you go by-where-where you answer roll call." "Answer roll call! That's good. What do you know about me? What have you heard?" "Nothing. I'm guessing, fitting things in places," she said swiftly, "and

"Why do you speak carelessly some times and now correctly?"

"I've been two men. I am two men." "What kind of men?" "What does it matter? I'm a dead man-dead and damned and rotten! Den't trouble your darling head about me. There's that much decency left in me, But no one knows, and I'm like a dying man begging for water. I come back to look at you again and again. I'd crawl on my knees around the world to change my - leopard spots," he finished bitterly, "to look in your eyes with a clear conscience. Suddenly the fire and the fear and the ecstasy which had warred in Sonya all night seemed to rise above her like a tide of sorrow and disaster. /ITH the waning of the good old | summertime when the clothes ou have on hand begin to take on that sort of a "has-been" look which happens in even the best of regulated wardrobes and when it is too early to don new autumn regalia, what then? Every woman who aspires to an up-tothe-moment appearance knows the buffled feeling which comes when this nagging. disturbing-of-the-peace question comes up. But why worry, for here's encouraging news in regard to this very probm. Briefly told, it's the good looking jacket suits of dark triple sheer print which are now showing in leading style shops and departments wherever one may turn. You can rest as sured that an ensemble such as any one of the stunning models here pictured, will pilot you victoriously through that dreaded stretch of time which spans from the burning, scorch ing days of summer to weather bearing cool breezes which hint that autumn is on its way hitherward.*

The beauty of these triple sheer costumes which are now playing so conspicuous a role on fashion's stage is that they are being given a styling so absolutely up to the instant in apt to experience thrills as excitant as a mannikin at a style show as she pirouettes back and forth before the eager and admiring eyes of her audi-when you want them to be and with their jackets they provide just the degree of comfort and protection necessary for the erratic changes of a fickle thermometer. By the way had you noticed that scarcely a one-piece ing cuffs are of white taffeta. dress is to be seen this season, be it day or night, without a matching or related jacket? Everything with a jacket, is the new slogan and just because the idea is so thoroughly practical the vogue is moving on of Turning to our illustration we know that you will agree that the jacket dress on the standing figure is of unerring style appeal. It is fashioned of triple sheer of bemberg in the new Vionnet bowknot print. The crisp organdle jabot is worked in the two colors of the print. The slim little facket with its voluminous and graceful cape sleeves conveys a message of high-style distinction.

Cool and comfortable for the young girl is the little jacket-frock to the left. The bright monotone print in triple sheer of bemberg employed for this winsome outfit carries an animated patterning of wee gay monotone posies-a perfect complement to youth. The link-button fastening at the waistline accents the modish slimness of this young modern. The pleated frill which collars the jacket also bespeaks a youthful note.

The insistent call of the mode for white accents on dark prints is acswered in the swagger tacketed dress to the right. This model is a bit more grown-up than the one just described which should make it of special interest to the matron. As a matter of fact it is a type which tunes to most any age from teens on. This distinguished ensemble like its companion models in the picture is also made of bemberg triple sheer. It again reminds that the polka dot vogue is still going strong. SEA OF GALILEE

Light on Biblical stories of the Sea of Gattlee has been shed by Capt. Herbert J. Horsey, who has completed fifteen years of commercial flying. While flying in the Far East he frequently descended on that famous body of water. "Right across the sea runs a hidden reef, not far below the surface," he said on his arrival in London. "Other parts of the lake are hundreds of feet deep, and it seemed to me that this reef might account for the Bible story of the walking on the sea. Present-day weather conditions bear out the New Testament accounts of sudden storms raging on the lake. One moment it may be as smooth as a mill pond, the next, the water be comes troubled, and in a few minutes you have a rough sea, with a wind blowing at 80 miles an hour.

The Moving Power

After all, nothing succeeds until the intelligent and powerful men of the nation take it up.

IS CRAZY WATER EPSOM SALTS

No, says Dr. W. E. Fitch in nation-wide broadcast over N.B.C. network

NOT A MAN-MADE DRUG

Tells why natural mineral water is so often beneficial for "rheumatic" aches and pains

On a recent Sunday afternoon broadcast on the National Broadcasting network the following discussion took place between Mr. Gene Arnold and Dr. W. E. Fitch, internationally

GENE ARNOLD: "I receive letters from people saying they heard that Crazy Water Crystals are made of nothing but salts—Epsom Salts or Glauber's Salts. These people want to know if it's true you can buy some of these salts for a few cents, and get the same effect as you do with Crazy Water Crystals."

Dr. Firch: "No, it is NOT true."

GENE ARNOLD: "I'm glad to hear you say that, because I know your opinion is worth a great deal. But will you explain a little more about it? What are the true facts?" Dr. Frrch: "The facts are that it has always been hard for a few doubting Thomases and skeptics to believe that old Mother Nature knows how to that old Mother Nature knows how to prepare and compound natural mineral waters in a way that cannot be duplicated in a laboratory. In the course of my studies I have found that those same doubts were expressed Two Thousand Years Ago, in the early days of natural mineral water therapy. The truth is that natural mineral water and natural crystals from such waters are as different from synthetic or artificial salts as mineral water and natural crystals from such waters are as different from synthetic or artificial salts as day from night. And that's why the medical profession has always been in favor of the Natural Waters — has always insisted that they are the one product of Nature that cannot be imitated successfully by man. People have tried for many, many years to make up synthetic concoctions to take their place but they do not have the same effect. The predominating chemical constituent of Crazy Water Crystals is sodium sulphate, but it is in its Natural State, and has a far different physiological effect than the synthetic salts made in a laboratory. When you buy salts for a few cents you get just what you pay for—a dose of salts. But when you use Crazy Water Crystals, you get undiluted minerals in their natural state, taken from natural mineral water by evaporation with nothing

That is why Crazy Water Crystals have proven themselves so beneficial in the treatment of "rheumatic" aches and pains, Thousands of people in all parts of the United States testify to this.

If you, or any of your friends, suffer from "rheumatic" pains we suggest you investigate Crazy Water Crystals immediately. Ask any of the millions who have used them. Then get a standard size box—it costs only $1.50 and is ample for at least three weeks treatment. Crazy Water Company, Mineral Wells, Texas.

POLISH ESTATES GIVEN BACK TO HEIRS OF LOSERS

When the czar of all the Russias ordered the confiscation, more than a century ago, of the property of the Polish nobles who had taken an active part in the abortive uprising of 1830-31 against Russian rule, the domain of the Russian state was enriched by many thousands of acres of meadow and forest, dotted with numerous castles and other buildings. And when Poland arose again as a nation out of the ruins of the World war, most of this confiscated property passed into the possession of the republic.

But under a decision recently handed down by the highest court in Poland and reported in European papers, the republic is likely to lose nearly all these estates. And while regretting the loss to the state, most patriotic Poles are said to agree with old effort to free Poland from the Russian yoke are entitled to the property confiscated by the czar.

Among the leaders of the 1830-31 revolution was Gen. Count Tyskiewicz. His broad estates were taken over by the Russian crown. Now the Warsaw court has decided that all that property, valued at about $13,-000,000, must be returned to the pres ent Count Tysklewicz, a direct heir. This decision is expected to be followed by many others of the same sort involving a great deal of prop-
